(1) LINGUISTIC SURVEY OF INDIA

(2) VOL. IX, PART I

(3) INDO-ARYAN FAMILY

CENTRAL GROUP

HINDUSTANI ACADEMY
Hindi Section
Library No 1180
Date of Receipt 19.5.28

PART I

SPECIMENS OF WESTERN HINDI AND PAÑJABI

COLLECTED AND EDITED BY

SIR GEORGE ABRAHAM GRIERSON, K.C.I.E., PH.D., D.LITT., I.C.S. (RETD.), HONORARY FELLOW OF THE ASIATIC SOCIETY OF BENGAL; HONORARY MEMBER OF THE AMERICAN ORIENTAL SOCIETY, THE SOCIÉTÉ FINNO-OUGRIENNE, THE ASSOCIATION PHONÉTIQUE INTERNATIONALE, AND THE NĀGARĪ PRACHĀRIṆĪ SABHĀ; FOREIGN ASSOCIATE MEMBER OF THE SOCIÉTÉ ASIATIQUE DE PARIS; CORRESPONDING MEMBER OF THE KÖNIGLICHE GESELLSCHAFT DER WISSENSCHAFTEN ZU GÖTTINGEN; VICE-PRESIDENT OF THE ROYAL ASIATIC SOCIETY.

H. A.

(1) LINGUISTIC SURVEY OF INDIA

(2) VOL. IX, PART I

(3) INDO-ARYAN FAMILY

CENTRAL GROUP

PART I

HINDUSTANI ACADEMY
Hindi Section
Library No 1187
Date of Receipt 19.5.28.

SPECIMENS OF WESTERN HINDĪ AND PAÑJĀBĪ

COLLECTED AND EDITED BY

SIR GEORGE ABRAHAM GRIERSON, K.C.I.E., PH.D., D.LITT., I.C.S. (RETD.), HONORARY FELLOW OF THE ASIATIC SOCIETY OF BENGAL; HONORARY MEMBER OF THE AMERICAN ORIENTAL SOCIETY, THE SOCIÉTÉ FINNO-OUGRIENNE, THE ASSOCIATION PHONÉTIQUE INTERNATIONALE, AND THE NĀGARĪ PRACHĀRIṆĪ SABHĀ; FOREIGN ASSOCIATE MEMBER OF THE SOCIÉTÉ ASIATIQUE DE PARIS; CORRESPONDING MEMBER OF THE KÖNIGLICHE GESELLSCHAFT DER WISSENSCHAFTEN ZU GÖTTINGEN; VICE-PRESIDENT OF THE ROYAL ASIATIC SOCIETY.

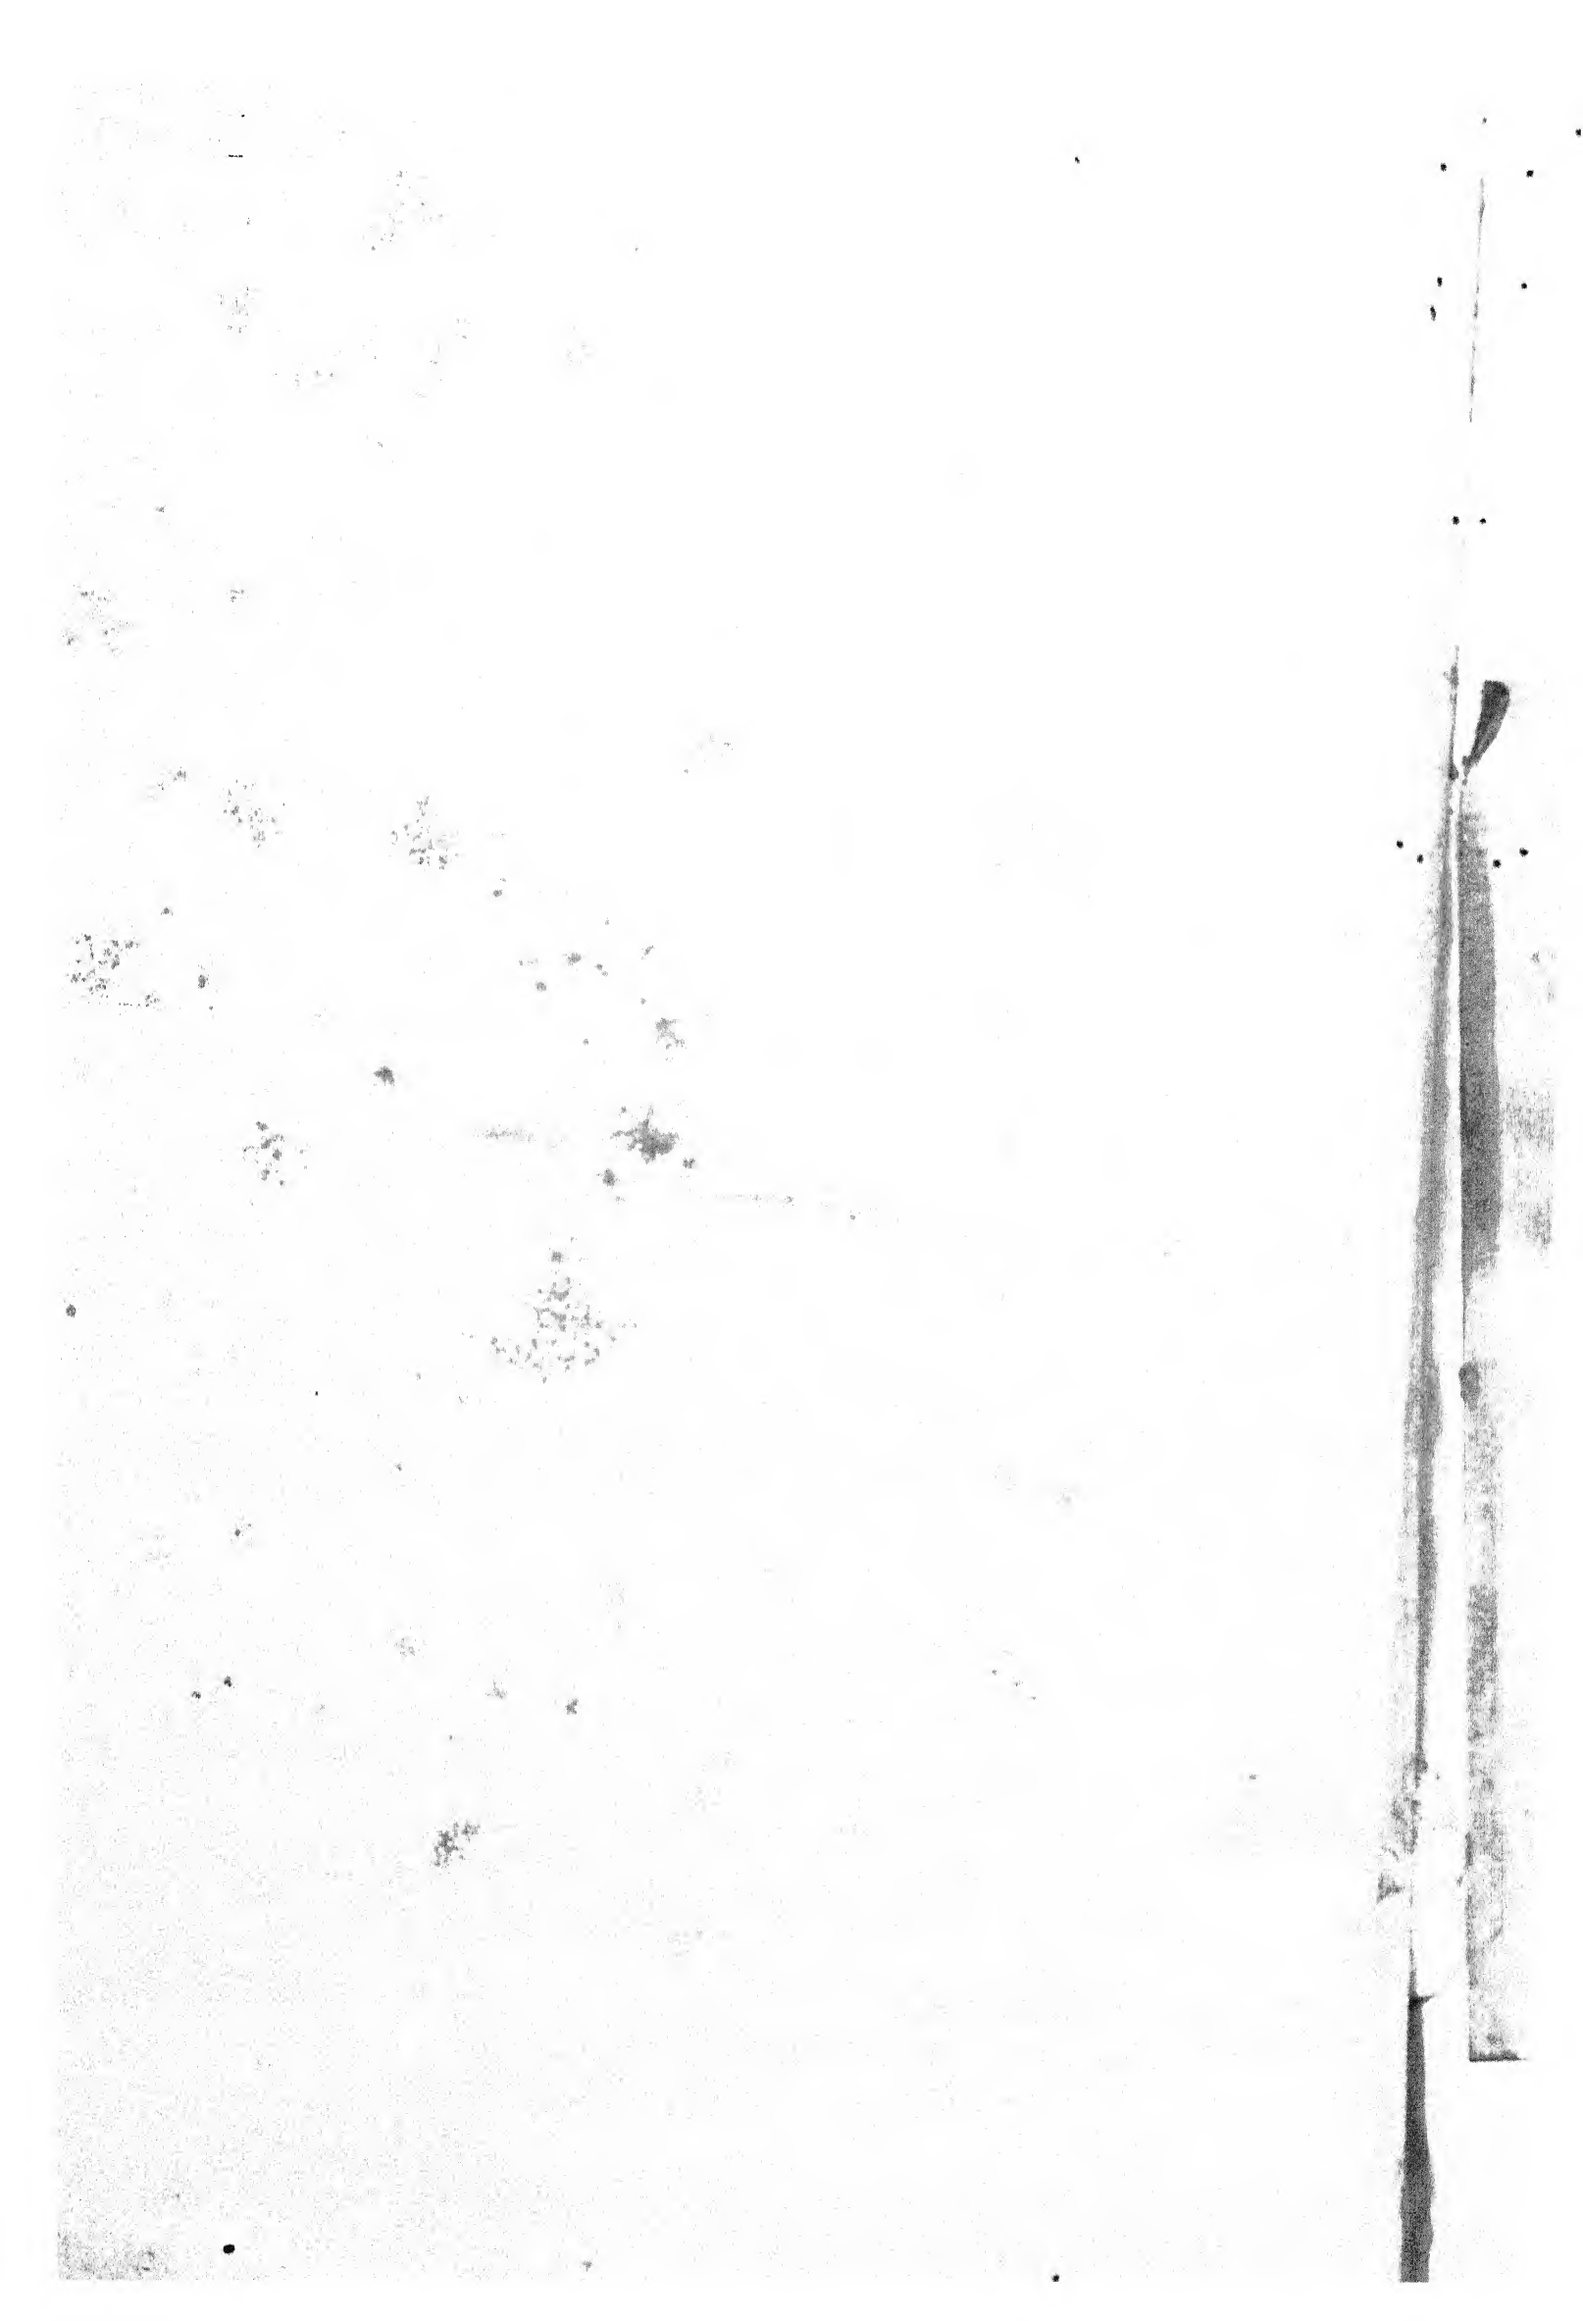
H. A.



ERRATA.

"LINGUISTIC SURVEY OF INDIA," VOLUME IX, PART I.

Page xi.—Head B, Group 3, third line, under "System of Transliteration adopted." For ڎ z read ڎ g.

Page 48, ll. 24 ff. It has been pointed out to me that what is written here is liable to misinterpretation. It is quite correct to say that Sarshār and Sharar were opposed to the artificial thought and diction of the old Lucknow school, but it should have been explained that they did not belong to Delhi, but themselves lived and worked in Lucknow, and that they were reformers, rather than opponents, of the pedantic style referred to in this passage.

Page 81, l. 4 of Head C. Read 'haugē'.

Page 108, l. 5. For ਜਿਵੇਂ- read ਜਿਵੇਂ—.

Page 117, l. 3 from bottom. For پس read پس.

Page 122, l. 7. For 'dakhinjānib' read 'dakhin jānib'.

Page 140, l. 4 from bottom. For اورتیں read عورتیں.

Page 143, l. 4 from bottom. For 'auratẽ' read 'auratẽ'.

Page 152, l. 1. For 'shallāq[1]' read 'shallāq[1]-e'.

Page 195, l. 12 from bottom. For 'ki' read 'kí'.

Page 626, l. 4. For ਸ਼ read ਸ.

Page 626, l. 16. For ਐ ai read ਐ aí.

Page 627, l. 6. For ਜਿ਼ read ਜਿ਼.

Page 627, l. 7. For ਪਜ਼ੀ read ਪ਼ੰਜ਼ੀ.

Page 627, l. 16. For ਸ read ਸ਼.

Page 643, l. 11 from bottom. Insert ; after 'dead'.

Page 754. The number (25) of the Specimen has been accidentally omitted.

Page 760. In the Heading, for 'ḌOGRA' read 'ḌOGRĀ'.

17.5.28

'AÑJĀBĪ

ERRATA.

"LINGUISTIC SURVEY OF INDIA," VOLUME IX, PART I.

Page xi.—Head B, Group 3, third line, under "System of Transliteration adopted." For ڎ z read ڎ g.

Page 48, ll. 24 ff. It has been pointed out to me that what is written here is liable to misinterpretation. It is quite correct to say that Sarshār and Sharar were opposed to the artificial thought and diction of the old Lucknow school, but it should have been explained that they did not belong to Delhi, but themselves lived and worked in Lucknow, and that they were reformers, rather than opponents, of the pedantic style referred to in this passage.

Page 81, l. 4 of Head C. Read 'haugē'.

Page 108, l. 5. For ਜਿਥੇ read ਜਿਥੇ—.

Page 117, l. 3 from bottom. For پِس read پس.

Page 122, l. 7. For 'dakhinjānib' read 'dakhin jānib'.

Page 140, l. 4 from bottom. For اُورتّی read عورتیں.

Page 143, l. 4 from bottom. For 'auratī' read 'aurati'.

Page 152, l. 1. For 'shallāq' read 'shallāq[1]-e'.

Page 195, l. 12 from bottom. For 'ki' read 'kī'.

Page 626, l. 4. For ਮ੍ read ਮ.

Page 626, l. 16. For ਐ ai read ਐ ai.

Page 627, l. 6. For ਖਿਉ read ਖਿਉ.

Page 627, l. 7. For ਪਜੀ read ਪੰਜੀ.

Page 627, l. 16. For ਸ read ਸ੍.

Page 643, l. 11 from bottom. Insert ; after 'dead'.

Page 754. The number (25) of the Specimen has been accidentally omitted.

Page 760. In the Heading, for 'ḌOGRA' read 'ḌOGRĀ'.

17.5.28.

'AÑJĀBĪ

ERRATA.

"LINGUISTIC SURVEY OF INDIA," VOLUME IX, PART I.

Page xi.—Head B, Group 3, third line, under "System of Transliteration adopted." For ڎ z read ڎ g.

Page 48, ll. 24 ff. It has been pointed out to me that what is written here is liable to misinterpretation. It is quite correct to say that Sarshār and Sharar were opposed to the artificial thought and diction of the old Lucknow school, but it should have been explained that they did not belong to Delhi, but themselves lived and worked in Lucknow, and that they were reformers, rather than opponents, of the pedantic style referred to in this passage.

Page 81, l. 4 of Head C. Read 'haugē'.

Page 108, l. 5. For ਜਿਸ- read ਜਿਸ—.

Page 117, l. 3 from bottom. For پِس read پس.

Page 122, l. 7. For 'dakhinjānib' read 'dakhin jānib'.

Page 140, l. 4 from bottom. For آورتیں read عورتیں.

Page 143, l. 4 from bottom. For 'auratẽ' read 'auratẽ'.

Page 152, l. 1. For 'shallāq[1]' read 'shallāq[1]-e'.

Page 195, l. 12 from bottom. For 'ki' read 'kí'.

Page 626, l. 4. For ਸ਼ read ਸ.

Page 626, l. 16. For ਐ ai read ਐ aí.

Page 627, l. 6. For ਜਿ਼ read ਜਿ਼.

Page 627, l. 7. For ਪੰਜੀ read ਪੰਜੀ.

Page 627, l. 16. For ਸ read ਸ਼.

Page 643, l. 11 from bottom. Insert ; after 'dead'.

Page 754. The number (25) of the Specimen has been accidentally omitted.

Page 760. In the Heading, for 'ḌOGRA' read 'ḌOGRĀ'.

17.5.28

'AÑJĀBĪ

Agents for the sale of Books published by the Superintendent of Government Printing, India, Calcutta.

IN EUROPE.

[illegible]

IN INDIA AND CEYLON.

[illegible]

Sunder Pandurang, Bombay.

[illegible]

Superintendent, [illegible] Mission Press, Rangoon.

[illegible]

* Agents for the sale of Legislative Department publications only.

LINGUISTIC SURVEY OF INDIA

VOL. IX

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY

CENTRAL GROUP

HINDUSTANI ACADEMY
Date of Entry 15.5.38

PART I

SPECIMENS OF WESTERN HINDĪ AND PAÑJĀBĪ

COLLECTED AND EDITED BY

Sir GEORGE ABRAHAM GRIERSON, K.C.I.E., PH.D., D.LITT., I.C.S. (RETD.),

HONORARY FELLOW OF THE ASIATIC SOCIETY OF BENGAL; HONORARY MEMBER OF THE AMERICAN ORIENTAL SOCIETY, THE SOCIÉTÉ [illegible] CORRESPONDING MEMBER OF THE ASSOCIATION PHONÉTIQUE INTERNATIONALE, AND THE NĀGARĪ PRACHĀRIṆĪ SABHĀ; HONORARY ASSOCIATE MEMBER OF THE SOCIÉTÉ ASIATIQUE DE PARIS; CORRESPONDING MEMBER OF THE KÖNIGLICHE GESELLSCHAFT DER WISSENSCHAFTEN ZU GÖTTINGEN, VICE-PRESIDENT OF THE ROYAL ASIATIC SOCIETY.

Subject to subsequent revision, the following is the proposed list of volumes of the Linguistic Survey of India.

Vol. I. Introductory.
" II. Mōn-Khmēr and Tai families.
" III. Part I. Tibeto-Burman languages of Tibet and North Assam.
" " II. Bodo, Nāgā, and Kachin groups of the Tibeto-Burman languages.
" " III. Kuki-Chin and Burma groups of the Tibeto-Burman languages.
" IV. Munda and Dravidian languages.
" V. Indo-Aryan languages, Eastern group.
Part I. Bengali and Assamese.
" II. Bihārī and Oriya.
" VI. Indo-Aryan languages, Mediate group (Eastern Hindī).
" VII. Indo-Aryan languages, Southern group (Marāthī).
" VIII. Indo-Aryan languages, North-Western group (Sindhī and Lahndā) and the Piśācha languages (including Kāshmīrī).
" IX. Indo-Aryan languages, Central group.
Part I. Western Hindī and Pañjābī.
" II. Rājasthānī and Gujarātī.
" III. Bhīl languages, Khāndēśi, etc.
" IV. Pahāṛī languages.
" X. Eranian family.
" XI. "Gipsy" languages and supplement.

Subject to subsequent revision, the following is the proposed list of volumes of the Linguistic Survey of India.

Vol. I. Introductory.
„ II. Mōn-Khmēr and Tai families.
„ III. Part I. Tibeto-Burman languages of Tibet and North Assam.
„ „ II. Bodo, Nāgā, and Kachin groups of the Tibeto-Burman languages.
„ „ III. Kuki-Chin and Burma groups of the Tibeto-Burman languages.
„ IV. Munda and Dravidian languages.
„ V. Indo-Aryan languages, Eastern group.
Part I. Bengali and Assamese.
„ II. Bihārī and Oṛiyā.
„ VI. Indo-Aryan languages, Mediate group (Eastern Hindī).
„ VII. Indo-Aryan languages, Southern group (Marāṭhī).
„ VIII. Indo-Aryan languages, North-Western group (Sindhī and Lahndā) and the Piśācha languages (including Kāshmīri).
„ IX. Indo-Aryan languages, Central group.
Part I. Western Hindī and Pañjābī.
„ II. Rājasthānī and Gujarātī.
„ III. Bhīl languages, Khāndēśī, etc.
„ IV. Pahāṛī languages.
„ X. Eranian family.
„ XI. "Gipsy" languages and supplement.

CONTENTS.

PAGE.

SYSTEM OF TRANSLITERATION xi
INTRODUCTORY NOTE xiii

WESTERN HINDÍ.

INTRODUCTION 1
Geographical habitat 1
Dialects: Hindóstáni 1
Bángaru 1
Braj Bhákhá 1
Kanauji 1
Bundeli 1
Number of speakers 1
Origin, and geographical position in regard to other languages 2
Written character 3
General grammatical characteristics 3
Early references to the language 3
Summary of early dates 12
Authorities 13
I. General 13
II. Grammars, Dictionaries, etc. 16
III. Selections, etc. 27
IV. Texts 30
Appendix. Early translations of the Scriptures 40
HINDÓSTÁNÍ 42
Literary Hindóstáni, Urdú and Hindí 42
Early names 43
Where spoken 43
Number of speakers 43
Origin of the dialect 44
Urdú 44
Rékhta 45
Dakhiní 45
Hindí 46
Definition of 'Hindóstáni,' 'Urdú,' and 'Hindí' 47
Literature 47
Headquarters of Urdú and Hindí 48
Various Standards of Literary Hindóstáni 48
Written character 49
Hindóstáni Grammar 50
The Prayogas and their origin 50
Urdú and Hindí grammars compared 52
Vocabulary—
Perso-Arabic element 53
Sanskrit element, Tatsamas and Tadbhavas 53
Excessive employment of Tatsamas 55
Excessive Persianization 56
Urdú and Hindí spelling 56
Hindóstáni Skeleton Grammar 57
DAKHINÍ HINDÓSTÁNÍ OR MUSALMÁNÍ 58
Name of dialect 58
Origin 58
Relation to Literary Hindóstáni 58
Locality where spoken 58
Number of speakers 59
Authorities, Grammar 59

PAGE

VERNACULAR HINDŌSTĀNĪ 6
Points of difference from Literary Hindōstānī 6
Vocabulary 6
Where spoken 6
Number of speakers 6
Typical characteristics 6
BĀNGARŪ, JĀṬṬ, AND HARIĀNĪ 6
Number of speakers 6
BRAJ BHĀKHĀ OR ANTARVEDĪ 6
Name of dialect 6
Where spoken 6
Varieties 7
Other variations 7
The Ḍāng dialects 7
Number of speakers 7
Characteristics of Braj Bhākhā 7
Literature 7
The Kṛishṇa-cult of Braj 7
Authorities 7
Grammar 7
Braj Bhākhā Skeleton Grammar 8
KANAUJĪ 8
Name of the dialect 8
Where spoken 8
Language boundaries 8
Varieties 8
Number of speakers 8
Literature 8
Authorities 8
Grammar 8
Kanaujī Skeleton Grammar 8
BUNDELĪ OR BUNDELKHAṆḌĪ 8
Area in which spoken 8
Language boundaries 8
Varieties 8
Number of speakers 8
Literature 8
Written character 8
Vocabulary 8
Grammar 9
SPECIMENS 9
HINDŌSTĀNĪ :—
Literary Hindōstānī 9
Ṭheṭh Hindōstānī 9
Lucknow Literary Urdū 11
Lucknow Qasbātī Urdū 12
Lucknow Bēgamatī Urdū 12
Standard Urdū of Delhi 13
Modern style 13
Urdū Poetry 14
Mīr Taqī 14
Ḥālī 15
High Literary Hindī of Benares 16
Hindōstānī in the United Provinces, the Panjab, Central Provinces, Rajputana, and Central India . . . 17
Hindōstānī in Eastern India 17
Hindōstānī in Gujarat 17
In Cutch 18
DAKHINĪ 18
Dakhinī of Bombay 18
Dakhinī of Madras 20
Dakhinī of Berar 21
VERNACULAR HINDŌSTĀNĪ 21
Grammar 21

SPECIMENS—contd. PAGE

VERNACULAR HINDOSTÂNI—contd.

Dialect of Meerut . . . 216 of Muzaffarnagar . . . 231 of Western Rohilkhand . . . 237 of Bijnaur . . . 238 of Ambala . . . 240
BANGARU, JATU, OR HARIANI . . . 252 of Karnal and Patiala (Nirwana) . . . 253
Grammar . . . 253
Hariâni of Jind . . . 264
BRAJ BHAKHA . . . 271 of Muttra . . . 271
Old Braj Bhâkhâ . . . 276
Braj Bhakhâ of Aligarh . . . 280 of Agra . . . 291
of East Agra . . . 293 of Dholpur . . . 296
Jâdobâți . . . 298
Sikarwâri . . . 300
Braj Bhâkhâ of Etah . . . 303 of Mainpuri . . . 307 of Bareilly . . . 310
Braj Bhâkhâ merging into Hindostâni . . . 312 of Bulandshahr . . . 313
Kathêriya of Budaun . . . 316
Braj Bhâkhâ of the Tarâi . . . 319
Braj Bhâkhâ merging into Râjasthâni . . . 322 of Gurgaon . . . 323 of Bharatpur . . . 326
The broken dialects of the Dângs . . . 329 Dangi of Karauli . . . 332 of Jaipur . . . 341
Dânghbâng . . . 353
Kalimâl . . . 362
Dûngar wâra . . . 363
STANDARD LIST OF WORDS AND SENTENCES IN THE DÂNG DIALECTS . . . 364
KANAUJI . . . 383
of East Farukhabad . . . 384 of North-West Farukhabad . . . 389
Pacharna of Etawah . . . 390
Kanauji of South-West Etawah . . . 392 of Hardoi . . . 395 of Shahjahanpur . . . 398 of Pilibhit . . . 400
Mixed dialects . . . 401
Kanauji of Cawnpore . . . 401
Tirhâri of Cawnpore . . . 409
Dialect of East Hardoi . . . 411
BUNDELI OR BUNDELKHANDI . . . 414 of Jhansi . . . 414 of Jalaun . . . 423 of West Jalaun . . . 430 of Hamirpur . . . 437 of East Gwalior . . . 439 of Orchha . . . 444 of Saugor . . . 449 of Narsinghpur . . . 450 of Hoshangabad . . . 452 of North Seoni . . . 455 Khatôla of Panna . . . 457 of Damoh . . . 461
Lodhânti or Râthora . . . 465
Pâwâri . . . 473

PAGE

SPECIMENS—concld.
BUNDĒLĪ OR BUNDĒLKHAṆḌĪ—contd.
The mixed dialects of the North . . . 479
Banāpharī . . . 481
Grammar . . . 482
Specimens . . . 488
The Songs of Ālhā and Ūdal . . . 495
Kuṇḍrī . . . 527
Nibhaṭṭā . . . 529
Bhadaurī or Tōwargaṛhī of Gwalior . . . 531
of Agra . . . 542
The broken dialects of the South . . . 547
of the Balaghat Lōdhīs . . . 548
of Central Chhindwara . . . 550
Gāolī, Rāghōbansī, and Kirārī . . . 554
'Hindī' of Nagpur . . . 558
The Kōshṭī dialects . . . 560
of the Central Provinces . . . 560
of Berar . . . 564
Kumbhārī of Berar . . . 565
STANDARD LIST OF WORDS AND SENTENCES IN WESTERN HINDĪ . . . 569

PAÑJĀBĪ.

INTRODUCTION . . . 607
Name of the language . . . 607
Where spoken . . . 607
Linguistic Boundaries . . . 607
Western Boundary . . . 608
Pañjābī and the Land of the Five Rivers . . . 608
Dialects and sub-dialects . . . 609
Number of speakers . . . 610
Characteristics of the language . . . 614
Relationship to Lahndā and Western Hindī . . . 614
Pronunciation . . . 615
Nominal termination . . . 616
Termination of the genitive . . . 616
Termination of the case of the Agent . . . 616
Personal Pronouns . . . 616
Passive voice . . . 616
Pronominal suffixes . . . 616
Vocabulary . . . 617
Old accounts of the Punjab . . . 617
Literature . . . 617
Authorities . . . 618
General . . . 618
Grammars, Dictionaries, etc. . . . 619
Written character . . . 622
Grammar . . . 624
Pañjābī Skeleton Grammar . . . 628
List of Words commencing with v instead of w . . . 630
ḌŌGRĀ OR ḌŌGRĪ . . . 633
Where spoken . . . 637
Origin of the name . . . 637
Language boundaries . . . 637
Sub-dialects . . . 637
Number of speakers . . . 637
Characteristics of the dialect . . . 637
Literature . . . 638
Authorities . . . 638
Written character . . . 638
Grammar . . . 638
Ḍōgrā Skeleton Grammar . . . 643
. . . 644

PAGE

SPECIMENS 646
STANDARD PAÑJĀBĪ 646
Mājhī 646
Pañjābī of the Jullundur Doab 651
Kahlūrī or Bilāspurī 671
Pōwādhī 677
Rāṭhī or Pachhāḍī 679
Jāṇḍ or Nailī 696
Specimen 696
Mālwāī 703
of Ludhiana 709
of Ferozepore 712
of Nabha 719
Bhaṭṭiānī 728
Bhaṭnērī 734
Pañjābī merging into Lahndā 742
Pañjābī of West Lahore 743
of East Montgomery 745
ḌOGRĀ OR ḌŌGRĪ 756
of Jammu 757
Kaṇḍiālī 757
The Kāṅgṛā dialect 775
Grammar 776
Specimens 776
Bhaṭṭĕālī 780
Grammar 794
Specimen 794
STANDARD LIST OF WORDS AND SENTENCES IN PAÑJĀBĪ 798 806

MAPS.

Map illustrating the dialects and sub-dialects of the Western Hindī language . . . To face page 1
Map illustrating the dialects and sub-dialects of the Pañjābī language . . . . To face page 607

PAGE

SPECIMENS—concld.
BUNDĒLĪ OR BUNDĒLKHAṆḌĪ—contd. 479
The mixed dialects of the North 481
Banāpharī 482
Grammar 483
Specimens 488
The Songs of Ālhā and Ūdal 495
Kuṇḍrī 527
Nibhaṭṭā 529
Bhadaurī or Tōwargaṛhī of Gwalior 531
of Agra 542
The broken dialects of the South 547
of the Balaghat Lōdhīs 548
of Central Chhindwara 550
Gāolī, Rāghōbansī, and Kirārī 554
'Hindī' of Nagpur 558
The Kōshṭī dialects 560
of the Central Provinces 560
of Berar 564
Kumbhārī of Berar 565
STANDARD LIST OF WORDS AND SENTENCES IN WESTERN HINDI 569

PAÑJĀBĪ.

INTRODUCTION 607
Name of the language 607
Where spoken 607
Linguistic Boundaries 607
Western Boundary 608
Pañjābī and the Land of the Five Rivers 608
Dialects and sub-dialects 609
Number of speakers 610
Characteristics of the language 614
Relationship to Lahndā and Western Hindī 614
Pronunciation 615
Nominal termination 616
Termination of the genitive 616
Termination of the case of the Agent 616
Personal Pronouns 616
Passive voice 616
Pronominal suffixes 617
Vocabulary 617
Old accounts of the Punjab 617
Literature 618
Authorities 618
General 619
Grammars, Dictionaries, etc. 622
Written character 624
Grammar 628
Pañjābī Skeleton Grammar 630
List of Words commencing with v instead of w 633
ḌŌGRĀ OR ḌŌGRĪ 637
Where spoken 637
Origin of the name 637
Language boundaries 637
Sub-dialects 637
Number of speakers 637
Characteristics of the dialect 637
Literature 638
Authorities 638
Written character 638
Grammar 638
Ḍōgrā Skeleton Grammar 643

PAGE

SPECIMENS 646
STANDARD PAÑJĀBĪ 646
Mājhī 646
Pañjābī of the Jullundur Doab 651
Kahlūrī or Bilāspurī 671
Pōwādhī 677
Rāṭhī or Pachhāḍī 679
Jāṇd or Nailī 686
Specimen 686
Mālwāī 703
of Ludhiana 709
of Ferozepore 712
of Nabha 719
Bhaṭṭiānī 728
Bhaṭnērī 734
Pañjābī merging into Lahndā 742
Pañjābī of West Lahore 743
of East Montgomery 745
ḌOGRĀ OR ḌŌGRĪ 756
of Jammu 757
Kaṇḍiālī 757
The Kāṅgṛā dialect 775
Grammar 776
Specimens 776
Bhaṭṭēālī 780
Grammar 794
Specimen 794
STANDARD LIST OF WORDS AND SENTENCES IN PAÑJĀBĪ 798
. 806

MAPS.

Map illustrating the dialects and sub-dialects of the Western Hindī language . . . To face page 1
Map illustrating the dialects and sub-dialects of the Pañjābī language . . . . To face page 607

LINGUISTIC SURVEY OF INDIA.

SYSTEM OF TRANSLITERATION ADOPTED.

A.—For the Dēva-nāgarī alphabet, and others related to it—

अ a, आ ā, इ i, ई ī, उ u, ऊ ū, ऋ ṛi, ए e, ए ē, ऐ ai, ओ o, ओ ō, औ au.

क ka	ख kha	ग ga	घ gha	ङ ṅa		च cha	छ chha	ज ja	झ jha	ञ ña
ट ṭa	ठ ṭha	ड ḍa	ढ ḍha	ण ṇa		त ta	थ tha	द da	ध dha	न na
प pa	फ pha	ब ba	भ bha	म ma		य ya	र ra	ल la	व va or wa
श śa	ष sha	स sa	ह ha			ड़ ṛa	ढ़ ṛha	ळ ḷa	ऴ्ह ḷha

Visarga (:) is represented by ḥ, thus क्रमश : kramaśaḥ. Anuswāra (ं) is represented by ṁ, thus सिंह siṁh, वंश vaṁś. In Bengali and some other languages it is pronounced ng, and is then written ṅg; thus वंश baṅgśa. Anunāsika or Chandra-bindu is represented by the sign ˜ over the letter nasalized, thus मेँ mẽ.

B.—For the Arabic alphabet, as adapted to Hindōstānī—

ا	a, etc.	ج	j	د	d	ر	r	س	s	ع	‘
ب	b	چ	ch	ڈ	ḍ	ڑ	ṛ	ش	sh	غ	gh
پ	p	ح	ḥ	ذ	z	ز	z	ص	ṣ	ف	f
ت	t	خ	kh			ژ	zh	ض	ẓ	ق	q
ٹ	ṭ							ط	ṭ	ک	k
ث	s							ظ	ẓ	گ	g
										ل	l
										م	m
										ن	n
										ں	when representing anunāsika in Dēva-nāgarī, by ˜ over nasalized vowel.
										و	w or v
										ہ	h
										ی	y, etc.

Tanwīn is represented by n, thus فوراً fauran. Alif-e maqṣūra is represented by ā;—thus دعوىٰ da'wā.

In the Arabic character, a final silent h is not transliterated,—thus بندہ banda. When pronounced, it is written,—thus گناہ gunāh.

Vowels when not pronounced at the end of a word, are not written in transliteration. Thus बन ban, not bana. When not pronounced in the middle of a word or only slightly pronounced in the middle or at the end of a word, they are written in small characters above the line. Thus (Hindī) देखता dēkh^{a}tā, pronounced dēkhtā; (Kāshmīrī) چھ ts^{a}h; کر kar^{u}, pronounced kor; (Bihārī) देखथि dēkhath^{i}.

C.—Special letters peculiar to special languages will be dealt with under the head of the languages concerned. In the meantime the following more important instances may be noted:—

(a) The ts sound found in Marāṭhī (च), Paṣhtō (څ), Kāśmīrī (چ, च), Tibetan (ཙ), and elsewhere, is represented by t͡s. So, the aspirate of that sound is represented by t͡sh.

(b) The dz sound found in Marāṭhī (ज), Paṣhtō (ځ), and Tibetan (ཛ) is represented by d͡z, and its aspirate by d͡zh.

(c) Kāshmīrī ں (ञ) is represented by ñ.

(d) Sindhī ڃ, Western Pañjābī (and elsewhere on the N.-W. Frontier) ڃ, and Puṣhtō ڼ or ڼ are represented by ṉ.

(e) The following are letters peculiar to Paṣhtō:—

ټ ṭ; ځ t͡s or d͡z, according to pronunciation; ډ ḍ; ړ ṛ; ږ zh or g, according to pronunciation; ښ ṣh or ḵh, according to pronunciation; ڼ or ڼ ṉ.

(f) The following are letters peculiar to Sindhī:—

ٻ bb; ڀ bh; ٿ th; ٽ ṭ; ٺ ṭh; ڦ ph; ڇ jj; ڃ jh; ڇ chh; ڃ ñ; ڈ dh; ڊ ḍ; ڈ ḍḍ; ڍ ḍh; ڪ k; ک kh; ڳ gg; ڳ gh; ڱ ṅ; ڃ ṉ.

D.—Certain sounds, which are not provided for above, occur in transcribing languages which have no alphabet, or in writing phonetically (as distinct from transliterating) languages (such as Bengali) whose spelling does not represent the spoken sounds. The principal of these are the following:—

â,	represents	the	sound	of the a in all.
ă,	,,	,,	,,	a in hat.
ĕ,	,,	,,	,,	e in met.
ŏ,	,,	,,	,,	o in hot.
e,	,,	,,	,,	é in the French était.
o,	,,	,,	,,	o in the first o in promote.
ö,	,,	,,	,,	ö in the German schön.
ü,	,,	,,	,,	ü in the ,, mühe.
t͡h,	,,	,,	,,	th in think.
d͡h,	,,	,,	,,	th in this.

The semi-consonants peculiar to the Muṇḍā languages are indicated by an apostrophe. Thus k', t', p', and so on.

E.—When it is necessary to mark an accented syllable, the acute accent is used. Thus in (Khōwār) ássistai, he was, the acute accent shows that the accent falls on the first, and not, as might be expected, on the second syllable.

INTRODUCTORY NOTE.

This volume, dealing with the Central Group of Indo-Aryan Vernaculars, is divided into four parts, viz. :—

Part i, dealing with Western Hindi and Pañjābī.
Part ii, ... Rājasthānī and Gujarātī.
Part iii, ... The Bhīl Languages, Khandēśī, etc.
Part iv, ... Pahāṛī.

Of these, Part iii has been prepared partly by Professor Konow and partly by me. I am entirely responsible for the other Parts.

The languages forming this Central Group, and the numbers of their speakers as reported for this Survey, are as follows :—

Western Hindī	38,013,928
Pañjābī	12,677,639
Rājasthānī	15,842,087
Gujarātī	10,646,227
Bhīlī, etc.	4,100,675
Eastern Pahāṛī[1]	143,721
Central Pahāṛī	1,107,612
Western Pahāṛī	816,181
TOTAL	83,348,070

Of these, the most important, both politically and in point of numbers, is Western Hindī. One of its dialects is Hindōstānī, the lingua franca of India. It should, however, be remembered that Hindōstānī is not a typical dialect of the language. The typical dialect is the Braj Bhākhā spoken round Agra and Mathura. The home of Hindōstānī as a vernacular is more to the North-West, on the border of the Panjab, and that dialect is therefore much infected by the Pañjābī lying to its West.[2]

Western Hindī is spoken in the western half of the United Provinces, and Pañjābī in the Central Panjab. Rājasthānī is spoken in Rajputana, and Gujarātī in Gujarat. The Bhīl languages and those grouped with them are spoken mainly in the Bhīl country and in Khandesh, but scattered colonies are found in several localities of northern India, from Midnapore in Bengal to the central Panjab.

It would be impossible, in the present volume, to give a detailed account of the relationship of the languages of the Central Group to the other Indo-Aryan vernaculars. The question involves a consideration of the entire history of the growth and expansion of all the Aryan languages, ancient and modern, of northern India, and must therefore be deferred to the Introductory Volume of this Survey, which cannot be prepared till all

[1] The figures for Eastern Pahāṛī include only those speakers that are resident in India. They do not include the unknown, but much larger, number resident in Nepal, the home of the language.

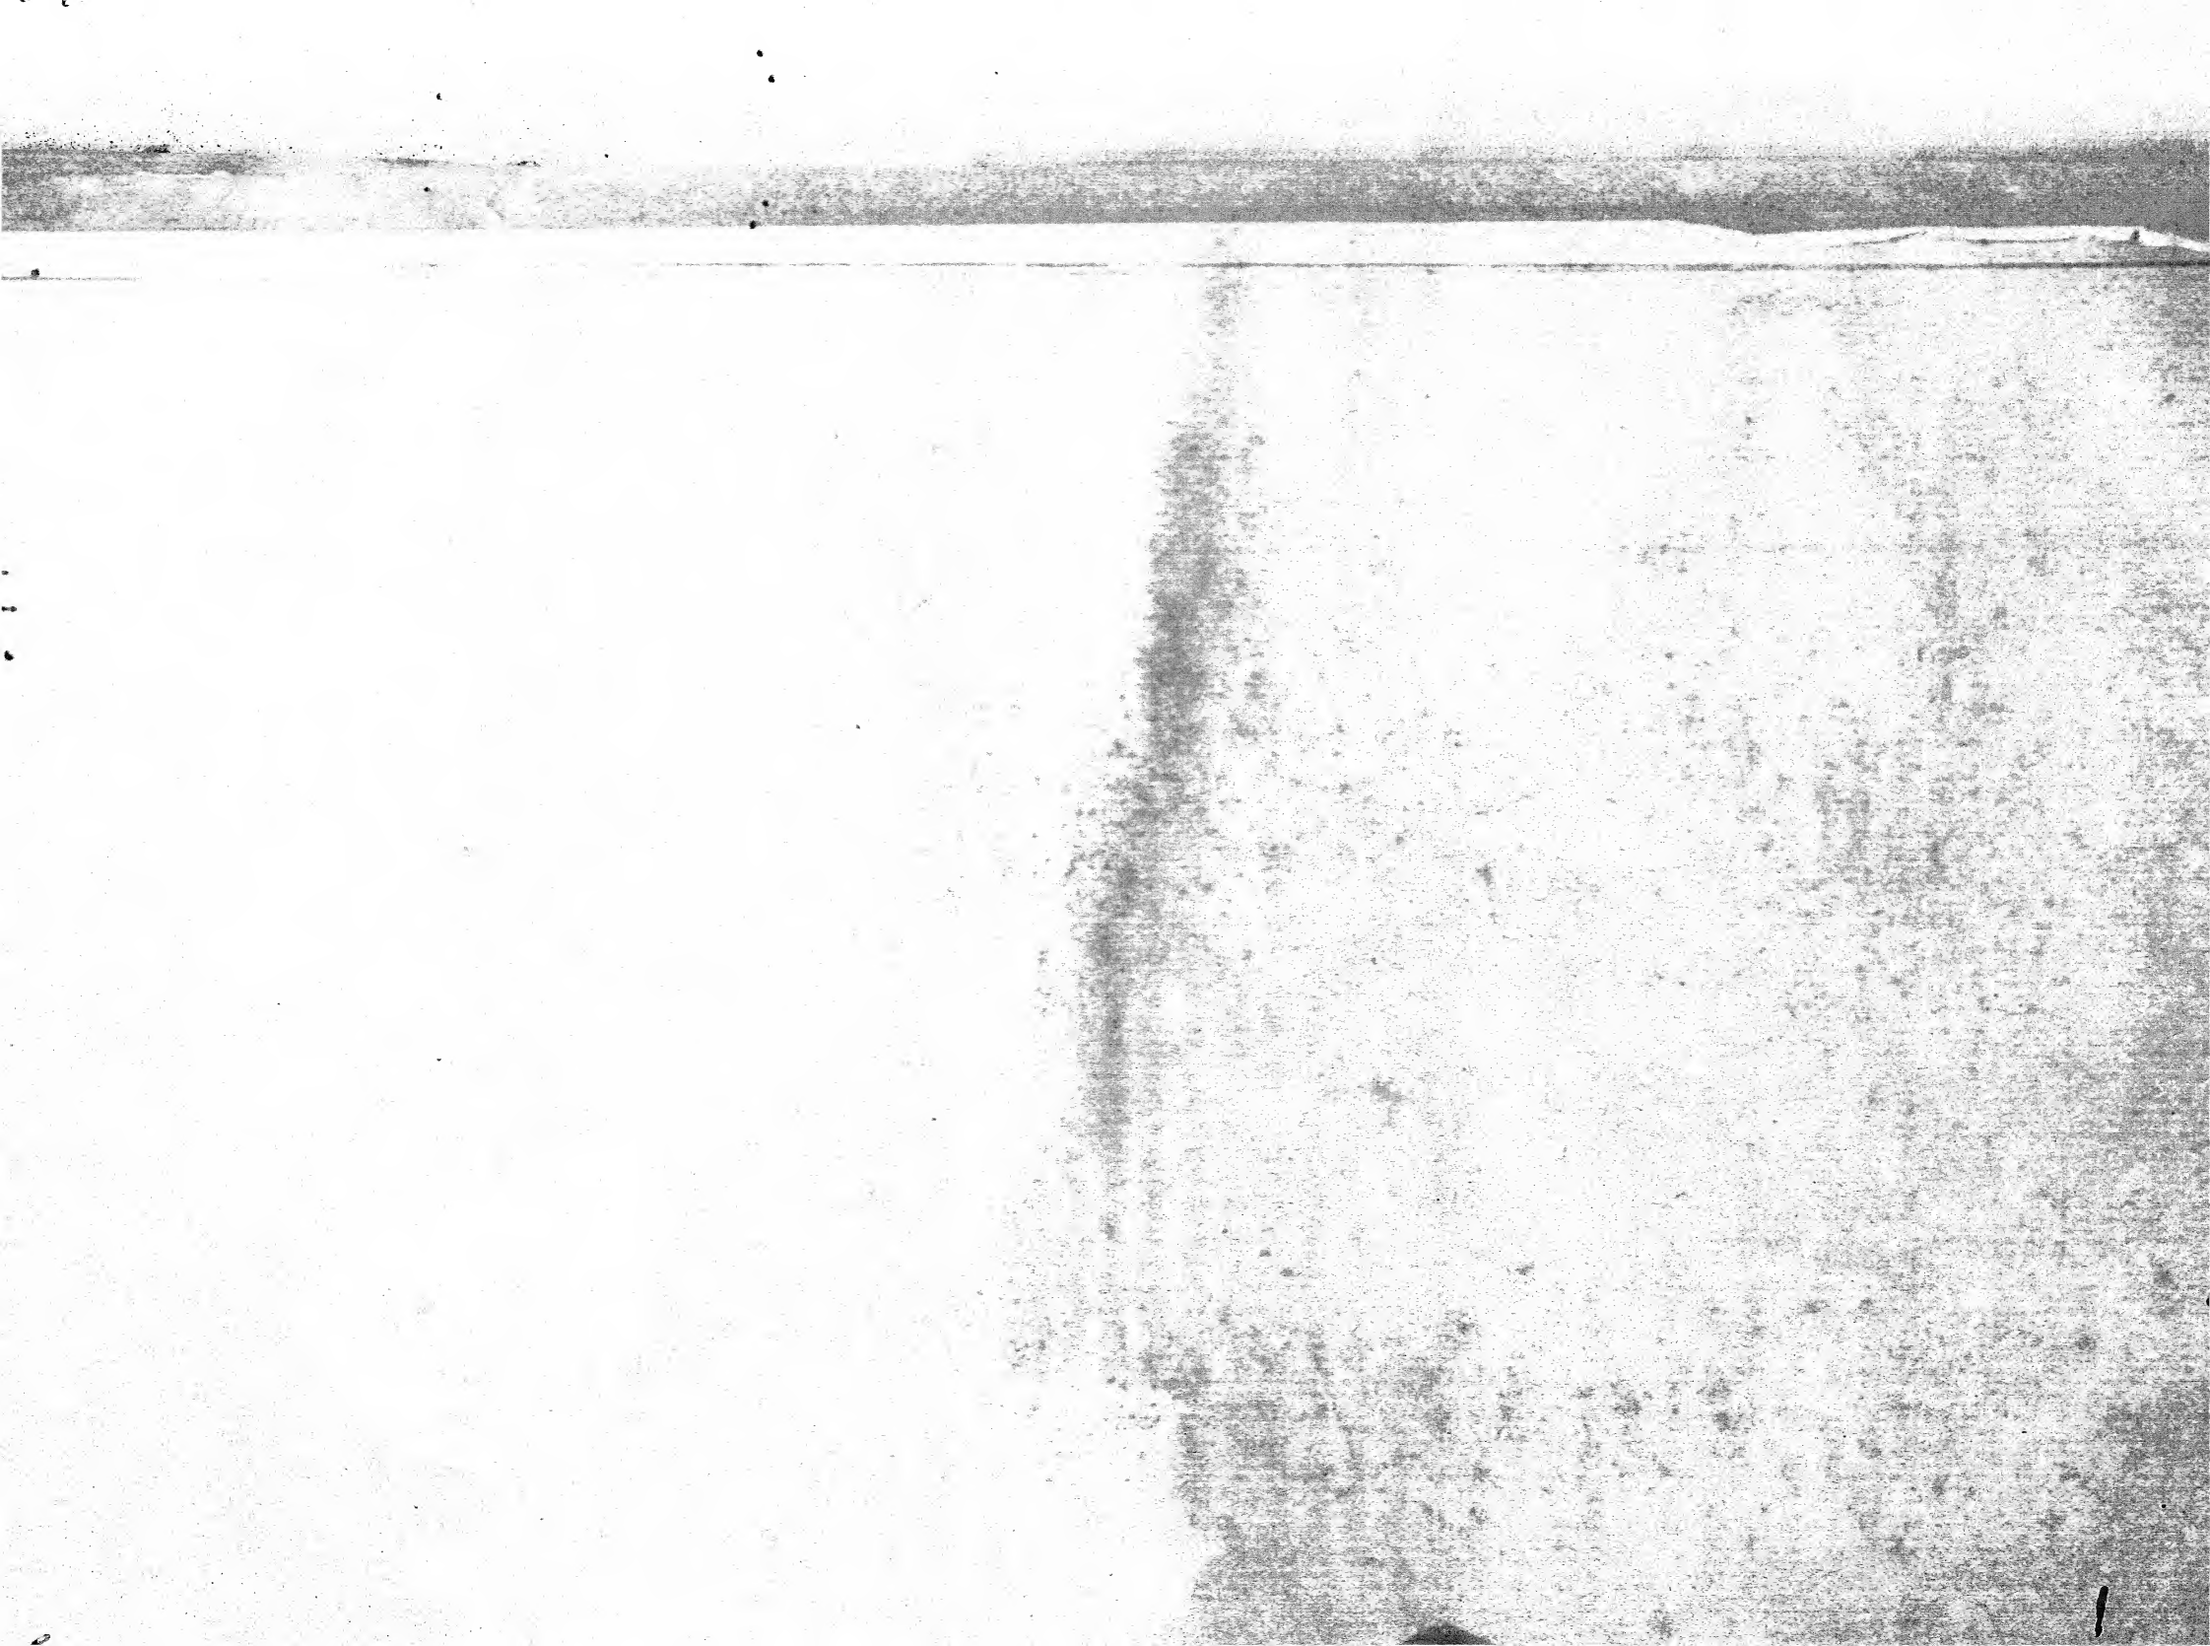
[2] The principal point in which Hindōstānī has been affected by Pañjābī is that nouns that in Western Hindī end in au or ō, such as ghōṛau or ghōṛō, a horse, in Hindōstānī, as in Pañjābī, end in ā, as in ghōṛā. Another important point is the use of the postposition nē to indicate the case of the agent.

the remaining volumes are in type. Suffice it here to say that the typical language of the Central Group is Western Hindī. Pañjābī is a language resulting from the amalgamation of two very different forms of speech,—the old Piśācha language that lies at the base of the Lahndā spoken in the Western Panjab, and the Prakrit of the Midland that was the parent of Western Hindī. Rājasthānī represents the overflow of Western Hindī to the South and South-West, but is much infected by the language of Gūjar invaders who came partly from the West and partly from Sapādalaksha or the Himalayan tract between Nepal and Kashmir. Gujarātī is a further continuation of this overflow. It has as a basis an old North-Western language of Piśācha origin akin to Sindhī, which was overwhelmed by the Western Hindī invasion, but traces of which can still be observed. The Bhīl dialects are mostly broken forms of Gujarātī spoken by non-Aryan tribes. The three Pahāṛī languages have at their base an old language akin to Piśācha, spoken by the Khaśa tribe, which has been superseded by the language of Gūjar invaders. This mixed form of speech was carried, as above stated, into Rajputana, and was again, in its turn, strongly influenced in later times by re-immigrants to the Himālaya from Rajputana, who now spoke Rājasthānī. Particulars regarding the growth and expansion of each of these various languages will be found in the Introductions to the various sections.

The four parts of this volume were prepared and sent to press some years ago, but difficulties connected with the obtainment of proper types have greatly delayed the printing of Parts i and iv. I regret that owing to this the Bibliographies of these parts are not entirely up to the dates printed on the title-pages.

GEORGE A. GRIERSON.

CAMBERLEY;
August 11, 1914.



Western Hindī.

Geographical Habitat.

The home of Western Hindī closely agrees with the Madhyadēśa, or Midland, of ancient Sanskrit geographers. The Madhyadēśa was the country between the Saraswatī on the west and what is now Allahabad on the east. Its northern boundary was the Himālaya Range, and its southern the Narbada River. Between these limits lay, according to tradition, the holy land of Brahmanism. It was the centre of Hindū civilisation, and the abode on earth of its deities. Western Hindī does not extend so far east as Allahabad—its eastern limit is about Cawnpore,—but in other respects the area in which it is spoken is almost exactly the same as the Madhyadēśa. It is spoken as a vernacular over the western portion of the United Provinces, in the eastern districts of the Panjab, in Eastern Rajputana, in Gwalior and Bundelkhand, and in the north-western districts of the Central Provinces. Moreover, its most important dialect, Hindōstānī, is spoken and understood, and is even amongst some classes of the population a vernacular, over the whole of the Indian Peninsula.

Dialects : Hindōstānī.

Western Hindī has five dialects,—Hindōstānī, Bāngarū, Braj Bhākhā, Kanaujī, and Bundēlī. Hindōstānī, as a local vernacular, is spoken in Western Rohilkhand, the Upper Gangetic Dōāb, and the Panjab District of Ambala. It has also been carried over the whole of India by Musalmān conquerors, and has received considerable literary culture. Under these conditions it has three main varieties, Literary Hindōstānī proper, employed by both Musalmāns and Hindūs for literary purposes and as a lingua franca ; Urdū, employed chiefly by Musalmāns and by Hindūs who have adopted the Musalmān system of education, and a modern development, called Hindī, employed only by Hindūs who have been educated on a Hindū system. Urdū, itself, has two varieties, the standard literary form of Delhi and Lucknow, and the Dakhinī, spoken, and used as a literary medium, by Musalmāns of Southern India.

Bāngarū.

Bāngarū is the dialect of Western Hindī which is spoken in the Eastern Panjab. It is also called Jāṭū and Hariānī. It is much influenced by the neighbouring Rājasthānī and Pañjābī.

Braj Bhākhā.

Braj Bhākhā is the dialect of the west central Dōāb and the country to its north and to its south.

Kanaujī.

Kanaujī is really a form of Braj Bhākhā and is only given separate consideration in deference to popular opinion. It is spoken in the east central Dōāb and the country to its north.

Bundēlī.

Bundēlī is spoken in Gwalior and Bundelkhand. It is also spoken in the adjoining districts of the Central Provinces.

All these dialects are described with considerable detail on the following pages, and it will suffice to give here the total estimated number of speakers of each—

Hindōstānī—
Local Vernacular	5,282,733
Literary Hindōstānī (including Urdū and Hindī) . .	7,696,264
Dakhinī	3,654,172
		16,633,169

	Brought forward .	16,633,169
		2,165,784
Bāngarū	7,864,274
Braj Bhākhā	4,481,500
Kanaujī		12,345,774
		6,869,201
Bundēlī
Total estimated number of speakers of Western Hindī .		38,013,928

This is about the same as the population of the United Kingdom in 1891 (38,104,975), and two-thirds of a million less than that of France at the present time (38,641,333). I roughly estimate the area in which it is spoken at about 200,000 square miles, with which we may compare the area of the German Empire (209,000), and that of France (204,000).

Origin and geographical position of Western Hindī in regard to neighbouring languages.

As explained in the Introductory Note, Western Hindī is the purest representative of that Group. It is directly derived from the Apabhraṁśa dialect corresponding to Śaurasēnī, the most Sanskritic of all the Prakrits ; it is spoken in the area which was the centre from which Aryan civilisation was diffused over Hindostan ; and the head-quarters of its principal dialect—Braj Bhākhā—is Mathurā, —the Μάδουρα ἡ τῶν Θεῶν of the Greeks, and in ancient times one of the most sacred cities of India.

Of the four languages which form the Central Group of Indo-Aryan vernaculars, Western Hindī is the one which is the most typical of the group. In fact, it would be more accurate, though more complicated, to describe it as being the only member of the group, the other three, Pañjābī, Rājasthānī, and Gujarātī, being intermediate between it and the adjoining languages, Lahndā, Sindhī, and Marāṭhī, which belong to what I call the Outer Circle. These languages, Pañjābī, Rājasthānī, and Gujarātī, lie to the west and south of Western Hindī. It is also to be remembered that to its east we have Eastern Hindī, another language which is intermediate between Western Hindī and the speeches of the Outer Circle. But these two sets of intermediate languages possess sharply opposed characteristics. Their respective bases are quite different. As has been explained in the introduction to Vol. VI of this Survey, pp. 3 and ff., Eastern Hindī is a language of the Outer Circle affected by the characteristics of the Central Group, while Pañjābī, Rājasthānī, and Gujarātī are in all their chief characteristics members of the Central Group, and only show traces, which are more and more evident as we go westwards, of the influence of the Outer Circle. It would be most correct to class them as a distinct intermediate group of languages, but it is more convenient to consider them all together, with Western Hindī, as members of one group—the Central,—remembering that they do not possess all the true characteristics of that group in its purity.

The linguistic boundaries of Western Hindī are as follows :—On its north-west it is bounded by Pañjābī, to its south-west and south lies Rājasthānī, to its south-east, Marāṭhī, and to its east, Eastern Hindī. On the north it is bounded by the Indo-Aryan dialects, Jaunsārī, Garhwālī, and Kumaunī, of the lower southern slope of the Himālaya. It gradually shades off into Pañjābī, Rājasthānī, and Eastern Hindī, but there is no intermediate dialect between it and Marāṭhī. Marāṭhī nowhere merges into the languages of the Central Group, but is separated from them by a sharp distinct line

There are, it is true, a few tribal dialects which possess the characteristics of both Western Hindī and Marāṭhī, but these are mere mechanical mixtures—broken jargons,—which are not true intermediate forms of speech. We may consider Marāṭhī as being fully established in the Nāgpur plain at the foot of the Satpura Range. The northern hill dialects are described in Part IV of this volume, and are closely connected with Rājasthānī.

Written character.

Two characters are employed for writing Western Hindī,—the Persian for some forms of Hindōstānī, and the Dēvanāgarī (with its current hands the Kaithī and Mahājanī) for the other dialects. Neither of them need be described here. In writing the dialects in the Dēvanāgarī character, an important irregularity is observed in the employment of the letter र ra. When this is followed, in Tadbhava words, by the letter य ya or व wa, it does not take the form ◌्र. Such compounds are written र्य rya and र्व rwa, respectively. Thus (Braj Bhākhā) मार्यौ māryau, struck ; Bundēlī र्वाबो rwābō (Hindōstānī rōnā), to weep.

General grammatical characteristics.

The familiar Hindōstānī grammar may be taken as the standard of the grammars of all the Western Hindī dialects. Each is fully described in the proper place, and I here content myself with pointing out one characteristic in which Western Hindī is pre-eminently typical of the Central Group of language. This is the analytic method of its construction, which will be dealt with at some length in the first volume of this Survey, and is only referred to here. Of all the languages of the group, Western Hindī is that which carries analysis to its furthest extreme. Its standard dialect has only one true tense (the present subjunctive) for its verb, and has only one true case (the so-called oblique form) for its nouns. Nearly all the other accidents of time and relation are expressed by the aid of participles, auxiliary verbs, or postpositions.

Early references to the language.

The earliest date which Yule gives of the use of the word 'Hindōstānī' is 1616 when Terry speaks of Tom Coryate being proficient in 'the Indostan, or more vulgar language.'[1] We may also note that Terry, in his A Voyage to East India (1655), gives a brief description of the vulgar tongue of the country of Indostan, which will be found quoted below under J. Ogilby. So Fryer (1673) (quoted by Yule) says: 'The Language at Court is Persian, that commonly spoken is Indostan (for which they have no proper character, the written Language being called Banyan).' It is evident, therefore, that early in the 17th century it was known in England that the Lingua Franca of India was this form of speech. On the other hand, another set of authorities stated that the Lingua Franca of India was Malay. So Ogilby in the passages quoted below. Again, David Wilkins, in the preface to Chamberlayne's collection of versions of the Lord's Prayer (published 1715), explains that he could not get a version in the Bengali language, as that form of speech was dying out, and was being superseded by Malay. He therefore, for Bengali, gave a Malay version, written in the Bengali character.

It is possible that Ogilby had less excuse than appears for his mistake, for Mr. Quaritch, in his Oriental Catalogue published in 1887, mentions a MS. Dictionary then in his possession (No. 34,724 in the Catalogue)[1] which he doubtfully dates as 'Surat, about 1630.' This is a Dictionary of Persian, Hindōstānī, English, and Portuguese, and he describes it as 'a great curiosity as being the first work of its kind. It was probably compiled for the use of the English factory at Surat. The Persian is given in Native and in Roman letters, the Hindōstānī in Gujarātī and Roman letters.' It is a small folio manuscript on Oriental tinted paper.

[1] See, for this and other quotations, Hobson-Jobson, s. vv. Hindostanee and Moors. It is hardly necessary to remind the reader that in the 18th century Hindōstānī was commonly called 'Moors.'

The celebrated traveller Pietro Della Valle arrived at Surat early in 1623, and remained in India till November 1624, his head-quarters being Surat and Goa. His Indian Travels were published in 1663,[2] and he has the honour of being the first to mention the Nāgarī, or, as he calls it, Naghèr, alphabet in Europe. He also mentioned a language which was current all over India, like Latin in Europe, and which was written in that character.[3] This is, however, probably Sanskrit, not Hindōstānī.

A Jesuits' College was founded at Agra in the year 1620, and to it, in 1653, came Father Heinrich Roth.[4] Here he studied Sanskrit, and wrote a grammar of that language. He visited Rome in 1664, and afterwards returned to Agra, where he died in 1668. While in Rome he met Kircher, who was then in that city getting the imprimatur for his China Illustrata, and gave him information regarding the Nāgarī alphabet which he incorporated in that work. It was published at Amsterdam in 1667, and its full title was Athanasii Kircheri e Soc. Jesu CHINA Monumentis qua sacris qua profanis, nec non variis Naturae et Artis Spectaculis, aliarumque Rerum memorabilium Argumentis ILLUSTRATA. Roth's contributions (besides verbal information) consisted of a set of illustrations of the ten Avatāras of Vishṇu (nine of which have titles in both Roman and Nāgarī characters), and five plates, four of which describe the Nāgarī alphabet (Elementa Linguae Hanscret), while the fifth gives the Pater Noster and the Ave Maria in Latin, but written (incorrectly enough) in the Nāgarī character. The Pater Noster begins as follows,—यातिर् (sic) नोस्तिर क्षी एम् इन् सॅलिम्.[5]

In 1673 John Ogilby, Cosmographer, published in London—Asia, the first Part. Being an Accurate Description of Persia, and the Several Provinces thereof. The Vast Empire of the Great Mogol, and other Parts of India; and their several Kingdoms and Regions: With the Denominations and Descriptions of the Cities, Towns, and Places of Remark therein contained. The various Customs, Habits, Religion, and Languages of the Inhabitants. Their Political Governments, and Way of Commerce. Also the Plants and Animals peculiar to each Country. Collected and translated from the most authentick Authors, and augmented with later Observations, illustrated with notes and adorned with peculiar Maps, and proper Sculptures. On pp. 59, 60, he deals with the Persian language and its three dialects, Xirazy, Rostazy, and Hormazy. On p. 129 he takes up the subject of the Malay language. He says, 'as to what concerns the Language of the Indians, it only differs in general from the Moors and the Mahumetans, but they have also several different Dialects amongst themselves. Amongst all

[1] It has since been sold, and I have failed to trace it.

[2] So Encyclopædia Britannica. Yule (Hobson-Jobson) gives 1650-53. (Edited for the Hakluyt Society by Edward Grey, B.C.S., 1892, 2 vols.)

[3] See Professor Zachariae, in the Vienna Oriental Journal, XVI. pp. 305 and ff.

[4] See Professor Zachariae, V. O. J., XV. pp. 313 and ff.

[5] All this is taken from Professor Zachariae's article above referred to. The representation of coelis by सॅलिस् (sēlis) is interesting. The Italian pronunciation of the word is represented by चेलिस (chēlis) in Beligatti's work mentioned below.

their Languages, there is none which spreads itself more than the Malayan.' He then proceeds to give a vocabulary of Malayan. He next rather wavers on this point, for (p. 134) he first quotes Pietro Della Valle to show that the same speech is used everywhere, but the written characters differ. Next, he explains on Kircher's (not Pietro Della Valle's)[1] authority that the word 'Nagher' is used as the name both of a language and of a character. He then goes on, 'According to Mr. Edward Terry [see above] the Vulgar Tongue of Indostan hath great affinity with the Persian and Arabic Tongues: but is pleasanter and easier to pronounce. It is a very fluent language, expressing many things in few Words. They write and read like Us, viz. from the Left to the Right Hand.' (This last remark shows that some alphabet akin to Nāgarī, and not the Persian one, is referred to.) The language of the Nobility and Courts, and of all public Businesses and Writings, is Persian, but 'Vulgar Mahumetans speak Turkish, but not so eloquently as the natural born Turks. Learned Persons, and Mahumetan Priests, speak the Arabic. But no Language extends further, and is of greater Use than the Malayan . . . . . The Netherlands East India Company have lately printed a Dictionary of the Common Discourse in that Tongue, as also the new Testament and other Books in the same Language. Moreover, the Holland Ministers in their several Factories in India, teach the Malayan Tongue, not only in their Churches, but Schools also.'[2]

In the same year we have Fryer's much more accurate statement about Indian languages already quoted.

In 1678 there appeared at Amsterdam the first volume of Henricus van Rheede tot Drakestein's[3] Hortus Indicus Malabaricus adornatus per H. v. R. t. D. The introduction contains eleven lines of Sanskrit, dated, in the Nāgarī character. The date corresponds to 1675 A.D.

In Berlin in the year 1680, Andreas Müller, under the pseudonym of Thomas Ludeken, produced a collection of versions of the Lord's Prayer under the title of Oratio Orationum. S. s. Orationis dominicæ Versiones praeter authenticam fere centum, eäque longe emendatius quam antehac, et e probatissimis Autoribus potius quam prioribus Collectionibus, jamque singulä genuinis Linguä suä Characteribus, adeoque magnam Partem ex Aere ad Editionem a Barnimo Hagio traditae editaeque a Thoma Ludekenio, Solq. March. Berolini, ex Officina Rungiana, Anno 1680.[4] The Barnimus Hagius mentioned herein as the engraver is also a pseudonym for Müller himself. In this collection Roth's Pater Noster was reprinted as being actually Sanskrit, and not a mere transliteration of the Latin original.

In 1694 there appeared a work on Chess by Thomas Hyde, entitled Historia Shahiludii.[5] On pp. 132-137 he gives twelve different Sanskrit words for 'elephant' engraved in Nāgarī characters.

[1] So O. Dapper's Asia (published in Dutch in 1672; German Translation, Nürnberg, 1681) in a passage which Ogilby has evidently translated in the above quotation. Professor Zachariae, however, states (V. O. J., XVI.) that so far as he has been able to discover, Kircher does not mention Nagher at all. I have not seen Dapper's work, but Ogilby certainly borrowed largely from it.

[2] I am sorry that I can give no clue as to the Dutch works mentioned. Perhaps some of my readers can. Ogilby appears to have confused India Proper with the Dutch Settlements in Further India, where, of course, Malay was the Lingua Franca.

[3] See Professor Macdonell, in J. R. A. S., 1900, p. 350. The work appeared from 1678 to 1703 in twelve volumes.

[4] Adelung, Mithridates, Vol. I. pp. 654 and ff.

[5] See Professor Macdonell, J. R. A. S., 1898, p. 136, Note 2. Another similar work by the same author appeared in the same year, entitled Historia Nerdiludii. See Prof. Zachariae in V. O. J., XV., quoted above.

So far we have dealt only with general notices or with the accounts of the characters in which Hindōstānī is written. With the commencement of the 18th century, we find the first attempts at giving serious accounts of the language itself. According to Amaduzzi in his preface to Beligatti's Alphabetum Brammhanicum (see below), a Capuchin monk named Franciscus M. Turonensis completed at Surat, in the year 1704, a manuscript Lexicon Linguae Indostanicae, in two parts, of between four and five hundred double-columned pages each. In Amaduzzi's time it was still preserved in the library of the Propaganda in Rome, but when I searched for it there in the year 1890 it could not be found.

We now come to the first Hindōstānī grammar. John Joshua Ketelaer (also written Kötelär, Kessler, or Kettler) was a Lutheran by religion, born at Elbingen in Prussia. He was accredited to Shāh 'Ālam Bahādur Shāh (1708-1712) and Jahāndār Shāh (1712) as Dutch envoy. In 1711 he was the Dutch East India Company's Director of Trade at Surat. He passed through Agra both going to and coming from Lahore (viâ Delhi), but there does not seem to be any evidence available that he ever lived there, though the Dutch Company had a Factory in that city subordinate to Surat. The mission arrived near Lahore on the 10th December 1711, returned to Delhi with Jahāndār Shāh, and finally started from that place on the 14th October 1712, reaching Agra on the 20th October. From Agra they returned to Surat. In 1716 Ketelaer had been three years Director for the Dutch Company at Surat. He was then appointed their envoy to Persia, and left Batavia in July 1716, having been thirty years in the Dutch Service or in the East Indies. He died of fever at Gambroon on the Persian Gulf on his return from Isfahan, after having been two days under arrest, because he would not order a Dutch ship to act under the Persian Governor's orders against some Arab invaders.[1] He wrote a grammar and a vocabulary of the 'Lingua hindostanica,' which were published by David Mill, in 1743, in his Miscellanea Orientalia (see below). We may assume that they were composed about the year 1715.

In the same year there appeared another collection of versions of the Lord's Prayer. Its author was John Chamberlayne. It was published at Amsterdam, and had a preface by David Wilkins, who also contributed many of the specimens. Its full title was Oratio dominica in diversas omnium fere Gentium Linguas versa et propriis cujusque Linguae Characteribus expressa, una cum Dissertationibus nonnullis de Linguarum Origine, variisque ipsarum Permutationibus. Editore Joa. Chamberlanio Anglo-Britanno, Regiae Societatis Londinensis Socio. Amstelodami, typis Guil. et David. Goerei, 1715. For our present purpose, it is sufficient to remark, with reference to this celebrated work, that it reproduces Roth's Pater Noster, but without making Müller's error of imagining it to be Sanskrit.

Maturin Veyssière LaCroze was born at Nantes in 1661. In 1697 he became librarian to the Elector at Berlin and died in that city in 1739. As librarian he kept up a voluminous correspondence on linguistic subjects with the learned men of his time, including David Wilkins, John Chamberlayne, Ziegenbalg, and T. S. Bayer. This was published after his death under the title of Thesauri Epistolici LaCroziani Ex Bibliotheca Iordaniana edidit Io. Lvdovicvs Vhlivs. Lipsiae, 1742. In this we find him helping Wilkins and Chamberlayne in the compilation of the Oratio Dominica just mentioned. For our present purpose, the most important letters are those to and from Theophilus Siegfried Bayer, one of the brilliant band of scholars who founded the Imperial Academy at St. Petersburg. In one of Bayer's letters (dated June 1, 1726) we find what are I believe the first words of what is intended for Hindōstānī ever published in Europe. These are the first four numerals as used by the 'Mogulenses Indi' (1=hicku; 2=guu; 3=tray; 4=tzahr), which are contained in a comparative statement of the numerals in eight languages. These numerals are, however, not really Hindōstānī. Guu is an evident misprint. The others are Lahndā or Sindhī, (1= Lahndā, hik; Sindhī, hiku: 3=Lahndā, trai; Sindhī, ṭrē: 4=Lahndā, chār; Sindhī, chāri).[1] Two years subsequently, in the third and fourth volumes of the Transactions of the Imperial Academy (for the years 1728 and 1729, published in 1732 and 1735 respectively) we find Bayer busily deciphering the Nāgarī alphabet, first through means of a trilingual syllabary printed in China, which gave the Tibetan form of Nāgarī (Lāntshā), current Tibetan, and Manchu alphabets, and afterwards with the help of the missionary Schultze to be shortly mentioned.[2] Finally, in November 1731 LaCroze writes to Bayer that the character used for writing by the Marāṭhās is called 'Balabande,' which, however, he adds, hardly differs from that used by the 'Bramans' which is called 'Nagara' or 'Dewanagara.' He then proceeds to show how, in his opinion, the 'Balabande' alphabet is derived from Hebrew, basing his contention on the forms of the letters in Roth's Pater Noster as reproduced in Chamberlayne's work.

[1] See G. A. Grierson, Proceedings A. S. B., May, 1895. Cf. Adelung, Mithridates, Vol. I. p. 192.

Our next stage is Mill's Dissertationes Selectae. Its full title is Davidis Millii Theologiae D. ejusdemque, nec non Antiquitatum sacrarum, & Linguarum orientalium in Academia Trajectina, Professoris ordinarii, Dissertationes selectae, varia s. Litterarum et Antiquitatis orientalis Capita exponentes et illustrantes. Curis secundis, novisque Dissertationibus, Orationibus, et Miscellaneis Orientalibus auctae. Lugduni Batavorum, 1743. To us its principal interest consists in the fact that, in the Miscellanea Orientalia, he prints Ketelaer's Hindōstānī Grammar and Vocabulary, which, as we have seen, was written about the year 1715. He also gives some plates illustrating Indian alphabets. Two illustrate the Nāgarī character, and I am not certain from where he got them. The third is taken from Bayer's essay in the Transactions of the Imperial Academy of St. Petersburg, and shows the Lāntshā, ordinary Tibetan, and Manchu characters. The fourth illustrates the Bengali alphabet. The Miscellanea Orientalia are on pp. 455-622 of the work. Caput, I., De Lingua Hindustanica (pp. 455-488). Latin, Hindōstānī, and Persian Vocabulary (pp. 504-509). Etymologicum Orientale harmonicum (a comparative vocabulary of Latin, Hindōstānī, Persian, and Arabic) (pp. 510-598). Except for the plates of characters, all the Hindōstānī is in the Roman character, the body of the work being written in Latin. The spelling of the Hindōstānī words is based on the Dutch system of pronunciation. Thus, me kiá, feci; me kartsjoekœ (maĩ kar chukā), feci; misjœ (mujhē), mihi. The use of the Perso-Arabic alphabet for writing Hindōstānī is explained. In the two test points of the accuracy of all these old grammars (the distinguishing of the singular and of the plural of the personal pronouns, and the use of nē in the agent case). Ketelaer is right in the first and wrong in the second. He recognises maĩ (which he spells me) and tũ (toe) as singulars, and ham (ham) and tum (tom) as plurals. He has no idea of the use of nē. On the other hand, he teaches the Gujarātī use of āp to mean 'we.'

[1] Bayer gives the numbers more correctly on pp. 113 and ff. of his Historia Regni Græcorum Bactriani. Petropoli, 1738. Here he gives the first ten numerals both in the Dēvanāgarī character, and in transliteration. The latter runs, 1, heku; 2, ddhu; 3, tray; 4, tgjar; 5, pangj; 6, tsche; 7, tzatte; 8, aadgj; 9, nao; 10, ndga. He tells us that he got them from a native of Multan. I have to thank Professor Kuhn for drawing my attention to this work.

[2] Regarding LaCroze and Bayer, see further particulars in G. A. Grierson, J. A. S. B., Vol. LXII. (1893), pt. I. pp. 42 and ff.

Ketelaer's Grammar includes not only the Hindōstānī declensions and conjugations, but also versions of the Ten Commandments, the Creed, and the Lord's Prayer in that language. His translation of the last may be given as a specimen of the earliest known translation of any European Language into Hindōstānī. It runs as follows :—

Hammare baab—Ke who asmaanmehe—Paak hocé teere naom—Auve hamko moluk teera—Hoé resja teera—Sjon asmaan ton sjimienne—Rootie hammare nethi hamkon aasde—Oor maafkaar taxier apne hamko—Sjon mafkarte apre karresdaar onkon—Nedaal hamko is was wasjeme—Belk hamko ghaskar is boerayse. Teeræ he patsjaṇi, soorrauri alemgiere heametme. Ammen.

In the year following the publication of Ketelaer's Grammar appeared that of the celebrated missionary Schultze, whose name has been already mentioned more than once. The full title is Viri plur. Reverendi Benjamin Schultzii Missionarii Evangelici Grammatica Hindostanica collectis in diuturna inter Hindostanos Commoratione in justum Ordinem redactis ac larga Exemporum (sic) Luce perfusis Regulis constans et Missionariorum Usui consecrata. Edidit et de suscipienda barbararum Linguarum Cultura prefatus est D. Jo. Henr. Callenberg. Halae Saxonum, 1744 (some copies are dated 1745). Schultze was aware of the existence of Ketelaer's Grammar, and mentioned it in his preface. Schultze's Grammar is in Latin. Hindōstānī words are given in the Perso-Arabic character with transliteration. The Nāgarī character (Deva-nāgaricæ) is also explained. He ignores the sound of the cerebral letters and (in his transliteration) of all aspirated ones. He is aware of the singular and plural forms of the personal pronouns, but is ignorant of the use of nē with the past tenses of transitive verbs.

Four years afterwards Johann Friedrich Fritz published the Sprachmeister with a preface by Schultze. Its title runs Orientalisch-und Occidentalischer Sprachmeister, welcher nicht allein hundert Alphabete nebst ihrer Aussprache, So bey denen meisten Europäisch-Asiatisch-Africanisch-und Americanischen Völckern und Nationen gebräuchlich sind, Auch einigen Tabulis polyglottis verschiedener Sprachen und Zahlen vor Augen leget, Sondern auch das Gebet des Herrn, in 200 Sprachen und Mund-Arten mit dererselben Characteren und Lesung, nach einer Geographischen Ordnung mittheilet. Aus glaubwürdigen Auctoribus zusammen getragen, und mit darzu nöthigen Kupfern versehen. Leipzig, Zufinden bey Christian Friedrich Gessnern. 1748. Fritz's book is a long way ahead of its predecessor Chamberlayne's. Part I. (pp. 1-219) gives tables of the alphabets of over a hundred different languages, with accounts of the mode of use of each. On pp. 120-122 we find described the use of the Perso-Arabic alphabet as applied to Hindōstānī. It may be noticed that all mention of the cerebral letters is omitted. On p. 123 we have the 'Devanagram,' on p. 124 the 'Balabandu,' and on pp. 125-131 the 'Akar Nagari,' which are all rightly classed together as various forms of the same alphabet, but the transliteration is often curiously incorrect. For instance, under 'Akar Nagari,' ढ is transliterated dhgja, and it is explained that an n is always sounded before it and that the j is clearly pronounced as in the Arabic ڎ. It will be seen that here the existence of cerebral letters is indicated. Except in the case of 'Akar Nagari,' no attempt is made to distinguish between aspirated and unaspirated letters. On p. 204 are given the Hindōstānī numerals from 1—9, and 10, 20, 30, etc., up to 90. They commence, Jek, do, tin, schahar, patsch, sche, sat, att, nau, das. Part II (pp. 1-128) contains the versions of the Lord's Prayer. On pp. 81 and 82 is given Schultze's 'Hindostanica seu Mourica seu Mogulsch' version in the Perso-Arabic character with transliteration. The latter begins, Asman-po[1] rahata-so hamara Bap, tumara Naun pak karna hone deo, tumari Padaschahi ane deo, etc. The versions in the Nāgarī character are Roth's transliterated version, Sanskrit in 'Dewa-nagaram s. Hanscret,' and Bhōjpurī in 'Akar-Nagarika' (the last two by Schultze). Finally, there are comparative statements of the words for 'father,' 'heaven,' 'earth,' and 'bread' in all the languages quoted, and some other appendixes. The Hindōstānī forms of these four words are given as Bab', Asmán, Hunnia, and Rosi (sic), respectively.

Our next authority is Travels from St. Petersburg in Russia to diverse Parts of Asia. By John Bell. Glasgow, 1763. (New Edition, Edinburgh, 1806.) In Chapter 12 of this work are given the Numerals of Indostan.

Of much more importance is the Alphabetum Brammhanicum seu Indostanum Universitatis Kasí. Romae, 1761. Typis Sac. Congregationis de Propag. Fide. It is by a Capuchin Missionary named Cassiano Beligatti, and is furnished with a preface by Johannes Christophorus Amadutius (Amaduzzi). In this preface there is a very complete account of the then existing knowledge regarding Indian languages. It describes Sanskrit (समस्कीत) correctly as the language of the learned, and next refers to the 'बखा बोली' or 'Beka Bolì' or common tongue which is found in the University of 'Kasì or Benarès.' It then goes on to enumerate the other principal alphabets of India which (except 'Nagrì, Nagrì Soratensis, or Balabandù') do not immediately concern us. Of more particular interest is his mention of a Lexicon Linguae Indostanicae which was composed by a Capuchin Missionary of Surat named Franciscus M. Turonensis, in the year 1704, the manuscript of which was then in the Propaganda Library in Rome, and which Amaduzzi describes at considerable length. He also mentions a manuscript dialogue (? in Hindōstānī) between a Christian and a Native of India regarding the truth of religion, which was dedicated to the Rājā of Betia, in the present district of Champaran, by Josephus M. Gargnanensis and Beligatti, the author of the work we are now describing. The Alphabetum Brammhanicum is of importance as being the first book (so far as I am aware) in which the vernacular words are printed in their own character in moveable types. But not only are the Dēvanāgarī letters represented by types, but even the Kaithī ones receive the same honour. Beligatti calls the Dēvanāgarī character the 'Alphabetum expressum in litteris Universitatis Kasí,' and after covering over a hundred pages with a minute description of its use (including the compound consonants), he goes on, on page 110, to deal with the 'Alphabetum populare Indostanorum vulgo Nagri.' This is, he says, used by all the natives for familiar letters and ordinary books, and for all subjects, whether religious or profane, which can be written in the 'भाखा बोली bhakà boli or vulgar tongue.'[1] He then gives a good description of the Kaithī alphabet, using moveable types also here. The book concludes with an account of the numerals and with reading exercises. These last are transliterations of the Latin Pater Noster and Ave Maria into Dēva-nāgarī, followed by translations of the Invocation of the Trinity, the Lord's Prayer, the Ave Maria, and the Apostles' Creed into Hindōstānī, in the same character. Taking it altogether, the Alphabetum Brammhanicum is, for its time, a wonderfully good piece of work.

[1] This postposition 'po' (pō) belongs to Dakhinī Hindōstānī.

With the Alphabetum Brammhanicum the first stage of Hindōstānī Bibliography may be considered to be completed. Hadley's Grammar appeared in 1772, and was quickly followed by a number of other and better ones, such as the Portuguese Gramatica Indostana (1778: far in advance of Hadley), Gilchrist's numerous works (commencing 1787), and Lebedeff's Grammar (1801). These will all be found below, each described in its proper place. Lebedeff's work deserves more than a mere entry on account of the extraordinary adventures of its author. This remarkable man gives an account of his life in the preface of his book, from which we gather that he began his Indian career (apparently as a bandmaster) in the year 1785 at Madras. After a stay there of two years he migrated to Calcutta, where he met with a Pandit who taught him Sanskrit, Bengali, and Hindōstānī (or, as he called it, the Indian mixed dialect). His next attempt was to translate two English plays into Bengali, and one of these was performed publicly with great applause (according to its author) in 1795 and again in the following year. According to Adelung,[2] he then became theatrical manager to the Great Mogul, and finally returned to England after a stay of more than twenty years in the East. In London he published his grammar, and made the acquaintance of Woronzow, the Russian Ambassador, who sent him to Russia. He was employed in the Russian Foreign Office and was given a large subvention towards founding a Sanskrit press. I have no knowledge of any other works from his pen. It is to be hoped, for the sake of his patrons, that his knowledge of Sanskrit and Bengali was greater than that of Hindōstānī which he displays in his grammar. Not only is its system of transliteration (kon hay hooa = who is there) detestably incorrect, but so is the whole account of the grammatical structure of the language. The concluding words of his preface show that he was not conscious of its imperfections, and at the same time throw a curious light on the morality of Europeans in India at his time. 'The Indian words in this work are . . . . so well ascertained as to leave no doubt, but the European learner, with a little assistance of a Pandit or Moonshie, nay, even of a Bebee-saheb, cannot fail in a short time to obtain a knowledge of their [the natives'] idioms, and to master the Indian dialects with incredible facility.'

Finally we may briefly refer to a few belated works of the early period of inquiries into Indian languages, which appeared after Hindōstānī had begun to be seriously studied

[1] Beligatti's representation of this expression is more accurate than Amaduzzi's, but even his transliteration here breaks down. Count de Gubernatis (Bolletino Italiano degli Studii Orientali, Firenze, 1876-77, pp. 44, 45) mentions a Gramatica Mora (vuol dire Hindostani) adopera i caratteri devanagarici. Segue un parvum Dictionarium indostanum de Nominibus ut plurimum obviis in Historia Indica, by the Paulinus a S. Bartholomaeo mentioned in the next page as the author of the preface to the Alphabeta Indica. The work mentioned by Count de Gubernatis is apparently in MS. and should belong to the latter half of the 18th century. I owe this reference to the kindness of Professor Zachariae.

[2] Mithridates, I. 185. According to the same authority he was by birth an Ukraine peasant, and, on account of his musical talents, was taken up by Prince Rasumosky, who carried him to Italy, where he became proficient on the violoncello. He then wandered to Paris and London, where he took service under a Lord who went to India as Governor.

in Calcutta. In 1782 Iwarus Abel published in Copenhagen Symphona Symphona, sive undecim Linguarum Orientalium Discors exhibita Concordia Tamulicae videlicet, Granthamicae, Telugicae, Sanscrutamicae, Marathicae, Balabandicae, Canaricae, Hindostanicae, Cuncanicae, Gutzaratticae et Peguanicae non characteristicae, quibus ut explicativo-Harmonica adjecta est Latine. It is a comparative vocabulary of fifty-three words in these eleven languages. The words include parts of the body, heaven, sun, etc., certain animals, house, water, sea, tree, the personal pronouns and numerals.

In 1791 there was published in Rome an anonymous work, with a preface by Paulinus a S. Bartholomaeo, entitled Alphabeta Indica, id est Granthamicum seu Sanscrdamico-Malabaricum, Indostanum sive Vanarense, Nagaricum vulgare, et Talenganicum. It is a collection of these four alphabets, all in moveable types.

Johann Christoph Adelung's Mithridates oder allgemeine Sprachenkunde mit dem Vater Unser als Sprachprobe in bey nahe fünfhundert Sprachen und Mundarten may be taken as the link between the old philology and the new. A philologist so eminent as this great writer could not fail to adorn whatever linguistic subject he touched, and, for its time, this work is a marvel of erudition and masterly arrangement. So far as Indian languages go, it sums up all (little it must be confessed) that was known about them at the end of the 18th century. In it 'Mongolisch-Indostanisch oder Mohrisch' (i.e., Urdū) (Vol. I. pp. 183 and ff.) and 'Rein oder Hoch-Indostanisch, Dewa Nagara' (pp. 190 and ff.) are jointly described as the 'Allgemeine Sprachen in Indostan.' By 'Rein oder Hoch-Indostanisch' are meant the various 'Hindī' dialects spoken between Mathura and Patna, but as an example is given the Lord's Prayer in badly spelt Sanskrit. It is contributed by Schultze, whose nationality apparently prevented him from distinguishing between bh and p. For instance, he spells bhōjanam 'podsanam.' Vol. IV of the work consists of additions and corrections, and of a supplement by J. S. Vater. Further information regarding Hindōstānī will be found on pp. 58-63, 83 (relationship of Hindōstānī to Romani), and 486 of that volume.

SUMMARY OF IMPORTANT EARLY DATES.

A.D.
1600.	EMPEROR AKBAR reigning.
	English East India Company incorporated.
1602.	Dutch East India Company founded.
1605.	EMPEROR JAHĀNGĪR comes to the throne.
1615.	Embassy of Sir T. Roe. English factory established at Surat.
1616.	Earliest recorded mention of the Indostan language (spoken by Tom Coryate).
1620.	Jesuits' College founded at Agra. English establish an Agency there.
1623-24.	Pietro Della Valle in India.
1628.	EMPEROR SHĀH JAHĀN comes to the throne.
1630.	? Compilation of the Surat Dictionary of Persian, Hindōstānī, English, and Portuguese.
1640.	English factory established at Hugli.
1653.	Heinrich Roth joins Jesuit College at Agra.
1655.	Terry's Voyage to East India published. Terry accompanied Sir T. Roe (1615).
1658.	EMPEROR AURANGZĒB comes to the throne.
1661.	Bombay transferred to the English crown.
1663.	Pietro Della Valle's Indian Travels published.
1664.	Heinrich Roth visits Rome and meets Kircher.
1667.	Kircher's China Illustrata. LaCroze appointed Librarian at Berlin.
1672.	J. Fryer's Travels in East India and Persia commenced and continued to 1681. Published 1698.
1672.	O. Dapper's Asia published in Dutch.
1673.	J. Ogilby's Asia.

A.D.
1678. Henricus van Rheede tot Drakestein's Hortus Indicus Malabaricus commenced to issue.
1680. Andreas Müller's Oratio Orationum.
1681. O. Dapper's Asia (German Translation) published at Nürnberg.
1694. Thomas Hyde's Historia Shahiludii.
1696. Charnock founds Fort William in Calcutta.
1698. J. Fryer's Travels in East India and Persia published. See 1672.
1704. Franciscus M. Turonensis completes his Lexicon Linguae Indostanicae.
1708. EMPEROR BAHĀDUR SHĀH comes to the throne.
1711. Ketelaer's embassy.
1712. EMPEROR JAHĀNDĀR SHĀH comes to the throne.
1713. EMPEROR FARRUKH-SIYAR comes to the throne.
1715. Ketelaer's Grammar. The Oratio Dominica of Chamberlayne and Wilkins.
1719. EMPEROR MUḤAMMAD SHĀH comes to the throne.
1726-29. Bayer's investigations.
1739. Death of LaCroze. See 1667. Invasion of India by Nādir Shāh.
1743. Mill's Dissertationes Selectae. Publication of Ketelaer's Grammar. Manoel da Assumpçam publishes a Bengali Grammar and Vocabulary at Lisbon.
1744. Schultze's Grammatica Hindostanica.
1745-58. Schultze's Bible translations.
1748. EMPEROR AḤMAD SHĀH comes to the throne. Fritz's Sprachmeister published.
1754. EMPEROR 'ĀLAMGĪR II. comes to the throne.
1757. Battle of Plassy.
1759. EMPEROR SHĀH 'ĀLAM II. comes to the throne.
1761. Alphabetum Brammhanicum. Third battle of Panipat. Defeat of the Marathās by Ahmad Shāh Durrānī.
1772. WARREN HASTINGS, GOVERNOR OF BENGAL. Hadley's Grammar published.
1773. Fergusson's Hindōstānī Dictionary published.
1778. Gramatica Indostana published at Lisbon.
1782. Iwarus Abel's Symphona Symphona.
1786. MARQUIS OF CORNWALLIS, GOVERNOR GENERAL.
1787. Gilchrist begins publishing.
1788. The Indian Vocabulary published in London.
1790. Harris's Dictionary of English and Hindostany.
1791. Alphabeta Indica published at Rome.
1793. SIR JOHN SHORE, GOVERNOR GENERAL. William Carey lands at Calcutta.
1798. LORD MORNINGTON (MARQUIS OF WELLESLEY), GOVERNOR GENERAL.
1800. Robert's Indian Glossary.
1801. Lebedeff's Grammar. Carey's first Bengali New Testament printed.
1805. MARQUIS OF CORNWALLIS, SECOND TIME GOVERNOR GENERAL. W. Hunter's translation of the New Testament into Hindōstānī. Done with the aid of Muḥammad Fitrat and other learned natives.
1806. Publication of first volume of Adelung's Mithridates. Henry Martyn arrives in India, and commences translation of New Testament.
1807. EARL OF MINTO, GOVERNOR GENERAL.
1810. Henry Martyn's Urdū translation of New Testament, the basis of all subsequent versions, completed in manuscript with the aid of Muḥammad Fitrat.
1811. Carey publishes a Hindī New Testament.
1812. Fire in Serampore Press. Henry Martyn's version of the New Testament destroyed before issue.
1813. EARL OF MOIRA (MARQUIS OF HASTINGS), GOVERNOR GENERAL. Carey publishes the Pentateuch in Hindī.
1814. Henry Martyn's translation of the New Testament into Hindōstānī issued. Carey publishes New Testament in Hindī.

Authorities.

Of the dialects of Western Hindī, Braj Bhākhā and Hindōstānī are those which have received most literary culture. Kanaujī is so like Braj Bhākhā, that it hardly deserves separate mention. I only refer to it as its separate existence is popularly recognised. Some few works have been written in Bundēlī, but none of them have been critically edited. Indeed, this important dialect has been almost entirely ignored by students. Even Dr. Kellogg does not describe it in his Grammar. Kanaujī and Bundēlī are therefore hardly mentioned in this bibliography. Nearly all the entries refer either to Braj Bhākhā or to one or other of the various forms of Hindōstānī.

The following Bibliography is divided into four sections :—

I.—General.—This deals with works giving a general account of the language or of one or more of its dialects, including works dealing with the subject from the point of view of comparative philology.

II.—Grammars, Dictionaries, and other helps to the student.—I have endeavoured to make this as complete as possible up to the date of the Mutiny. After that I have selected, perhaps in a somewhat arbitrary fashion.

III.—Selections, Collections of Scattered Pieces, and Collections of Proverbs.—This includes some Readers put together mainly for students.

IV.—Texts.—Here, with a few exceptions, I have confined myself to works which have been more or less critically edited by European scholars. It would have been impossible to enumerate the huge mass of texts which have issued without any attempt at editing from the native presses of India. For them, the reader can consult Mr. Blumhardt's Catalogues of Hindōstānī and Hindī works in the British Museum Library, and of the same in the India Office Library. These are all published separately, and can be obtained at a moderate price. To this section I have added an appendix giving a list of early translations of the Scriptures into the various dialects of Western Hindī.

In each of the first three sections, all the works of one writer are grouped together, and each writer is arranged in order of the date of the first work mentioned under his name. In the fourth section writers are arranged alphabetically.

In the following lists I have taken special care to include everything written by Garcin de Tassy. In this respect I have to acknowledge the assistance which has been kindly rendered to me by Monsieur J. Vinson. With his help I trust that I have been able to offer a not unworthy tribute to the memory of the great French scholar :—

Section I.—GENERAL.

Arnot, Sandford; and Forbes, Duncan,—On the Origin and Structure of the Hindoostanee Tongue, or General Language of British India. London, 1828.

Garcin de Tassy, Joseph Héliodore,—Mémoire sur les Particularités de la Religion Musulmane dans l'Inde. Reprinted from Journal Asiatique. Paris, 1831 : 2nd Edn., Paris, 1869.

Garcin de Tassy, Joseph Héliodore,—Notice sur les Fêtes populaires des Hindous, d'après les Ouvrages hindoustanies. Reprinted from the Journal Asiatique. Paris, 1834.

Garcin de Tassy, Joseph Héliodore,—Notice sur des Vêtements avec des Inscriptions arabes, persanes, et hindoustanies. Journal Asiatique. Paris, 1833. (Reprinted in 1878 in the Mémoire sur les Noms propres, etc.)

Garcin de Tassy, Joseph Héliodore,—Histoire de la Littérature hindoui et hindoustani, par M. Garcin de Tassy— . . . . . Tome I., Biographie et Bibliographie. Paris (printed under the Auspices of the Oriental Translation Committee of Great Britain and Ireland), 1839. Tome II., Extraits et Analyses, ib. 1847. Seconde édition . . . augmentée. 3 tom. Paris, 1870-71. (Reviewed by Éd. Lancereau in Journal Asiatique, IV., ix. (1847), pp. 447 and ff. Also Anon., Zeitschrift der Deutschen Morgenländischen Gesellschaft, I. (1847), pp. 360 and ff.).

Garcin de Tassy, Joseph Héliodore,—Les Auteurs hindoustanis et leurs Ouvrages d'après Biographies originales, par M. Garcin de Tassy. Paris, 1855 (Extract from the Revue Contemporaine, T. xxii.) : 2nd Edn. Paris, 1868.

GARCIN DE TASSY, JOSEPH HÉLIODORE,—Notice des Biographies originales des Auteurs qui ont écrit en Langue indienne ou hindoustanie, par M. Garcin de Tassy, lue à l'Académie des Inscriptions et Belles Lettres de l'Institut de France. Paris, 1856.

GARCIN DE TASSY, JOSEPH HÉLIODORE,—Tārīkh-e Shu'arā-e Urdū. A History of Urdu Poets, chiefly translated [into Urdū] from Garcin de Tassy's 'Histoire de la Littérature hindoui et hindoustani', by S. Fallon and Moonshee Kareem ooddeen. Delhi, 1848.

GARCIN DE TASSY, JOSEPH HÉLIODORE,—Sâadi; Auteur des premières Poésies hindoustanies. Journal Asiatique, IV., i. (1843), pp. 5 and ff. Separate reprint, Paris, same date.

NEWBOLD, T. J.,—Lettre à M. Garcin de Tassy, membre de l'Institut au sujet de sa notice intitulée: Sâadi, Auteur des premières Poésies hindoustanies. Journal Asiatique, IV., ii. (1843), pp. 361 and ff.

GARCIN DE TASSY, JOSEPH HÉLIODORE,—Discours à l'Ouverture de son Cours d'Hindoustani à l'Ecole des Langues Orientales Vivantes. Paris, 1850 (4 pp.), 1851 (8 pp.), 1852 (8 pp.), 1853 (16 pp.), 1854 (8 pp.), 1855 (16 pp.), 1856 (8 pp.), 1857 (16 pp.), 1859 (30 pp.), 1861, February (16 pp.), 1861, December (15 pp.), 1862 (20 pp.), 1863 (31 pp.), 1864 (27 pp.), 1865 (33 pp.), 1866 (47 pp.), 1867 (40 pp.), 1868 (73 pp.), 1869 (38 pp.). 2nd Edition of preceding, under title of La Langue et la Littérature hindoustanies de 1850 à 1869. Paris, 1874.

GARCIN DE TASSY, JOSEPH HÉLIODORE,—La Langue et la Littérature hindoustanies. Revue annuelle: Paris, 1871 (48 pp.), 1872 (83 pp.), 1873 (109 pp.), 1874 (86 pp.), 1875 (116 pp.), 1876 (127 pp.), 1877 (178 pp.), 1878 (104 pp.).

GARCIN DE TASSY, JOSEPH HÉLIODORE,—Mémoire sur les Noms propres et les Titres musulmans. Paris, 1854: 2nd Ed., Paris, 1878.

GARCIN DE TASSY, JOSEPH HÉLIODORE,—Les Femmes Poëtes dans l'Inde (Revue de l'Orient). Paris, 1854.

GARCIN DE TASSY, JOSEPH HÉLIODORE,—Discours de M. Garcin de Tassy à la Société d'Ethnographie, le 27 Février 1865. Paris, 1867.

GARCIN DE TASSY, JOSEPH HÉLIODORE,—Origine et Diffusion de l'Hindoustani appelé Langue Générale ou Nationale de l'Inde. (Mémoire de l'Académie de Caen.) Caen, 1871.

GARCIN DE TASSY, JOSEPH HÉLIODORE,—See Bland, N.; Pelonele, François.

SETON-KARR, W. S.,—The Urdu Language and Literature. Calcutta Review, Vol. IV. (1845) (No. 8, Art. 3).

BUYERS, W.,—The Hindi Language: Thomson's Dictionary. Calcutta Review, Vol. IX. (1848) (No. 18, Art. 3).

BERTRAND, L'ABBÉ,—Notice sur plusieurs Ouvrages hindouis et hindoustanis récemment arrivés de l'Inde. Journal Asiatique, IV., xvi. (1850), pp. 253 and ff.

KAY, REV. W.,—On the Connection of the Dative and Accusative Cases in Bengali and Hindustani. Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, Vol. XXI. (1852), pp. 105 and ff.

BLAND, N.,—Lettre à M. Garcin de Tassy, sur Mas'oud, Poëte persan et hindoui. Journal Asiatique, V., ii. (1853), pp. 356 and ff.

ZENKER, DR. TH.,—Bibliotheca Orientalis. Manuel de Bibliographie Orientale. Vol. II., Contenant . . . . . Littérature de l'Inde . . . . . . Leipzig, 1861.

ZENKER, DR. TH.,—Neueste Hindustani-Literatur. Zeitschrift der Deutschen Morgenlandischen Gesellschaft, Vol. XIX. (1865), pp. 599 and ff.

MORISY, JOHN,—Inquiry into the Existence of a pure Passive Voice in Hindustani. Proceedings of the Royal Irish Academy, Vol. VIII., Pt. ii. (1862), pp. 197 and ff.

MORISY, JOHN,—On Hindustani Syntax. Ib., Vol. IX., Pt. iii. (1866), pp. 263 and ff.

RAJĒNDRA LĀL MITRA,—On the Origin of the Hindvi Language and its Relation to the Urdu Dialect. Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, Vol. XXXIII. (1864), pp. 469 and ff.; 489 and ff.

BEAMES, J.,—Outlines of a Plea for the Arabic Element in official Hindustani. Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, Vol. XXXV. (1866), Pt. I., pp. 1 and ff.

BEAMES, J.,—On the Arabic Element in official Hindustani. Ib., Vol. XXXVI. (1867), Pt. I., pp. 145 and ff.

BEAMES, J.,—On the Present Position of Old Hindi in Oriental Philology. Indian Antiquary, Vol. I. (1872), p. 2.

BEAMES, J.—Comparative Grammar of the Modern Aryan Languages of India: to wit, Hindi, Panjabi, Sindhi, Gujarati, Marathi, Oriya, and Bengali. Three Vols. London. 1872-79.

GROWSE, F. S.,—Some Objections to the modern Style of Official Hindustani. Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, Vol. XXXV. (1866), Pt. I., pp. 172 and ff.

GROWSE, F. S.,—On the Non-Aryan Element in Hindi Speech. Indian Antiquary, Vol. I. (1872), p. 103.

GROWSE, F. S.,—The Etymology of local Names in Northern India, as exemplified in the District of Mathura. Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, Vol. XLIII. (1874), Pt. I., pp. 324 and ff.

GROWSE, F. S.,—Common Hindustani. Bengal Magazine, Vol. II. (1874), pp. 239-245 (Advocates Hindī as against Urdū, as the language of the courts and of missionaries).

HOERNLE, A. F. RUDOLF,—Essays in Aid of a Comparative Grammar of the Gauṛian Languages. Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, Vol. XLI., Pt. I. (1872), pp. 120 and ff.; Vol. XLII., Pt. I. (1873), pp. 59 and ff.; Vol. XLIII., Pt. I. (1874), pp. 22 and ff.

HOERNLE, A. F. RUDOLF,—A Comparative Grammar of the Gaudian Languages, with special reference to the Eastern Hindi. Accompanied by a Language Map and a Table of Alphabets. London, 1880.

HOERNLE, A. F. RUDOLF,— A Collection of Hindi Roots, with Remarks on their Derivation and Classification—Calcutta, 1880, and Journal of the Bengal Asiatic Society, Vol. XLIX. (1880), Pt. I., pp. 33 and ff.

CAMPBELL, SIR G.—Specimens of Languages of India, including those of the Aboriginal Tribes of Bengal, the Central Provinces, and the Eastern Frontier. Calcutta, 1874 (Hindee on pp. 2 and ff.).

'INSAFI,'—Sir George Campbell on Vernacular Education. The Oriental, Vol. IV. (1875), pp. 83 and ff. (On the value of the Urdū language compared with that of Hindī).

BATE, J. D.,—Notes on the Hindi Language. Calcutta Review, Vol. LXI. (1875) (No. 120, Art. 11).

BRANDRETH, E. L.,—The Gaurian compared with the Romance Languages. Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society, Vol. XI. (N. S.) (1879), pp. 287 and ff., 335 and ff.

DELONCLE, FRANÇOIS,—Catalogue des Livres Orientaux composant la Bibliothèque de M. Garcin de Tassy; Suivi du Catalogue des Manuscrits hindustanis, persans, arabes, turcs. Paris, 1879.

LYALL, (SIR) C. J.,—Hindustani Literature. (Article in Encyclopædia Britannica, 9th Edition, Vol. XI., pp. 843 and ff.) Edinburgh, 1880. New edition, revised and augmented in id., 11th Edition, Vol. XIII, Cambridge, 1910.

SCOTT, REV. T.,—Hindustani Poets and Poetry. Calcutta Review, Vol. LXXII. (1881), p. 185.

MUḤAMMAD ḤUSAIN (ĀZĀD),—آبِ حیات (Āb-e Ḥayāt). [An account of well-known Hindōstānī poets and their writings.] 2nd Edition, Lahore, 1883. (I have failed to trace the 1st Edition.) Another Edition (? 3rd), Lahore, 1899.

BHANDARKAR, (SIR) RAMKṚISHṆA GŌPĀL,—Development of Language and Sanskrit. Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society (Bombay Branch), Vol. XVI. (1883-85), pp. 245 and ff.

BHANDARKAR, (SIR) RAMKṚISHṆA GŌPĀL,—Pâli and other Dialects of the Period. Ib. pp. 275 and ff.

BHANDARKAR, (SIR) RAMKṚISHṆA GŌPĀL,—Relations between Sanskrit, Pâli, the Prâkṛits and The Modern Vernaculars. Ib. pp. 314 and ff.

BHANDARKAR, (SIR) RAMKṚISHṆA GŌPĀL,—The Prâkṛits and the Apabhraṁśa. Ib. Vol. XVII. (1887-89), Pt. I., pp. 1 and ff.

BHANDARKAR, (SIR) RAMKṚISHṆA GŌPĀL,—Phonology of the Vernaculars of Northern India. Ib. Pt. II., pp. 99 and ff.

BHANDARKAR, SIR RAMKṚISHṆA GŌPĀL,—Wilson Philological Lectures on Sanskrit and the Derived Languages, delivered in 1877, by R. G. Bh. Bombay, 1914. This is a reprint of the five preceding articles, with important additions.

KELLOGG, S. H.,—On the origin of certain Rajpur forms of the Substantive Verb in Hindi, by Prof. S. H. Kellogg, Toronto, Can. Proceedings of the American Oriental Society, October 1888, pp. xvii and ff. In Vol. XIV. of the Journal of the A. O. S.

BLUMHARDT, J. F.,—Catalogue of Hindustani Printed Books in the Library of the British Museum. London, 1889. Supplementary Catalogue (1889-1908), by the same. London, 1909.

BLUMHARDT, J. F.,—Catalogue of the Library of the India Office. Vol. II., Part II., Hindustani Books. By J. F. B. London, 1900. Vol. II., Part III., Hindi, Panjabi, Pushtu, and Sindhi Books. By the same. London, 1902.

BLUMHARDT, J. F.,—Catalogues of the Hindi, Panjabi, Sindhi, and Pushtu printed Books in the Library of the British Museum. London, 1893. Supplementary Catalogue of Hindī Books (1893-1912), by the same. London, 1913.

GRIERSON, (SIR) G. A.,—The Modern Vernacular Literature of Hindustan. Calcutta, 1889.

GRIERSON, (SIR) G. A.,—On the Early Study of Indian Vernaculars in Europe. Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, Vol. LXII., Pt. I. (1893), pp. 41 and ff.: cf. TEZA, E.,—Dei primi Studi sulle Lingue indostaniche alle note di G. A. Grierson: also GRIERSON, G. A., in Proceedings, A. S. B., May, 1895.

GRIERSON, (SIR) G. A.,—The Phonology of the Modern Indo-Aryan Vernaculars. Zeitschrift der Deutschen Morgenländischen Gesellschaft, Vol. XLIX. (1895), pp. 393 and ff.: Vol. L. (1896), pp. i. and ff. Reprinted, Leipzig, 1895-96.

GRIERSON, (SIR) G. A.,—On certain suffixes in the Modern Indo-Aryan Vernaculars. Zeitschrift für Vergleichende Sprachforschung auf dem Gebiete der indogermanischen Sprachen. Vol. XXXVIII. (XVIII.) (1903), pp. 473 and ff. Reviewed by A. F. R. Hoernle in the Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society, 1903, pp. 611 and ff.

GRIERSON, (SIR) G. A.,—A Bibliography of Western Hindī, including Hindōstānī. Indian Antiquary, Vol. XXXII. (1903), pp. 16, 59, 160, 262.

GRIERSON, (SIR) G. A.—Article Hindōstānī in Vol. XIII. of the Encyclopædia Britannica, Eleventh Edition, Cambridge, 1910.

ROSEN, FRIEDRICH.—Die Indarsabhā des Amānat. Ein Beitrag zur Kenntnis der Hindustani-Literatur. Inaugural-Dissertation, Leipzig, 1891. (Contains remarks concerning the Hindōstānī Drama and Theatre, a biography of Amānat and his son, notes on the language of the Indarsabhā, and a German translation thereof).

ALTĀF ḤUSAIN (ḤĀLĪ),—Sh̲e'r o sh̲ā'irī (Poetry and Poesy). [This is the long introduction (pp. 228) to the Dīwān-e Ḥālī, but is quite independent of that work. It constitutes a modern Urdū Ars Poetica.] Cawnpore, 1893.

BRÉAL AUGUSTE,—Les Mots anglais dans les Journaux hindoustanis. Mémoire de la Société de Linguistique de Paris. T. VIII. (1894), pp. 166 and ff.

ʿABDU'L-QĀDIR, SHĒKH,—The New School of Urdu Literature. A critical study of Hali, Azad, Nazir Ahmed, Ratan Nath Sarshar, and Abdul Halim Sharar, with an Introductory Chapter on Urdu Literature, by Shaikh Abdul Qadir, B.A. . . . Panjab Observer Press, Lahore, 1898.

WEITBRECHT, REV. H. U.,—The Urdū New Testament. A History of its Language and its Versions. London (British and Foreign Bible Society), 1900.

WEITBRECHT, REV. H. U.—A Descriptive Catalogue and Review of Urdū Christian Literature, 1902-1907. Lahore, 1908.

KĀŠĪ PRASĀD,—Hindī Vyākaraṇ-kē kuchh Aṁsõ-par Bichār. Nāgarī-Prachāriṇī Pattrikā, Vol. VII., p. 146. Benares, 1903.

TEMPLE, COL. SIR R. T.,—Hindustani in the XVIIth Century. Indian Antiquary, Vol. XXXII. (1903), p. 239.

GAṆĒŠ BIHĀRĪ MIŚRA, ŚYĀM BIHĀRĪ MIŚRA, AND ŚUKDĒV BIHĀRĪ MIŚRA,—Hindī-Navaratna. (An account of the lives and works of the nine chief Hindī Poets). Allahabad, 1910.

GAṆĒŠ BIHĀRĪ MIŚRA, ŚYĀM BIHĀRĪ MIŚRA, AND ŚUKDĒV BIHĀRĪ MIŚRA,—Miśra-bandhu-vinōda. (A complete history of Hindī literature). Three Vols. Khandwa and Allahabad, 1913.

BAYER, T. S.,—See LaCroze, Maturin Veyssière, in Introduction.

CHAMBERLAYNE, J.,—See LaCroze, Maturin Veyssière, in Introduction.

FALLON, S. W.—See Garcin de Tassy, Joseph Héliodore.

FORBES, DUNCAN,—See Arnot, Sandford.

KARĪMU'D-DĪN,—See Garcin de Tassy, Joseph Héliodore.

LANCEREAU, ÉD.,—See Garcin de Tassy, Joseph Héliodore.

NEWBOLD, T. J.,—See Garcin de Tassy, Joseph Héliodore.

SCHULTZE, BENJ.,—See Fritz, Johann Friedrich, and Adelung, Johann Christoph, in Introduction.

VATER, J. S.,—See Adelung, Johann Christoph, in Introduction.

WILKINS, DAVID,—See LaCroze, Maturin Veyssière, in Introduction.

ZIEGENBALG,—See LaCroze, Maturin Veyssière, in Introduction.

SECTION II.—GRAMMARS, DICTIONARIES, and other helps to the student.

KETELAER, JO. JOSHUA,—See Introductory Remarks (1715).

SCHULTZE, BENJ.,—See Introductory Remarks (1744).

HADLEY, GEORGE,—Grammatical Remarks on the practical and vulgar Dialect of the Indostan Language, commonly called Moors, with a Vocabulary, English and Moors. The Spelling according to the Persian Orthography, wherein are References between Words resembling each other in Sound, and different in Significations, with literal Translations and Explanations of the Compounded Words and Circumlocutory Expressions, for the more easy Attaining the Idiom of the Language. The whole calculated for the common Practice in Bengal. London, 1772; 2nd Edition, London, 1774; 3rd Edition, corrected and enlarged with familiar Phrases and Dialogues, London, 1784. Fourth Edition, London, 1797. Fifth Edition, A compendious Grammar of the current corrupt Dialect of the Jargon of Hindoostan (commonly called Moors), with a Vocabulary, English and Moors, Moors and English, with References between Words . . . . . with notes descriptive of various Customs and Manners of Bengal . . . . by G. H. Corrected and much enlarged by Mirza Mohummud Fitrut, a Native of Lucknow. London, 1801. Another Edition, London, 1804. Seventh Edition, corrected, improved and much enlarged, London, 1809.

HADLEY, GEORGE,—A short Grammar of the Moors Language. London, 1779.

FERGUSSON, J.,—A Dictionary of the Hindostan Language. I.—English and Hindostan. II.—Hindostan and English. To which is prefixed a Grammar of the Hindostan Language. London, 1773. (Roman characters.)

ANON.,—Gramatica Indostana a Mais vulgar que se practica no Imperio do gram Mogol offerecida aos muitos reverendos Padres Missionarios do ditto Imperio. Em Roma, 1778. Na Estamperia da Sagrada Congregaçaõ de Propaganda Fide. Second Edition, Lisboa, 1805.

GILCHRIST, JOHN BORTHWICK,—A Dictionary, English and Hindoostanee, in which the Words are marked with their distinguishing Initials as Hinduwee, Arabic, and Persian, with an Appendix. (In the Roman character.) Calcutta, 1787-96. Hindoostanee Philology, comprising a Dictionary English and Hindoostanee, also Hindoostanee and English; with a Grammatical Introduction. Second Edition, with many additions and improvements, by Th. Roebuck. Edinburgh, 1810. The same with a Grammatical Introduction. (Roman characters.) London, 1825.

GILCHRIST, JOHN BORTHWICK—A Grammar of the Hindoostanee Language, or Part Third of Volume First of a System of Hindoostanee Philology. Calcutta, 1796.

GILCHRIST, JOHN BORTHWICK,—The Oriental Linguist, an easy and familiar Introduction to the popular Language of Hindoostan, comprising the Rudiments of the Tongue, with an extensive Vocabulary, English and Hindoostanee, and Hindoostanee and English; to which is added the English and Hindoostanee part of the Articles of War (from W. Scott's translation), with practical Notes and Observations. Calcutta, 1798. 2nd Edition, Calcutta, 1802.

GILCHRIST, JOHN BORTHWICK,—The Anti-jargonist, or a short Introduction to the Hindoostanee Language (called Moors), comprising the Rudiments of that Tongue, with an extensive Vocabulary English and Hindoostanee, and Hindoostanee and English. Calcutta, 1800. [This is partly an abridgment of The Oriental Linguist.]

GILCHRIST, JOHN BORTHWICK,—Hindi Exercises for the first and second Examinations in Hindoostanee, at the College of Fort William. Calcutta, 1801.

GILCHRIST, JOHN BORTHWICK.—New Theory of Persian Verbs, with their Hindoostanee Synonyms in Persian and English, published under the direction of J. B. G. Calcutta, 1801. 2nd Edition, 1804.

GILCHRIST, JOHN BORTHWICK,—The Stranger's East India Guide to the Hindoostanee, or grand popular Language of India (improperly called Moors). Calcutta, 1802. 2nd Edition, London, 1808. Stranger's infallible East-India Guide, or Hindoostanee Multum in Parvo, as a grammatical Compendium of the grand popular and military Language of all India (long, but improperly, called the Moors or Moorish Jargon). London, 1820. This is a Third Edition of the preceding. (All in the Roman character.)

GILCHRIST, JOHN BORTHWICK, AND MIR ĀBDU'L-LĀH MISKĪN,—The Hindee Manual, or Casket of India; compiled for the Use of the Hindoostan Pupils, under the direction and superintendence of John Gilchrist, by Meer Ubdullah Miskeen. Calcutta, 1802.

GILCHRIST, JOHN BORTHWICK,—Practical Outlines, or a Sketch of Hindoostanee Orthoepy in the Roman characters. Calcutta, 1802.

GILCHRIST, JOHN BORTHWICK,—The Hindee Roman Orthoepical Ultimatum, or a systematic, discriminative View of Oriental and Occidental visible Sounds on fixed and practical Principles, for the Languages of the East, exemplified in the popular Story of Sukoontula Natuk. Calcutta, 1804. The Hindee-Roman Orthoepical Ultimatum . . . . . exemplified in 100 Anecdotes, Tales, Jests, etc., of Hindoostanee Story Tellers. London, 1820.

GILCHRIST, JOHN BORTHWICK,—[Atālīq-e Hindī], The Hindee Moral-Preceptor; and Persian Scholar's shortest Road to the Hindoostanee Language, or vice versa; translated, compiled and arranged by learned Natives in the Hindoostanee Department, in the College of Fort William, under the direction and superintendence of J. B. G. Calcutta, 1803. (In the Persian character.) The Hindee Moral-Preceptor, or Rudimental Principles of Persian Grammar as the Hindoostanee Scholar's shortest Road to the Persian Language . . . . . including the Pundnamu, with an Hindoostanee literal version. London, 1821. (Mostly in the Roman character. A Reprint of the preceding.) The Hindee-Persic and English Vocabulary connected with the Rudimental Principles of Persian Grammar. London, 1821. (This forms Part II. of the preceding.)

GILCHRIST, JOHN BORTHWICK,—Hindee-Arabic Mirror; or improved practical Table of such Arabic Words as are intimately connected with a due Knowledge of the Hindoostanee Language. Calcutta, 1804.

GILCHRIST, JOHN BORTHWICK,—The British-Indian Monitor, or the Anti-jargonist, Stranger's Guide, Oriental Linguist, and various other Works compressed into a Series of portable Volumes, on the Hindoostanee Language, improperly called Moors, with considerable Information respecting Eastern Tongues, Manners, Customs, etc. By the Author of Hindoostanee Philology, etc. Edinburgh, 1806. (Roman characters.)

GILCHRIST, JOHN BORTHWICK,—Dialogues, English and Hindoostanee, calculated to promote the colloquial Intercourse of Europeans on the most useful and familiar Subjects, with the Natives of India, upon their Arrival in that Country. (In Roman characters.) Second Edition, Edinburgh, 1809. Third Edition, including the Articles of War, London, 1820. Fourth Edition, London, 1826. [The dialogues are intended to illustrate the grammatical principles of the Stranger's East India Guide. An Appendix contains the Śakuntalā (Sukoontula Natuk) of Kāẓim Ālī Jawān.]

GILCHRIST, JOHN BORTHWICK,—Grammar of the Hindoostanee Language. Calcutta, 1809.

GILCHRIST, JOHN BORTHWICK,—The General East India Guide and Vade-Mecum. London, 1825.

GILCHRIST, JOHN BORTHWICK,—See also Bahādur Ālī Ḥusainī.

ANON.,—The Indian Vocabulary, to which is prefixed the Forms of Impeachments. London (John Stockdale), 1788.

BALFOUR, F.,—A Table containing Examples of all the different Species of Infinitives and Participles that are derived from Tri-literal Verbs, in the Form in which they are used in the Persian, and in the Language of Hindustan. Asiatick Researches, Vol. II. (1790), pp. 207 and ff.

HARRIS, HENRY,—Dictionary, English and Hindoostany: to which is annexed a copious and useful alphabetical List of Proper Names of Men, Women, Towns, etc., a great Majority of which appear to be of Persian, Arabic or Indian Origin. Madras, 1790. [This is Vol. II. Vol. I. does not seem to have been issued.]

ROBERTS, T.,—An Indian Glossary, consisting of some 1,000 Words and Terms commonly used in the East Indies, with full Explanations of their respective Meanings, forming an useful Vade-Mecum extremely serviceable in assisting Strangers to acquire with ease and quickness the Language of that Country. London, 1800.

LEBEDEFF, HERASIM,—A Grammar of the pure and mixed East Indian Dialects, with Dialogues affixed, spoken in all the Eastern Countries, methodically arranged at Calcutta, according to the Brahmenian System, of the Shamscrit Language. Comprehending literal Explanations of the Compound Words, and Circumlocutory Phrases, necessary for the Attainment of the Idiom of that Language, etc. Calculated for the Use of Europeans. With Remarks on the Errors in former Grammars and Dialogues of the Mixed Dialects called Moorish or Moors, written by different Europeans; together with a Refutation of the Assertions of SIR WILLIAM JONES, respecting the Shamscrit Alphabet; and several Specimens of Oriental Poetry, published in the Asiatic Researches. London, 1801.

ROUSSEAU, S.,—Dictionary of Mohamedan Law, Bengal Revenue Terms, Shanscrit, Hindoo and other words used in the East Indies, with full explanations. London, 1802; 2nd Edition, London, 1805.

TAYLOR, CAPTAIN JOSEPH, AND HUNTER, WILLIAM, M.D.,—A Dictionary, Hindoostanee and English, originally compiled for his own private Use, by Capt. J. T.; revised and prepared for the Press, with the Assistance of learned Natives in the College of Fort William, by W. H. Calcutta, 1808.

TAYLOR, CAPTAIN JOSEPH, AND SMYTH, W. CARMICHAEL,—Dictionary, Hindoostanee and English, abridged from the quarto Edition of Captain Joseph Taylor, as edited by the late W. Hunter. By W. Carmichael Smyth, Esq. London, 1820.

STEUART, CHARLES,—An Introduction to the Study of the Hindostany Language as spoken in the Carnatic. Compiled for the Use of the Company of Gentlemen Cadets on the Madras Establishment at New Town, Cuddalore. (? Cuddalore), 1808. Another Edition, Madras, 1843.

LALLŪ LĀL,—General Principles of Inflection and Conjugation in the Bruj B,hak,ha, or, the Language spoken in the Country of Bruj, in the District of Goaliyar, in the Dominions of the Raja of Bhurtpoor, as also in the extensive Countries of Bueswara, Bhudawur, Unter Bed, and Boondelkhund. Composed by Shree Lulloo Lal Kub, B,hak,ha Moonshee in the College of Fort William. Calcutta, 1811.

AMĀNATU'L-LĀH, MAULAVĪ,—Ṣarf-e Urdū, or Short Grammar of the Hindoostanee Language written in Hindee Verse. Calcutta, 1810. See Garcin de Tassy.

ROEBUCK, LIEUT. TH.,—An English and Hindostanee Naval Dictionary of technical Terms and Sea Phrases, as also the various words of Command given in working a Ship, etc., with many sentences of great Use at Sea; to which is prefixed a short Grammar of the Hindoostanee Language. The whole calculated to enable the Officers of the Hon. East India Company's and Country Service to give their Orders to the Lascars with that Exactness and Promptitude, which, upon many Occasions, must prove of the greatest Importance. Calcutta, 1811. (Roman characters.) Reprint of the same. London, 1813. The Hindoostanee Interpreter, containing the Rudiments of Grammar, an extensive Vocabulary, and a Useful Collection of Dialogues and a Naval Dictionary. Second Edition, revised and corrected by W. Carmichael Smyth. London, 1824; 3rd Edition. Paris and London, 1841. A Lashkarī Dictionary or Anglo-Indian Vocabulary of Nautical Terms and Phrases in English and Hindustani. Chiefly in the Corrupt Jargon in use among Lashkars . . . Compiled by T. Roebuck, revised by W. Carmichael Smyth and now . . . re-edited by G. Small. London, 1852.

ROEBUCK, LIEUT. TH.,—See also Gilchrist, John Borthwick.

SHAKESPEAR, JOHN,—A Grammar of the Hindustani Language. London, 1813. 2nd Edition. 1818. 3rd Edition, 1826. 4th Edition, to which is added a short Grammar of the Dakhanī. London. 1843. 5th Edition, 1846. Another, 1858.

SHAKESPEAR, JOHN,—A Dictionary, Hindustani and English. London. 1817. 2nd Edition. London. 1820. 3rd Edition, with a copious Index, fitting the Work also as a Dictionary, English and Hindustani. London, 1834. 4th Edition, greatly enlarged. A Dictionary Hindūstānī and English and English and Hindūstānī, the latter being entirely new. London, 1849.

SHAKESPEAR, JOHN,—An Introduction to the Hindustani Language. London, 1845.

ANON.,—Series of the Hindostany Primitives. Madras, 1815.

BAHĀDUR 'ALĪ ḤUSAINĪ,—Gilchrist Urdoo Risalu. Calcutta. 1820. Another Edition, Calcutta, 1831. Another, Calcutta. 1846. Another, Agra, 1845. etc. [An abstract of Gilchrist's Grammar.]

MUḤAMMAD SĀLIḤ, (MIRZĀ), AND PRICE, CAPT. W.,—A Grammar of the three principal Languages, Hindoostanee, Persian and Arabic, on a plan entirely new, and perfectly easy; to which is added a Set of Persian Dialogues. composed by Mirza Mohammad Saulih, accompanied with an English Translation by W. P. London, 1823. (Reviewed by Silvestre de Sacy. in the Journal des Savans for January, 1824.)

PRICE, CAPT. WILLIAM,—A new Grammar of the Hindoostanee Language, with Selections from the best Authors, to which are added familiar Phrases and Dialogues in the proper Character. London, 1827-28.

PRICE, CAPT. WILLIAM. AND TĀRIṆĪ-CHARAṆ MITRA,—Hindee and Hindostanee Selections, to which are prefixed the Rudiments of Hindostanee and Braj Bhakha Grammar. See under Selections. Calcutta, 1827, 1830.

PRICE, CAPT. WILLIAM,—See also Muḥammad Sāliḥ.

MUḤAMMAD IBRĀHĪM MAQBAH,—Tuḥfa-e Elphinstone (Present to Elphinstone, the Governor of Bombay). A Hindōstānī Grammar. Bombay, 1823.

MUḤAMMAD IBRĀHĪM MAQBAH,—Lessons in Hindustani Grammar, Letter-writing, Arithmetic, etc., (Ta'lim Nāma), by Mahomed Ibrahim Muckba. Bombay, 1847; Madras, 1850; Ninth Edition, Bombay, 1861.

ROWE, MRS., OF DIGAH, AND ADAMS, W. T.,—Mūla Sūtra, a Hindee Spelling Book, Part II., in Hindoostanee. Stewart's Historical Anecdotes, translated into Hinduwee, by W. T. Adams; Dr. Bell's Instructions for Modelling and Constructing Schools, translated into Hindoostanee, by W. T. Adams. Calcutta, 1824. Third Edition of the Spelling-Book, Calcutta, 1833.

YATES, WILLIAM,—Introduction to the Hindoostanee Language in three parts, viz., Grammar, with Vocabulary and Reading Lessons. Calcutta, 1827. 2nd Edition. 1843. 3rd Edition, 1845. Sixth Edition. 1855.

YATES, WILLIAM,—A Dictionary, Hindoostany and English. London and Calcutta, 1847.

BRETON, P.,—A Vocabulary of the Names of various Parts of the Human Body, and of medical and technical Terms, in English, Arabic, Persian and Sanscrit. Calcutta, 1827.

ADAM, REV. M. T.,—Hindi Bhashaka Wyakarana. A Hindee Grammar, for the Instruction of the Young, in the form of easy Questions and Answers. Calcutta, 1827.

ADAM, REV. M. T.,—Hindi Kosha, a Dictionary of the Hindui Language. Calcutta, 1829.

ADAM, REV. M. T.,—Dictionary, English and Hindui. Calcutta, 1838.

ANDREW, W.,—A Comprehensive Synopsis of the Elements of Hindoostani Grammar. London, 1830.

ARNOT, SANDFORD,—A new self-instructing Grammar of the Hindustani Tongue, the most useful and general Language of British India, in the Oriental and Roman Character. (With Appendix of Reading Exercises and Vocabulary.) London, 1831. 2nd Edition, ib., 1844.

ARNOT, SANDFORD; AND FORBES, DUNCAN,—Grammar of the Hindûstânee Tongue in the Oriental and Roman Characters, and a Selection of easy Extracts for Reading in the Persi-Arabic and Devanagari Characters, by S. Arnot, with a Vocabulary and Notes, by Duncan Forbes. London, 1844.

GILCHRIST, JOHN BORTHWICK,—The British-Indian Monitor, or the Anti-jargonist, Stranger's Guide, Oriental Linguist, and various other Works compressed into a Series of portable Volumes, on the Hindoostanee Language, improperly called Moors, with considerable Information respecting Eastern Tongues, Manners, Customs, etc. By the Author of Hindoostanee Philology, etc. Edinburgh, 1806. (Roman characters.)

GILCHRIST, JOHN BORTHWICK,—Dialogues, English and Hindoostanee, calculated to promote the colloquial Intercourse of Europeans on the most useful and familiar Subjects, with the Natives of India, upon their Arrival in that Country. (In Roman characters.) Second Edition, Edinburgh, 1809. Third Edition, including the Articles of War, London, 1820. Fourth Edition, London, 1826. [The dialogues are intended to illustrate the grammatical principles of the Stranger's East India Guide. An Appendix contains the Śakuntalā (Sukoontula Natuk) of Kāẓim Ālī Jawān.]

GILCHRIST, JOHN BORTHWICK,—Grammar of the Hindoostanee Language. Calcutta, 1809.

GILCHRIST, JOHN BORTHWICK,—The General East India Guide and Vade-Mecum. London, 1825.

GILCHRIST, JOHN BORTHWICK,—See also Bahādur Ālī Ḥusainī.

ANON.,—The Indian Vocabulary, to which is prefixed the Forms of Impeachments. London (John Stockdale), 1788.

BALFOUR, F.,—A Table containing Examples of all the different Species of Infinitives and Participles that are derived from Tri-literal Verbs, in the Form in which they are used in the Persian, and in the Language of Hindustan. Asiatick Researches, Vol. II. (1790), pp. 207 and ff.

HARRIS, HENRY,—Dictionary, English and Hindoostany : to which is annexed a copious and useful alphabetical List of Proper Names of Men, Women, Towns, etc., a great Majority of which appear to be of Persian, Arabic or Indian Origin. Madras, 1790. [This is Vol. II. Vol. I. does not seem to have been issued.]

ROBERTS, T.,—An Indian Glossary, consisting of some 1,000 Words and Terms commonly used in the East Indies, with full Explanations of their respective Meanings, forming an useful Vade-Mecum extremely serviceable in assisting Strangers to acquire with ease and quickness the Language of that Country. London, 1800.

LEBEDEFF, HERASIM,—A Grammar of the pure and mixed East Indian Dialects, with Dialogues affixed, spoken in all the Eastern Countries, methodically arranged at Calcutta, according to the Brahmenian System, of the Shamscrit Language. Comprehending literal Explanations of the Compound Words, and Circumlocutory Phrases, necessary for the Attainment of the Idiom of that Language, etc. Calculated for the Use of Europeans. With Remarks on the Errors in former Grammars and Dialogues of the Mixed Dialects called Moorish or Moors, written by different Europeans; together with a Refutation of the Assertions of SIR WILLIAM JONES, respecting the Shamscrit Alphabet ; and several Specimens of Oriental Poetry, published in the Asiatic Researches. London, 1801.

ROUSSEAU, S.,—Dictionary of Mohamedan Law, Bengal Revenue Terms, Shanscrit, Hindoo and other words used in the East Indies, with full explanations. London, 1802 ; 2nd Edition, London, 1805.

TAYLOR, CAPTAIN JOSEPH, AND HUNTER, WILLIAM, M.D.,—A Dictionary, Hindoostanee and English, originally compiled for his own private Use, by Capt. J. T. ; revised and prepared for the Press, with the Assistance of learned Natives in the College of Fort William, by W. H. Calcutta, 1808.

TAYLOR, CAPTAIN JOSEPH, AND SMYTH, W. CARMICHAEL,—Dictionary, Hindoostanee and English, abridged from the quarto Edition of Captain Joseph Taylor, as edited by the late W. Hunter. By W. Carmichael Smyth, Esq. London, 1820.

STEUART, CHARLES,—An Introduction to the Study of the Hindostany Language as spoken in the Carnatic. Compiled for the Use of the Company of Gentlemen Cadets on the Madras Establishment at New Town, Cuddalore. (? Cuddalore), 1808. Another Edition, Madras, 1843.

LALLŪ LĀL,—General Principles of Inflection and Conjugation in the Bruj B,hak,ha, or, the Language spoken in the Country of Bruj, in the District of Goaliyar, in the Dominions of the Raja of Bhurtpoor, as also in the extensive Countries of Bueswara, Bhudawur, Unter Bed, and Boondelkhund. Composed by Shree Lulloo Lal Kub, B,hak,ha Moonshee in the College of Fort William. Calcutta, 1811.

AMĀNATU'L-LĀH, MAULAVĪ,—Ṣarf-e Urdū, or Short Grammar of the Hindoostanee Language written in Hindee Verse. Calcutta, 1810. See Garcin de Tassy.

ROEBUCK, LIEUT. TH.,—An English and Hindostanee Naval Dictionary of technical Terms and Sea Phrases, as also the various words of Command given in working a Ship, etc., with many sentences of great Use at Sea; to which is prefixed a short Grammar of the Hindoostanee Language. The whole calculated to enable the Officers of the Hon. East India Company's and Country Service to give their Orders to the Lascars with that Exactness and Promptitude, which, upon many Occasions, must prove of the greatest Importance. Calcutta, 1811. (Roman characters.) Reprint of the same. London, 1813. The Hindoostanee Interpreter, containing the Rudiments of Grammar, an extensive Vocabulary, and a Useful Collection of Dialogues and a Naval Dictionary. Second Edition, revised and corrected by W. Carmichael Smyth. London, 1824; 3rd Edition, Paris and London, 1841. A Laskarī Dictionary or Anglo-Indian Vocabulary of Nautical Terms and Phrases in English and Hindustani. Chiefly in the Corrupt Jargon in use among Laskars . . . Compiled by T. Roebuck, revised by W. Carmichael Smyth and now . . . re-edited by G. Small. London, 1882.

ROEBUCK, LIEUT. TH.,—See also Gilchrist, John Borthwick.

SHAKESPEAR, JOHN,—A Grammar of the Hindustani Language. London, 1813. 2nd Edition, 1818. 3rd Edition, 1826. 4th Edition, to which is added a short Grammar of the Dakhani. London, 1843. 5th Edition, 1846. Another, 1858.

SHAKESPEAR, JOHN,—A Dictionary, Hindostani and English. London, 1817. 2nd Edition, London, 1820. 3rd Edition, with a copious Index, fitting the Work also as a Dictionary, English and Hindustani. London, 1834. 4th Edition, greatly enlarged. A Dictionary Hindūstānī and English and English and Hindūstānī, the latter being entirely new. London, 1849.

SHAKESPEAR, JOHN,—An Introduction to the Hindustani Language. London, 1845.

ANON.,—Series of the Hindostany Primitives. Madras, 1815.

BAHĀDUR 'ALĪ ḤUSAINĪ,—Gilchrist Oordoo Risalu. Calcutta, 1820. Another Edition, Calcutta, 1831. Another, Calcutta, 1846. Another, Agra, 1845, etc. [An abstract of Gilchrist's Grammar.]

MUḤAMMAD SĀLIḤ, (MIRZĀ), AND PRICE, CAPT. W.,—A Grammar of the three principal Languages, Hindoostanee, Persian and Arabic, on a plan entirely new, and perfectly easy; to which is added a Set of Persian Dialogues, composed by Mirza Mohammad Saulih, accompanied with an English Translation by W. P. London, 1823. (Reviewed by Silvestre de Sacy, in the Journal des Savans for January, 1824.)

PRICE, CAPT. WILLIAM,—A new Grammar of the Hindoostanee Language, with Selections from the best Authors, to which are added familiar Phrases and Dialogues in the proper Character. London, 1827-28.

PRICE, CAPT. WILLIAM, AND TĀRIṆĪ-CHARAṆ MITRA,—Hindee and Hindostanee Selections, to which are prefixed the Rudiments of Hindostanee and Braj B,hak,ha Grammar. See under Selections. Calcutta, 1827, 1830.

PRICE, CAPT. WILLIAM,—See also Muḥammad Sāliḥ.

MUḤAMMAD IBRĀHĪM MAQBAH,—Tuḥfa-e Elphinstone (Present to Elphinstone, the Governor of Bombay). A Hindōstānī Grammar. Bombay, 1823.

MUḤAMMAD IBRĀHĪM MAQBAH,—Lessons in Hindustani Grammar, Letter-writing, Arithmetic, etc., (Ta'lim Nāma), by Mahomed Ibrahim Muckba. Bombay, 1847; Madras, 1850; Ninth Edition, Bombay, 1861.

ROWE, MRS., OF DIGAH, AND ADAMS, W. T.,—Mūla Sūtra, a Hindee Spelling Book, Part II., in Hindoostanee. Stewart's Historical Anecdotes, translated into Hinduwee, by W. T. Adams; Dr. Bell's Instructions for Modelling and Constructing Schools, translated into Hindoostanee, by W. T. Adams. Calcutta, 1824. Third Edition of the Spelling-Book, Calcutta, 1833.

YATES, WILLIAM,—Introduction to the Hindoostanee Language in three parts, viz., Grammar, with Vocabulary and Reading Lessons. Calcutta, 1827. 2nd Edition, 1843. 3rd Edition, 1845. Sixth Edition, 1855.

YATES, WILLIAM,—A Dictionary, Hindoostany and English. London and Calcutta, 1847.

BRETON, P.,—A Vocabulary of the Names of various Parts of the Human Body, and of medical and technical Terms, in English, Arabic, Persian and Sanscrit. Calcutta, 1827.

ADAM, REV. M. T.,—Hindi Bhashaka Wyakarana. A Hindee Grammar, for the Instruction of the Young, in the form of easy Questions and Answers. Calcutta, 1827.

ADAM, REV. M. T.,—Hindi Kosha, a Dictionary of the Hindui Language. Calcutta, 1829.

ADAM, REV. M. T.,—Dictionary, English and Hindui. Calcutta, 1838.

ANDREW, W.,—A Comprehensive Synopsis of the Elements of Hindoostani Grammar. London, 1830.

ARNOT, SANDFORD,—A new self-instructing Grammar of the Hindustani Tongue, the most useful and general Language of British India, in the Oriental and Roman Character. (With Appendix of Reading Exercises and Vocabulary.) London, 1831. 2nd Edition, ib., 1844.

ARNOT, SANDFORD; AND FORBES, DUNCAN,—Grammar of the Hindûstânee Tongue in the Oriental and Roman Characters, and a Selection of easy Extracts for Reading in the Persi-Arabic and Devanagari Characters, by S. Arnot, with a Vocabulary and Notes, by Duncan Forbes. London, 1844.

GARCIN DE TASSY, JOSEPH HÉLIODORE,—Mémoire sur la Système Métrique arabe, appliqué à la Langue hindoustanie. Reprinted from the Journal Asiatique. Paris, 1832.

GARCIN DE TASSY, JOSEPH HÉLIODORE,—Rudiments de la Langue hindoustanie, à l'Usage des Élèves de l'École Royale et Spéciale des Langues Orientales Vivantes. Paris, 1829. Appendix; contenant, outre quelques Additions à la Grammaire, des Lettres hindoustanis originales, accompagnées d'une Traduction et de Facsimile. Paris, 1833. 2nd Edition (without the Appendix). Paris, 1863; another, 1878. Reviewed by Reinaud. Journal Asiatique, II., vi. (1830), pp. 247 and ff.; and II., xv., pp. 398 and ff.: also, by Anon., in Zeitschrift der Deutschen Morgenländischen Gesellschaft, I. (1847), pp. 360 and ff.: also by l'Abbé Bertrand in Journal Asiatique, IV., ix. (1847), pp. 548 and ff.

GARCIN DE TASSY, JOSEPH HÉLIODORE,—Manuel de l'Auditeur du Cours d'Hindoustani, ou Thèmes gradués pour exercer à la Conversation et au Style epistolaire, accompagnés d'un Vocabulaire français-hindoustani. Paris, 1836.

GARCIN DE TASSY, JOSEPH HÉLIODORE,—Corrigé des Thèmes du Manuel du Cours d'Hindoustani. Paris, 1837.

GARCIN DE TASSY, JOSEPH HÉLIODORE,—Analyse des Grammaires hindoustani originales intitulées, صرف اردو Sarf-i Urdū et قواعد زبان اردو Qawāid-i Zabān-i Urdū. Journal Asiatique, III., v. (1838), pp. 66 and ff.

GARCIN DE TASSY, JOSEPH HÉLIODORE,—Rudiments de la Langue Hindoui. Paris, 1847. Reviewed by Bertrand, Journal Asiatique, IV., ix. (1847), pp. 548 and ff.

GARCIN DE TASSY, JOSEPH HÉLIODORE,—Prosodie des Langues de l'Orient Musalman, spécialement de l'Arabe, du Persan, du Turc, et de l'Hindoustani. Paris, 1848 (Extract from Journal Asiatique).

GARCIN DE TASSY, JOSEPH HÉLIODORE,—See Deloncle, François.

THOMPSON, J. T.—An English and Hindostanee Spelling Guide. Serampore, 1832.

THOMPSON, J. T.,—English and Oordoo School Dictionary. 2nd Edition, Serampore, 1836.

THOMPSON, J. T.,—A Dictionary in Oordoo and English, compiled from the best authorities, and arranged according to the order of the English Alphabet. Serampore, 1838.

THOMPSON, J. T.,—English and Urdu School Dictionary in Roman Characters, with the accentuation of the Urdu Words. Calcutta, 1841.

THOMPSON, J. T.,—A Dictionary in Hindi and English. Calcutta, 1846. 2nd Edition, Calcutta, 1870. 3rd Edition, by W. Nassau Lees, Calcutta, 1884. (Reviewed, Calcutta Review, Vol. IX. (1848), pp. 372 and ff.)

KISHAN RAO,—Polyglott Interlinear, being the first Instructor in English, Hindui, etc. Calcutta, 1834.

D'ROZARIO, P. S.,—A Dictionary of the Principal Languages spoken in the Bengal Presidency, viz., English, Bángáli, and Hindustani. Calcutta, 1837.

BALLANTYNE, JAMES R.,—Grammar of the Hindustani Language, with Grammatical Exercises. London, 1838.

BALLANTYNE, JAMES R.,—Elements of Hindi and Braj Bhakha Grammar. London, 1839. 2nd Edition, London, 1868.

BALLANTYNE, JAMES R.,—A Grammar of the Hindustani Language, with Notices of the Braj and Dakhani Dialects. London, 1842.

BALLANTYNE, JAMES R.,—Pocket Guide to Hindustani Conversation. London, 1839; ib. 1845.

BALLANTYNE, JAMES R.,—Hindustani Letters in the Nuskh-Taleek and Shikustu-Amez Character, with Translations. London, 1840.

BALLANTYNE, JAMES R.,—The Practical Oriental Interpreter, or Hints on the art of translating from English into Hindustani and Persian. London, 1843.

ANON.,—English and Hindustani Exercises of the irregular Verbs. Madras, 1842.

ANON.,—Introduction to the Hindoostanee Grammar, adapted to the Use of Students in the Presidency of Madras. Madras, 1842. 2nd Edition, Madras, 1851 (Hindoostanee Grammar for the Use, &c.).

LEECH, MAJOR R., C.B.,—Notes on, and a short Vocabulary of the Hinduvee Dialect of Bundelkhand. Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, Vol. XII. (1843), pp. 1086 and ff. (Contains a short Grammar and a full Vocabulary.)

DOSSABHEE SORABJEE,—Idiomatical Sentences in the English, Hindoostanee, Goozratee and Persian Language. Bombay, 1843.

AḤMAD 'ALĪ (OF DELHI),—Faiz-kā chaṧhma. (An Elementary Grammar of Urdū). Delhi, 1845.

FORBES, DUNCAN,—The Hindústání Manual: a Pocket-Companion for those who visit India in any Capacity; intended to facilitate the essential Attainments of Conversing with Fluency and Composing with Accuracy in the most useful of all the Languages spoken in our Eastern Empire. In two Parts. Part I.—A compendious Grammar of the Language. Part II.—A Vocabulary of useful Words, English and Hindústání. London, 1845. 2nd Edition, considerably improved, London, 1848. New Edition, London, 1859. FORBES, DUNCAN, AND PLATTS, J. T.,—New Edition, carefully revised by J. T. Platts. London, 1874. 9th Edition, ib., 1889. 12th Edition, London (no date).

1845. FORBES, DUNCAN,—A Grammar of the Hindústání Language in the Oriental and Roman Character, with numerous copper-plate Illustrations of the Persian and Devanágarí Systems of alphabetic Writing: to which is added a copious Selection of easy Extracts for reading, in the Persi-Arabic and Devanágari Characters, forming a complete Introduction to the [Totá-Kahání and] Bágh-o-Bahár, together with a Vocabulary of all the Words, and various explanatory Notes. London, 1846. New Editions, London, 1855, 1858, and 1862. (Reviewed by l'Abbé Bertrand in Journal Asiatique, IV., viii. (1846), pp. 377 and ff.) See also Arnot, Sandford.

FORBES, DUNCAN,—A Dictionary, Hindustani and English, to which is added a reversed Part, English and Hindustani. London, 1848. An Edition in Roman Characters. London, 1859. A smaller Hindustani and English Dictionary [Roman Characters]. London, 1862.

DOBBIE, CAPTAIN ROBERT SHEDDON,—A Pocket Dictionary of English and Hindoostani. London, 1846-47.

EASTWICK, E. B.,—A concise Grammar of the Hindustani Language, to which are added Selections for Reading. London, 1847. 2nd Edition by Rev. G. Small, ib., 1858.

EASTWICK, E. B.,—Handbook of the Bombay Presidency, with an Account of the Bombay City. 2nd Edition . . . revised and . . . rewritten [by E. B. E.]. London, 1881. (Sec. 1 contains Vocabularies and Dialogues; Gujarātī, Hindūstānī, Marāṭhī.)

BRICE, N.,—Dictionary, Hindustani and English. Romanized. Calcutta, 1847. 3rd Edition (revised by E. J. Lazarus). Benares, 1880.

INSHĀ ALLĀH KHĀN, MĪR; AND MUḤAMMAD ḤASAN (QATĪL),—Daryā-e Laṭīfat, or the Grammar and Idiom of the Urdu Language. By Mir Insha Allah Khan and Mohammed Hasan Katil. Murshidabad, 1848.

IMĀM BAKHSH, MAULAVĪ,—Grammar of the Urdu Language, by Moulvi Imam Buksh, of the Delhi College. Delhi, 1849.

WĀJID 'ALĪ KHĀN,—Guldasta-e Anjumān. [A Hindōstānī Manual, containing a Reader, a Collection of Proverbs, Tables of Genders of Nouns, Rules of Grammar, and Simple Arithmetic.] Agra, 1849.

ANON.,—Anglo Hindustanee Handbook; or Stranger's Self-Interpreter and Guide to Colloquial and General Intercourse with the Natives of India. Calcutta and London, 1850.

ANON.,—Hindustani Spelling Book in the Roman Character. 4th Edition, Allahabad, 1850.

GRANT, HENRY N.,—An Anglo-Hindustanee Vocabulary, adapted for European Sojourners in India. Calcutta, 1850.

ANON.,—A Dictionary, English, Hindoostanee and Persian. Madras, 1851.

BENSON, LIEUT.,—A few Words on the Arabic Derivatives in Hindustani. London, 1852.

BROWN, C. P.,—The Zillah Dictionary in the Roman Character: explaining the various Words used in Business in India. Madras, 1852.

BROWN, C. P.,—English and Hindustani Phraseology, or Exercises in Idioms. Calcutta, 1855.

PROCHNOW, J. DETTLOW,—Anfangsgründe einer Grammatik der hindustanischen Sprache. Berlin, 1852.

CARNEGY, PATRICK,—Kachahrí Technicalities, or a Glossary of Terms Rural, Official and General in daily Use in the Courts of Law and in Illustration of the Tenures, Customs, Arts and Manufactures of Hindustán. Allahabad, 1853. 2nd Edition, ib., 1877.

FAULKNER, ALEXANDER,—The Orientalist's Grammatical Vade Mecum: being an easy Introduction to the Rules and Principles of the Hindustani, Persian, and Gujarati Languages. Bombay, 1854.

ANON.,—Hindustani School Dictionary (Romanized), English and Urdu. Calcutta, 1854.

ANON.,—English and Hindustani Vocabulary. Madras, 1854.

DĒVĪ-PRASĀD,—Debipresad's polyglott Grammar and Exercises in Persian, English, Arabic, Hindee, Oordoo and Bengali. With an Analysis of Arabic and synonymous Words; and of logical Argument. For the Use of Students. Calcutta, 1854.

FALLON, S. W.,—An English-Hindustani Law and Commercial Dictionary of Words and Phrases used in civil, criminal, revenue, and mercantile Affairs; designed especially to assist Translators of Law Papers. Calcutta, 1858.

FALLON, S. W.,—A romanized English-Hindustani Law and Commercial Dictionary of Words and Phrases used in civil, criminal, revenue, and mercantile Affairs, by S. W. F. Edited and revised by Lala Faqir Chand. Benares, 1888.

FALLON, S. W.,—A Hindustani-English Law and Commercial Dictionary, comprising many Law Phrases and Notes in addition to the Law Phrases given in the general Dictionary. Banāras, 1879.

FALLON, S. W.,—A New Hindustani-English Dictionary. With Illustrations from Hindustani Literature and Folk-Lore. Banāras, 1879.

FALLON, S. W.,—A New English-Hindustani Dictionary. With Illustrations from English Literature and Colloquial English translated into Hindustani, by S. W. F. Assisted by Lala Faqir Chand, Vaish, of Delhi. Banāras and London, 1883.

GHULĀM ḤUSAIN,—A Collection of Idiomatic Sentences in English and Hindoostanee, by Ghoolam Hoosain. Madras, 1858.

KARĪMU'D-DIN MAULVĪ,—Qawāidu'l-mubtadī. [A Hindōstānī Grammar in Hindōstānī.] 3rd Edition, Agra, 1858. Another Edition. Lahore, 1862.

WILLIAMS, (SIR) MONIER,—Rudiments of Hindūstānī Grammar. Cheltenham, 1858.

WILLIAMS, (SIR) MONIER,—An Easy Introduction to the Study of Hindustani. London, 1858.

WILLIAMS, (SIR) MONIER,—Hindústání Primer; containing a First Grammar suited to Beginners and a Vocabulary of common Words on various Subjects. Together with useful Phrases and short Stories. London, 1860.

WILLIAMS, (SIR) MONIER,—A practical Hindustani Grammar; also Hindustani Selections by Cotton Mather. London, 1862. Another Edition, 1876.

GHULĀM MUḤAMMAD,—Colloquial Dialogues in Hindustani. London, 1859.

RAVERTY, H. G.,—Thesaurus of English and Hindūstānī Technical Terms used in Building and other useful Arts; and scientific Manual of Words and Phrases in the higher Branches of Knowledge; containing upwards of five thousand Words not generally to be found in the English and Urdū Dictionaries. Hertford (printed), 1859.

ANON.,—Urdu-English Vocabulary. Benares, 1860.

ḤAIDAR JANG BAHĀDUR,—Key to Hindustani, or an easy Method of acquiring Hindustani in the original Character. By Hyder Jung Bahadoor. London, 1861.

ĪŚVARĪ DĀS,—The Soldier's Hindoostanee Companion, or, A Guide to the most widely spoken Language of the Country, by Babu Ishuree Dass. Benares, 1861.

MATHER, COTTON,—Glossary, Hindūstānī and English, to the New Testament and Psalms. London, 1861.

MATHER, COTTON,—See also Williams, (Sir) Monier.

NIṢĀR 'ALĪ BĒG, FAIẒ ALLĀH KHĀN, AND MUḤAMMAD AḤSAN,—Qawā'id-e Urdū, an Urdū Grammar, in four parts. Parts i.—iii. by N. 'A. B. and F. A. Kh., and Part iv. by M. A. (? Place), 1862; Allahabad, 1866-67; ib., 1868-70; ib., 1871-74; Lucknow, 1869; ib., 1873; Allahabad, 1874; Lucknow, 1874; ib., 1875; Chapra, 1878.

HAZELGROVE, G. P.,—A Vocabulary, English and Hindustanee . . . containing . . . Nomenclature of Ordnance Stores . . . a Collection of Military Terms . . . Bombay, 1865.

MATHURĀ PRASĀD MISRA,—Trilingual Dictionary, being a comprehensive Lexicon in English, Urdu and Hindi, exhibiting the syllabic Pronunciation and Etymology. With Explanations in English, Urdu and Hindi in the Roman Character. Benares, 1865.

HOLROYD, W. R. M.,—Tas-hīl Al-Kalām, or Hindustani made easy. Part I., Lahore, 1866; Part I., Delhi, 1867; Part I., Lahore, 1870. Complete, London, 1873. Another Edition, ib., 1889. Sixth Edition, ib., no date. (Reviewed. The Oriental, 1873, pp. 731 and ff.)

HOLROYD, W. R. M.,—Hindustani for every Day. Lahore and London, 1906.

BLUMHARDT, C. H.,—Outlines of Amharic, containing an English, Oordoo and Amharic Vocabulary, Phrases in English and Amharic, and a rudimentary Grammar, for the use of the Force proceeding to Abyssinia. Serampore, 1867.

BORRADAILE, CAPT. G. E.,—A Vocabulary, English and Hindustani, for the Use of Military Students, Madras Presidency. Madras, 1868.

ANON.,—The Romanized Hindustanee Manual. Madras, 1869.

DURGÁ PRASÁD,—Guide to Legal Translations; or a collection of Words and Phrases used in the Translation of Legal Papers from Urdú into English. Benares, 1869; 2nd Edition, ib., 1874.

DURGÁ PRASÁD,—The English-Urdu Translator's Companion. Part I. Benares, 1884.

ETHERINGTON, REV. W.,—The Student's Grammar of the Hindi Language. Benares and London, 1870; Another Edition, Benares and London, 1873. (Reviewed. Indian Evangelical Review, Vol. I (1874), p. 524.)

ETHERINGTON, REV. W.,—Bhāshā-Bhāskar, a Grammar of the Hindī Language. Benares, 1873. (Reviewed. Indian Evangelical Review, Vol. I (1874), pp. 385 and ff.)

MUḤAMMAD 'ALI,—The Hindustani Teacher. 3rd Edition, Bangalore, 1870; 4th Edition, ib., 1876.

KELLOGG, S. H.,—Vocabularies of certain Himalayan Dialects, by Rev. W. J. P. Morrison, Missionary of the Presb. Board in India; Presented, and accompanied with Comparative Tables of Hindí Declensional Systems, by Rev. S. H. Kellogg, of the same Mission. Proceedings of the American Oriental Society, October, 1871, pp. xxxvi. and ff. In Vol. X. of the Journal of the A. O. S.

KELLOGG, S. H.,—A Grammar of the Hindí Language, in which are treated the High Hindí, Braj, and the Eastern Hindí of the Rámáyan of Tulsí Dás, also the colloquial Dialects of Rájputáná, Kumáon, Avadh, Ríwá, Bhojpur, Magadha, Maithila (sic), etc., with copious philological Notes. First Edition, Allahabad and Calcutta, 1876. 2nd Edition, London, 1893. (The title as given above is that of the 2nd Edition. That of the 1st Edition is shorter.)

ANON.,—Elements of Hindoostanee Grammar. Prepared for the Thomason Civil Engineering College, Roorkee. Roorkee, 1872.

ANON.,—Idiomatic Sentences and Dialogues in English and Hindustani. Lahore, 1872, 1873, 1878.

DOWSON, JOHN,—A Grammar of the Urdū or Hindūstāni Language. London, 1872; ib., 1887; 3rd Ed., ib., 1908. (Reviewed by J. B[eames] in Indian Antiquary, Vol. II. p. 56.)

DOWSON, JOHN,—A Hindústání Exercise-Book; containing a Series of Passages and Extracts adapted for Translation into Hindústáni. London, 1872.

ANON.,—Idiomatic Sentences and Dialogues in English and Hindustani. (Published for the Department of Public Instruction, Punjab.) Lahore, 1872.

ANON.,—A Hindi-English Dictionary for the use of Schools. Benares, 1873.

FURRELL, J. W.,—Hindustani Synonyms; a Collection of proximately synonymous Words in daily Use in the Hindustani Language: with Explanations of the Differences of Meaning obtaining between them. Calcutta, 1873.

SADĀSUKH LĀL,—An Anglo-Urdu Dictionary. Allahabad, 1873.

PRITCHARD, ILTUDUS T.,—The English Language, on Nasmith's Practical System, adapted to Oordoo. By J. T. P., assisted by Saiyad Jáafar Hosain and Mírza Khudádád Beg. London, 1873.

ATKINSON, E. T.,—Statistical, descriptive and historical Account of the North-Western Provinces of India. Edited by E. T. A. Allahabad, 1874. Bundēlī Vocabulary, Vol. I., pp. 104, 105.

ATKINSON, E. T.,—See Benson, T.

HOMEM, PAULO MARIA,—Novo Vocabulario em Portuguez, Concanim, Inglez e Hindustani. Co-ordenado para o uso dos seus patricios que percorrem a India Ingleza. Assagão, Bombaim (printed), 1874.

PEZZONI, MONSIGNORE,—Grammatica italiana e indostana. Sirdhana, 1874.

PLATTS, JOHN T.,—A Grammar of the Hindūstānī or Urdū Language. London, 1874.

PLATTS, JOHN T.,—Hindūstānī or Urdū. (Article in Vol. XI., Encyclopædia Brittanica, 9th Edition, pp. 840 and ff.) Edinburgh, 1880.

PLATTS, JOHN T.,—A Dictionary of Urdū, Classical Hindī, and English. London, 1884.

PLATTS, JOHN T.,—See Forbes, Duncan.

SELL, REV. E.,—Khulāṣatu 'l-qawānīn. An Elementary Grammar. Madras, 1874; ib., 1878; ib., 1879.

SELL, REV. E.,—Jāmi'u 'l-qawānīn. Madras, 1877. 5th Edition, ib., 1887.

AURILLAC, H.,—Petit Manuel Français-Hindoustani. Calcutta, 1875.

BATE, J. D.,—A Dictionary of the Hindee Language. Benares, 1875. (Reviewed by J. Beames—Indian Antiquary, Vol. IV. (1875), p. 223.)

PLUNKETT, CAPT. G. T.,—The Conversation Manual in English, Hindustani, Persian, and Pushto. London, 1875. 2nd Edition (by Lieut.-Colonel G. T. P.). Revised, London, 1893.

STAPLEY, L. A.,—Exercises, English and Urdu. Part II. Calcutta, 1875.

ŚIVA PRASĀD, RĀJĀ,—Urdū Ṣarf o Naḥw, an Urdū Grammar, with an English preface. Cawnpore, 1875. 2nd Edition, Revised, Allahabad, 1877.

Hindī Vyākaraṇ, a Hindī Grammar. Revised Edition, Allahabad, 1877.

'ABDU'L-WADŪD, MAULAVI,—New Romanized Dictionary, English and Urdu, by Maulawi Abdool Wadood. Calcutta, 1876. 2nd Edition, ib., 1879.

DELONCLE, FRANÇOIS,—Dictionnaire hindoustani-français et français-hindoustani, suivi d'un Vocabulaire mythologique, historique et géographique de l'Inde, publié sous la Direction de M. Garcin de Tassy. Paris, 1875. [Introduction by Garcin de Tassy. Only 32 pages of the Dictionary have appeared.]

ANON.,—Glossary of Indian Terms, for Use of Officers of Revenue, &c. Madras, 1877.

BLOCHMANN, H.,—English and Urdu School Dictionary, Romanized. 8th Edition, Calcutta, 1877.

DURGĀ PRASĀD,—Zubdatu'l-qawā'id. An Elementary Urdū Grammar in two parts. Lucknow, 1877. [Written at the request of Mr. Kempson.]

ANON.,—Memorandum on a point of Dakhni Grammar. London, 1878.

DIAS, D. F. X.,—A Vocabulary in five Languages: English, Portuguese, Goa, Marathi and Hindustani. Printed in the Roman Character. Satara, 1878.

ANON.,—Vocabulary of Technical Terms used in Elementary Vernacular School Books. Lahore, 1879.

VAZ, A.,—The Marine Officer's Hindustani Interpreter. Bombay, 1879.

LYALL, (SIR) C. J.,—Sketch of the Hindustani Language. Edinburgh, 1880.

ẒĀMIN 'ALĪ, SAIYID, (JALĀL),—Gulshān-e Faiz. (A Dictionary of Urdū (mostly Hindī) words and idioms explained in Persian.) Lucknow, 1880.

CRAVEN, REV. T.,—The Royal School Dictionary, in English and Roman-Urdu. Lucknow, 1881.

CRAVEN, REV. T.,—The Gem Dictionary, in English and Hindustani. Lucknow, 1881.

CRAVEN, REV. T.,—The Popular Dictionary in English-Hindustani and Hindustani-English. London and Lucknow, 1888. Revised and enlarged Edition [by B. H. Badley]. Lucknow, 1889.

CRAVEN, REV. T.,—The Royal Dictionary, English-Hindustani. London, Bell and Sons, 1895.

GRIERSON, G. A.,—A Handbook to the Kayathi (2nd Edition, Kaithi) Character. First Edition, Calcutta, 1881; 2nd Edition, Calcutta, 1899.

HUTCHINSON, R. F.,—Glossary of Medical and Medico-Legal Terms, etc. 2nd Edition, Calcutta, 1881.

BEAMES, J.,—Handbook of the Bengal Presidency. With an account of Calcutta City [by E. B. Eastwick]. London, 1882. (Sec. 1 contains Vocabularies and Dialogues, Bengali, Hindi, by J. B.)

BEAMES, J.,—See Dowson, J.; Bate, J. D.

BROWNE, J.,—Hindi Primer in Roman Characters. London, 1882.

PALMER, E.,—A Simplified Grammar of Hindūstānī, Persian, and Arabic. London, 1882.

PINCOTT, FREDERIC,—The Hindī Manual, comprising a Grammar of the Hindī Language both Literary and Provincial; complete Syntax; Exercises in various Styles of Hindī Composition; Dialogues on several subjects; and a useful Vocabulary. London, 1882. Third Edition, London, 1890.

KEEGAN, W.,—Grammatica Linguæ Indostanæ. Sardhana, 1883.

KEEGAN, W.,—A Vocabulary in Urdu, Latin, and English. Sardhana, 1882.

FOULQUES, AL. ED., PROF.,—Hindōstānī zabān kē Qawāid, Grammatica indostana ad Uso degli italiani. Napoli, 1883.

VINSON, J.,—Éléments de la Grammaire hindoustanie. Paris, 1883.

VINSON, J.,—Manuel de la Langue hindoustani. Paris, 1899.

BENSON, T.,—Statistical, descriptive and historical Account of the North-Western Provinces of India . . Edited by E. T. Atkinson. Vol. VII., Allahabad, 1884. On pp. 501-503 A Vocabulary by T. B., of the Patois of Agra.

MUḤAMMAD ḤUSAIN (ĀZĀD),—Jāmi'u'l-qawā'id, (A Grammar). Lahore, 1885. Another Edition, Lahore, 1898.

ANON.,—English-Hindi Dictionary for the Use of Schools. Revised Edition, Calcutta, 1885.

ANON.,—Polyglot Grammars and Dialogues. Delhi, 1885.

ANON.,—Handbook to Hindoostanee Conversation, etc. Calcutta, 1886.

ANON.,—Handbook to Hindustani Conversation. Serampore, 1886.

ANON.,—Hindustani Manual for Beginners. Bombay, 1886.

BANESS, J. F.,—Manual of Hindustani. Calcutta, 1886.

DÍNA NÁTHA DEVA,—Hindustání Grammar. Calcutta, 1886.

REYNOLDS, M. C.,—Household Hindustani. A Manual for New-comers. Calcutta, 1886.

MACMAHON, CAPTAIN,—Useful Hints, Phrases, and Sentences for Students in Hindustani. Poona, 1886.

COURTOIS, LIEUT.-COL.,—A Manual of the Hindustani Language as spoken in Southern India. . . . Madras, 1887.

GUṆĪ LĀL,—The Imperial Anglo-Nagri Dictionary. By Goonee Lal. Dinapore, 1887.

ḤASHAMAT 'ALĪ, M.,—A Manual of English Idiomatic Phrases with Urdū Equivalents. Bombay, 1886.

MADHUSŪDAN PAṆḌIT,—Madhusūdnī-nighaṇṭu. [A Hindī Dictionary.] Lahore, 1887.

KAISAR BAKHT, MIRZĀ, SHĀHZĀDA,—Kaisar Kōsh. [A Hindī Dictionary.] Allahabad, 1887.

EARDLEY-WILMOT, LIEUT. H.,—Hindustani Idiomatic Sentences. Madras, 1887.

ROGERS, E. H.,—How to speak Hindustani. London, 1887.

SAIYID AḤMAD,—Hindōstānī-Urdū Lughāt. Delhi, 1887.

ANON.,—How to speak English. English and Urdu. Lucknow, 1888.

ANON.,—Useful Sentences. English and Urdu. Lucknow, 1888.

MUḤAMMAD ASHRAF 'ALĪ,—Muṣṭalaḥāt-e Urdū. Lucknow, 1890. (A dictionary of idiomatic meanings of words, with illustrations from standard authors.)

KEMPSON, M.,—The Syntax and Idioms of Hindustani, or Progressive Exercises in Translation, with Notes and . . . Vocabularies. A Manual. London, 1890. Another Edition, 1894.

ST. QUENTIN, RENÉ DE,—Abrégé de Grammaire hindoustanie. Rouen, 1890. (Roman character.)

SMITH, PERCY,—Urdu Grammar. Calcutta, 1890.

TWEEDIE, J.,—Hindustani as it ought to be spoken. Calcutta, 1890; 2nd Edition, ib., 1893.

TWEEDIE, J.,—Hindústáni as it ought to be spoken. Supplement. Calcutta, 1893. [A key to the above work.]

AMĪR AḤMAD,—Amir's Dictionary. Rampur, 1891.

BAIJU DĀS, BĀBĀ,—Bibēk Kōsh. (A Hindī Dictionary in Hindī.) Bankipore, 1892.

BLUMHARDT, J. F.,—Military Vocabularies. I.—English-Hindustani. London, 1892.

DIAS, S. S. DE JESUS,—Tres Mil Vocabulos em Portuguez, Concani, Inglez e Industani. Bombaim, 1892.

GOKHALE, V.,—Hindustani without a Master. Bombay, 1892.

PHILLIPS, COLONEL A. N.,—Hindustani Idioms, with Vocabulary. London, 1892.

BESANT, CAPT. T. H. G.,—The Persian and Urdu Letter-writer. Calcutta, 1893.

JANSEN, H.,—(I.) Bemerkungen Zur Verskunst im Urdū (pp. 63) als Teil der Einleitung zum (II.) Transcriptionstext der Wāsōkht des Amānat. Friedrichshagen, 1893. ['Amānat' is the Takhallus of Āghā Ḥasan.]

JAWĀHIR SIṄGH,—The Urdu Teacher. Umballa, 1893.

SEIDEL, A.,—Theoretisch-praktische Grammatik der Hindustani-Sprache, mit Übungstücken in arabischer Schrift, und ein deutsch-hindustani Wörterbuch. Wien, Pest, Leipzig, 1893.

MUḤAMMAD JALĪLU'R-RAḤMĀN KHĀN (MAULAVĪ),—Urdú Qanúní Dictionary. Umballa, 1894.

SCHULTZE, M.,—Grammatik der hindustanischen Sprache. Leipzig, 1894.

GREEN, LIEUT.-COL. A. O.,—A Practical Hindustani Grammar. Oxford, 1895.

MCCARTHY, L.,—Grammaire Hindustani-Française. Verviers, 1895.

RANKING, G.,—A Guide to Hindustani. Calcutta, 1895.

RANKING, G.,—Urdu-English Primer, for the Use of the Colonial Artillery, 1899.

RANKING, G.,—Introductory Exercises in Urdu Prose Composition. A Collection of 50 Exercises with Idiomatic Phrases and Grammatical Notes, accompanied by a full Vocabulary and Translation of each Passage. Calcutta, 1896.

RANKING, G.,—English-Hindustani Dictionary. Calcutta and London, 1905.

SMALL, G.,—A Grammar of the Urdu or Hindustani Language. Calcutta, 1895.

SMALL, G.,—See also Roebuck, Lieut. Th.

SMALL, G.; FRANCIS, C. R.; AND NASH (MRS. FRASER),—Anglo-Urdu Handbook; or, Hindustani Guide for the Use of Medical Practitioners in Northern India. Calcutta, 1895. (Reviewed, Asiatic Quarterly Review, New Series, IX., pp. 497 and ff.)

ANON.,—The Students' Hindi-English Dictionary. Benares, 1896.

GREAVES, EDWIN,—A Grammar of Modern Hindí. Benares, 1896. Second Edition, revised and enlarged, ib. 1908.

ANON.,—The Student's Practical Dictionary, containing English Words, with English and Urdu meanings in Persian Character. Allahabad, 1897.

ANON.,—The Student's Practical Dictionary, containing Hindustani Words, with English meanings in Persian Character. Allahabad, 1900.

ANON.,—Practical Dictionary, English-Urdū. Allahabad, 1897.

ANON.,—Practical Dictionary, Urdū-English. Allahabad, 1900.

ANON.,—The Student's Practical Dictionary of the Hindustani Language. Allahabad, 1900.

SANGAGI RAO, S.,—A practical Method of Learning the Hindustani Language. Madras, 1897.

SANGAGI RAO, S.,—A Handy Urdu-English Dictionary, based on Shakespear and the best Modern Authorities. Madras, 1899.

HAIG, T. WOLSELEY,—Hints on the Study of Urdu. Allahabad, 1898.

NARAIN, R.,—The Best Instructor of Hindustani, without the aid of a Munshi. English and Roman. Muttra, 1898.

TAGLIABUE, CAMILLO,—Grammatica della Lingua indostana o Urdù. Torino, Roma, Firenze, 1892. 2nd Edition. Manuale e Glossario della Lingua, etc. . . . . . Roma, 1898.

THOBURN, W. L.,—The English-Urdu Dictionary. Lucknow, 1898.

LĀIQ AḤMAD, MAULVĪ,—The Urdu Self-Instructor. Delhi, 1899.

CHIRANJĪ LĀL, LĀLĀ,—Hindustáni Makhzan-ul-Muhávarát. Treasury of Urdú Idioms. Delhi, 1900.

DANN, GEORGE J.,—An Introduction to Hindí Prose Composition. Benares, 1900.

DANN, GEORGE J.,—First Lessons in Urdū. Calcutta, 1911.

HARI CHAND,—Hindustani Manual. Peshawar, 1900.
POLLOCK AND HOSAIN,—Pollock's pocket Hindustani. Calcutta, 1900.
SUKH DĒVA TIWĀRĪ, PAṆḌIT,—A Manual of Roman-Hindustani. Allahabad, 1900.
HOOPER, REV. W.,—Helps to the Attainment of Hindustani Idiom, etc. London (Christian Literature Society for India), 1901.
ṢĀḤIB 'ALĪ MUNSHĪ, MĪR,—Hints on Study of Hindustīnī Colloquial. Benares, 1901.
THIMM, C. A.,—Hindustani Self-Taught. With correct Pronunciation. For Travellers, Students, Officials, Soldiers, Traders, etc. London, 1902. Second Edition, ib. 1907. Third Edition. Hindustanī Text revised by J. F. Blumhardt. London, 1908.
CHAPMAN, MAJOR F. R. H.,—English-Hindūstānī Pocket Vocabulary (Containing 1,500 Useful Words in Classified Lists), (Romanized). Yorktown, 1904. Second Edition (containing 2,200 Words), London, 1908.
CHAPMAN, MAJOR F. R. H.,—How to learn Hindūstānī, a Guide to the Lower and Higher Standard Examinations. In six Parts. London, 1905. 2nd Edn., 1910.
CHAPMAN, MAJOR F. R. H.,—Urdū Reader for Military Students containing Urdu alphabet: Notes on reading and writing Urdū; Simple Grammatical Exercises (Urdū and Romanized Urdū); Easy Selections from various Authors; Military Selections and Historical Selections. Together with a complete Vocabulary of all the Words occurring in the Text. London, Calcutta, Simla, and Bombay, n.d. [1905]. Second Edition, London, 1910. (The title as given above is that of the 2nd Edn. That of the 1st Edn. differs slightly). Key to above. Ib. and Yorktown, 1905.
HOEY, WILLIAM,—Urdū Praxis; a Progressive Course of Urdū Composition. Oxford, 1907.
JOSA, F. P. LUIGI,—Introductory Manual of the Hindi Language, with Extracts from the Premsāgar, together with technical Vocabularies. London, 1907.
PHILLOTT, LIEUT.-COLONEL D. C.,—Hindustáni Stepping Stones. Allahabad, 1908.
PHILLOTT, LIEUT.-COLONEL D. C.,—Hindustani Stumbling Blocks, being difficult Points in the Syntax and Idiom of Hindustani explained and exemplified. London, 1909.
PHILLOTT, LIEUT.-COLONEL D. C.,—Hindustani Manual. Calcutta, 1910. Second Edition, ib., 1913.
PHILLOTT, LIEUT.-COLONEL D. C.,—An Eng.-Hind. Vocabulary of 3,000 Words for Higher Standard and Proficiency Candidates or "The Right Word in the Right Place." Calcutta, 1911.
PHILLOTT, LIEUT.-COLONEL D. C.,—Khazīna-e Muḥāwarāt or Urdū Idioms. Collected and translated by D. C. P. Calcutta, 1912.
PHILLOTT, LIEUT.-COLONEL D. C.,—Hindustani Exercises for the Proficiency and High Proficiency with Notes and Translations. Calcutta, 1912.
ARYA,—Hindi Grammar, in Hindi and English, in which is treated the Braj Dialect with Illustrations from the Rājnīti. Benares, n.d.
TISDALL, W. ST. CLAIR,—A Conversation-Grammar of the Hindūstānī Language. With Key. Heidelberg, London, New York, and Boston, 1911.
HARRISON, N.,—Manual of Laskari-Hindustani with Technical Terms and Phrases. London, 1912.
'ABDU'L-LĀH, MĪR, COMMONLY CALLED MISKĪN,—See Gilchrist, John Borthwick.
AMADUZZI (AMADUTIUS), Jo. CHRISTOPHERO,—See Beligatti, Cassiano, in Introduction.
BADLEY, B. H.,—See Craven, Rev. T.
BERTRAND, L'ABBÉ,—See Forbes, Duncan; Garcin de Tassy, Joseph Héliodore.
CALLENBERG, J. H.,—See Schultze, Benj.
FAIẒ ALLĀH KHĀN,—See Niṣār 'Alī Beg.
FAQĪR CHAND, LĀLĀ (VAISH), OF DELHI,—See Fallon, S. W.
FRANCIS, C. R.,—See Small, G.
HUNTER, WILLIAM, M.D.,—See Taylor, Captain Joseph.
JA'FAR ḤUSAIN,—See Pritchard, Iltudus T.
KHUDĀ-DĀD BEG,—See Pritchard, Iltudus T.
LAZARUS, E. J.,—See Brice, N.
LEES, W. NASSAU,—See Thompson, J. T.
MONIER-WILLIAMS,—See Williams, (Sir) Monier.
MUḤAMMAD AḤSAN,—See Niṣār 'Alī Beg.
MUḤAMMAD FIṬRAT, MIRZĀ,—See Hadley, George.
MUḤAMMAD ḤASAN (QATĪL),—See Inshā Allāh Khân.
NASH, MRS. FRASER,—See Small, G.
REINAUD,—See Garcin de Tassy, Joseph Héliodore.
SCOTT, W.,—See Gilchrist, J. Borthwick.

DE SACY, SILVESTRE,—See Muḥammad Ṣāliḥ (Mirzā), and Price, Captain William.
SMYTH, W. CARMICHAEL,—See Taylor, Captain Joseph ; Roebuck, Lieut. T.
TĀRIṆĪ-CHARAṆ MITRA,—See Price, Captain W.

SECTION III.—SELECTIONS, COLLECTIONS OF SCATTERED PIECES, AND COLLECTIONS OF PROVERBS.

GILCHRIST, JOHN BORTHWICK,—The Oriental Fabulist or polyglott Translations of Esop's and other ancient Fables from the English Language into Hindoostanee, Persian, Brij B,hak,ha, Bongla and Sunkrit (sic) in the Roman Character by various Hands, under the direction and superintendence of J. Gilchrist, for the use of the College of Fort William. Calcutta, 1803.

GILCHRIST, JOHN BORTHWICK,—The Hindee Story-Teller, or entertaining Expositor of the Roman, Persian, and Nagree Characters, simple and compound, in their Application to the Hindoostanee Language, as a written and literary Vehicle, by the Author of the Hindoostanee Dictionary, Grammar, etc. (i.e. J. B. G.). Calcutta, 1802-3. Second Edition, Calcutta, 1806.

LALLŪ LĀL,—Laṭāif-e Hindī,—The new Cyclopœdia hindoostanica of Wit, containing a choice Collection of humorous Stories in the Persian and Nagree Characters, interspersed with appropriate Proverbs, anti-bilious Jests, brilliant Bonmots, and rallying Repartees in the Rekhtu and Brij B,hasha Dialects ; to which is added a Vocabulary of the principal Words in Hindoostanee and English ; by Shree Lulloo Lal Kub, B,hasha Munshi. Calcutta, 1810.

LALLŪ LĀL AND SMYTH, W. CARMICHAEL,—Second Edition of the foregoing under the Title of,—The Luta,ifi Hindee, or Hindoostanee Jest-Book, containing a choice Collection of humorous Stories, in the Arabic and Roman Characters ; edited by W. Carmichael Smyth, London, 1841. (Smyth in this edition has omitted the ' Nagree ' portion of Lallū Lāl's compilation, also some verses in Sanskrit and Braj Bhākhā, and the Vocabulary.) On the other hand, he has added a transcription into the Roman Character throughout. The third Edition is entitled as follows,—The Luta,ifi-Hindee, or Hindoostanee Jest-Book, containing a choice Collection of humorous Stories in the Arabic and Roman Characters ; to which is added a Hindoostanee Poem, by Meer Moohummud Tuqee. Second (sic) Edition, Revised and Corrected by William Carmichael Smyth, Esq., late of the Hon. East India Company's Bengal Civil Service. London, 1840.

LALLŪ LĀL,—The Sabhā Bilās. (Title page absent on all copies available.) Calcutta, 1813.

LALLŪ LĀL AND PRICE, W.,—The Subha Bilas, a Collection of Stanzas on various subjects, in Hindee, by different Authors. Edited by Captain W. Price, Professor of Hindee and Hindoostanee in the College of Fort William. Calcutta, 1828. (The colophon is dated 1829.)

LALLŪ LĀL AND GILBERTSON, G. W.,—The Assembly of Mirth (sic). A literal Translation into English of the Sabhá Bilása, one of the Degree of Honour Hindi Text-Books, by G. W. G. Benares, 1900. (The name of the book means ' The Mirth of the Assembly,' not the ' Assembly of Mirth.')

SHAKESPEAR, JOHN,—Muntakhabāt-i-Hindī, or Selections in Hindoostani, with a verbal Translation and grammatical Analysis of some Part, for the use of Students of that Language. By J. S. Oriental Professor at the Honourable East India Company's Military Seminary. London, 1817. Second Edition, London, 1825; Third, 1834; Fourth, 1844; Sixth, 1852. Ten Sections of a Description of India, being a portion of J. Shakespear's Muntakhabat-i-Hindī. By N. L. Benmohel. Dublin, 1847. [A translation of the extracts from Shēr 'Alī Afsōs's Ārāish-e Mahfil.] The second Edition is reviewed by Garcin de Tassy, in Journal Asiatique, viii. (1826), pp. 230 and ff.

ANON.,—Hindoostanee and English Student's Assistant ; or, Idiomatical Exercises. Calcutta, 1826.

GARCIN DE TASSY, JOSEPH HÉLIODORE,—Anecdote relative au Brajbhakha, traduite de l'Hindoustani. Journal Asiatique, Vol. xi. (1827), pp. 298 and ff.

GARCIN DE TASSY, JOSEPH HÉLIODORE,—Indolence des Domestiques indiens. Anecdote hindoustani. Journal Asiatique, III., xii. (1841), pp. 191 and ff.

GARCIN DE TASSY, JOSEPH HÉLIODORE,—Proclamation de Lord Ellenborough, Gouverneur Général de l'Inde, au Sujet des Portes du Temple de Somnath, Texte hindoustani, publié et traduit. Journal Asiatique, IV., v. (1845), pp. 398 and ff. Separate reprint, Paris, same date.

GARCIN DE TASSY, JOSEPH HÉLIODORE,—Chrestomathie hindoustani (Urdū et Dakhnī), à l'Usage des Élèves de l'École Spéciale des Langue Orientales Vivantes. Assisted by Théodore Pavie and l'Abbé Bertrand. Paris, 1847.

GARCIN DE TASSY, JOSEPH HÉLIODORE,—Spécimen d'une Collection de Lettres hindoustani originales. Journal Asiatique, IV., x. (1847), pp. 353 and ff.

GARCIN DE TASSY, JOSEPH HÉLIODORE, AND LANCEREAU, ÉD.,—Hindi Hindui Muntakhabat. Chrestomathie Hindie et Hindouie à l'Usage des Élèves de l'École Spéciale des Langues Orientales Vivantes près la Bibliothèque Nationale. Paris, 1849.

GARCIN DE TASSY, JOSEPH HÉLIODORE, — Analyse d'un Monologue Dramatique indien. Journal Asiatique, IV., xvi. (1850), pp. 310 and ff. Separate reprint, Paris, same date.

GARCIN DE TASSY, JOSEPH HÉLIODORE,—Tableau du Kali Yug ou de l'Âge de Fer, par Wischnu-Dâs traduit de l'Hindoui. Journal Asiatique, IV., xix. (1852), pp. 551 and ff.

GARCIN DE TASSY, JOSEPH HÉLIODORE,—Légende de Sakountalá d'après la Version hindouie du Mahâbhârata. (Extrait de la Revue Orientale.) Paris, 1852.

GARCIN DE TASSY, JOSEPH HÉLIODORE,—Chants populaires de l'Inde, traduites par G. de T. (Revue Contemporaine.) Paris, 1854.

GARCIN DE TASSY, JOSEPH HÉLIODORE.—Hir et Ranjhan, légende du Penjab, traduite de l'Hindoustani. Paris, in Revue de l'Orient, 1857.

GARCIN DE TASSY, JOSEPH HÉLIODORE,—Alléyories, Récits poétiques et Chants populaires. Traduits de l'Arabe, du Persan, de l'Hindoustani, et du Turc, par M. Garcin de Tassy. 2nd Edition, Paris, 1876.

GARCIN DE TASSY, JOSEPH HÉLIODORE,—Un Chapitre de l'Histoire de l'Inde Musulmane, ou Chronique de Scher Schah, Sultan de Delhi, traduit de l'Hindoustani. Paris (Revue de l'Orient), ? date, 8vo, 164 pp.

GARCIN DE TASSY, JOSEPH HÉLIODORE, — See Ja'far 'Alī Bahādur, Mīr ; Shakespear, John.

ADAM, REV. M. T.,—Pleasing Tales, or Stories to improve the Understanding, translated into Hindoowee, by M. T. A. Calcutta, 1828. Other Editions, Calcutta, 1834, 1836 ; Agra, 1837.

KĀLĪ KṚISHṆA, RĀJĀ, AND 'ABDU'L-MAJĪD, ḤAKĪM MAULAVĪ,—Majma'u'l-Laṭāīf. A Collection of Pleasantries; or Fables and Stories, translated from English and Persian into Urdu and English. Calcutta, 1835.

MANU LĀL LAHŌRĪ,—The Guldasta-i-Nishat, or Nosegay of Pleasure: a Collection of poetical Extracts in Persian and Hindustani, from more than a hundred of the most celebrated Authors, arranged according to the Subject and Sentiment and well adapted for the Student of these Languages. Calcutta, 1836.

ANON.,—English and Hindustani Student's Assistant. Calcutta, 1837.

PRICE, CAPT. WILLIAM, AND TĀRIṆĪ-CHARAṆ MITRA,—Hindee and Hindoostanee Selections, to which are prefixed the Rudiments of Hindoostanee and Braj Bhak,ha Grammar also Prem Sagur with Vocabulary. Originally compiled for the Use of Interpreters to Native Corps of the Bengal Army. Calcutta, 1827 ; Second Edition, 1830.

PRICE, CAPT. WILLIAM, AND TĀRIṆĪ-CHARAṆ MITRA,—See also Lallū Lāl.

BALLANTYNE, J. R.,—Hindustani Selections, in the Neskhi and Devanagari Character. London, 1840. 2nd Edition, London, 1845.

ANON.,—Majma'-e Ganj. Selections, Historical, Literary, and Scientific. Translated from the English. Calcutta, 1845.

PAVIE, THÉODORE,—Tarikh i Asham. Récit de l'Expedition de Mir Djumlah au pays d'Assam, traduit de l'Hindoustani. Paris, 1845. [A translation of Mīr Bahādur 'Alī Ḥusain's work (Calcutta, 1845) itself a translation of Shahābu'd-dīn Ṭālash's Persian Fatḥīya-e 'ibrahīya or Tārīkh-e mulk-e ashām.]

PAVIE, THÉODORE,—La Légende de Padmani, Reine de Tchitor, d'après les textes hindis et hindouis. Journal Asiatique, V., vii., 1856, pp. 5 and ff., 89 and ff., 315 and ff.

PAVIE, THÉODORE,—See also Garcin de Tassy, Joseph Héliodore.

COX, CAPT. EDWARD,—The Regimental Moonshi, being a course of Reading in Hindoostanee. London, 1847.

SAIYID ḤUSAIN, MUNSHĪ,—Hindustani Selections. Compiled by Munshi S. H. Madras, 1849. (Cf. Hosen, S. bel.)

QAMARU'D-DĪN KHĀN,—Muntakhabāt-e Anwār-e Suhailī. Selections from the Anwār-e Suhailī (cf. Ḥafīẓu'd-dīn Aḥmad in Section IV.), with Hindōstānī Translations. Agra, 1853.

QAMARU'D-DĪN KHĀN,—Muntakhabāt-e Gulistān. Selections from the Gulistān, with Hindōstānī Translations. Agra, 1854.

QAMARU'D-DĪN KHĀN,—Muntakhabāt-e Bōstān. Selections from the Bōstān, with Hindōstānī Translations in verse. Agra, 1855.

QAMARU'D-DĪN KHĀN,—Muntakhabāt-e Dastūru's-ṣibyān. Selections from the Dastūru's-ṣibyān, with Hindōstānī Translations. Agra, 1855.

JA'FAR 'ALĪ BAHĀDUR, MĪR,—Lettre de S. A. Mir Jafar Ali Bahadur, Nabab de Surat, à Monsieur Garcin de Tassy. (Revue de L'Orient.) Paris, 1855.

ŚIVA PRASĀD, RĀJĀ,—Hindi Selections [Guṭ'kā], compiled under the Directions of the Commission appointed . . . to arrange for the Preparation of Hindustāni Class Books as Language Tests, to be passed by junior Civil Servants and Military Officers. Benares, 1867. Another Edition, Benares, 1870, and others.

HALL, FITZEDWARD,—Hindi Reader, with Vocabulary. Hertford, 1870, 1884.

SELL, REV. E.,—Muntakhabāt-e Urdū. Hindustani Selections. Pts. I., II., and III. Madras, 1870-71.

'ABDU'L-FATḤ, MAULAVĪ, SAIYID,—Tohfatul Makal. Hindustani, Persian, Arabic, and English Sentences and Proverbs, by Sayed Abdul Fattah Moulvi. Bombay, 1872.

HOSEN (? ḤUSAIN), S.,—Second Hindostanee Reader. London, 1875. (? the same author as Saiyid Ḥusain, Munshī, ab.)

SMITH, V. A.,—Popular Songs of the Hamírpur District in Bundelkhand, N.-W. P. Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, Vol. XLIV. (1875), Pt. I., pp. 389 and ff.

SMITH, V. A.,—Popular Songs of the Hamírpur District in Bundelkhand, N.-W. P., No. II. Ib., Vol. XLV. (1876), Pt. I., pp. 279 and ff.

MUḤAMMAD NAJMU'D-DĪN,—Najmul-amsal (Najmu'l-amṣāl), Vol. IV., or The Collection of about 2,500 Oriental Proverbs (Vol. V. . . . . 3,068 . . . Proverbs . . . with Explanatory Fables) and their proper Application by Mohammad Najmuddin. Delhi, 1876-88. Vol. V., 2nd Edition, 1882. Vols. I-III. are said to contain,—Vol. I., Technical terms regarding Artizans and their Tools; Vol. II., Riddles, Dohrās, Gīts, &c.; Vol. III., Women's Idioms and Expressions used by Begams. Copies of these three Voll. are not in the British Museum or India Office Library.

BADLEY, REV. B. H.,—Jagjivandas, the Hindu Reformer. Indian Antiquary, Vol. VIII. (1879), p. 289. (Contains Selections from his works.)

BADLEY, REV. B. H.,—See Craven, T., in Section II.

TRUMPP, E.,—Die ältesten Hindūī Gedichte. Sitzungsberichte der Königl. bayer. Akademie der Wissenschaften, Philosophisch-philologische Classe. München, 1879 (pp. 1-48).

TEMPLE, CAPTAIN (COL. SIR) R.,—Some Hindu Songs and Catches from the Villages of Northern India. Calcutta Review, LXXIV (1882), p. 334.

TEMPLE, CAPTAIN (COL. SIR) R.,—Folk Songs from Northern India. Calcutta Review, LXXVIII (1884), pp. 273 and 295.

TEMPLE, CAPTAIN (COL. SIR) R.,—The Hymns of the Nāṅgīpanth. From the papers of J. W. Parry, A.M.I.C.E., Indian Antiquary, XIII (1884), p. 1.

TEMPLE, CAPTAIN (COL. SIR) R.,—See Fallon, S. W.

ANON.,—Hindūstānī and English Parallel Proverbs. Together with some Persian and Hindūstānī Parallel Proverbs. Delhi, 1885.

THORNTON, THOMAS H., C.S.I., D.C.L.,—Specimen Songs from Panjab Literature and Folklore, Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society, Vol. XVII (1885), p. 373. (Account of Hindī and Urdū literature of the Panjab, p. 386 : Specimens, p. 401.)

FALLON, S. W.,—A Dictionary of Hindustani Proverbs, including many Marwari, Panjabi, Maggah, Bhojpuri and Tirhuti Proverbs, Sayings, Emblems, Aphorisms, Maxims and Similes. By the late S. W. F. . . . . . Edited and revised by Captain (Col. Sir) R. C. Temple . . . assisted by Lala Faqir Chand, Vaish, of Delhi. Benares and London, 1886.

KEMPSON, M.,—First Hindustani Reader. Lithographed. (? Place of publication), 1892.

MORRIS, J.,—English Proverbs, with Hindustani Parallels. Cawnpur, 1893.

PHILLOTT, LIEUT.-COLONEL D. C.,—Urdū Rozmarra or "Every-day Urdū." Official Text-book for the Examination of Military Officers and others by the Lower Standard Hindustani. Edited with notes by D. C. P. Calcutta, 1911.

PHILLOTT, LIEUT.-COLONEL D. C.,—Annotated English Translation of the Preceding. Calcutta, 1911.

PHILLOTT, LIEUT.-COLONEL D. C.,—Khwāb o Khiyāl or "Visions of the Past." Official Text-book for the Examination of Civil and Military Officers by the Higher Standard Hindustani. Edited with notes by D. C. P. Calcutta, 1911.

PHILLOTT, LIEUT.-COLONEL D. C.,—Annotated English Translation of the Preceding. Calcutta, 1911.

MUḤAMMAD YŪSUF JA'FARĪ, KHĀN BAHĀDUR, SHAMSUL 'ULAMĀ,—Annotated Glossary to the Urdū Rozmarra. (See PHILLOTT, LIEUT.-COLONEL D. C., ab.). Calcutta, 1911.

RIẒĀ 'ALĪ WAḤSHAT, MAULAVĪ,—A Page-by-Page Glossary of Khwāb-o-Khayāl. (See PHILLOTT, LIEUT.-COLONEL D. C., ab.). Calcutta, 1911.

'ABDU'L-MAJĪD, HAKĪM MAULAVĪ,—See Kālī Kṛishṇa, Rājā.

FAQIR CHAND, LĀLĀ, (VAISH),—See Fallon, S. W.

GILBERTSON, G. W.,—See Lallū Lāl.

BENMOHEL, N. L.,—See Shakespear, John.
BERTRAND, L'ABBÉ,—See Garcin de Tassy, Joseph Héliodore.
LANCEREAU, E.,—See Garcin de Tassy, Joseph Héliodore.
PARRY, J. W.,—See Temple, Captain R.
SMYTH, W. CARMICHAEL,—See Lallū Lāl.
TARIṆĪ-CHARAṆ MITRA,—See Price, Capt. William.

SECTION IV.—TEXTS (alphabetically arranged under Authors' names).

'ABDU'L-LĀH, MĪR, CALLED MISKĪN,—Marciya ou Bhathiat de Mir Abdulla Miskin, sur la Mort de Muslim et de ses deux Fils, traduit de l'Hindoustani par M. Garcin de Tassy. Paris, 1845. See Ḥaidar Bakhsh (Ḥaidarī).

'ABDU'L-LĀH, MĪR, CALLED MISKĪN,—See also Gilchrist, J. B., in Section II.

'ABDU'L-LĀH, SAIYID,—See Bahādur 'Alī; Kāẓim 'Alī Jawān.

'ABDU'L-KARIM, MUNSHĪ,—See Arabian Nights.

'ADĀLAT KHĀN,—See Amman, Mīr; Lallū Lāl.

ĀGHĀ ḤASAN (AMĀNAT),—See Jansen, H., in Section II.

AḤMAD KHĀN, SAIYID, C.S.I.,—Aṣāru's-ṣanādīd. Delhi, 1847. Asar-oos-sunnadeed. A History of old and new Rules, or Governments, and of old and new Buildings, in the District of Delhi; composed by Syud Ahmed Khan. Delhi, 1854 (A second edition of the preceding with much additional matter). Description des Monuments de Dehlí en 1852, d'après le Texte hindoustani de Saiyid Ahmad Khan, par M. Garcin de Tassy. Journal Asiatique, V., xv. (1860), pp. 508 and ff.; xvi. (1860), pp. 190 and ff.; pp. 392 and ff.; pp. 521 and ff.; xvii. (1861), pp. 77 and ff.; separate reprint.

ALEXANDER, JAMES EDWARD,—See I'tiṣāmu'd-dīn.

ALṬĀF ḤUSAIN (ḤĀLĪ),—Majālisu'n-nisā. (2 Pts.) Lahore, 1874, 77.
Madd-o-jazr-e Islām (the Ebb and Flow of Islām). Commonly known as the Musaddas-e Ḥālī. 1st Edition, (? Place), 1875; others, Delhi, 1886 (with glossary); Aligarh, 1885.
Ḥayāt-e Sa'dī. Delhi, 1886.
Majmū'a-e naẓm-e Ḥālī. Delhi, 1890.
Ēk Bēwah-kī Munājāt. 4th Edition, Delhi, 1892.
Dīwān-e Ḥālī, Cawnpore, 1893. See also Section I., above.
Yādgār-e Ghālib. Cawnpore, 1897.
The Quatrains of Háli (Maulavi Saiyad Altáf Husain Ansári Pánipatí) edited (by permission of the author) in the Roman Character, with a translation into English by G. E. Ward. London, 1904.

AMĀNAT,—See Jansen, H., in Section II.

AMĀNATU'L-LĀH, MAULAVĪ,—Hidayut ool Islam (Hidāyatu'l-islām), compiled by Mouluwee Ummut Oollah, in Arabic and Hindoostanee. Translated under the superintendence of, and by J. Gilchrist. (In two volumes, of which only Vol. I. was published.) Calcutta, 1804.

AMBIKĀ DATT BYĀS,—See Bihārī Lāl.

AMMAN, MĪR,—باغ و بہار (Bāgh o Bahār). One hundred and two pages appeared in Gilchrist's and 'Abdu'l-lāh Miskīn's Hindee Manual or Casket of India. Calcutta, 1802. See Section II.
Bagh o Buhar, a Translation into the Hindoostanee Tongue of the celebrated Persian Tale entitled "Qissui Chuhar Durvesh," by Meer Ummun, under the superintendence of J. Gilchrist. Calcutta, 1804. Second Edition by Ghoolam Ukbur, under the superintendence of Captain Thomas Roebuck. Calcutta, 1813. Third Edition, ib., 1824. Other Editions; Cawnpore, 1832; Calcutta, 1834; Madras, 1840; Calcutta (Title, باغ و بہار; Tales of the Chahar Durvesh), 1847; Cawnpore, 1860; Calcutta, 1863; Delhi (illustrated), 1876; Bombay (in Gujarati character), 1877; Cawnpore, 1878; Delhi (illustrated), 1882, and many others. Bagh o Bahar; consisting of entertaining Tales in the Hindústánî Language. By Mir Amman of Dilhi, one of the learned Natives formerly attached to the College of Fort William at Calcutta. A new Edition, carefully collated with original Manuscripts . . . To which is added a Vocabulary of all the Words occurring in the Work, by D. Forbes. London, 1846. Second Edition of the same. London, 1849. Another edition of the same. The Hindustānī Text carefully printed in the Roman Character. To which is added a Vocabulary of all the Words occurring in the Work, by D. Forbes. London, 1859. Bág-o-Bahár. The Hindústání Text of Mír Amman, edited in Roman Type, with Notes and an introductory Chapter on the Use of the Roman Character in Oriental Languages, by M. Williams. London, 1859.

The Tale of the four Darwesh ; translated from the Oordoo Tongue of Meer Ummun . . . by L. F. Smith . . with Notes by the Translator. Madras, 1825. Translation of the Bāgh o Bahār ; or Tales of the Four Darwesh from the Urdu Tongue of Mīr Amman of Dihli. By Lew. Ferd. Smith. New Edition revised and corrected throughout by D. Forbes. London, 1851. Reprint (of first edition), Lucknow, 1870. The Bāgh o Bahār, or the Garden and the Spring ; being the Adventures of King Āzād Bakht, and the four Darweshes : literally translated from the Urdú of Mír Amman, of Delhi. With copious explanatory Notes, and an introductory Preface, by E. B. Eastwick. Hertford, 1852. Another Edition, London, Hertford (printed), 1877. Bāgh o Bahār ; or Tales of the four Darweshes. Translated from the Hindūstānī of Mīr Amman of Dihli. By Duncan Forbes. A new Edition, revised and corrected throughout. London, 1862.

'The Adventures of the second Durwish, extracted from the Bagh of (sic) Buhar,' in Vol. II. of Price's Hindee and Hindoostanee Selections, Calcutta, 1830. See Section III. Selections from the History of India and Bāgh-o Bahār. Translated into literal English, with copious Notes on Etymology, History and Geography, by 'Adālat Khān. Calcutta, 1877. Selections from the Prem Sāgar and Bāgh-o Bahār. Translated into literal English with copious Notes. Second Edition. By the same. Calcutta, 1881.

Translated into French by M. Garcin de Tassy. Paris, 1878.

The Tale of the First Darwēsh is given in M. J. Vinson's Manuel de la Langue hindoustani, pp. 111 and ff. See Section II.

Note.—The original is a translation of the Chahār Darwēsh of Amīr Khusrau.

ANDERSON, LIEUT. R. P.,—See Nihāl Chand (Lāhōrī).

ARABIAN NIGHTS,—Hikayautool Jaleelah, Translation of Alfalyattinolielah, called Arabian Nights ; for the Use of the College at Fort St. George. Translated by Moonshy Shumsooddeen Uhmed. Madras, 1836. (Contains only the first 200 Nights.)

Tarjuma Alf Laila kī. (The Translation is by Munshī 'Abdu'l-Karīm, from the English of E. Forster.) Cawnpore, 1844 ; ib., 1853 ; Bombay, 1860 ; Cawnpore, 1862-63 ; ib., 1869 ; ib., 1876 ; ib., 1883-84 ; Delhi, 1890 : Tarjuma-i Alif (sic) Laila ba-zubán-i-Urdú. (Do Jild baharfát-i-Yūrop.) Romanized under the superintendence of T. W. H. Tolbort . . . and edited by Frederic Pincott. (The first half, i.e., Jilds I. and II. of 'Abdu'l-Karīm's Translation.) London, 1882.

Sahasra Rajanī Charitra. ('Abdu'l-Karīm's Version translated into Hindī by Paṇḍit Pyārē Lāl.) Lucknow, 1876.

Alf Laila Nau Manẓūm. (Translated into verse in four parts, by Muḥammad Asghar 'Alī Khān Nasīm, Ṭoṭārām Shāyān (Pts. II. and III.), and Munshī Shādī Lāl Chaman, respectively. Lucknow, 1861-68.

Hazār Dāstān. (A prose version by Ṭōṭārām Shāyān.) Lucknow, 1868.

Shabistān-e Surūr. (An abridged translation, by Mirzā Rajab 'Alī Bēg, Surūr.) Lucknow, 1886.

Alf Laila. (A translation by Muḥammad Ḥāmid 'Alī Khān, Ḥāmid.) Cawnpore, 1890.

Shabistān-e Ḥairat. (A translation in the form of a novel, by Mirzā Ḥairat of Delhi, illustrated.) Delhi, 1892.

Alf Laila-e Dunyāzād, also called Mashshāṭa-e Baghdād. (An imitation of the Arabian Nights, by Mirzā Ḥairat of Delhi.) Delhi, 1892.

AYŌDHYĀ SIṄGH UPĀDHYĀY, PAṆḌIT, CALLED HARI AUDH,—Ṭhēṭh Hindī-kā Ṭhāṭh, or an original Indian Story in pure Hindustani, by Pandit Ayodhya Sinha Upadhya, (Hari Oudh) of Nizamabad, N.-W. P. Edition in Nāgarī characters, Bankipore, 1899. Edition in Persian characters, Bankipore and (printed) Allahabad, 1902.

(This, like the Kahānī Ṭhēṭh Hindī-mẽ of Inshā Allāh, is in pure Hindī, absolutely free from both Persianisation and Sanskritisation. Unlike the older work, the idiom is that of Hindī, rather than that of Urdū. This is most noticeable in the order of the words.)

AYŌDHYĀ SINGH UPĀDHYĀY, PAṆḌIT, CALLED HARI AUDH,—Adh-khilā Phūl. Another novel in the same style. Bānkipore (Nāgarī Character), 1905.

ĀZĀD,—See Muḥammad Ḥusain.

'AZĪZU'D-DĪN AḤMAD,—Kanīz Fāṭima. Lahore, 1895.

BAHĀDUR 'ALĪ, MĪR,—Ukhlaqi Hindee or Indian Ethics, translated from a Persian Version of the Hitoopudes, or Salutary Counsel, by Meer Buhadoor Ulee, under the Superintendence of J. Gilchrist. Calcutta, 1803. Other Editions : Madras, 1845 ; Bombay, 1875 ; Madras, 1879.

BENMOHEL, N. L.,—See Shakespear, John.
BERTRAND, L'ABBÉ,—See Garcin de Tassy, Joseph Héliodore.
LANCEREAU, E.,—See Garcin de Tassy, Joseph Héliodore.
PARRY, J. W.,—See Temple, Captain R.
SMYTH, W. CARMICHAEL,—See Lallū Lāl.
TARIṆĪ-CHARAṆ MITRA,—See Price, Capt. William.

SECTION IV.—TEXTS (alphabetically arranged under Authors' names).

'ABDU'L-LĀH, MĪR, CALLED MISKĪN,—Marciya ou Bhathiak de Mir Abdulla Miskin, sur la Mort de Muslim et de ses deux Fils, traduit de l'Hindoustani par M. Garcin de Tassy. Paris, 1845. See Ḥaidar Bakhsh (Ḥaidarī).

'ABDU'L-LĀH, MĪR, CALLED MISKĪN,—See also Gilchrist, J. B., in Section II.

'ABDU'L-LĀH, SAIYID,—See Bahādur 'Alī; Kāẓim 'Alī Jawān.

'ABDU'L-KARIM, MUNSHĪ,—See Arabian Nights.

'ADĀLAT KHĀN,—See Amman, Mīr; Lallū Lāl.

ĀGHĀ ḤASAN (AMĀNAT),—See Jansen, H., in Section II.

AḤMAD KHĀN, SAIYID, C.S.I.,—Aṣārū's-ṣanādīd. Delhi, 1847. Asar-oos-sunnadeed. A History of old and new Rules, or Governments, and of old and new Buildings, in the District of Delhi; composed by Syud Ahmed Khan. Delhi, 1854 (A second edition of the preceding with much additional matter). Description des Monuments de Dehli en 1852, d'après le Texte hindoustani de Saiyid Ahmad Khan, par M. Garcin de Tassy. Journal Asiatique, V., xv. (1860), pp. 508 and ff.; xvi. (1860), pp. 190 and ff.; pp. 392 and ff.; pp. 521 and ff.; xvii. (1861), pp. 77 and ff.; separate reprint.

ALEXANDER, JAMES EDWARD,—See I'tiṣāmu'd-dīn.

ALṬĀF ḤUSAIN (ḤĀLĪ),—Majālisu'n-nisā. (2 Pts.) Lahore. 1874, 77.

Madd-o-jazr-e Islām (the Ebb and Flow of Islām). Commonly known as the Musaddas-e Ḥālī. 1st Edition, (? Place), 1875; others, Delhi, 1886 (with glossary); Aligarh, 1887.

Ḥayāt-e Sa'dī. Delhi, 1886.

Majmū'a-e naẓm-e Ḥālī. Delhi, 1890.

Ēk Bēwah-kī Munājāt. 4th Edition, Delhi, 1892.

Dīwān-e Ḥālī, Cawnpore, 1893. See also Section I., above.

Yādgār-e Ghālib. Cawnpore, 1897.

The Quatrains of Háli (Maulavi Saiyad Altáf Husain Ansári Pánipatí) edited (by permission of the author) in the Roman Character, with a translation into English by G. E. Ward. London, 1904.

AMĀNAT,—See Jansen, H., in Section II.

AMĀNATU'L-LĀH, MAULAVĪ,—Hidayut ool Islam (Hidāyatu'l-islām), compiled by Maulavee Ummut Oollah, in Arabic and Hindoostanee. Translated under the superintendence of, and by J. Gilchrist. (In two volumes, of which only Vol. I. was published.) Calcutta, 1804.

AMBIKĀ DATT BYĀS,—See Bihārī Lāl.

AMMAN, MĪR,—باغ و بہار (Bāgh o Bahār). One hundred and two pages appeared in Gilchrist's and 'Abdu'l-lāh Miskīn's Hindee Manual or Casket of India. Calcutta, 1802. See Section II.

Bagh o Buhar, a Translation into the Hindoostanee Tongue of the celebrated Persian Tale entitled "Qissui Chuhar Durwesh," by Meer Ummun, under the superintendence of J. Gilchrist. Calcutta, 1804. Second Edition by Ghoolam Ukbur, under the superintendence of Captain Thomas Roebuck. Calcutta, 1813. Third Edition, ib., 1824. Other Editions; Cawnpore, 1832; Calcutta, 1834; Madras, 1840; Calcutta (Title, باغ و بہار; Tales of the Chahar Durvesh), 1847; Cawnpore, 1860; Calcutta, 1863; Delhi (illustrated), 1876; Bombay (in Gujarati character), 1877; Cawnpore, 1878; Delhi (illustrated), 1882, and many others. Bágh o Bahár; consisting of entertaining Tales in the Hindústánî Language. By Mir Amman of Dilhi, one of the learned Natives formerly attached to the College of Fort William at Calcutta. A new Edition, carefully collated with original Manuscripts . . . To which is added a Vocabulary of all the Words occurring in the Work, by D. Forbes. London, 1846. Second Edition of the same, London, 1849. Another edition of the same. The Hindustānī Text carefully printed in the Roman Character. To which is added a Vocabulary of all the Words occurring in the Work, by D. Forbes. London, 1859. Bág-o-Bahár. The Hindústání Text of Mír Amman, edited in Roman Type, with Notes and an introductory Chapter on the Use of the Roman Character in Oriental Languages, by M. Williams. London, 1859.

The Tale of the four Darwesh ; translated from the Oordoo Tongue of Meer Ummun . . . by L. F. Smith . . with Notes by the Translator. Madras, 1825. Translation of the Bāgh o Bahār ; or Tales of the Four Darwesh from the Urdu Tongue of Mīr Amman of Dihli. By Lew. Ferd. Smith. New Edition revised and corrected throughout by D. Forbes. London, 1851. Reprint (of first edition), Lucknow, 1870. The Bāgh o Bahār, or the Garden and the Spring ; being the Adventures of King Āzād Bakht, and the four Darweshes : literally translated from the Urdú of Mír Amman, of Delhi. With copious explanatory Notes, and an introductory Preface, by E. B. Eastwick. Hertford, 1852. Another Edition, London, Hertford (printed), 1877. Bāgh o Bahār ; or Tales of the four Darweshes. Translated from the Hindūstānī of Mīr Amman of Dihli. By Duncan Forbes. A new Edition, revised and corrected throughout. London, 1862.

'The Adventures of the second Durwish, extracted from the Bagh of (sic) Buhar,' in Vol. II. of Price's Hindee and Hindoostanee Selections, Calcutta, 1830. See Section III. Selections from the History of India and Bāgh-o Bahār. Translated into literal English, with copious Notes on Etymology, History and Geography, by 'Adālat Khān. Calcutta, 1877. Selections from the Prem Sāgar and Bāgh-o Bahār. Translated into literal English with copious Notes. Second Edition. By the same. Calcutta, 1881.

Translated into French by M. Garcin de Tassy. Paris, 1878.

The Tale of the First Darwēsh is given in M. J. Vinson's Manuel de la Langue hindoustani, pp. 111 and ff. See Section II.

Note.—The original is a translation of the Chahār Darwēsh of Amīr Khusrau.

ANDERSON, LIEUT. R. P.,—See Nihāl Chand (Lāhōrī).

ARABIAN NIGHTS,—Hikayautool Jaleelah, Translation of Alfalyattinolielah, called Arabian Nights ; for the Use of the College at Fort St. George. Translated by Moonshy Shumsooddeen Uhmed. Madras, 1836. (Contains only the first 200 Nights.)

Tarjuma Alf Laila kī. (The Translation is by Munshī 'Abdu'l-Karīm, from the English of E. Forster.) Cawnpore, 1844 ; ib., 1853 ; Bombay, 1860 ; Cawnpore, 1862-63 ; ib., 1869 ; ib., 1876 ; ib., 1883-84 ; Delhi, 1890 : Tarjuma-i Alif (sic) Laila ba-zubán-i-Urdú. (Do Jild baharfát-i-Yūrop.) Romanized under the superintendence of T. W. H. Tolbort . . . and edited by Frederic Pincott. (The first half, i.e., Jilds I. and II. of 'Abdu'l-Karīm's Translation.) London, 1882.

Sahasra Rajanī Charitra. ('Abdu'l-Karīm's Version translated into Hindī by Paṇḍit Pyārē Lāl.) Lucknow, 1876.

Alf Laila Nau Manẓūm. (Translated into verse in four parts, by Muḥammad Asghar 'Alī Khān Nasīm, Ṭoṭārām Shāyān (Pts. II. and III.), and Munshī Shādī Lāl Chaman, respectively. Lucknow, 1861-68.

Hazār Dāstān. (A prose version by Ṭoṭārām Shāyān.) Lucknow, 1868.

Shabistān-e Surūr. (An abridged translation, by Mirzā Rajab 'Alī Bēg, Surūr.) Lucknow, 1886.

Alf Laila. (A translation by Muḥammad Ḥāmid 'Alī Khān, Ḥāmid.) Cawnpore, 1890.

Shabistān-e Ḥairat. (A translation in the form of a novel, by Mirzā Ḥairat of Delhi, illustrated.) Delhi, 1892.

Alf Laila-e Dunyāzād, also called Mashshāṭa-e Baghdād. (An imitation of the Arabian Nights, by Mirzā Ḥairat of Delhi.) Delhi, 1892.

AYŌDHYĀ SIṄGH UPĀDHYĀY, PAṆḌIT, CALLED HARI AUDH,—Ṭhēṭh Hindī-kā Ṭhāṭh, or an original Indian Story in pure Hindustani, by Pandit Ayodhya Sinha Upadhya, (Hari Oudh) of Nizamabad, N.-W. P. Edition in Nāgarī characters, Bankipore, 1899. Edition in Persian characters, Bankipore and (printed) Allahabad, 1902.

(This, like the Kahānī Ṭhēṭh Hindī-mẽ̃ of Inshā Allāh, is in pure Hindī, absolutely free from both Persianisation and Sanskritisation. Unlike the older work, the idiom is that of Hindī, rather than that of Urdū. This is most noticeable in the order of the words.)

AYŌDHYĀ SINGH UPĀDHYĀY, PAṆḌIT, CALLED HARI AUDH,—Adh-khilā Phūl. Another novel in the same style. Bānkipore (Nāgarī Character), 1905.

ĀZĀD,—See Muḥammad Ḥusain.

'AZĪZU'D-DĪN AḤMAD,—Kanīz Fāṭima. Lahore, 1895.

BAHĀDUR 'ALĪ, MĪR,—Ukhlaqi Hindee or Indian Ethics, translated from a Persian Version of the Hitoopudes, or Salutary Counsel, by Meer Buhadoor Ulee, under the Superintendence of J. Gilchrist. Calcutta, 1803. Other Editions : Madras, 1845 ; Bombay, 1875 ; Madras, 1879.

Akhlák i Hindí, or Indian Ethics. Translated into Urdú from a Persian Version of the Hitopadesa, by Mír Bahádur 'Alí . . . Edited, with an Introduction and Notes, by Syed Abdoolah. London, 1868. Extracts from the book will be found in Price's Hindee and Hindoostanee Selections. See Section III.

See Ḥasan, Mīr.

BANERJEA, K. M.,—See Lallū Lāl.

BANESS, J. F.,—See Lallū Lāl.

BARKER, W. B.,—See Maẓhar 'Alī Khān Wilā.

BEAMES, J.,—See Chand Bardāī.

BELL, C. W. BOWDLER,—See Ḥasan, Mīr.

BENMOHEL, N. L.,—See Shēr 'Alī Afsōs.

BERTRAND, L'ABBÉ,—See Ḥaidar Bakhsh (Ḥaidarī); Shēr 'Alī Afsōs; Taḥsīnu'd-dīn.

BHAIRAVA-PRASĀDA,—See Lallū Lāl.

BIHĀRĪ LAL,—The Sutsuya of Biharee with a Commentary entitled the Lalu Chundrika; by Shree Lallee Lal Kuvi, Bhak'ha Moonshee, in the College of Fort William. Calcutta, 1819. A revised edition issued from the Office of the Superintendent of Government Printing, India, in 1896, by G. A. Grierson. It is entitled 'The Satsaiyā of Bihārī, with a Commentary entitled Lāla Candrikā, by Çrī Lallū Lāl Kavi.' Several editions have been published by native presses, among-st which may be mentioned Śṛiṅgāra-saptaśatī, Benares, 1873. (This includes a Sanskrit metrical version and a Sanskrit commentary, both by Paramānanda Paṇḍit); Śrī-Bihāri Satsai satīk. Hari-prakāś Ṭīkā sahit, Benares, 1892. (Has an excellent commentary by Hari Prakas); Bihari-Bihār. Benares, 1898. (Has an introduction, and a commentary in the Kundaliya metre by Ambikā Datt Byās.)

BURTON, SIR RICHARD F.,—See Maẓhar 'Alī Khān Wilā.

CARMICHAEL-SMYTH,—See Smyth.

CHAMAN,—See Kāẓim 'Alī Jawān.

CHAND BARDĀĪ,—Only portions of the text have been printed. Parts have been edited by Mr. J. Beames and by Dr. A. F. R. Hoernle, C.I.E., in the Bibliotheca Indica. The latter gentleman has also translated a section of the portion which he edited. Canto I. has also been edited in Benares by Paṇḍit Mōhanlāl Vishṇulāl Paṇḍyā, under the title of M. V. Pandia's Manuscript of the Prithvíráj Rásáu of Chand Bardáí, edited in the original old Hindi with critical Notes by Pandit, etc. Benares, 1887, 1888. A continuation is now (1912) being issued in Benares by the Nāgarī Prachāriṇī Sabhā. The following are the principal works dealing with the poem:—

TOD, COL. JAMES,—Rajasthan, passim. See especially, Vol. I., pp. 254, 614, 623. Also, The Vow of Sanjogta (a translation of an episode in the poem), Asiatic Journal, Vol. XXV., pp. 101-112, 197-211, 273-286.

BEAMES, J.,—On Chand's Poems. Proceedings, Bengal Asiatic Society, 1868, p. 242.

BEAMES, J.,—The Nineteenth Book of the Gestes of Prithirāj by Chand Bardai, entitled 'The Marriage of Padmavati', literally translated from the old Hindi. Journal, Bengal Asiatic Society, Vol. XXXVIII (1869), Pt. I., p. 145.

BEAMES, J.,—Reply to Mr. Growse. Ib., p. 171.

BEAMES, J.,—Translations of selected Portions of Book I. of Chand's Epic. Journal, Bengal Asiatic Society, Vol. XLI (1872), Pt. I., p. 42.

BEAMES, J.,—List of the Books contained in Chand's Poem, the Prithiráj Rás. Ib., p. 204.

BEAMES, J.,—Letter (on his edition of Chand). Proceedings, Asiatic Society of Bengal, 1873, p. 122.

BEAMES, J.,—Studies in the Grammar of Chand Bardái. Journal, Asiatic Society of Bengal, Vol. XLI (1873), Pt. I., p. 165.

BEAMES, J.,—Translation from the first Book of the Prithirája Rásau. By Kavi Chand Bardai. Indian Antiquary, Vol. I (1872), p. 269.

GROWSE, F. S.,—The Poems of Chand Barday. Journal, Asiatic Society of Bengal, Vol. XXXVII (1868), Pt. I., p. 119.

GROWSE, F. S.,—Further Notes on the Prithirájráyasa. Ib., Vol. XXXVIII (1869), Pt. I., p. 1.

GROWSE, F. S.,—Translations from Chand. Ib., p. 161.

GROWSE, F. S.,—Rejoinder to Mr. Beames. Ib., Vol. XXXIX (1870), Pt. I., p. 52.

GROWSE, F. S.,—A Metrical Version of the opening Stanzas of Chand's Prithiráj Rásau. Ib., Vol. XII (1873), Pt. I., p. 329.

SYĀMAL DĀS, KAVIRĀJ,—The Antiquity, Authenticity and Genuineness of the Epic called the Prithí Ráj Rásá, and commonly ascribed to Chand Bardai. Journal, Bengal Asiatic Society, Vol. LV (1886), Pt. I., p. 5.

MŌHANLĀL VISHṆULĀL PAṆḌYĀ, PAṆḌIT,—The Defence of Prithiráj Rásá. Benares, 1887. This is a reply to the preceding.

SYĀM SUNDAR DAS,—Arrangement of the Chapters of the Prithiráj-Râso. Indian Antiquary, Vol. XXXI (1902), p. 499.

See also 'Notice sur un Poëme historique indien composé par Tchand Barde du xiie Siècle.' Journal Asiatique, II., i, (1828), p. 150.

CLINT, L.,—See Inshā Allāh Khān, called Inshā.

COURT, MAJOR HENRY,—See Ḥasan, Mīr; Muḥammad Rafī'; Sher 'Alī Afsōs.

DHRUVA-DĀS,—Bhakta-nāmāvalī (a series of Lives of the Saints, in Braj Bhākhā), edited by Rādhā-kṛishṇa Dās in Nāgarī Prachāriṇī Grantha-mālā, No. 1. Benares (printed Allahabad), 1901. [The work was written early in the 17th century.]

EASTWICK, E. D.,—See Amman, Mīr; Ḥafīẓu'd-dīn Aḥmad; Ikrām 'Alī; Lallū Lāl; Maẓhar 'Alī Khān Wilā.

FEER, L.,—See Kāẓim 'Alī Jawān.

FORBES, DUNCAN,—See Amman, Mīr; Ḥaidar Bakhsh (Ḥaidarī); Ikrām 'Alī; Maẓhar 'Alī Khān Wilā.

GARCIN DE TASSY, JOSEPH HÉLIODORE,—See 'Abdu'l-lāh, Mīr, called Miskīn; Aḥmad Khān, Saiyid, C.S.I.; Amman, Mīr; Ikrām 'Alī; Muḥammad Taqī, Mīr; Nihāl Chand (Lāhōrī); Taḥsīnu-'d-dīn; Walīu'l-lāh, Shah.

GHULĀM AKBAR,—See Ḥafīẓu'd-dīn Aḥmad.

GHULĀM ḤAIDAR,—See Ikrām 'Alī; Muḥammad Rafī'.

GHULĀM MUḤAMMAD, MUNSHĪ,—See Maẓhar 'Alī Khān Wilā.

GHULĀM QĀDIR,—See Ḥafīẓu'd-dīn Aḥmad.

GILCHRIST, J. H. B.,—See Amānatu'l-lāh; Amman, Mīr; Bahādur 'Alī, Mīr; Ḥaidar Bakhsh (Ḥaidarī); Kāẓim 'Alī Jawān; Ḥasan, Mīr; Nihāl Chand (Lāhōrī); Shēr 'Alī Afsōs.

GIRIDHAR GŌSWĀMĪ,—See Sūr Dās.

GRIERSON, G. A.,—See Bihārī Lāl.

GROWSE, F. S.,—See Chand Bardāī.

ḤAFĪẒU'D-DĪN AḤMAD,—The Khirud Ufroz (Khirad-afrōz), or the Ayar Danish of Abool Fuzl, translated into Hindoostanee, by Muoluwee Shuekh Huffeez Ood-deen Ahmud. Calcutta, 1805 or 1803 (Incomplete). The Khirud Ufroz; originally translated into the Hindoostanee Language, by Muoluvee Ḥufeez ood-Deen Uḥmud, from the Uyar Danish, written by the celebrated Shuekh Ubcol Fuzl, Prime Minister to the Illustrious Ukbur, Emperor of Hindoostan. Revised, compared with the original Persian, and prepared for the Press, by Captain Th. Roebuck with the Assistance of Moulavee Kazim Ulee and Moonshees Ghoolam Ukbar, Mirzae Beg and Ghoolam Qadir. Calcutta, 1815. Khirad-Afroz (the Illuminator of the Understanding) by Maulavī Ḥafīẓu'd-dīn. A new Edition of the Hindústání Text, carefully revised, with Notes, critical and explanatory: by Edward Eastwick, F.R.S., F.S.A., M.R.A.S., Professor of Hindústání at Haileybury College. Hertford, 1857. The Khirud-Ufroz: translated from the Oordoo into English, and followed by a Vocabulary of the difficult Words and Phrases occurring in the text, by T. P. Manuel. (Only a portion of the Work has been translated.) Calcutta, 1861.

(N.B.—Abū'l-faẓl's Ayār-e Dānish is a simpler Persian version of Ḥusain ibn 'Alī al-Kāshifī's Anwār-e Suhailī.)

ḤAIDAR BAKHSH (ḤAIDARĪ), SAIYID,—Arāish-e Maḥfil. Published by Munshī Qudratu'l-lāh. Calcutta, 1803. Araesay Mehfeel. A translation into the Hindoostanee Tongue of the celebrated Persian Tale entitled Qussu, e Hatim Tai, executed under the direction of John Borthwick Gilchrist . . . by Sueed Hydurbux Hydree. Bombay, 1845. Many other editions in India. Among them one in the Nāgarī character, (Calcutta, (?) 1845), and one in the Gujarātī character (Bombay, 1877).

(N.B.—There is another, altogether different, Arāish-e Maḥfil, dealing with the history of India, by Shēr 'Alī Afsōs.)

ḤAIDAR BAKHSH (ḤAIDARĪ), SAIYID,—Tota Kuhanee. A Translation into the Hindoostanee Tongue of the popular Persian Tales entitled Tootee Numu, by Sueyud Hueder Bukhsh Hueduree. Under the Superintendence of J. Gilchrist. Calcutta, 1804. (An edition of four pages of this work had previously appeared in 1802 in Gilchrist's Hindee Manual.) Other Editions: Calcutta, 1836; ib., 1839; Bombay, 1840; Madras, 1841; Bombay, 1844; Delhi, 1859; Cawnpore, 1864;

Bombay, 1870, and many others. Totā Kahānī; or Tales of a Parrot, in the Hindūstānī Language. Translated by Saiyid Ḥaidar Bakhsh, surnamed Ḥaidarī . . . a new Edition with . . . a Vocabulary of all the words occurring in the Text, by D. Forbes. London, 1852.

The Totā Kahānī; or Tales of a Parrot, translated from Saiyid Haidar Bakhsh's Hindūstānī Version of Muḥammad Qāsim's Persian Abridgment of Nakhshabī's Ṭūṭī Nāma, by G. Small. London, 1875.

Ḥaidar Bakhsh (Ḥaidarī), Saiyid,—Gooli Mughfirut; or the Flower of Forgiveness, being an Account . . . of those Moosulmans called Shoohuda or Martyrs, from the Time of Moohummud, to the Death of Hoosuen at Kurbula. By Meer Huedur Bukhsh Huedureo. Calcutta, 1812.

Les Séances de Haidarī, récits historiques et élégiaques sur la Vie et la Mort des principaux Martyrs musulmanes, Ouvrage traduit de l'Hindoustani, par M. l'Abbé Bertrand, . . . suivi de l'Élégie de Miskin, traduite de la même Langue, par M. Garcin de Tassy. Paris, 1845.

Ḥaidar Bakhsh (Ḥaidarī), Saiyid,—See Shēr 'Alī Afsōs.

Ḥairat, Mirzā,—See Arabian Nights.

Hall, F. E.,—See Lallū Lāl.

Hari Prakāś,—See Bihārī Lāl.

Hariśchandra,—See Sūr Dās.

Ḥasan, Mīr,—Sihr-ool-buyan (Siḥru'l-bayān) or Musnuwee of Meer Husun, being a History of the Prince Benuzeer, in Hindoostanee Verse. Published under the patronage of the College of Fort William in Bengal. Calcutta, 1805. Many other editions, such as Cawnpore, 1862, 1874; Meerut, 1876; Cawnpore, 1878. Nusri Benuzeer (Naṣr-e Bēnaẓīr), or a prose Version by Meer Buhadoor Ulee, of the Sihr ool buyan, an enchanting Fairy Tale in Hindoostanee Verse, by Meer Husun; composed for the use of the Hindoostanee Students in the College of Fort William, under the superintendence of John Gilchrist. Calcutta, 1803. The Nasr-i Be-nazīr. An Eastern Fairy Tale, translated from the Urdū by C. W. Bowdler Bell. Calcutta, Hull (printed), 1871. The Naṣr-i-Benaẓīr or the Incomparable Prose of Mīr Ḥasan, literally translated into English by Major Henry Court. 2nd Edition, Calcutta, 1889. The Nasr-i-be Nazīr, one of the Text Books for the High Proficiency Examination in Urdu, edited by Lieut.-Col. G. S. A. Ranking, Calcutta, 1902.

Ḥasan, Mīr,—See also Nihāl Chand (Lāhōrī).

Herklots,—See Ja'far Sharīf.

Hoernle, A. F. R., C.I.E.,—See Chand Bardāī.

Hollings, Capt. W.,—See Lallū Lāl; Maẓhar 'Alī Khān Wilā.

Ikrām 'Alī,—Ikhwānu'ṣ-ṣafā. Translated from the Arabic by Maulavī I. 'A. Calcutta, 1811. Other editions, Madras, 1840; Bombay, 1844; second edition, edited by Ghulām Ḥaidar, Calcutta, 1846; Lucknow, 1848; Delhi, 1851; Lahore, (?) 1855; Lucknow, 1862; Madras, 1862; Lahore, 1868; Bombay, 1870; Bangalore, 1872; Madras, 1872; Madras, 1879; Bulandshahr, 1882; and others. Intikhāb-i Ikhwānu'ṣ-ṣafā (Selections from the I. S.). Edited by J. Michael, London, 1829. Ikhwānu-ṣ-ṣafā. Translated from the Arabic into Hindūstānī, by Maulawī Ikrām 'Alī. A new Edition, revised and corrected, by Duncan Forbes . . . and Dr. Charles Rieu. London, 1862. The Ikhwan-us-safa . . . Third Edition, revised and corrected by W. Nassau Lees. Calcutta, 1862.

A complete Vocabulary to the Ikhwan-oos-suffa; with etymological Illustrations of . . . difficult Words. By T. P. Manuel. Calcutta, 1862.

An English Translation of the Akhwa-noos-safa, by Moonshee Syed Hoossain. Madras, 1855. The Ikhwan-oos-suffa, translated from the original Oordoo into English Prose, and followed by a Vocabulary of the difficult Words . . . occurring in the Text, by T. P. Manuel. Calcutta, 1860. Ikhwānu-ṣ-ṣafā; or Brothers of Purity. Translated from the Hindūstānī of Maulavī Ikrām 'Alī, by John Platts, Esq.,—Carried through the Press by Edward B. Eastwick. London, 1869.

Les Animaux, extrait da Tuhfat Ikhwan ussafa . . . traduit d'après la Version hindoustanie par M. Garcin de Tassy. Paris, 1864.

Inshā Allāh Khān, called Inshā,—Kulliyāt-e Inshā Allāh Khān. The complete works. Delhi, 1855; Lucknow, 1876.

A Tale by Inshā Allah Khān. Communicated and translated by L. Clint, Esq., Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, Vol. XXI (1852), pp. 1 and ff. Continuation, translated by the Rev. S. Slater, Vol. XXIV (1855), pp. 79 and ff. (This is the celebrated tale commonly called 'Kahānī ṭhēṭh Hindī-mẽ,' which has frequently appeared in Indian School-books such as

'Guṭ^{a}kā.' Its value consists in its style, which, though pure and elegant Urdū and fully intelligible to the Musalmāns of Delhi and Lucknow, does not contain a single Persian word. On the other hand, it is equally free from the Sanskritisms of Paṇḍits. The idiom (including the order of the words) is distinctly that of Urdū, not of Hindī. In this last respect, it differs from the work of Ayōdhyā Siṅgh Upādhyāy, in which the order of words is that usual in Hindī.

INSHĀ ALLĀH KHĀN, CALLED INSHĀ,—See also Section II.

I'TIṢĀMU'D-DĪN,—Shigurf nāma-e Wilāyat, or Excellent Intelligence concerning Europe; being the Travels of Mirza Itesa Modeen in Great Britain and France. Translated from the original Persian Manuscript into Hindoostanee, with an English Version and Notes, by James Edward Alexander. London, 1827.

JA'FAR SHARĪF,—Qanoon-e-Islam, or the Customs of the Moosulmans of India; comprising a full and exact Account of their various Rites and Ceremonies . . . By Jaffur Shurreef, composed under the Direction of, and translated by G. A. Herklots. London, 1832.

JARRETT, CAPT. H. S.,—See Muḥammad Rafī'.

KĀLĪ KṚISHṆA, RĀJĀ,—See Maẓhar 'Alī Khān Wilā.

KĀẒIM 'ALĪ JAWĀN (MĪRZĀ) AND LALLŪ LĀL,—Sing,hasun Butteesee, or Anecdotes of the celebrated Bikramajeet, . . . translated into Hindoostanee from the Brij-B,hak,ha of Soondur Kubeeshwur, by Meerza Kazim Ulee Juwan, and Shree Lulloo Lal Kub. Calcutta, 1805. Second Edition, Calcutta, 1816. Other Editions: Calcutta, 1839; Agra, 1843; Bombay, 1854; Lucknow, 1862; Benares, 1865; Lucknow, 1870; ib. same date; Delhi, 1875; Lucknow, 1877; Meerut, 1882. All the above are in the Nāgarī character. In the Gurmukhī character, Lahore, 1876. In the Persian character, Agra, (?) 1866; Lucknow, (?) 1868.

Singhāsan Battīsī Manẓūm (a metrical version), by Raṅg Lāl, alias Chaman. Cawnpore, 1869; ib., 1871.

Selections (in the Nāgarī character) in Vol. II. of Shakespear's Muntakhabāt-i-Hindī. See Section III.

Singhāsan Battīsī . . . translated into Hindī, from the Sanskrit, by Lallūjī Lāl Kabi . . . A new edition . . . with copious Notes by Syed Abdoollah. London, 1869.

A Throne of Thirty-two Images, or the Buttris Shinghashun. (Translated into English.) Calcutta, 1888.

Contes indiens. Les trente-deux Récits de Trône (Batris-Sinhasan) ou les Marveilleux Exploits de Vikramaditya, traduits . . . par L. Feer. (Collections de Chansons et de Contes populaires, Vol. VI.) Paris, 1881.

(Extracts from the S. B. in J. Vinson's Manuel de la Langue Hindoustani, pp. 150 and ff.) See Section II.

KĀẒIM 'ALĪ JAWĀN (MĪRZĀ),—Sukoontala Natuk; being an Appendix to the English and Hindoostanee Dialogues [by J. B. Gilchrist], in the Universal Character. London, 1826. Another Edition, Lucknow, 1875. See Section II.

KĀẒIM 'ALĪ JAWĀN (MĪRZĀ),—See Ḥafīẓu'd-dīn Aḥmad; Muḥammad Rafī', commonly called Saudā; Muḥammad Taqī, Mīr.

KEMPSON, M.,—See Naẓīr Aḥmad.

LAKSHMAṆ SIṄGH, RĀJĀ,—Sakuntala or the Lost Ring; a Sanskrit Drama of Kalidas, translated into Prose and Verse, with notes by Kuñwar [Rājā] Lachman Sinha, Deputy Collector, N.-W. P. [pp. 95-175 of Śiva Prasād's Hindi Selections (1867)]. Another Edition, Benares, 1897.

The Śakuntalá in Hindí. The Text of Kanvar Lachhman Sinh critically edited, with grammatical, idiomatical, and exegetical Notes, by F. Pincott. London, 1876.

LALLŪ LĀL,—Prēm Sāgar; or the History of Krishnu, translated into Hindee, by Shree Lulloo Lal Kub. Calcutta, 1803, 1805, 1810, 1825 (with Vocabulary), 1831 (edited by Yogadhyan Misra), 1842, and many other editions in India. In the Gujarātī character, Bombay, 1854, (illustrated) 1862. The Prem Ságar; or the Ocean of Love, being a History of Kṛishṇ, according to the tenth Chapter of the Bhágavat of Vyásadev, translated into Hindí from the Braj Bhákhá of Chaturbhuj Misr, by Lallú Lál, late Bhákhá Múnshí of the College of Fort William. A new edition with a Vocabulary, by Edward B. Eastwick, M.R.A.S. Hertford, 1851. Selections from the Prem Ságar . . . The Hindí Text printed in the Roman Character, with a complete Vocabulary to the entire work. By J. F. Baness. Calcutta, 1875. Second Edition, 1880.

Translations. The Prem Sagur. Translated into English, by Capt. W. Hollings. Calcutta, 1848. Second Edition, 1867. Another, Allahabad, 1900. Prem Ságar; or the Ocean of Love.

Literally translated from the Hindí of Shrí Lallú Lál Kab into English. By Edward B. Eastwick, C.B., F.R.S., M.R.A.S. London, 1867.

Selections from the Prem Sāgar and Bāgh-o Bahār. Translated into literal English, with copious Notes. By 'Adālat Khān. Second Edition, Calcutta, 1881.

LALLŪ LĀL,—Rajneeti; or Tales exhibiting the moral Doctrines, and the civil and military Policy of the Hindoos. Translated from the original Sunscrit of Narayun Pundit into Braj B,hak,ha. By Shree Lalloo Lal Kub. Calcutta, 1809. Other Editions, ib. 1827; Agra, 1843. Rája-níti, a Collection of Hindu Apologues, with a Preface, Notes, and supplementary Glossary. By F. E. H[all], Allahabad, 1854. Other Editions: Lucknow, 1873; Calcutta, 1878. Third Edition, revised and published for the use of the Board of Examiners, by the Rev. Dr. K. M. Banerjea and Lt.-Col. (General Sir) A. C. Toker. Calcutta, 1883.

Rājanīti yā Pañchōpākhyān. A Hindī Version, by Bhairava-prasāda, of the Braj-Bhākhā Text of L. L. Bombay, 1854. Another Edition, Bombay, 1866.

The Rájnítí; or Tales exhibiting . . . . . Hindoos. Translated literally from the Hindí of Shrí Lallú Lal Kab, into English, by J. R. A. S. Lowe. Calcutta, 1853.

Analysis et Extraits du Radj-niti. By M. Éd. Lancereau. Journal Asiatique IV., xiii. (1849), p. 71.

LALLŪ LĀL,—Madho Bilas; Tale of Madho and Sulochan, in poetry (done into Hindī from the Sanscrit), by Lallu Ji Lall Kabi. Agra, 1846. Other Editions: Calcutta, 1868; Calcutta, (?) 1870. I have been unable to trace the earlier editions.

LALLŪ LĀL,—See Bihārī Lāl; Kāẓim 'Alī Jawān; Maẓhar 'Alī Khān Wilā; Muḥammad Taqī.

LĀL KAVI,—The Ch,hutru Prukash, a Biographical Account of Ch,hutru Sal, Raja of Boondelkhund, by Lal Kuvi. Edited by Captain W. Price, Professor of Hindee and Hindoostance in the College of Fort William. Published under the authority of the General Committee of Public Instruction. Calcutta, 1829. Republished in the Benares Nāgarī-Pracháriṇī Granth-mālā, Benares, 1903.

History of the Boondelas, by W. R. Pogson. Calcutta, 1828. (A translation of the Chhatra Prakās.)

LANCEREAU, E.,—See Lallū Lāl; Maẓhar 'Alī Khān Wilā.

LEES, W. NASSAU,—See Ikrām 'Alī; Shēr 'Alī Afsōs.

LOWE, J. R. A. S.,—See Lallū Lāl.

MAHDI 'ALI KHĀN,—See Nihāl Chand (Lāhōrī).

MANUEL, T. P.,—See Ḥafiẓu'd-dīn Aḥmad; Ikrām 'Alī.

MAẒHAR 'ALI KHĀN WILĀ AND LALLŪ LĀL,—Buetal Pucheesee; being a Collection of twenty-five Stories related by the Demon Buetal to the Raja Bicrumajeet, translated into Hindoostance from the Brujb,ha,kha of Soorut Kubeeshwur, by Muzhur Ulee Khani Vila, and Shree Lulloo Lal Kub. Calcutta, 1805. Other editions, Calcutta, 1809, 1834; Agra, 1843; Calcutta, 1849; Indore, 1849; Bombay, 1857; Calcutta, 1860; Calcutta, 1870; Benares, (illustrated) 1876; (?) Delhi, 1876. Also printed in Vol. I. of Price's Hindee and Hindoostanee Selections, 1830. See Section III. The Baitál Pachísí; or Twenty-five Tales of a Demon. A new Edition of the Hindí Text, with each Word expressed in the Hindústání Character immediately under the corresponding Word in the Nágarí; and with a perfectly literal English interlineur Translation, accompanied by a free translation in English at the foot of each page, and explanatory Notes, by W. B. Barker . . . Edited by E. B. Eastwick. Hertford, 1855. Baitāl Pachchīsī. A new and corrected Edition, with a vocabulary of all the Words occurring in the Text, by D. Forbes. London, 1857.

Bytal-Puchisi; or the Twenty-five Tales of Bytal, translated from the Brujbhakha into English by Rajah Kalee-Krishen Bahadur. Calcutta, 1834. The Bytal Pucheesee; translated into English, by W. Hollings. Calcutta, 1860. Another Edition, ib. 1866. Reprinted, Allahabad, 1900. The Baital-Pachisi . . . translated from Dr. Forbes's new and corrected Edition, by Ghulam Mohammad Munshi. Bombay, 1868. Vikram and the Vampire, or Tales of Hindu Devilry. Adapted (from the Baitāl Pachīsī) by Sir Richard F. Burton. London, 1870. Another (Memorial) Edition, edited by Isabel Burton. London, 1893 [only 'eleven of the best tales' translated]. The Baitāl Pachīsī, or Twenty-five Tales of a Sprite. Translated from the Hindī Text of D. Forbes by J. Platts. London, 1871.

Extraits du Bétâl-patchîsî (traduits) par M. Éd. Lancereau. Journal Asiatique, IV., xviii., xix. (1851-52).

Bibliothek orientalischer Märchen und Erzählungen in deutscher Bearbeitung mit Einleitung, Anmerkungen und Nachweisen. I. Bändchen. Baitál Pachísí oder die fünfundzwanzig Erzählungen eines Dämon. In deutscher Bearbeitung, etc. By Hermann Oesterley. Leipzig, 1873.

MICHAEL, J.,—See Ikrām 'Alī.

MIRZĀ BĒG,—See Ḥāfiẓu'd-dīn Aḥmad.

MŌHANLĀL VISHṆULĀL PAṆḌYĀ, PAṆḌIT,—See Chand Bardāī.

MUḤAMMAD 'ABDU'L-ḤĀLĪM (SHARAR),—Quwwat-e Intiẓāmīya. Lucknow, 1889.

Shahīd-e Wafā. Lucknow, 1891; another Edition, Lahore, 1892; another, Delhi, 1896.

Ḥasan Anjilīnā. Lahore, 1892.

Manṣūr aur Mōhanā. Lahore, 1893: another Edition, Lucknow, 1898.

Maliku'l-'azīz aur Varjinā. Lahore, 1893.

Dil-kash. Sadhaura, 1896.

Ziyād aur Ḥalāwa. Pt. I. Delhi, 1896. Pt. I., 2nd Edition, Lucknow, 1896.

Badru'n-nisā-kī Muṣībat. Lucknow, 1897. Another Edition, ib., 1899.

Aiyām-e 'Arab. Vol. I. Lucknow, 1899.

Durgēsh-nandinī. Translated from the Bengali of Bankim Chandra. Lucknow, 1899.

Firdaus-e Barīn. Lucknow, 1899.

Flōra Flōrinda. Lucknow, 1899.

Dil-chasp. Delhi, 1900.

Dil-gudāz, (a monthly literary magazine, edited by Sharar. The British Museum has Vol. VI. Lucknow. 1899).

MUḤAMMAD ASGHAR 'ALĪ KHĀN NASĪM,—See Arabian Nights.

MUḤAMMAD ASLĀM,—See Muḥammad Rafī'.

MUḤAMMAD FAIẒ,—See Nihāl Chand (Lāhōrī).

MUḤAMMAD ḤĀMID 'ALĪ KHĀN, ḤĀMID,—See Arabian Nights.

MUḤAMMAD ḤUSAIN (ĀZĀD),—Besides the Āb-e Ḥayāt (Section I., ante, and above), and the Jāmi'u-'l-qawā'id (Section II., above), Āzād has also edited (Lahore, 1890) the Dīwān-e Zauq, with a preface and notes.

MUḤAMMAD ḤUSAIN (ĀZĀD),—Darbār-e Akbarī. Collected and Edited by Sayyad Mumtāz 'Alī. Lahore, 1898.

MUḤAMMAD IBRĀHĪM (ZAUQ),—See Muḥammad Ḥusain (Āzād).

MUḤAMMAD RAFĪ', COMMONLY CALLED SAUDĀ,—Intikhāb-e Kullīyāt-e Saudā (spelt Intikabi Cooliyat Souda), or Selections from the poetical Works of Rufeeu oos Souda, by Moulavee Muhammud Uslam and Kazim Ulee Juwan. Calcutta, 1810. Second Edition, revised and enlarged, by Mouloowe Golam Hyder. Calcutta, 1847. Muntakhab-i Muṣnawiyāt-i Saudā. Revised Edition by Captain H. S. Jarrett. Calcutta, 1875. Another edition revised and edited by Lieut.-Col. G. S. A. Ranking, Calcutta, 1903. Selections from the Kulliyat or complete Works of Mirza Rafi-oos-Sauda . . . literally translated by Major Henry Court. Simla, 1872. Editions of his complete works,—Kulliyāt-e Saudā, Poetical Works of Mirzā Muḥammad Rafī, (Saudā). Delhi, 1853. Cawnpore, 1872, 1888.

MUḤAMMAD RAMAẒĀN,—See Nihāl Chand (Lāhōrī).

MUḤAMMAD TAQĪ KHĀN, CALLED HAWAS,—Lailī Majnūn-e Hawas. (The Story of the Loves of Lailī and Majnūn, in verse). Cawnpore, 1844; Calcutta, 1846; Lucknow, ib., 1862; 1869; Cawnpore, 1874; ib., 1882; ib., 1885.

MUḤAMMAD TAQĪ, MĪR,—Kooliyat Meer Tuqee; The poems of Meer Mohummud Tuqee, comprising the Whole of his numerous and celebrated Compositions in the Oordoo, or polished Language of Hindoostan, edited by [Kāẓim 'Alī Jawān and other] learned Moonshees attached to the College of Fort William. Calcutta, 1811. Shooulu,e ishq (Sho'la-e 'Ishq): The Flame of Love: a Hindoostanee Poem, by Meer Mohummud Tuqee. Edited by William Carmichael Smyth. London, 1820. (This poem will also be found in Lallū Lāl's Laṭāif-e Hindī. See Section III). Conseils aux mauvais Poëtes, Poëme de Mir Taki, traduit de l'Hindoustani, par M. Garcin de Tassy. Journal Asiatique, VII. (1825), pp. 300 and ff. Separate reprint, Paris, 1826. Consigli ai cattivi poeti (translation of foregoing into Italian by Pugliesi Pico), Palermo, 1891. The Hindōstānī text of this poem will be found on p. 124 of J. Vinson's Manuel de la Langue Hindoustani. Paris, 1899. See Section II. Satire contre les Ignorants (literal translation of original), by J. Vinson in Revue de Linguistique, XXIV (1891), pp. 101 and ff.

MUḤAMMAD TAQĪ, MĪR,—See Lallū Lāl.

NAẒĪR,—See Walī Muḥammad.

NAẒĪR AḤMAD, KHĀN BAHĀDUR,—Mir'ātu'l-'arūs. (A Hindōstānī Novel, especially intended for women.) Cawnpore, 1869; Lucknow, 1869; Cawnpore, 1875; Bareilly, 1880; Allahabad, 1885; Delhi, 1889. The Bride's Mirror or Mir'ātul-'Arūs. Edited in the Roman Character with a Vocabulary and Notes by G. E. Ward. London, 1899. The Bride's Mirror, a Tale of Domestic Life in Delhi forty Years ago, translated from the Original Hindustani by G. E. Ward. London, 1903.

Banātu'n-na'sh. (A Tale of Indian Life,—a sequel to the preceding.) Agra, 1868; ib., 1872; Cawnpore, 1879; Agra, 1888; Cawnpore, 1882; ib., 1888.

Taubatu'n-naṣūḥ. (A novel on the importance of education and religious training.) Agra, 1874; Cawnpore, 1879; Allahabad, 1885; Delhi, 1889; Lahore, 1895. The Taubatu-n-Nasûh (Repentance of Nussooh) of Maulvî Hâjî Hâfiz Nazîr Ahmed of Delhi . . . Edited with Notes and Index, by M. Kempson. London, 1886. Second Edition of the first five chapters, with annotations and vocabulary by the same. London, 1890.

The Repentance of Nussooh. Translated from the original Hindustani by M. Kempson. London, 1884.

(Extract from the Taubatu'n-naṣūḥ, in J. Vinson's Manuel de la Langue Hindoustani, pp. 120 and ff. See Section II.)

NIHĀL CHAND (LĀHŌRĪ) AND SHĒR 'ALĪ AFSŌS,—(Gul-e Bakāwalī, also called Mazhab-e 'Ishq.) Gooli Bukawulee, a Tale translated from the Persian into Hindoostanee, by Moonshee Nihal Chund, under the superintendence of J. Gilchrist. Calcutta, 1804. Muzhubi Ishq, or the Gooli Bukawulee, written in the Oordoo Dialect, by Moonshee Nihal Chund . . . and afterwards revised by Meer Sher Ulee Ufsos . . . Second Edition. Revised . . . by T. Roebuck. Calcutta, 1815. Another Edition, edited by Muḥammad Faiz and Muḥammad Ramazān. Calcutta, 1827. Another Edition, Calcutta, 1832. Muzubai Ask. A Translation into the Hindoostanee Tongue of the popular Persian Tales, entitled Goolai Bucawley, by Moonsey Neehalchund Lahoree, under the superintendent (sic) of John Gilchrist. Sixth Edition. Bombay, 1843. Other editions, Calcutta, 1846; Lucknow, 1848; Bombay, 1850 (in one volume with Mahdī 'Alī Khān's Yūsuf Zulaikhā and Mīr Ḥasan's Siḥru'l-bayān); Cawnpore, 1851; Delhi, 1852; Cawnpore, 1859; ib., 1869; Delhi, 1872 (in the Nāgarī character); ib., 1873 (with illustrations); ib., 1887 (Nāgarī character); Cawnpore, 1875; Lucknow, 1875; ib., same year; Cawnpore, 1876; Delhi, 1876; Cawnpore, 1877 (illustrated); ib., 1879; Delhi, 1879; Madras, 1879; Delhi, 1881 (illustrated); Benares, (?) 1887; Cawnpore, 1889.

Extracts from the Gooli Bukawullee are in Vol. II. of Price's Hindee and Hindoostanee Selections. See Section III.

A translation into English by Lieut. R. P. Anderson was published in Delhi in 1851. I have not seen it.

Abrégé du Roman hindoustani intitulé La Rose de Bakawali. Journal Asiatique, II., xvi. (1835), pp. 193 and 338. Separate reprint, par M. Garcin de Tassy. Paris, 1835. La Doctrine de l'Amour ou Taj-ulmuluk et Bakawali, Roman de Philosophie religieuse, par Nihal Chand de Delhi (sic), traduit de l'Hindoustani, par M. Garcin de Tassy. Paris (in Revue de l'Orient), 1858.

OESTERLY, HERMANN,—See Mazhar 'Alī Khān Wilā.

PARAMĀNANDA, PAṆḌIT,—See Bihārī Lāl.

PICO, PUGLIESE,—See Muḥammad Taqī, Mīr.

PINCOTT, FREDERIC,—See Arabian Nights; Lakshman Singh, Rājā.

PLATTS, JOHN,—See Ikrām 'Alī; Mazhar 'Alī Khān Wilā.

POGSON, W. R.,—See Lāl Kavi.

PRICE, CAPT. WILLIAM,—See Amman, Mīr; Bahādur 'Alī, Mīr; Lāl Kavi; Mazhar 'Alī Khān Wilā; Nihāl Chand (Lāhōrī); Shēr 'Alī Afsōs.

PYĀRĒ LĀL PAṆḌIT,—See Arabian Nights.

RAJAB 'ALĪ BĒG, SURŪR, MIRZĀ,—See Arabian Nights.

RAṄG LĀL (CHAMAN),—See Kāzim 'Alī Jawān.

RANKING, LIEUT.-COL. G. S. A.,—See Ḥasan, Mīr; Muḥammad Rafī'.

RATAN NĀTH DAR, PAṆḌIT, (SARSHĀR),—Shamsu'z-zuḥā. Cawnpore, 1879.

Fasāna-e Āzād. (A Story reprinted from the Awadh Akhbār). Part I. Lucknow, 1880. 2nd Edition, Pts. II.-IV., Lucknow, 1887. 3rd Edition (4 Pts.), Cawnpore, 1889-91.

Hushshū. 2nd Edition, Lucknow, 1895.

Sair-e Kuhsār. Lucknow, 1890.

Besides the above Novels, Ratan Nāth has written translations of (1) 'Don Quixote'; under the title of Khudāī Faujdār. 2 Pts. Lucknow, 1894. (2) 'Russia,' by Sir D. M. Wallace; under the title of Tārīkh-e Rūsīya. Lucknow, 1887. And (3) 'Letters from High Latitudes,' by the Earl of Dufferin. Lucknow, 1888.

RIEU, DR. CHARLES,—See Ikrām 'Alī.

ROEBUCK, CAPT. THOMAS,—See Amman, Mīr; Ḥafiẓu'd-dīn Aḥmad; Nihāl Chand (Lāhōrī).

SADAL MIŚRA,—Chandrāwatī. Benares, 1901, Nāgarī Prachāriṇī Sabhā Granth-mālā, No. 2. [A translation of the Nāsikētōpākhyāna made in 1803. S. M. was a contemporary of Lallū Lāl at the College of Fort William. He wrote several Hindī works, but this appears to be the only one that has been printed. It is a translation of the Sanskrit Nāsikētōpākhyāna.]

SAIYID ḤUSAIN, MUNSHĪ,—See Ikrām 'Alī.

SARDĀR,—See Sūr Dās.

SARSHĀR,—See Ratan Nāth Dar, Paṇḍit.

SAUDĀ,—See Muḥammad Rafī'.

SHĀDĪ LĀL CHAMAN,—See Arabian Nights.

SHAKESPEAR, JOHN,—See Kāẓim 'Alī Jawān; Shēr 'Alī Afsōs.

SHAMSU'D-DIN AḤMAD, MUNSHĪ,—See Arabian Nights.

SHARAR,—See Muḥammad 'Abdu'l-ḥālīm.

SHĒR 'ALĪ AFSŌS, MĪR,—Bāgh-e Urdū, the Rose Garden of Hindoostan; translated from Shykh Sadee's original Nursery or Persian Goolistan of Sheeraz, by Meer Sher Ulee Ufsos . . . under the direction and superintendence of John Gilchrist. Calcutta, 1802. Other Editions: Calcutta, 1808; Madras, 1844; Bombay, 1846; Delhi, 1848; Bombay, 1851 (without prefatory matter).

SHĒR 'ALĪ AFSŌS, MĪR,—Araïsh-i muhfil, being a History in the Hindoostanee Language of the Hindoo Princes of Dihlee from Joodishtur to Pithoura. Compiled from the Khoolasut-col Hind [of Sujān Rāy] and other Authorities, by Meer Sher Ulee Ufsos. Calcutta, 1808. Other Editions: Calcutta, 1848; Lahore, 1867; Lucknow, 1870. The Araïsh-i-mahfil, printed for the use of the junior Members of Her Majesty's Indian Civil Services. Third Edition, revised and corrected by W. Nassau Lees. Calcutta, 1863.

Selections from this work will be found in Shakespear's Muntakhabāt-i-Hindi (1817) and in Price's Hindee and Hindoostanee Selections (1830). See Section III.

The Araish-i-mahfil, or the Ornament of the Assembly, literally translated from the Oordoo by M. H. Court. Allahabad, 1871; Second Edition, Calcutta, 1882.

Ārāish-e Maḥfil or Assemblage of Ornament (sic). Ten Sections of a Description of India, being the most interesting Portion of J. Shakespear's Muntakhabāt-i-Hindī . . . Translated from the Hindoostanee and accompanied with Notes, explanatory and grammatical, by N. L. Benmohel. Dublin, 1847.

Quelque Lignes sur les Sciences des Indes, extraites de l'Araïch-i-Mahfil, de Mir Cher Aly Afsos, et traduites de l'Hindoustani, par M. Garcin de Tassy. Journal Asiatique, IX. (1826), pp. 97 and ff.

Quelque Lignes sur les Fruits et les Fleurs de l'Hindostan, extraites de l'Araïch-i-Mahfil, ou Statistique et Histoire de l'Hindostan, par Mir Cher-Aly-Afsos, et traduite de l'Hindoustani, par M. Garcin de Tassy. Journal Asiatique, XI. (1827), pp. 94 and ff.

Histoire du Règne des Pandavas dans l'Hindoustan, traduite du Texte hindoustani de l'Araïch-i-Maḥfil de Mir Cher-i-Alī Afsos. Par M. l'Abbé Bertrand. Journal Asiatique, III., xiv., 1842, pp. 71 and ff.

Histoire des Rois de l'Hindoustan après les Pandavas, traduite du Texte Hindoustani de Mir Cher-i Alī Afsos. By the same. Ib., IV., iii., 1844, pp. 104 and ff.; 229 and ff.; 354 and ff.

Note.—There is another and altogether different Arāish-ē Maḥfil by Ḥaidar Bakhsh Ḥaidarī, which deals with the Story of Ḥātim Ṭāī. The two works have often been confounded.

SHĒR 'ALĪ AFSŌS, MĪR,—See Ḥaidar Bakhsh (Ḥaidarī); Nihāl Chand (Lāhōrī).

SLATER, REV. S.,—See Inshā Allāh Khān, called Inshā.

SMALL, G.,—See Ḥaidar Bakhsh (Ḥaidarī).

SMITH, L. F.,—See Amman, Mīr.

SMYTH, WILLIAM CARMICHAEL,—See Muḥammad Taqī, Mīr.

SŪDAN KAVI,—Sujān-charitra (an account of the wars of Sujān Singh of Bharatpur), edited by Rādhā-kṛishṇa Dās, in Nāgarī Prachāriṇī Granth-mālā, No. 3. Benares (printed Allahabad), 1902. [Sujān Singh, also known as Sūraj Mall, died in 1764.]

Sūr Dās,—Sūr-sāgar; Lucknow, 1864; Agra, 1876; Lucknow, 1880.
Dṛishṭikūṭ; Lucknow, 1890 (with the commentary of Sardār, called Sāhityalaharī); Benares, 1869 (with a commentary by Giridhar Gōswāmī); Patna, 1889 (with a commentary by Hariśchandra).
Many editions of portions of the Sūr-sāgar have appeared in India.

Syāmal Dās, Kavirāj,—See Chand Bardāī.

Taḥsīnu'd-dīn,—Qiṣṣa-e Kāmrūp ō Kalā. Les Aventures de Kamrup, par Tahcin-uddin, publiées en Hindoustani, par M. Garcin de Tassy . . . Paris, 1835.
Les Aventures de Kamrup, texte hindoustani romanisé, d'après l'Edition de M. Garcin de Tassy, par M. l'Abbé Bertrand. Paris, 1859.
Vocabulaire hindoustani-français pour le Texte des Aventures de Kamrup, par MM. Garcin de Tassy et l'Abbé Bertrand. Paris, 1857.
Les Aventures de Kamrup, par Tahcin-uddin; traduites de l'Hindoustani, par M. Garcin de Tassy . . Paris, printed under the auspices of the Oriental Translation Committee of Great Britain and Ireland, 1834.

Tod, Col. James,—See Chand Bardāī.

Toker, Lieut.-Col. (General Sir) A. C.,—See Lallū Lāl.

Tolbort, T. W. H.,—See Arabian Nights.

Ṭōṭārām Shāyān,—See Arabian Nights.

Vinson, J.,—See Amman, Mīr; Kāẓim 'Alī Jawān; Muḥammad Taqī, Mīr; Naẓīr Aḥmad.

Walī Muḥammad, usually known as Naẓīr,—Kulliyāt, or Complete Works. Lucknow, 1870; Delhi, 1877. Banjāra Nāma (contains two poems, viz., Banjāra Nāma, of the Story of the Grain merchant, and Āchār chūhō̃-kā̃, or Pickled Rats). Lucknow, (?) 1860. Banjāra Nāma, and Mōtī Nāma, Lucknow, 1874. Giri-band-e Naẓīr (a collection of short poems, of which the principal is the Jōgī Nāma). Agra, (?) 1860. Lailī Majnun-e Naẓīr (the Romance of Lailī and Majnūn in verse). Cawnpore, 1866; Delhi, 1873. Muntakhab-e Naẓīr (selections from his poems). Cawnpore, 1863; Bombay, 1880.

Walīu'l-lāh, Shāh, usually known as Walī,—Dīwān-i Walī. Les Oeuvres de Wali, publiées en hindoustani par M. Garcin de Tassy, Paris, 1834. Another edition, Lucknow, 1878. Les Oeuvres de Wali. Traduction et Notes, par M. Garcin de Tassy. Paris, 1836.

Ward, G. E.,—See Alṭāf Ḥusain and Naẓīr Aḥmad.

Wilā,—See Maẓhar 'Alī Khān Wilā.

Williams, Monier,—See Amman, Mīr.

Yōga-dhyān Misra,—See Lallū Lāl.

Zauq,—See Muḥammad Ibrāhīm.

Section IV.—APPENDIX.

Early Translations of the Scriptures.

Schultze, Benj., and Callenberg, J.,—The first four Chapters of Genesis in Hindōstānī. Translated by Schultze and published by Callenberg. Halle, 1745-46. Daniel by the same, Halle, 1748.

Schultze, Benj., and Callenberg, J.,—Evangelium Lucae, in Linguam indostavicam translatum a viro plur. reverendo Benjam. Schultzio, evangelico in India Missionario, edidit D. Jo. Henr. Callenbergius. Halae Saxonum, 1749. The same, 1758.
Acta Apostolorum, in Linguam, etc. Halae Sax, 1849.
Epistola Jacobi, in Linguam, etc. Halae Sax., 1750.
Marci Evangelium, in Linguam, etc. Halae Sax., 1758.
Evangelium Johannis, in Linguam, etc. Halae Sax., 1758.
Johannis Apocalypsis, in Linguam, etc. Halae, 1758.
Novum Testamentum, in Linguam, etc. Halae, 1758.

Hunter, Will.,—The New Testament of Jesus Christ, translated into the Hindoostanee Language, by Mirza Mohummud Fitrut and other learned Natives of the College of Fort William, revised and compared with the Original Greek by Will. Hunter. Calcutta, 1805.

Serampore Missionaries (Anon.),—The New Testament of Our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ; translated into the Hindoostanee Language from the Original Greek. By the Missionaries of Serampore. Serampore, 1811. [This is rather Hindī.]
Dharm-kī Pōthī (the whole Bible). Serampore, 1812, 1816, 1819, 5 Vols.

Serampore Missionaries (Anon.).—The Gospels . . . . . translated into Braj Bhākhā. Serampore, 1822. The New Testament, 1827.

SERAMPORE MISSIONARIES (ANON.),—The New Testament translated into Kanaujī. Serampore, 1822.

MARTYN, THE REV. H.,—The New Testament of Our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, translated into the Hindoostanee Language from the original Greek, by the Rev. H. Martyn, and afterwards carefully revised with the assistance of Mirza Fitrit and other learned Natives. For the British and Foreign Bible Society. Serampore, 1814. Persian character.

The same. Nāgarī character. Calcutta, 1817.

The same. Persian character. London, 1819.

CHAMBERLAIN, J.,—The four Gospels, translated into the Hindui Language. Serampore, 1820. Acts to I. Corinthians, 1823. All these in Nāgarī type. The four Gospels in Kaithī type. Serampore, 1823.

THOMPSON, REV. J. T.,—The four Gospels translated into Hindī; Serampore, 1826. Psalms, ib., 1836. Both in Nāgarī.

BOWLEY, THE REV. WILLIAM,—The New Testament of Our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, altered from Martyn's Oordoo translation into the Hinduee language by the Rev. William Bowley, under the patronage of the Calcutta Auxiliary Bible Society. Calcutta, First three Gospels, 1818-19; Fourth Gospel, 1820; Acts, 1822; Entire New Testament, 1826; an edition of the four Gospels, Calcutta, 1826, in the Kaithī character.

HINDŌSTĀNĪ.

'It is sheer pedantry—nay, a misconception of the laws which govern language as a living organism—to despise pithy and apt colloquialisms, and even slang. In order to remain healthy and vigorous, a literary language must be rooted in the soil of a copious vernacular, from which it can extract and assimilate, by a chemistry peculiar to itself, whatever nourishment it requires. It must keep in touch with life in the broadest acceptation of the word; and life at certain levels, obeying a psychological law which must simply be accepted as one of the conditions of the problem, will always express itself in dialect, provincialism, slang.'—W. ARCHER in the Pall Mall Magazine for October 1899.

As a dialect of Western Hindī, Hindōstānī presents itself under several forms. These may first of all be considered under two heads, viz. Vernacular Hindōstānī, and the Literary Hindōstānī founded thereon. Vernacular Hindōstānī is the language of the Upper Gangetic Doab and of Western Rohilkhand. Literary Hindōstānī is the polite speech of India generally, and may be taken as the vernacular of educated Musalmāns throughout northern India, and of all Musalmāns south of the Narbada. Being derived from, and still having its roots in, vernacular Hindōstānī, it would be more logical to treat the latter first, but considerations of convenience lead us to reverse the process. Literary Hindōstānī is so widely known, and of such importance, that it must necessarily be taken as the standard dialect of Western Hindī. Its grammar and its various standards of literary style are fixed, and present a suitable form with which to compare the different vernaculars on which it is based, or to which it is related. I therefore commence by describing Literary Hindostānī.

The following is the approximate number of speakers of the two main divisions of Hindōstānī,—the vernacular, and the literary form of speech—

Vernacular Hindōstānī	5,282,733
Literary Hindōstānī	11,350,436
TOTAL .	16,633,169

Literary Hindōstānī,[1] Urdū, and Hindī.

Name of the dialect.

The word 'Hindōstān' is Persian by origin, and means literally 'the country of the Hindōs or Hindūs.' By it Indian writers connote the country between the Punjab on the west, Bengal on the east, the Himalayas on the north, and the Vindhyas on the south. It includes the

[1] The name is 'Hindōstānī', not 'Hindūstānī' as commonly written. All the early European writers spell it correctly with o, not u. The word rhymes in Persian and Urdū poetry with dōstān and bōstān and the vowel of the second syllable is consequently ō, not ū; even the word now more generally pronounced Hindū should correctly be Hindō and is often to be heard so pronounced in India (where the distinction between ū and ō, lost in Erān, still survives) by accurate reciters of Persian poetry. Hindō represents an earlier Hindau, being the modern Persian for the ancient Hendava, i.e., a dweller in the country of the hapta hindu (Sanskrit, sapta sindhu) or 'seven rivers' now called, with the omission of two (probably the Saraswatī and Drishadwatī or Ghaggar), the 'Panj-āb.' See Lyall, Sketch of the Hindustani Language, p. 1. Sir Charles Lyall has drawn my attention to the following verse by Sa'dī, Bōstān (ed. Graf, Muqaddimah 127):—

گل آورد سعدي سوي بوستان

بشوخي و فُلْفُل بهندوستان

'Sa'dī has shamelessly brought a rose to the garden and pepper to India,' i.e., he has brought coals to Newcastle.

ancient Madhyadēśa or Midland of Sanskrit geography, but extends far beyond it to the east.[1]

The word 'Hindōstānī' was coined under European influence, and means the language of Hindōstān. It thus connotes much more than it literally signifies, for, besides Hindōstānī, three other languages, Bihārī, Eastern Hindī, and Rājasthānī, are spoken in Hindōstān, a tract inhabited by about ninety millions of people, and as large as Germany, France, and Spain combined. Even in the tract in which Western Hindī is a vernacular, and of which Hindōstānī may be considered as the standard literary dialect, it is only spoken as a general vernacular in a comparatively small area in the north-western corner.

Early names.

The earliest writers on India (such as Terry and Fryer) called the current language of India 'Indostan.' In the early part of the eighteenth century writers alluded in Latin to the Lingua Indostanica, Hindustanica, or Hindostaṇica. The earliest English writers in India called the language 'Moors,' and it appears to be Gilchrist who about 1787 first coined the word 'Hindōstānī' or, as he spelt it, 'Hindoostanee."[2]

Where spoken.

Literary Hindōstānī, as distinct from vernacular Hindōstānī, is current, in various forms, as the language of polite society, and as a lingua franca over the whole of India proper. It is also a language of literature, both poetical and prose.

Number of speakers.

As most of those who possess the power of speaking it use it as a second language, in addition to their own vernaculars, it is impossible to give more than an approximate number of the speakers amongst whom it is current. It is true that, especially in the larger cities, the Urdū form of Hindōstānī is the only vernacular of educated Musalmāns, but no figures are available for distinguishing these from the large number of people who are bi-lingual. Only for the Dakhinī form of Hindōstānī are approximately correct figures available.

The following table shows, province by province, the best estimate which I can put together of the number of people who speak Literary Hindōstānī, in some form, or other, by preference. I exclude from it the speakers of Vernacular Hindōstānī who inhabit the Upper Doab and West Rohilkhand, and also all speakers of other dialects of Western Hindī such as Bundēlī, Kanaujī, Braj, or Bāngarū. The figures for Dakhinī are given as a total, the details being given later on, province by province, when we come to consider that form of speech more particularly. The figures for Assam, Bengal, the United Provinces, Rajputana, Central India, Ajmere-Merwara and Kashmir, are estimates based on returns supplied for the Survey. The others are based on the Census figures for 1891, after making the necessary adjustments.

In Bombay, I have taken the Hindōstānī of Gujarat and Sindh as Literary Hindōstānī, and that of the rest of the presidency as Dakhinī.

---

[1] The eastern limit of the Madhyadēśa was what is now Allahabad.

[2] Fergusson in 1773 published a Dictionary of the Hindostan Language. For further particulars on this subject see the Bibliography, ante.

Table showing the estimated number of speakers of Literary Hindōstānī in the various Provinces of India.

Province.		Estimated number of speakers.
Assam		32,290
Bengal		1,828,372
Berar		4,000
Bombay—
Gujarat	101,191
Sindh	18,009
		119,200
Burma		83,694[1]
Central Provinces		80,256
Panjab		1,329,801
United Provinces		3,859,291
Baroda		11,026
Mysore		25,534
Rajputana, Central India, and Ajmere-Merwara		322,000
Kashmir		800
Add figures for Dakhinī		3,654,172
TOTAL		11,350,436

Origin of the dialect.

As already stated, Literary Hindōstānī is based on the vernacular Hindōstānī spoken in the Upper Doab and in Western Rohilkhand. It grew up as a lingua franca in the polyglot bazaar attached to the Delhi court, and was carried everywhere in India by the lieutenants of the Mughul Empire. Since then its seat has been secure. It has been adopted as the language which every follower of Islām (the religion of the Emperors) speaks if he can, and its simple grammar and enormous vocabulary have rendered it able to fill the need which has always been felt in such a polyglot tract as India for a lingua franca. It has also received, in at least two of its forms, considerable literary cultivation.[2]

Urdū.

It has several recognised varieties, amongst which may be mentioned Urdū, Rēkhta, Dakhinī, and Hindī. Urdū is that form of Hindōstānī which is written in the Persian character, and which makes a free use of Persian (including Arabic) words in its vocabulary. The name is said to be derived from the Urdū-e mu'alla or royal military bazaar outside the Delhi palace. It is spoken chiefly in the towns of Western Hindostan, by Musalmāns and by Hindūs who have fallen under the influence of Persian culture. Persian vocables are, it is true, employed in every form of Hindōstānī. Such have been admitted to full citizenship even in the rustic dialects, or in the elegant Hindī of modern writers like Harishchandra of Benares. To object to their use would be affected purism, just as would be the avoidance of the use of all words of Latin derivation in English. But in what is known as High Urdū the use of Persian words is carried to almost incredible extremes. In writings of this class we find whole sentences in which the only Indian thing is the grammar, and with nothing but Persian words from beginning to end. It is curious, however, that this extreme Persianisation of Hindōstānī is not, as Sir Charles Lyall rightly points out, the work of conquerors ignorant of the tongue of the people. On the contrary, the Urdū language took its rise in the efforts of the ever pliable Hindū to assimilate the language of his rulers. Its authors were Kāyasths and Khatrīs employed in the administration and acquainted with Persian, not Persians or Persianised Turks, who for many centuries used only their own language for literary purposes.[1] To these is due the idea of employing the Persian character for their vernacular speech, and the consequent preference for words to which that character is native. 'Persian is now no foreign idiom in India, and though its excessive use is repugnant to good taste, it would be a foolish purism and a political mistake to attempt (as some have attempted) to eliminate it from the Hindū literature of the day.' I have made this quotation from Sir Charles Lyall's work, in order to show what an accomplished scholar has to say on one side of a much debated question. That the general principle which he has enunciated is the correct one I think no one will dispute. Once a word has become domesticated in Hindōstānī no one has any right to object to its use whatever its origin may be, and opinions will only differ as to what words have received the right of citizenship and what have not. This, after all, is a question of style, and in Hindōstānī, as in English, there are styles and styles. For myself, I far prefer the Hindōstānī from which words whose citizenship is in any way doubtful are excluded, but that, I freely admit, is a matter of taste.

[1] Most of these are probably speakers of Dakhinī, but no certain information is available.

[2] It will be noticed that this account of Hindōstānī and its origin differs widely from that which has been given hitherto by most authors (including the present writer), which was based on Mīr Amman's preface to the 'Bāgh o Bahār.' According to him Urdū was a mongrel mixture of the languages of the various tribes who flocked to the Delhi bazaar. The explanation given above was first put forward by Sir Charles Lyall in the year 1880, and the Linguistic Survey has shown the entire correctness of his view. Hindōstānī is simply the vernacular of the Upper Doab and Western Rohilkhand, on which a certain amount of literary polish has been bestowed, and from which a few rustic idioms have been excluded.

Rēkhta.

Rēkhta (i.e. 'scattered' or 'crumbled') is the form which Urdū takes when used for poetry. The name is derived from the manner in which Persian words are 'scattered' through it. When poems are written in the special dialect used by women, which has a vocabulary of its own, it is known as Rēkhtī.[2]

Dakhinī.

Dakhinī[3] is the form of Hindōstānī used by Musalmāns in the Deccan. Like Urdū it is written in the Persian character, but is much more free from Persianisation. It uses grammatical forms (such as

[1] English is being introduced into Bengali in the same way by English-knowing Babus. When these gentlemen talk amongst themselves in Bengali, sometimes every second word is English. Once in Monghyr I overheard one Babu say to another 'ē dēśēr climate constitutionēr janya ati healthy.' A native horse-doctor once said to me about a dog licking his wound, 'Kutta-ka-saliva bahut antiseptic hai', and Mr. Grahame Bailey has heard one Panjābī dentist say to another 'continually excavate na karō.'

[2] It is hardly necessary to point out that much of the preceding account of Urdū is based on Sir Charles Lyall's 'Sketch of the Hindustani Language.'

[3] Dakhinī is separately described on pp. 58 and ff.

mērē-kō for mujh-kō) which are common in rustic parts of Northern India, but which are not found in the literary dialect, and in the Southern Deccan it does not use the agent case with nē before transitive verbs in the past tense, which is a characteristic feature of all the dialects of Western Hindostan.

Hindī.

The word 'Hindī' is used in several different meanings. It is a Persian, not an Indian word, and properly signifies a native of India, as distinguished from a 'Hindū' or non-Musalmān Indian. Thus Amīr Khusrau says, 'whatever live Hindū fell into the King's hands was pounded to death under the feet of elephants. The Musalmāns who were Hindīs had their lives spared.' In this sense (and in this way it is still used by natives) Bengali and Marāṭhī are as much Hindī as the language of the Doab. On the other hand, Europeans use the word in two mutually contradictory senses, viz. sometimes to indicate the Sanskritised, or at least the non-Persianised, form of Hindōstānī, which is employed as a literary form of speech by Hindūs, and which is usually written in the Nāgarī character: and sometimes, loosely, to indicate all the rural dialects spoken between Bengal proper and the Panjab. In the present pages, I use it only in the former sense. This Hindī, therefore, or, as it is sometimes called, 'High Hindī', is the prose literary language of those Hindūs of Upper India who do not employ Urdū. It is of modern origin, having been introduced under English influence at the commencement of the last century. Up till then, when a Hindū wrote prose and did not use Urdū, he wrote in his own local dialect, Awadhī, Bundēlī, Braj Bhākhā, or what not. Lallū Lāl, under the inspiration of Dr. Gilchrist, changed all this by writing the well-known Prēm Sāgar, a work which was, so far as the prose portions went, practically written in Urdū, with Indo-Aryan words substituted wherever a writer in that form of speech would use Persian ones. It was thus an automatic reversion to the actual vernacular of the Upper Doab. The course of this novel experiment was successful from the start. The subject of the first book written in it attracted the attention of all good Hindūs, and the author's style, musical and rhythmical as the Arabic saj', pleased their ears. Then, the language fulfilled a want. It gave a lingua franca to the Hindūs. It enabled men of widely different provinces to converse with each other without having recourse to the (to them) unclean words of the Musalmāns. It was easily intelligible everywhere, for its grammar was that of the language which every Hindū had to use in his business relations with Government officials, and its vocabulary was the common property of all the Sanskritic languages of Northern India. Moreover, very little prose, excepting commentaries and the like, had been written in any modern Indian vernacular before. Literature had almost entirely confined itself to verse. Hence the language of the Prēm Sāgar became, naturally enough, the standard of Hindū prose all over Hindostan, from Bengal to the Panjab, and has held its place as such to the present day. Now-a-days no Hindū of Upper India dreams of writing in any language but Hindī or Urdū when he is writing prose; but when he takes to verse, he at once adopts one of the old national dialects, such as the Awadhī of Tulsī Dās or the Braj Bhākhā of the blind bard of Agra. Only of very late years have attempts been made to write poems in Hindī, with, in the opinion of the present writer, but moderate success. Since Lallū Lāl's time Hindī has developed for itself certain rules of style which differentiate it from Urdū, the principal ones relating to the order of words, which is much less free than in that form of Hindōstānī. It has also, of late years, fallen under the fatal spell of Sanskrit, and is showing signs of becoming in the hands of Paṇḍits and under the encouragement of some European writers who have learned Hindī through Sanskrit, as debased as literary Bengali, without the same excuse. Hindī has so copious a vocabulary of its own, a vocabulary rooted in the very beings of the sturdy peasantry upon whose language it is based, that nine-tenths of the Sanskrit words which one meets in most modern Hindī books are useless and unintelligible excrescences. The employment of Sanskrit words is supposed to add dignity to the style. One might as well say that a graceful girl of eighteen gained in dignity by masquerading in the furbelows of her great-grandmother. Some enlightened native scholars are struggling hard, without displaying an affected purism, against this too easily acquired infection, and we may hope that their efforts will meet with the encouragement which they deserve.

Definition of 'Hindōstānī,' 'Urdū' and 'Hindī.'

We may now define the three main varieties of Hindōstānī as follows :—Hindōstānī is primarily the language of the Upper Gangetic Doab, and is also the lingua franca of India, capable of being written in both Persian and Dēva-nāgarī characters, and without purism, avoiding alike the excessive use of either Persian or Sanskrit words when employed for literature. The name 'Urdū' can then be confined to that special variety of Hindōstānī in which Persian words are of frequent occurrence, and which hence can only be written in the Persian character, and, similarly, 'Hindī' can be confined to the form of Hindōstānī in which Sanskrit words abound, and which hence can only be written in the Dēva-nāgarī character. These are the definitions which were proposed by the late Mr. Growse, and they have the advantage of being intelligible, while at the same time they do not overlap. Hitherto, all the three words have been very loosely employed. Finally, I use 'Eastern Hindī' to connote the group of intermediate dialects of which Awadhī is the chief, and 'Western Hindī' to connote the group of dialects of which Braj Bhākhā and Hindōstānī (in its different phases) are the best known.

Literature.

As a literary language, the earliest specimens of Hindōstānī are in Urdū, or rather Rēkhta, for they were poetical works. Its cultivation began in the Deccan at the end of the 16th century, and it received a definite standard of form a hundred years later, principally at the hand of Walī of Aurangabad, commonly called 'the Father of Rēkhta.' The example of Walī was quickly followed at Delhi, where a school of poets took its rise, of which the most brilliant members were Saudā (d. 1780, the author of the famous satires) and Mīr Taqī (d. 1810). Another school (almost equally celebrated) arose in Lucknow during the troubled time at Delhi in the middle of the 18th century. The great difference between the poetry of Urdū and that written in the various dialects of Eastern or Western Hindī lies in the system of prosody. In the former the prosody is that of the Persian language, while in the latter it is the altogether opposed indigenous system of India. Moreover, the former is entirely based on Persian models of composition, which are quite different from the older works from which the native literature took its origin. Urdū prose came into existence, as a literary medium, at the beginning of the last century in Calcutta. Like Hindī prose it was due to English influence, and to the need of text-books in both forms of Hindōstānī for the College of Fort William. The Bāgh o Bahār of Mīr Amman

Ḵẖirad Afrōz of Ḥafīẓu'd-dīn Aḥmad are familiar examples of the earlier of rks in Urdū, as the already mentioned Prēm Sāgar written by Lallū Lāl is an of those in Hindī. Since then both Urdū and Hindī prose have had a prosper- se, and it is unnecessary to dwell upon the copious literature which has poured press during the past century. The late Sir Sayyid Aḥmad Bahādur is probably eminent among deceased writers of Urdū prose, while in Hindī the late Harish- of Benares, by universal consent, holds the first place. Hindī, of course, has no literature. Urdū poetry continues to flourish.

ū and Hindī, as representing, each, one of the two great religious systems of India, have their headquarters wide apart. Two rival cities claim to be the true headquarters of Urdū, viz. Delhi and . The styles of the writers of these two cities, and of their respective followers, siderable points of difference. Putting a few matters of idiom, such as the use finitive as a Gerundive, or of certain verbs as transitive or intransitive, to one nain point of difference is that Lucknow Urdū is much more Persianised than of Delhi. Lucknow writers delight in concocting sentences which, except for ıry verb at the end, are throughout Persian in construction and vocabulary. dū, on the other hand, is more genuinely Indian. Writers are not afraid to word because it is of home growth. This avoidance of pedantry had been dvocated by the new school of Delhi writers which has come to the front in the y years of the nineteenth century, and of whom, Naẕīr Aḥmad, the author of cellent novels, is the most illustrious example. The Urdū of his earlier works ably clear and simple, and his writings exhibit both sturdy common-sense and preciation of humour. Other authors of this school who may be mentioned are ḥammad Ḥusain Āzād (said by some to compose the purest Urdū prose that written), Ratan Nāth Sarsẖār, and 'Abdu'l-Ḥalīm Sẖarar. All these writers, n prose or verse, are apostles of naturalness as opposed to the artificial thought n of the Lucknow school.

Writers of Urdū and Hindī.

ī, also, has two schools of writers—that of Agra, and that of Benares. The ose of Benares is as artificial as literary Bengali. It stands as a literary Lucknow Urdū, in avoiding the use of simple language as much as possible fining its vocabulary almost entirely to words borrowed directly from Sanskrit. dian words are eschewed as strictly as those of Persian origin. The school of he other hand, is not only much more free from Sanskritisms, but admits with e liberality foreign words which have achieved citizenship in the general of India.

nnexion with this, it may here again be mentioned that Literary Hindōstānī is not only founded on a vernacular dialect of Western Hindī, but is still in living connexion with it. Different e not hesitated to employ in their works idioms borrowed from their own s, and many of these have won their way into what is the standard form of ence the literary Hindōstānī of the time of Gilchrist is very different from oyed at the present day. Idioms have fallen into disuse, and new idioms have luced, so that works like the Tōtā Kahānī or the Bāgẖ o Bahār are very unsafe guides as to what is elegant modern Urdū. Many European writers have fought against this change, and have not hesitated to condemn new idioms as 'ungrammatical' or as solecisms. They forget that the works which they consider to be classics were really first attempts at writing Hindōstānī prose, and that a hundred years of practice, with an inexhaustible well of racy native idiom at hand from which to draw at will, has greatly improved a form of speech originally possessed of great capabilities. Mr. Platts was, I believe, the first to attack this too conservative method of teaching a language,—not as it is, but as the teacher thinks it ought to be. He rightly insisted that grammars written by Europeans, however scholarly, cannot be considered as the ultimate court of appeal. The jus et norma loquendi of the best writers of the time is the only criterion. The language cannot be made to fit the grammars, but the grammars must be made to fit the language.[1] It is a false purism which condemns the use of an apt expression because, although born of the soil, it has not been used by former writers.[2]

Standards of Literary Hindōstānī.

Written character.

The particular alphabet in which Hindōstānī is written is usually a matter of religion. Musalmāns commonly employ the Persian alphabet with a few additional signs, and most Hindūs the Dēva-nāgarī or the Kaithī. Simple Hindōstānī which is neither highly Persianised nor highly Sanskritised can be, and often is, written in both alphabets. It is quite common to find a book which appeals to a large circle of readers issued in two editions, one in the Persian character for Musalmāns, and one in the Dēva-nāgarī character for Hindūs. In this respect it should be noted that many educated Hindūs, and especially Kāyasths, are equally familiar with both alphabets.

When Hindōstānī is highly Persianised, and takes the form of Urdū, the words are often so foreign in sound that they cannot be conveniently represented in the Dēva-nāgarī character. Hence Urdū is always written in the Persian character. Similarly highly Sanskritised Hindī does not lend itself to the Persian character and always appears in Dēva-nāgarī. Amongst fanatics who ought to know better, but do not wish to do so, this question of characters has unfortunately become a sort of religious shibboleth. True Hindōstānī can be written with ease in either character, and Musalmāns find it easiest to read it in the Persian and most Hindūs in the Dēva-nāgarī. But, owing to the fact that the extreme varieties of Hindōstānī on each side can only each be written in one character, these fanatics have confused alphabet with language. They say, because a thing is written in Dēva-nāgarī therefore it is Hindī, the language of Hindūs, and because a thing is written in the Persian character therefore it is Urdū, the language of Musalmāns. Nothing could be further from the truth. The written character does not make a language. If it did, when we write Hindōstānī in English characters, we should have to say it was the English language, and not Hindōstānī; but not even

[1] As examples of this borrowing from the vernacular dialects, I may cite the use of un-nē, instead of us-nē, to mean 'by him.' Several grammarians have exercised their ingenuity over it, and some have condemned it as wrong. It is simply the very common vernacular unnē or unī, which is still retained in Dakhinī. In the literary language the n has been doubled under the influence of false analogy. Another example is the employment of kē in the sense of the dative instead of kō. All over northern India kē is frequently used for the dative, and quite properly so. As we go east it is the rule, and we never hear kō. All grammarians except Mr. Platts have tried to explain this kē as an oblique form of kā. In phrases like us-kē sakht chōṭ lagī hai, it is, as Mr. Platts points out, a dative pure and simple.

[2] Compare the remarks of W. Archer quoted at the head of this section.

our fanatics would go so far as that, although that is where their arguments would logically lead them. It is necessary to mention this because the policy regarding the alphabets which are officially recognised by some of the Indian Governments has been much misrepresented. When orders were issued enjoining or permitting in certain cases the use of the Dēva-nāgarī character for official documents, a cry was raised, which misled many well-meaning Muhammadans, that the Hindī language was being introduced into our courts. Government was quite aware that Sanskritised Hindī was just as unintelligible to the masses as Persianised Urdū, and took no steps towards introducing either. All that it directed was that, without changing the language, official documents should be written in characters which would be most decipherable to those who had to read them.[1]

It is unnecessary to describe the Dēva-nāgarī and Kaithī alphabets. A full account of them will be found on pp. 7 and ff. of Vol. V, Pt. II of this Survey. Nor is it required to describe the Persian Alphabet. The student will find all that he needs on this point in any Hindōstānī grammar. Suffice it to say that the signs employed for sounds peculiar to Indian languages, and not found in Persian, are ٹ ṭ, ٹھ ṭh, ڈ ḍ, ڈھ ḍh, ڑ ṛ and ڑھ ṛh. Instead of the four dots written over each of these letters we often find a small ṭōē. Thus ٹ , ٹھ , ڈ , ڈھ , ڑ , ڑھ .

Hindōstānī Grammar.

Hindōstānī is so well-known a language that it would be waste of space to give more than the merest sketch of its grammar. I shall, however, deal at some length with what are known to Indian grammarians as the prayōgas, or 'constructions' of a verb with its subject and its object.

The Prayōgas and their origin.

Hindōstānī, like every Aryan language of India, is derived from an ancient Indian dialect not unlike the old Sanskrit which we meet in the Vedic hymns. This ancient dialect became changed in the course of centuries, and we have specimens of it in various stages from about 250 B.C. down to, say, 1000 A.D. The modern vernaculars may be said to have become established on their present basis at about the latter date.

We may take Sanskrit grammar as illustrating in its main features the grammar of the ancient Indian dialect from which Hindōstānī is sprung. When we examine this grammar we find that the verb is supplied with a very complete and somewhat complicated array of tenses. The present and one form of the future tense were fairly simple. They have survived, in an abraded form, down to the present day, although the representative of the future is now-a-days excluded from literary Hindōstānī. With the past tenses it was different. Besides an Imperfect the ancient Indian dialect had three tenses which expressed past time, a perfect, and two aorists. It had also a past parti-

[1] The average native makes a business of deciphering any written document. He has first to read it,—that is the first stage,—and then he has to grasp its meaning,—that is the second, and subsequent stage. The two stages are, with the uneducated, seldom concurrent. This is illustrated by the oft repeated phrase, 'when he had read and understood' such and such a communication. Similarly the word for reading a letter to oneself is not paṛhnā, but paṛh-lēnā, to read and take. It may be added that in some parts of India, the local character is employed for writing Urdū. For instance the Musalmāns of Orissa use the Oṛiyā character for it.

ciple, which was always intransitive, that is to say, in the case of transitive verbs, it took a passive meaning. Thus, the past participle of the intransitive verb 'to go' was 'gone,' but that of the transitive verb 'kill,' was not 'having killed,' but was, passively, 'killed.' In the old Indian dialect, as in Sanskrit, this past participle was often used as a past tense, without employing any auxiliary verb. When its speakers wished to say 'he went,' they often said 'he gone,' and when they wished to say 'I killed him,' they often said 'he killed by me,' in which it will be seen that the participle still retains its passive sense. But there is another way of using the past participle of a neuter verb,—i.e., impersonally. When a speaker of the old Indian dialect wished to say 'he went,' he as often as not (instead of saying 'he gone') said 'it (is) gone by him.'[1]

Now the true past tenses of the ancient Indian dialect had a very complicated conjugation. There were two ways of forming the perfect, and regarding the more commonly used form, even Sanskrit grammarians were not agreed as to its rules. The two aorists were still more difficult to conjugate correctly. The formation of the past participle is on the other hand simple enough. As the language developed from the ancient Indian dialect it, according to a well-known law, proceeded along the line of least resistance, and gradually abandoned the whole complicated array of past tenses and adhered solely to the employment of the past participle to express the idea connoted by a past tense. In doing so it retained all the methods of employing the past participle which existed in the old Indian vernacular, and also extended them by adding one of its own. When Hindōstānī, therefore, wishes to express the idea of 'he went,' it says either,—

1. (Actively), 'he gone,' wōh chalā (Sanskrit, sa chalitaḥ)

or

2. (Impersonally) 'by him it (is) gone,' us-nē chalā[2]
(Sanskrit, tēna chalitam)

Similarly, if it wishes to express the idea of 'I killed him,' it says either,—

3. (Passively), 'by me he (was) killed,' maĩ-nē wōh mārā[3]
(Sanskrit, mayā sa māritaḥ)

or

4. (Impersonally) 'by me with reference to him it was killed (or killing was done),' maĩ-nē us-kō mārā. (The Sanskrit would be mayā tasya-kṛitē māritam, but the impersonal construction with transitive verbs was not employed in Sanskrit).

The fourth is apparently a development of the modern vernacular, based on the analogy of the second—at least there is no evidence that it existed in the ancient Indian vernacular from which Hindōstānī is descended.

We thus see that there are three methods of employment of the past participle to express the past tense. Of these, one, the active one, is confined in Hindōstānī to intransitive verbs, one, the passive one, is confined to transitive verbs, and one, the impersonal one, is employed with both intransitive and transitive verbs, although literary Hindōstānī prohibits its employment with the former.

[1] It will be remembered that intransitive verbs in Latin can also be similarly employed in two ways. For 'I play,' we may say either, actively, ludo, I play, or, impersonally, luditur a me, it is played by me.

[2] This second impersonal form of a neuter verb is excluded from literary Hindōstānī, but it occurs in vernacular dialects.

[3] I do not pretend that this particular sentence is idiomatic Hindōstānī, but it illustrates what I want to say, and the construction would, in certain circumstances, be correct.

our fanatics would go so far as that, although that is where their arguments would logically lead them. It is necessary to mention this because the policy regarding the alphabets which are officially recognised by some of the Indian Governments has been much misrepresented. When orders were issued enjoining or permitting in certain cases the use of the Dēva-nāgarī character for official documents, a cry was raised, which misled many well-meaning Muhammadans, that the Hindī language was being introduced into our courts. Government was quite aware that Sanskritised Hindī was just as unintelligible to the masses as Persianised Urdū, and took no steps towards introducing either. All that it directed was that, without changing the language, official documents should be written in characters which would be most decipherable to those who had to read them.[1]

It is unnecessary to describe the Dēva-nāgarī and Kaithī alphabets. A full account of them will be found on pp. 7 and ff. of Vol. V, Pt. II of this Survey. Nor is it required to describe the Persian Alphabet. The student will find all that he needs on this point in any Hindōstānī grammar. Suffice it to say that the signs employed for sounds peculiar to Indian languages, and not found in Persian, are ٹ ṭ, ٹھ ṭh, ڈ ḍ, ڈھ ḍh, ڑ ṛ and ڑھ ṛh. Instead of the four dots written over each of these letters we often find a small ṭōē. Thus ٹ , ٹھ , ڈ , ڈھ , ڑ , ڑھ .

Hindōstānī Grammar.

Hindōstānī is so well-known a language that it would be waste of space to give more than the merest sketch of its grammar. I shall, however, deal at some length with what are known to Indian grammarians as the prayōgas, or 'constructions' of a verb with its subject and its object.

The Prayōgas and their origin.

Hindōstānī, like every Aryan language of India, is derived from an ancient Indian dialect not unlike the old Sanskrit which we meet in the Vedic hymns. This ancient dialect became changed in the course of centuries, and we have specimens of it in various stages from about 250 B.C. down to, say, 1000 A.D. The modern vernaculars may be said to have become established on their present basis at about the latter date.

We may take Sanskrit grammar as illustrating in its main features the grammar of the ancient Indian dialect from which Hindōstānī is sprung. When we examine this grammar we find that the verb is supplied with a very complete and somewhat complicated array of tenses. The present and one form of the future tense were fairly simple. They have survived, in an abraded form, down to the present day, although the representative of the future is now-a-days excluded from literary Hindōstānī. With the past tenses it was different. Besides an Imperfect the ancient Indian dialect had three tenses which expressed past time, a perfect, and two aorists. It had also a past parti-

[1] The average native makes a business of deciphering any written document. He has first to read it,—that is the first stage,—and then he has to grasp its meaning,—that is the second, and subsequent stage. The two stages are, with the uneducated, seldom concurrent. This is illustrated by the oft repeated phrase, 'when he had read and understood' such and such a communication. Similarly the word for reading a letter to oneself is not paṛhnā, but paṛh-lēnā, to read and take. It may be added that in some parts of India, the local character is employed for writing Urdū. For instance the Musalmāns of Orissa use the Oṛiyā character for it.

ciple, which was always intransitive, that is to say, in the case of transitive verbs, it took a passive meaning. Thus, the past participle of the intransitive verb 'to go' was 'gone,' but that of the transitive verb 'kill,' was not 'having killed,' but was, passively, 'killed.' In the old Indian dialect, as in Sanskrit, this past participle was often used as a past tense, without employing any auxiliary verb. When its speakers wished to say 'he went,' they often said 'he gone,' and when they wished to say 'I killed him,' they often said 'he killed by me,' in which it will be seen that the participle still retains its passive sense. But there is another way of using the past participle of a neuter verb,—i.e., impersonally. When a speaker of the old Indian dialect wished to say 'he went,' he as often as not (instead of saying 'he gone') said 'it (is) gone by him.'[1]

Now the true past tenses of the ancient Indian dialect had a very complicated conjugation. There were two ways of forming the perfect, and regarding the more commonly used form, even Sanskrit grammarians were not agreed as to its rules. The two aorists were still more difficult to conjugate correctly. The formation of the past participle is on the other hand simple enough. As the language developed from the ancient Indian dialect it, according to a well-known law, proceeded along the line of least resistance, and gradually abandoned the whole complicated array of past tenses and adhered solely to the employment of the past participle to express the idea connoted by a past tense. In doing so it retained all the methods of employing the past participle which existed in the old Indian vernacular, and also extended them by adding one of its own. When Hindōstānī, therefore, wishes to express the idea of 'he went,' it says either,—

1. (Actively), 'he gone,' wōh chalā (Sanskrit, sa chalitaḥ)

or

2. (Impersonally) 'by him it (is) gone,' us-nē chalā[2]
(Sanskrit, tēna chalitam)

Similarly, if it wishes to express the idea of 'I killed him,' it says either,—

3. (Passively), 'by me he (was) killed,' maĩ-nē wōh mārā[3]
(Sanskrit, mayā sa māritaḥ)

or

4. (Impersonally) 'by me with reference to him it was killed (or killing was done),' maĩ-nē us-kō mārā. (The Sanskrit would be mayā tasya-kṛitē māritam, but the impersonal construction with transitive verbs was not employed in Sanskrit).

The fourth is apparently a development of the modern vernacular, based on the analogy of the second—at least there is no evidence that it existed in the ancient Indian vernacular from which Hindōstānī is descended.

We thus see that there are three methods of employment of the past participle to express the past tense. Of these, one, the active one, is confined in Hindōstānī to intransitive verbs, one, the passive one, is confined to transitive verbs, and one, the impersonal one, is employed with both intransitive and transitive verbs, although literary Hindōstānī prohibits its employment with the former.

[1] It will be remembered that intransitive verbs in Latin can also be similarly employed in two ways. For 'I play,' we may say either, actively, ludo, I play, or, impersonally, luditur a me, it is played by me.

[2] This second impersonal form of a neuter verb is excluded from literary Hindōstānī, but it occurs in vernacular dialects.

[3] I do not pretend that this particular sentence is idiomatic Hindōstānī, but it illustrates what I want to say, and the construction would, in certain circumstances, be correct.

These three constructions (or prayōgas) are named as follows by Indian grammarians—

(1) The active construction is called the Kartari prayōga.
(2) The passive „ „ „ Karmaṇi „
(3) The impersonal „ „ „ Bhāvē „

One word more. The past participle is an adjective, and is therefore liable to change for gender.

In the Active construction it naturally agrees with the subject. If a man is gone, we say mard chalā, but if a woman is gone, we say 'aurat chalī.

In the Passive construction the participle must agree in gender with what would be, in English, the object. For instance, the phrase 'the woman struck a horse' must be expressed passively by 'by the woman a horse (was) struck,' in which it is evident that the participle 'struck' must agree with 'horse,' and not with 'the woman,'—thus 'aurat-nē ghoṛā mārā. But, 'the woman struck a mare' would be 'aurat-nē ghōṛī mārī, in which mārī, struck, is put in the feminine to agree with 'mare.'

In the impersonal construction, the participle should, properly speaking, be in the neuter, but that distinction of gender no longer exists in literary Hindōstānī, the masculine being at the present day always substituted for it. Hence the participle is always in the masculine. Thus 'the woman struck the horse' is 'by the woman with reference to the horse it was struck (or striking was done),' 'aurat-nē ghōṛē-kō mārā; and 'the woman struck the mare' is 'by the woman with reference to the mare striking was done,' 'aurat-nē ghōṛī-kō mārā.

It is of great importance that this system of construction should be thoroughly mastered. Otherwise it will not be easy to understand the interlinear translations of the specimens which follow, in which all three constructions are literally translated whenever they occur.

Urdū and Hindī Grammar compared.

There is no difference of importance between the declensions and conjugations used in Urdū and Hindī, respectively. Urdū often borrows Persian constructions, such as the iẓāfat, but these are borrowings and nothing more. Besides the difference of vocabulary, there is, however, an important point of difference in the idiom of the two forms of Hindōstānī. This consists in the order of words. In Hindī prose, which follows the almost universal rule of all Indo-Aryan dialects, the order of words is fixed, and can only be altered for the sake of emphasis. Except when the order is deliberately changed to lay stress on any particular word, it is invariably,—first, the introductory words of the sentence, such as conjunctions and the like; next, the subject; next, the indirect object with its appurtenances; then, the direct object with its appurtenances; and, last of all, the verb. Adjectives and genitives precede the words they qualify. For instance, the sentence which in English would run,—'I give John's good book to you' would run in Hindī prose,—'I you-to John's good book give.' In Urdū, on the contrary, the influence of Persian and of Semitic languages has greatly relaxed this rule. The Persian rule of order, or even the Semitic one (in which the verb precedes the subject), is often followed, and, especially, the verb is frequently moved from the end to the middle of the sentence. So important is this point of the order of words in a sentence that Hindī scholars make it a test as to whether the language of a book is Hindī or Urdū, and in one notable case—the Kahānī thēṭh Hindī-mẽ̃, a work written by Inshā (see p. 35) in the last century—a book which does not contain a single Persian word from cover to cover is classed as Urdū because the writer ordered his sentences in the Persian fashion. He was a Musalmān, and could not release himself from the habit of using idioms which had been taught him by Maulavīs in his school-days.

Hindōstānī Vocabulary.

The Vocabulary of Hindōstānī falls under four heads, viz. :—

(1) pure Hindōstānī words;
(2) words borrowed from Sanskrit;
(3) words borrowed from Persian (including Arabic); and
(4) words borrowed from other sources.

The last group may be dismissed without notice, such words exist in every language. As regards the Persian (and Arabic) borrowings, they do not come from the old Eranian language of pre-Musalmān times (though that has also contributed a small quota), but from the Arabicised Persian of the Mughul conquerors. Thus, through Persian, the Indo-Aryan vernaculars have also received an important contribution of Arabic, and even some few Turkī, words. The influence of the Musalmān religion has opened another door for the entry of Arabic, and a few words have also been imported on the west coast from Arab traders. In the main, however, the Arabic element in all the Indian vernaculars, whether Aryan or not, came in with Persian, and as a part of that language. The pronunciation of the Persian words so imported is that of the Mughul times, and not the effeminate articulation of the land of the Lion and the Sun at the present day. The extent to which Persian has been assimilated varies greatly according to locality and to the religion of the speakers. Everywhere there are some few Persian words which have achieved full citizenship and are used by the most ignorant rustic, and we find every variation between this and the Urdū of a highly educated Muhammadan writer of Lucknow, who uses scarcely a single Indo-Aryan word except the verb at the end of his sentence. In all circumstances, however, it is the vocabulary and but rarely the syntax which is affected. Only in the Urdū of the Musalmāns do we find the Persian order of words in a sentence. There has been no other introduction of Persian construction, nor are the Arabic words inflected (except by purists) according to their own rules, but they have to conform to the grammatical system of their host.

Perso-Arabic element.

The words borrowed from Sanskrit take two forms, according to whether they are lifted straight out of the Sanskrit dictionary, spelling and all, or whether they are more or less mispronounced, and spelt according to the mispronunciation. Words of both classes are named Tatsamas or 'the same as "that" (i.e., Sanskrit),' and European scholars have named the corrupted Tatsamas of the second class semi-Tatsamas. This borrowing has been going on for centuries, but has been carried to excess during the last hundred years.

Sanskrit element.

Tatsamas.

The pure Hindōstānī words form the backbone of the language. They are derived from the ancient Indian dialect which I have already mentioned as akin to classical Sanskrit. This ancient language passed through various stages and ultimately became Hindōstānī, just as Latin passed through various stages and became Italian, French, etc. After the ancient Indian dialect had lost its pristine form, and before it finally became Hindōstānī, it passed through what is known as the Prakrit stage. If we borrow the terms of blood relationship, we may say that the ancient Indian dialect and classical Sanskrit were brothers; that Prakrit was the son of the ancient Indian dialect, and the nephew of Sanskrit; and that Hindōstānī is the grandson of the ancient Indian dialect, and the grand-nephew of Sanskrit. Words borrowed by Hindōstānī direct from Sanskrit are therefore grand-uncles of the genuine Hindōstānī words, descended through Prakrit from the ancient Indian dialect, although we often meet them side by side in the same sentence. Nay, we sometimes find a grand-uncle and his own grand-nephew on the same page.[1] These genuine Hindōstānī words are called, by native scholars, tadbhavas or 'Having "that" (i.e., Sanskrit, or, rather, its brother the ancient Indian dialect) for their origin.' We thus find that the Indian element of the vocabulary of Hindōstānī is made up of tadbhavas with a mixture, varying in amount, of tatsamas.

Tadbhavas.

To take examples, the modern vernacular word ājñā, a command, is a Tatsama loan-word borrowed direct from classical Sanskrit. Its semi-Tatsama form, which we meet in some languages, is āgyā, and one of its Tadbhava forms is the Hindī ān, derived immediately from the Prakrit āṇā. So also, rājā, a king, is a Tatsama, but rāy or rāo is a Tadbhava. Of course complete triplets or pairs of every word are not in use. Frequently only a Tatsama or a Tadbhava occurs by itself. Sometimes we even find the Tatsama and the Tadbhava forms of a word both in use, but each with a different meaning. Thus, there is a classical Sanskrit word vaṁśa, which means both 'family' and 'bamboo,' and connected with it we find in Hindī the semi-Tatsama bans, meaning 'family,' and the Tadbhava bā̃s, meaning 'a bamboo.'[2]

We thus see that for many hundred years classical Sanskrit has been exercising, and is still exercising, a potent influence on the vocabularies of Hindōstānī. It is only upon the vocabulary that its influence has been directly felt. The grammar shows little (if any) traces of it. This has continued steadily in the course of its development since the earliest times. The influence of Sanskrit may have retarded this development, and probably did so in some cases, but it never stopped it, and not one single Sanskrit grammatical form has been added to the living grammar of Hindōstānī in the way that Sanskrit words have been added to its vocabulary. Nay, more, all these borrowed Tatsamas are treated by Hindōstānī exactly as other borrowed foreign words are treated, and very rarely change their forms in the processes of grammatical accidence. For instance, ghōṛā, a horse, has an oblique form ghōṛē, because it is a Tadbhava, but rājā, a king, never changes in the oblique cases, because, and only because, it is a Tatsama. Now in all the modern Indo-Aryan vernaculars the verb must change its form in the processes of conjugation, while nouns are not necessarily changed in the course of declension. Hence Tatsamas are as a rule never treated as verbs. If it is found necessary to do so, it must be done with the help of another Tadbhava verb. For instance, the word darśan, seeing, is a Tatsama, and if we wish to use it in the phrase 'he sees,'

[1] In Bengali, in which the state of affairs is exactly similar, I have seen in the narrative part of a novel the tatsama word dīpa-śalākā, and in the very next line, in which one of the characters uses colloquial language, the corresponding tadbhava, diyā-salāī, a match.

[2] Tatsamas and Tadbhavas occur also in European languages. Thus, 'lapsus' in 'lapsus calami' is a Tatsama, and 'lapse' is a semi-Tatsama, both meaning 'a falling,' while 'lap' is the Tadbhava form of the word, with the different meaning of 'the hanging part of a garment.' Similarly 'fragile' and 'redemption' are semi-Tatsamas, while 'frail' and 'ransom' are the corresponding Tadbhavas.

we cannot say darśanē, but must employ the periphrasis darśan karē, he does seeing. On the other hand, in all the modern vernaculars nouns need not be declined synthetically. Borrowed nouns can always be declined analytically. Hence Tatsama nouns (which are necessarily declined analytically) are common, and, in the high literary styles of all the vernaculars, very common. Thus, although there are sporadic exceptions to the broad rule, it may be laid down as a universal law that Indo-Aryan vernacular nouns may be either Tatsamas (including semi-Tatsamas) or Tadbhavas, but that Indo-Aryan vernacular verbs must be Tadbhavas.

Evil results of excessive employment of Tatsamas.

During the last century, the introduction of printing and the spread of education has, in the case of some modern Indo-Aryan languages, introduced a fashion of using Tatsamas in comparison with which the wildest Johnsonese may almost be considered to be a specimen of pure Saxon English. It has been proved, for instance, by actual counting that in a modern Bengali work 88 per cent. of the words used were pure Sanskrit, every one of which was unnecessary and could have been represented by a vocable of true home growth. In such cases the result has been most lamentable. The vernacular has been split into two sections—the tongue which is understanded of the people, and the literary dialect, known only through the press, and not intelligible to those who do not know Sanskrit.[1] Literature has thus been divorced from the great mass of the population, and to the literary classes this is a matter of small moment, for 'this people, who knoweth not the law, are cursed.'

Although Bengali displays the greatest weakness in this respect, and has lost all power of ever developing a vigorous literature, racy of the soil, until some great genius rises and sweeps away the enchantment under which it labours, other Indian vernaculars, especially Hindī, show signs of falling under the same malignant spell. The centre of Hindī literature is naturally Benares, and Benares is in the hands of the Sanskritists. There is no necessity, as may have existed in the case of Bengali, for Hindī to have recourse to the classical tongue. In themselves, without any extraneous help whatever, the dialects from which it is sprung are, and for five hundred years have been, capable of expressing with crystal clearness any idea which the mind of man can conceive. It has an enormous native vocabulary, and a complete apparatus for the expression of abstract terms. Its old literature contains some of the highest flights of poetry and some of the most eloquent expressions of religious devotion which have found their birth in Asia. Treatises on philosophy and on rhetoric are found in it, in which the subject is handled with all the subtilty of the great Sanskrit writers, and this with hardly the use of a Sanskrit word. Yet in spite of Hindī possessing such a vocabulary and a power of expression scarcely inferior to that of English, it has become the fashion of late years to write books, not to be read by the millions of Upper India, but to display the author's learning to a comparatively small circle of Sanskrit-knowing scholars. Unfortunately, the most powerful English influence has during this period been on the side of the Sanskritists. This Sanskritised Hindī has been largely used by missionaries, and the translations of the Bible have been made into it. The few native writers who have stood up for the use of Hindī undefiled have had small success in the face of so potent an example of misguided efforts. Arguments may be brought forward in favour of using classical Sanskrit words for expressing technical terms in science and art, and I am willing to admit their truth. I am not one of those who (to quote a well-known example) prefer 'the unthroughforcesomeness of stuff' to 'the impenetrability of matter,' but there the borrowing from the parent language should stop. There is still time to save Hindī from the fate of Bengali, if only a lead is taken by writers of acknowledged repute, and much can be done in this direction by the use of a wise discretion on the part of the educational authorities of the provinces immediately concerned.

[1] The newly appointed minister to a Scotch parish had made a round of visits to his people. "He's a rale fine edicated man, the new meenister," said an enthusiastic wife. "Ay, he's a' that," returned the husband. "Ye dinna ken the meaning o' the hauf o' the words he uses."—St. James's Gazette.

Evil results of excessive Persianization.

Very similar remarks apply, mutatis mutandis, to that form of Urdū which is overloaded with Persian words. The Hindōstānī of Musalmāns will always differ in its vocabulary from that of Hindūs, but this is no reason for overloading a naturally facile and elegant form of speech with hundreds of exotic expressions which are unintelligible to nine-tenths of the author's co-religionists. Urdū can be simple and Urdū can be pedantic. The simple belongs to India, the pedantic is an imitation of the language of a foreign country. There should be no hesitation in the choice made by a patriotic Indian Musalmān.

Urdū and Hindī spelling.

After the foregoing general remarks it will suffice to give the annexed brief summary of the main heads of Hindōstānī grammar. It will be remarked that in Urdū the so-called imperfect ᵃ, which has been carefully recorded in all the vernacular specimens in the Dēva-nāgarī character, is omitted. This is the usual method of writing Urdū. For instance, the word meaning 'to see' would be देखना dēkhᵃnā in Hindī, but دیکھنا dēkhnā in Urdū. This principle is followed in all the specimens of literary Hindōstānī. The imperfect letter is also omitted in the skeleton grammar.

HINDŌSTĀNĪ SKELETON GRAMMAR.

I.—NOUNS.

(a) Masculine.

(1) Tadbhavas in ā—

	Sing.	Plur.
Nom.	ā	ẽ
Obl.	ẽ	õ

Tadbhavas in ā, which are nouns of relationship, and a few others, do not change, except in the oblique plural. Thus, chāchā, an uncle; lālā, a master. In short, they follow No. 2.

(2) Others—

	Sing.	Plur.
Nom.	—	—
Obl.	—	õ

(b) Feminine.

(1) In ī

	Sing.	Plur.
Nom.	ī	iyã
Obl.	ī	iyõ

(2) Others—

	Sing.	Plur.
Nom.	—	ẽ
Obl.	—	õ

Postpositions—

Direct	Nom.	—
	Acc. (1)	—
Oblique	Acc. (2	kō
	Agent	nē
	Instr.	sẽ
	Dat.	kō, kē-liyẽ
	Obl.	sẽ
	Gen.	kā, kē, kī
	Loc.	mẽ, par.

Adjectives—

(1) Masc. Tadbhavas in ā. Masc. ā (Obl. Sing. and Plur. ẽ). Fem. ī.

(2) Others do not change.

II.—PRONOUNS.

		(a) Personal.		(b) Demonstrative.		(c) Relative.	(d) Correlative.	(e) Interrogative.		(f) Indefinite.
		1st	2nd	This	That	Who	That	Masc. Fem.	Neut.	Any one.	Anything.
Dir.	Sing.	maĩ	tũ	yah, yeh, yih	wah, woh, wuh	jō	sō	kaun	kyā	kōī	kuchh
	Plur.	ham	tum	yah, yeh, yih	wah, woh, wuh	jẽ	tẽ	kaun	—	—	—
Obl.	Sing.	mujh	tujh	is	us	jis	tis	kis	kāhē	kisī	—
	Plur.	ham	tum	in	un	jin	tin	kin	—	—	—

III.—VERBS.

(A) Regular, Transitive and Intransitive.

Infinitive.	Root + nā.
Verbal noun.	„ + — (obl. ā).
Pres. Part. Act.	„ + tā.
Past Part. Pass.	„ + ā.
Fut. Part. Pass.	„ + nā.
Conjunctive Part.	„ + kẽ, kar or karkẽ.
Noun of Agency.	„ + nēwālā, -nēhārā.

Radical tenses—

Pres. Conj.	Root + Personal endings.
Fut. Ind. = Pres. Conj.	„ + gā.

Participial tenses—

Past Ind.	= Past Part.
Past Conj.	= Pres. Part.

Periphrastic tenses—

Pres. def.	Pres. Part.	+ hũ, etc.
Imperf.	„	+ thā.
Perf.	Past Part.	+ hũ, etc., (intr.) or hai (tr.).
Plup.	„	+ thā.

And many others.

Personal endings—

	1	2	3
Sing.	ũ	ẽ	ẽ
Plur.	ẽ	õ	ẽ

Construction—

Transitive verbs. All tenses formed from Past Part., either passive or impersonal.

Other tenses active.

Intransitive verbs. Active throughout.

(B) Auxiliaries—

(1) √ ha, Pres.

	1	2	3
Sing.	hũ	hai	hai
Plur.	haĩ	hō	haĩ

(2) √ th, Past

	Sing.	Plur.
Masc.	thā	thē
Fem.	thī	thĩ

(3) √ hō, Regular, except in Past. See head (C).

(4) √ jā, Regular, except in Past. See head (C).

(C) Irregular verbs—

Infinitive.	Past Part. Pass.
(1) hōnā	huā.
(2) marnā	muā.
(3) karnā	kiyā.
(4) dēnā	diyā.
(5) lēnā	liyā.
(6) jānā	gayā.
(7) ṭhānnā	ṭhayā.

(D) Causals and double causals—

(a) Add ā and wā, with shortening of root vowel.

(b) Many neuter verbs form Causal by lengthening the vowel.

(c) Irregulars.

	Causal.	Double causal.
(1) chhūṭnā	chhōṛnā	chhuṛānā.
(2) ṭūṭnā	tōṛnā	toṛwānā.
(3) phaṭnā	phāṛnā	phaṛwānā.
(4) phūṭnā	phōṛnā	phoṛwānā.

and others.

(E) Compound verbs—

(a) From Direct Verbal Noun, Intensives, Potentials, Completives.

(b) From Oblique Verbal Noun. Frequentatives, Desideratives.

have stood up for the use of Hindī undefiled have had small success in the face of so potent an example of misguided efforts. Arguments may be brought forward in favour of using classical Sanskrit words for expressing technical terms in science and art, and I am willing to admit their truth. I am not one of those who (to quote a well-known example) prefer 'the unthroughforcesomeness of stuff' to 'the impenetrability of matter,' but there the borrowing from the parent language should stop. There is still time to save Hindī from the fate of Bengali, if only a lead is taken by writers of acknowledged repute, and much can be done in this direction by the use of a wise discretion on the part of the educational authorities of the provinces immediately concerned.

Evil results of excessive Persianization.

Very similar remarks apply, mutatis mutandis, to that form of Urdū which is overloaded with Persian words. The Hindōstānī of Musalmans will always differ in its vocabulary from that of Hindūs, but this is no reason for overloading a naturally facile and elegant form of speech with hundreds of exotic expressions which are unintelligible to nine-tenths of the author's co-religionists. Urdū can be simple and Urdū can be pedantic. The simple belongs to India, the pedantic is an imitation of the language of a foreign country. There should be no hesitation in the choice made by a patriotic Indian Musalman.

Urdū and Hindī spelling.

After the foregoing general remarks it will suffice to give the annexed brief summary of the main heads of Hindōstānī grammar. It will be remarked that in Urdū the so-called imperfect ", which has been carefully recorded in all the vernacular specimens in the Dēva-nāgarī character, is omitted. This is the usual method of writing Urdū. For instance, the word meaning 'to see' would be देखना dēkh"nā in Hindī, but دیکھنا dēkhnā in Urdū. This principle is followed in all the specimens of literary Hindōstānī. The imperfect letter is also omitted in the skeleton grammar.

HINDŌSTĀNĪ SKELETON GRAMMAR.

I.—NOUNS.

(a) Masculine.

(1) Tadbhavas in ā—

	Sing.	Plur.
Nom.	ā	ẽ
Obl.	ẽ	õ

Tadbhavas in ā, which are nouns of relationship, and a few others, do not change, except in the oblique plural. Thus, chāchā, an uncle; lālā, a master. In short, they follow No. 2.

(2) Others—

	Sing.	Plur.
Nom.	—	—
Obl.	—	õ

(b) Feminine.

(1) In ī

	Sing.	Plur.
Nom.	ī	iyã
Obl.	ī	iyõ

(2) Others—

	Sing.	Plur.
Nom.	—	ẽ
Obl.	—	õ

Postpositions—

Direct	Nom.	—
	Acc. (1)	—
Oblique	Acc. (2)	kō
	Agent	nē
	Instr.	sē
	Dat.	kō, kē-liyē
	Obl.	sē
	Gen.	kā, kē, kī
	Loc.	mẽ, par.

Adjectives—

(1) Masc. Tadbhavas in ā. Masc. ā (Obl. Sing. and Plur. ē). Fem. ī.

(2) Others do not change.

II.—PRONOUNS.

		(a) Personal.		(b) Demonstrative.		(c) Relative.	(d) Correlative.	(e) Interrogative.		(f) Indefinite.
		1st	2nd	This	That	Who	That	Masc. Fem.	Neut.	Any one.	Anything.
Dir.	Sing.	maĩ	tũ	yah, yeh, yih	wah, woh, wuh	jō	sō	kaun	kyā	kōī	kuchh
	Plur.	ham	tum	yah, yeh, yih	wah, woh, wuh	jē	tē	kaun	—	—	—
Obl.	Sing.	mujh	tujh	is	us	jis	tis	kis	kāhē	kisī	—
	Plur.	ham	tum	in	un	jin	tin	kin	—	—	—

III.—VERBS.

(A) Regular, Transitive and Intransitive.

Infinitive.	Root + nā.
Verbal noun.	„ + — (obl. ā).
Pres. Part. Act.	„ + tā.
Past Part. Pass.	„ + ā.
Fut. Part. Pass.	„ + nā.
Conjunctive Part.	„ + kē, kar or karkē.
Noun of Agency.	„ + nēwālā, -nēhārā.

Radical tenses—

Pres. Conj.	Root + Personal endings.
Fut. Ind. = Pres. Conj.	„ + gā.

Participial tenses—

Past Ind.	= Past Part.
Past Conj.	= Pres. Part.

Periphrastic tenses—

Pres. def.	Pres. Part.	+ hũ, etc.
Imperf.	„	+ thā.
Perf.	Past Part.	+ hũ, etc., (intr.) or hai (tr.).
Plup.	„	+ thā.

And many others.

Personal endings—

	1	2	3
Sing.	ũ	ē	ē
Plur.	ẽ	ō	ẽ

Construction—

Transitive verbs. All tenses formed from Past Part., either passive or impersonal.

Other tenses active.

Intransitive verbs. Active throughout.

(B) Auxiliaries—

(1) √ ha, Pres.

	1	2	3
Sing.	hũ	hai	hai
Plur.	haĩ	hō	haĩ

(2) √ th, Past

	Sing.	Plur.
Masc.	thā	thē
Fem.	thī	thĩ

(3) √ hō, Regular, except in Past. See head (C).

(4) √ jā, Regular, except in Past. See head (C).

(C) Irregular verbs—

Infinitive.	Past Part. Pass.
(1) hōnā	huā.
(2) marnā	muā.
(3) karnā	kiyā.
(4) dēnā	diyā.
(5) lēnā	liyā.
(6) jānā	gayā.
(7) ṭhānnā	ṭhayā.

(D) Causals and double causals—

(a) Add ā and wā, with shortening of root vowel.

(b) Many neuter verbs form Causal by lengthening the vowel.

(c) Irregulars.

	Causal.	Double causal.
(1) chhūṭnā	chhōṛnā	chhuṛānā.
(2) ṭūṭnā	tōṛnā	toṛwānā.
(3) phaṭnā	phāṛnā	phaṛwānā.
(4) phūṭnā	phōṛnā	phoṛwānā.

and others.

(E) Compound verbs—

(a) From Direct Verbal Noun, Intensives, Potentials, Completives.

(b) From Oblique Verbal Noun, Frequentatives, Desideratives.

have stood up for the use of Hindī undefiled have had small success in the face of so potent an example of misguided efforts. Arguments may be brought forward in favour of using classical Sanskrit words for expressing technical terms in science and art, and I am willing to admit their truth. I am not one of those who (to quote a well-known example) prefer 'the unthroughforcesomeness of stuff' to 'the impenetrability of matter,' but there the borrowing from the parent language should stop. There is still time to save Hindī from the fate of Bengali, if only a lead is taken by writers of acknowledged repute, and much can be done in this direction by the use of a wise discretion on the part of the educational authorities of the provinces immediately concerned.

Evil results of excessive Persianization.

Very similar remarks apply, mutatis mutandis, to that form of Urdū which is overloaded with Persian words. The Hindōstānī of Musalmans will always differ in its vocabulary from that of Hindus, but this is no reason for overloading a naturally facile and elegant form of speech with hundreds of exotic expressions which are unintelligible to nine-tenths of the author's co-religionists. Urdū can be simple and Urdū can be pedantic. The simple belongs to India, the pedantic is an imitation of the language of a foreign country. There should be no hesitation in the choice made by a patriotic Indian Musalman.

Urdū and Hindī spelling.

After the foregoing general remarks it will suffice to give the annexed brief summary of the main heads of Hindōstānī grammar. It will be remarked that in Urdū the so-called imperfect ", which has been carefully recorded in all the vernacular specimens in the Deva-nagarī character, is omitted. This is the usual method of writing Urdū. For instance, the word meaning 'to see' would be देखना dēkh"nā in Hindī, but دیکھنا dēkhna in Urdū. This principle is followed in all the specimens of literary Hindostanī. The imperfect letter is also omitted in the skeleton grammar.

HINDŌSTĀNĪ SKELETON GRAMMAR.

I.—NOUNS.

(a) Masculine.

(1) Tadbhavas in ā—

	Sing.	Plur.
Nom.	ā	ẽ
Obl.	ẽ	õ

Tadbhavas in ā, which are nouns of relationship, and a few others, do not change, except in the oblique plural. Thus, chāchā, an uncle; lālā, a master. In short, they follow No. 2.

(2) Others—

	Sing.	Plur.
Nom.	—	—
Obl.	—	õ

(b) Feminine.

(1) In ī

	Sing.	Plur.
Nom.	ī	iyã
Obl.	ī	iyõ

(2) Others—

	Sing.	Plur.
Nom.	—	ẽ
Obl.	—	õ

Postpositions—

Direct	Nom.	—
	Acc. (1)	—
Oblique	Acc. (2)	kō
	Agent	nē
	Instr.	sẽ
	Dat.	kō, kē-liyē
	Obl.	sẽ
	Gen.	kā, kē, kī
	Loc.	mẽ, par.

Adjectives—

(1) Masc. Tadbhavas in ā. Masc. ā (Obl. Sing. and Plur. ẽ). Fem. ī.

(2) Others do not change.

II.—PRONOUNS.

		(a) Personal.		(b) Demonstrative.		(c) Relative.	(d) Correlative.	(e) Interrogative.		(f) Indefinite.
		1st	2nd	This	That	Who	That	Masc. Fem.	Neut.	Any one.	Anything.
Dir.	Sing.	maĩ	tũ	yah, yeh, yih	wah, woh, wuh	jō	sō	kaun	kyā	kōī	kuchh
	Plur.	ham	tum	yah, yeh, yih	wah, woh, wuh	jē	tē	kaun	—	—	—
Obl.	Sing.	mujh	tujh	is	us	jis	tis	kis	kāhē	kisī	—
	Plur.	ham	tum	in	un	jin	tin	kin	—	—	—

III.—VERBS.

(A) Regular, Transitive and Intransitive.

Infinitive.	Root + nā.
Verbal noun.	„ + — (obl. ā).
Pres. Part. Act.	„ + tā.
Past Part. Pass.	„ + ā.
Fut. Part. Pass.	„ + nā.
Conjunctive Part.	„ + kē, kar or karkē.
Noun of Agency.	„ + nēwālā, -nēhārā.

Radical tenses—

Pres. Conj.	Root + Personal endings.
Fut. Ind. = Pres. Conj.	„ + gā.

Participial tenses—

Past Ind.	= Past Part.
Past Conj.	= Pres. Part.

Periphrastic tenses—

Pres. def.	Pres. Part.	+ hũ, etc.
Imperf.	„	+ thā.
Perf.	Past Part.	+ hũ, etc., (intr.) or hai (tr.).
Plup.	„	+ thā.

And many others.

Personal endings—

	1	2	3
Sing.	ũ	ẽ	ẽ
Plur.	ẽ	õ	ẽ

Construction—

Transitive verbs. All tenses formed from Past Part., either passive or impersonal.

Other tenses active.

Intransitive verbs. Active throughout.

(B) Auxiliaries—

(1) √ ha, Pres.

	1	2	3
Sing.	hũ	hai	hai
Plur.	haĩ	hō	haĩ

(2) √ th, Past

	Sing.	Plur.
Masc.	thā	thē
Fem.	thī	thĩ

(3) √ hō, Regular, except in Past. See head (C).

(4) √ jā, Regular, except in Past. See head (C).

(C) Irregular verbs—

Infinitive.	Past Part. Pass.
(1) hōnā	huā.
(2) marnā	muā.
(3) karnā	kiyā.
(4) dēnā	diyā.
(5) lēnā	liyā.
(6) jānā	gayā.
(7) ṭhānnā	ṭhayā.

(D) Causals and double causals—

(a) Add ā and wā, with shortening of root vowel.

(b) Many neuter verbs form Causal by lengthening the vowel.

(c) Irregulars.

	Causal.	Double causal.
(1) chhūṭnā	chhōṛnā	chhuṛānā.
(2) ṭūṭnā	tōṛnā	toṛwānā.
(3) phaṭnā	phāṛnā	phaṛwānā.
(4) phūṭnā	phōṛnā	phoṛwānā.

and others.

(E) Compound verbs—

(a) From Direct Verbal Noun, Intensives, Potentials, Completives.

(b) From Oblique Verbal Noun, Frequentatives, Desideratives.

(c) From Oblique Infinitive, Inceptives, Permissives, Acquisitives.

DAKHINĪ HINDŌSTĀNĪ OR MUSALMĀNĪ.

Name of dialect.

The Musalmān armies imposed their language on their co-religionists in the Deccan from the first. At the present day, whether the language of the country is Marāṭhī, Tamil, Telugu, or some other Dravidian form of speech, the Musalmāns of southern India all employ that form of Hindōstānī, commonly known as Dakhinī, the language of the Deccan, or as Musalmānī, the language of Musalmāns.

Origin.

It was in the Deccan that Hindōstānī, under the form of Urdū, first received cultivation, and it was at the hands of Walī of Aurangabad (cir. 1700), the 'Father of Rēkhta,' that a standard of literary form was given to it. Walī's example was followed at Delhi, and from thence the poetical literature of Urdū spread over northern India. One result of its Deccan origin is that, even at the present day, we find, in Urdū poetry written in the north, idioms peculiar to Dakhinī that do not appear in standard prose.

Relation to literary Hindōstānī.

It is commonly said that Dakhinī is a corrupt Hindōstānī. Historically speaking it would almost be truer to say that literary Hindōstānī is a corrupt Dakhinī, for we have seen that Hindōstānī literature took its origin in the Deccan. Without, however, going so far as that, it is not correct to look upon Dakhinī as a corrupt form of speech. The Musalmān armies carried vernacular Hindōstānī to the south before it had been standardised, and it then contained many idioms which are now excluded from literary prose. Some of these have survived in the Deccan. Such are, for instance, the employment of the oblique genitive as a base for declension in phrases like mērē-kū, to me, where the standard would have mujh-kō. Again, the oblique plural in ẽ survives to the present day in the Vernacular Hindōstānī and in Dakhinī, but is excluded from Urdū prose. So also the nasalization of the infinitive, as in mārnã, to strike, is only a survival of the old neuter gender, which has disappeared in the modern literary languages, but is still common in the dialects. Other similar examples will be noted as they occur in the following pages.

Only in one respect can Dakhinī be called a corrupt language. In Madras and the south of the Bombay Presidency, no doubt under the influence of the surrounding Dravidian languages, the passive construction of the past tense of transitive verbs has been abandoned. Transitive and intransitive verbs are now treated in exactly the same way, and though the subject is occasionally put into the agent case with nē, the nē is altogether neglected as a factor in the idiom, and the verb agrees in number and gender with the subject (although in the agent case), and not with the object. In Central Bombay, on the other hand, the presence of Marāṭhī has prevented the proper employment of the agent case from disappearing.

Locality where spoken.

We may roughly take the Satpura Hills, south of the Narbadā valley, as the boundary between Dakhinī Hindōstānī, as a recognised literary form of speech, and the standard Hindōstānī of Delhi and Lucknow. Taking the figures of the Census of 1891 as our basis, we may consider the following to be the approximate number of those who speak it.

Table showing the approximate number of speakers of Dakhinī Hindōstānī.

Berar		274,102
Bombay—
Bombay City	94,431
Thana	24,821
Kolaba	5,932
Ratnagiri	25,867
Kanara	18,627
Khandesh	117,844
Nasik	47,977
Ahmednagar	48,847
Poona	57,669
Sholapur	56,669
Satara	40,781
Belgaum	76,950
Dharwar	101,216
Bijapur	79,999
Feudatories	254,282 [1]
		1,051,912
Central Provinces—
Nagpur	41,616
Wardha	14,836
Chanda	10,939
Bhandara	11,685
		79,076
Madras—
British Territory	817,146
Native States	17,707
		834,853
Nizam's Dominions		1,198,382
Mysore		208,928
Coorg		6,919
	TOTAL	3,654,172

Authorities, Grammar.

The Authorities which deal with Dakhinī are included in the General Bibliography of Western Hindī. I here give a brief account of the main points in which the dialect differs from standard Hindōstānī.

DECLENSION.

Nouns.—The oblique form singular is formed as in standard Urdū. The nominative and oblique plural are often formed differently. The common rule is that the nominative plural usually ends in ē or ã̄, and the oblique plural in õ or yaũ. Sometimes ẽ is used for the nominative plural, and ã̄ for the oblique plural.

The following are examples:—

Nom. Sing.	Obl. Sing.	Nom. Plur.	Obl. Plur.
piyāla, a cup	piyālē	piyālē	piyālȭ
andēs̲ha, thought	andēs̲hē	andēs̲hē	andēshyaũ
ghōṛā, a horse	ghōṛē	ghōṛē	ghōṛȭ
kauwā, a crow	kauwē	kauwē	kauwyaũ
baniyã̄, a trader	baniyē	baniyẽ	baniyȭ
ās̲hnā, an acquaintance	ās̲hnā	ās̲hnāȭ	ās̲hnāȭ
dānā, a sage	dānā	dānāyã̄	dānāyȭ

[1] Many of these speak the standard form of Hindōstānī, but it is impossible to separate them out.

Nom. Sing.	Obl. Sing.	Nom. Plur.	Obl. Plur.
mahīnā, a month	mahīnā	mahīnyã̄	mahīnyã̄ or -yȭ
māo, a mother	māo	māwã̄ or māĩ̃ȭ	māwã̄ or maȭ
ghar, a house	ghar	gharã̄	gharã̄
ādmī, a man	ādmī	ādmyã̄	ādmyã̄
sũ̄, an oath	sũ̄	suwã̄	suwã̄ or suwȭ
naddī, a river	naddī	naddyã̄	naddyã̄

The usual postpositions are :—

Agent	nē, nī.
Dative-Accusative	kū, kũ̄, kō, kē-taĩ, kataĩ, kanē, to or for.
Ablative	sū, sũ̄, sō, sȭ, sē, sẽ̄, satī, from, by.
Genitive	kā, (kē, kī) (as in the Standard).
Locative	mẽ̄, mȭ, in ; pō, pa, par, on.

Pronouns.—The following are the first two personal pronouns :—

	First Person.	Second Person.
Sing. Nom.	maĩ	tū, tũ̄, taĩ.
Gen.	mērā (-rē, -rī), mujh, muj	tērā (-rē, -rī), tujh, tuj.
Acc. Dat.	mujhē, mujē, munjē, mujh-kū, mērē-kanē, etc.	tujhē, tujē, tujh-kū, tērē-kanē, etc.
Obl.	mujh, muj, mērē	tujh, tuj, tērē.
Plur. Nom.	ham, hamẽ̄, hamȭ, hamārā	tum, tumẽ̄, tumē, tumhẽ̄, tumhȭ.
Gen.	hamārā (-rē, -rī), hamã̄rā (-rē, -rī), haman.	tumārā (-rē, -rī), tumã̄rā (-rē, -rī), tuman, tum.
Acc. Dat.	hamẽ̄, hamnā, ham-kū, haman-kū, hamȭ-kū, hamārē-kanē, etc.	tumhẽ̄, tumnā, tum-kū, tuman-kū, tumhȭ-kū, tumārē-kanē, etc.
Obl.	ham, haman, hamnā, hamȭ, hamārē.	tum, tuman, tumnā, tumhȭ, tumārē.

The forms which differ from the standard should not be considered corruptions. They all occur in various dialects of Western Hindī and were brought down to the Deccan before Urdū was standardised. Special attention may be drawn to the employment of the oblique form of the genitive as a general oblique base. Although this is almost totally excluded from standard Urdū, it is common in all the vernacular dialects of northern Hindostan. The forms hamnā and tumnā are oblique forms of haman and tuman, respectively, and point to Rājasthānī influence.

The Demonstrative Pronouns, including the Pronoun of the third person, are,—

Sing.	This.	That, he, she, it.
Nom.	ē, yē, yō, yeh, inē, ī	ō, wō, woh, unē, ū
Acc. Dat.	isē, is, is-kū, etc.	usē, us, us-kū
Obl.	is, (as an adjective, also) yē	us.
Plur.
Nom.	in, inū, inũ̄, inȭ, inhẽ̄	un, unū, unũ̄, unȭ, unhẽ̄, wē, ō, woh, un-kũ̄, etc.
Acc. Dat.	in-kū, etc.
Obl.	in, inū, inũ̄, inȭ, inhȭ, inhẽ̄, inan	un, unū, unũ̄, unȭ, unhȭ, unhẽ̄, unan.

The singular is often used for the plural, and vice versa.

The Agent Singular is often inē or inī, and unē or unī.

The Reflexive Pronoun is,—

SINGULAR AND PLURAL.

Nom. āp, ap, āpē, āpẽ, apē, apẽ, apasẽ, apan, self or selves.

Gen. āp-kā (-kē, -kī), apnā (-nē, -nī), āpnā (-nē, -nī), apan, apas, etc.

Obl. āp, apnē, āpnē, apan, apas, apasẽ.

The Relative, Correlative, and Interrogative Pronouns are,—

Sing.	Who.	That.	Who?
Nom.	jō, jõ, jinē, jin	sō	kō, kõ, kōn, kinē, kin
Obl.	jis	tis	kis
Plur.
Nom.	jō, jõ, jinē, jin	sō	kō, kõ, kōn, kinē, kin
Obl.	jin	tin	kin

The Hindōstānī Dative-Accusatives jisē, plur. jinhẽ, and so on are also employed.

The Neuter Interrogative Pronoun is kyā or kā, what?, oblique form kāhē, kāhī, or kī.

The Indefinite Pronouns are kōī, obl. form kōī, kisī or kisū; and kuchh, obl. form kuchh. These are used for both persons and things, but kōī is more often applied to the former, and kuchh to the latter. There are also jō-kōī, jin-kōī, jē-kōī, or jakōī, whoever, and jō-kuchh, jē-kuchh, or jakuchh, whatever.

CONJUGATION.

The Infinitive usually ends in nā, as in Standard Hindōstānī. Sometimes we have instead an, n, or nã. Thus, mārnā, māran, or mārnã; obl. masc. mārnē or mārnẽ; fem. sing. mārnī; plur. mārniyã or mārnyã, to strike; jān, to go; dēn-kā, of giving.

The Present Participle ends in tā, or, sometimes, in at or t, as in mārtā or mārat, striking; dēt, giving. The feminine plural ends in tiyã or tyã. Thus, mārtiyã or mārtyã.

The Past Participle ends in ā, or sometimes in yā. Thus, mārā or māryā, struck. The feminine plural ends in yã. Thus, māryã, they (fem.) struck. The irregular forms are as in Standard Hindōstānī. We have, however, also such forms as karā or karyā, done; muāyā (for muā), dead. This participle is sometimes used with the genitive of the subject, as in woh mērā mārā hai, he is killed of me, i.e., I killed him.

The Conjunctive Participle has many forms, such as mār-kō or mārē-kō. Other forms of the postposition, attached to either mār or mārē, are kē, kar, kar-kē, kar-kō, kar-kar, kõ, ka. Examples of other verbs are hō-kō or hōē-kō, having been; ā-kar or āē-kar, having come.

The Verb Substantive is thus conjugated,—

Present, I am.

	Sing.	Plur.
1.	hữ	haĩ or hẽ, hai
2.	hai	haĩ or hẽ (Madras), hō (Bombay)
3.	hai	haĩ or hẽ, hai.

The plural is often used for the singular.

The Past Tense is thā, etc., as in the Standard. Sometimes we have athā, etc., instead of thā.

The conjugation of the Active Verb closely agrees with that of Standard Hindōstānī. The following are the main points of difference.

In Madras the second person plural is the same as the first and third persons, as in tum mārẽ̃, you may strike. In Bombay it ends in ō as in the Standard. Thus, tum mārō. The present subjunctive (old present) is often employed as a present or even as a future. The singular is commonly used instead of the plural.

The second plural imperative ends in ō, õ̃ or au, as mārō, mārõ̃ or mārau, strike ye.

The future is, as usual, formed by adding gā (masc. plur. gē; fem. sing. gī, plur. gyā̃) to the present subjunctive or old present; thus, maĩ mārũ̃-gā, I shall strike. In Madras, the 2nd plur. masc. is marẽ̃gē, not mārōgē. The singular is commonly used for the plural, as ham mārẽgā or mārẽ̃gē, we shall strike.

The conjugation of the past tense of intransitive verbs is as the standard. Thus, maĩ chalā, I went. In the case of transitive verbs custom differs. In Bombay, the standard idiom is followed, as in maĩ-nē mārā, I struck; maĩ-nē yeh bāt sunī, I heard this affair. In Madras, on the contrary, nē is usually omitted, and the verb is treated as if it were intransitive agreeing with the subject in gender and number. Thus, maĩ mārā, I (who am a man) struck; maĩ mārī, I (who am a woman) struck. Sometimes nē is used, but here it is pleonastic, and the construction is the same as when it is not used, the verb still agreeing in gender and number with the subject, and not with the object. Thus, ō mārī or ō-nē mārī, she struck. The same idioms are employed, according to locality, for all the past tenses of transitive verbs. In Bombay, the passive construction is employed, while in Madras it is not. In Bombay, even, the use of nē is by no means regular. It is often employed with intransitive verbs,—e.g., us-nē chalā, he went; and even with the present tense of transitive verbs as in maĩ-nē mārtā-hũ̃, I am striking.

VERNACULAR HINDŌSTĀNĪ.

Points of difference from Literary Hindōstānī.

The dialect of Western Hindī spoken in Western Rohilkhand, in the Upper Gangetic Doab, and in the Panjab district of Ambala is what I call Vernacular Hindōstānī, that is to say, it is the form of speech on which the Literary Hindōstānī that took its rise in Delhi is based. Its grammar differs from that of the standard dialect in only a few minor points, and most of these are cases of surplusage, in which two or more expressions can be optionally employed to connote the same idea. In such cases, Literary Hindōstānī has usually selected one form as the standard, and rejected the other.

Vocabulary.

In its vocabulary, even amongst rustics, Vernacular Hindōstānī rather affects the use of Persian and Arabic words, which it often distorts in the borrowing. Thus, instead of using mā for mother, a Muzaffarnagar villager says maldah, which is a corruption of the Arabic wālida. Other examples of these corruptions are :—

Mahaujat for muḥāfaẓat, watching, guarding.
Kāl for intiqāl, death (confused with the Sanskrit kāla, time, death).
Tamakkus for tamassuk, a bond.
Matbal for maṭlab, intention.
Ugāhī for guwāhī, testimony.

Where spoken.

The language of the State of Rampur and of the districts of Moradabad and Bijnaur east of the Ganges and in Western Rohilkhand, possesses the strongest resemblance to Literary Hindōstānī. This is no doubt due to the influence of Islām, which has always been strong in these parts. Crossing the Ganges we come into the Upper Doab between the Ganges and the Jamna. For our present purposes we may take this as including (going from south to north) the districts of Meerut, Muzaffarnagar, Saharanpur, and the plains portion of Dehra Dun. In the hill country of Dehra Dun the language is Jaunsārī, which belongs to the Pahāṛī group of Indo-Aryan vernaculars. The language of the Upper Dōāb also agrees with Literary Hindōstānī, but the agreement is not quite so strong, as several optional forms are employed, which do not occur in the standard dialect or in that of Western Rohilkhand. Crossing the Jamna from the Upper Doab we enter the Panjab. The Districts bordering on the west bank of that river, going from south to north, are Delhi, Karnal, and Ambala. The language of Delhi district (as distinct from that of the famous city of the same name) and of Karnal is not Hindōstānī. It is a distinct dialect of Western Hindī, strongly influenced by Pañjābī and Rājasthānī, called 'Bāngarū' or 'Jāṭū.' The influence of Rājasthānī has disappeared in Ambala, and we may say that the language of the eastern part of that district including the adjacent parts of the States of Kalsia and Patiala is Vernacular Hindōstānī, more or less affected by Pañjābī. In Western Ambala the language is actually Pañjābī. In this part of the country the boundary between the two languages, Pañjābī and Western Hindī as represented by Vernacular Hindōstānī, may be taken to be the river Ghaggar, anciently known as the Dṛishadvatī. Within these limits we can estimate that Vernacular Hindōstānī is employed by the following number of speakers.

Table showing the estimated number of speakers of Vernacular Hindōstānī.

WEST ROHILKHAND—
Rampur State	394,000
Moradabad	909,400
Bijnaur	600,000
UPPER DOAB—
Meerut	1,017,765
Muzaffarnagar	599,402
Saharanpur	970,000
Dehra Dun	90,000
PANJAB—
Ambala, Kalsia, and Patiala (Panjaur Niẓāmat)	702,166
TOTAL	5,282,733

These figures do not include the number of people in these localities who are estimated to be speakers of Literary Hindōstānī under the form of Urdū. These last figures have been included in those for Literary Hindōstānī, and have, in each case, been estimated by taking the whole of the Urban Musalmān population, half the rural population, and half the Christian population. The figures so arrived at are as follows :—

Table showing the estimated number of speakers of Literary Hindōstānī in the area in which the general language is Vernacular Hindōstānī.

WEST ROHILKHAND—
Rampur State	156,000
Moradabad	269,000
Bijnaur	189,000
UPPER DOAB—
Meerut	368,461
Muzaffarnagar	172,000
Saharanpur	...
Dehra Dun	...
PANJAB—
Ambala, etc.	...
TOTAL	1,154,461

In the last three districts the number of speakers of Literary Hindōstānī is small, and has not been estimated separately.

Typical characteristics of Vernacular Hindōstānī.

It will have been seen that Vernacular Hindōstānī is spoken in the north-western corner of the area occupied by Western Hindī. To its west it has either Pañjābī or the half-Rājasthānī of Delhi and Karnal. To its north are hill languages belonging to the Paḥāṛī group of Indo-Aryan vernaculars (which are all closely connected with Rājasthānī), and to its south and east the Braj Bhākhā dialect of Western Hindī.

We are therefore entitled to assume that Vernacular Hindōstānī (and consequently Literary Hindōstānī) is that form of Western Hindī which shows the Braj Bhākhā dialect shading off into Pañjābī and Rājasthānī, and such indeed is the fact.

In all the other dialects of Western Hindī, the typical ending of strong tadbhava participles, adjectives, and substantives is the letter ō or au. For instance the word for 'good' is bhalō or bhalau, that for 'struck' is mārō or māryau, and that for horse is ghōṛō or ghōṛau. So the termination of the genitive masculine is kō or kau; thus, ghōṛē-kau, of a horse. In Pañjābī, the corresponding termination is ā, not au or ō. So we find in both Vernacular and Literary Hindōstānī the Pañjābī termination ā. Thus, bhalā, good; mārā, struck; ghōṛā, a horse; ghōṛē-kā, of a horse. The last example would be, in Pañjābī, ghōṛē-dā, so that we see that Hindōstānī, while preserving kau, the suffix of Western Hindī, has given it the Pañjābī termination ā. It has not taken the Pañjābī suffix dā, as a whole.

In its consonantal system Vernacular (but not Literary) Hindōstānī uses the cerebral ṇ and ḷ very freely. These do not occur in the other Western Hindī dialects, but are common in Eastern Pañjābī and in Rājasthānī.

The oblique plural of nouns often ends in ã̄, as in Pañjābī and Rājasthānī. This is excluded from ordinary Literary Hindōstānī, but is common in Dakhinī. It does not occur in other dialects of Western Hindī.

The present tense of the Active verb is often formed by conjugating the old present, commonly called the present subjunctive, with the present tense of the verb substantive. Thus, beside the standard form mārtā-hū̃, we have also mārū̃-hū̃, I am striking. The Imperfect is usually formed by conjugating the past tense of the verb substantive with an oblique verbal noun in ē. Thus, maĩ mārē-thā, I was striking, literally, I was on striking. These two forms are frequently met in Rājasthānī. They are also heard in that part of the Braj Bhākhā area which lies between the Upper Doab and Rajputana.

The above is sufficient to show the place occupied by Vernacular (and Literary) Hindōstānī in relation to the surrounding dialects. There are other similar occurrences, which, together with those points which are peculiar to Vernacular Hindōstānī itself, will be dealt with in detail when we come to the specimens.

BĀṄGARŪ, JĀṬŪ, AND HARIĀṆĪ.

We have just seen that in the district of Ambala the Vernacular Hindōstānī of the Upper Doab merges into Pañjābī. South of Ambala, in the country along the west bank of the Jamna, we find a disturbing element in the proximity, not only of the Pañjābī to the west as in Ambala, but also of Rājasthānī, under the form of Mēwātī, to the south. This tract consists of the districts of Karnal, Rohtak, and Delhi. It also includes the south-east corner of the State of Patiala, the east of the district of Hissar, and detached portions of the States of Nabha and Jind which lie between Rohtak and Hissar. On the east it is separated from the Upper Doab by the river Jamna. On the north it has the district of Ambala, and on the south the district of Gurgaon. On the west it is bounded by the State of Patiala and, further south, the rest of the district of Hissar. That portion of the tract which consists of the east of the district of Hissar and of the country immediately adjoining is known to natives as Hariānā. The rest is known either as Bangar or Khādir. The bulk of the population of the whole tract consists of persons of the Jat tribe.

As regards the Bāngar and the Khādir, the latter is the land immediately on the west bank of the river Jamna in the districts of Karnal and Delhi. In Karnal, it is only a few miles wide, and is bounded on the west by a ridge which is the commencement of the Bāngar, or high, dry, land. The Bāngar extends right across the district into the State of Patiala where the country round Nirwana is also known as Bangar. South of Nirwana, in the Jind Niẓāmat of the State of Jind the Bāngar is continued, and goes on, over the whole of the district of Rohtak, into the eastern half of the Dadri Niẓāmat of Jind, and into the northern half of that portion of the State of Nabha which lies to the west of Rewari in Gurgaon. To the west of this lies the Hariānā tract of Hissar, and that name is also applied to the two Niẓāmats of the Jind State which have just been mentioned. The district of Delhi falls geographically into two parts, the southern (and smaller), and the northern (and larger). The northern part is, like Karnal, divided into Khādir and Bāngar, the boundary between them being approximately the Grand Trunk Road. The southern portion consists mainly of hills, inhabited by Gūjars, who like others of that tribe speak a form of Rājasthānī. The Khādir, however, still continues between the hills and the Jamna, and is here rather wider. On the west of the hills, round Najafgarh, there is a low, marshy, tract, known as the Ḍābar, which is not a part of the Bāngar, but is a continuation of the Gurgaon country, which is inhabited by Ahīrs who speak Ahīrwāṭī, the dialect of the west of Gurgaon. Moreover, Ahīrwāṭī has extended into Jhajjar, the southern Tahsīl of Rohtak, although this country is properly a part of the Bāngar.

With the exception of this Jhajjar Tahsīl, the language of Hariānā, the Bangar, and the Khādir, is everywhere the same. It is a form of Western Hindī influenced in its vocabulary by Pañjābī, and strongly affected in its grammar by the Ahīrwāṭī of Gurgaon which itself is a mixed dialect partly Western Hindī and partly Rājasthanī, and which might almost be classed under either language. In the present survey it is classed as a form of the Mēwātī dialect of Rājasthānī. Ahīrwāṭī has to its south the pure Mēwātī spoken in Gurgaon and Alwar, and to its west the Bāgṛī and Shēkhāwāṭī of Bikanir and the Shēkhāwāṭī country.

The dialect with which we are dealing at present has various names according to locality and to the castes of its speakers. In Hariānā and the neighbourhood it is called Hariānī, Dēs-wālī, or Dēsaṛī; in Rohtak and Delhi it is usually called Jāṭū, or the language of the Jāṭs who form the bulk of the population; in Delhi, which also has many Chamārs in its population, it is sometimes called Chamarwā. Elsewhere it is called Bāngarū, or the language of the Bāngar (as well as of the Khādir). Everywhere, by whatever name it is called, it is the same dialect. The best general name for it is Bāngarū. With the exception of the Khādir, this Hariānā-Bāngar tract does not drain into the Jamna, although so close to that river. The Bāngar forms the watershed between the river system flowing into the Bay of Bengal and that flowing into the Indian Ocean. All the drainage of Hariānā and the Bāngar runs to the west, not to the east.

The following account of the linguistic character of the district of Hissar is based on the information given in the local Gazetteer:—

Hariānā is the name of an important tract in the south-east of the district of Hissar. It stretches from the confines of the tract watered by the Ghaggar to the south-east corner of the district and beyond. On the north it stretches across a considerable portion of the Fatahabad Taḥṣīl, but gradually narrows in width towards the south, being encroached upon by the Bāgaṛ sand. It comprises within its limits the eastern portions of Taḥṣīls Fatahabad and Hissar, the whole of Taḥṣīl Hansi, and a small portion of the eastern half of the Bhiwani Taḥṣīl. Hissar is the meeting ground of three distinct languages, Western Hindī, Pañjābī, and Rājasthānī. Western Hindī appears under the form of Hariānī; Pañjābī, in the Mālvī dialect, and in the Rāṭhī or Pachhāḍī, the speech of the Pachhāḍā Musalmāns of the Ghaggar valley; and Rājasthānī in the form of Bāgṛī. The boundaries of the tract in which a more or less pure Hariānī is spoken may be defined as all that portion of the district south of a line drawn from Fatahabad to Tohana and east of a line through Fatahabad, Hissar, and Kairu. This includes more than half the area of the four southern Taḥṣīls of the district. Across the northern boundary of this tract we come to the Pañjābī-speaking Pachhāḍās of the Ghaggar valley, and to the north-west of Fatahabad lies the Sirsa Taḥṣīl in which Western Hindī is practically unknown. Across the western boundary of the Hariānī-speaking tract we come to what may be regarded as the debateable ground between Hariānī and Bāgṛī. There is no hard-and-fast line at which Hariānī ends and Bāgṛī begins. The change takes the form of an even broader pronunciation of the vowels than in Hariānī and then a gradual change in vocabulary and grammar, but within the limits of Taḥṣīls Fatahabad, Hissar, and Bhiwani the change is so slight that it is doubtful whether it can be said that true Bāgṛī is spoken anywhere in these Taḥṣīls. A considerable part of the debateable tract is held by Bāgṛī immigrants, and the effect of the immigration has been to introduce a decidedly Hariānī element into their Bāgṛī rather than the reverse. True Bāgṛī as distinguished from Hariānī is spoken in the south-west of Sirsa Taḥṣīl.

On crossing the northern boundary of the tract defined above we first meet with Pañjābī among the Pachhāḍās of the Ghaggar valley. The same language is found all the way down the length of the valley into the Sirsa Taḥṣīl, and nearly to the point where it crosses the Bikanir border. In the portion of the Sirsa Taḥṣīl south of the Ghaggar valley, Bāgṛī is the ordinary speech which changes to Pañjābī on the north of the Ghaggar. Thus the Pañjābī-speaking tract embraces the valley of the Ghaggar and the portion of the district north of it. The Pañjābī of the district may be divided into two dialects; Mālvī Pañjābī, the natural tongue of the Sikh Jāṭ, and the speech of the Musalmān Pachhāḍā of the west, known as Pachhāḍī or Rāṭhī. Rāṭh (ruthless) is only another name for Pachhāḍā and Pachhāḍī and Rāṭhī are identical. Pachhāḍī is distinguished from Mālvī by the greater prevalence of nasal sounds and by a slight admixture of Hindōstānī and Bāgṛī words. Mālvī is spoken by the Sikh Jāṭs in the Sirsa Taḥṣīl north of the Ghaggar, in Budhlada, and by the colonies of Patiala Sikh Jāṭs found here and there along the Ghaggar in the Fatahabad Taḥṣīl. Pachhāḍī is, however, the common form of speech on the Ghaggar along the whole of its course in this district, and is found in villages at considerable distances to the south of that stream.

To return to Hariānī. Hariānā is also locally known as the Dēs, the country, par excellence, and hence Hariānī is also often called Dēsaṛī or Dēs-wālī. The north-eastern portion of the Dadri Niẓāmat of the Jind State and the adjoining portions of the State of Dujana are also parts of Hariānā, and the Bāngarū spoken here is also called Hariānī. In the rest of Dadri and in the adjoining state of Loharu the language is Bāgṛī.[1] In the Jind Niẓāmat of Jind, although this is certainly true Bāngar country, the local form of speech is also known as Hariānī. Natives profess to distinguish between Hariānī and Bāngarū, and say that the former, and not Bāngarū, is heard in the Jāṭ and Rōr villages of Karnāl, but, except that the Hariāna vocabulary now and then borrows a word or two from Bāgṛī, the specimens show no difference between the two forms of speech.[1]

[1] It is hardly necessary to point out that the word Bāngar has no connexion with Bāgaṛ. Bāngar means 'high ground.' It connotes a hard barren soil watered neither from well nor from river, but (where there are no canals) depending on the rainfall. There are two popular explanations of the name Bāgaṛ. One is, that it refers to the bagar or coarse grass, used for making ropes, which grows in that tract. Another is, that it means the country of goats, from the Pañjābī bakaṛ or bakkaṛ, a goat.

In giving the following estimated numbers of speakers of Bāngarū under its various names, it is necessary to explain that those given for Delhi are not the same as those originally published in the Rough List of Languages of that district. That list wrongly reported the Ahīrwāṭī of the Ḍābar under the name of Mēwātī, and also gave separate figures for Jāṭū and Chamarwā, which are one and the same form of speech. The Delhi figures for Jāṭū now given are therefore the sum of the original figures for Jāṭū and Chamarwā.

Bāngarū, returned as Bāngaru.

Karnal	791,000
Patiala (Nirwana)	80,000
South Nabha	4,535

Returned as Jāṭū.

Rohtak (excluding Jhajjar)	495,972
Delhi (including Chamarwā)	256,324

Returned as Hariānī or Dēswalī.

Hissar	315,864
Dujana	36,450
Jind (Jind and north-east Dadrī)	205,639
TOTAL	2,165,784

Bāngarū, being a mixed dialect, is not described in detail here. Its peculiarities will be discussed when we come to deal with the specimens.

[1] In Appendix II of the Sirsa Settlement Report, Mr. J. Wilson states that the genitive postposition of 'Dēswālī' is gō (masc. obl. gē; fem. gī). This really belongs to Bāgṛī. I have not found this in any of the specimens received from Hariānā, and under any circumstances, Sirsā is well outside the true Hariānā country.

BRAJ BHĀKHĀ OR ANTARBĒDĪ.

Name of dialect.

The dialect is called Braj Bhākhā (also spelt Braj Bhāshā), i.e., the language of the Braj Maṇḍal. It is also called Antarbēdī, the language of the Antarbēd (Sanskrit Antarvēdī, literally the country within the sacrificial ground, i.e., the holy land, par excellence, of India) or the Doab between the Ganges and the Jamna. Neither name completely describes the language, for it is spoken far beyond the Braj Maṇḍal and the Doab, although it does not by any means cover the whole of the latter tract. The Braj Maṇḍal almost exactly coincides with the modern district of Muttra, if we exclude the eastern corner comprising Sadabad and a portion of Mahāban, which were added to the district in the year 1832. The Braj Maṇḍal (Sanskrit Vraja-maṇḍala), or Region of the Cowpens, is the country round Gōkula and Vṛindāvana, the abode of Kṛishṇa's foster-father Nanda, and the scene of that demi-god's juvenile adventures.

Instead of 'Braj Bhākhā,' the name of the country 'Braj' is often loosely applied to mean the language. The name Antarbēdī is frequently applied to the dialects spoken in the central Doab, i.e., in the districts of Agra, Etah, Mainpuri, Farukhabad, and Etawah. The language of Farukhabad and Etawah is Kanaujī, and that of the others Braj Bhākhā.

Where spoken.

Taking Muttra as the centre, Braj Bhākhā is spoken to the south in the district of Agra, in the greater part of the State of Bharatpur, in the States of Dholpur and Karauli, in the western part of Gwalior, and in the east of Jaipur. To the north it is spoken in the eastern part of Gurgaon. To the north-east, in the Dōāb, in Bulandshahr, Aligarh, Etah, and Mainpurī, and, across the Ganges, in Budaon, Bareilly, and the Tarai parganas of Naini Tal. It thus occupies an irregularly shaped tract running from south-west to north-east, and measuring on an average 90 miles wide by 300 miles in length. It covers, roughly speaking, an area of 27,000 square miles. It is spoken at home by, in round numbers, 7,850,000 people.

Varieties.

Over this area Braj Bhākhā exhibits a few variations. The standard form of the dialect is best illustrated by the language of Muttra, Aligarh, and West Agra. To the north of Aligarh lies the district of Bulandshahr, where the language is much mixed with Vernacular Hindōstānī. So far as the Braj Bhākhā portion of its grammar is concerned, the only important difference is the change of the typical Braj termination au to ō. Thus, chalyō, not chalyau, gone. In the east of Agra, Dholpur, the plains portion of Karaulī, and the neighbouring portion of Gwalior, the language is very nearly the standard, the only important difference being the omission of the letter y from the past participles of verbs, thus, chalau, not chalyau. In the Doab we find a similar omission of y in the districts of Etah and Mainpurī, the most eastern of the Braj Bhākhā area, and here we have in addition the Bulandshahr change of au to ō, as in chalō, not chalyau. The same peculiarities are observable across the Ganges in the districts of Budaun and Bareilly. In each case we see Braj Bhākhā fading off into Kanaujī, in which chalō is the regular form. Again, in the north-west of Gwalior, we also observe the change of au to ō and the omission of y, the language in this case fading off into the Bhadaurī form of Bundēlī.

In Bharatpur and in the Ḍāṅg dialects to its south, which lie to the west of Karaulī, the y is preserved, and au is sometimes changed to ō and sometimes not. Here we have the language fading off into the Jaipurī dialect of Rājasthānī in which the y exists, but the termination is always ō, not au. Similarly in Gurgaon, the dialect is fading off into Mēwātī, and here again the au has become ō, but the y is preserved. Finally in the Tarai Parganas of Naini Tal, we find a mongrel dialect, locally known as Bhuksā, from one of the tribes which employ it. I have classed it as Braj Bhākhā, but it might with equal propriety be put under Kanaujī or Hindōstānī.

Natives do not recognise all these distinctions. They, however, admit the following varieties. The Braj Bhākhā of the east, where it is shading off into Kanaujī, they often call Antarbēdī. The dialect of the north-east corner of Gwalior, opposite the State of Dholpur, the country of the Sikarwār Rajputs, they call Sikarwāṛī. The dialect of the plains portion of Karaulī and of the portion of Gwalior opposite that State across the Chambal, they call Jādōbāṭī, from the Jādōs who are settled there. The broken country in the south of Bharatpur, in Karaulī, and in the east of Jaipur is called the Ḍāṅg and the dialect spoken by the Gūjar inhabitants of these hills is called Ḍāṅgī, with further subdivisions in Jaipur into Ḍāṅgī proper, Ḍūgarwārā, Kālīmāl, and Ḍāṅgbhāṅg. As already stated, the mixed dialect of the Naini Tal Tarai is called Bhuksā.

Taking the use of yau, au, yō, or ō in the past participles as our criterion, we are able to classify the various forms of Braj Bhākhā as follows :—

I.—Standard Braj (chalyau).
- Muttra.
- Aligarh.
- West Agra.

II.—Standard Braj (chalyō).
- Bulandshahr.

III.—Standard Braj (chalau).
- East Agra.
- Dholpur.
- Jādōbāṭī (Karauli plains and Gwalior).

IV.—Braj merging into Kanaujī (chalō).
- Etah.
- Mainpurī.
- Budaun.
- Bareilly.

V.—Braj merging into Bhadaurī (chalō).
- Sikarwāṛī (north-west of Gwalior).

VI.—Braj merging into Rājasthānī (Jaipurī) (chalyau or chalyō).
- Bharatpur.
- Ḍāṅg Dialects.

VII.—Braj merging into Rājasthānī (Mēwātī) (chalyō).
- Gurgaon.

VIII.—Mixed dialect of Naini Tal Tarai.

Other variations from the Standard.

In the district of Aligarh, and in the east of the district of Agra, we come across a very peculiar form of the pronoun of the third person, viz.: gwa or gu, he, she, it or that. So far as the specimens show, this form only occurs in this tract, but in the Ḍāṅg dialects we find a form hwa, which suggests its origin. In the districts in the east of the Braj Bhākhā tract we notice a tendency to run consonants into each other, especially when the first of them is the letter r. This is also a marked feature of the neighbouring Bhadaurī form of Bundēlī. Examples are khachchu for kharchu, expenditure (Mainpurī); matt for marat, dying (Sikarwāṛī); ṭhākussā for ṭhākur-sāhib (Etah); and (even so far north-west as Aligarh) naukanni for naukarani, servants.

In the districts of Budaun and Bulandshahr, the Braj Bhākhā is much mixed with the neighbouring vernacular Hindōstānī, just as in the former district it is also mixed with Kanaujī. One more small point may be noticed. Over a great portion of the Braj Bhākhā tract there is an instrumental case ending in an, as in bhūkhan, by hunger. In Agra and Dholpur we have instead a form in ani, thus, bhūkhani. This is an interesting survival of the time when the suffix nē was once used for the instrumental as well as for the agent case.

The Ḍāṅg dialects.

In the broken country in the south of Bharatpur, in Karauli, and in the east of Jaipur, the Braj Bhākhā employed by the Gūjar inhabitants presents many notable peculiarities. These are described in the section relating to those dialects. Suffice it to say here that they form a connecting link between Braj Bhākhā and the Jaipurī dialect of Rājasthānī. Like many rude forms of speech they are of importance for the comparative philology of the modern Indo-Aryan vernaculars.

It will be seen from the above that there exist several cross-divisions in the classification of the various forms of Braj Bhākhā. It is hence by no means easy to arrange the districts in which it is spoken in an order which is convenient for the examination of the specimens. That given in the following paragraph is the one which I have adopted :—

Number of speakers.

The number of speakers of Braj Bhākhā at home is reported to be as follows :—

Standard—
Muttra		611,721
Aligarh		992,200
Agra		547,000
Dholpur		262,335
Jādōbāṭī—
Karauli	80,000
Gwalior	60,000
		140,000
Sikarwāṛī (Gwalior)		127,000
Etah		401,000
Mainpurī		532,000
Bareilly		857,213
			4,470,469
Braj Bhākhā mixed with Vernacular Hindōstānī—
Bulandshahr		941,000
Budaun		826,500
Naini Tal Tarai		199,521
			1,967,021
	Carried over		6,437,490

In Bharatpur and in the Ḍāṅg dialects to its south, which lie to the west of Karaulī, the y is preserved, and au is sometimes changed to ō and sometimes not. Here we have the language fading off into the Jaipurī dialect of Rājasthānī in which the y exists, but the termination is always ō, not au. Similarly in Gurgaon, the dialect is fading off into Mēwātī, and here again the au has become ō, but the y is preserved. Finally in the Tarai Parganas of Naini Tal, we find a mongrel dialect, locally known as Bhuksā, from one of the tribes which employ it. I have classed it as Braj Bhākhā, but it might with equal propriety be put under Kanaujī or Hindōstānī.

Natives do not recognise all these distinctions. They, however, admit the following varieties. The Braj Bhākhā of the east, where it is shading off into Kanaujī, they often call Antarbēdī. The dialect of the north-east corner of Gwalior, opposite the State of Dholpur, the country of the Sikarwār Rajputs, they call Sikarwāṛī. The dialect of the plains portion of Karaulī and of the portion of Gwalior opposite that State across the Chambal, they call Jādōbāṭī, from the Jādōs who are settled there. The broken country in the south of Bharatpur, in Karaulī, and in the east of Jaipur is called the Ḍāṅg and the dialect spoken by the Gūjar inhabitants of these hills is called Ḍāṅgī, with further subdivisions in Jaipur into Ḍāṅgī proper, Ḍūgarwārā, Kālīmāl, and Ḍāṅgbhāṅg. As already stated, the mixed dialect of the Naini Tal Tarai is called Bhuksā.

Taking the use of yau, au, yō, or ō in the past participles as our criterion, we are able to classify the various forms of Braj Bhākhā as follows :—

I.—Standard Braj (chalyau).
- Muttra.
- Aligarh.
- West Agra.

II.—Standard Braj (chalyō).
- Bulandshahr.

III.—Standard Braj (chalau).
- East Agra.
- Dholpur.
- Jādōbāṭī (Karauli plains and Gwalior).

IV.—Braj merging into Kanaujī (chalō).
- Etah.
- Mainpurī.
- Budaun.
- Bareilly.

V.—Braj merging into Bhadaurī (chalō).
- Sikarwāṛī (north-west of Gwalior).

VI.—Braj merging into Rājasthānī (Jaipurī) (chalyau or chalyō).
- Bharatpur.
- Ḍāṅg Dialects.

VII.—Braj merging into Rājasthānī (Mēwātī) (chalyō).
- Gurgaon.

VIII.—Mixed dialect of Naini Tal Tarai.

Other variations from the Standard.

In the district of Aligarh, and in the east of the district of Agra, we come across a very peculiar form of the pronoun of the third person, viz., gwa or gu, he, she, it or that. So far as the specimens show, this form only occurs in this tract, but in the Ḍāṅg dialects we find a form hwa, which suggests its origin. In the districts in the east of the Braj Bhākhā tract we notice a tendency to run consonants into each other, especially when the first of them is the letter r. This is also a marked feature of the neighbouring Bhadaurī form of Bundēlī. Examples are khachchu for kharchu, expenditure (Mainpurī); matt for marat, dying (Sikarwārī); ṭhākussā for ṭhākur-sāhib (Etah); and (even so far north-west as Aligarh) naukanni for naukarani, servants.

In the districts of Budaun and Bulandshahr, the Braj Bhākhā is much mixed with the neighbouring vernacular Hindōstānī, just as in the former district it is also mixed with Kanaujī. One more small point may be noticed. Over a great portion of the Braj Bhākhā tract there is an instrumental case ending in an, as in bhūkhan, by hunger. In Agra and Dholpur we have instead a form in ani, thus, bhūkhani. This is an interesting survival of the time when the suffix nē was once used for the instrumental as well as for the agent case.

The Ḍāṅg dialects.

In the broken country in the south of Bharatpur, in Karauli, and in the east of Jaipur, the Braj Bhākhā employed by the Gūjar inhabitants presents many notable peculiarities. These are described in the section relating to those dialects. Suffice it to say here that they form a connecting link between Braj Bhākhā and the Jaipurī dialect of Rājasthānī. Like many rude forms of speech they are of importance for the comparative philology of the modern Indo-Aryan vernaculars.

It will be seen from the above that there exist several cross-divisions in the classification of the various forms of Braj Bhākhā. It is hence by no means easy to arrange the districts in which it is spoken in an order which is convenient for the examination of the specimens. That given in the following paragraph is the one which I have adopted :—

Number of speakers.

The number of speakers of Braj Bhākhā at home is reported to be as follows :—

Standard—
Muttra		611,721
Aligarh		992,200
Agra		547,000
Dholpur		262,335
Jādōbāṭi—
Karauli	80,000
Gwalior	60,000
		140,000
Sikarwārī (Gwalior)		127,000
Etah		401,000
Mainpurī		382,000
Bareilly		357,213
			4,470,469
Braj Bhākhā mixed with Vernacular Hindōstānī—
Bulandshahr		941,000
Budaun		826,500
Naini Tal Tarai		199,521
			1,967,021
Carried over			6,437,490

	Brought forward . .	6,437,490
Braj Bhākhā merging into Rājasthānī—
Gurgaon	149,700
Bharatpur	502,303
Dāng Dialects	774,781
		1,426,784
	GRAND TOTAL . .	7,864,274

No information is available as to the number of speakers who employ Braj Bhākhā outside its own area.

Characteristic of Braj Bhākhā.

Braj Bhākhā is more typically Western Hindī than is literary Hindōstānī, and is also more archaic. The latter dialect, based on the form of speech employed in the north-west corner of the Western Hindī area, is strongly influenced by Pañjābī. It follows the latter language, more especially, in the preference for the termination ā for strong masculine tadbhava nouns, adjectives, and participles, and in employing only one form of the future tense, that made by suffixing gā. In Braj Bhākhā au is generally preferred to ā, and, though gau is also employed to express the future, a form of which the characteristic letter is h is more commonly met with. The future made with gā or gau extends over all the north of India from the Panjab to Bihar. In the west it is the only form, but its use becomes more and more rare as we go eastwards, so that in Bihar it is only met in sporadic instances.

The archaic nature of Braj Bhākhā is well illustrated by the occasional retention of a neuter gender. In most of the dialects of northern India this gender has nearly altogether disappeared,—nouns, which in former days were neuter, having as a rule become masculine. In Braj Bhākhā, however, it is occasionally preserved. For instance, the infinitive was originally a neuter, hence, in Braj Bhākhā we have not only the usual masculine form, e.g., mārᵃnau (Hindōstānī, mārᵃnā), to strike, but also, and more usually, the neuter form mārᵃnaũ. In the rural dialects this retention of the neuter is more widely spread than in the Braj Bhākhā of literature; for instance, we have the neuter word sōnaũ or sōnõ, gold; and even a neuter adjective in phrases like apᵃnaũ (or apᵉnõ) dhan, his own wealth.

I have said above that Braj Bhākhā generally prefers the termination au to the ā of Hindōstānī. Towards the east of the area in which the dialect is spoken, there is a tendency to pronounce this au as ō, after the Kanaujī fashion. I shall, henceforth, treat these terminations au and ō as convertible terms. The standard Braj of Muttra, the Doab, and Rohilkhand, does not use this au termination for nouns substantives. In the case of these it takes the termination ā, not au. Thus, ghōṛā, not ghōṛau, a horse. The oblique form singular and the nominative plural of these nouns ends in ē, also as in Hindōstānī. As we go south of Muttra, however, we find these nouns ending in au or ō, and, moreover, the oblique form singular and the nominative plural ends in ā, not ē,—an idiom which is borrowed from Rājasthānī. Adjectives (including genitives and participles), on the other hand, universally end in au or ō. Thus, standard Braj, ghōṛē-kau, southern Braj, ghōṛā-kau, of a horse; bhalau, good; chalyau, gone. Besides aũ, corresponding to the Hindōstānī õ, nouns have an oblique plural in ni or n, as in ghōṛan-kaũ, or ghōṛani-kau, of horses.

The pronouns show many divergencies from standard Hindōstānī. These will be described later on, when dealing with the grammar. Here it will suffice to draw attention to the frequent use of the word haũ, meaning 'I.'

As regards verbs, the present tense of the auxiliary does not differ materially from Hindōstānī, but this is not the case with the past tense which is hau or hutau, not thā, (I) was.

In the active verb, the present participle ends in tu or t (e.g., māratu, or mārat, striking), not in tā, as in the Hindōstānī mār'tā. The past participle of standard Braj is very characteristic. It ends in yau, as in māryau, struck. As we go eastwards, there is a tendency to drop the y, so that we have forms like chalau, chalō. On the other hand, to the south, the y is inserted in adjectives which are not participles, so that we have words like āchhyau, good; tihāryau, your. The y, which properly belongs only to the past participle, is a survival of an old Sanskrit i. The stages may be represented as follows:—Sanskrit, māritakaḥ; Prakrit, māridaō, māriaō, māriau; Braj, māryau.

The tense which in Hindōstānī is often called the aorist and is usually employed as a present subjunctive, is in reality an old present indicative, the meaning of which has been specialised. In Braj Bhākhā it is quite common to find it used in its original meaning of a present indicative. When it is desired to define the meaning of this tense, so as to make it a present definite, this is done by adding to it the present tense of the verb substantive. Thus, haũ māraũ-haũ, I am striking; tũ mārai-hai, thou art striking. Another form of the present definite is made with the present participle, as in ordinary Hindōstānī. Similarly the imperfect tense is made with the present participle, but in some parts of the Braj Bhākhā area we find another set of forms of the imperfect made by adding the past tense of the verb substantive to what is usually identified[1] as the third person singular of the simple present for all persons and numbers. Thus, mārai-hau, I, thou, or he was striking; mārai-hē, we, you, they were striking.

The future tense of Braj Bhākhā may be formed by adding gau to the simple present, thus, māraũ-gau, thus following Hindōstānī. The more usual method is, however, to add ih or aih to the root, and then to suffix the same terminations as those of the simple present. Thus, mārihaũ, I shall strike. This tense is derived directly from the ancient Sanskrit. The steps are Sanskrit, mārishyāmi; Prakrit, mārissāmi, mārihāmi, mārihaũ; Braj Bhākhā, mārihaũ. It is thus seen that the Braj Bhākhā future is identical with the latest form of the Prakrit future.

Literature

Braj Bhākhā has a long and illustrious roll of authors. The earliest work with which I am acquainted is the Prithīrāj Rāsau of Chand Bardāī. Chand states himself that he was born at Lahore, and he was the most famous of the Rajput bards. Nevertheless he wrote neither in Pañjābī nor in Rājasthānī, but in an old form of Braj Bhākhā. He was the court poet of Prithīrāj Chauhān of Delhi, the last of the great Hindū monarchs, who was conquered and slain by the Muhammadan invaders under Shahābu'd-dīn in the year 1192 A.D. In the Prithīrāj Rāsau, Chand celebrates his master's exploits. These took place mainly in the middle Doab and the north of Rajputana and Bundelkhand, so that the employment

[1] I say 'usually identified,' but the identification is not, in my opinion, correct. I look upon mārai as an old locative of a verbal noun, 'on striking.' Thus, mārai-hau means 'I, thou, or he was on striking' (cf. English a-striking). An exactly similar idiom is found in the Magahī dialect of Bihārī.

	Brought forward . .	6,437,490
Braj Bhākhā merging into Rājasthānī—
Gurgaon	149,700
Bharatpur	502,303
Ḍāṅg Dialects	774,781
		1,426,784
	GRAND TOTAL . .	7,864,274

No information is available as to the number of speakers who employ Braj Bhākhā outside its own area.

Characteristic of Braj Bhākhā.

Braj Bhākhā is more typically Western Hindī than is literary Hindōstānī, and is also more archaic. The latter dialect, based on the form of speech employed in the north-west corner of the Western Hindī area, is strongly influenced by Pañjābī. It follows the latter language, more especially, in the preference for the termination ā for strong masculine tadbhava nouns, adjectives, and participles, and in employing only one form of the future tense, that made by suffixing gā. In Braj Bhākhā au is generally preferred to ā, and, though gau is also employed to express the future, a form of which the characteristic letter is h is more commonly met with. The future made with gā or gau extends over all the north of India from the Panjab to Bihar. In the west it is the only form, but its use becomes more and more rare as we go eastwards, so that in Bihar it is only met in sporadic instances.

The archaic nature of Braj Bhākhā is well illustrated by the occasional retention of a neuter gender. In most of the dialects of northern India this gender has nearly altogether disappeared,—nouns, which in former days were neuter, having as a rule become masculine. In Braj Bhākhā, however, it is occasionally preserved. For instance, the infinitive was originally a neuter, hence, in Braj Bhākhā we have not only the usual masculine form, e.g., mārᵃnau (Hindōstānī, mārᵃnā), to strike, but also, and more usually, the neuter form mārᵃnaũ. In the rural dialects this retention of the neuter is more widely spread than in the Braj Bhākhā of literature; for instance, we have the neuter word sōnaũ or sōnõ, gold; and even a neuter adjective in phrases like apᵃnaũ (or apᵃnõ) dhan, his own wealth.

I have said above that Braj Bhākhā generally prefers the termination au to the ā of Hindōstānī. Towards the east of the area in which the dialect is spoken, there is a tendency to pronounce this au as ō, after the Kanaujī fashion. I shall, henceforth, treat these terminations au and ō as convertible terms. The standard Braj of Muttra, the Doab, and Rohilkhand, does not use this au termination for nouns substantives. In the case of these it takes the termination ā, not au. Thus, ghōṛā, not ghōṛau, a horse. The oblique form singular and the nominative plural of these nouns ends in ē, also as in Hindōstānī. As we go south of Muttra, however, we find these nouns ending in au or ō, and, moreover, the oblique form singular and the nominative plural ends in ā, not ē,—an idiom which is borrowed from Rājasthānī. Adjectives (including genitives and participles), on the other hand, universally end in au or ō. Thus, standard Braj, ghōṛē-kau, southern Braj, ghōṛā-kau, of a horse; bhalau, good; chalyau, gone. Besides aũ, corresponding to the Hindōstānī õ, nouns have an oblique plural in ni or n, as in ghōṛan-kaũ, or ghōṛani-kau, of horses.

The pronouns show many divergencies from standard Hindōstānī. These will be described later on, when dealing with the grammar. Here it will suffice to draw attention to the frequent use of the word haũ, meaning 'I.'

As regards verbs, the present tense of the auxiliary does not differ materially from Hindōstānī, but this is not the case with the past tense which is hau or hutau, not thā, (I) was.

In the active verb, the present participle ends in tu or t (e.g., māratu, or mārat, striking), not in tā, as in the Hindōstānī mār°tā. The past participle of standard Braj is very characteristic. It ends in yau, as in māryau, struck. As we go eastwards, there is a tendency to drop the y, so that we have forms like chalau, chalō. On the other hand, to the south, the y is inserted in adjectives which are not participles, so that we have words like āchhyau, good; tihāryau, your. The y, which properly belongs only to the past participle, is a survival of an old Sanskrit i. The stages may be represented as follows:—Sanskrit, māritakaḥ; Prakrit, māridaō, māriaō, māriau; Braj, māryau.

The tense which in Hindōstānī is often called the aorist and is usually employed as a present subjunctive, is in reality an old present indicative, the meaning of which has been specialised. In Braj Bhākhā it is quite common to find it used in its original meaning of a present indicative. When it is desired to define the meaning of this tense, so as to make it a present definite, this is done by adding to it the present tense of the verb substantive. Thus, haũ māraũ-haũ, I am striking; tū mārai-hai, thou art striking. Another form of the present definite is made with the present participle, as in ordinary Hindōstānī. Similarly the imperfect tense is made with the present participle, but in some parts of the Braj Bhākhā area we find another set of forms of the imperfect made by adding the past tense of the verb substantive to what is usually identified[1] as the third person singular of the simple present for all persons and numbers. Thus, mārai-hau, I, thou, or he was striking; mārai-hē, we, you, they were striking.

The future tense of Braj Bhākhā may be formed by adding gau to the simple present, thus, māraũ-gau, thus following Hindōstānī. The more usual method is, however, to add ih or aih to the root, and then to suffix the same terminations as those of the simple present. Thus, mārihaũ, I shall strike. This tense is derived directly from the ancient Sanskrit. The steps are Sanskrit, mārishyāmi; Prakrit, mārissāmi, mārihāmi, mārihaũ; Braj Bhākhā, mārihaũ. It is thus seen that the Braj Bhākhā future is identical with the latest form of the Prakrit future.

Literature.

Braj Bhākhā has a long and illustrious roll of authors. The earliest work with which I am acquainted is the Prithīrāj Rāsau of Chand Bardāī. Chand states himself that he was born at Lahore, and he was the most famous of the Rajput bards. Nevertheless he wrote neither in Pañjābī nor in Rājasthānī, but in an old form of Braj Bhākhā. He was the court poet of Prithīrāj Chauhān of Delhi, the last of the great Hindū monarchs, who was conquered and slain by the Muhammadan invaders under Shahābu'd-dīn in the year 1192 A.D. In the Prithīrāj Rāsau, Chand celebrates his master's exploits. These took place mainly in the middle Doab and the north of Rajputana and Bundelkhand, so that the employment of Braj Bhākhā is not surprising. The language is so old that parts of it are actually pure Prakrit. Unfortunately the value of the work either as a historical document or for linguistic study is discounted by the fact that grave doubts exist as to its genuineness. It is, in any case, certain that it contains copious interpolations. The poem has not yet been critically edited in its entirety, but the Nāgarī Prachāriṇī Sabhā of Benares has undertaken the task, and a good edition is now (1812) becoming available to students.

[1] I say 'usually identified,' but the identification is not, in my opinion, correct. I look upon mārai as an old locative of a verbal noun, 'on striking.' Thus, mārai-hau means 'I, thou, or he was on striking' (cf. English a-striking). An exactly similar idiom is found in the Magahī dialect of Bihārī.

The Kṛishṇa-cult of Braj.

During the fifteenth century there was current in northern India a system of Vishṇu-worship, founded by a learned Brāhman, whose date is uncertain, named Vishṇu-swāmī. The incarnation of the deity which was principally adored was that of Kṛishṇa, conjointly with that of his spouse Rādhā. Vishṇu-swāmī preached to Brāhmaṇs only, and his teaching was not promulgated as a popular religion,—his followers were a select few. At the end of the fifteenth century, a Tailiṅga Brāhman named Vallabhāchārya changed all this, by popularising the cult of Rādhā-Kṛishṇa, and introducing it to the mass of the people. The faith centred round Mathurā,—in other words, the Braj Maṇḍal,—the scene of the sports of the youthful Kṛishṇa, and of his amours with Rādhā and the other herdmaidens of Gōkula. Here Vallabhāchārya finally settled. He left eight famous pupils, who are collectively known as the Ashṭa Chhāp. The most conspicuous of them were Viṭṭhalnāth and Sūr-dās. These eight old master-singers settled in the country hallowed by their traditions, and became founders of the illustrious colony of Gōkulastha Gosā̃īs, filling all the Doab with the music of their songs. They employed the Braj Bhākhā dialect as the medium of their verse, and since their time, just as Awadhī has become the language, first of the Gestes of Rāma, and, secondly, of all north Indian Epic poetry, so Braj Bhākhā has ever since remained the one suitable vehicle for the praise of Kṛishṇa and his divine mistress. The Ashṭa Chhāp had many pupils and many imitators, several of whom have displayed signal command over language, and have succeeded admirably in composing the padas which are characteristic of their style,—short mystic love songs, in which the love of Kṛishṇa for Rādhā is compared to the love of the Supreme Deity for the human soul. The graceful diction, and at the same time the passionate yearning of some of these hymns have not often been surpassed.

The greatest of all this group was undoubtedly Sūr-dās (flourished 1550). He was a son of a court singer to the Emperor Akbar, and was blind,—the youngest of seven brothers, of whom six had been killed in battle fighting for the independence of Hindostan. He was a voluminous writer, and his fame chiefly rests upon his well-known Sūr-sāgar, a collection of stanzas extending to something like 60,000 lines. He justly holds a high place in the ranks of Indian literature. He excelled in all styles. He could, if occasion required, be more obscure than the Sphinx, and in the next verse be as clear as a ray of light. Other writers may have equalled him in some particular quality, but (in his special line) he combined the best qualities of all. To European taste there is too much sameness in his narrative style, —a sweet evenness, it is true,—to allow him to claim all that Indian devotees would render to him. The blind bard of Mathurā was a great poet, but nowhere does he reach to that high nobility of thought which illumines all that his great rival, Tulsī-dās of Audh, has written.

To give a list of Sūr-dās's successors and imitators would be unprofitable, and to describe their work at any length would occupy too much space. I content myself with referring to Nābhā-dās (fl. 1600), originally a Ḍōm by caste, the author of the Bhakt-māl, a collection of legends about the great Vaishṇava reformers, from which some historical matter may be extracted. Other famous writers in Braj Bhākhā are Dēva Datt (early 17th century) of Mainpurī, who has a great reputation amongst Indian scholars and Bihārī Lāl (fl. 1660), the author of the incomparable Sat-saī, or seven hundred couplets in what is some of the daintiest and most ingenious verse that was ever written. The Sat-saī has aptly been described as the despair of translators and the mine of commentators. The ease with which its author inevitably uses the right word in the right place makes translation almost impossible, and the compressed nature of his style,—each couplet being in itself a completely finished miniature,—gives rise to difficulties that afford an irresistible temptation to scholars who are learned men without being poets, and who love to hide what is obscure in the still deeper darkness of paraphrase and commentary.

AUTHORITIES.

The first recognition of Braj Bhākhā as a distinct dialect with which I am acquainted is Lallū Lāl's grammar mentioned below, which was published in 1811. The early Jesuit Missionaries do not seem to have been acquainted with it, nor is it mentioned in old collections of language-specimens such as the Sprachmeister. In the following list I mention only those grammars and other aids to the student which deal directly with the dialect. Full information regarding other works in Braj Bhākhā will be found in the general bibliography of Western Hindī.

The only translation of the Scriptures into Braj Bhākhā with which I am acquainted is the 'Bruj' version of the New Testament by the Serampore Missionaries (Carey and Chamberlain, 1818—1833).

GRAMMARS, DICTIONARIES, AND READING-BOOKS.

Lallū Lāl,—General principles of Inflection and Conjugation in the Bruj B,hak,ha, or the Language spoken in the country of Bruj, in the District of Goaliyur, in the Dominions of the Raja of Bhurtpoor, as also in the extensive countries of Bueswara, Bhudawur, Unter Bed, and Boondelkhund. Composed by Shree Lulloo Lal Kub, B,hak,ha Moonshee in the College of Fort William. Calcutta, 1811.

Garcin de Tassy,—Anecdote relative au Braj Bhakha, traduite de l'Hindoustani. Journal Asiatique, xi (1827), p. 298.

Garcin de Tassy,—Rudiments de la langue Hindoui. Paris, 1847.

Garcin de Tassy,—Hindi Hindui Muntakhabat. Chrestomathie Hindie et Hinduie à l'usage des Élèves de l'École spéciale des Langues Orientales Vivantes près la Bibliothèque Nationale. Paris, 1849.

Garcin de Tassy,—Tableau de Kaliyug ou de l'Âge du Fer, par Wischnu Dâs, traduit de l'Hindoui Journal Asiatique, iv. xix (1852), p. 551.

Price, W.,—Selections, Hindee and Hindoostanee, to which are prefixed the rudiments of Hindee and Bruj Bhakha Grammar. Calcutta, 1827; 2nd Edition, 1830.

Ballantyne, J. R.,—Hindī and Braj Bhākhā Grammar. London, 1839; 2nd Edition, ib., 1868.

Ballantyne, J. R.,—Grammar of the Hindustani Language, with brief Notices of the Braj and Dakhani dialects. London, 1842.

Bate, J. D.,—A Dictionary of the Hindee Language. Benares, 1875. Contains many Braj Bhākhā forms.

Kellogg, Rev. S. H., D.D., LL.D.,—A Grammar of the Hindī Language, in which are treated the High Hindí, Braj, ... etc., with copious philological Notes. 1st edition, 1876; 2nd edition, London, 1893.

'Arya,'—Hindi Grammar in Hindi and English, in which is treated the Braj Dialect with illustrations from the Rājnīti, by Arya. Benares. No date.

Grammar.

A skeleton grammar of the Braj Bhākhā dialect is given below. In writing it, I have presumed that the reader is acquainted with the principles of standard Hindōstānī. The following additional information will be found of use. For the sake of completeness much is a repetition of matter in the preceding pages.

In many parts of the Braj Bhākhā area, especially to the east and south-east, near the Bhadaurī country, the letter r when it precedes a consonant is often elided, and the following consonant is then doubled. Examples are maddu for mard, a man; majjāu, for mar-jāu, die (imperative); mattũ̃, for marat-hũ̃, I am dying; naukannu-sũ̃, for *nauk*ª*ranu-sũ̃*, to the servants (after a verb of saying). In Aligarh we meet a similar elision of j in bhēd dayau, for bhēj dayau, he sent.

The sound of the letter w is very indefinite. It is often pronounced as b. Thus, the word for 'he' is as often bō as wō. The true sound is really something between the two letters. The letter w often becomes m, especially after a long vowel. Examples are mahã̃ (or bhã̃) for wahã̃, there; charāmatu-ai, is grazing; āmatu-ai, is coming; manāman, to celebrate; jāmẽ̃, they may go; rōmati, she (was) weeping; bāman, fifty-two.

Aspirates are very loosely dealt with. They are quite frequently dropped in the verb substantive. Thus, in Aligarh, we have, ũ̃, I am; ẽ, thou art, he is; ẽ̃, we are, they are; au, you are; ō, he was. So, we have hāt for hāth, a hand. H is moved in its position in bhã̃, for wahã̃, there; bhaut, for bahut, much; and kulaph, for quſl, a bolt.

In Aligarh, we have ky changed to ch in chõ̃, for kyõ̃, why.

Except in the Braj Maṇḍal and the adjacent country, the diphthong au, which is so characteristic of Braj Bhākhā, is very commonly changed to ō. In fact, over the whole area these two letters may be looked upon as mutually convertible. Thus, chalyau or chalyō, he went.

Attention has already been drawn to the fact that in Braj Bhākhā, strong masculine adjectives (including genitives and participles) of a-bases, end in au, as in bhalau, good; ghar-kau, of the house; chalyau, gone. In the Braj of the Braj Maṇḍal, and of the country to its north and east, this is not the case with substantives. These end in ā, as in Hindōstānī. Substantives end in au or ō only in the south country bordering on Rajputana. In the same part of the country, these substantives form their oblique singulars in ā, and their oblique plurals in ã̃, and we meet sporadic instances of this further north. Thus, even in Muttra, we find thōrē dinã̃ pāchhē, after a few days, in which dinã̃ is used instead of the regular Braj Bhākhā form dinan. These oblique forms in ā and ã̃ are no doubt due to the influence of Rājasthānī. Generally these nouns have their singular oblique form and their nominative plural in ai or ē, and their oblique plurals in an or ani. Thus, ghōṛā, a horse; ghōṛai-kau or ghōṛē-kau, of a horse; ghōṛai or ghōṛē, horses; ghōran-kau or ghōṛani-kau, of horses. There is one important group of exceptions. Nouns of relationship, even when their nominatives end in ā, have the Rājasthānī oblique forms everywhere. Thus in Muttra we have dō chhōrā (not chhōrē), two sons; again, *lōh*ª*rē bēṭā-nē*, by the younger son.

The letter ē added to a noun gives the force of the indefinite article (compare the Persian idiom). Thus, janē-kau, of a certain man; *nauk*ª*rē* (Muttra), a servant.

There is the usual locative in ē, which is found all over northern India, as in gharē, in a house. There is also an instrumental in ō or õ, as in bhūkhō or bhūkhõ, (I die) of hunger.

The postposition of the case of the agent is usually nẽ or naĩ. Occasionally we meet the form nu, as in tum-nu mahᵉmānī karī-ē (Aligarh), you have given a feast. This postposition is the origin of another instrumental case in n, ni, or nu, according to locality. Thus, bhūkhan, bhūkhani, or bhūkhanu, by hunger. This instrumental in an has become confused with the oblique plural in an, which has an altogether different derivation, and hence an i or a u is often suffixed to this oblique plural form which has no business to be there. Thus, besides ghōṛan, we have ghōṛani, and besides gharan, we have gharanu. Similarly we meet majūranu-kau, of servants; kamērenu-kũ, to workers, and many other such forms.

Now and then we meet with instances of other old case forms, such are rājai (Aligarh), the accusative-dative of rājā, a king. So we have the termination u added to the nominative of weak a-bases, as in gharu for ghar, a house. Indeed, this termination is often used in the oblique cases as well, where, however, its derivation is different.

There are several instances of the survival of the neuter gender. These have been dealt with ante on p. 72, and need not be again discussed.

Adjectives which end in au often follow, in the south, the example of the past participle, and insert a y. Thus, āchhyau, good; mēryau, my; tihāryau, your.

The accusative-dative of the personal pronouns often takes the forms mōē, tōē, and wāē, in different varieties of spelling. The final ē of these forms is very loosely attached to the base, so that, when emphatic particles are added they are inserted between the two. Thus, mō-ū-ē, me also. In Aligarh and East Agra there is a peculiar form of the personal pronoun of the third person, viz., gu or gwa, he, that; oblique singular gwā. Nominative plural gwē; oblique plural guni. Connected with it is gwã or ṅgwā, there. Another demonstrative pronoun which we meet is nearly the same in form as the relative pronoun. In Aligarh and the east it takes the form ji, and means 'this.' To the south it takes the form jē, and means 'that.' Similarly we have words like jhã meaning 'here' or 'there,' according to locality, and jab, the equivalent of tab, then, besides meaning 'when.'

I have already mentioned the way in which, in some localities, the initial h of the auxiliary verb is dropped. Here I may also draw attention to the following forms found in the Doab. Ni-ũ=I am not. Hai is used for hwai, having been, and hatu-ē, a nearly pure Kanaujī form, for 'he is.' In the definite present, when the h of the verb substantive is elided, the latter is sometimes combined with the present participle, as in marᵃtũ, for marat-hũ, I am dying. This may be further contracted in the east to mattũ.

The tense which in ordinary Hindōstānī is commonly used in the sense of a present conjunctive is, in Braj Bhākhā, quite commonly employed in its original meaning as a simple present. Thus, māraũ, I strike, as well as 'I may strike.' When the verb substantive is appended to this tense, we get another form of the definite present, as in māraũ-haũ, I am striking.

Another method of making a definite present and an imperfect is to take a verbal noun in ai or ē, and to append to it the appropriate auxiliary. Thus, mārai-haũ or mārē-haũ, I am striking: mārai-hau, or mārē-hau, I was striking. The mārai remains unchanged through all numbers and persons.

Attention has been drawn, on pp. 69 and ff., to the fact that the y of the past participle is commonly dropped in the east, as we approach Kanaujī.

As regards idiom we have to note that the agent case is often used with the past tenses of intransitive verbs. Thus (Muttra), lōhᵃrē bēṭā-nē chalyau, the younger son went away. This is, of course, quite contrary to the use of standard Hindōstānī, but is justified by the practice of Sanskrit. The verb is to be considered as impersonal, and the above sentence is literally, 'it was gone by the younger son.' In Sanskrit it would be laghunā putrēṇa chalitam.

Note also how the past tense of verbs of saying and the like is put in the feminine, to agree with bāt understood. Thus, kahī, he said, literally 'the word (bāt) was said by him.'

BRAJ BHĀKHĀ SKELETON GRAMMAR.

BRAJ BHĀKHĀ SKELETON GRAMMAR.

I.—DECLENSION.

	Masculine.		Feminine.
	Strong.	Weak.	Strong.	Weak.
Sing.
Nom.	ghōṛā, a horse	ghar, gharu, a house	nārī, a woman	bāt, a word
Obl.	ghoṛā, ghōṛē, ghōṛai	ghar, gharu	nārī	bāt
Plur.
Nom.	ghōṛā, ghōṛē, ghōṛai, ghōṛẽ, ghōṛaĩ	ghar, gharu	nārẽ, nāriyā̃	bātaĩ
Obl.	ghōṛaũ, ghoṛā̃, ghōṛani, ghōṛan	gharaũ, gharani, gharan, gharanu.	nāriyaũ, nāriyani, nāriyan, nārin	bātaũ, bātani, bātan

Postpositions—

Agent, nẽ̃, naĩ

Acc.-Dat., kũ, kū̃, kaũ, kaĩ, kẽ̃

Abl.-Instr., sõ̃, sū̃, tẽ̃, tē

Gen., kau, obl. masc., kē ; fem., kī

Loc., mẽ̃, maĩ, pai, laũ

Adjectives are as in ordinary Western Hindī, except that strong masculine forms end in au, instead of ā, with an oblique form in ai or ē, and that the plural masculine ends in ē, ẽ̃, ai or aĩ.

PRONOUNS.

	I.	Thou.	He, that.	This.	Who.	That.	Who?	What?
Sing.
Nom.	maĩ, haũ, hõ̃	tū, tai, taĩ	wō, wah, wuh	yah, yih	jau, jaun	sō, taun	kō, kau, kaun	kahā, kā
Obl.	mō, muj, mohi, muhi	tō, tuj, tohi, tuhi	wis, wā, wāhi	is, yā, yāhi	jis, jā, jāhi	tis, tā, tāhi	kis, kā, kāhi	kāhē
Acc.-Dat.	mohi, muhi, mōē, mōy, mōi, mō	tohi, tuhi, tōē, tōy, tōi, tō	wāhi, wāē, wāy, wisē	yāhi, yāē, yāy, isē	jāhi, jāē, jāy, jisē	tāhi, tāē, tāy, tisē	kāhi, kāē, kāy, kisē	...
Gen.	mērau, mēryau	tērau, tēryau	...	...	jāsu	tāsu	...	...
Plur.
Nom.	ham	tum	wē, wai	yē, yai	jau	sō, tē	kō, kau	...
Obl.	ham, hamaũ, hamani, haman	tum, tumhaũ	uni, un, unhaũ, wini, win, winhaũ	ini, in, inhaũ	jini, jin, jinhaũ	tini, tin, tinhaũ	kini, kin, kinhaũ	...
Acc.-Dat.	hamaĩ	tumhaĩ	unhaĩ, winhaĩ	inhaĩ, ihaĩ	jinhaĩ	tinhaĩ	kinhaĩ	...
Gen.	hamārau, hamāryau	tumhārau, tumhāryau, tihārau, tihāryau	...	...	...	...	...	...

II.—CONJUGATION.—A. Auxiliary Verbs and Verbs Substantive.

Present, I am.

	Sing.	Plur.
1	haũ	haĩ
2	hai	hau
3	hai	haĩ

Past, I was. Sing. masc. hau, hō; fem. hī: plur. masc. hẽ or hẽ; fem. hĩ. We also meet the Kanauji form hutau, hutī; hutẽ, hutĩ. Neither of these changes for person.

B. Active Verb.—Infinitive, māran, mār^{e}nau or mār^{e}naũ, obl. mār^{a}nē or -nai; or māribau or māribaũ, obl. māribē or -bai, to strike. For māribau, we have often mār^{a}bau.

Present Participle, māratu, mārat, striking.

Past Participle, māryau, struck.

Conjunctive Participle, māri, māri-kai, māri-kari, having struck. The final i in all these words (except kai) is sometimes omitted. Sometimes we find kē instead of kai.

	Present Indicative or Subjunctive, I strike, or I may strike.		Future, I shall strike.
	Sing.	Plur.	Sing.	Plur.
1	māraũ, mārũ	māraĩ, mārahĩ	mārihaũ, māraihaũ, māraũgau, mārũgau	mārihaĩ, māraihaĩ, māraĩgai
2	mārai, mārahi	mārau, mārahu	mārihai, māraihai, māraigau	mārihau, māraihau, māraugai
3	mārai, mārahi	māraĩ, mārahĩ	mārihai, māraihai, māraigau	mārihaĩ, māraihaĩ, māraĩgai

Imperative, mār, mārahi, māri, strike thou; mārau, strike ye; māriyō, māriyai, mārījai, be good enough to strike.

Other tenses are formed on the analogy of Literary Hindī. See, however, Borrowed Tense below.

C. Irregular Verbs. These are,—

hōnaũ, to become. Infinitive, hōnaũ or hwaibaũ; past participle, bhayau (masc. obl. bhayē, or bhaē; fem. bhayī or bhaī); conj. part., hwai, hwai-kai, etc.; present, hōũ, etc.; future, hwaihaũ, hōihaũ, hōũgau, etc. The rest is regular, except that the 2nd pl. future may be hoigē, and the past participle is occasionally hūt.

dēnaũ, to give. Infinitive, dēnaũ or daibaũ; past participle, diyau or dayau (masc. obl. dayē, daē; fem. dayī or daī), or dīnhau or dīnau); pres. dēũ, etc.; future, daihaũ, dēũgau, etc.

lēnaũ, to take. Like dēnaũ, substituting l for d.

ṭhān^{e}naũ, to appoint. Past participle, ṭhayau (masc. obl. ṭhayē, ṭhaē; fem. ṭhayī, ṭhaī).

kar^{a}naũ, to do. Infinitive, optionally kīnaũ; past part., karyau, kiyau, kīnhau or kīnau; conj. part., kai-kai or kari-kai; future, karihaũ or kaihaũ.

jānaũ, to go. Past participle, gayau (masc. obl. gayē or gaē; fem. gayī or gaī).

D. Passive.—This is usually formed as in standard Hindī by compounding the past participle with jānaũ. A passive is sometimes formed by adding iy to the root. Thus, māriyai, he is being beaten.

E. Borrowed Tense.—Braj Bhākhā sometimes uses the Rājasthānī method of forming a definite present, by adding the verb substantive to the simple present instead of the present participle. Thus, instead of māratu-haũ, etc., I am striking, we may have,—

	Sing.	Plur.
1	māraũ-haũ	māraĩ-haĩ
2	mārai-hai	mārau-hau
3	mārai-hai	māraĩ-haĩ

F. Causal Verb.—This is formed by adding āw for the causal and ^{e}wāw or ^{e}wā for the double causal. Thus, chal^{a}naũ, to go; chalāw^{e}naũ, to cause to go; chal^{a}wāw^{e}naũ or chal^{a}-wānaũ, to cause to cause to go. Sometimes āw is shortened to ^{e}w. Thus, pujāwai or puj^{e}wai, he causes to be full. In the past participle, the final w is often omitted. Thus,

KANAUJĪ.

Name of the Dialect.

Kanaujī takes its name from the city of Kanauj, which is situated on the bank of the river Ganges in the modern district of Farukhabad. That city is one of the most ancient in India: under the name of Kanyā-kubja (the Canogyza of classical geography) it is celebrated in Sanskrit literature as early as the Rāmāyaṇa and the earlier Arab geographers describe it as the chief city of India. In the middle of the 5th century A.D. it fell into the hands of the Rāṭhōr Rajputs. The fifth monarch of this dynasty was Jaichand, who is a prominent figure in the Rājpūt epic of Chand Bardāī, and in the Alhā-Ūdal cycle described under the head of Bundēlī. In 1193-94 Jaichand was defeated and slain by the Musalmāns, and Kanauj became a portion of the Muhammadan Empire of India. Throughout its history, the city also gave its name to its dependencies and to the surrounding district, and Kanaujī therefore means, literally, the dialect of the old kingdom of Kanauj.

Where spoken.

At the present day, Kanaujī is spoken in its greatest purity in the Doab districts of Etawah and Farukhabad, and, north of the Ganges, in Shahjahanpur. It is also found in Cawnpore and Hardoi, but in the latter district it is more or less mixed (according to locality) with the Awadhī dialect of Eastern Hindī spoken to its east, and in the former it shows signs of the influence not only of Awadhī, but of Bundēlī. North of Shahjahanpur, in Pilibhit we also find Kanaujī, but here it is mixed with Braj Bhākhā.

Language Boundaries.

Kanaujī is bounded on the west and north-west by Braj Bhākhā and on the south by Bundēlī. Both of these are, like Kanaujī, dialects of Western Hindī. On its east and north-east it has the Awadhī dialect of Eastern Hindī.

Varieties.

The area over which Kanaujī is spoken is not a large one, and near the borders it is influenced by neighbouring dialects. In the tract in which pure Kanaujī is spoken there are few variations. The only important one is that, north of the Ganges and in Cawnpore, there is a tendency to add a short i to a word ending in a consonant. Thus, dēti (masc.), not dēt, giving; bādi, not bād, after. I have already said that in Cawnpore and Hardoi the dialect is mixed. This is specially the case in Eastern Hardoi (in the Tahsīl of Sandila), where it is difficult to say whether the language is Awadhī or Kanaujī. The same is the case in Cawnpore, and in that district, in the tract on the bank of the Jamna opposite the district of Hamirpur, the language is so influenced by the Bundēlī of the latter district that it has a special name of its own, Tirhārī, or the language of the river bank. There is also a Tirhārī spoken on the opposite (southern) bank of the Jamna, which has been described under the head of Awadhī.

Number of Speakers.

The number of speakers of Kanaujī is reported to be as follows:—

Name of District.	Number of speakers.
Farukhabad	712,500
Etawah[1]	351,000
Carried over .	1,063,500

[1] Number given for Etawah is probably too small.

Name of District.	Number of speakers.
Brought forward .	1,063,500
Hardoi (except Sandila)	880,500
Shahjahanpur	825,000
Pilibhit	432,500
		3,201,500
Mixed dialects—
Cawnpore Kanaujī	1,090,000
Cawnpore Tirhārī	40,000
Hardoi (Sandila)	150,000
		1,280,000
TOTAL . .		4,481,500

Literature.

As a literary language Kanaujī has been overshadowed by its more powerful neighbour Braj Bhākhā. The district in the Kanaujī area which has produced the most famous authors is Hardoi, where the towns of Pihānī and Bilgrām, especially the latter, were the homes of many distinguished writers. Most of these were Musalmāns, and wrote in Arabic and Persian, but Hindū and Muhammadan writers in the vernacular were not wanting.

The town of Tikmapur or Tikwanpur is in the district of Cawnpore. Here, in the middle of the 17th century, flourished four celebrated brothers, Chintāmaṇi Tripāṭhī, Matirām Tripāṭhī, Bhūkhaṇ Tripāṭhī, and Nīlkaṇṭh Tripāṭhī. They were voluminous authors, and the reputation of their learning and poetic powers has survived to the present day.

Authorities.

The only work dealing with Kanaujī which I have seen is Mr. Kellogg's Hindī grammar. The Serampore Missionaries published a version of the New Testament in Kanaujī in the year 1821. The dialect employed differs considerably from that illustrated in the following pages.

Grammar.

As elsewhere stated, Kanaujī differs but slightly from Braj Bhākhā. It prefers the termination ō to the au of that dialect. Ō, however, also occurs in some forms of Braj Bhākhā. Both dialects are fond of adding u to the end of nouns which in ordinary Hindōstānī terminate in a consonant. This is, perhaps, more common in Kanaujī, which also, north of the Ganges, sometimes puts i instead of u.

With reference to the accompanying skeleton grammar of Kanaujī the following additional facts may be noted:—

As in other dialects there is a tendency to drop h between two vowels. Thus, 'I will say' is kaihaũ for kahihaũ.

Strong masculine tadbhava adjectives (including the genitive case and participles), which in Standard Hindī end in ā, in Kanaujī end in ō. Thus, Hindī chhōṭā, Kanaujī chhōṭō, small. Strong masculine substantives, however, end in ā, and this ā is in some cases (mostly nouns of relationship) not changed to ē in the oblique singular. Thus, larikā, a son; larikā-kō (not larikē-kō), of a son.

Weak masculine tadbhavas, which in Hindī end in a silent consonant, in Kanaujī optionally end in u. Thus, Hindī ghar, Kanaujī ghar or gharu, a house. This termination u is optionally retained in the oblique singular, as, ghar-kō or gharu-kō, of a house.

KANAUJĪ.

Name of the Dialect.

Kanaujī takes its name from the city of Kanauj, which is situated on the bank of the river Ganges in the modern district of Farukhabad. That city is one of the most ancient in India: under the name of Kanyā-kubja (the Canogyza of classical geography) it is celebrated in Sanskrit literature as early as the Rāmāyaṇa and the earlier Arab geographers describe it as the chief city of India. In the middle of the 5th century A.D. it fell into the hands of the Rāṭhōr Rajputs. The fifth monarch of this dynasty was Jaichand, who is a prominent figure in the Rājpūt epic of Chand Bardāī, and in the Alhā-Ūdal cycle described under the head of Bundēlī. In 1193-94 Jaichand was defeated and slain by the Musalmāns, and Kanauj became a portion of the Muhammadan Empire of India. Throughout its history, the city also gave its name to its dependencies and to the surrounding district, and Kanaujī therefore means, literally, the dialect of the old kingdom of Kanauj.

Where spoken.

At the present day, Kanaujī is spoken in its greatest purity in the Doab districts of Etawah and Farukhabad, and, north of the Ganges, in Shahjahanpur. It is also found in Cawnpore and Hardoi, but in the latter district it is more or less mixed (according to locality) with the Awadhī dialect of Eastern Hindī spoken to its east, and in the former it shows signs of the influence not only of Awadhī, but of Bundēlī. North of Shahjahanpur, in Pilibhit we also find Kanaujī, but here it is mixed with Braj Bhākhā.

Language Boundaries.

Kanaujī is bounded on the west and north-west by Braj Bhākhā and on the south by Bundēlī. Both of these are, like Kanaujī, dialects of Western Hindī. On its east and north-east it has the Awadhī dialect of Eastern Hindī.

Varieties.

The area over which Kanaujī is spoken is not a large one, and near the borders it is influenced by neighbouring dialects. In the tract in which pure Kanaujī is spoken there are few variations. The only important one is that, north of the Ganges and in Cawnpore, there is a tendency to add a short i to a word ending in a consonant. Thus, dēti (masc.), not dēt, giving; bādi, not bād, after. I have already said that in Cawnpore and Hardoi the dialect is mixed. This is specially the case in Eastern Hardoi (in the Taḥṣīl of Sandila), where it is difficult to say whether the language is Awadhī or Kanaujī. The same is the case in Cawnpore, and in that district, in the tract on the bank of the Jamna opposite the district of Hamirpur, the language is so influenced by the Bundēlī of the latter district that it has a special name of its own, Tirhārī, or the language of the river bank. There is also a Tirhārī spoken on the opposite (southern) bank of the Jamna, which has been described under the head of Awadhī.

Number of Speakers.

The number of speakers of Kanaujī is reported to be as follows:—

Name of District.	Number of speakers.
Farukhabad	712,500
Etawah[1]	351,000
Carried over .	1,063,500

[1] Number given for Etawah is probably too small.

Name of District.	Number of speakers.
Brought forward .	1,063,500
Hardoi (except Sandila)	880,500
Shahjahanpur	825,000
Pilibhit	432,500
		3,201,500
Mixed dialects—
Cawnpore Kanaujī	1,090,000
Cawnpore Tirhārī	40,000
Hardoi (Sandila)	150,000
		1,280,000
TOTAL . .		4,481,500

Literature.

As a literary language Kanaujī has been overshadowed by its more powerful neighbour Braj Bhākhā. The district in the Kanaujī area which has produced the most famous authors is Hardoi, where the towns of Pihānī and Bilgrām, especially the latter, were the homes of many distinguished writers. Most of these were Musalmāns, and wrote in Arabic and Persian, but Hindū and Muhammadan writers in the vernacular were not wanting.

The town of Tikmapur or Tikwanpur is in the district of Cawnpore. Here, in the middle of the 17th century, flourished four celebrated brothers, Chintāmaṇi Tripāṭhī, Matirām Tripāṭhī, Bhūkhaṇ Tripāṭhī, and Nīlkaṇṭh Tripāṭhī. They were voluminous authors, and the reputation of their learning and poetic powers has survived to the present day.

Authorities.

The only work dealing with Kanaujī which I have seen is Mr. Kellogg's Hindī grammar. The Serampore Missionaries published a version of the New Testament in Kanaujī in the year 1821. The dialect employed differs considerably from that illustrated in the following pages.

Grammar.

As elsewhere stated, Kanaujī differs but slightly from Braj Bhākhā. It prefers the termination ō to the au of that dialect. Ō, however, also occurs in some forms of Braj Bhākhā. Both dialects are fond of adding u to the end of nouns which in ordinary Hindōstānī terminate in a consonant. This is, perhaps, more common in Kanaujī, which also, north of the Ganges, sometimes puts i instead of u.

With reference to the accompanying skeleton grammar of Kanaujī the following additional facts may be noted:—

As in other dialects there is a tendency to drop h between two vowels. Thus, 'I will say' is kaihaũ for kahihaũ.

Strong masculine tadbhava adjectives (including the genitive case and participles), which in Standard Hindī end in ā, in Kanaujī end in ō. Thus, Hindī chhōṭā, Kanaujī chhōṭō, small. Strong masculine substantives, however, end in ā, and this ā is in some cases (mostly nouns of relationship) not changed to ē in the oblique singular. Thus, larikā, a son; larikā-kō (not larikē-kō), of a son.

Weak masculine tadbhavas, which in Hindī end in a silent consonant, in Kanaujī optionally end in u. Thus, Hindī ghar, Kanaujī ghar or gharu, a house. This termination u is optionally retained in the oblique singular, as, ghar-kō or gharu-kō, of a house.

As regards Demonstrative Pronouns, these are, in Standard Hindī, wah and yah, and in Bundēlī, bō and jō. Kanaujī fluctuates between the two forms. We have wahu as well as bau, he, that, and yahu as well as jau, this.

We sometimes find the past tense of a neuter verb used impersonally with the subject in the agent case. Thus, larikā-nē chalō-gaō, by the son it was gone away, i.e., the son went away. This is, of course, opposed to the rules of Standard Hindī. Note how verbs of saying, asking, etc., are used in the feminine of the past tense, agreeing with bāt understood. Thus, us-nē kahī, he said; us-nē pūchhī, he asked.

The past tenses of dēnā, lēnā and jānā are, as in Bundēlī, daō, laō, gaō. The past tense of the verb substantive is rahō̃, hatō, or thō. In Bundēlī it is rahō̃, hatō, or tō, and in Braj Bhākhā, rahaũ, hutau, or hau.

KANAUJĪ SKELETON GRAMMAR.

I.—DECLENSION.—

	Masculine.		Feminine.
	Strong.	Weak.	Strong.	Weak.
Sing. Nom.	ghōṛā, a horse	ghar or gharu, a house.	nārī, a woman	bāt, a word.
Obl.	ghōṛā, ghōṛē	ghar, gharu.	nārī	bāt.
Plur. Nom.	ghoṛā, ghōṛē	ghar, gharu.	nārī̃	bātẽ.
Obl.	ghōṛan	gharan, gharun, gharanu.	nārin	bātan.

Postpositions—

Agent, nē.

Acc.-Dat., kō, kã̄.

Abl.-Instr., sē, sētī, san, tẽ, tē, kari, kar-kē.

Gen., kō (obl. kē); fem. kī.

Loc., mẽ, maĩ, mã̄, mȭ, par, lȭ.

To form the plural, hwār or hwāru is sometimes added to both nouns and pronouns.

The oblique plural is sometimes used in the sense of the singular. Thus, jādā dāman-kō, of great value. We sometimes meet an instrumental singular in ȭ or an, as in bhūkhȭ or bhūkhan, by hunger, and a locative in ẽ, as gharẽ, in a house.

Adjectives as in ordinary Hindī, except that strong masculine forms end in ō instead of ā.

PRONOUNS.

	I.	Thou.	He, that.	This.	Who.	That.	Who?	What?	Anyone.
Sing. Nom.	maĩ	tū	wahu, wuhi, uhi, bau, bahu	yahu, yihu, ihu, yau, jau, jahu	jaun, jaunu, jō	taun, taunu, sō	kaun, kaunu, kō	kahā, kā	kōū, kōī, kaunau.
Obl.	mō	tō	uhi, bahi, wā	ihi, yā	jehi, jā	tehi, tā	kehi, kā	kāhẽ	kaunau, kisū.
Acc.-Dat.	mohi	tohi	usẽ, usai	isẽ, isai	jisẽ, jisai	tisẽ, tisai	kisẽ, kisai	...	...
Gen.	mērō	tērō	...	...	...	...	...	...	...
Plur. Nom.	ham	tum	wẽ, wai, bẽ	jẽ, jai	jaun, jō	sō	kō	...	...
Obl.	ham	tum	un, unhȭ	in, inhȭ	jin, jinhȭ	tin, tinhȭ	kin	...	...
Acc.-Dat.	hamẽ, hamaĩ	tumhẽ, tumhaĩ	unhẽ, unhaĩ	inhẽ, inhaĩ	jinhẽ, jinhaĩ	tinhẽ, tinhaĩ	kinhẽ, kinhai	...	...
Gen.	hamārō	tumhārō	...	...	...	...	...	...	...

To any of these plurals hwār or hwāru may be added. Thus, ham-hwār, we.

'Anything' is kachhū or kuchhō, indeclinable.

In the personal pronouns, the plural is often used in the sense of the singular.

The Reflexive Pronoun is āp or āpu, genitive apan, apanu, or *ap*ⁿ*nō*.

II.—CONJUGATION. A. Auxiliary Verbs, and Verbs Substantive—

Present, I am.

	Sing.	Plur.
1	hū̃	haĩ, haĩ-gẽ
2	hai, hai-gō	hō, hō-gẽ
3	hai, hai-gō	haĩ, haĩ-gẽ

Past, I was. Thō or hatō, fem. thī or hatī; Plur., thē or hatē, fem. thī̃ or hatī̃. Or mai rahȭ, etc., like mārȭ, below.

B. Active Verb—

Infinitive,—māran, māranu, mārⁿnō, or māribō (obl. māribē), to strike.

Present Participle,—mārat or māratu, striking.

Past Participle,—mārō, struck.

Conjunctive Participle,—mār-kē or māri-kē, having struck.

Present Indicative and Subjunctive, I strike or I may strike. Future, I shall strike.

	Sing.	Plur.	Sing.	Plur.
1	mārȭ, mārū̃	mārẽ	mārihaū̃, mārihȭ, mārihū̃, mārȭgō	mārihaĩ, mārẽgẽ.
2	mārē	mārō	mārihai, mārēgō	mārihō, mārōgẽ.
3	mārē	mārẽ	mārihai, mārēgō	mārihaĩ, mārẽgẽ.

Imperative,—sing. mār; plur. mārō; respectful, māriyō, māriyẽ. Other tenses are formed on the analogy of Braj Bhākhā, substituting s for au in masculine terminations.

C. Irregular Verbs. These are,— hōn, to become. Past participle, bhayō or bhaō. Other forms regular.

dēn, to give, and lēn, to take. Past participles, daō and laō, respectively. Other forms regular.

BUNDĒLĪ OR BUNDĒLKHAṆḌĪ.

Area in which spoken.

As its name implies, Bundēlkhaṇḍī is the language of Bundelkhand. 'Bundēlī' signifies the language spoken by the Bundēlās, who are the principal inhabitants of that country. According to the Gazetteer of India, Bundelkhand is the tract 'lying between the river Jamna on the north, the Chambal on the north and west, the Jabalpur and Saugor Divisions of the Central Provinces on the south, and Rewa or Baghelkhand and the Mirzapur Hills on the south and east.' Politically this area includes the British districts of Banda, Hamirpur, Jalaun, and Jhansi; so much of the Gwalior Agency of Central India as consists of the home districts of the State of Gwalior, the whole of the Bundelkhand Agency, and a small portion on the west side of the Baghelkhand Agency. The area in which Bundēlī is spoken does not altogether coincide with this definition. In the first place the dialects spoken in the district of Banda are not Bundēlī. They are broken forms of the Baghēlī dialect of Eastern Hindī, and have been described under that language.[1] The River Chambal forms the northern and western boundary of the State of Gwalior. On the north, Bundēlī not only extends to that river but crosses it into the districts of Agra, Mainpuri, and Etawah, being spoken in the southern portions of each. On the west, it does not extend to the Chambal, the languages spoken in the western portion of Gwalior being Braj Bhākhā, and various forms of Rājasthānī. On the south it extends far beyond the nominal boundaries of Bundelkhand. It is spoken not only in the districts of Saugor and Damoh and in the eastern portions of Bhopal, all of which, like the south of the Bundelkhand Agency, lie on the Vindhyan plateau, but is the vernacular of the districts of Narsinghpur and Hoshangabad which lie in the Narbada Valley, and, still further south, on the Satpura plateau, of the district of Seoni. On the same plateau it is spoken in a broken form by the Lōdhīs of Balaghat and over the centre of the district of Chhindwara, and a large number of its speakers have even found their way into the great Nagpur plain and are heard speaking a mongrel patois in the district of Nagpur, the proper vernacular of which is Marāṭhī. We may say roughly that it is spoken by nearly seven millions of people, and over an area of nineteen thousand square miles.

Language Boundaries.

Bundēlī is bounded on the east by the Baghēlī dialect of Eastern Hindī; on the north and north-west by the closely related Kanaujī and Braj Bhākhā dialects of Western Hindī, and, in Hamirpur, by the Tirhārī form of Baghēlī spoken on the south bank of the Jamna; on the south-west by various dialects of Rājasthānī, the most important of which is Mālwī; and on the south by Marāṭhī. It merges gradually, without any distinct boundary line, through some mixed dialects into Eastern Hindī, Kanaujī, Braj Bhākhā and Rājasthānī, but there is no merging into Marāṭhī, although there are some broken dialects which are mechanical mixtures of the two languages.

Varieties.

Bundēlī is, on the whole, a very homogeneous form of speech. There is one uniform type current over the greater part of the area in which it is heard. Natives, who are very quick to notice slight variations of dialect, maintain that there are two or three sub-dialects to which they have given special names, but the differences are only very unimportant local peculiarities. There are, however, towards the north of the Bundēlī tract some intermediate forms of speech which deserve notice, and there are also the broken dialects of the south. The varieties of the standard Bundēlī which are recognised by natives are called Pãwārī, Lodhāntī or Rāṭhōrā, and Khaṭōlā. Pãwārī is the dialect used in the north-east of the State of Gwalior, and in Datia and its neighbourhood, where the Pãwār Rājpūts are numerous. Lodhāntī or Rāṭhōrā is the dialect spoken in the Rāṭh Pargana of Hamirpur, and the neighbouring portion of Jalaun, where the Lōdhīs are in a majority. In the heart of the Hamirpur district, and adjoining the Rāṭh Pargana, lie the Bāwan Chaurāsī Pargana of the Charkhari State, the Sarila State, and the Jigni Jagir, all falling politically under the Bundelkhand Agency. The same dialect is also spoken in them. Khaṭōlā is the form of Bundēlī spoken in the south-east of the Bundelkhand Agency and in the neighbouring part of Baghelkhand, i.e., in the Panna State and its neighbourhood. The same form of speech is also found in the adjoining district of Damoh in the Central Provinces.

[1] See Vol. VI, pp. 142 and ff.

The mixed dialects are Banāpharī, Kuṇḍrī, Nibhaṭṭā, on the east, shading off into Eastern Hindī, and Bhadaurī, on the west, shading off into Braj Bhākhā. Of these Banāpharī is the most important. It is spoken in the south-east of the Hamirpur district, and in the north-centre and east of the Bundelkhand Agency. Here the Banāphar Rajputs are strong, and an epic cycle celebrating their deeds, and composed in their language, is famous all over northern India. The Banāpharī sub-dialect varies somewhat from place to place, that of Hamirpur being so full of Baghēlī idioms that I have been compelled to describe it under that language (ante, Vol. VI, pp. 155 and ff.). That of the Bundelkhand Agency though borrowing freely from Baghēlī is in the main Bundēlī, and is dealt with here.[1] Kuṇḍrī is spoken on both banks of the river Ken, which separates the district of Banda from Hamirpur. The Kuṇḍrī on the Banda side of the river is based on Baghēlī, and has been described under that language (ante, Vol. VI, pp. 152 and ff.). That on the Hamirpur side is a mixed language, but its basis is Bundēlī, and therefore it is described in the following pages. Along the north side of the Hamirpur district, on the south bank of the Jamna, there is a narrow strip of country in which Tirhārī, a mixed dialect based on Baghēlī, is spoken. It has been described ante, Vol. VI, pp. 132 and ff. This Tirhārī goes on into the district of Jalaun, where it gradually merges into the standard Bundēlī of the district through a form of Bundēlī known as Nibhaṭṭā. Bhadaurī or Tõwargaṛhī is properly speaking the dialect spoken in Bhadāwar and Tõwargaṛh, on the banks of the Chambal where it separates the Gwalior State from Etawah and Agra. On the north side of the river we find it in the country near the Chambal belonging to these two districts and to Mainpurī. In Gwalior it extends right down the whole centre of the home districts of the State, having Braj Bhākhā and Rājasthānī to its west, and on its east, to the north Pãwārī (already described) and further south ordinary standard Bundēlī. Standard Bundēlī itself, which is recognised by natives as not being Pãwārī, Lodhāntī, or Khaṭōlā, is spoken in the rest of the districts of Jalaun and Hamirpur and of the Bundelkhand Agency, in Jhansi and Saugor, together with the portions of Gwalior and Bhopal immediately to their east, and in Seoni, Narsingpur, and Hoshangabad.

1 A full account of Banāpharī will be found on pp. 481 and ff., post.

The broken dialects of the south are not like the mixed ones of the north, as they are not intermediate links each between two neighbouring languages. The two languages in each case are there, but as the members of each pair are not closely connected, they do not merge into each other. There is, instead, a broken patois which is a purely mechanical mixture of the two forms of speech. The speakers, who are familiar with both, sometimes use the idioms of one and sometimes of the other, and usually show so strict impartiality that in one sentence they will use the one for expressing a particular idea, and in the next will employ the other for expressing it over again. These broken dialects are Lōdhī, Kōshṭī, Kumbhārī and Nagpurī 'Hindī,' which are Bundēlī mainly mixed with Marāṭhī, and the Bundēlī of central Chhindwara which is mixed with ordinary Hindōstānī. Lōdhī is spoken by the members of the Lōdhī tribe who have settled in Balaghat (compare the Lodhāntī Bundēlī of the north), and Kōshṭī by Kōshṭīs in Chhindwara, Chanda, and Bhandara. Kumbhārī is spoken by the Kumbhārs of Chhindwara and Buldana. Nāgpurī 'Hindī' is the so-called 'Hindī' of the district of Nagpur.

Number of Speakers.

The following figures show the estimated number of speakers of the various forms of Bundēlī. They are based on the census of 1891:—

Name of Dialect.	Where spoken.	Number of speakers.
Standard . . .	Jhansi	679,700
	Jalaun	360,129
	Hamirpur	384,000
	South-east Gwalior	200,000
	East Bhopal	67,000
	Orchha, etc.	388,400
	Saugor	582,500
	Narsinghpur	363,000
	Seoni	195,000
	Hoshangabad	300,000
	Total Standard . . .		3,519,729
Pāwārī . . .	North-east Gwalior	150,000
	Datia, etc.	203,500
	Total Pāwārī . . .		353,500
Lodhāntī or Rāṭhōrā .	Hamirpur	98,000
	Charkhari, etc., in Hamirpur . .	39,500
	Jalaun	8,000
	Total Lodhāntī or Rāṭhōrā . . .		145,500
Khaṭōlā . . .	Panna, etc.	569,200
	Damoh	322,000
	Total for Khaṭōlā . . .		891,200
Total for all varieties of Standard Bundēlī . . .			4,909,929

Name of Dialect.	Where spoken.	Number of speakers.
		Brought forward . .		4,909,929
Mixed dialects of the North-east—
Banāpharī . . .	North-east Bundelkhand . . .	245,400
	West Baghelkhand	90,000
	(Hamirpur, not included in the total .	5,000)
		Total Banāpharī .	335,400
Kuṇḍrī . . .	Hamirpur		11,000
Nibhaṭṭā . . .	Jalaun		10,200
	Total mixed dialects of the North . . .		.	356,600
Mixed dialect of the North-west—
Bhadaurī or Tõwargaṛhī .	Gwalior		1,000,000
	Agra		250,000
	Mainpuri		8,000
	Etawah		55,000
		Total Bhadaurī .		1,313,000
Broken dialects of the South—
Lōdhī	Balaghat		18,600
Chhindwara Bundēlī .	Chhindwara		145,500
Koshṭī Dialects . .	. . . . .		14,692
Kumbhār Dialects .	. . . . .		4,980
Nāgpurī 'Hindī' .	Nagpur		105,900
	Total broken dialects of the South .			289,672
	Total of all forms of Bundēlī .		.	6,869,201

Literature.

Bundēlī has a large literature. There is in the first place the well-known epic cycle about Ālhā and Ūdal, still sung all over northern India, and preserved by bards in the Banāpharī dialect. These heroes lived in the latter half of the twelfth century A.D. and their exploits have been the subject of verse ever since. The poet Chand Bardāī, who according to tradition was their contemporary, devoted a whole canto of his famous epic to Prithīrāj's wars with the State of Mahobā, whose champions they were. Formal Bundēlī literature, of the kind which the learned of India delight in, dates from at least the time of the Emperor Akbar. Kēsab Dās, the founder of vernacular rhetoric, was a native of the State of Orchha, and served as an ambassador from Indrajit Singh, its king, to that monarch. He flourished at the end of the sixteenth century, and his works are to the present day the acknowledged standard of poetical criticism for the whole of Hindōstān. From his time Bundelkhand has produced a long series of writers on poetics. From it have sprung many masters whose works are admitted authorities on the art of criticism. Perhaps the two best known are Padmākar Bhaṭṭ of Banda and Paj[a]nēs of Panna, both of whom flourished in the early part of the nineteenth century. All these could tell how poetry should be written, but none of them were great original poets themselves. The school of Bundelkhand shone in analysis rather than in composition. The only original writers of importance were Prān-nāth and Lāl Kabi, both of whom attended the court of Chhattarsāl of Panna in the first quarter of the eighteenth century. Prān-nāth was a religious reformer who attempted to combine Hinduism with Muhammadanism. He was a nous author, and wrote in a curious language, which, like his doctrine, was a nd o. India and Islām. While the grammatical structure of his language is verna ular, the vocabulary is mainly supplied from Persian and Arabic. Lāl rote the Chhatra Prakāś, an account of the life of his patron Chhattarsāl and of ier Champati Rāy. It is noteworthy as one of the few original historical works

. by an Indian for Indians.

RITIES

CH, MAJOR R., C.B.,—Notes on, and a short Vocabulary of the Hinduvee Dialect of Bundelkhand. Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, Vol. xii, 1843, pp. 1086 and ff. Contains a short grammar and a full vocabulary.

H, V. A.,—Popular Songs of the Hamírpur District in Bundelkhand, N. W. P. Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, Vol. xliv, 1875, Pt. I, pp. 389 and ff.

H, V. A.,—Popular Songs of the Hamírpur District in Bundelkhand, N. W. P. No. II. ib., Vol. xlv, 1876, Pt. I, pp. 279 and ff.

sides the above, Mr. Vincent Smith has most kindly placed at my disposal a ript collection of Bundēlī popular songs and a series of notes on the grammar ialect which have been freely utilised in the following pages.

elsewhere in Hindostan, both the Nāgarī character and its congener, the Kaithī character, are used in writing Bundēlī.

ritten Character.

ndēlī has several words in its vocabulary which are not met with in ordinary dictionaries. Some of these will be found in the specimens and in the standard List of Words and Sentences. In addi-

Vocabulary.

ive the following from the Bundelkhand Gazetteer :—

Bābā, baṛē bābā, a paternal grandfather.
Dāī, a grandmother.
Dādā, bhāū, bhaiyā, bāpū, a father.
Dīdī, aiyā, māī, a mother.
Ḍudā, a paternal uncle.
Kakihī, an aunt, the wife of a dudā.
Bhaiyā, dāū, dādā, nānā, an elder brother.
Bhōbhī, bhaujī, an elder brother's wife.
Lahurī, gutuī, a younger brother's wife.
Dulᵉhan, lagāī, mahariyā, basahī, jurūā, gotānī, a wife.
Dīdī, a sister.
Biṭiyā, buīyā, chhaunī, a daughter.
Lālā, dādū, chhaunā, būā, a son.
Phuwā, buwā, a mother's sister.
Jījā, a sister's husband.
Pāhun, nāt, a son-in-law.
Sār, sārō, a wife's brother.
Sahō, rāut, mahtaũ, a father-in-law.
Bhānij, bhainẽ, a sister's son.
Garai, loṭiyā, a lōṭā.
Genduwā, jhāri, karōrā, a lōṭā with a spout.
Thariyā, thār, tāthī, a salver.
Baṭuwā, a brass vessel for holding water. (Hindī baṭᵉlōhā.)

Khōrā, khor^{a}wā, khoriyā, beliyā, a cup. (H. kaṭōrā.)
Kop^{a}rī, a large brass plate. (H. parāt.)
Chambū, a brass cup. (H. bēlā.)
Kal^{a}sā, a brass water-pot. (H. gagarī.)
Tameh^{a}rā, a copper water-pot.
Karahiyā, an iron pan.
Gaṅgal, an earthen vessel. (H. kārādār gag^{a}rā.)
Pāṇḍabbā, a betel-box.
Sanarsī, tongs. (H. sāṇ^{a}sī.)

Grammar.—It is hoped that the following sketch of Bundēlī grammar will be found sufficient for understanding the specimens.

Pronunciation.—When the vowels ē and ō are shortened, they become i and u, respectively. Thus from bēṭī, a daughter, we have biṭiyā, and from ghōrō, a horse, ghur^{a}wā, not beṭiyā and ghor^{a}wā as in the more eastern languages. I have no proof of the existence of the short vowels e and o in Bundēlī, but it is probable that the short e occurs in words like katek, how many? The diphthong ai is commonly confused with ē, and au with ō. Judging from the specimens ē and ō seem to be the most common pronunciations. Thus we find kēhõ̃, for kaihaũ, I will say; jēhē and also jaihē, thou wilt go; and ōr, for aur, and. In the following grammatical notes, when there are authorities for both pronunciations, I shall write ē and ō respectively, it being understood that when these letters form parts of terminations they can be also written ai and au respectively. The value of other vowels is also fluctuating. Thus we find i substituted for a in birōbar, equal to, and the vowel a lengthened in rāyī, it, fem., remained. So also the word for the conjunction 'that' is indifferently written ki, kī and kē.

As regards consonants the letter r is often substituted for ṛ, as in parō, he fell, daur-kē, having run, and ghur^{a}wā, a horse. In the word hakīgat, truth, a g has been substituted for a k. The most prominent feature, however, is the constant elision of a medial h. Thus, we have kaī or kayī, for kahī, he said; ran, for rahan, to remain; kuābē-kē lāk, for kahābē-kē lāik, fit to be called; pairā dēō, for pahirā dēō, clothe. When a long ā precedes the h, a following a is changed to u, as in chāut, for chāhat, wishing. Rahi-kē, having remained, becomes rēi-kē. Other forms of the same verb are ratī̃-haī̃, they, fem., remain, and raō-tō, he had remained. In this connexion, note the form bhaüt, for bahut, much. The letter y, as an initial, is unknown, its place being supplied by j. So, also, b is substituted for initial w. Thus, jō, for yah, this, and bō for wah, that.

Declension.—The use of long forms of nouns, usually in a diminutive or non-honorific sense, is very common. Masculine long forms mostly end in wā, and feminine ones in yā. Thus, we have both ghōrō and also, more commonly, ghur^{a}wā, a horse; bēṭī, and also biṭiyā, a daughter. We also often meet redundant forms in aïva, as in bilaïvā, a cat, and chiraïvā, a bird.[1]

[1] Theoretically, every Indo-Aryan noun can have three forms, a short, a long, and a redundant. The short form may be either weak or strong. In eastern languages, such as Bihārī, all four forms of one and the same noun are commonly found, but, so far as information is available, in the more western dialects such instances have not been recorded, although they probably occur in the mouths of villagers. As an example of these different forms, I may quote from Bihārī,—weak short form, ghōr, a horse: strong short form, ghōrā, a horse; long form ghor^{a}wā, a horse; redundant form, ghoraüwā, a horse.

Masculine tadbhava words,[1] which in Hindōstānī end in ā, in Bundēlī usually end in ō. Thus, Hindōstānī, ghōṛā, but Bundēlī, ghōrō, a horse. The only exceptions which I have noted are some nouns of relationship, such as daddā, a father ; mōṛā, a son ; kakkā, an uncle ; and long forms like ghurᵃwā.

The feminine often has nī where standard Hindōstānī has in, as in tēlᵃnī, an oilman's wife, but Hindōstānī tēlin. So hurᵃkinī, a harlot.

The declension of nouns closely follows that of Hindōstānī. Masculine tadbhavas in ō form their oblique form singular, and usually their nominative plural, in ē. The oblique plural ends in an. We thus get the following forms of ghōrō, a horse.

	Singular.	Plural.
Direct,	ghōrō	ghōrē.
Oblique,	ghōrē	ghōran.

Other masculine nouns remain unchanged in the singular, and in the nominative plural, but form the oblique plural by adding an. This is the general rule, but some nouns in ā form the nominative plural in ã̄, or even in an. Thus, hinnā, a deer, nom. plur., hinnã̄ ; kuttā, a dog, nom. and obl. plural, kuttan. Feminine long forms in iyā form the nominative plural in iyã̄, and the oblique plural in iyan. Other feminine nouns form the nominative plural in ẽ̄, or, if they end in ī, in ĩ̄, and the oblique plural in an or in. All feminine nouns remain unchanged in the singular. Examples of these forms taken from the specimens are :—

Singular.		Plural.
Direct.	Oblique.	Direct.	Oblique.
Lōrō, younger	lōrē	lōrē	lōran.
Daddā, a father	daddā	daddā	daddan.
Ku-karm, a bad action	ku-karm	ku-karm	ku-karman.
Chākar, a servant	chākar	chākar	chākᵃran.
Sã̄ṛ, a bull	sã̄ṛ	sã̄ṛan	sã̄ṛan.
Rahāiyā, a dweller	rahāiyā	rahāiyā	rahāiyan.
Nugariā, a finger	nugariā	nugariã̄	nugarian.
Hurᵃkinī, a harlot	hurᵃkinī	hurᵃkinĩ̄	hurᵃkinin.
Gatᵃkī, a thump	gatᵃkī	gatᵃkĩ̄	gatᵃkin.

Sometimes we meet ordinary Hindōstānī forms, as bātẽ̄, words ; hētiȭ-kē saṅg, with friends ; pāȭ-mẽ̄, on feet. Note also the forms gharē, in a house ; bhūkhan-kē mārē, through hunger.

Cases are made as usual by postpositions. The following are the principal. The sign of the agent case is nē or nẽ̄. That of the accusative and dative is kȭ or khȭ ; of the ablative sē, sẽ̄, or sȭ ; and of the locative mai or mẽ̄. Lai or lānē is 'for.' The usual suffix of the genitive is kō ; obl. masc., kē ; fem. dir. and obl., kī. The termination khȭ is also apparently sometimes used to form an oblique genitive, as in tā-khȭ pīchhē, after that. Unless the words are mistake of the writer, as they probably are, we have in one case, nāch-kē bōl sunō, he heard the sound of dancing, an oblique genitive used instead of a direct one. Either kē or sunō must be wrong.

[1] A tadbhava word is one which has come down from the ancient Sanskrit, by a regular process of development, through Prakrit, into the modern Indo-Aryan languages. A tatsama is one which has been borrowed in later times direct from Sanskrit to make up some real or fancied deficiency in the vocabulary.

Tadbhava adjectives in ō change in the same way as the suffixes of the genitive. The oblique masculine ends in ē, and their feminine, direct and oblique, in ī. Thus, sabˆrō, all; obl. masc. sabˆrē; fem. sabˆrī.

The following are the forms of the two first personal pronouns :—

Singular.

Nom.	mē, mẽ, maĩ, I	tũ, taĩ, thou
Agent	maĩ-nē	taĩ-nē
Gen.	mō-kō, mērō, mōrō, mōnō	tō-kō, tērō, tōrō, tōnō
Obl.	mōy, mōē, mō	tōy, tōē, tō

Plural.

Nom.	ham	tum
Gen.	ham-kō, hamārō, hamāō	tum-kō, tumārō, tumāō
Obl.	ham	tum

'He' or 'that' is bō or ũ, 'she' is bā. The obl. sing. of both is bā, ū, ũ or tā. 'To him' is bāy or bāē. The nom. plur. is bē, and the obl. plur. is bin or un. These are all the forms which are vouched for by the specimens. Others probably occur.

'This' and 'who' are both jō (fem. jā), obl. sing. jā, nom. plur. jē. No forms of the oblique plural occur in the specimens. 'This' is also ē, with an oblique plural in.

'Your Honour' is āp, with a dative apan-khõ. 'Own' is apˆnō. All these genitives undergo the usual modifications. Thus, the feminine of mērō is mērī and of apˆnō, apˆnī.

Kā, obl. kāyē, is 'what?' Kōū, obl. kāū, anyone; kachhū, anything; katek, kitek or kai, how many?

CONJUGATION.

A.—Auxiliary Verbs and Verbs Substantive.

Present, I am.

Sing.	Plur.
1. hõ, ãũ, or ãw	hẽ, ãy
2. hē, āy	hō, āw
3. hē, āy	hẽ, ãy

Past, I was.

Sing.		Plur.
Masc.	Fem.	Masc.	Fem.
hatō, or tō	hatī, tī	hatē, tē	hatĩ, tĩ
hatō, tō	hatī, tī	hatē, tē	hatĩ, tĩ
hatō, tō	hatī, tī	hatē, tē	hatĩ, tĩ

Other forms are huhõ, or hōũ-gō, I will be; huē, it may be; bhaō, fem. bhayī, masc. plur. bhayē, he became; naĭyã, I am not; naĭyā, he is not, and so on; bhaẽ nā chahiyē, ought not to become.

B. Active Verbs.—Māran, to strike. Infinitive and Verbal Noun māran and mārˆbō; obl. mārˆbē; also mārẽ. Present Participle, mārat. Past Participle, mārō.

Present Subjunctive, I may strike.

Sing.	Plur.
1. mārũ	mārẽ
2. mārē	mārō
3. mārē	mārẽ

Future, I shall strike.

Sing.	Plur.
mārihõ	mārihẽ
mārihē	mārihō
mārihē	mārihẽ

In the future the vowel a is often substituted throughout for i, thus, mār^{a}hõ̃. Another form of the future is made by adding gō to the present subjunctive. The gō is liable to change for gender and number. Thus—

	Singular.		Plural.
	Masc.	Fem.	Masc.	Fem.
First Person,	mārũ̃-gō	mārũ̃-gī	mārẽ̃-gē	mārẽ̃-gĩ̃

and so on for the other persons.

Present Definite, mārat-hõ̃ or mārat-ãw, I am striking. The auxiliary verb is commonly omitted, so that the present participle alone serves for all persons and both numbers.

Imperfect, mārat-hatō, or mārat-tō, etc., I was striking. The auxiliary changes according to the gender and number of the subject.

Imperative.—This is the same as the Present Subjunctive, except that the second person singular is mār.

Tenses formed from the Past Participle.—In the case of transitive verbs, these tenses are construed passively, exactly as in Hindōstānī, the subject being put in the case of the agent with nē. Thus, maĩ-nē mārō, I struck ; maĩ-nē mārō-tō, I had struck.

Irregularities.—Verbs whose roots end in ā generally form the present participle in āt. Thus, jāt, going. Some, however, insert a u. Thus, chāut, wishing, āut, coming. So also raüt, remaining. Dēn, to give, and lēn, to take, make dēt and lēt.

The verb karan, to do, makes its past participle regularly. Thus, karō. The past participle of dēn, to give, is daō ; of lēn, to take, laō ; and of jān, to go, gaō. In forming the feminine and the plural these generally insert y. Thus, dayī, dayē. Note that in the past tense, the verb kan, to say, is always put in the feminine to agree with bāt understood. Thus, kayī, or kaī, he said. Note in this connexion the phrase rāyī kā, literally, what remained ?, which is used as a kind of expletive meaning ' thereupon.'

An example of a desiderative form is bharō chāut-tō, he was wishing to fill. An example of an inceptive compound is ran lagō, he began to remain.

The conjunctive participle ends in kē or kẽ̃. Thus, mār-kē, or mār-kẽ̃, having struck.

The case of the agent is used with some laxity in the specimens. Thus, we have it used with intransitive verbs in bā-nē baiṭhō, he sat ; bā-nē lagō, he began. In bā-nē chāut-tō, he was wishing, we even have it used before a tense formed from the present participle.

LITERARY HINDŌSTĀNĪ.

The first specimen is a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son in pure Ṭhēṭh Hindōstānī by the late Mahāmahōpādhyāya Paṇḍit Sudhākara Dwivēdī, F.A.U. It is capable of being written in, and is perfectly legible in, both the Dēva-nāgarī and the Persian characters. In order to show this, it is printed in both characters.

Although in Ṭhēṭh Hindī it will be observed that it contains one or two foreign words, such as the Persian bakhara, a share, and the Sanskrit pāpa, sin. Such words are included because, although foreign, they are in daily use in everybody's mouths. They have attained to full right of citizenship.

[No. I.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

HINDŌSTĀNĪ (Ṭhēṭh VARIETY).

(Mahāmahōpādhyāya Paṇḍit Sudhākara Dwivēdī, F.A.U., 1898.)

DĒVA-NĀGARĪ CHARACTER.

किसी मानुस के दो बेटे थे। उन में से लहुरे बेटे ने बाप से कहा हे बाप आप के धन में जो मेरा बखरा हो उसको मुझे दे दीजिये। तब उसने अपना धन उनमें बाँट दिया। बहुत दिन नहीं बीते, कि लहुरा बेटा सब कुछ बटोर दूर देस चला गया और वहाँ लुचपन में दिन बितावते अपना धन उड़ा दिया। जब वह सब कुछ उड़ा चुका तब उस देस में अकाल पड़ा और वह कंगाल हो गया। तब वह उस देस के किसी भले मानुस के यहाँ जाकर रहने लगा जिसने उसको अपने खेत में सूअर चराने को भेजा। और वह चाहता था, कि मैं अपना पेट उन छीमियों से भरूँ जिन्हें सूअर खाते हैं पर कोई उसको कुछ नहीं देता था। तब उसको चेत हुआ और कहने लगा, कि मेरे बाप के यहाँ इतनी अलेलह रोटी होती हैं कि कितने मजूरे पेट भर खाते हैं और बचाय भी रखते हैं और मैं भूखा मरता हूँ। मैं उठता हूँ और बाप के पास जाकर यही कहूँगा कि हे बाप मैं ने भगवान के बिमुख और आप के सामने पाप किया। मैं फिर आप का बेटा कहे जाने जोग नहीं। मुझको अपने मजूरों में से एक की नाईं रखिये। तब वह उठ

कर अपने बाप के पास चला। पर वह दूर ही था, कि उसके बाप ने उसको देख कर दाया की, और दौड़ कर उसके गले में लिपट गया और उसको चूमने लगा। बेटे ने कहा हे बाप मैं ने भगवान के बिमुख और आप के सामने पाप किया और आप का बेटा कहे जाने जोग नहीं। पर बाप ने अपने चाकरों में से एक से कहा, कि सब से अच्छा कपड़ा इसको पहिनावो और हाथ में अँगूठी और पावों में जूते। और चलो हम लोग खायँ और बेलसें। क्योंकि यह बेटा मरा ऐसा था फिर से जीया है हेराय गया था फिर मिला है। तब वे सुख से बेलसने लगे॥

उसका जेठरा बेटा खेत में था। जब वह आते हुए घर के निअर पहुँचा तब नाँचने बजाने का सुर सुना। उसने अपने चाकरों में से एक को बुला कर पूँछा, कि यह क्या है। उसने उस से कहा, कि आप का भाई आया है और आप के बाप ने जेवनार किया है क्योंकि उसको हरा भरा पाया है। इस पर उसने रिस किया और घर के भीतर जाना न चाहा। पर उसका बाप बाहर आकर उसको मनावने लगा। उसने बाप को जबाब दिया कि देखिये मैं इतने बरसों से आप की टहल करता हूँ और आप के अदेस का टालना न किया और आपने मुझको कभीं एक मेमना भी न दिया कि मैं अपने मेलियों के संग बिहरता। पर आप का यह बेटा जो पतुरियों के संग आप के धन को खा गया है जैसे ही आया तैसे ही आप ने उसके लिये बढ़ियाँ जेवनार किया है। बापने उससे कहा हे बेटा तूँ सदा मेरे संग है और जो कुछ मेरा है सो सब तेरा है। पर हुलसना और हरखना पड़ है क्योंकि यह तेरा भाई मरा ऐसा था फिर जीआ है हेराय गया था फिर मिला है॥

[No. I.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

HINDŌSTĀNĪ (Ṭhēṭh VARIETY).

(Mahāmahōpādhyāya Paṇḍit Sudhākara Dwivēdī, F.A.U., 1898.)

PERSIAN CHARACTER.

کِسي مانُس کے دو بیٹے تھے * اُن مین سے لہُرے بیٹے نے باپ سے
کہا ہے باپ آپ کے دھن مین جو میرا بخرہ ہو اُسکو مُجھے دے دیجیے *
تب اسنے آپنا دھن اُن مین بانٹ دیا * بہُت دِن نہین بیتے کہ لہُرا
بیٹا سب کُچھہ بٹور دُور دیس چلا گیا اور وَہان لُچپن مین دِن بِتاوتے
اپنا دھن اُڑا دیا * جب وہ سب کُچھہ اُڑا چُکا تب اُس دیس مین اَکال
پڑا اور وہ کنگال ہوگیا * تب وہ اُس دیس کے کِسي بھلے مانُس کے
یہان جاکر رہنے لگا جِسنے اُسکو اپنے کھیت مین سُوأر چَرانے کو بھیجا *
اور وہ چاہتا تھا کہ مَین اپنا پیٹ ان چھیمِیون سے بھرُون جِنھین
سُوأر کھاتے ہَین * پر کوي اُسکو کُچھہ نہین دیتا تھا * تَب اُسکو
چیت ہُوا اَور کہنے لگا کہ میرے باپ کے یہان اِتني اَلیلھہ روٹي
ہوتي ہَین کہ کَتنے مَنجُورے پیٹ بھر کھاتے ہَین اور بچای بھي
رَکھتے ہَین اور مَین بھوکھا مرتا ہُون * مَین اُٹھتا ہون اور باپ کے
پاس جاکر یہي کہُونگا کہ ہے باپ مَین نے بھگوان کے بِمکھہ اَور آپ

ے سامنے پاپ کیا * مَین پھر آپ کا بیٹا کہے جانے جوگ نہین *
مُجھہ کو اَپنے مَجدُورون مین سے ایك کي نایِن رکھیے * تب وہ اُٹھہ
کر اپنے باپ کے پاس چلا * پر وہ دُور ھي تھا کہ اُسکے باپ نے اُسکو
دیکھہ کر دایا کِي اور دَوڑ کر اُسکے گلے مین لِپٹ گیا اَور اُسکو چُومنے
لگا * بیٹے نے کہا ھے باپ مَین نے بَھگوان کے بِمُکھہ اَور آپ کے سامنے
پاپ کِیا اور آپ کا بیٹا کہے جانے جوگ نَہین * پر باپ نے اَپنے
چاکرون مین سے ایك سے کہا کہ سب سے اچّھا کپڑا اِسکو پَہناو اور
ھاتھہ مین انگُوٹھي اور پاون مین جُوتے * اَور چلو ھَم لوگ کھاین
اَور بِلسین * کِیونکہ یہہ بیٹا مَرا اَیسا تھا پھِر سے جِیا ھَے * ھِرایِ گیا تھا پھر مِلا ھَے * تب وے سُکھہ سے بِلسنے لگے *

اُسکا جِٹھرا بیٹا کھیت مین تھا * جب وہ آتے ھوے گھر کے نِیر
پَہونچا تب ناچنے بجانے کا سُر سُنا * اُسنے اَپنے چاکرون مین سے ایک
کو بُلا کر پونچھا کہ یہ کَیا ھَے * اُسنے اُس سے کَہا کہ آپ کا بھاي آیا
ھَے اور آپ کے باپ نے جیونار کِیا ھَے کیونکہ اُسکو ھرا بھرا پایا ھے *
اِسپر اُسنے رِس کِیا اور گھر کے بِھیتر جانا نہ چاھا * پر اُسکا باپ باھر
آکر اُسکو مناونے لگا * اُسنے باپ کو جواب دِیا کہ دیکھِیے مَین اِتنے
برسون سے آپ کي ٹہل کرتا ھون اور آپ کے آدیس کا ٹالنا نہ کِیا اور
اَپنے مُجھکو کبھین ایك میمنا بھي نہ دِیا کہ مَین اپنے مِیلیون کے سنگ

بھرتا * پر آپ کا یہ بیٹا جو پتریون کے سنگ آپ کے دھن کو کھا
گیا ہے جیسے ھی آیا تیسے ھی آپ نے اُسکے لیے بڑھیان جیونار کیا
ہے * باپ نے اُس سے کہا ہے بیٹا تُون سدا میرے سنگ ہے اور جو
کُچھہ میرا ہے سو سب تیرا ہے * پر ھلسنا اور ھرکھنا پد ہے کیونکہ
یہہ تیرا بھای مرا ایسا تھا پھر جیا ہے ھرا گیا تھا پھر ملا ہے *

[No. I.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

HINDŌSTĀNĪ (Ṭhēṭh VARIETY).

(Mahāmahōpādhyāya Paṇḍit Sudhākara Dwivēdī, F.A.U., 1898.)

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Kisī mānus-kē dō bēṭē thē. Un-mẽ-sē lahurē bēṭē-nē
A-certain man-of two sons were. Them-in-from the-younger son-by bāp-sē kahā, 'hē bāp, āp-kē dhan-mẽ jō mērā
the-father-to it-was-said, 'O father, your-Honour-of property-in what my bakhᵃrā hō, us-kō mujhē dē-dījiyē.' Tab us-nē apⁿnā dhan share may-be, that to-me give-away.' Then him-by his-own property un-mẽ bãṭ-diyā. Bahut din nahĩ bītē, ki lahurā bēṭā them-among was-divided. Many days not passed, that the-younger son sab kuchh baṭōr dūr dēs chalā-gayā, aur wahã luchⁿpan-mẽ all things collecting distant country went-away, and there debauchery-in din bitāwᵃtē apⁿnā dhan uṛā-diyā. Jab wah sab-kuchh days passing his-own fortune was-wasted-away. When he all-things uṛā-chukā, tab us dēs-mẽ akāl paṛā, aur wah kaṅgāl wasted-completely, then that country-in famine fell, and he indigent hō-gayā. Tab wah us dēs-kē kisī bhalē-mānus-kē yahã became. Then he that country-of a-certain well-to-do-man-of near jā-kar rahᵃnē lagā; jis-nē us-kō apⁿnē khēt-mẽ sūar gone-having to-live began; whom-by him-for his-own fields-in swine charānē-kō bhējā. Aur wah chāhᵃtā-thā ki, 'maĩ apⁿnā pēṭ un to-feed it-was-sent. And he wishing-was that, 'I my-own belly those chhīmiyõ-sē bharũ, jinhẽ sūar khātē-haĩ,' par kōī us-kō kuchh husks-with I-may-fill, which swine eating-are,' but anyone him-to anything nahĩ dētā-thā. Tab us-kō chēt huā, aur kahⁿnē lagā ki, not giving-was. Then him-to senses became, and to-say he-began that,
'mērē bāp-kē yahã itⁿnī alēlah rōṭī hōtī-haĩ, ki
'my father-of near so-many thoughtlessly loaves prepared-are, that kitⁿnē majūrē pēṭ-bhar khātē-haĩ aur bachāy bhī rakhᵃtē-haĩ how-many labourers belly-full eating-are and putting-by also keeping-are, aur maĩ bhūkhā marᵃṭā-hũ. Maĩ uṭhᵃtā-hũ aur bāp-kē pās and I hungry dying-am. I arising-am and the-father-of near jā-kar yahī kahũgā ki, "hē bāp, maĩ-nē Bhagᵃwān-kē gone-having this-very will-say that, "O father, me-by God-of bimukh aur āp-kē sāmᵃnē pāp kiyā. Maĩ phir against and your-Honour-of in-presence sin was-done. I again āp-kā bēṭā kahē-jānē jōg nahĩ. Mujh-kō apᵃnē your-Honour-of son to-be-called worthy not. Me your-own majūrõ-mẽ-sē ēk-kī nāĩ rakhiyē."' Tab wah uṭh-kar apᵃnē labourers-among-from one-of like keep."' Then he risen-having his-own bāp-kē pās chalā; par wah dūr-hī thā ki us-kē bāp-nē father-of near went; but he far-off-even was that his father-by us-kō dēkh-kar dāyā kī, aur dauṛ-kar us-kē galē-mẽ him-to seen-having pity was-done, and run-having his neck-in lipaṭ-gayā, aur us-kō chūmᵃnē lagā. Bēṭē-nē kahā, 'hē bāp, threw-himself, and him to-kiss began. The-son-by it-was-said, 'O father, maĩ-nē Bhagᵃwān-kē bimukh aur āp-kē sāmᵃnē pāp kiyā;

me-by God-of against and your-Honour-of in-presence sin was-done;
aur āp-kā bēṭā kahē-jānē jōg nahĩ.' Par bāp-nē apᵃnē and your-Honour-of son to-be-called worthy not.' But the-father-by his-own chākᵃrõ-mẽ-sē ēk-sē kahā ki, 'sab-sē achchhā kapᵃṛā is-kō servants-in-from one-to it-was-said that, 'all-than good clothes this-one-to pahināwō, aur hāth-mẽ ãgūṭhī aur pãwõ-mẽ jūtē. Aur chalō, ham-lōg put-on, and hand-on a-ring and feet-on shoes. And come, we-people khãy aur belᵃsẽ, kyõ-ki yah bēṭā marā aisā thā, phir-sē may-eat and may-rejoice, because this son dead like was, again jīyā-hai; herāy gayā thā, phir milā-hai.' Tab wē sukh-sē alive-is; lost gone was, again found-is.' Then they pleasure-with belasᵃnē lagē.
to-make-merry began.

Us-kā jeṭhᵃrā bēṭā khēt-mẽ thā. Jab wah ātē-huē ghar-kē niar His elder son field-in was. When he coming house-of near pahũchā, tab nāchᵃnē bajānē-kā sur sunā. Us-nē apᵃnē arrived, then dancing music-of sound was-heard. Him-by his-own chākᵃrō-mẽ-sē ēk-kō bulā-kar pũchhā ki, 'yah kyā hai?'
servants-in-from one called-having it-was-asked that, 'this what is?'
Us-nē us-sē kahā ki, 'āp-kā bhāī āyā hai, aur
Him-by him-to it-was-said that, 'your-Honour-of brother come is, and āp-kē bāp-nē jewᵃnār kiyā-hai, kyõ-ki us-kō harā-bharā your-Honour-of father-by feast made-is, because him-to flourishing payā-hai.' Is-par us-nē ris kiyā aur ghar-kē bhītar it-has-been-found.' Hereupon him-by anger was-made and house-of inside

[No. I.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

HINDŌSTĀNĪ (Ṭhēṭh VARIETY).

(Mahāmahōpādhyāya Paṇḍit Sudhākara Dwivēdī, F.A.U., 1898.)

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Kisī mānus-kē dō bēṭē thē. Un-mẽ̃-sē lahurē bēṭē-nē
A-certain man-of two sons were. Them-in-from the-younger son-by bāp-sē kahā, 'hē bāp, āp-kē dhan-mẽ̃ jō mērā
the-father-to it-was-said, 'O father, your-Honour-of property-in what my bakhᵃrā hō, us-kō mujhē dē-dījiyē.' Tab us-nē apⁿnā dhan share may-be, that to-me give-away.' Then him-by his-own property un-mẽ̃ bãṭ-diyā. Bahut din nahĩ bītē, ki lahurā bēṭā them-among was-divided. Many days not passed, that the-younger son sab kuchh baṭōr dūr dēs chalā-gayā, aur wahã̃ luchᵃpan-mẽ̃ all things collecting distant country went-away, and there debauchery-in din bitāwᵃtē apᵃnā dhan uṛā-diyā. Jab wah sab-kuchh days passing his-own fortune was-wasted-away. When he all-things
uṛā-chukā, tab us dēs-mẽ̃ akāl paṛā, aur wah kaṅgāl
wasted-completely, then that country-in famine fell, and he indigent
hō-gayā. Tab wah us dēs-kē kisī bhalē-mānus-kē yahã̃ became. Then he that country-of a-certain well-to-do-man-of near jā-kar rahᵃnē lagā; jis-nē us-kō apᵃnē khēt-mẽ̃ sūar gone-having to-live began; whom-by him-for his-own fields-in swine charānē-kō bhējā. Aur wah chāhᵃtā-thā ki, 'maĩ apᵃnā pēṭ un to-feed it-was-sent. And he wishing-was that, 'I my-own belly those chhīmiyõ̃-sē bharū̃, jinhẽ̃ sūar khātē-haĩ,' par kōī us-kō kuchh husks-with I-may-fill, which swine eating-are,' but anyone him-to anything nahĩ dētā-thā. Tab us-kō chēt huā, aur kahᵃnē lagā ki, not giving-was. Then him-to senses became, and to-say he-began that,
'mērē bāp-kē yahã̃ itᵃnī alēlah rōṭī hōtī-haĩ, ki
'my father-of near so-many thoughtlessly loaves prepared-are, that kitᵃnē majūrē pēṭ-bhar khātē-haĩ aur bachāy bhī rakhᵃtē-haĩ how-many labourers belly-full eating-are and putting-by also keeping-are, aur maĩ bhūkhā marᵃṭā-hū̃. Maĩ uṭhᵃtā-hū̃ aur bāp-kē pās and I hungry dying-am. I arising-am and the-father-of near jā-kar yahī kahūgā ki, "hē bāp, maĩ-nē Bhagᵃwān-kē gone-having this-very will-say that, "O father, me-by God-of bimukh aur āp-kē sāmᵃnē pāp kiyā. Maĩ phir against and your-Honour-of in-presence sin was-done. I again

āp-kā bēṭā kahē-jānē jōg nahĩ. Mujh-kō apᵃnē your-Honour-of son to-be-called worthy not. Me your-own majūrō̃-mē̃-sē ēk-kī nāĩ rakhiyē."' Tab wah uṭh-kar apᵃnē labourers-among-from one-of like keep."' Then he risen-having his-own bāp-kē pās chalā; par wah dūr-hī thā ki us-kē bāp-nē
father-of near went; but he far-off-even was that his father-by us-kō dēkh-kar dāyā kī, aur dauṛ-kar us-kē galē-mē̃ him-to seen-having pity was-done, and run-having his neck-in lipaṭ-gayā, aur us-kō chūmᵃnē lagā. Bēṭē-nē kahā, 'hē bāp, threw-himself, and him to-kiss began. The-son-by it-was-said, 'O father, maĩ-nē Bhagᵃwān-kē bimukh aur āp-kē sāmᵃnē pāp kiyā;
me-by God-of against and your-Honour-of in-presence sin was-done;
aur āp-kā bēṭā kahē-jānē jōg nahĩ.' Par bāp-nē apᵃnē and your-Honour-of son to-be-called worthy not.' But the-father-by his-own chākᵃrō̃-mē̃-sē ēk-sē kahā ki, 'sab-sē achchhā kapᵃṛā is-kō servants-in-from one-to it-was-said that, 'all-than good clothes this-one-to pahināwō, aur hāth-mē̃ āgūṭhī aur pā̃wō̃-mē̃ jūtē. Aur chalō, ham-lōg put-on, and hand-on a-ring and feet-on shoes. And come, we-people khā̃y aur belᵃsē̃, kyō̃-ki yah bēṭā marā aisā thā, phir-sē may-eat and may-rejoice, because this son dead like was, again jīyā-hai; herāy gayā thā, phir milā-hai.' Tab wē sukh-sē alive-is; lost gone was, again found-is.' Then they pleasure-with belasᵃnē lagē.
to-make-merry began.

Us-kā jeṭhᵃrā bēṭā khēt-mē̃ thā. Jab wah ātē-huē ghar-kē niar His elder son field-in was. When he coming house-of near pahū̃chā, tab nāchᵃnē bajānē-kā sur sunā. Us-nē apᵃnē arrived, then dancing music-of sound was-heard. Him-by his-own chākᵃrō-mē̃-sē ēk-kō bulā-kar pū̃chhā ki, 'yah kyā hai?'
servants-in-from one called-having it-was-asked that, 'this what is?'
Us-nē us-sē kahā ki, 'āp-kā bhāī āyā hai, aur
Him-by him-to it-was-said that, 'your-Honour-of brother come is, and āp-kē bāp-nē jewᵃnār kiyā-hai, kyō̃-ki us-kō harā-bharā your-Honour-of father-by feast made-is, because him-to flourishing
payā-hai.' Is-par us-nē ris kiyā aur ghar-kē bhītar
it-has-been-found.' Hereupon him-by anger was-made and house-of inside jānā na chāhā. Par us-kā bāp bāhar ā-kar us-kō manāwᵃnē to-go not wished. But him-of father outside come-having him to-appease lagā. Us-nē bāp-kō jabāb diyā ki, 'dēkhiyē, maĩ itᵃnē began. Him-by the-father-to answer was-given that, 'see, I so-many barᵃsõ-sē āp-kī ṭahal karᵃtā-hũ, aur āp-kē ādēs-kā years-since your-Honour-of service doing-am, and your-Honour-of order-of ṭālᵃnā na kiyā, aur āp-nē mujh-kō kabhĩ ēk transgression not was-done, and your-Honour-by me-to ever-even one mēmᵃnā na diyā ki maĩ apᵃnē mēliyõ-kē saṅg kid not was-given that I my-own friends-of with biharᵃtā. Par āp-kā yah bēṭā jō paturiyõ-kē might-have-made-merry. But your-Honour-of this son who harlots-of saṅg āp-kē dhan-kō khā-gayā-hai, jaisē-hī āyā taisē-hī in-company your-Honour-of fortune eaten-up-has, as-even he-came so-even āp-nē us-kē liyē barḥiyã jewᵃnār kiyā-hai.' Bāp-nē your-Honour-by him-of for good feast has-been-made.' The-father-by us-sē kahā, 'hē bēṭā, tũ sadā mērē saṅg hai, aur jō-kuchh him-to it-was-said, 'O son, thou always me with art, and whatever merā hai, sō sab tērā hai. Par hulasᵃnā aur harakhᵃnā pad mine is, that all thine is. But to-be-pleased and to-be-glad proper hai, kyõ-ki yah tērā bhāī marā aisā thā, phir jīā-hai; herāy is, because this thy brother dead like was, again alive-is; lost gayā-thā, phir milā hai.'

had-been, again found is.'

I next give an extract from the Kahānī Ṭhēṭh Hindī-mẽ, the celebrated story of the loves of Prince Udai Bhān and the Princess Kētakī, by Inshā Allāh Khān, who flourished at Lucknow in the early part of the nineteenth century. The passage given is the Preface. In this the author explains that his intention is to write a composition in the idiom used by the better class of people, meaning by this the Urdū of Lucknow, but with a vocabulary which rigorously excludes all words of foreign origin, and which is drawn entirely from Hinduī, i.e. the speech of Hindūs. As a tour de force, his success has been complete. The work is a treasury of words in everyday use amongst the people of Hindōstān, many of which will not be found in any dictionary. On the other hand, as a model of style, it can only rank as a curiosity. The style is that of the Persianised Urdū current in Lucknow, not that of a true Indian language. The verb is commonly in the middle of the sentence, for instance ragaṛ'tā-hũ in the very first clause. Again, the metres used for the poetry are Persian, not Hindī. As explained elsewhere, Hindū scholars class a language as Urdū or Hindī, not according to its vocabulary, but according to the idiom—especially the order of the words,—employed. Hence, although from beginning to end Inshā Allāh's tale does not contain a single Persian word, they universally deny that it is written in Hindī. To them it is written in Urdū and in nothing else.

I give the extract in two characters, in the Persian in which it was originally published, and also in the Dēva-nāgarī. Anyone capable of studying it will be able to read it in one or other of these characters, and I therefore give no transliteration. I append a translation based on that of Mr. Clint, but more literal.

The whole work was published (with a good many misprints) in Vols. XXI and XXIV of the Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal. The first section was translated by Mr. L. Clint, and the second by Mr. S. Slater. It has been more than once reprinted in Bāzār presses in India. A satisfactory text has not yet been issued. I have, in the main, followed that of Mr. Clint, with a few alterations based on other information.

[No. 2.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

HINDŌSTĀNĪ (Ṭhēṭh VARIETY).

(Inshā Allāh Khān, circa 1800.)

سر جُھکا کر ناک رگڑتا ھُوں اوس اَپنے بنانے والے کے سامنے جسنے
ھم سب کو بنایا اور بات کي بات مین وہ سب کر دِکھایا جِسکا بھید کِسي نے نہ پایا *

آتیان جاتیان جو سانسین هین *

اوسکے بن دهیان یهه سب پهانسین هین *

یهه کل کا پُتلا - جو اپنے اوس کهلاڑي کي سُدهه رکهے - تو کهٹائي مین کیون پڑے - اور کڑوا کسیلا کیون هو * اوس پهل کي مٹهائي چکهه - جو بڑون سے بڑائي اگلون نے چکهي هے *

دیکهنے کو آنکهه دین - اور سُنّے کو یهه کان دئے * ناک بهي اونچي سب مین کر دي - مورتون کو جي دان دئے * مٹي ے باسن کو اِتني سکت کهان جو اپنے کُمهار ے کرتب کُچهه بتا سکے * سچ هے جو بنایا هوا هو سو اپنے بنانے والے کو کیا سراهے - اور کیا ے * یون جسکا جي چاهے پڑا بکے * سر سے لگا پاون تک جتنے رونگٹے هین - جو سب ے سب بول اوٹهین اور سراها کرین اور اِتنے برسون اِسي دهیان مین رهین جتني ساري ندیون مین ریت اور پهول پهلیان کهیت مین هین - تو بهي کُچهه نهو سکے *

اِس سر جُهکانے ے ساتهے دن رات چُپتا هون اوس داتا ے پُهنچے هوئے پیارے کو - جسکے لئے یون کها هے " جو تُو نهوتا - مَین کُچهه نه بناتا " * اور اوسکا چهیڑا بهائي - جسکا بیاه اوسي ے گهر هوا * اوسي کي سُرت مُجهے لگي رهي هے - مَین پهولا - اپنے آپ مین نهین سماتا - اور جتنے اونکے لڑکے بالے هین اونهین ے یهان پر چاو هے *

اور کوي هو - کُچهه ميرے جي کو نهين بهاتا * مُجهے اِس گهرانے
ے چُهٹ کِسي لے بهاگ اوچک چور ٹهگ سے کيا پڑي * جيتے مرتے
اونهين سبهونکا آسرا اور اونکے گهرانے کا رکهتا هون تيسون گهڑي *

دَول ڈال ايک انوکهي بات کا

ايکدِن بَيٹهے بَيٹهے يِهه بات اپنے دهيان مين چڑهه آئي - کوئي
کهاني اَيسي کهئے جِسمين هِندوي چُهٹ اور کِسي بولي کي پُٹ نه
مِلے * تب جاے ميرا جي پهول کي کلي ے روپ سے کِهلے * باهر
کي بول اور گنواري کُچهه اوسکے بِيچ نهو * اپنے سُننے والون مين سے ايک کوئي بڑے پڑهے لِکهے پُرانے دُهرانے ڈاگ - بڑے گهاگ - يِهه کهڑاگ لائے -
سِر هِلا کر - مونهه بنا کر - ناک بهون چڑها کر - آنکهين پتهرا کر لگے
کهنے - يِهه بات هوتِي دِکهائي نهين ديتِي * هِندوي پن بهي نه نِکلے
اور بهاکها پن بهي نه ٹهوس جاے - جَيسے بهلے لوگ آچّهون سے اچّهے
آپسمين بولتے چالتے هَين جيون کا تيون وهي ڈول رهے - اور چهانه
کِسي ے نه پڑے * يِهه نهِين هونے کا *

مَين نے اونکي ٹهنڈي سانس کي پهانس کا ٹهوکا کهاکر جُهنجلاکر
کها - مَين کُچهه اَيسا انوکها بولا نهين * جو رائي کو پربت کر دِکهاون
اور جهوٹ سچ بول ے اُونگليان نچاون اور بے سُري بے ٹِهکانيکي

اُولجھي سلجھي باتين سجاون * جو مُجھسے نہو سکتا تو بھلا يہہ بات
مونہہ سے کيون نِکالتا * جِس ڈھب سے ہوتا اس بکھيڑے کو ٹالتا *

اس کہاني کا کہنےوالا يہان آپ کو جتاتا ہے - اور جَيسا
کُچھہ لوگ اوسے پُکارتے ہين کہہ سُناتا ہے * دَہنا ہاتھہ مونہہ پر پھير
کر آپ کو جتاتا ہون * جو ميرے داتا نے چاہا تو وہ تاؤ بھاؤ اور آؤ
جاؤ اور کُود پھاند اور لِپٹ چِپٹ دِکھاون * جو ديکھتے ہي آپ کے
دھيان کا گھوڑا - جو بِجلي سے بھي بہُت چُنچل - اُچھلاہٹ مين ہرنون کے روپ مين - اپنے چوکڑي بُھول جاے *

گھوڑے پر اپنے چڑہ کے آتا ہُون مَين
کرتب جو ہين سو سب دِکھاتا ہُون مَين اوس چاہنے والے نے جو چاہا تو اَبھي
کہتا جو کُچھہ ہون کر دِکھاتا ہُون مَين

اب آپ کان رکھہ کے سنمُکھہ ہوے ٹُک اِدھر ديکھئے - کِس
ڈھب سے بڑھہ چلتا ہون اور اپنے اِن پُھول کي پنکھڑي جَيسے ہوٹھون سے کِس روپ کے پھول اوگلتا ہون *

[No. 2.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

HINDŌSTĀNĪ (Ṭhēṭh VARIETY).

(Inshā Allāh Khān, circa 1800.)

सिर झुका-कर नाक रगड़ता-हूँ उस अपने बनाने-वाले-के सामने जिस-ने हम-सब-को बनाया और बात-की बात-में वह सब कर दिखाया जिस-का भेद किसी-ने न पाया ॥

आतियाँ जातियाँ जो साँसें हैं ।
उस-के बिन ध्यान यह सब फाँसें हैं ॥

यह कल-का पुतला जो अपने उस खिलाड़ी-की सुध रखे तो खटाई-में क्यों पड़े और कड़ुआ कसैला क्यों हो । उस फल-की मिठाई चख जो बड़ों-से बड़ाई अगिलों-ने चखी-है ॥

देखने-को आँख दीं और सुनने-को यह कान दिये । नाक भी ऊँची सब-में कर दी । मूरतों-को जी दान दिये । मिट्टी-के बासन-को इतनी सकत कहाँ जो अपने कुम्हार-के करतब कुछ बता सकें । सच है जो बनाया हुआ हो सो अपने बनानेवाले-को क्या सराहे और क्या कहे । यूँ जिस-का जी चाहे पड़ा बके । सिर-से लगा पाँव-तक जितने रूँगटे-हैं—जो सब-के सब बोल उठें और सराहा करें और इतने बरसों इसी ध्यान-में रहें जितनी सारी नदियों-में रेत और फूल फलियाँ खेत-में हैं—तो भी कुछ न हो सके ॥

इस सिर झुकाने-के साथे दिन रात चपता-हूँ उस दाता-के पहुँचे-हुए प्यारे-को—जिस-के लिये यूँ कहा-है—जो तू न होता मैं कुछ न बनाता । और उस-का चचेरा भाई—जिस-का ब्याह उसी-के घर हुआ—उसी-की सुरत मुझे लगी रही-है । मैं फूला । अपने आप-में नहीं समाता । और जितने उन-के लड़के-बाले हैं उन्हीं-के यहाँ परचाव है । और कोई हो—कुछ मेरे जी-को नहीं भाता । मुझे इस घराने-के छुट किसी ले-भाग-उचक-चोर-ठग-से क्या पड़ी । जीते मरते उन्हीं सभों-का आसरा और उन-के घराने-का रखता-हूँ तीसों घड़ी ॥

डौल डाल एक अनोखी बात का।

एक दिन बैठे बैठे यह बात अपने ध्यान-में चढ़-आई—कोई कहानी ऐसी कहिये जिस-में हिन्दुई छुट और किसी बोली-की पुट न मिले। तब जा-के मेरा जी फूल-की कली के रूप-से खिले। बाहिर-की बोल और गँवारी कुछ उस-के बीच न हो। अपने सुनने-वालों-में-से एक कोई बड़े पढ़े लिखे-पुराने धुराने डाग—बड़े घाग—यह खटराग लाए—सिर हिला-कर—मुँह बना-कर—नाक भौं चढ़ा-कर—आँखें पथरा-कर—लगे कहने—यह बात होती दिखाई नहीं देती। हिन्दुई-पन भी न निकले और भाखा-पन भी न ठुस जाय—जैसे भले लोग अच्छों-से अच्छे आपस-में बोलते-चालते-हैं—ज्यों-का त्यों वही डौल रहे और छाँह किसी-के न पड़े। यह नहीं होने-का।

मैं-ने उन-की ठंडी साँस-की फाँस-का ठोका खा-कर झुँजला-कर कहा—मैं कुछ ऐसा अनोखा बोला नहीं। जो राए-को परबत कर दिखाओं और झूठ सच बोल-के उँगलियाँ नचाओं और बे-सुरी बे-ठिकाने-की उलझी सुलझी बातें सजाओं। जो मुझ-से न हो सकता तो भला यह बात मुँह-से क्यों निकालता। जिस ढब-से होता इस बखेड़े-को टालता।

इस कहानी-का कहने-वाला यहाँ आप-को जताता-है—और जैसा कुछ लोग उसे पुकारते-हैं कह सुनाता-है। दहिना हाथ मुँह-पर फेर-कर आप-को जताता-हूँ। जो मेरे दाता-ने चाहा तो वह ताव-भाव और आव-जाव और कूद-फाँद और लिपट-चिपट देखाओं। जो देखते-ही आप-के ध्यान-का घोड़ा—जो बिजुली से भी बहुत चंचल—उछलाहट-में हिरनों-के रूप-में—अपने चौकड़ी भूल जाए।

घोड़े-पर अपने चढ़-के आता-हूँ मैं।
करतब जो हैं सो सब देखाता-हूँ मैं।
उस चाहने-वाले-ने जो चाहा तो अभी।
कहता जो कुछ हूँ कर देखाता-हूँ मैं॥

अब आप कान रख-के सन्मुख हो-के टुक इधर देखिये किस ढब-से बढ़ चलता-हूँ और अपने इन फूल-की पँखड़ी जैसे होंठों-से किस रूप-के फूल उगलता-हूँ॥

TRANSLATION.

Having bowed my head, I rub my nose (in the dust) before Him, my Maker, by whom we all were made, and by whom in an instant[1] were revealed all those things of which the secret had hitherto been found by none.

Each breath that comes and goes,
Without meditation on Him, would be a noose for our necks.

How shall this puppet, that holds in remembrance the Being that makes it dance, fall into any difficulty (lit. sourness)? How shall bitterness and astringency be met with? It is the sweetness of this fruit which thou shouldst taste, as thy forefathers have tasted of excellence from their elders.[2]

For seeing He gave the eyes, and for hearing the ears. The nose also He made prominent amongst all (the features). On our forms bestowed He a soul. Where has a vessel of clay so much power as will enable it to declare the skill of its potter? Of a truth, how can that which is created praise its Creator, and what can it say? Let him who thus would do, babble in vain, (but as for me,) if every hair of the down upon my body from head to feet were each to speak and to continue glorifying, and were to remain rapt in that case for as many years as there are sands in all the rivers and blossoms and pods in the fields, even then they could not accomplish aught.

With this bowing of my head, I also prostrate myself day and night before that Friend[3] of the Giver, far advanced (in favour), on whose account it was said, 'if Thou hadst not been, I would have created nothing.' And of his cousin ('Alī), whose marriage was contracted in his family, the remembrance has always been with me. (As I remembered him), I exulted, and could not contain myself. And as many children as there are of him, to them alone am I devoted.[4] Whoever else there may be, he pleases not my heart. Beyond the pale of this family, what have I to do with any vagabond, sharper, thief, or robber? While I live, and while I die, on all these alone and on their house, day and night, do I place my hope.

THE FOUNDATION[5] OF A WONDROUS TALE.

One day, while I was sitting doing nothing, it came into my thought to write a story in which there should not appear the employment[6] of any language except Hinduī. Having taken this resolution, my heart expanded like a flower-bud. No foreign words or rustic expressions were to appear in it. Of those who heard (my intention), a few great scholars, old-fashioned curmudgeons, wily old rascals, introduced a cats' concert,[7] wagging their heads, screwing their faces, lifting up their noses and eyebrows, petrifying their eyes, and began to say, 'we don't see how this thing can be. That

---

[1] Bāt-kī bāt-mẽ=bāt kahᵉtē, in an instant, lit., while the words were being said.

[2] There is a pun here, which cannot be translated. Baṛõ-sē baṛāī means literally 'greatness from the great.'

[3] Muḥammad.

[4] Parᵉchānā is literally 'to introduce one person to another.' Hence, 'to fascinate, beguile.' Hence, as here, 'to be an object of affection or devotion.'

[5] Ḍaul is 'method, manner, appearance, shape.' But ḍaul ḍalᵉnā is 'to lay a foundation.'

[6] The dictionary meaning of puṭ is 'a menstruum, a solvent, a flux.' It is the application of anything, as the application of a medicine, of fire, of plaster, of a smearing, and so on.

[7] Khaṭ-rāg is literally 'six tunes' (played at once). Hence 'discord.' It corresponds exactly to the cats' concerts of our schoolboy days. Ãkhẽ pathᵉrānā is to turn the eyes to stone (patthar), to give a stony stare.

the quality of Hinduī should not appear, that the quality of local dialects should not slip in, that the style in use among the better sort of people, the super-excellent, which they employ amongst themselves, should under such conditions remain as it always was, and that neither of these (two faults) should be reflected in it,—that is impossible.'

I took offence at the difficulties raised by their cold sighs (of discouragement), and replied with some irritation, 'I have said nothing so very wonderful. If I show you a grain of mustard seed and try to persuade you that it is a mountain; if I play a pantomime with my fingers and call the false true; if I construct entangled and unconnected sentences without measure or moderation; if (in short) I cannot do (what I propose), then, well and good; (you are quite right to ask me) why I let such words issue from my mouth. (Let us judge by results.) In what way soever it is effected, an end is put to the dispute.'

The narrator of this story here declares himself, and to that degree in which some people proclaim him (in the way of praise), speaks conformably. Passing the right hand over the face (in consideration), I explain myself. Whatever my Benefactor willed, that, whether it is gestures and hints,[1] or coming and going, or leaping and jumping, or struggling and striving, will I show. Immediately on seeing which, the steed of your fancy, which is much faster even than lightning, and which in his bound is like the deer, will be lost in amazement.[2]

Mounting my horse I come.
The skill I have I show it all.
Whatever He who wished did wish, that, at once,
In whatever I may say, do I show forth.

Do you now give ear, and turning towards me, look for a moment in my direction. See in what manner I progress, and what sort of flowers I disclose from the petals of my lips.

---

[1] The dictionary meaning of tāo-bhāo is 'very little.' Tāw is properly the red glow of the face when angry. When a person's face is inflamed with rage, he is said tāw dekhlānā. Bhāw is a gesture or hint. Thus, bhāw na dekhāō, sāf sāf kahō, don't hint, speak plainly. In tāw-bhāw, tāw is little more than a doublet of bhāw, as in the phrase us-nē bahut tāw-bhāw dekhāyā, par maĩ-nē ēk na mānī, ap°nī-hī ṭēk rakkhī, he gave me several hints, but I did not heed, and stuck to my own determination.

[2] Chaukaṛī is the bound off all four legs at once, taken by a deer. Hence 'to forget one's bound' is 'to be lost in amazement.'

The next specimen is an extract from the Ṭhēṭh Hindī-kā Ṭhāṭh, a short novel by Paṇḍit Ayōdhyā Siṅgh Upādhyāy. It is an admirable specimen of the true Hindōstānī language, free from any admixture of borrowed words, whether Persian or Sanskrit. This pathetic story, illustrating Hindū life in northern India, is well worth the study of everyone who wishes to master the real language spoken by the people of the Upper Doab, which is at the same time readily intelligible wherever Hindōstānī is employed as a lingua franca. This is more than can be said either for the Persianised Urdū of Maulvīs, or for the Paṇḍit-ridden Hindī of Benares.

It has been published both in the Dēva-nāgarī and in the Persian characters, and both editions are here given. I append a fairly literal translation. The Indian idiom, it will be observed, is retained throughout. There is none of the Persian order of words which we have observed in the preceding specimen.

[No. 3.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

HINDŌSTĀNĪ (Ṭhēṭh VARIETY).

(Paṇḍit Ayōdhyā Siṅgh Upādhyāy, 1899.)

एक ग्यारह बरस-की लड़की अपने घर-के पास-की फुलवारी-में खड़ी हुई किसी-की बाट देख-रही-है। सूरज डूबने-पर है, बादल-में लाली छाई हुई-है, बयार जी-को ठंढा करती हुई धीरे चल-रही-है। थोड़ी बेर-में सूरज डूबा, कुछ झुट-पुटा सा हो-गया, फुलवारी-की एक ओर-से कोई उसी ओर आता दीख पड़ा, जिस ओर वह लड़की खड़ी थी। कुछ बेर-में वह आ-कर उस लड़की-के पास खड़ा हो-गया, लड़की-ने देख-कर कहा, देव-नन्दन अब तक कहाँ थे? मैं बहुत बेर-से यहाँ खड़ी तुम-को अगोर रही-हूँ॥

देव-नन्दन चौदह पंद्रह बरस-का लड़का है। उस-के सुडौल गोरे मुखड़े, अच्छे हाथ पाँव, छरहरी डील, ऊँचे और चौड़े माथे, लम्बी बाँहें, और जी लुभानेवाली बड़ी बड़ी आँखों-के देखने-से जान पड़ता-है जयंत सरग छोड़-कर धरती-पर उतरा है। वह लड़का उसी गाँव-में रहता-है जहाँ वह लड़की रहती-है, छोटेपन-से-ही दोनों दोनों-को चाहते आये-हैं। देव-नन्दन तीसरे चौथे जब छुट्टी पाता, इस लड़की-से आ-कर मिलता। यह लड़की

भौ बड़े चाव-से उस-से मिलती और अपनी मीठी मीठी बातों-से उस-के जी-को लुभाती। लड़की जानती-थी, आज देव-नन्दन आवेगा, इसी-से पहले-से उस-की बाट देख रही-थी। वह आया भी, पर कुछ अबेर कर-के। इसी लिये लड़की-ने उस-से पूछा, 'देव-नन्दन अब तक तुम कहाँ थे ?'

[No. 3.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

HINDŌSTĀNĪ (Ṭhēṭh VARIETY).

(Paṇḍit Ayōdhyā Siṅgh Upādhyāy, 1899.)

ایك گیارہ برس کي لڑکي اپنے گھر کے پاس کي پھلواري مین کھڑي ہوئي کسي کي باٹ دیھکہ رھي ہے - سورج ڈوبنے پر ہے - بادل مین لالي چھائي ہوئي ہے - بیمار جي کو ٹھنڈھا کرتي ہوئي دھیرے دھیرے چل رھي ہے - تھوڑي بیر مین سورج ڈوبا - کچھہ جھوٹپٹا سا ہوگیا - پھلواري کي ایک اور سے کوئي اُسي اور آتا دیکھہ پڑا جس اور وہ لڑکي کھڑي تھي - کچھہ بیر مین وہ آکر اُس لڑکي کے پاس کھڑا ہوگیا - لڑکي نے دیکھہ کر کہا - دیوننن اب تک کہان تھے ؟ مین بہت بیر سے یہان کھڑي تمکو اگور رھي ہون *

دیوننن چودہ پندرہ برس کا لڑکا ہے - اُس کے سُڈول گورے مُکھڑے اچّھے ھاتھہ پانون چھرھري ڈیل اونچے اور چوڑے ماتھے لنمبي باھین اور جي لبھانے والي بڑي بڑي آنکھون کے دیکھنے سے جان پڑتا ہے جَیَنت سرگ چھوڑ کر دھرتي پر اوترا ہے یہ لڑکا اُسي گانون مین رھتا ہے جہان وہ لڑکي رھتي ہے - چھوٹیپن سے ھي دونون دونون کو چاھتے آئے ھین - دیوننن تیسرے چوتھے جب چُھوٹّي پاتا اِس لڑکي

سے آکر ملتا - یہ لڑکي بھي بڑے چاؤ سے اُس سے مِلتي اور اپني
میٹھي میٹھي باتون سے اُسکے جي کو لبھاتي - لڑکي جانتي تھي
آج دیونندن آویگا - اسي سے پہلے سے اُسکي باٹ دیکھہ رھي تھي -
وہ آیا بھي پر کچھہ ابیر کرے - اِسي لئے لڑکي نے اُس سے پوچھا
دیونندن اب تک تم کہان تھے *

TRANSLATION.

A girl of eleven years of age is standing in the garden by her house watching for someone to come. The sun is about to set, the clouds are suffused with red, a gentle breeze is giving coolness to her spirit. In a short time the sun set, and, just as it was beginning to be dusky, someone became visible approaching, from another side of the garden, that side where the girl was standing. In a little while he came and stood by her. When the girl saw him she said, 'Dēonandan, where have you been all this time? I have been standing here a long while waiting for you.'

Dēonandan is a youth of fourteen or fifteen years. To look at his well-favoured fair-complexioned face, shapely hands and feet, slender form, high and broad forehead, long arms, and large heart-attracting eyes, you would think that Jayanta, the son of Indra, had himself descended from heaven and come down to the earth. He really belonged to the same village as that in which the girl lived, and from babyhood they had been fond of each other. Every third or fourth day, as he found an opportunity, Dēonandan would come to see her, and she, too, would meet him with the greatest affection, and with her sweet, sweet, words would attract his soul. The girl knew that Dēonandan would come that day, and for this reason had been looking out for him. He did come, but it was a little late, and that is why she said to him, 'Dēonandan, where have you been all this time?'

سے آکر ملتا - یہ لڑکي بھي بڑے چاؤ سے اُس سے مِلتي اور اپني
میٹھي میٹھي باتون سے اُسکے جي کو لبھاتي - لڑکي جانتي تھي
آج دیونندن آویگا - اسي سے پہلے سے اُسکي باٹ دیکھہ رھي تھي -
وہ آیا بھي پر کچھہ ابیر کرے - اِسي لئے لڑکي نے اُس سے پوچھا
دیونندن اب تک تم کہان تھے *

TRANSLATION.

A girl of eleven years of age is standing in the garden by her house watching for someone to come. The sun is about to set, the clouds are suffused with red, a gentle breeze is giving coolness to her spirit. In a short time the sun set, and, just as it was beginning to be dusky, someone became visible approaching, from another side of the garden, that side where the girl was standing. In a little while he came and stood by her. When the girl saw him she said, 'Dēonandan, where have you been all this time? I have been standing here a long while waiting for you.'

Dēonandan is a youth of fourteen or fifteen years. To look at his well-favoured fair-complexioned face, shapely hands and feet, slender form, high and broad forehead, long arms, and large heart-attracting eyes, you would think that Jayanta, the son of Indra, had himself descended from heaven and come down to the earth. He really belonged to the same village as that in which the girl lived, and from babyhood they had been fond of each other. Every third or fourth day, as he found an opportunity, Dēonandan would come to see her, and she, too, would meet him with the greatest affection, and with her sweet, sweet, words would attract his soul. The girl knew that Dēonandan would come that day, and for this reason had been looking out for him. He did come, but it was a little late, and that is why she said to him, 'Dēonandan, where have you been all this time?'

LUCKNOW LITERARY URDŪ.

The following specimen is in the Persianised Literary Urdū of Lucknow. The preference for Persian words instead of indigenous ones is manifest from the first sentence.

Notice, too, the preference for the Persian order of words with the verb in the middle, not at the end of the sentence, and the subject after the object. Hindī, or indeed any pure Indo-Aryan language, will not tolerate sentences like chalā āyā bāp-kē pās, he went to his father. The true Indian order would be bāp-kē pās chalā āyā. Again the order of the phrase ēk naukar-kō us-nĕ pūchhā is not truly Indian. The Indian order would be us-nē ēk naukar-kō (or -sē) pūchhā, the subject preceding the object.

The specimen (which is a version of the Parable) is given in the Persian character. As it is a good specimen of Urdū handwriting, it is given in facsimile, and not in type.

[No. 4.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

HINDŌSTĀNĪ (STANDARD URDŪ VARIETY).

ایک شخص کے دو بیٹے تھے - اُن مین سے چھوٹا باپ سے کہنے لگا - ابا جان جایداد مین ہمارا جو کچھ حصہ ہے
ہمکو دیدیجئے - چنانچہ اوس نے اپنا اثاثہ دونو کو تقسیم کر دیا - اور چند ہی روز بعد چھوٹا بیٹا سب مال
اکھٹا کر کے بہت دور کے ملک مین چلا گیا اور وہان ساری دولت شہدپن مین اوڑا دی - جب سب
اوٹھہ گیا تو اوس ملک مین قحط عظیم پڑا اور وہ محتاج ہو چلا - اور اوسنے اوس ملک کی ایک رئیس کے ہان جاکر نوکری کر لی - اوسنے اُسے اپنے کھیتون مین سوءر چرانے کے لئے بھیجدیا -
وہ تو بڑے ارزو کے ساتھ اون چھلکون سے ہی پیٹ بھر لیتا جو سوءر کھاتے تھے - مگر وہ بھی
کسی نے اوسکو نہ دی - اب اوسکی آنکھین کھلین - اوسنے کہا کہ بہتیرے مزدور تو میرے باپ
کے یہان پیٹ بھر کھانا پاتے ہین بلکہ بچا بھی کھتے ہین اور مین بھوکون مرتا ہون اور ابا کے پاس
جاؤن اور ان سے کہون - ابا جان مین خدا کا اور آپ کے حضور مین گنہگار ہون اور اب
اس لایق نہین کہ آپ کا بیٹا کہلاؤن - مجھے اپنے مزدورون مین رکھہ لیجئے - پس وہ اوٹھا
اور چلا اپنے باپ کے پاس - ہنوز فاصلہ ہی سے تھا کہ باپ نے اُسے دیکھ لیا اور رحم کھاکر دوڑا - گلے سے لگایا اور پیار کیا - اور بیٹے نے اوسے عرض کیا - ابا جان مین خدا کے حضور اور آپ کے

نظر مین گنہگار ہون اور اب اس لایق نہین کہ آپ کا بیٹا کہلاؤن - مگر باپ نے اپنی لوگون
کو حکم دیا کہ عمدہ سی عمدہ پوشاک لاؤ اور اسکو پہناؤ - انگوٹھی ہاتھ مین اور جوتا پاون مین پہناؤ
اور سب لوگ دعوتین کہاکر خوشیان منائین - میرا یہہ فرزند مرکر پھر جیا اور گم ہوکر پھر ملا - چنانچہ وہ سب لوگ خوشیان منانے لگے - اوسوقت اوس کا بڑا بیٹا کھیت پر تھا - جب وہ پلٹ کر گھر کے قریب پہونچا تو اوسنے گانے
اور ناچ کی اواز سنی - ایک نوکر کو اوسنے بلاکر پوچھا کہ یہہ سب کس بات پر ہورہا ہی
اوسنے اوس سی کہا آپ کے بھای آئی ہین اور اونکی صحیح سلامت واپس آنی پر آپ
کے والد نے جشن کیا ہی - وہ بہت بگڑا - گھر کے اندر ہی نہ جاتا تھا - اسپر اوس کا
باپ باہر نکل ایا اور منانے لگا - اوسنے باپ سی کہا کہ دیکھی اتنی برسون سی مین ایکی
خدمت کرتا ہون اور کسیوقت آپکے حکم سی سرتابی نہین کی - اسپر بھی آپ نے
کبھی مجھی بکری کا ایک بچہ تک نہ دیا کہ اپنی دوستون کے ساتھ خوشی مناتا - مگر جون ہی
آپ کا یہہ بیٹا ایا جسنے اپکا سارا مال کسبیون مین گنوا دیا تو آپ نے اون کی خاطر سے
جشن کیا - اوس نے اوس سی کہا - بیٹا تم ہمیشہ میری پاس ہو جو کچھ میرا ہی
وہ تمہارا ہی - مناسب یہہ ہی تھا کہ ہمکو خوشیان منائین اور شادی ہون
کیونکہ تمہارا بھای مرکے زندہ ہوا ہی اور گم ہوکے پھر ملا ہی -

[No. 4.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

HINDŌSTĀNĪ (STANDARD URDŪ VARIETY). DISTRICT, LUCKNOW.

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ēk shakhṣ-kē dō bēṭē thē. Un-mẽ-sē chhōṭā bāp-sē One man-of two sons were. Them-in-from the-younger father-to kahnē lagā, 'abbā jān, jāeḍād-mẽ hamārā jō-kuchh hiṣṣa hai hamto-say began, 'father dear, property-in my whatever share is me-kō dē-dījiē.' Chunãche us-nē apnā aṣāṣa dōnõ-kō taqsīm to give-away.' Accordingly him-by his-own property both-to division kar-diyā. Aur chand-hī rōz ba'd chhōṭā bēṭā sab māl was-made-and-given. And some-even days after the-younger son all property ikaṭṭhā kar-kē bahut dūr-kē mulk-mẽ chalā-gayā aur wahã together made-having great distance-of country-into went-away and there sārī daulat shohad-pan-mẽ uṛā-dī. Jab sab uṭh-gayā tō all wealth debauchery-in squandered-away. When all up-went then us mulk-mẽ qaḥaṭ-e-'aẓīm paṛā aur woh muḥtāj hō-chalā. Aur us-that country-in a-famine-great fell and he needy became. And him-nē us mulk-kē ēk raīs-kē hã jā-kar naukarī kar-li.
by that country-of a rich-native-of place-in gone-having service took.
Us-nē isē apnē khētõ-mẽ sūarẽ charānē-kē liyē bhēj-Him-by for-this-one his-own fields-in swine feeding-of for it-was-sentdiyā. Wah, tō, baṛī ārzū-kē sāth un chhilkõ-sē bhī pēṭ away. He, indeed, great desire-of with those husks-with even belly bhar-lētā jō sūarẽ khātī-thĩ, magar woh bhī kisī-nē would-have-filled which the-swine eating-were, but that even anyone-by us-kō na dī. Ab us-kī ãkhẽ khulĩ. Us-nē kahā him-to not was-given. Now him-of eyes opened. Him-by it-was-said ki, 'bahutērē mazdūr tō mērē bāp-kē yahã pēṭ bhar that, 'many labourers indeed my father-of house-at belly full khānā pãẽ, balki bachā bhī rakhaĩ, aur maĩ bhūkhõ marũ.
food get, nay-rather saving also keep, and I from-hunger die.
Uṭhũ aur abbā-kē pās jãũ aur un-sē kahũ, "abbā jān, Let-me-rise and father-of near go and him-to say, "father dear, maĩ Khudā-kā aur āp-kē ḥuẓūr-mẽ gunah-gār hũ, aur ab
I God-of and your-Honour-of presence-in sinner am, and now is lāiq nahĩ ki āp-kā bēṭā kahlāũ. Mujhē apnē this worthy not that your-Honour-of son I-may-be-called. Me your-own mazdūrõ-mẽ rakh-lījiyē."' Pas woh uṭhā aur chalā-āyā bāp-kē labourers-in having-kept-take."' So he arose and went the-father-of

pās. Hanōz fāṣilē-hī-sē thā ki bāp-nē dēkh-liyā aur near. Yet distance-even-at he-was that the-father-by he-was-seen and raḥm khā-kar dauṛā, galē-sē lagāyā, aur piyār kiyā.
pity eaten-having he-ran, neck-to was-attached, and love was-made.
Aur bēṭē-nē us-sē 'arz kiyā, 'abbā jān, maĩ
And the-son-by him-to the-request was-made, 'father dear, I
Khudā-kē ḥuzūr aur āp-kī naẓar-mẽ gunah-gār hũ, aur ab
God-of presence and your-Honour-of sight-in sinner am, and now is lāiq nahĩ ki āp-kā bēṭā kahlāũ.' Magar this worthy not that your-Honour-of son I-may-be-called.' But bāp-nē apnē naukarõ-kō ḥukm diyā ki, 'umda-sē
the-father-by his-own servants-to order was-given that, 'good-than
'umda pōshāk lāō aur in-kō pahnāō; ãgūṭhī hāth-mẽ aur good dress bring and this-one-on put; a-ring hand-on and jūtā pāõ-mẽ pinhāō; aur sab lōg da'watẽ khā-kar khushiyã shoe feet-on put; and all people feast eaten-having rejoicings manāẽ. Mērā yeh farzand mar-kar, phir jīyā; aur let-us-celebrate. My this son died-having, again lived; and gum hō-kar, phir milā.' Chunãche woh sab lōg lost become-having, again was-found.' Accordingly they all people khushiyã manānē lagē.
rejoicings to-celebrate began.

Us waqt us-kā baṛā bēṭā khēt-par thā. Jab woh
That time him-of elder son field-on was. When he palaṭ-kar ghar-kē qarīb pahũchā tō us-nē gānē returned-having house-of near arrived then him-by singing
aur nāch-kī āwāz sunī. Ēk naukar-kō us-nē bulā-kar and dancing-of sound was-heard. A servant him-by called-having pūchhā ki, 'yeh sab kis bāt-par hō-rahā-hai?' Us-nē it-was-asked that, 'this all what matter-on going-on-is?' Him-by us-sē kahā, 'āp-kē bhāī āē-haĩ aur un-kē ṣaḥīḥhim-to it-was-said, 'your-Honour-of brother come-is and him-of safe-salāmat wāpas ānē-par āp-kē wālid-nē jashn kiyā-hai.' Woh sound back coming-on your-Honour-of father-by feast made-is.' He bahut bigṛā, ghar-kē andar-hī na jātā thā. Is-par much was-put-out, house-of inside-even not going was. This-upon us-kā bāp bāhar nikal āyā aur manānē lagā. Us-him-of the-father outside emerging came and to-appease began. Him-nē bāp-sē kahā ki, 'dēkhiyē, it'nē bar'sõ-sē maĩ

by the-father-to it-was-said that, 'see, so-many years-from I āp-kī khidmat kartā-hũ aur kisī waqt āp-kē ḥukmyour-Honour-of service doing-am and any time your-Honour-of orderssē sartābī nahĩ kī; us-par bhī āp-nē kabhī
from disobedience not was-done; that-on even your-Honour-by ever mujhē bakrī-kā ēk bachcha tak na diyā ki apnē dōstõto-me she-goat-of one young-one up-to not was-given that my-own friendskē sāth khushī manātā. Magar jũ-hĩ āp-kā of with rejoicings I-might-have-celebrated. But as-even your-Honour-of yeh bēṭā āyā jis-nē āp-kā sārā māl kasbiyõ-mẽ gãwā-this son came whom-by your-Honour-of all substance harlots-in wasdiyā, tō āp-nē un-kī khāṭir-sē jashn kiyā.' Us-nē lost, then your-Honour-by him-of affection-by a-feast was-made.' Him-by us-sē kahā, 'bēṭā, tum hamēsha mērē pās hō; jō-kuchh mērā him-to it-was-said, 'son, you always me near are; whatever mine hai, woh tumhārā hai. Munāsib yehī thā ki ham-lōg is, that yours is. Proper this-indeed was that we-people khushiyã manãẽ aur masrūr hõ, kyõ-ki tumhārā bhāī rejoicings may-celebrate and happy may-be, because your brother mar-kē, zinda huā-hai; aur gum hō-kē, phir milā-hai.'
died-having, alive become-has; and lost become-having, again found-is.'

is lāiq nahĩ ki āp-kā bēṭā kahlāũ. Mujhē apnē
this worthy not that your-Honour-of son I-may-be-called. Me your-own mazdūrõ-mẽ rakh-lījiyē."' Pas woh uṭhā aur chalā-āyā bāp-kē labourers-in having-kept-take."' So he arose and went the-father-of
pās. Hanōz fāṣilē-hī-sē thā ki bāp-nē dēkh-liyā aur near. Yet distance-even-at he-was that the-father-by he-was-seen and raḥm khā-kar dauṛā, galē-sē lagāyā, aur piyār kiyā.
pity eaten-having he-ran, neck-to was-attached, and love was-made.
Aur bēṭē-nē us-sē 'arz kiyā, 'abbā jān, maĩ
And the-son-by him-to the-request was-made, 'father dear, I
Khudā-kē ḥuzūr aur āp-kī naẓar-mẽ gunah-gār hũ, aur ab
God-of presence and your-Honour-of sight-in sinner am, and now is lāiq nahĩ ki āp-kā bēṭā kahlāũ.' Magar this worthy not that your-Honour-of son I-may-be-called.' But bāp-nē apnē naukarõ-kō ḥukm diyā ki, ' 'umda-sē
the-father-by his-own servants-to order was-given that, ' good-than
'umda pōshāk lāō aur in-kō pahnāō; ãgūṭhī hāth-mẽ aur good dress bring and this-one-on put; a-ring hand-on and jūtā pāõ-mẽ pinhāō; aur sab lōg da'watẽ khā-kar khushiyã
shoe feet-on put; and all people feast eaten-having rejoicings manāẽ. Mērā yeh farzand mar-kar, phir jīyā; aur
let-us-celebrate. My this son died-having, again lived; and gum hō-kar, phir milā.' Chunãche woh sab lōg lost become-having, again was-found.' Accordingly they all people khushiyã manānē lagē.
rejoicings to-celebrate began.

Us waqt us-kā baṛā bēṭā khēt-par thā. Jab woh
That time him-of elder son field-on was. When he palaṭ-kar ghar-kē qarīb pahũchā tō us-nē gānē
returned-having house-of near arrived then him-by singing
aur nāch-kī āwāz sunī. Ēk naukar-kō us-nē bulā-kar and dancing-of sound was-heard. A servant him-by called-having pūchhā ki, 'yeh sab kis bāt-par hō-rahā-hai?' Us-nē
it-was-asked that, 'this all what matter-on going-on-is?' Him-by us-sē kahā, 'āp-kē bhāī āē-haĩ aur un-kē ṣaḥīḥhim-to it-was-said, 'your-Honour-of brother come-is and him-of safe-salāmat wāpas ānē-par āp-kē wālid-nē jashn kiyā-hai.' Woh sound back coming-on your-Honour-of father-by feast made-is.' He bahut bigṛā, ghar-kē andar-hī na jātā thā. Is-par much was-put-out, house-of inside-even not going was. This-upon us-kā bāp bāhar nikal āyā aur manānē lagā. Us-him-of the-father outside emerging came and to-appease began. Him-

nē bāp-sē kahā ki, 'dēkhiyē, it'nē bar'sõ-sē maĩ
by the-father-to it-was-said that, 'see, so-many years-from I
āp-kī khidmat kartā-hũ aur kisī waqt āp-kē ḥukm-
your-Honour-of service doing-am and any time your-Honour-of orders-
sē sartābī nahĩ kī; us-par bhī āp-nē kabhī
from disobedience not was-done; that-on even your-Honour-by ever mujhē bakrī-kā ēk bachcha tak na diyā ki apnē dōstõ-
to-me she-goat-of one young-one up-to not was-given that my-own friendskē sāth khushī manātā. Magar jũ-hĩ āp-kā of with rejoicings I-might-have-celebrated. But as-even your-Honour-of yeh bēṭā āyā jis-nē āp-kā sārā māl kasbiyõ-mẽ gãwā-this son came whom-by your-Honour-of all substance harlots-in wasdiyā, tō āp-nē un-kī khāṭir-sē jashn kiyā.' Us-nē lost, then your-Honour-by him-of affection-by a-feast was-made.' Him-by us-sē kahā, 'bēṭā, tum hamēsha mērē pās hō; jō-kuchh mērā
him-to it-was-said, 'son, you always me near are; whatever mine
hai, woh tumhārā hai. Munāsib yehī thā ki ham-lōg is, that yours is. Proper this-indeed was that we-people
khushiyã manãẽ aur masrūr hõ, kyõ-ki tumhārā bhāī
rejoicings may-celebrate and happy may-be, because your brother mar-kē, zinda huā-hai; aur gum hō-kē, phir milā-hai.'
died-having, alive become-has; and lost become-having, again found-is.'

QAṢBĀTĪ URDŪ OF LUCKNOW.

The preceding specimen has illustrated the high, literary style of Lucknow Urdū. We now proceed to give specimens of the ordinary Urdū spoken in the city. It is known as qaṣbātī, from qaṣbāt, the plural of qaṣba, a quarter of a town.

It is not so highly Persianised as the literary dialect, but possesses the typical order of words which Urdū has borrowed from Persian. Thus we have jānib dakhin, in the southern direction, the Indian order of which would be dakhinjānib. Similarly, kinārē daryā-e Saī-kē, instead of daryā-e Saī-kē kinārē, on the bank of the river Saī.

I give two specimens of this form of Urdū. The first is a short passage of the Parable of the Prodigal Son, which I give in transliteration only, merely for the purpose of comparison with the literary dialect. The other is a folk-tale about the temple of Bhaũrēsar in Nigōhā̃. It is given in the Persian character, with full transliteration and translation.

[No. 5.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

HINDŌSTĀNĪ (QAṢBĀTĪ URDŪ OF LUCKNOW).

SPECIMEN I.

Ēk shakhṣ-kē dō laṛkē thē. Un-mẽ̃-sē chhōṭē-nē apnē bāp-sē kahā ki, 'ai bāp, jāedād-mẽ̃-sē jō mērā ḥaqq hōtā-hō mujhē dē-dījiyē.' Tab us-nē un-kō apnī jāedād taqsīm kar-dī. Aur thōṛē rōz-kē ba'd chhōṭā laṛkā sab kuchh māl jam' kar-kē ēk dūr-kē mulk-kō rawāna huā, aur wahā̃-par apnā māl 'aiyāshī-mẽ̃ uṛā-diyā. Aur jab sab kharch kar-ḍālā, tab us mulk-mẽ̃ baṛā qaḥṭ paṛā, aur woh khud moḥtāj hōnē lagā.

[No. 6.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

HINDŌSTĀNĪ (QAṢBĀTĪ URDŪ OF LUCKNOW).

SPECIMEN II.

قصبہ نگوہان کي جانب دکھن ایك مندر مہادیو جي کا ہے جسکو
بھونریسر کہتے ہین اور کنارے دریاے سئي ے واقع ہے * اور وہان پر
ہر دوشنبہ کو میلا ہوتا ہے اور اکثر لوگ ہر روز درشن کو بلا ناغہ جایا
کرتے ہین اور جو مقصد دلي رکھتے ہین وہ پورا ہوتا ہے *

سننے مین آیا ہے کہ ایک وقت مین اورنگ‌زیب بادشاہ بھي اونکے
مندر پر تشریف لاے تھے * اور اونکي یہہ منشا تھي کہ اِس مندر کو
کھدوا کر مورت کو نکلوا لیوین اور صدھا مزدور اوس مورت ے نکالنے
کو مستعد ہوے لیکن مورت کي اِنتہا نہ معلوم ہوي * تب بادشاہ
نے غصے مین آکر اِجازت دي کہ اِس مورت کو توڑ ڈالو * تب
مزدورون نے توڑنا شروع کیا اور دو ایک ضرب مورت مین لگاي بلکہ
کچھہ شکست بھي ہوگئي جسکا نشان آجتک بھي موجود ہے اور
قدرے خون بھي مورت سے نمود ہوا لیکن ایسي قدرت مورت کي
ظاہر ہوي اور اوسي مورت ے نیچے سے ہزارہا بھونرے نکل پڑے اور
سب فوج بادشاہ کي بھونرون سے پریشان ہوي * اور یہہ خبر بادشاہ کو

بھي معلوم هوي * تب بادشاه نے حُکم دِيا کہ اچّھا اِس مُورت کا نام
آج سے بھونريسر هوا اَور جِس طرح پر تھي اوسي طرح سے بند کر دو
اور خود بادشاه نے مُورت مذکور بند کرانے کا اِنتِظام کر دِيا *

اب چند روز سے عِلاوہ درشن کے بہُت سے دُوکاندار لوگ وهان
دُوکانين لگاتے هَين * علاوہ معمُولي چِيزون کے کاشتکاري کي چِيزين
جو دِهات مين بہُت زِيادہ کرے ضَرورت هوتي هَين وهان پر مِل سکتي هين *

[No. 6.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

HINDŌSTĀNĪ (QAṢBĀTĪ URDŪ OF LUCKNOW).

SPECIMEN II.

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Qaṣba Nigōhã̃-kī jānib dakhin ēk mandir Mahādēo-jī-kā hai, Town Nigōhã̃-of direction southern a temple Mahādēo-jī-of is,

jis-kō Bhaũrēsar kahtē-haĩ, aur kinārē daryā-e Saī-kē which Bhaũrēsar calling-they-are, and on-the-bank the-river-of Saī-of wāqe' hai. Aur wahã̃-par har Du-shamba-kō mēlā hōtā-hai, aur situated is. And there-on every Monday-on a-fair being-is, and akṣar lōg har rōz darshan-kō bilā nāgha

generally people every day paying-respects-for without intermission

jāyā-kartē-haĩ, aur jō maqṣad-e dilī rakhtē-haĩ woh going-regularly-are, and what desire-of of-the-heart keeping-they-are that

pūrā hōtā-hai.
fulfilled being-is.

Sunnē-mẽ āyā-hai ki ēk waqt-mẽ Aurangzēb Bādshāh bhī Hearing-in come-it-is that one time-in Aurangzēb the-Emperor also un-kē mandir-par tashrīf-lāē-thē. Aur un-kī yeh that-(God-)of temple-on honoured-with-his-presence. And Him-of this manshā thī ki is mandir-kō khudwā-kar mūrat-kō nikalwāintention was that this temple got-dug-up-having the-image he-might-get-lēwẽ, aur ṣadhā mazdūr us mūrat-kē nikālnē-kō musta'idd taken-out, and hundreds labourers that image-of taking-out-for ready huē, lēkin mūrat-kī intihā na ma'lūm huī. Tab became, but the-image-of end not found became. Then

Bādshāh-nē ghuṣṣē-mẽ ā-kar ijāzat dī ki, 'is the-Emperor-by anger-in come-having permission was-given that, 'this mūrat-kō tōṛ-ḍālō.' Tab mazdūrõ-nē tōṛnā shurū' image break-in-pieces.' Then the-labourers-by to-break commencement

kiyā, aur dō ēk ẓarb mūrat-mẽ lagāī, balki, kuchh was-made, and two one strokes the-image-in were-applied, nay, somewhat

shikast bhī hō-gaī, jis-kā nishān āj-tak bhī maujūd hai, aur broken also it-became, which-of the-mark today-to also existing is, and

بھي معلوم هوي * تب بادشاه نے حکم دیا کہ اچھا اِس مورت کا نام آج سے بھونریسر هوا اور جس طرح پر تھي اوسي طرح سے بند کر دو اور خود بادشاه نے مورت مذکور بند کرانے کا اِنتظام کر دیا *

اب چند روز سے علاوہ درشن کے بہت سے دوکاندار لوگ وهان دوکانین لگاتے هین * علاوہ معمولي چیزون کے کاشتکاري کي چیزین جو دهات مین بہت زیادہ کرے ضرورت هوتي هین وهان پر مِل سکتي هین *

[No. 6.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

HINDŌSTĀNĪ (QAṢBĀTĪ URDŪ OF LUCKNOW).

SPECIMEN II.

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Qaṣba Nigōhã̄-kī jānib dakhin ēk mandir Mahādēo-jī-kā hai, Town Nigōhã̄-of direction southern a temple Mahādēo-jī-of is,
jis-kō Bhaũrēsar kahtē-haĩ, aur kinārē daryā-e Saī-kē which Bhaũrēsar calling-they-are, and on-the-bank the-river-of Saī-of wāqe‘ hai. Aur wahã̄-par har Du-shamba-kō mēlā hōtā-hai, aur situated is. And there-on every Monday-on a-fair being-is, and akṣar lōg har rōz darshan-kō bilā nāgha
generally people every day paying-respects-for without intermission
jāyā-kartē-haĩ, aur jō maqṣad-e dilī rakhtē-haĩ woh going-regularly-are, and what desire-of of-the-heart keeping-they-are that pūrā hōtā-hai.
fulfilled being-is.

Sunnē-mẽ āyā-hai ki ēk waqt-mẽ Aurangzēb Bādshāh bhī Hearing-in come-it-is that one time-in Aurangzēb the-Emperor also un-kē mandir-par tashrīf-lāē-thē. Aur un-kī yeh that-(God-)of temple-on honoured-with-his-presence. And Him-of this manshā thī ki is mandir-kō khudwā-kar mūrat-kō nikalwāintention was that this temple got-dug-up-having the-image he-might-get-lēwẽ, aur ṣadhā mazdūr us mūrat-kē nikālnē-kō musta‘idd
taken-out, and hundreds labourers that image-of taking-out-for ready huē, lēkin mūrat-kī intihā na ma‘lūm huī. Tab became, but the-image-of end not found became. Then Bādshāh-nē ghuṣṣē-mẽ ā-kar ijāzat dī ki, ‘is
the-Emperor-by anger-in come-having permission was-given that, ‘this mūrat-kō tōṛ-ḍālō.’ Tab mazdūrõ-nē tōṛnā shurū‘
image break-in-pieces.’ Then the-labourers-by to-break commencement
kiyā, aur dō ēk ẓarb mūrat-mẽ lagāī, balki, kuchh
was-made, and two one strokes the-image-in were-applied, nay, somewhat shikast bhī hō-gaī, jis-kā nishān āj-tak bhī maujūd hai, aur broken also it-became, which-of the-mark today-to also existing is, and qadr-ē khūn bhī mūrat-sē numūd huā; lēkin aisī little-a blood also the-image-from visible became; but such qudrat mūrat-kī ẓāhir huī, aur usī mūrat-kē supernatural-power the-image-of manifest became, and that-very image-of nīchē-sē hazārhā bhaũrē nikal-paṛē, aur sab fauj-e Bādshāh-kī below-from thousands hornets issued, and all the-army-of the-Emperor-of bhaũrõ-sē parēshān huī. Aur yeh khabar Bādshāh-kō bhī ma'lūm hornets-from distress became. And this news the-Emperor-to also known huī. Tab Bādshāh-nē ḥukm diyā ki, 'achchhā, is became. Then the-Emperor-by order was-given that, 'good, this mūrat-kā nām āj-sē Bhaũrēsar huā, aur jis image-of name today-from Bhaũrēsar (Lord-of-Hornets) became, and what ṭarḥ-par thī usī ṭarḥ-sē band kar-dō,' aur khud manner-on it-was that-very manner-by closed-up make,' and himself Bādshāh-nē mūrat maẓkūr band karānē-kā intiẓām the-Emperor-by the-image aforesaid closed-up causing-to-make-of arrangement kar-diyā.

was-made.

Ab chánd rōz-sē 'ilāwa darshan-kē bahut-sē dūkāndār
Now some days-from beside paying-respects-of many-very shopkeeper lōg wahã̄ dūkānẽ̄ lagātē-haĩ. 'Ilāwa ma'mūlī chīzȭ-kē, kāshtkārī-kī people there shops arranging-are. Besides ordinary things-of, cultivation-of chīzẽ̄, jō dehāt-mẽ̄ bahut ziyāda kar-kē ẓarūrat hōtī-haĩ, things, which villages-in much more done-having necessary being-are,
wahã̄-par mil saktī-haĩ.
there-on be-found can.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

To the south of the town of Nigōhã̄ there is a temple of Mahādēo, which people call Bhaũrēsar, and is situated on the bank of the river Saī. A fair is held there every Monday, and every day there is a stream of people who come to visit the image, in the belief that this act of worship will lead to the fulfilment of all the desires of their hearts.

The story goes that the Emperor Aurangzēb once visited the temple of this deity, and gave orders that the image should be dug up and taken out of the temple. He sent several hundred labourers, but no matter how deep they dug, they could not find the bottom of the image. Enraged at this, the Emperor ordered the image to be broken in pieces. The labourers commenced the work and gave it one or two blows. In doing so they damaged it slightly, and the marks of this are visible to the present day. A few drops of blood also issued from the image. But this indignity only served to make manifest the supernatural power which existed in the idol. Thousands of hornets issued from below it, and put the Emperor's army of men to flight. When this was told to him he said, 'very well, from this day let this image be known as Bhaũrēsar, or the Lord of Hornets, and let the earth be filled in so as to restore it to the same condition as that in which it was before.' He then himself saw that the arrangements for restoring the image to its original condition were carried out.

For a long time not only have people visited this shrine to pay homage to the deity, but a number of shopkeepers have set up shops in the locality. They sell not only the ordinary stock in trade but also everything that is necessary for village life.

BĒGAMATĪ URDŪ OF LUCKNOW.

The form of Urdū employed by respectable Musalmān ladies of Lucknow City is known as Bēgamatī. It is said to be very free from any Hindī admixture, but this statement is not borne out by the specimens which I have received.

Two specimens are given. The first is a transliterated text of a portion of the Parable of the Prodigal Son, for comparison with the other Urdū versions. The other is a letter written by a Musalmān lady of Lucknow to her mother. It is an admirable specimen of this dialect, full of quaint idioms and vivid expressions. I give it in facsimile of the original manuscript, together with a transliteration and translation. The writing of the manuscript is in the ordinary broken Urdū running hand.

Note that Persian and Arabic words ending in a short a are not inflected for the oblique cases, as the grammars tell us should be done. Thus, Kẖānam Ṣāḥiba (not -bē)-kē, (by the son) of the Kẖānam Ṣāḥiba; chha mahīna (not -nē)-kā bachcha, a baby of six months. This is a common irregularity of writing, which, however, does not affect the pronunciation. These oblique forms are pronounced as if ending in ē. Ṣāḥiba-kē is pronounced Ṣāḥibē-kē, and so on.

[No. 7.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

HINDŌSTĀNĪ (BĒGAMATĪ URDŪ OF LUCKNOW).

SPECIMEN I.

Ēk ādmī-kē dō bēṭē thē. Un-mẽ̃-sē chhōṭā bāp-sē bōlā, 'abbā-jān, māl asbāb-mẽ̃ jitnā hamārā ḥiṣṣa hai ham-kō dē-dījiyē.' Aur us-nē apnī daulat dōnõ̃-kō bãṭ-dī. Thōṛē dinõ̃ ba'd chhōṭā sab jam'-jathā samēṭ-kar bahut dūr kisī mulk-kō nikal-gayā. Wahã̃ sab shohad-pan-mẽ̃ uṛā baiṭhā. Jab sab uṭh-uṭhā-gayā tō us mulk-mẽ̃ bahut baṛā qaḥṭ paṛā, aur yeh mohtāj hō-chalā.

[No. 8.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

HINDŌSTĀNĪ (BĒGAMATĪ URDŪ OF LUCKNOW).

SPECIMEN II.

خط بیٹی کیطرف سے ماں کو

اچھی جان خدا کرے آپ سلامت رہیں ۔ بہن چھمن صاحب آج لکھنؤ میں داخل ہوئیں ۔ اون
کی زبانی سب خیر و صلاح معلوم ہوئی ۔ بڑے ماموں کا جی آئے دن ہمیشہ ماندہ رہتا ہے
لکھنؤ میں بہت دوا درمن کی مگر کچھ فائدہ نہیں ہوا حکیم اگر اور دیر والا ہو گیا تو
حضرت کو وہ ضرور ضرور علاج کرنے فیض آباد سدھارینگی ۔ آج کل میاں
چھورو کا ٹھیرا نزغہ ہی پڑوس میں حاتم صاحب کے یہاں کلمہ ون د؟ رسے کلی جوڑ
اکس رہے بڑا غل غپاڑہ مچا سپاہی گھوڑی گنوار کے لٹھ سمجھے نہ بوجھے بڑا سنتے
ہماری مکان میں ورنہ سب چلے آتے ۔ وہ تو کہئے بڑی خیریت گذری کہ اودس
ڈیوڑھی پر موجود تھا اور سنبھ روکا تھا نہیں تو سب کا سامنا ہو جاتا

خانم صاحبہ کے بیٹے نے مکان آکور لینے کے بہانہ سے گھر میں بولایا۔ دوپہر بند کیا

ف جبین لئے اولٹا چور چور کر کے غل مچا دیا۔ — نظیر اور اور کی بیوی میں

روزمرہ جھنجھٹ ہوا کرتے ہی نظیر کو تو آپ جانتے ایک نک چڑھا بیوی بھی

مزاج دار ذرا ذرا سی بات پر تو تو میں میں ہونے لگتے ہے لڑکہ سمجھایا

بہن بچا ساتھ ہے۔ خدا رکھے سیانی لڑکی بیاہنے لایق پہلوسے لگی

بیٹھی ہے۔ روکے سامنے اس نمک بک جھک دن رات کے وزنتا کل کل سے

کیا فائدہ مگر ایسے عقلو ہیز خدا رکھے مار سمجھا نہیں بات سے بتنگڑ بنتے ہیں

کون دخل دے — اولٹا نکو بنے اولاد علے کو دیکھے نہ کوئی بات نہ چیت

بکا بکا یہ بھی مانے لڑ بھڑ کر دو ہیال چلدیا۔ بیگم جان کی چہیتی بھتیجہ کا

پالا پوسا بچہ پر سون جانا ہے — بچاری کا ایک آنکھ دبائے ہے لڑکہ آنسو گرتے ہیں

ابھی میاں کو مرے پورے چار مہینہ بھی نہیں ہوئے ہیں کہ یہ آسمان پھٹ پڑا

[No. 8.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

HINDŌSTĀNĪ (BĒGAMATĪ URDŪ OF LUCKNOW).

SPECIMEN II.

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

KHAṬṬ BĒṬĪ-KĪ ṬARAF-SĒ MÃ-KŌ.
LETTER DAUGHTER-OF DIRECTION-FROM MOTHER-TO.

Ammī jān, Khudā karē āp salāmat rahẽ.
Mother dear, God may-make Your-Honour (in-)safety may-remain.

Bahin Jhamman Ṣāḥib āj Lakhnau-mẽ dākhil huĩ. Un-sē Sister Jhamman Ṣāḥiba today Lucknow-in entered became. Her-from āp-kī sab khair wa ṣalāḥ ma'lūm huī. Baṛē Your-Honour-of all health and prosperity known became. The-elder māmũ-kā jī āē-din (hamēsha) māndā rahtā-hai.

maternal-uncle-of spirit daily (i.e. always) unwell remaining-is.

Lakhnau-mẽ bahut dawā-darman kī, magar kuchh fāida nahĩ Lucknow-in much medicine-drugs were-done, but any benefit not

huā. Kalh agar upar-wālā hō-gayā, became. Tomorrow if the-above-one (i.e. the-moon) happened (i.e. becomes visible), tō Jum'a-rāt-kō woh ẓarūr ẓarūr 'ilāj karnē Faiẓ-ābād then Thursday-on he certainly certainly (for-)treatment doing Faizabad sidhārẽgē.

he-will-start.

Āj-kalh yahã chōrõ-kā baṛā nargha hai. Paṛōs-mẽ Nowadays here thieves-of great gang is. The-neighbourhood-in Khānam Ṣāḥib-kē yahã kalh din-dahāṛē kaī chōr Khānam Ṣāḥiba-of at yesterday in-broad-daylight several thieves ghus-āē. Baṛā ghul-ghapāṛa machā. Sipāhī nigōṛē, gãwār-kē entered. Much noise-clamour was-raised. Constables useless, boor-of laṭh, samjhē na būjhē, hullaṛ suntē-hī hamārē stick, understood not knew, uproar immediately-on-hearing our makān-mẽ darrāna chalē-āē. Woh tō kahiyē, baṛī khairiyat house-in straightway came. That verily you-may-say, great good-luck guẓrī. Ādmī ḍyōṛhī-par maujūd thā. Us-nē rōkā happened. A-man ante-chamber-on present was. By-him it-was-stopped thāmā. Nahĩ-tō sab-kā sāmnā ho-jātā. Us-mẽ-sē impeded. Otherwise all(-of-us)-of exposure would-have-been. That-out-of dō chōr pakṛē bhī gaē. Mūṍ-nē ḥākim-kē sāmnē two thieves arrested also went. The-idiots-by the-magistrate-of before ulṭā chhuddā rakhā ki, 'Khānam Ṣāḥiba-kē bēṭē-nē makān contrary accusation brought that, 'Khānam Ṣāḥiba-of the-son-by the-house akwānē-kē bahāna-sē ghar-mẽ bulāyā. Dō pahar band estimating-of pretext-on house-in (we-)were-summoned. Two watches confined rakhā, pachās rupaiyē chhīn-liyē, ulṭā "chōr chōr" (we-)were-kept, fifty rupees were-snatched-away, contrary "thief thief" kar-kē ghul machā-diyā.'

doing noise was-raised.'

Naẓīr aur un-kī bīwī-mẽ rōz-marra jhanjhaṭ huā-kartī-hai.
Naẓīr and him-of wife-between daily wrangling keeps-going-on.
Naẓīr-kō tō āp jāniyē, — ēk nak-charhā. Bīwī Naẓīr indeed Your-Honour may-know, — a nose-mounted-one. The-wife bhī mizājdār; zarrā-zarrā-sī bāt-par 'tū tū, maĩ maĩ' also haughty; very-little matter-on 'thou thou, I I' (i.e. quarrelling) hōnē lagtī-hai. Lākh samjhāyā, 'bahin, to-be beginning-is. Hundred-thousand was-it-remonstrated(-by-me), 'sister, kachchā sāth hai. Khudā rakhē. Siyānī laṛkī inexperienced company is. God preserve(-you). Youthful daughter biyāhnē lāiq pahlū-sē lagī baiṭhī-hai. Us-kē sāmnē is for-being-married fit side-by close seated-is. Her-of before this bak-bak jhak-jhak din rāt-kē dãt kil-kil-sē kyā fāida.'
talking altercation day night-of teeth gnashing-from what profit.'
Magar aisī 'aqlṍ-par Khudā-kī mār. Samjhānē-mẽ bāt-kē But such wits-on God-of curse. Remonstrating-on words-of batangaṛ baḍhtē-haĩ. Kaun dakhl-dē? Ulṭā wranglings increasing-are. Who may-interfere? On-the-contrary nakkū banē.
disgraced he-may-become.

Aulād 'Alī-kō dēkhiyē. Na kōī bāt na chīt, bēkār Aulād 'Alī please-see. Not any word or talk, without-ground bēkār bhī, mã̃-sē laṛ-bhiṛ-kar dadhiyāl without-ground also, mother-with quarrelled-having to-grandfather's-house chalā-gayā.
he-went-off.

Bēgam Jān-kā chha mahīna-kā pālā-pōsa bachcha Bēgam Jān-of six months-of brought-up(-and)-nursed baby parsṍ jātā-rahā. Bēchārī, ēk ãkh dabātī-hai, the-day-before-yesterday has-died. Poor-creature, one eye pressing-she-is,

lākh	ãsū	girtē-haĩ.	Abhī	Miyã̄-kō
a-hundred-thousand	tears	falling-are.	Only-now	(her-)husband-to

marē	pūrē	chār	mahīna	bhī	nahĩ	huē-thē	ki	yeh	asmān
since-death	full	four	months	even	not	passed-had	when	this	sky

phaṭ-paṛā.	Gharīb-kī	rahī-sahī	ās	bhī	ṭūṭ-gaī.
fell-in.	The-poor-woman-of	remaining	hope	also	broke.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

A LETTER FROM A DAUGHTER TO HER MOTHER.

DEAREST MOTHER,

May God ordain that you ever remain in safety. Sister Jhamman arrived today in Lucknow, and from her we have heard how you are getting on. The elder uncle's health is daily getting worse and worse. He has been trying all kinds of medicine here in Lucknow, but they don't seem to do him any good. So, if the moon becomes visible tomorrow, he will certainly set out on Thursday for Faizabad to be treated by the doctors there.

Nowadays there is a big gang of thieves about. Yesterday, in broad daylight, a number of them got into the house of the Khānam Ṣāḥiba, who lives close by us. There was a great hue and cry, and the fools of police, useless as a boor's cudgel which neither knows nor understands, directly they heard the outcry, made straight for our house. You may indeed say that we were fortunate, for by great good luck there was a man standing at our hall-door who stopped them. Otherwise all we women in the zanāna would have been exposed to view. Two of the thieves were caught, and the idiots, when they came before the magistrate, brought a countercharge that the Khānam Ṣāḥiba's son had invited them into the house under the pretext of getting the building valued. They added that he had imprisoned them for some six hours, had robbed them of fifty rupees, and had then got rid of them by calling out 'thief, thief.'

You will be sorry to hear that Naẓīr and his wife keep on their daily quarrelling. You know Naẓīr, what sort of man he is, going about with his nose in the air. His wife, too, is overweening, and starts a wrangle on ever so little a matter. I've reasoned with her thousands of times,—'sister dear, there's inexperienced company. There's a young marriageable girl sitting close to your side. What good will come from all this nonsense and talk, all this teeth-gnashing by day and by night, in her presence?' May God's curse rest on such silly-wits. The more one remonstrates, the more she wrangles. Who is there to interfere, with the certainty of having some rude thing said in return?

Just look at Aulād 'Alī's conduct. Without saying a word, nay, for absolutely no reason, he has quarrelled with his mother, and gone off to stay with his grandfather.

Bēgam Jān's six-months' old little baby, which she had been nursing with such loving care, died the day before yesterday. Poor creature, when she presses together the lids of a single eye, a hundred thousand tears fall. It is only four months since her husband died, and now, again, the sky has fallen in upon her. The poor thing's one remaining consolation is now broken.

STANDARD URDŪ OF DELHI.

The Urdū of Delhi is less Persianised than that of Lucknow, and hence more nearly fulfils the requirements of a lingua franca intelligible over the whole of India. This will be evident from the following specimen (the authorised Urdū version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son, as issued under the auspices of the British and Foreign Bible Society). It will be seen that the vocabulary is on the whole simple, and that the Indian, and not the Persian, order of words is preferred. For another example of Delhi Urdū, the Urdū List of Standard Words and Sentences, which was prepared in that city, may be consulted.

The original Urdū version of the New Testament was made for the British and Foreign Bible Society by Henry Martyn during the years 1806-1810. It has been thrice revised. The version of the Parable now given is taken from the third and last revision carried out by a committee headed by Dr. Weitbrecht during the years 1893-1899.

The Bible Society has issued this version under two forms,—one in the Persian character, and the other in the Roman character. I give both here. The system of transliteration used by the Bible Society differs somewhat from that employed in the present Survey, but this will give rise to no difficulty.

It is not necessary to give an interlinear translation.

[No. 9.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

HINDŌSTĀNĪ (STANDARD URDŪ, PERSIAN CHARACTER).

(Panjab Auxiliary Bible Society, 1900.)

ایك شخص ے دو بیٹے تھے ۔ اُن میں سے چھوٹے نے باپ سے
کہا کہ اَے باپ - مال کا جو حصّہ مجھہ کو پہنچتا ھے مجھے دے -
اُس نے اپنا مال متاع اُنہیں بانٹ دي - اور تھوڑے دن بعد چھوٹا
بیٹا اپنا سب کچھہ جمع کرے دورے ملك کو روانہ ھوا - اور وھاں اپنا مال
بد چلني میں اُڑا دیا - اور جب سب خرچ کر چکا تو اُس ملك میں
سخت کال پڑا - اور وہ محتاج ھونے لگا - پھر اُس ملک ے ایک
باشندے ے ھاں جا پڑا - اُس نے اُس کو اپنے کھیتوں میں سؤر چرانے بھیجا -
اور اُسے آرزو تھي کہ جو پھلیاں سؤر کھاتے تھے اُن سے اپنا پیٹ
بھرے - مگر کوئي اُسے نہ دیتا تھا - پھر اُس نے ھوش میں آ کر کہا
کہ میرے باپ ے کتنے ھي مزدوروں کو روٹي افراط سے ملتي ھے - اور میں یہاں بھوکھا مر رھا ھوں - میں اُٹھہ کر اپنے باپ ے پاس
جاؤنگا اور اُس سے کہونگا کہ اَے باپ - میں آسمان کا اور تیري نظر
میں گنہگار ھوا - اب اِس لائق نہیں رھا کہ پھر تیرا بیٹا کہلاؤں -
مجھے اپنے مزدور جیسا ھي کرلے - پس وہ اُٹھہ کر اپنے باپ کي طرف
روانہ ھوا - وہ ابھي دُور ھي تھا کہ اُسے دیکھہ کر اُس ے باپ کو ترس

آیا - اور دوڑ کر اُس کو گلے لگا لیا اور بوسے لئے - بیٹے نے اُس سے کہا
کہ اے باپ - میں آسمان کا اور تیري نظر میں گنہگار ہوا - اب اس
لائق نہیں رہا کہ پھر تیرا بیٹا کہلاؤں - باپ نے اپنے نوکروں سے کہا
کہ اچھے سے اچّھا جامہ جلد نکال کر اُسے پہناؤ - اور اُس کے ہاتھہ
میں انگوٹھي اور پاؤں میں جوتي پہناؤ - اور پلے ہوئے بچھڑے کو
لاکر ذبح کرو تاکہ ہم کھاکر خوشي منائیں - کیونکہ میرا یہ بیٹا مُردہ تھا -
اب زندہ ہوا - کھو گیا تھا - اب ملا ہے - پس وہ خوشي منانے لگے *

لیکن اُس کا بڑا بیٹا کھیت میں تھا - جب وہ آ کر گھر
کے نزدیک پہنچا تو گانے بجانے اور ناچنے کي آواز سُني - اور ایک
نوکر کو بُلاکر دریافت کرنے لگا کہ یہ کیا ہو رہا ہے ؟ اُس نے اُس سے کہا کہ
تیرا بھائي آ گیا ہے اور تیرے باپ نے پلا ہوا بچھڑا ذبح کرایا ہے - اس لئے کہ اُسے بھلا چنگا پایا - وہ غصے ہوا اور اندر جانا نہ چاہا - مگر اُس کا باپ باہر جاکے اُسے منانے لگا - اُس نے اپنے باپ سے
جواب میں کہا کہ دیکھہ - اتنے برس سے میں تیري خدمت کرتا ہوں
اور کبھي تیري حُکم عدولي نہیں کي - مگر مجھے تو نے کبھي ایک بکري کا بچّہ بھي نہ دیا کہ اپنے دوستوں کے ساتھہ خوشي مناتا - لیکن جب تیرا یہ بیٹا آیا جس نے تیرا مال متاع کسبیوں میں اُڑا دي - تو اُس کے لئے تونے پلا ہوا بچھڑا ذبح کرایا - اُس نے اُس سے کہا - بیٹا - تو تو ہمیشہ میرے پاس ہے - اور جو کُچھہ میرا ہے وہ تیرا
ہي ہے - لیکن خوشي منانا اور شادمان ہونا مناسب تھا - کیونکہ
تیرا یہ بھائي مُردہ تھا - اب زندہ ہوا - کھو گیا تھا اب ملا ہے *

[No. 9.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

HINDŌSTĀNĪ (STANDARD URDŪ, ROMAN CHARACTER[1]).

(British and Foreign Bible Society, 1900.)

Ek shaḳhs ke do beṭe the. Un meṉ se chhoṭe ne báp se kahá, ki Ai báp, mál ká jo hissa mujh ko pahuṉchtá hai, mujhe de. Us ne apná mál matá' unheṉ báṇṭ dí. Aur thoṛe din ba'd chhoṭá beṭá apná sab kuchh jama' karke, dúr ke mulk ko rawána húá, aur waháṉ apná mál badchalní meṉ uṛá diyá. Aur jab sab ḳharch kar chuká, to us mulk meṉ saḳht kál paṛá; aur wuh muhtáj hone lagá. Phir us mulk ke ek báshinde ke háṉ já paṛá: us ne us ko apne kheṭoṉ meṉ súar charáne bhejá. Aur use árzú thí, ki jo phaliyáṉ súar kháte the, un se apná peṭ bhare; magar koí use na detá thá. Phir us ne hosh meṉ ákar kahá, ki Mere báp ke kitne hí mazdúroṉ ko roṭí ifrát se miltí hai, aur maiṉ yaháṉ bhúkhá mar rahá húṉ! Maiṉ uṭhkar apne báp ke pás jáúṉgá, aur us se kahúṉgá, ki Ai báp, maiṉ ásmán ká aur terí nazar meṉ gunahgár húá: ab is láiq nahíṉ rahá, ki phir terá beṭá kahláúṉ; mujhe apne mazdúr jaisá hí kar le. Pas wuh uṭhkar apne báp kí taraf rawána húá. Wuh abhí dúr hí thá, ki use dekhkar us ke báp ko tars áyá, aur dauṛkar us ko gale lagá liyá, aur bose liye. Beṭe ne us se kahá, ki Ai báp, maiṉ ásmán ká aur terí nazar meṉ gunahgár húá; ab is láiq nahíṉ rahá, ki phir terá beṭá kahláúṉ. Báp ne apne naukaroṉ se kahá, ki Achchhe sé achchhá jáma jald nikálkar use pahináo; aur us ke háth meṉ angúṭhí, aur páṉwoṉ meṉ jútí pahináo. Aur pale húe bachhṛe ko lákar zabh karo, táki ham kháḳar ḳhushí manáeṉ; kyúṉki merá yih beṭá murda thá, ab zinda húá; kho gayá thá, ab milá hai. Pas wuh ḳhushí manáne lage.

Lekin us ká baṛá beṭá khet meṉ thá: jab wuh ákar ghar ke nazdík pahuṉchá, to gáne bajáne aur náchne kí áwáz suní; aur ek naukar ko bulákar daryáft karne lagá, ki Yih kyá ho rahá hai? Us ne us se kahá, ki Terá bhái á gayá hai; aur tere báp ne palá húá bachhṛá zabh karáyá hai, is liye ki use bhalá changá páyá. Wuh ġusse húá, aur andar jáná na cháhá; magar us ká báp báhar jáke use manáne lagá. Us ne apne báp se jawáb meṉ kahá, ki Dekh, itne baras se maiṉ terí ḳhidmat kartá húṉ, aur kabhí terí hukm'udúlí nahíṉ kí; magar mujhe tú ne kabhí ek bakrí ká bachchá bhí na diyá, ki apne dostoṉ ke sáth ḳhushí manátá: lekin jab terá yih beṭá áyá, jis ne terá mál matá' kasbíoṉ meṉ uṛá dí, to us ke liye tú ne palá húá bachhṛá zabh karáyá. Us ne us se kahá; Beṭá, tú to hamesha mere pás hai, aur jo kuchh merá hai, wuh terá hí hai; lekin ḳhushí manání aur shádmán honá munásib thá, kyúṉki terá yih bhái murda thá, ab zinda húá, kho gayá thá, ab milá hai.

[1] The system of transliteration is that adopted by the British and Foreign Bible Society, and differs somewhat from that employed in the present Survey.

MODERN URDŪ OF DELHI.

During the last thirty or forty years a school of writers has arisen in Delhi, which has paid attention to the necessity of avoiding the extreme Persianisation of style which had hitherto been fashionable, and which is still fashionable in Lucknow.

The author of this school who has obtained the greatest reputation is Maulavī Naẕīr Aḥmad. Two novels by this writer, the Mir'ātu 'l-'Arūs (The Bride's Mirror), and the Taubatu 'n-Naṣūḥ (The Repentance of Naṣūḥ), have been edited in England. They are well worth reading, not only as introductions to the Urdū language, but for their contents. They are admirable pictures of the home life of respectable Indian Musalmāns of the middle class. The stories are absolutely unobjectionable and full of interest, and are illumined by many pages of true humour. An account of the best editions of these works will be found in the Bibliography under the name of their author, and for further information regarding the school of writers to which he belongs, the reader is referred to Shēkh 'Abdu 'l-Qādir's work on 'The new School of Urdū Literature' quoted in the first section of the Bibliography.

As a specimen of Naẕīr Aḥmad's style, I give an extract from the Mir'ātu 'l-'Arūs. The text is taken from Mr. G. E. Ward's edition in Roman characters (London, 1899). The passage selected is a cock-and-bull story, freely interlarded with pious phrases, told by a swindling old crone to the silly heroine, on whom she is playing the confidence trick. The story is à propos of two miraculous (but quite unnecessary) cloves, which the old lady presents to the year-old bride, and which are guaranteed to restore a husband's love and to give children to the most unloved of barren wives. The reader who is curious as to the sequel is referred to the original work. Suffice it here to say that the old lady having gained the bride's confidence, successfully decamps with all her jewelry.

Considering that the novel is written by a Musalmān for his co-religionists, and is professedly in Urdū, not in Hindī, it is remarkably free from Arabic and Persian expressions. In Lucknow Urdū, nearly every word would hail from one or other of these sources. Here fully forty-five per cent of the vocabulary is Indian, about twenty per cent is Persian, and less than 34 per cent is Arabic. The small remainder comes from other languages,—Turkish, English, and Portuguese.[1]

[1] I am indebted to Mr. Ward, the editor of the Mir'ātu 'l-'Arūs, for these particulars. I would strongly recommend everyone who is interested in the great Lingua Franca of India or its literature to read this edition of a highly original and amusing work. The perusal is rendered easy to Europeans by its being in the Roman character, and every assistance is given by an excellent vocabulary and by notes when necessary. An English translation by Mr. Ward is published as a separate work.

[No. 10.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

HINDŌSTĀNĪ (MODERN URDŪ OF DELHI).

(Maulavī Naẕīr Aḥmad, circa 1870.)

مَین جب حَج کو گئي تھي تو اوسي جہاز مین بھوپال کي
ایک بیگم بھي سوار تھین ــــــــــشاید تُم نے اونکا نام بھي سُنا
ھو بَلقیس جہاني بیگم ــــــــــسب کُچھہ خُدا نے اونکو دے
رکھا تھا ـ دَولت کي کُچھہ اِنتِہا نہ تھي ـ نَوکر چاکر لونڈي غُلام
پالکي نالکي سب ھي کُچھہ تھا ـ ایک تو اَولاد کي طرف سے مَغمُوم
رھا کرتي تھین ـ کوي بچّہ نہ تھا ـ دُوسرے نواب صاحِب کو اُنکي
طرف مُطلق اِلتِفات نہ تھا اور شاید اَولاد نہ ھونے کے سبب مَحبّت
نہ کرتے ھون ورنہ بیگم صُورت شکل مین چندے آفتاب چندے
ماھتاب ــــــــــاور اِس حُسن و دَولت پر مِزاج اَیسا سادہ کہ
ھم جَیسے ناچیزون کو برابر بٹھانا اور بات پُوچھنا * بیگم کو فقیرون
سے پرلے درجے کا اِعتقاد تھا * ایک دفعہ سُنا کہ تین کوس
پر کوي کامِل وارد ھُے ـ اندھیري رات مین اپنے گھر سے پیادہ پا
اون کے پاس گئین اور پہر بھر تک ھاتھہ باندھے کھڑي رھین *
فقیرون کے نام کے قُربان جائیے * ایک مرتبہ جو شاہ صاحِب نے

آنکھہ اوٹھا کر دیکھا فرمایا جا مائي - اِسي رات کو حُکم مِلیگا *
بیگم کو خواب مین بِشارت هوي کِہ حجّ کو جا اور مُراد کا موتي
سَمُندر سے نِکال لا * صُبح اوٹھہ حجّ کي تیّارِیان هونے لگین * پان سَو
مِسکین بیگم نے آپ کِرایہ دیکر جِہاز پر سوار کرا ئے——اون
مین سے ایک مَین بِهي تِهي * هر وقت کا پاس رهنا——بیگم
صاحِب——اِلهي دونون جِہان مین سُرخُرو——مُجهہ پر بہُت
مِہرباني کرنے لگین اور سہیلي کہا کرتي تِهین * دس دِن تک برابر
جِہاز پاني مین چلا گیا - گیارهوین دِن بِیچ سَمُندر مین ایک پہاڑ نظر
آیا * ناخُدا نے کہا کوہِ حبشہ یہي هَے اور ایک بڑا کامِل فقِیر اِس پر
رهتا هَے——جو گیا بامُراد آیا * بیگم صاحِب نے ناخُدا سے کہا
کِسي طرح مُجهہ کو اوس پہاڑ پر پہُنچاو * ناخدا نے کہا حُضور جِہاز تو
پہاڑ تک نہین پہُنچ سکتا - البتّہ اگر آپ اِرشاد کرین تو جِہاز کو لنگر
کر دین اور آپ کو ایک کِشتي مین بِٹها کر لے چلین * بیگم نے کہا
خَیر یہي سہي * پانچ آورتین بیگم کے ساتهہ کوہِ حبشہ پر گئي
تِهین——ایک مَین اور چار اور * پہاڑ پر پہُنچے تو عجِیب طرح
کي خوشبُو مہک رهي تِهي - چلتے چلتے شاہ صاحِب تک پہُنچے *
هُو کا مقام تها - نہ آدمي نہ آدم زاد - تِن تنها شاہ صاحِب ایک گهر

مین رهتے تهے——کیسي نوراني شکل - جیسے فرشته——هم سب کو دیکهه کر دعا دي - بیگم کو باره لونگین دین اور کچهه پڑهه کر دم کر دیا * مجهه سے کها چلي جا - آگرے اور دلّي مین لوگون ے کام بنایا کر * بیٹي اُن باره لونگون مین کي دو لونگین یه هین * حجّ کرے جو لوٹے تو نواب——یا تو بیگم کي بات پوچهتے نه تهے یا یه نوبت هوئي - که ایک مهینے آگے سے بنبئي مین آکر بیگم ے لینے کو پڑے تهے * جون‌هي بیگم نے جهاز سے پانو اُتارا نواب نے اپنا سر بیگم ے قدمون پر رکهه دیا اور رو رو کر خطا معاف کراي * چهه برس مین بهوپال مین حجّ سے آکر ٹهہري * فقیر کي دعا کي برکت سے لگاتار اُوپر تلے - الله رکهے——چار بچے بیگم ے - میرے رهنے تک——هو چکے تهے * پهر مجهه کو اپنا دیس یاد آیا - بیگم سے اجازت مانگي——بهت سا روکا——مین نے کها شاه صاحب نے مجهه کو دلّي آگرے کي خدمت سپرد کي هے - مجهه کو وهان جانا ضرور هے - یه سن کر بیگم نے چار ناچار مجهه کو رخصت کیا *

آنکھہ اوٹھا کر دیکھا فرمایا جا مائي - اِسي رات کو حُکم مِلیگا *
بیگم کو خواب مین بِشارت هوي کہ حجّ کو جا اور مُراد کا موتي
سَمُندر سے نِکال لا * صُبح اوٹھہ حجّ کي تیّارِیان هونے لگین * پان سَو
مِسکین بیگم نے آپ کِرایہ دیکر جہاز پر سوار کرا ئے——اون
مین سے ایك مَین بھي تھي * هر وقت کا پاس رهنا——بیگم
صاحب——اِلهي دونون جہان مین سُرخُرو——مُجھہ پر بہُت
مِهرباني کرنے لگین اور سہیلي کہا کرتي تھین * دس دِن تك برابر
جہاز پاني مین چلا گیا - گیارهوین دِن بیچ سَمُندر مین ایك پہاڑ نظر
آیا * ناخُدا نے کہا کوہِ حبشہ یہي هَے اور ایک بڑا کامِل فقیر اِس پر
رهتا هَے——جو گیا بامُراد آیا * بیگم صاحب نے ناخُدا سے کہا
کِسي طرح مُجھہ کو اوس پہاڑ پر پہُنچاو * ناخدا نے کہا حُضور جہاز تو
پہاڑ تك نہین پہُنچ سکتا - البتّہ اگر آپ اِرشاد کرین تو جہاز کو لنگر
کر دین اور آپ کو ایک کِشتي مین بِٹھا کر لے چلین * بیگم نے کہا
خَیر یہي سہي * پانچ اَورتین بیگم کے ساتھہ کوہِ حبشہ پر گئي
تھین——ایك مَین اور چار اور * پہاڑ پر پہُنچے تو عجِیب طرح
کي خوشبُو مہك رهي تھي - چلتے چلتے شاہ صاحب تك پہُنچے *
هُو کا مقام تھا - نہ آدمي نہ آدم زاد - تِن تنہا شاہ صاحب ایك گهر

مین رهتے تهے ——— کیسي نوراني شکل - جیسے فرشته ——— هم
سب کو دیکهه کر دعا دي - بیگم کو باره لونگین دین اور کچهه پڑهه کر
دم کر دیا * مجهه سے کها چلي جا - آگرے اور دلّي مین لوگون
کے کام بنایا کر * بیٹي اُن باره لونگون مین کي دو لونگین یه هین *
حجّ کرے جو لوٹے تو نواب ——— یا تو بیگم کي بات پوچهتے نه تهے
یا یه نوبت هوئي - که ایک مهینے آگے سے بنبئي مین آکر بیگم کے
لینے کو پڑے تهے * جون‌هي بیگم نے جهاز سے پانو اُتارا نواب نے اپنا
سر بیگم کے قدمون پر رکهه دیا اور رو رو کر خطا معاف کراي *
چهه برس مین بهوپال مین حجّ سے آکر ٹهہري * فقیر کي دعا کي
برکت سے لگاتار اُوپر تلے - الله رکهے ——— چار بچے بیگم کے - میرے
رهنے تک ——— هو چکے تهے * پهر مجهه کو اپنا دیس یاد آیا - بیگم سے اجازت مانگي ——— بهت سا روکا ——— مین نے کها
شاه صاحب نے مجهه کو دلّي آگرے کي خدمت سپرد کي هے - مجهه کو وهان جانا ضرور هے - یه سن کر بیگم نے چار ناچار مجهه کو رخصت کیا *

[No. 10.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

HINDŌSTĀNĪ (MODERN URDŪ OF DELHI).

(Maulavī Naẕīr Aḥmad, circa 1870.)

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Maĩ jab ḥajj-kō gaī-thī, tō usī jahāz-mẽ
I when pilgrimage(-to-Mecca)-to gone-was, then that-very ship-in Bhōpāl-kī ēk Bēgam bhī suwār thĩ; — shāyad tum-nē un-kā Bhōpāl-of a Bēgam also passenger was; — perhaps you-by her-of nām bhī sunā-hō, Balqīs Jahānī Bēgam; — sab-kuchh Khudā-nē name also heard-may-be, Balqīs Jahānī Bēgam; — everything God-by un-kō dē rakhā-thā; daulat-kī kuchh intihā na thī; her-to giving placed-was; wealth-of any end not was;
naukar-chākar, launḍī-ghulām, pālkī-nālkī, sab-hī-kuch servants-attendants, girls(-and)-slaves, palanquins(-and)-litters, everything-verily thā; ēk tō aulād-kī ṭaraf-sē maghmūm rahā-kartī-thĩ; was; one indeed family-of direction-from grieved she-continued-to-remain;
kōī bachcha na thā; dūsrē Nawāb-Ṣāḥib-kō un-kī ṭaraf muṭlaq any child not was; secondly the-Nawāb-Sāhib-to her-of direction absolute iltifāt na thā, aur shāyad aulād na hōnē-kē sabab maḥabbat na kindness not was, and perhaps family not being-of because affection not kartē-hõ, warna Bēgam ṣūrat-shakl-mẽ 'chandē āftāb, doing-he-may-be, otherwise the-Bēgam form-appearance-in 'now a-sun, chandē māhtāb,' — aur is ḥusn-o-daulat-par mizāj aisā sāda, now a-moon,' — and this beauty-and-wealth-on disposition so simple, ki ham-jaisē nāchīzõ-kō barābar biṭhānā aur bāt pūchhnā!
that us-like nothings-to equally to-give-a-seat and matters to-ask!
Bēgam-kō faqīrõ-sē parlē darjē-kā e'tiqād thā. Ēk daf'a
The-Bēgam-to mendicants-to utmost degree-of faith was. One time sunā ki tīn kōs-par kōī kāmil wārid hai; andhērī it-was-heard that three kōs-on a-certain saint arrived is; dark rāt-mẽ apnē ghar-sē piyāda-pā un-kē pās gaĩ, aur pahar-bhar night-in her-own house-from on-foot him-of near she-went, and a-watch-full tak hāth bandhē khaṛī rahĩ. Faqīrõ-kē nām-kē during hands being-folded standing-up remained. Mendicants-of name-of qurbān jāiyē! Ēk martaba jō Sh̲āh-Ṣāḥib-nē ā̃kh sacrificial-offering go! One time when the-Shāh-Sāhib-by eyes uṭhā-kar dēkhā, farmāyā, 'jā māī, isī rāt-kō lifted-having it-was-looked, it-was-ordered, 'go mother, this-very night-at ḥukm milēgā.' Bēgam-kō kh̲wāb-mē̃ bish̲ārat huī ki order will-be-got.' The-Bēgam-to dream-in annunciation became that

'ḥajj-kō jā, aur murād-kā mōtī samundar-sē nikāl-lā.' Ṣubḥ
'pilgrimage-to go, and desire-of pearl ocean-from take-out.' (At-)dawn uṭh ḥajj-kī taiyāriyā̃ hōnē lagī̃. Pā̃-sau miskīn rising pilgrimage-of preparations to-be began. Five-hundred lowly-people

Bēgam-nē āp kirāya dē-kar jahāz-par suwār the-Bēgam-by herself the-fare given-having ship-on embarked karāē; un-mē̃-sē ēk maī̃ bhī thī. Har were-caused-to-be-made; them-in-from one I also was. Every waqt-kā pās-rahnā — Bēgam-Ṣāḥib (Ilāhī! dōnō̃ jahān-mē̃ time-of near-remaining — the-Bēgam-Sāhib (O God! both worlds-in surkh̲rū!) mujh-par bahut mihrbānī karnē lagī̃, aur (may-her-)face(-be)-bright!) me-on much friendship to-do began, and sahēlī kahā-kartī-thī̃. Das din tak barābar jahāz pānī-mē̃ comrade used-to-call. Ten days during straight-on the-ship water-in chalā-gayā; gyārahwē̃ din bīch samundar-mē̃ ēk pahāṛ naẓar āyā.

went-along; on-eleventh day mid ocean-in a mountain in-sight came.

Nākh̲udā-nē kahā, 'Kōh-e Ḥabsh̲a yehī hai, aur
The-captain-by it-was-said, 'The-Mountain-of Ethiopia this-verily is, and ēk baṛā kāmil faqīr is-par rahtā-hai; jō gayā, bāmurād a great saint hermit it-on dwelling-is; who went, possessed-of-wish āyā.' Bēgam-Ṣāḥib-nē Nākh̲udā-sē kahā, 'kisī ṭaraḥ mujh-kō came.' The-Bēgam-Sāhib-by the-captain-to it-was-said, 'in-some way me us pahāṛ-par pahũchāō.' Nākh̲udā-nē kahā, 'Ḥuẓūr, that mountain-on cause-to-arrive.' The-captain-by it-was-said, 'My-Lady, jahāz tō pahāṛ tak nahī̃ pahũch saktā; albatta agar the-ship indeed the-mountain up-to not arrive can; certainly if āp irsh̲ād karē̃, tō jahāz-kō langar kar-dē̃, aur āp-kō you instruction make, then the-ship-to anchor we-may-make, and you ēk kish̲tī-mē̃ biṭhā-kar lē-chalē̃.' Bēgam-nē kahā, a boat-in caused-to-sit-having we-may-take-away.' The-Bēgam-by it-was-said,

'kh̲air, yehī sahī.' Pā̃ch auratē̃ Bēgam-kē sāth Kōh-e
'well, this-indeed easy.' Five women the-Bēgam-of with the-Mountain-of Habsh̲a-par gaī-thī̃, — ēk maī̃, aur chār aur. Pahāṛ-par Ethiopia-on gone-were, — one I, and four others. The-Mountain-on pahũchē, tō ʻajīb ṭaraḥ-kī khushbū mahak-rahī-thī. Chaltē we-arrived, then a-wonderful kind-of odour exhaled-being-was. On-going chaltē Shāh-Ṣāḥib tak pahũchē. Hū-kā maqām thā; na on-going the-Shāh-Sāhib up-to we-arrived. God-of place it-was; nor ādmī na ādamzād; tan-e-tanhā Shāh-Ṣāḥib ēk ghar-mẽ rahtē-thē;

man nor born-of-man; all-alone the-Shāh-Sāhib a house-in dwelling-was;
kaisī nūrānī shakl! jaisē firishta! Ham sab-kō dēkh-kar what-sort-of serene appearance! like an-angel! Us all seen-having duʻā dī; Bēgam-kō bārah laũgẽ dī, aur kuchh a-blessing was-given; the-Bēgam-to twelve cloves were-given, and something paṛh-kar dam kar-diyā. Mujh-sē kahā, ʻchalī-jā, Āgrē recited-having breathing was-performed. Me-to it-was-said, ʻdepart, Agra aur Dillī-mẽ logõ-kē kām banāyā-kar.ʼ Bēṭī, and Delhi-in people-of wishes continue-causing-to-be-successful.ʼ Daughter, un bārah laũgõ-mẽ-kī dō laũgẽ yeh haĩ. Ḥajj kar-kē those twelve cloves-in-of two cloves these are. Pilgrimage made-having jō lauṭē, tō Nawāb, — yā-tō Bēgam-kī
when we-returned, then the-Nawāb,—whereas-formerly the-Bēgam-of bāt pūchhtē-na-thē,— yā yeh naubat huī, ki ēk mahīnē affair asking-not-he-was,— now this pass became, that one month
āgē-sē Bambaī-mẽ ā-kar Bēgam-kē lēnē-kō paṛē-thē.
before-from Bombay-in come-having the-Bēgam-of bringing-for fallen-had.
Jõ-hī Bēgam-nē jahāz-sē pãw utārā, Nawāb-nē
As-even the-Bēgam-by the-ship-from foot was-caused-to-descend, the-Nawāb-by apnā sar Bēgam-kē qadamõ-par rakh-diyā, aur rō-rō-kar his-own head the-Bēgam-of feet-on was-placed, and wept-wept-having khaṭā muʻāf karāī. Chha baras maĩ Bhōpāl-mẽ ḥajj-sē fault forgiveness was-got-made. Six years I Bhōpāl-in pilgrimage-from ā-kar ṭhahrī. Faqīr-kī duʻā-kī barakat-sē, lagātār come-having stayed. The-hermit-of prayer-of blessing-from, successively ūpar-talē, Allāh rakhē! chār bēṭē Bēgam-kē, one-after-the-other, God preserve(-them)! four sons the-Bēgam-of, mērē rahnē tak, hō-chukē-thē. Phir mujh-kō apnā dēs yād my stay during, been-had. Again me-to my-own country memory
āyā; Bēgam-sē ijāzat mãgī; bahut-sā rōkā;
came; the-Bēgam-from leave(-to-go) was-asked; very-much stopping-was-done;
maĩ-nē kahā, ʻShāh-Ṣāḥib-nē mujh-kō Dillī-Āgrē-kī khidmat me-by it-was-said, ʻthe-Shāh-Sāhib-by me-to Delhi-Agra-of service supurd kī-hai, mujh-kō wahã jānā ẓarūr hai;ʼ yeh sun-kar entrusted made-is, me-to there to-go necessary is;ʼ this heard-having Bēgam-nē chār nāchār mujh-kō rukhṣat kiyā.
the-Bēgam-by willy nilly me-to leave-to-depart was-made.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

When I went on my pilgrimage to Mecca I had for a fellow-passenger a Bēgam of Bhōpāl,—perhaps you have heard of her, her name was Balqīs Jahānī Bēgam. God had endowed her with every blessing. As for her wealth, there was no end to it. She had troops of servants, women slaves and men slaves, palanquins and litters,—everything, in fact, which she could want. But she had an aching heart about her prospects of a family,—she had no children,—and besides this, the Nawāb Sāhib, her husband, had altogether ceased to show her any affection. This latter grief was probably due to her being childless, for, as to her personal appearance, as the saying goes, 'when she wasn't as bright as the sun she was as fair as the moon;' and to this beauty and wealth was added a disposition of the purest sincerity and simplicity,—even nobodies like us she would ask to sit down beside her, and talk with them.

Now, she had the greatest faith in wandering mendicants, and once she heard that a certain holy saint had arrived at a place some six miles away. So one dark night she started off on foot from her house and stood a good three hours in front of him with folded hands. My life for the fame of such holy men! On one occasion when this one lifted his eyes he saw her and said, 'go, madam, this very night will you receive a command from above.' That night she had a dream, in which she heard a voice saying, 'depart on a pilgrimage to Mecca, and gather the pearl of your desire from the ocean.' The first thing in the morning she began the preparations for her pilgrimage. She paid the fares of five hundred poor people, amongst whom I was one, and took them on board the ship with her. She always kept me by her side and (O God, may her face be bright in this world and the next) not only began she to show great friendship to me but even used to address me as 'comrade.' The ship went on straight through the sea for ten days, and on the eleventh a mountain came in sight in the middle of the ocean. 'That,' said the captain, 'is the Mountain of Ethiopia, and on it there dwells a holy hermit. There never was a petitioner who went to him that did not have his prayer granted.' Said the Bēgam to him, 'you must get me in some way or other to that mountain.' 'Your Ladyship,' replied he, 'there is not enough water for the ship to go alongside, but, if you wish it, I can have the anchor let go and send you ashore in the jolly-boat.' 'That will do excellently,' said she. So five women (myself and four others) went off with her to the Mountain of Ethiopia. When we got there we found the air filled with a wondrous fine odour. We came at length to where His Holiness lived. It was a very place where God alone dwells. Not a man or son of man was there. In his house abode His Holiness in perfect solitude. What a serene appearance he displayed! Like an angel of heaven! As soon as he saw us all he blessed us. To the Bēgam he gave twelve cloves and, after reciting something, breathed over her. To me he said, 'depart and busy yourself with bringing about the desires of the people of Agra and Delhi.'

Daughter, here are two of those twelve cloves!

Now, when we came home from our pilgrimage, the Nawāb,—who formerly had not taken the slightest interest in the Bēgam,—must needs go down to Bombay a month before the ship was due, and wait there for his wife in order to escort her home. She had hardly got off the gangway before he fell at her feet, and with many tears asked pardon for his neglect. After I came back from the journey I stayed for six years in pahũchē, tō 'ajīb ṭaraḥ-kī khuṣhbū mahak-rahī-thī. Chaltē

we-arrived, then a-wonderful kind-of odour exhaled-being-was. On-going chaltē Shāh-Ṣāḥib tak pahũchē. Hū-kā maqām thā; na on-going the-Shāh-Sāhib up-to we-arrived. God-of place it-was; nor ādmī na ādamzād; tan-e-tanhā Shāh-Ṣāḥib ēk ghar-mẽ rahtē-thē;
man nor born-of-man; all-alone the-Shāh-Sāhib a house-in dwelling-was;
kaisī nūrānī shakl! jaisē firishta! Ham sab-kō dēkh-kar what-sort-of serene appearance! like an-angel! Us all seen-having du'ā dī; Bēgam-kō bārah laũgẽ dĩ, aur kuchh
a-blessing was-given; the-Bēgam-to twelve cloves were-given, and something paṛh-kar dam kar-diyā. Mujh-sē kahā, 'chalī-jā, Āgrē recited-having breathing was-performed. Me-to it-was-said, 'depart, Agra aur Dillī-mẽ logõ-kē kām banāyā-kar.' Bēṭī, and Delhi-in people-of wishes continue-causing-to-be-successful.' Daughter, un bārah laũgõ-mẽ-kī dō laũgẽ yeh haĩ. Ḥajj kar-kē those twelve cloves-in-of two cloves these are. Pilgrimage made-having jō lauṭē, tō Nawāb, — yā-tō Bēgam-kī
when we-returned, then the-Nawāb,—whereas-formerly the-Bēgam-of bāt pūchhtē-na-thē,— yā yeh naubat huī, ki ēk mahīnē affair asking-not-he-was,— now this pass became, that one month
āgē-sē Bambaī-mẽ ā-kar Bēgam-kē lēnē-kō paṛē-thē.
before-from Bombay-in come-having the-Bēgam-of bringing-for fallen-had.
Jõ-hī Bēgam-nē jahāz-sē pãw utārā, Nawāb-nē
As-even the-Bēgam-by the-ship-from foot was-caused-to-descend, the-Nawāb-by apnā sar Bēgam-kē qadamõ-par rakh-diyā, aur rō-rō-kar
his-own head the-Bēgam-of feet-on was-placed, and wept-wept-having khaṭā mu'āf karāī. Chha baras maĩ Bhōpāl-mẽ ḥajj-sē fault forgiveness was-got-made. Six years I Bhōpāl-in pilgrimage-from ā-kar ṭhahrī. Faqīr-kī du'ā-kī barakat-sē, lagātār come-having stayed. The-hermit-of prayer-of blessing-from, successively ūpar-talē, Allāh rakhē! chār bēṭē Bēgam-kē,
one-after-the-other, God preserve(-them)! four sons the-Bēgam-of, mērē rahnē tak, hō-chukē-thē. Phir mujh-kō apnā dēs yād
my stay during, been-had. Again me-to my-own country memory
āyā; Bēgam-sē ijāzat mãgī; bahut-sā rōkā;
came; the-Bēgam-from leave(-to-go) was-asked; very-much stopping-was-done;
maĩ-nē kahā, 'Shāh-Ṣāḥib-nē mujh-kō Dillī-Āgrē-kī khidmat me-by it-was-said, 'the-Shāh-Sāhib-by me-to Delhi-Agra-of service supurd kī-hai, mujh-kō wahã jānā ẓarūr hai;' yeh sun-kar entrusted made-is, me-to there to-go necessary is;' this heard-having Bēgam-nē chār nāchār mujh-kō rukhṣat kiyā.
the-Bēgam-by willy nilly me-to leave-to-depart was-made.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

When I went on my pilgrimage to Mecca I had for a fellow-passenger a Bēgam of Bhōpāl,—perhaps you have heard of her, her name was Balqīs Jahānī Bēgam. God had endowed her with every blessing. As for her wealth, there was no end to it. She had troops of servants, women slaves and men slaves, palanquins and litters,—everything, in fact, which she could want. But she had an aching heart about her prospects of a family,—she had no children,—and besides this, the Nawāb Sāhib, her husband, had altogether ceased to show her any affection. This latter grief was probably due to her being childless, for, as to her personal appearance, as the saying goes, 'when she wasn't as bright as the sun she was as fair as the moon;' and to this beauty and wealth was added a disposition of the purest sincerity and simplicity,—even nobodies like us she would ask to sit down beside her, and talk with them.

Now, she had the greatest faith in wandering mendicants, and once she heard that a certain holy saint had arrived at a place some six miles away. So one dark night she started off on foot from her house and stood a good three hours in front of him with folded hands. My life for the fame of such holy men! On one occasion when this one lifted his eyes he saw her and said, 'go, madam, this very night will you receive a command from above.' That night she had a dream, in which she heard a voice saying, 'depart on a pilgrimage to Mecca, and gather the pearl of your desire from the ocean.' The first thing in the morning she began the preparations for her pilgrimage. She paid the fares of five hundred poor people, amongst whom I was one, and took them on board the ship with her. She always kept me by her side and (O God, may her face be bright in this world and the next) not only began she to show great friendship to me but even used to address me as 'comrade.' The ship went on straight through the sea for ten days, and on the eleventh a mountain came in sight in the middle of the ocean. 'That,' said the captain, 'is the Mountain of Ethiopia, and on it there dwells a holy hermit. There never was a petitioner who went to him that did not have his prayer granted.' Said the Bēgam to him, 'you must get me in some way or other to that mountain.' 'Your Ladyship,' replied he, 'there is not enough water for the ship to go alongside, but, if you wish it, I can have the anchor let go and send you ashore in the jolly-boat.' 'That will do excellently,' said she. So five women (myself and four others) went off with her to the Mountain of Ethiopia. When we got there we found the air filled with a wondrous fine odour. We came at length to where His Holiness lived. It was a very place where God alone dwells. Not a man or son of man was there. In his house abode His Holiness in perfect solitude. What a serene appearance he displayed! Like an angel of heaven! As soon as he saw us all he blessed us. To the Bēgam he gave twelve cloves and, after reciting something, breathed over her. To me he said, 'depart and busy yourself with bringing about the desires of the people of Agra and Delhi.'

Daughter, here are two of those twelve cloves!

Now, when we came home from our pilgrimage, the Nawāb,—who formerly had not taken the slightest interest in the Bēgam,—must needs go down to Bombay a month before the ship was due, and wait there for his wife in order to escort her home. She had hardly got off the gangway before he fell at her feet, and with many tears asked pardon for his neglect. After I came back from the journey I stayed for six years in Bhōpāl, and while I was there, all owing to the power of the holy man's blessing, one by one, the Bēgam had four sons. By this time I began to think of my own country, and asked her for leave to go away. She would not hear of it, but I reminded her of how His Holiness had made over to me the care of Agra and Delhi, and that I really must go. When she heard this, she had perforce to allow me to depart.

URDŪ POETRY.

As a specimen of Urdū poetry of the classic period (as elsewhere explained standard Hindī has no old poetical literature), I give an extract from the Tanbīhu 'l-juhhāl, or Admonition to Fools, by the celebrated Mīr Taqī. This poet was born at Agra, and studied at Delhi under Sirāju 'd-dīn Khān ('Arzū). He lived there up to the year 1782, when he migrated to Lucknow, where he died at a very advanced age in 1710. He and Rafī'u 's-saudā are considered by native authorities to be the two greatest Urdū poets.

An elegant paraphrase of the poem, under the title of Conseils aux mauvais poètes, was published by Garcin de Tassy on pp. 300 and ff. of Vol. vii of the Journal Asiatique (1825). An Italian translation of this paraphrase was published at Palermo in 1891 by Signor Pugliese Pico, under the title of Consigli ai cattivi poeti. Monsieur J. Vinson published a more literal translation, under the title of Satire contre les Ignorants in the Revue de Linguistique, Vol. xxiv (1891), pp. 101 ff.

Mīr Taqī's works have been printed in India. The text of the poem under consideration is carefully edited by Shakespear in his Muntakhabāt-e Hindī. This text has been reproduced in Monsieur Vinson's Manuel de la Langue hindoustani. The text given here is based on that of Shakespear, with a few corrections rendered necessary by the metre. I have to thank Mr. G. E. Ward for assistance rendered in translating this not always easy poem.

We may note a few points in which the language of the poem differs somewhat from the language of the standard grammars. In barguzīda-nē, by the Elect One (verse 28), the oblique form ends in a, not ē. This may, however, be a mere matter of spelling, for most scribes in such cases write a final a, but pronounce it ē. In verse 28 we have an example of the custom which at the present day prevails in Lucknow of treating samjhā as if it were a neuter verb. In verse 13 we have dē-hai, which is the dialectic form in the Upper Doab for dētā-hai, he gives. In verse 25 we have rukhṣat construed with a masculine verb. Note also the spelling of muj-kō, instead of mujh-kō in verse 14.

In the transliteration, I have marked the vowels as long or short, as is required by the metre, so as to assist the scansion, and not according to their natural length. Hăĭ and hăĭ̃ are each to be counted as one short syllable. A syllable containing a short vowel, and ending in a consonant, is long, if the next syllable begins with a consonant. Thus, in the second verse, because tā follows ishārat, the latter word is scanned ⏑ — —. But if such a syllable is followed by a vowel, it may be either long or short. Thus, in the first verse, din āyā is scanned — — —, while in the third verse, 'izzat ō is scanned — ⏑ —. Note also that a syllable like ēk, consisting of a vowel naturally long followed by a silent consonant, or a syllable like she'r, containing a short vowel followed by two silent consonants, counts as two syllables, and is scanned as a trochee (— ⏑), if followed by another syllable commencing with a consonant. Thus, in the first verse, ēk din is scanned — ⏑ —, and in the fifth verse, she'r-kī taqrīb lā-kar is scanned — ⏑ ⏑ — — ⏑ — —. A long final vowel is often shortened, and the Persian izāfat (e) may be long or short as required by the metre.

[No. II.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

HINDŌSTĀNĪ (URDŪ POETRY).

حکایت

شأیقِ فنّ تھا وزیرِ اِصفہان ایک دن آیا ہِلالي اُسکے یان
حاجبانِ در سے ہو آگاہِ کار کي اِشارت تا اُسے دین گھر مین بار
عِزّت و تعظیم کي حدّ سے زِیاد پاس لے مَسند پہ بَیٹھا شاد شاد
اُنّے کَھینچي اُسکي مرزائي بہت بَیٹھے بَیٹھے رات جب آي بہت
(۹) شِعر کي تقریب لاکر درمیان کرنے لاگا شاعري کا اِمتحان
شِعر خوانِي کي پڑھا سو تھا غلط سُنتے ہي بھڑکا وُہ شُعلے کي نمط
غُصّے ہو بولا کہ ہان فرّاش و چُوب کَھینچ لا مَیدان مین کي شلاقِ خُوب
اِس قدر مارا کہ بیدم ہو گیا سُوج دست و پا ہر اِک تھم ہوگیا
کَھینچ کر ڈلوا دیا دربار مین یہہ خبر پہنچي جو ہر بازار مین
(۱۰) وارث اُسکے لیگئے آ رات کو جب بخود آیا تو پایا بات کو
یعني دستورِ زمان دُشمن نتھا یا وُہ کچھہ نا آشنائے فنّ نہ تھا
غالباً پایا غلط اشعار کو خوش نہ آیا اُس کرم کِردار کو
ورنہ شیوہ اُسکا ہي لُطف و کرم جائیزے مین دے ہي دینار و درم
مُجکو کیون شلاق کرتا اِتني شب کاھیکو بدنام ہوتا بي سبب

(۱۹) پس مُجھے ہی تربیت آپنی ضرور جاے بیٹھوں اِک سرامد کے حضور
صُحبت اکثر رکھوں اُس اُستاد سے شاید اُسکی دولتِ اِرشاد سے
پہنچے اِک رُتبے کو میری قیل و قال ہو مُجھے اِس فنّ مین یک گونہ کمال
اُٹھہ کے آیا مولوی جامی کنے مشق کی یک چند اُس نامی کنے جب ہوا کُچھہ شعر کا رُتبہ بلند اور مولانا لگے کرنے پسند
(۲۰) پھر گیا اِک دن درِ دستور پر حاجبِ درگاہ نے کی جا خبر
کای امیر اُس روز کا شلاق خوار آج در اوپر ہی پھر خواہانِ بار
کی اِشارت سدّ رہ کوئی نہو قصد ہی برخوردار کا تو آنے دو
سامنے آیا تو کی نیچی نظر دُھوپ مین جلتا رہا تو اِک پہر
بعد ازآن اِیمای ابرو کی کہ ہان صحن ہی مین سے ہوا وہ مدح خوان
(۲۵) پھر وہین سے دے صلہ رُخصت کیا اِک مُصاحب نے جگر کر کر کہا
اگلی صُحبت کی تہی عزّت اِسقدر سو ہوئی شلاق حدّ سے بیشتر
ابکی اُسکو جائیزہ دے کر گران تُونے فرمایا مرخّص وان سے وان
مَین نہ سمجھا یہہ کہ وہ کیا تھا یہہ کیا در جواب اُس برگزیدہ نے کہا
ایسی ہی ہوتی ہین تضحیکِ سلف دست ہو تو اُنکتئین کریے تلف
(۳۰) اِسقدر اُسکا تنبّہ تھا ضرور تا کہ پہنچے یہہ خبر نزدیک و دور
جو سنے سو خود سری سے باز آئے تربیت ہونیکو اُستادونکی جاے
ورنہ کرتا پوچ گوئی ہر دبنگ رفتہ رفتہ شاعری ہوجاتی ننگ

تب جو مَیں شلاق کِي يِہہ خام تھا آب جو آيا لائِقِ اِنعام تھا
قِصّہ کوتہ تھے مُمَيِّز درميان ننگ ھی کِرمِ مزابِل پر بھي يان

(۳۵) بے تميزي سے ھی رائج ابتري جِسکو ديکھو خُود نُمائي خُود سري
نے بُيان کا ھی سلِيقہ نے زبان اِسپہ ھَی ھر اُيک سخنبانِ بيان
بس قلم وقتِ زبان بازي نہيں چُپ کِہ دَورانِ سُخن سازي نہيں
کَون حرفِ خُوب کو کرتا ھی گوش بات کِي فہميد کا ھی کِسکو ھوش
بے تميزون سے بھرا ھی سب جہان ھی دماغِ حرف ھمکو بھي کہان

[No. II.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

HINDŌSTĀNĪ (URDŪ POETRY).

(Mīr Muḥammad Taqī, fl. 1780 A.D.)

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Metre. — ◡ — — — ◡ — — — ◡ —

ḤIKĀYAT.
STORY.

Sẖāiq-ē-fann thā Wazīr-ē-Iṣfahān.
Ardent-admirer-of-accomplishment was the-Wazīr-of-Ispahan.

Ēk din āyā Ḥilālī us-ke yā̃.
One day came Ḥilālī him-of to-the-house.

Ḥājibā̃-ē-dar-se hō āgāh-e-kār,
The-porters-of-the-doorway-by being informed-of-the-matter,

Kī isẖārat tā usē dē̃ ghar-mē̃ bār.
Was-made a-sign that to-him they-may-give house-in entrance.

'Izzat ō ta'ẓīm kī ḥadd-sē ziyād;
Honour and respect was-made limit-than more;

Pās lē, masnad-pa baiṭhā, sẖād sẖād,
Near bringing, throne-on causing-to-sit, happy happy,

Un-ne khaĩchī us-ki mirzāī bahut.
That-(Wazīr-)by was-drawn him-of mirzā-ship much.

Baiṭhe baiṭhē rāt jab āī bahut,
Seated seated night when came much,

(5) Sẖe'r-kī taqrīb lā-kar dar-miyān, Poetry-of mention brought-having between,

Karne lāgā sẖā'irī-kā imtiḥān.
To-make he-began poetic-power-of testing.

Sẖe'r-kẖwānī kī, paṛhā sō thā ghalaṭ,
Poetry-recitation was-made, what-was-recited that was incorrect,

Sunte-hī bhaṛkā woh sẖo'lē-kī namaṭ.
On-hearing-immediately blazed-up he flame-of manner.

Ghuṣṣe hō bōlā ki, 'hā̃, farrāsẖ o chūb.'
Angrily becoming he-said that, 'here, sweeper and rod.'

Khaĩch-lā maidā̃-mẽ kī shallāq[1] khūb.
Dragging-taking field-in was-made beating well.
Is-qadar mārā ki bē-dam hō-gayā,
So-much was-he-struck that without-breath he-became,
Sūj dast ō pā har-ik tham hō-gayā.
Being-swollen hand and foot each a-pillar became.
'Khaĩch-kar ḍalwā-diyā darbār-mẽ̃,' 'Dragged(-him)-having he-was-caused-to-be-thrown-down the-court-in,'
Yeh khabar p'hunchī jo har bāzār-mẽ̃,
This news arrived when every market-in,

(10) Wāriṣ us-kē lē-gaē ā rāt-kō,
The-heirs him-of carried(-him)-away coming night-at,
Jab ba-khud āyā to pāyā bāt-kō.
When to-himself he-came then was-found the-circumstance-to.
Ya'ni, 'dastūr-ē-zamā̃ dushman na thā,
Viz., 'the-Minister-of-the-age enemy not was,
Yā woh kuchh nā-āshnā-ē-fann na thā.
Or he (in-)any(-way) unacquainted-with-accomplishment not was.
Ghāliban pāyā ghalaṭ ash'ār-kō,
Probably was-found incorrectness the-verses-to,
Khush na āyā us karam-kirdār-kō.
Agreeable not it-came that liberality-doer-to.
War-na shēwā[2] us-ka hai luṭf ō karam,
Otherwise the-habit him-of is praise and liberality,
Jāizē-mẽ̃ dē-hăĭ dīnār ō diram.
Reward-in he-gives dīnār and dirham.
Muj-ko kyū̃ shallāq kartā itni shab ?
Me-to why beating doing so-much (at-)night ?
Kāhe-kō bad-nām hōtā bē-sabab ?
What-for bad-name becoming without-cause ?

(15) Pas, mujhē hī tarbiyat apnī ẓarūr,
Consequently, to-me verily instruction my-own necessary,
Jā-ke baiṭhū̃ ik sar-āmad-kē ḥuẓūr.
Gone-having let-me-sit a top-come-of (in-)presence.
Ṣoḥbat akṣar rakkhū̃ us ustād-sē,
Intercourse very-much let-me-hold that teacher-with,
Shāyad us-kī daulat-ē-irshād-sē Perhaps him-of benefit-of-instruction-from

---

[1] The word is properly shalāq, but the metre shows that Mīr Taqī spelt it with two l's.
[2] The final a of shēwa is considered long owing to the existence of the 'imperceptible' h.

P'hunche ik rutbē-ko mērī qīl o qāl,
May-arrive a-certain high-station-to my proposition and answer,
Hō mujhē is fann-mẽ ik-gūnā[1] kamāl.'
There-may-be to-me this accomplishment-in one-kind perfection.'

Uṭh-ke āyā Maulavī Jāmī kanē, Arisen-having he-came Maulavī Jāmī near,
Mashq kī yak-chand wis nāmī kanē.
Practice was-made a-little that famous-one near.
Jab huā kuchh she'r-kā rutbā[2] buland,
When there-became some poetry-of degree high,
Aur Maulānā lagē karnē pasand,
And Lord-our began to-make approval,

(20) Phir gayā ik din dar-ē-dastūr-par.
Again he-went one day door-of-the-minister-on.
Ḥājib-ē-dargāh-nē kī jā khabar.
Porters-of-the-gateway-by was-made going news.
K', 'ai Amīr, us rōz-kā shallāq-khwār
That, 'O Prince, that day-of beating-eater
Āj dar ūpar hăĭ, phir khwāhān-e-bār.'
Today door upon is, again desirous-of-admission.'
Kī ishārat, 'sadd-e-rah kōī na hō,
Was-made a-sign, 'obstruction-of-road any not let-be,
Qaṣd hai bar-khurd-kā, tō āne dō.'
Intention is fruit-eating-of, then to-come allow.'
Sāmnē āyā, to kī nīchī naẓar,
In-front he-came, then was-made downcast look,
Dhūp-mẽ jaltā-rahā tō ik pahar.
Sunshine-in burning-he-remained then one watch.
Ba'd az ān īmā-e-abrū kī ki, 'hã̄,'
After of that sign-of-eyebrow was-made that, 'yes,' Ṣaḥn-hī-mẽ-sē huā woh madḥ-khwã̄.
Courtyard-even-in-from became he eulogy-reciter.

(25) Phir wahī̃-sē dē ṣilā rukhṣat kiyā.
Again there-from giving a-present dismission was-made.
Ik muṣāḥib-nē jigar kar-kar kahā,
A courtier-by courage made-having it-was-said,
'Agli ṣohbat-kī thi 'izzat is-qadar,
'Former interview was honour to-this-degree,

---

[1] The na of gūnā is prosodiacally long owing to the existence of the 'imperceptible' h.

[2] Again rutba is a spondee owing to the 'imperceptible' h. So also in several subsequent instances to which I shall not draw attention.

Sō huī shallāq ḥadd-sē bēshtar.
Yet became a-beating limit-than more.

Abki us-kō jāizā dē-kar girā̃,
Now him-to reward given-having heavy,

Tū-ne farmāyā murakhkhaṣ wā̃-se wā̃.
Thee-by was-ordered permitted-to-depart there-from there.

Maĩ na samjhā yeh ki woh kyā thā yeh kyā.'
I not understood this that that what was this what.'

Dar jawāb us bar-guzīdā-nē kahā,
In answer that Elect-one-by it-was-said,

'Aisi-hī hōtī-hăĩ taẓḥīk-ē-salaf?
'Such-verily become mockings-of-the-past?

Dast hō tō un-ki-taĩ karyē talaf.
Hand he-may-be then him make ruin.

(30) Is-qadar us-kā tanabboh thā ẓarūr,
To-this-degree him-of admonition was necessary,

Tā-ki p'hunchē yeh khabar nazdīk o dūr.
In-order-that may-arrive this news near and far.

Jō sunē, sō khuḍ-sarī-sē bāz-āy,
Who may-hear, he self-conceit-from may-refrain,

Tarbiyat hōnē-ko ustādõ̃-ki jāy.
Instruction being-for teachers-of may-go.

War-na kartā pūch-gōī har dabang,
Otherwise would-make nonsense-speaking every lout,

Rafta-raftā shā'irī hō-jāti nang.
Going-going poetic-skill would-become ignominy.

Tab jo maĩ shallāq kī yeh khām thā,
Then when by-me beating was-done this-one raw was,

Ab jo āyā lāiq-ē-in'ām thā.'
Now when he-came worthy-of-reward he-was.'

Qiṣṣa kōtā. Thē mumayyiz dar-miyā̃, (Of-the-)story the(-long-and)-short. There-were discriminating between,

Nang hai kirm-ē mazābil-par bhi yā̃.
Sense-of-shame is the-worm-of the-dunghill-on even here.

(35) Bē-tamīzī-sē hăĩ rāij abtarī,
Indiscretion-from is becoming-usual deterioration,

Jis-ko dēkhō khuḍ-numāī khuḍ-sarī.
Whom you-may-see(-there-is) self-ostentation self-conceit.

Nē bayā̃-kā hai salīqā nē zabā̃,
Neither explanation-of is skill nor diction,

Is-pa hai har-ēk Saḥbān-ē-bayā̃.
This-on is every-one a-Saḥbān-of-oratory.

Bas qalam! Waqt-ē-zabā̃-bāzī nahī̃, Enough pen! Time-of-tongue-feats is-not,
Chup, ki daurān-ē-sukhan-sāzī nahī̃.
Silence, for time-of-eloquence it-is-not.
Kaun ḥarf-ē-khūb-kō kartā-hăĭ gōsh?
Who advice-good-to makes hearing?
Bāt-kī fahmīd-kā hai kis-ko hōsh?
Word-of understanding-of is whom-to intelligence?
Bē-tamīzõ̃-sē bharā hai sab jahā̃,
The-indiscreet-by filled is all the-world,
Hai dimāgh-ē-ḥarf ham-kō bhī kahā̃?
Is patience-of-advice me-to also where?

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

Passionately devoted to the Muses was the Wazīr of Ispahan, and one day Hilālī[1] approached his palace. Informed by the gate-porters of the poet's arrival, the minister made a sign that he should be admitted into the audience-hall[2] of the palace. The greatest honour and respect were shown to him; His Highness called him up, caused him to sit rejoicing on the throne by his side, and made a point of addressing him as often as possible by the title of 'Prince.'[3] After they had sat together for a long time, night fell, and then the Wazīr turned the conversation on to the subject of poetry, and proceeded to test his visitor's poetic powers. Hilālī recited some of his verses, and, in doing so, made a false quantity. Directly he heard it His Highness burst forth like a flame, and, in a rage, he cried, 'what ho there! A sweeper, and a rod!' He dragged him out into the palace grounds, and there gave him such a thorough drubbing, that he fell like a breathless corpse upon the ground with limbs numb and swollen like pillars.

When the news spread through every bāzār that Hilālī had been dragged about and dashed down in the very audience-hall his people came and carried him home by night.[4] After he came to himself he discovered the Wazīr's intentions (by the following train of reasoning):—

'His Highness, the Minister of the Age, was no enemy, nor was he by any means unacquainted with the canons of poesy. Probably he noted something incorrect in my verses, and they sounded harsh to His Munificence. His usual habit is to give praise and to show liberality and (on others) he bestows golden sequins and silver coins as rewards. Why did he give me such a drubbing last night? Surely it was not without a cause that I was thus disgraced. It is evident that I must continue my studies, and that I must go and sit at the feet of some illustrious scholar. I must hold frequent

[1] Hilālī was a Tartar poet famous for his amorous lays. He died about 1530 A.D.

[2] He was admitted inside the house. It will be seen that on his next visit he had to stand in the courtyard. The audience-hall occupied one side of the courtyard, being separated from it by a row of arches, not by a wall.

[3] Literally, 'dragged out his prince-ship.' 'Mīrzā,' or 'prince,' is often given as an honorary title to eminent scholars. There is a double meaning; the phrase also signifies 'dragged his mīrzāī' or 'jacket,' or as we should say 'button-holed him.'

[4] Wāris here probably means merely friends and relations, but Garcin de Tassy takes the word in its literal sense of 'heirs.' He considers that Hilālī was supposed to be dead, and that his heirs ran up, only to find to their disappointment that he had recovered.

intercourse with my master, and perhaps through his instruction I may attain to a certain eminence in elocution, and to some sort of perfection in the Muses' art.'

So rising he repaired to the learned Jāmī,[1] and studied a little with that famous author. When he had arrived at some sort of eminence in the poetic art, and his master began to express his approval, he returned one day to the gate of the minister. The gate porters approached His Highness with the intelligence,—'Your Majesty,' said they, 'he who was drubbed the other day, is now again at the door, and prays for admission.' He made a sign of consent, 'let no one stop his entrance. As he is determined to succeed, let him enter.'[2] He came before His Highness, who lowered his eyes (and affected to be engaged on some business). The poor poet remained standing (outside in front of the audience-hall), scorched in the sun for at least three hours. At length the Wazīr raised his eyebrows and merely said 'well?' and then the unfortunate man had to recite his panegyric from where he was standing in the courtyard.[3] Without being called up, when he had concluded, he was simply given a present and told to go.

One of the Wazīr's boon companions took courage, and said, 'At the former interview, Your Highness paid him so much honour, and then gave him the severest possible cudgelling. Now Your Highness has given him a large reward, but has got rid of him without further ceremony straight off from where he was. I understand not. What was that? and what was this?' In answer the Elect One deigned to reply, 'Is such mockery of the time-honoured (rules of poetry) to be allowed to exist? When you have (a mocker) in your power, destroy him pitilessly. Such correction was necessary for him, that the news of it might reach near and far, and that he who hears may refrain from self-conceit and seek teachers from whom he may receive instruction. Otherwise every lout would be uttering his nonsensical talk, and by degrees the art of poesy would fall into disrepute. When I drubbed this Hilālī he was raw (and untaught), but when he came this time he was worthy of reward.'

Not to make too long a story,—there were men of discernment at that period,—here, too, there arises a sense of shame at (my detractors), those worms of the dunghill. From this want of discernment a deterioration in poetry is becoming prevalent, and, at whomsoever you look, you see nothing but self-ostentation and self-conceit. There is neither the skill for telling a story effectively, nor the command of language (to put it into choice words), and over and above this each (would-be poet) considers himself a Saḥbān of eloquence.[4]

Let not my pen run away with me,—now is not the time for feats of oratory. Silence,—for it is not the season for eloquence. Who nowadays listens to good advice? Who has sufficient intelligence to understand (my) words? The whole world is filled with people of no discernment and where, also, have I patience[5] to bear (their) rejoinders?

---

[1] Jāmī (1414-1492), the author of the Yūsuf o Zulaikhā, was one of the most famous of Persian poets.

[2] There was no ushering in in state. He was simply told to go in.

[3] The courtyard, or ṣaḥn, would be inside the palace, but quite outside the audience-hall. The contrast is, of course, with the poet's former welcome, when he was invited into the hall and sat on the throne beside the Wazīr. Now he is dismissed from the ṣaḥn itself (waḥī-sē), without being called up.

[4] Those who have read the Gulistān, will not require to be reminded of Saḥbān Wāil (died 673 A.D.), the most celebrated preacher of the early days of Islām. It is said that he used to speak for a whole year before an assembly without once repeating a single phrase.

[5] 'Patience' is not one of the dictionary meanings of dimāgḥ, but bē-dimāgḥī means 'impatience.' Some such meaning as 'patience' is the only possible one here. We might use the English metaphor of 'stomach.' 'I have no stomach to bear my opponents' criticisms.'

MODERN URDŪ POETRY.

As a further specimen of Urdū poetry, I give a set of verses by Shamsu'l 'ulamā Maulavī Saiyid Altāf Ḥusain Ansārī Pānipatī, commonly known as Ḥālī, who is another member of the new school of Delhi authors, to which Naẕīr Aḥmad also belongs. Ḥālī has as great a reputation for his verse as that writer has for his prose. The school aims at abandoning the false hyperbole which is so common a feature in oriental verse, and at depicting thoughts in natural colours. In the poem here quoted, Ḥālī addresses his Muse, and encourages her to adhere to simplicity of diction and to truth. As will be seen, his style, though full of Persian words, combines simplicity with great elegance of thought and expression. The text is taken, with Mr. G. E. Ward's kind permission, from his edition of the Quatrains of Ḥālī.

Regarding the system of transliteration here adopted for Urdū poetry, and the method of scansion, see p. 147. Note specially that in words like fir̄efta (verse 2) or rāstī (verse 3), the syllable containing a long vowel followed by a silent consonant is scanned as a trochee (— ◡). Thus, fir̄efta is scanned ◡ — ◡ ◡ and rāstī is scanned — ◡ — .

[No. 12.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

HINDŌSTĀNĪ (MODERN URDŪ POETRY).

(Hālī.)

اَي شعر - دِل فِريب نه هو تُو تو غم نهين
پر تُجهه په حيف هَے جو نه هو دِل گُداز تُو

صنعت په هو فريفته عالم اگر تمام هان - سادگي سے آئيو اپني نه باز تُو

جَوهر هَے راستي کا اگر تيري ذات مين
تحسينِ روزگار سے هَے بينياز تُو

حُسن اپنا گر دِکها نهين سکتا جهان کو
اپنے کو ديکهه - اور کر اپنے په ناز تُو

(٥) تو نے کيا هَی بحرِ حقيقت کو مَوج خيز دهوے کا غرق کرے رهيگا جهاز تُو

وُه دِن گئے کِه جُهوٹ تها اِيمانِ شاعري قبله هو اب اُدهر تو نه کيجو نماز تُو

اهلِ نظر کي آنکهه مين رهنا هَے گر عزيز جو بيبصر هَين اُنسے نه رکهه ساز باز تُو

ناک اُوپری دوا سے تیری گر چڑھاین لوگ معذور جان اُنکو - جو ہو چارہ ساز تُو چُپ چاپ اپنے سچ سے کیے جا دِلون مین گھر
اُونچا ابھی نہ کر علمِ اِمتیاز تُو
(۱۰) جو نابلد ہَین اُنکو بتا چور بنکے راہ گر چاہتا ہَے خِضر کِی عُمرِ دراز تُو عِزّت کا بھید مُلک کِی خِدمت مین ہَے چھپا محمُود جان آپ کو گر ہَے ایاز تُو اَی شِعر - راہِ راست پہ تُو جب کہ پڑلیا اب راہ ے نہ دیکھہ نِشیب و فراز تُو کرنِی ہَے فتح گر نئِی دُنیا تو لے نِکل بیڑون کا ساتھہ چھوڑ کر اپنا جہاز تُو ہوتِی ہَے سچ کِی قدر - پہ بیقدریون ے بعد
اِسکے خِلاف ہو - تو سمجھہ اُسکو شاذ تُو (۱۵) جو قدردان ہو اپنا - اُسے مُغتنم سمجھہ ہالِی کو تُجھہ پہ ناز ہَے - کر اُسپہ ناز تُو

[No. 12.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

HINDŌSTĀNĪ (MODERN URDŪ POETRY).

(Ḥālī.)

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Metre. — — ⏑ — ⏑ — ⏑ ⏑ — — ⏑ — ⏑ —

Ai she'r, dil-firēb na hō tū, to gham nahĩ̃;
O Poetry, heart-beguiling not mayst-be thou, then sorrow not;

Par tujh-pa ḥaif hai, jo na hō dil-gudāz tū.
But thee-on pity is, if not mayst-be heart-melting thou.

Ṣan'at-pa hō firēfta 'ālam agar tamām,
Skill-on may-be fascinated world if entire,

Hã̃, sādagī-se āiyo apnī na bāz tū.
Yes, simplicity-from come thine-own not back thou.

Jauhar hăĭ rāstī-ka agar tēri zāt-mẽ̃,
Jewel is sincerity-of if thy nature-in,

Taḥsīn-e rōzgār-se hai bē-niyāz tū.
Applause-of (present-) time-from art independent thou.

Ḥusn apna gar dikhā nahĩ saktā jahān-kō,
Beauty thine-own if make-to-see not thou-canst the-world,

Āpē-ko dēkh; — aur kar apnē-pa nāz tū.
Thyself look-at;— and make thyself-on pride thou.

5. Tū-nē kiyā-hăĭ baḥr-e ḥaqīqat-ko mauj-khēz;
Thee-by made-is the-ocean-of reality billow-raising;

Dhōkē-ka gharq kar-ke, rahēgā, jahāz, tū.
Imposture-of sunk made-having, thou-wilt-remain, the-ship, thou.

Woh din gaē, ki jhūṭ tha īmān-e shā'irī;
Those days are-gone, that falsehood was the-creed-of poetics;

Qiblā ho ab udhar, to na kījō namāz tū.
The-Qibla may-be now in-that-direction, then not make worship thou.

Ahl-ē naẓar-ki ãkh-mẽ̃ rahnā hăĭ gar 'azīz,
Men-of insight-of eyes-in to-live is if precious,

Jō bē-baṣar hăĭ̃, un-se na rakh sāz-bāz tū.
Who without-eyes are, them-with not hold concord thou.

Nāk ūparī dawā-se terī gar chaṛhāẽ̃ lōg,
Noses upwards medicine-from thy if raise people,

Ma'ẕūr jān un-ko,— jo hō chāra-sāz tū.
Excused consider them,— if mayst-be remedy-preparer thou.

Chup-chāp apne sach-se kiyē-jā dilȭ-mẽ ghar;
Silently thine-own truth-by build-up hearts-in a-home;

Ūchā abhī na kar 'alam-ē imtiyāz tū.
High now-even not make the-banner-of refinement thou.

Jō nā-balad hăĭ un-ko batā chōr ban-ke rāh;
Who without-country are them-to show thief become-having the-way;

Gar chāhtā-hăĭ Khiẓr-ki 'umr-ē darāz tū.
If wishing-thou-art Khiẓr-of the-life long thou.

'Izzat-ka bhēd mulk-ki khidmat-mẽ hai chhipā;
Honour-of secret country-of service-in is hidden;

Maḥmūd jān āp-ko, gar hai Ayāz tū.
Maḥmūd think thyself, if thou-art Ayāz thou.

Ai she'r, rāh-e rāst-pa tū jab ki paṛ-liyā,
O poetry, road straight-on thou when that threwest-thyself,

Ab rāh-kē na dēkh nishēb-ō-farāz tū.
Now the-road-of not look-at hollows-(and-)heights thou.

Karnī hăĭ fatḥ gar naĭ dunyā, to lē-nikal
To-be-made is conquered if a-new world, then go-forth-(and-)take

Bēṛȭ-ka sāth chhōṛ-kar, apnā jahāz tū.
Rafts-of company abandoned-having, thine-own ship thou.

Hōtī-hăĭ sach-ki qadr; — pa bē-qadriyȭ-ke ba'd;
Becoming-is truth-of appreciation;—but non-appreciation-of after;

Is-kē khilāf hō, to samajh us-ko shāz tū.
This-of contrary may-be, then consider it rare thou.

Jō qadr-dā̃ ho apna, usē mughtanam samajh,
Who appreciator may-be your-own, him a-prize consider,

Ḥālī-ko tujh-pa nāz hăĭ;—kar us-pa nāz tū.
Ḥālī-to thee-on pride is;—make him-on pride thou.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.[1]

1. My Muse! if thou be not heart-beguiling, it is no sorrow; but pity on thee if thou be not heart-melting, thou.

2. Though the whole world be spell-bound in allegiance to artifice, Courage! from thine own simplicity turn not back, thou.

3. If there is in thine own nature the precious gem of sincerity, independent of applause from the present age art thou.

4. If thou canst not make the world turn to look at thy beauty, look at thyself; and take a pride in thine own self, thou.

[1] The translation is by Mr. G. E. Ward, to whose kindness I am also indebted for the text. The notes are mine.

5. The deep sea of reality thou hast made heave its waves; thou shalt sink the ship of imposture, and still survive, thou.

6. Those days are past when lies were the creed of verse-making; now should the Qibla[1] shift that way, do not worship thither, thou.

7. If to live within the eyes of men of insight is precious,[2] with those void of vision hold no compromises, thou.

8. Should men turn up their noses at thy new-fangled medicine, hold them excused;—if so be thou art a wise physician, thou.

9. In stillness, with thy truth, build up a home in peoples' hearts; exalt not the banner of refinement yet, thou.

10. Disguised as a thief point out the road to the benighted; if thou wish for the long life of Elijah,[3] thou.

11. Honour's secret lies hidden in the service of one's country. Think thyself to be Maḥmūd, if thou art Ayāz,[4] thou.

12. O Muse! since thou hast cast thyself upon the straight path, begin not now to look upon its ups and downs, thou.

13. If a new world is to be conquered, do thou go forth, and take, clear of the hugging rafts, thine own ship, thou.

14. Value for truth does come;—but after disparagements. If there be an instance to the contrary, think it rare, thou.

15. Should any recognise thy merit, count him one more gained. Ḥālī has pride in thee; have a pride in him, thou.

---

[1] The Qibla is the temple of the Ka'ba at Mecca, towards which Muslims turn their faces when at prayer.

[2] Mr. Ward suggests, as an alternative rendering, 'If (thou wish) to live honoured in the eyes of men of insight.'

[3] Khwāja Khiẓr, or the Green Prophet, so named from the traditional colour of his apparel, is usually identified by Muslims with the prophet Elijah. He is said to have discovered and to have drunk of the Fountain of Life, and hence lives for ever.

[4] Ayāz was a favourite slave of Sulṭān Maḥmūd of Ghaznī. He is the hero of many stories. His master's courtiers who were jealous of his influence, accused him to Maḥmūd, of purloining his jewels from the treasury. The next time he went there the Sulṭān followed him secretly. What was his surprise to see Ayāz draw from one of the chests a suit of old and dirty garments with which having clothed himself he prostrated himself on the ground and returned thanks to the Almighty for all the benefits conferred upon him. The Sulṭān went to him and demanded an explanation of his conduct. He replied, 'Most gracious Sire, when I first became your Majesty's servant, this was my dress, and, till that period, humble had been my lot. Now that, by the grace of God and your Majesty's favour, I am elevated above all the nobles of the land, and am entrusted with the treasures of the world, I am fearful that my heart should be puffed up by vanity; I therefore daily practise this act of humiliation to remind me of my former insignificance.' The Sulṭān being much pleased, added to his rank, and severely reprimanded his slanderers. See Beale's Oriental Biographical Dictionary, s.v. Ayāz. Maḥmūd himself was a mighty monarch, who invaded India no less than twelve times. He died A.D. 1030.

HIGH LITERARY HINDĪ OF BENARES.

The following version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son, by Bābū Śyām Sundar Dās, is in the high Sanskritised Hindī fashionable for literature written in Benares. Sanskrit words abound. In the very first sentence we have two,—manushya, a man, and putra, a son. Sanskrit spelling is also affected, as in aṁś for ans, a share; dēś for dēs, a country; dayā for dāyā, compassion.

[No. 13.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

HINDŌSTĀNĪ (HINDĪ VARIETY). BENARES.

(Bābū Syām Sundar Dās, 1899.)

किसी मनुष्य-के दो पुत्र थे। उन-में-से छुटकै-ने पिता-से कहा कि हे पित अपनी संपत्ति-में-से जो मेरा अंश हो सो मुझे दीजिए। तब उस-ने उन-को अपनी संपत्ति बाँट दी। कुछ दिन बीते छुटका पुत्र सब कुछ इकट्ठा कर-के दूर देश चला गया और वहाँ लुचपन-में दिन बिताते-हुए उस-ने अपनी संपत्ति उड़ा-दी। जब वह सब कुछ उड़ा चुका तब उस देश-में बड़ा अकाल पड़ा और वह कंगाल हो-गया। और वह जा-के उस देश-के निवासियों-में-से एक-के यहाँ रहने लगा जिस-ने उसे अपने खेतों-में सूअर चराने-पर रक्खा। और वह उन मोथों-से जिन्हे सूअर खाते-थे अपना पेट भरना चाहता-था क्योंकि उस-को कोई कुछ नहीं देता-था। तब उसे चेत हुआ और उस-ने कहा कि मेरे पिता-के यहाँ कितने मजूरों-के खाने-पर भी बहुत रोटियाँ बचौ रहती-हैं और मैं भूख-से मरता-हूँ। सो मैं उठ-के अपने पिता-के पास जाऊँगा और उन-से कहूँगा कि हे पिता मैं-ने स्वर्ग-देव-से विरुद्ध और आप-के सामने पाप किया-है। इस-लिये मैं फिर आप-का पुत्र कहाने-के योग्य नहीं हूँ। मुझे अपने मजूरों-में-से एक-के समान समझिए। तब वह उठ-के अपने पिता-के पास चला। पर दूर-ही-से उस-के पिता-ने उसे देख-के दया की और दौड़-के उस-के गले-में लिपट-के उसे चूमा। पुत्र-ने उस-से कहा कि हे पिता मैं-ने स्वर्ग-देव-से विरुद्ध और आप-के सामने पाप किया-है। इस-से अब आप-का पुत्र कहाने-के योग्य नहीं हूँ। परंतु पिता-ने अपने दासों से कहा कि सब-से उत्तम

वस्त्र निकाल-के इसे पहिराओ और इस-के हाथ-में अँगूठी और पावों-में जूते पहिराओ। और हम-लोग मिल-कर खावें और आनंद करें क्योंकि यह मेरा पुत्र मर-गया-था फिर जीआ है खो-गया-था फिर मिला-है। तब वे आनन्द करने लगे॥

उस-का जेठा पुत्र खेत-में था। और जब वह आते-हुए घर-के निकट पहुँचा तब उस-ने बाजा और नाच-का शब्द सुना। और उस-ने अपने सेवकों-में-से एक-को अपने पास बुला-के पूछा कि यह क्या है। उस-ने उस-से कहा कि आप-का भाई आया है सो आप-के पिता-ने उत्तम भोज दिया-है इस-लिये कि उसे भला चंगा पाया-है। यह सुन उस-ने क्रोध किया और लौटना चाहा। इस-पर उस-का पिता बाहर आ उसे मनाने लगा। उस-ने पिता-को उत्तर दिया कि देखिये मैं इतने बरसों-से आप-की सेवा करता-हूँ औ कभी मैं-ने आप-की आज्ञा-का उल्लंघन नहीं किया। और आप-ने मुझे कभी एक मेमना भी न दिया जिस-से अपने मित्रों-के संग मैं आनन्द करता। परंतु आप-का यह पुत्र जिस-ने वेश्याओं-के सँग आप-की संपत्ति उड़ा-दी-है ज्यों-ही आया त्यों-ही आप-ने उस-के लिये उत्तम भोजन बनवाया-है। पिता-ने उस-से कहा कि हे पुत्र तू सदा मेरे संग है। इस-लिये जो कुछ मेरा है सो सब तेरा है। परंतु आज तुझे आनंद करना और हर्षित होना उचित था क्योंकि यह तेरा भाई मर-गया-था फिर जीया है खो-गया-था फिर मिला है॥

[No. 13.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

HINDŌSTĀNĪ (HINDĪ VARIETY). BENARES.

(Bābū Śyām Sundar Dās, 1899.)

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Kisī manushya-kē dō putra thē. Un-mẽ̃-sē chhuṭ^{a}kē-nē pitā-sē
A-certain man-of two sons were. Them-in-from the-younger-by the-father-to kahā ki, 'hē pitā, ap^{a}nī sampatti-mẽ̃-sē jō mērā aṁś hō sō it-was-said that, 'O father, your fortune-in-from what my share may-be that mujhē dījiē.' Tab us-nē un-kō ap^{a}nī sampatti bā̃ṭ-dī.
me-to give.' Then him-by them-to his-own property having-been-divided-was-given.
Kuchh din bītē chhuṭ^{a}kā putra sab kuchh ikaṭṭhā kar-kē dūr dēś
Some days after the-younger son all things together made-having distant country chalā-gayā, aur wahā̃ luch-pan-mẽ̃ din bitātē-huē us-nē ap^{a}nī sampatti went-away, and there debauchery-in days passing him-by his-own fortune uṛā-dī. Jab wah sab kuchh uṛā-chukā tab us dēś-mẽ̃ baṛā was-wasted-away. When he all things wasted-completely then that country-in great akāl paṛā, aur wah kaṅgāl hō-gayā. Aur wah jā-kē us dēś-kē famine fell, and he poor became. And he gone-having that country-of niwāsiyō̃-mẽ̃-sē ēk-kē yahā̃ rah^{a}nē lagā, jis-nē usē ap^{a}nē khētō̃-mẽ̃ inhabitants-in-from one-of near to-live began, whom-by to-him his-own fields-in sūar charānē-par rakkhā. Aur wah un mōthō̃-sē jinhē sūar swine feeding-on it-was-sent. And he those water-grasses-with which the-swine khātē-thē ap^{a}nā pēṭ bhar^{a}nā chāh^{a}tā-thā; kyō̃-ki us-kō kōī eating-were his-own belly to-fill wishing-was; because-that him-to any-one kuchh nahī̃ dētā-thā. Tab usē chēt huā aur us-nē anything not giving-was. Then to-him remembrance became and him-by kahā ki, 'mērē pitā-kē yahā̃ kit^{a}nē majūrō̃-kē khānē-par bhī it-was-said that, 'my father-of here how-many labourers-of eating-after even bahut rōṭiyā̃ bachī rah^{a}tī-haī aur maī̃ bhūkh-sē mar^{a}tā-hū̃. Sō maī̃ many loaves saved remaining-are and I hunger-from dying-am. So I uṭh-kē ap^{a}nē pitā-kē pās jāū̃gā aur un-sē kahū̃gā ki, "hē pitā, arisen-having my-own father-of near will-go and him-to will-say that, "O father, maī̃-nē Swarg-Daiv-sē viruddh aur āp-kē sām^{a}nē pāp kiyā-hai;
me-by Heavenly-Deity-from contrary and your-Honour-of before sin done-is;

is-liyē maĩ phir āp-kā putra kahānē-kē yōgya nahĩ hũ̃; mujhē this-for I again your-Honour-of son being-called-of worthy not I-am; me apᵃnē majūrõ̃-mẽ̃-sē ēk-kē samān samᵃjhiyē.'' Tab wah uṭh-kē your-own labourers-in-from one-to equal know.'' Then he arisen-having apᵃnē pitā-kē pās chalā, par dūr-hī-sē us-kē pitā-nē usē his-own father-of near started, but distance-even-from him-of father-by him dēkh-kē dayā kī, aur dauṛ-kē us-kē galē-mẽ̃ lipaṭ-kē seen-having pity was-done, and run-having him-of neck-in enfolded-being usē chūmā. Putra-nē us-sē kahā ki, 'hē pitā, maĩ-nē to-him it-was-kissed. The-son-by him-to it-was-said that, 'O father, me-by Swarg-Daiv-sē viruddh aur āp-kē sāmᵃnē pāp kiyā-hai, Heavenly-Deity-from contrary and your-Honour-of presence-in sin done-is, is-sē ab âp-kā putra kahānē-kē yōgya nahĩ hũ̃.' Parantu this-from now your-Honour-of son being-called-of worthy not I-am.' But pitā-nē apᵃnē dāsõ̃-sē kahā ki, 'sab-sē uttaṃ wastra the-father-by his-own servants-to it-was-said that, 'all-than excellent clothes nikāl-kē isē pahirāō aur is-kē hāth-mẽ̃ āgūṭhī aur pāwõ̃-mẽ̃ taken-out-having to-this-one put and this-one-of hand-on ring and feet-on jūtē pahirāō, aur ham-lōg mil-kar khāwẽ̃ aur ānand karẽ̃; shoes put, and we-people united-being let-eat and rejoicing let-make;
kyõ̃-ki yah mērā putra mar-gayā-thā, phir jīā-hai; khō-gayā-thā, phir because-that this my son dead-gone-was, again alive-is; lost-gone-was, again milā-hai.' Tab wē ānand karᵃnē lagē.
found-is.' Then they rejoicing to-make began.

Us-kā jēṭhā putra khēt-mẽ̃ thā; aur jab wah ātē-huē ghar-kē nikaṭ Him-of the-elder son field-in was; and when he coming house-of near pahũchā tab us-nē bājā aur nāch-kā śabd sunā; aur us-nē apᵃnē arrived then him-by music and dance-of sound was-heard; and him-by his-own sēwᵃkõ̃-mẽ̃-sē ēk-kō apᵃnē pās bulā-kē pūchhā ki, 'yah attendants-in-from one himself-of near called-having it-was-asked that, 'this kyā hai?' Us-nē us-sē kahā ki, 'āp-kā bhāī āyā-hai, what is?' Him-by him-to it-was-said that, 'your-Honour-of brother come-is, sō āp-kē pitā-nē uttam bhōj diyā-hai, is-liyē ki usē bhalā so your-Honour-of father-by excellent feast given-is, this-for that for-him well chaṅgā pāyā-hai.' Yah sun us-nē krōdh kiyā aur lauṭᵃnā in-health found-it-is.' This hearing him-by anger was-done and to-return chāhā. Is-par us-kā pitā bāhar ā usē manānē lagā.
it-was-desired. This-on him-of the-father outside coming him to-appease began.
Us-nē pitā-kō uttar diyā ki, 'dēkhiyē, maĩ itᵃnē barᵃsõ̃-sē Him-by father-to answer was-given that, 'see, I so-many years-from āp-kī sēwā karᵃtā-hũ̃, aur kabhī maĩ-nē āp-kī ājñā-kā your-Honour-of service doing-am, and ever me-by your-Honour-of order-of ullaṅghan nahĩ kiyā, aur āp-nē mujhē kabhī ēk mēm[a]na bhī transgression not was-done, and your-Honour-by me-to ever a lamb even na diyā jis-sē ap[a]nē mitrõ-kē saṅg maĩ ānand not was-given which-by my-own friends-of in-company I rejoicing kar[a]tā. Parantu āp-kā yah putra jis-nē vēśyāõ-kē might-have-made. But your-Honour-of this son whom-by harlots-of saṅg āp-kī saṁpatti uṛā-dī-hai jyõ-hi āyā tyõ-hī in-company your-Honour-of fortune wasted-is as-even he-came so-even āp-nē us-kē liyē uttam bhōjan ban[a]wāyā-hai.' Pitā-nē your-Honour-by him-of for excellent feast been-got-prepared-is.' The-father-by us-sē kahā ki, 'hē putra, tū sadā mērē saṅg hai; him-to it-was-said that, 'O son, thou always me-of in-company art;

is-liyē jō-kuchh mērā hai, sō sab tērā hai; parantu āj tujhē this-for what-ever mine is, that all thine is; but to-day to-thee ānand kar[a]nā aur harshit hōnā uchit thā; kyõ-ki yah tērā rejoicing to-make and glad to-be proper was; because-that this thy bhāī mar-gayā-thā, phir jīyā-hai; khō-gayā-thā, phir milā-hai.'
brother dead-gone-was, again alive-is; lost-gone-was, again found-is.'

As another example of high Hindī I give the authorised Hindī version of the Parable issued under the auspices of the British and Foreign Bible Society. It closely resembles the preceding version, and it will be sufficient to give the text without transliteration or translation.

[No. 14.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

HINDŌSTĀNĪ (STANDARD HINDĪ).

(North India Bible Society, 1898.)

किसी मनुष्यके दो पुत्र थे । उनमेंसे छुटकेने पितासे कहा हे पिता सम्पत्तिमेंसे जो मेरा अंश होय सो मुझे दीजिये । तब उसने उनको अपनी सम्पत्ति बांट दिई । बहुत दिन नहीं बीते कि छुटका पुत्र सब कुछ एकट्ठा करके दूर देश चला गया और वहां लुचपनमें दिन बिताते हुए अपनी सम्पत्ति उड़ा दिई । जब वह सब कुछ उठा चुका तब उस देशमें बड़ा अकाल पड़ा और वह कंगाल हो गया । और वह जाके उस देशके निवासियोंमेंसे एकके यहां रहने लगा जिसने उसे अपने खेतोंमें सूअर चरानेको भेजा । और वह उन छीमियोंसे जिन्हें सूअर खाते थे अपना पेट भरने चाहता था और कोई नहीं उसको कुछ देता था । तब उसे चेत हुआ और उसने कहा मेरे पिताके कितने मजूरोंको भोजनसे अधिक रोटी होती है और मैं भूख-से मरता हूं । मैं उठके अपने पिता पास जाऊंगा और उससे कहूंगा हे पिता मैंने स्वर्गके बिरुद्ध और आपके साम्हने पाप किया है । मैं फिर आपका पुत्र कहावनेके योग्य नहीं हूं मुझे अपने मजूरोंमेंसे एकके समान कीजिये । तब वह उठके अपने पिता पास चला पर वह दूरही था कि उसके पिताने उसे देखके दया किई और दौड़के उसके गलेमें लिपटके उसे चूमा । पुत्रने उससे कहा हे पिता मैंने स्वर्गके बिरुद्ध और आपके साम्हने पाप किया है और फिर आपका पुत्र कहावनेके योग्य नहीं हूं । परन्तु पिताने अपने दासों-से कहा सबसे उत्तम बस्त्र निकालके उसे पहिनाओ और उसके हाथमें अंगूठी और पांवोंमें जूते पहिनाओ । और मोटा बछडू लाके मारो और

हम खावें और आनन्द करें। क्योंकि यह मेरा पुत्र मूआ था फिर जीआ है खो गया था फिर मिला है। तब वे आनन्द करने लगे॥

उसका जेठा पुत्र खेतमें था और जब वह आते हुए घरके निकट पहुंचा तब बाजा और नाचका शब्द सुना। और उसने अपने सेवकोंमेंसे एकको अपने पास बुलाके पूछा यह क्या है। उसने उससे कहा आपका भाई आया है और आपके पिताने मोटा बछडू मारा है इसलिये कि उसे भला चंगा पाया है। परन्तु उसने क्रोध किया और भीतर जाने न चाहा। इसलिये उसका पिता बाहर आ उसे मनाने लगा। उसने पिताको उत्तर दिया कि देखिये मैं इतने बरसोंसे आपकी सेवा करता हूं और कभी आपकी आज्ञाको उल्लंघन न किया और आपने मुझे कभी एक मेम्ना भी न दिया कि मैं अपने मित्रोंके संग आनन्द करता। परन्तु आपका यह पुत्र जो बेश्याओंके संग आपकी सम्पत्ति खा गया है ज्योंही आया त्योंही आपने उसके लिये मोटा बछडू मारा है। पिताने उससे कहा हे पुत्र तू सदा मेरे संग है और जो कुछ मेरा है सो सब तेरा है। परन्तु आनन्द करना और हर्षित होना उचित था क्योंकि यह तेरा भाई मूआ था फिर जीआ है खो गया था फिर मिला है॥

HINDŌSTĀNĪ IN THE UNITED PROVINCES, THE PANJAB, CENTRAL PROVINCES, RAJPUTANA, AND CENTRAL INDIA.

The Hindōstānī spoken in the United Provinces of Agra and Oudh requires no further illustrations. That of Lucknow has already been very fully dealt with. Over the rest of the provinces, where it is not a vernacular, Hindōstānī is largely used by the better classes of Musalmāns, by Native Christians, by educated Hindus as a lingua franca, and very generally in the large cities. The same remarks apply to the Panjab, to the Central Provinces, to Rajputana, and to Central India.

HINDŌSTĀNĪ IN EASTERN INDIA.

Hindōstānī is also spoken in Assam, Bengal, Bihar, and Orissa. In Assam it is spoken only by immigrants. In Bihar it is used much as in the United Provinces, but to a less extent, a large number of middle class Musalmāns speaking Awadhī instead, so that we find three languages in use in the territory,—Bihārī by the mass of the population, Awadhī by middle class Musalmāns of the country parts, and Hindōstānī in the great towns and among the upper class Musalmāns. As we go East in Bihar the employment of Awadhī disappears.[1]

In Bengal proper most of the Musalmāns speak Bengali more or less mixed with Persian and Arabic words. The upper class Musalmāns (who often have marriage connexions with Upper India), however, speak Urdū, and often very good Urdū. In Western Bengal, Hindōstānī is more widely spread, and in Birbhum it is largely spoken by all Muslims. Hindōstānī, in fact, is so much the language of the Musalmāns of Western Bengal and Orissa that when a family is converted to Islām it changes its language also. For instance, the Garpādā Bhuiyā family of Balasore were formerly Hindūs, but since they became Muslim they have abandoned their native Oṛiyā for the Hindōstānī of their co-religionists.

The Musalmāns of Orissa, though they form an exceedingly small fraction of the population, have preserved a fairly pure though not very grammatical Urdū, as the language of their home life.

The upper class Musalmāns of Bengal employ the Persian character for writing their Hindōstānī. The lower classes, when literate, usually employ the Bengali or the Nāgarī character. In Eastern Bengal, especially, the Nāgarī is quite common among Muslims. As an example of Bengali Hindōstānī I give a short extract from the Parable of the Prodigal Son, which illustrates the language of the Muhammadan population of Birbhum. It was received in the Nāgarī character. The only thing to be remarked in it is the spelling. The influence of the Bengali round them makes them pronounce a short a, when written, like the ŏ in 'hot.' Hence when they wish to write Hindōstānī in the Bengali or the Nāgarī character, they do not represent the Hindōstānī short a (pronounced like the u in 'nut') by a, but, for want of some better expedient, write it ā. Thus they spell ham, I, hām. Sometimes this Hindōstānī a is represented by e, as in leṛ^{a}kā, a son. If they wrote ham, they would pronounce it hŏm. In other respects, it will be seen that the Birbhum Hindōstānī, or (as it is locally called) Musalmānī, is far from correct. Gender and number are altogether neglected. In transliterating, when a short a is written in the original, I represent it by ŏ. This only occurs in words borrowed from Bengali, such as bisŏy, property, which is meant for विषय. Another example of the influence of Bengali is the employment of giyā, instead of gayā, to mean 'he went.' As, we shall see, is also the case in Madras, the use of the agent case with nē is unknown.

[1] Vide ante, Vol. VI, pp. 118 and ff.

[No. 15.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

HINDŌSTĀNĪ (BIRBHUM MUSALMĀNĪ). DISTRICT, BIRBHUM.

एक आद्‌मी-का दो लेड़का रहा । उस लोक-के बीच-में छोटा लेड़का आपना बाप-को बोला, बाप-जी, बिसय-का जो भाग हाम-को मिलेगा ओ भाग हाम-को देओ । ओ उस लोक-को बिसय भाग-कर-दिया । थोड़ा दिन बाद छोटा बेटा सब कुछ बिसय एक जायगा कर-के दूर देश चला गिया अर उस जायगा-में सो आपना खाराप खियाल-में बिसय-को उड़ा-दिया ॥

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ēk ādmī-kā dō leṛ^{a}kā rahā. Us lōk-kē bīch-mẽ chhōṭā
A man-of two sons were. Those people-of middle-in the-younger leṛ^{a}kā āp^{a}nā bāp-kō bōlā, 'bāp-jī, bisŏy-kā jō bhāg hām-kō son his-own father-to said, 'father-dear, property-of what share me-to milēgā ō bhāg hām-kō dēō.' Ō us lōk-kō bisŏy will-be-got that share me-to give.' He those people-to the-property bhāg-kar-diyā. Thōṛā din bād chhōṭā bēṭā sab kuchh bisŏy ēk divided-and-gave. A-few days after the-younger son all any property one jāy^{a}gā kar-kē dūr dēś chalā-giyā, ŏr us jāy^{a}gā-mẽ sō āp^{a}nā place made-having a-far country went-away, and that place-in he his-own khārāp khiyāl-mẽ bisŏy-kō uṛā-diyā.
evil ideas-in the-property squandered.

The Hindōstānī of Orissa is not written in the Persian character. The few literate Musalmāns write it in the Oṛiyā character. As an example, I give an extract from the Parable of the Prodigal Son. As in Birbhum Musalmānī it is most ungrammatical. The agent case with nē is not used, and no attention is paid to gender or number. We may also note the Oṛiyā (and also Dakhinī Hindōstānī) form ku, employed instead of the accusative-dative suffix kō.

[No. 16.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

HINDŌSTĀNĪ (OF ORISSA MUSALMĀNS). DISTRICT, CUTTACK.

ଏକ ଆଦ୍‌ମିକା ଦୋ ଲଡ଼କା ଥା, ଆଓର ଓ ଲୋଗ୍‌କେ ବିରସେ ଛୋଟା ବାଓ୍ୟାକୁ କହା ବାଓ୍ୟା ! ହମାର୍‌ ଯୋ ହିସା ହୋତା ହଏ ଓ ହମ୍‌କୁ ଦୋ ଆଓର ଓ ଓ ଲୋଗ୍‌କେ ବିରମେ ଉସ୍‌କା ଦଉଲତ୍‌ ବାଣ୍ଟି ଦିୟା ଆଓର ଥୋଡ଼େ ରୋଜ୍‌କେ ବାଦ୍‌ ଛୋଟା ଲଡ଼କା ସବ୍‌ ଏକ୍‌ଜଟ୍ଠେ କିୟା ଆଓର ପରଦେଶକୁ ଗୟା ଆଓର ଉହାଁପର ଉସକା ସବ୍‌ ଦଉଲତ୍‌ ଫଯ୍ୟେଲବାଜିମେ ଲୋକ୍‌ସାନ୍‌ କରଦୟା ।

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ēk ādmi-kā dō laṛ[a]kā thā. Āor ō lōg-kē bich-sē
A man-of two sons were. And those people-of middle-from chhōṭā bāwā-ku kahā, 'bāwā, hamārā jō hisā hōtā hae ō the-younger the-father-to said, 'father, my what share being is that ham-ku dō.' Āor ō ō lōg-kē bich-mē us-kā daulat bāṇṭ me-to give.' And he those people-of among-in him-of wealth dividing diyā. Āor thōṛē rōz-kē bād chhōṭā laṛ[a]kā sab ekkaṭhṭhē kiyā āor gave. And a-few days-of after the-younger son all together made and par-dēś-ku gayā, āor uhā̃-par us-kā sab daulat phayēl-bāj̈ī-mē̃ a-foreign-land-to went, and there-on his all wealth debauchery-in lōksān kar-diyā.
destroyed made.

HINDŌSTĀNĪ OF GUJARAT.

The Hindōstānī spoken by the Musalmāns of Gujarat is, on the whole, very fairly pure,—much better than that of Bengal or Orissa. It is naturally influenced somewhat by the Gujarātī spoken by the surrounding Hindūs. This influence is shown principally in the vocabulary. As a rule the vocabulary is remarkably free from Arabic and Persian words, and, when these occur, they are often curiously distorted. On the other hand a few Gujarātī words, especially the very common nē or anē, and, have been adopted. The grammar is, as a rule, correct. The character employed for writing is sometimes the Persian, and sometimes the Gujarātī. I shall give examples in both modes of script.

The first example is in the Persian character. It was sent by the Collector of Customs, Bombay, as a specimen of the 'Gujarātī dialect of Urdū spoken by Musalmāns of north, central, and south Gujarat.' The following peculiarities may be noted.

The word for 'one' is ek, not ēk. The Arabic word fuẓūl has become phaḍūl, and safar has become saphr. There is a Dakhinī form apas, used as an oblique form in apas-kē, of one self. In standard Urdū āpas (with a long initial ā) is only used in the plural.

Gujarātī forms are nē, and; bhēgnā, to collect; pāḍ-dēnā, to make completely.

Some forms common in local dialects of Hindōstān, which have disappeared in standard Urdū, have survived in Gujarat. Such are unõ-mẽ, among them; kayā (for kahyā), it was said; and saphrõ, on a journey.

[No. 17.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

HINDŌSTĀNĪ (GUJARAT VARIETY).

اِک آدمي کے دو بیٹے تھے * نے اونون مین کے چھوٹے نے کیا
باوا مُجھے میرے بھاگ کا مال دیدے * تِسپر باپ نے اپس کے سَونسار
کے اونون مین بھاگ پاڈ دیا * نے گھنے دیوس نا نِکلے تھے کہ چھوٹے
چھوکرے نے سب بھیگا کِیا نے کوي دُور دیس کي سپھرون گیا نے وان
اپس کا دھن پھڈُولیون مین اوڈا دیا *

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ek ādmī-kē dō bēṭē thē. Nē unõ-mẽ-kē chhōṭē-nē kayā,
A man-of two sons were. And them-in-of the-younger-by it-was-said,
'bāwā, mujhē mērē bhāg-kā māl dē-dē.' Tis-par bāp-nē
'father, to-me my share-of property give-away.' That-on the-father-by apas-kē saũsār-kē unõ-mẽ bhāg pāḍ-diyā. Nē ghanē dīwas nā himself-of goods-of them-in division completely-made. And many days not niklē-thē ki chhōṭē chhōkrē-nē sab bhēgā kiyā, nē kōī passed-had that the-younger son-by all collected was-made, and a-certain dūr dēs-kī saphrõ gayā, nē wã̃ apas-kā dhan phaḍūliyõ-mẽ far country-of on-journey went, and there himself-of wealth debaucheries-in uḍā-diyā.
was-squandered.

The following little story comes from Surat. It is much more Persianised than the preceding specimen, the writer of it signing himself as a Qāẓī. The only irregularities are the pronunciation of aur, and, as ōr, and hai, is, as hē, as is customary in Gujarat.

[No. 18.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

HINDŌSTĀNĪ (GUJARAT VARIETY). DISTRICT, SURAT.

حکایت

ایک شخص نے عرضي کِسي حاکِم کے نام لِکھي اور اُسمین کُچھہ کا کُچھہ لِکھہ گیا * اور جواب اُسکا طلب هُوا * بارے فضلِ خُدا سے حاکِم مُنصِف کي رائے مین وُہ قصُور مند عمداً ثابت نہ هوا اور مُعاف کر دیا گیا * تو اُسکو اُسکے باپ نے جواب لِکھا اے میرے پیارے فرزند اِنسان کو چاهیئے کہ آنکھہ کھولکر اور بہُت دیکھہ بھالکر کام کِیا کرے کہ غفلت سے اِتنا دھوکھا نہ کھائے کہ جِس سے آپ دُکھہ اُٹھاوے * اِسپر یہ نقل ـ ایک شخص نے کِسي طبیب سے کہا کہ میرا پیٹ دُکھتا ہے * طبیب نے پوچھا کہ آج کیا کھایا تھا * کہا کہ جلي روٹي * کہا گیا کہ طبیب نے اُسے سُرمہ دیا اور کہا کہ آنکھون کا عِلاج پہلے کرنا چاهیئے کِس واسطے کہ آنکھہ اچّھي هوتي تو جلي روٹي نہ کھاتا * حاصِل یہ کہ سرکار کا کام بہُت هوشیاري اور خبرداري سے کیجیئے اور غفلت نہ کیجیئے *

[No. 18.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

HINDŌSTĀNĪ (GUJARAT VARIETY). DISTRICT, SURAT.

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

ḤIKĀYAT.

STORY.

Ēk shakhṣ-nē ʻarẓī kisī ḥākim-kē nām likhī, ōr
One person-by petition a-certain king-of (in-)name was-written, and us-mẽ kuchh-kā kuchh likh-gayā, ōr jawāb us-kā ṭalab it-in something-of anything written-was, and answer him-of demanded huā. Bārē faẓl-e Khudā-sē ḥākim-e munṣif-kī rāī-mẽ woh became. At-last grace-of God-by the-king just-of opinion-in he qaṣūr-mand ʻamdan ṣābit na huā, ōr moʻāf kar-diyā-gayā.
guilty intentionally proved not became, and pardoned he-was-made.
Tō us-kō us-kē bāp-nē jawāb likhā, ʻĀē mērē pyārē
Then him-to him-of the-father-by answer was-written, ʻO my dear farzand, insān-kō chāhiyē ki ãkh khōl-kar, ōr bahut son, mankind-to it-is-necessary that eyes opened-having, and much dēkh-bhāl-kar kām kiyā-karē, ki ghaflat-sē seen-having business he-should-make-a-practice-of-doing, that carelessness-by itnā dhōkhā na khāē, ki jis-sē āp dukh uṭhāwē. Is-so-much blunder not he-may-eat, that which-from himself sorrow he-may-raise. This-par yeh naql, — Ēk shakhṣ-nē kisī ṭabīb-sē kahā ki, "mērā on this fable, — A person-by a-certain doctor-to it-was-said that, "my pēṭ dukhtā-hē." Ṭabīb-nē pūchhā ki, "āj kyā khāyā-thā ?"
belly aching-is." The-doctor-by it-was-asked that, "today what eaten-was ?"
Kahā ki, "jalī rōṭī." Kahā-gayā ki ṭabīb-nē usē
It-was-said that, "burnt bread." Said-it-is that the-doctor-by to-him surma diyā, ōr kahā ki, "ãkhō̃-kā ʻilāj pahlē eye-ointment was-given, and it-was-said that, "eyes-of treatment first karnā chāhiyē, kis-wāsṭē ki ãkh achchhī hōtī, tō jalī rōṭī to-be-done is-necessary, what-for that eyes well if-had-been, then burnt bread na khātā." Ḥāṣil yeh ki sarkār-kā kām bahut not he-would-have-eaten." Moral this that government-of business much hōshiyārī ōr khabardārī-sē kījiyē, ōr ghaflat na kījiyē.'
intelligence and carefulness-with you-should-do, and carelessness not you-should-do.'

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

A certain man wrote an application addressed to a king. In it he wrote a deal of nonsense, and he was called on for an explanation. By the grace of God the king, who was a just monarch, found him not guilty of having committed his fault intentionally, and he was pardoned. Then his father wrote a letter to him saying, 'O my dear son, everyone should do everything with open eyes, and after mature consideration, so that he may not fall into any blunder through his carelessness, and thereby sup sorrow. There is a fable to this effect.—A man once complained to a doctor that he had a pain in his belly. The doctor asked him what he had been eating that day. "Only a bit of burnt bread," said he. The story goes that the doctor gave him for medicine some eye-ointment, "for," said he, "it is important first of all to apply remedies to your eyes. If they had been sound, you would not have eaten a bit of burnt bread." The moral of this is that in dealing with Government, you should show intelligence and watchfulness, and avoid every kind of carelessness.'

The next specimen is an extract from the Parable of the Prodigal Son, and comes from the Mahikantha Political Agency. It is written in the Gujarātī character. It will be noticed that in general style it resembles the specimen received from Bombay. It is not highly Persianised, and possesses a few Gujarātī idioms. As elsewhere in Gujarat the diphthong au becomes ō, as in ōr, and ; dōlat, wealth. There is considerable laxity in employing the numbers of the pronouns, e.g., us-mẽ̃-kē for un-mẽ̃-kē. The vowel ō sometimes becomes u, as it does dialectically in Upper India. Thus the sign of the dative-accusative is kũ̃, not kō, and the oblique plural of nouns ends in ũ̃, not õ̃. The oblique singular of the first personal pronoun is muj, not mujh, which is also an Upper India dialectic form. Gujarātī words are sometimes employed. Such are chhēṭē, far, and bhēgnā, to collect.

[No. 19.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

HINDŌSTĀNĪ (GUJARAT VARIETY). AGENCY, MAHIKANTHA.

એક આદમીકે દો બેટે થે. ઔર ઉસમેંકે છોટેને બાપકું કહા કે, બાપુ, મિલકતકા મેરા હિસ્સા મૂજકો દે. ઔર ઉસને ઉનકું દોલત બેંહેચ દી. ઔર થોડે દિન પીછે, છોટા બેટા, સબ ભેગી કર કર, છેટે મૂલકમેં ગયા, ઔર વાં મોજમઝેમેં અપની દોલત ઉડા દી. ઔર ઉસને સબ ખરચ ડાલે પીછે ઉસ દેશ મેં બડા દૂકાલ પડા, ઔર ઉસકું તંગાઈ પડને લગી. ઔર વો જાકર ઉસ મૂલકકે રહેને વાલું મેંસે એક કે વહાં રહા, ઔર ઉસને ઉસકું અપને ખેતરમેં ભૂંડુકું ચરાને વાસ્તે ભેજા. ઔર જો શીંગાં ભૂંડ ખાતે થે, ઉસમેંસેં અપના પેટ ભરનેકું ઉસકા દિલ થા, ઔર ઉસકું કિસીનેં દિયા નહીં.

[No. 19.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

HINDŌSTĀNĪ (GUJARAT VARIETY). AGENCY, MAHIKANTHA.

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ēk ādmī-kē dō bēṭē thē. Ōr us-mẽ̃-kē chhōṭē-nē
One man-of two sons were. And them-in-of the-younger-by bāp-kũ kahā kē, 'bāpu, milkat-kā mērā hissā mūj-kō the-father-to it-was-said that, 'father, the-property-of my share me-to dē.' Ōr us-nē un-kũ dōlat bẽ̃hēch dī. Ōr give.' And him-by them-to the-wealth having-divided was-given. And thōḍē din pīchhē, chhōṭā bēṭā, sab bhēgī kar-kar, chhēṭē a-few days after, the-younger son, all collected having-made, a-far mūlak-mẽ̃ gayā, ōr wã̃ mōj-majhē-mẽ̃ apnī dōlat country-in went, and there pleasure-and-enjoyment-in his-own wealth uḍā dī. Ōr us-nē sab kharach-ḍālē, pīchhē having-wasted was-given. And him-by all was-spent-entirely, afterwards us dēś-mẽ̃ baḍā dūkāl paḍā, ōr us-kũ taṅgāī paḍnē lagī.

that country-in a-great famine fell, and him-to distress to-fall began.

Ōr wō jā-kar us mūlak-kē rahēnēwālũ-mẽ̃-sẽ̃ ēk-kē wahã̃
And he having-gone that country-of dwellers-in-from one-of near rahā, ōr us-nē us-kũ apnẽ̃ khētar-mẽ̃ bhũ̃ḍũ-kũ charānē wāstē remained, and by-him him-to his-own field-in swine feeding for bhējā. Ōr jō śiṅgã̃ bhũ̃ḍ khātē-thē, us-mẽ̃-sẽ̃ apnā it-was-sent. And what husks the-swine eating-were, them-in-from his-own pēṭ bharnē-kũ us-kā dil thā, ōr us-kũ kisī-nẽ̃ diyā nahī.

belly filling-for him-of mind was, and him-to anyone-by it-was-given not.

HINDŌSTĀNĪ OF CUTCH.

The Hindōstānī spoken in Cutch is more corrupt than the foregoing specimens. It is full of Gujarātī, and has also local peculiarities of its own. As a specimen I give a short folk-tale. It is not worth while to give a complete account of the irregularities, but the following are the main points worthy of notice. Some of the forms given below are interesting survivals of an archaic dialect which has elsewhere been levelled down to the general standard of Hindōstānī. Such, especially, is the use of hũ̃ for the nominative case of the first personal pronoun, while mẽ̃ is reserved for the case of the agent. In standard Hindōstānī hũ̃ has passed out of use, and maĩ is employed for the nominative, although it is by origin an instrumental.

There is the usual Gujarat change of ai to ē in ēsā, such; hē, is; and mẽ̃, by me.

Verbs are often contracted when the root ends in h. This is also found in the dialects of Upper India. Examples are raiyã̃, they (fem.) remained; kayā, it was said; kētā-hē, he says.

Feminine nouns have a nominative plural in ã̃, as ãkhã̃, eyes; chījã̃, things. Adjectives agreeing with feminine nouns in the plural, also end in ã̃, as raiyã̃, they (fem.) remained; sājiã̃, sound, in good health (agreeing with ãkhã̃). We sometimes find neuter adjectives, as in dēṇā (masc.), dēṇī (fem.), dēṇã̃ (neuter), to be given.

The oblique plural ends in ũ̃, so also kũ̃ is used for kō. Thus, vaidh-kũ̃, to the doctor; ãkhũ̃-mã̃, in the eyes.

In the pronouns, hũ̃ is 'I,' with an agent mērē or maĩ. Tijē is 'to thee.' The Gujarātī pōtũ̃ is used for 'self.'

The word for 'and' is the Gujarātī anē.

[No. 20.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

HINDŌSTĀNĪ (GUJARAT VARIETY). DISTRICT, CUTCH.

એક ડોસીકી આંખાં રૈયાં. તધાં તિસનેં તે સાજી કરણે સારૂ એક વૈધકૂં બુલાયા, અનેં સાખસી રખનેં એસા વડાઇ કીયા કે જો તૂં મેરી આંખાં સાજિઆં કરેગા તો મેરે તિજે ચાકરી દેણી ; પણ આંખ સાજી ન હોય તો કાંઇ તિજે દેણાં નંઇ. એસા કરાર કરનેં પિછેં તે વૈધ વખતે વખત આવે તિસકી આંખૂંમાં પોતૂંકી દવા લગાતા, અનેં જધાં જધાં આવતાં તધાં તધાં કાંઇ કે કાંઇ લે જાતા. ઈયૂં કરતે થોડે થોડે કરનેં તિસકી બધી મિલકત ચુરા લીતી; અનેં જધાં તિસકા જિતા થા તિતા બધે તિસકે હાથમાં આવ્યા તધાં તિસનેં તિસકી આંખાં સાજિઆં કીતિઆં, અનેં કરાર પ્રમાણેં પૈસે માંગે. ડોસી જધાં દેખતી હુઇ, તધાં ઘરમાં પોતૂંકી કાંઇ ચીજ દેખી નંઇ; વાસ્તે ઇસકૂં કાંઇ દિઆ નંઇ. વૈધ હણેાહણ કરનેં લગા ત પણ ડોસીનેં કાંઇ ઉસે ધાધ ન દિઆ. તિસ ઉપરથી તે તિસકૂં ઘરબારમાં બોલા ગયા. ડોસીનેં ઘરબારમાં કયા કે, ઈ માંણુસ જે કેતા હે તે સચ્ચી વાત હે. કારણ કે જો મેરી આંખ સાજી હોય તો તિસકૂં પૈસા દઉં ; પણ અંધીજ રહું તો કાંઇ ન દઉં, એસા કરાર થા. હવે એા કેતા હે કે, ઈ સાજી હેા રહી હે. પણ હૂં સાંમેં કેતી હૂં કે, હૂં તેા અંધીજ હૂં. કારણ કે જધાં મેં મેરી આંખ બોઇ તધાં હૂં ઘર મેં ઘણી તરેહકી ચીજાં અનેં સારા સારા સામાન દેખતી ; પણ હવે ઈ સાં ખાનેં કેતા હે કે, ઈસકા અંધાપા ગયા હે. પણ હું ઘર મેં, એક પણ ચીજ દેખતી નંઇ હૂં.

[No. 20.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

HINDŌSTĀNĪ (GUJARAT VARIETY). DISTRICT, CUTCH.

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ēk ḍōsī-kī ãkhã raiyã. Tadhã tis-nẽ tē
A-certain old-woman-of eyes stopped (-seeing). Then her-by them sājī karṇē sārū ēk vaidh-kũ bulāyā; anẽ sākhsī rakhnẽ sound making for one physician-to it-was-called; and witnesses having-kept ēsā waḍāṛ kīyā kē, 'jō tũ mērī ãkhã sājiã karēgā tō such bargain was-made that, 'if thou my eyes sound wilt-make then mērē tijē chākrī dēṇī; paṇ ãkh sājī na by-me to-thee (a-reward-for-)service is-to-be-given; but the-eyes sound not hōy tō kãĭ tijē dēṇã nãĭ.' Ēsā karār may-be then anything to-thee is-to-be-given not.' Such contract karnẽ pichhẽ tē vaidh wakhªtē-wakhat āwē tis-kī having-made then that physician time-after-time having-come her ãkhũ-mã pōtũ-kī dawā lagātā, anẽ jadhã jadhã āwtā eyes-in his-own medicine used-to-apply, and when when he-used-to-come tadhã tadhã kãĭ-kē-kãĭ lē jātā. Iṿũ kartē then then something-or-other having-taken he-used-to-go. Thus doing thōṛē thōṛē karnẽ tis-kī badhī milkat churā-lītī. Anẽ little little having-done her all property was-stolen-away. And jadhã tis-kā jitā thā titā badhē tis-kē hāth-mã āvyā, tadhã when her-of as-much was that-much all him-of hand-in came, then tis-nẽ tis-kī ãkhã sājiã kītiã; anẽ karār pramãṇẽ paisē him-by her eyes sound were-made; and contract according-to money mãgē. Ḍōsī jadhã dēkhªtī huī, tadhã ghar-mã was-demanded. The-old-woman when seeing became, then house-in pōtũ-kī kãĭ chīj dēkhī nãĭ. Wāstē is-kũ kãĭ diā her-own any thing was-seen not. Therefore him-to anything was-given nãĭ. Vaidh haṇō-haṇ karnẽ lagā ta-paṇ ḍōsī-nẽ not. The-physician a-disturbance to-make began then-even the-old-woman-by kãĭ usē dhādh na diā. Tis-ūpar-thī tē tis-kũ dharbār-mã any to-him heed not was-given. Thereupon he her-to court-in bōlā gayā.
having-called went.

Ḍōsī-nẽ dharᵃbār-mã̃ kayā kē, 'ī mã̃ṇas jē kētā
The-old-woman-by court-in it-was-said that, 'this man what telling hē, tē sāchī wāt hē; kāraṇ kē jō mērī ã̃kh sājī hōy is, that true story is; because that if my eyes sound may-become tō tis-kũ̃ paisā daũ̃; paṇ andhī-j rahũ̃ tō kã̃ĩ then him-to money I-should-give; but blind-only if-I-remain then anything na daũ̃, ēsā karār thā. Havē ō kētā hē kē, not I-should-give, such an-agreement was. Now he saying is that,
"ī sājī hō-rahī-hē;" paṇ hũ̃ sã̃mẽ kētī-hũ̃ kē,
"this (she) sound has-become;" but I on-the-contrary say that,
"hũ̃ tō andhī-j hũ̃." Kāraṇ kē jadhã̃ mẽ mērī ã̃kh khōī
"I indeed blind-only am." Because that when I my eyes lost tadhã̃ hũ̃ ghar-mẽ ghaṇī tarẽh-kī chījã̃ anẽ sārā sārā sāmān then I house-in many kinds-of things and good good furniture dēkhtī. Paṇ havē ī sã̃ khānẽ kētā-hē kē, "is-kā used-to-see. But now he oath having-eaten saying-is that, "her andhāpā gayā hē;" paṇ hũ̃ ghar-mẽ ēk paṇ chīj dēkhᵃtī-nãĩ-hũ̃.'
blindness gone is;" but I house-in one even thing seeing-not-am.'

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

An old woman having lost the use of her eyes, called in a physician to heal them, and made this bargain with him in the presence of witnesses, that if he should cure her blindness, he should receive from her a sum of money; but if her infirmity remained, she should give him nothing. This agreement being entered into, the physician time after time applied his salve to her eyes, and, on every visit taking something away, stole by little and little all her property. When he had got all she had, he healed her, and demanded the promised payment. The old woman when she recovered her sight and saw none of her goods in the house, would give him nothing. The physician insisted on his claim, and, as she still refused, summoned her before the judge. The old woman thus spoke in the court: 'This man here speaks the truth in what he says; for I did promise to give him a sum of money, if I should recover my sight; but if I continued blind, I was to give him nothing. Now he declares that I am healed. I, on the contrary, affirm that I am still blind; for when I lost the use of my eyes, I saw in my house various chattels and valuable goods; but now, though he swears I am cured of my blindness, I am not able to see a single thing in it.'

DAKHINĪ OF BOMBAY.

The following specimen of the Dakhinī of the Bombay Presidency is the first half of a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son, prepared in the office of the Collector of Customs of Bombay. It is said to illustrate the dialect of the 'Musalmāns of the Deccan.'

As pointed out above (vide pp. 58 and 62), the Dakhinī of Bombay has not abandoned the use of the case of the Agent before the past tenses of transitive verbs,—indeed, in the present example it goes even further than the standard form of Hindōstānī in this respect. For instance, the verb bōlnā, to speak, is throughout treated as a transitive verb, whereas in the standard dialect it is always intransitive. Moreover, the Agent case is sometimes used with the past tense of an intransitive verb, as also occurs in some of the Western Hindī dialects of Upper India. Thus, chhōkrē-nē gayā, the boy went, literally, 'by the boy it was gone.' There are some cases of the influence of Marāṭhī. For instance, āpan is used not only in its proper sense of 'own,' but also to mean 'we' including the person addressed. Again the forms mājē and majhē, to me, are both due to the same influence. In maĩ mērē bāp-kadan jāũ̃, I will go to my father, we have mērē used where in the standard we should have apnē. This looks like the influence of Gujarātī. Anē or nē for 'and' is also Gujarātī. Bhī is also used at the beginning of a sentence to mean 'and,' which is quite irregular. Haur for 'and' is common in dialects of Western Hindī and of Rājasthānī.

Typical of Dakhinī are the use of jidhar to mean 'when' and 'where' instead of 'whither;' wū for woh, he; kōī-nē for kisī-nē; and athā for thā, he was. Attention may be drawn to the frequency with which Arabic and Persian words are incorrectly spelt.

[No. 21.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

HINDŌSTĀNĪ (DAKHINĪ OF BOMBAY DECCAN). BOMBAY.

ایک آدمي ے دو بیٹے تھے * اون مین سے چھوٹے چھوڑے نے بولا
بابا میرے بھاگ کا مال ماجے دے * هور اوسنے اونمین بھاگ پاڑ
دیا * بُہت دِن نہین گئے تھے کہ اوسکے پیچھے چھوٹے چھوکرے نے سب
بھنڈولا جمع کر کر کوئي دور گانو کُو گیا بھي اودھر جاکر سب مال
هُلّڑپنے مین بگاڑ ڈالا * تب اوس مُلک مین بھاري دُوکال پڑا اے
اوس کُو تنگي هونے لگي * اے اوسنے جاکر اوس گانو والے کوي آدمي
کي نوکري پکڑي * اے اون نے اوس کُو کھیت مین ڈُکّر چرانے کُو
بھیجا * جِدھر وہ ڈُکّر کھانے کے کونڈے کُو بھي کھانے کُو راجي اتھا - پن زُو
بھي اوس کُو کوي نے دِیا نہین * جِدھر وہ اپنے بُدہ مین آیا تد
بولا - میرے باپ کنے کِتنے مُلکاري هَین کہ اونکو اِتنا کھانا مِلتا هَے
کہ کھاکر بچے نے مَین بُھوکھہ سے مرتا هُون * مَین اُٹھون - نے میرے
باپ کدن جاؤن - نے اوسے بولون کہ ارے باپ مَین نے تیرے سامنے
پاپ کیا سو تیرا بیٹا بُلوانے کا مجھے مُون نہین هَے * مجھے ایک
مُلکاري سمجھہ * سو وہ اُٹھا اور اپنے باپ پاس آیا * پن جب وہ
تھوڑے دُور اتھا کہ اوس ے باپ نے اوسکو دیکھا اے اوسے پیار آیا *

سو وہ بھاگ کر اوسے گلے لگایا نے مُکّا لیا * اُنے بیٹے نے اپنے باپ کُو بولا - بابا مین نے اللہ کے سامنے اُنے تیرے سامنے گونا کیا سو مَین تیرا بیٹا بُلوانے کا سجاوار نہین * پن باپ نے اپنے نوکرون کُو بولا کہ - چوکھوٹ بستر لاؤ نے اِسکُو پناؤ - بھي ھانتھہ مین چھلّا پناؤ نے پانو مین جُوتا پناؤ * اُنے چلو آپن کھاوین نے کُھوشیان منائین کیونکہ یہ میرا بیٹا مرا تھا سو پھر جیتا ھوا - وہ گما تھا سو ملا * سو وہ چمن کرنے لگے *

[No. 21.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

HINDŌSTĀNĪ (DAKHINĪ OF BOMBAY DECCAN). BOMBAY.

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ēk ādmī-kē dō bēṭē thē. Un-mẽ̃-sē chhōṭē chhōṛē-nē One man-of two sons were. Them-in-from the-younger boy-by bōlā, 'bābā, mērē bhāg-kā māl mājē dē.' Haur us-nē it-was-said, 'father, my share-of property to-me give.' And him-by un-mẽ̃ bhāg pāṛ-diyā. Bohut din nahĩ̃ gaē-thē, ki them-in share was-completely-given. Many days not gone-were, that us-kē pīchhē chhōṭē chhōkrē-nē sab bhanḍōlā jam' kar-kar that-of after the-younger boy-by all wealth collected made-having kōī dūr gā̃w-kū gayā, bhī uḍhar jā-kar sab māl a-certain distant village-to it-was-gone, and there gone-having all property hullaṛpanē-mẽ̃ bigāḍ-ḍālā. Tab us muluk-mẽ̃ bhārī dūkāl paṛā, anē debauchery-in was-wasted. Then that country-in severe famine fell, and us-kū tangī hōnē lagī. Anē us-nē jā-kar us-gā̃w-wālē him-to want to-be began. And him-by gone-having that-village-belonging-to kōī ādmī-kī naukarī paḳṛī. Anē un-nē us-kū khēt-mẽ̃ ḍukkar a man-of service was-accepted. And him-by him-to field-in swine charānē-kū bhējā. Jidhar woh ḍukkar khānē-kē kōnḍē-kū bhī feeding-for it-was-sent. When he swine food-of husks even khānē-kū rājī athā, pan wū bhī us-kū kōī-nē diyā nahĩ̃.

eating-for willing was, but that even him-to anyone-by was-given not.

Jidhar woh apnē budh-mẽ̃ āyā, tad bōlā, 'mērē bāp-kanē
When he his-own sense-in came, then he-said, 'my father-near kitnē mulkārī haĩ̃ ki un-kū itnā khānā miltā-hai ki how-many servants are that them-to so-much food being-got-is that khā-kar bachē, nē maĩ̃ bhūkh-sē martā-hū̃. Maĩ̃ uṭhū̃, eaten-having remains-over, and I hunger-by dying-am. I will-arise, nē mērē bāp-kadan jāū̃, nē usē bōlū̃ ki, "arē bāp, and my father-near will-go, and to-him will-say that, "O father, maĩ̃-nē tērē sāmnē pāp kiyā, sō tērā bēṭā bulwānē-kā majhē me-by thee-of before sin was-done, and thy son calling-of to-me

mū̃ nahĩ̃ hai; majhē ēk mulkārī samajh."' Sō woh uṭhā, aur face not is; me one servant consider."' So he arose, and apnē bāp pās āyā. Pan jab woh thōṛē dūr athā ki his-own father near came. But when he at-a-little distance was that us-kē bāp-nē us-kū dēkhā, anē usē pyār āyā. Sō him-of the-father-by him-to it-was-seen, and to-him affection came. So woh bhāg-kar usē galē lagāyā, nē mukkā liyā. Anē he run-having him on-the-neck was-applied, and kiss was-taken. And bēṭē-nē apnē bāp-kū bōlā, 'bābā, maĩ-nē Allāh-kē sāmnē

the-son-by his-own father-to it-was-said, 'father, me-by God-of before anē tērē sāmnē gūnā kiyā, sō maĩ tērā bēṭā bulwānē-kā and thee-of before fault was-done, therefore I thy son calling-of sa̤jāwār nahĩ.' Pan bāp-nē apnē naukarō̃-kū bōlā ki, deserving am-not.' But the-father-by his-own servants-to it-was-said that,
'chaukhōṭ bastar lāo, nē is-kō pināo; bhī hā̃th-mē̃ chhallā
'good garment bring, and this-one-to put-on; and hand-on ring pināo, nē pā̃w-mē̃ jūtā pināo. Anē chalō, āpan khāwē̃, nē put-on, and feet-on shoe put-on. And come, we-all will-eat, and khūshyā̃ manāē̃, kyū̃-ki yeh mērā bēṭā marā thā, sō phir jītā happiness celebrate, because this my son dead was, he again living huā; woh gamā thā, sō milā.' Sō woh chaman karnē lagē.
became; he lost was, he was-got.' So they merriment to-make began.

The following specimen of Bombay Dakhinī comes from the district of North Kanara. It will be found to agree very closely with the grammatical sketch given on pp. 59 and ff., although it departs much more widely from Standard Urdū than does the specimen which came from Bombay Town. It will be seen that the Agent case with nē is regularly employed, but that the Madras custom is followed of making the verb agree in gender, number, and person with the subject instead of the object, in spite of the presence of the nē. The Agent case is used even with intransitive verbs. Examples are maĩ-nē lāyā-ũ̃, I have brought; bhaṭ-nē dō handiyã̃ lāyā, the Bhaṭ brought two pots; lōkã̃-ne khānā dēnē lagē, the people began to give food.

Among peculiarities of pronunciation, we may note a local tendency to convert s to sẖ. Thus, usẖē for usē, to him; paisẖē, pice; sẖikāyā, he taught. In the latter case there is also a dropping of the aspiration of kh. The correct Urdū form would be sikhāyā. With this loss of aspiration we may compare the dropping of the initial h of the auxiliary verb in phrases like lāyā-ũ̃, I have brought, for lāyā-hũ̃, and lētā-ẽ̃, you are taking, miltā-ẽ̃, it is got. Words borrowed from Arabic are sometimes altered, q being changed to kẖ, as in sẖaukẖī, for sẖauqī, devoted to; waḳẖat, for waqt, time. There is a tendency to shorten long vowels when they fall in unaccented syllables, as in lejā-kō, for lējā-kar, having taken away, and bazār for bāzār, a market. So also sarkā for sarīkhā, like. In dālnā, to place, a cerebral ḍ has been dentalised. All these latter are regular Dakhinī peculiarities.

Other Dakhinī forms which are prominent are athā meaning 'was' and the regular use of the plural for the singular. Thus, un is over and over again used for us, and hẽ̃, they are, for hai, he is. The verb bōlnā is regularly treated as transitive, as in bhaṭ-nē bōlyā, the Bhaṭ said. Verbs of speaking and asking put the person addressed in the accusative and not in the ablative; thus, bhaṭ-kō pūchhyā, he asked the Bhaṭ. Note the curious way in which the words bōl-kō bōlyā, having said he said, are appended, like the Sanskrit iti, to every statement made by any of the characters of the story.

A few instances of borrowing from Marāṭhī occur. Such are the emphatic ch in waisā-ch, even in that way, and the word rāwã̃, a parrot.

The specimen is a folk-tale which is left unfinished by the original scribe.

apnē bāp pās āyā. Pan jab woh thōṛē dūr athā ki his-own father near came. But when he at-a-little distance was that us-kē bāp-nē us-kū dēkhā, anē usē pyār āyā. Sō him-of the-father-by him-to it-was-seen, and to-him affection came. So woh bhāg-kar usē galē lagāyā, nē mukkā liyā. Anē
he run-having him on-the-neck was-applied, and kiss was-taken. And bēṭē-nē apnē bāp-kū bōlā. 'bābā, maĩ-nē Allāh-kē sāmnē
the-son-by his-own father-to it-was-said, 'father, me-by God-of before
anē tērē sāmnē gūnā kiyā, sō maĩ tērā bēṭā bulwānē-kā
and thee-of before fault was-done, therefore I thy son calling-of sajāwār nahĩ.' Pan bāp-nē apnē naukarõ-kū bōlā ki, deserving am-not.' But the-father-by his-own servants-to it-was-said that,
'chaukhōṭ bastar lāo, nē is-kō pināo; bhī hā̃th-mē̃ chhallā
'good garment bring, and this-one-to put-on; and hand-on ring
pināo, nē pā̃w-mē̃ jūtā pināo. Anē chalō, āpan khāwē̃, nē put-on, and feet-on shoe put-on. And come, we-all will-eat, and khūshyā̃ manāē̃, kyū̃-ki yeh mērā bēṭā marā thā, sō phir jītā happiness celebrate, because this my son dead was, he again living huā; woh gamā thā, sō milā.' Sō woh chaman karnē lagē.
became; he lost was, he was-got.' So they merriment to-make began.

The following specimen of Bombay Dakhinī comes from the district of North Kanara. It will be found to agree very closely with the grammatical sketch given on pp. 59 and ff., although it departs much more widely from Standard Urdū than does the specimen which came from Bombay Town. It will be seen that the Agent case with nē is regularly employed, but that the Madras custom is followed of making the verb agree in gender, number, and person with the subject instead of the object, in spite of the presence of the nē. The Agent case is used even with intransitive verbs. Examples are maĩ-nē lāyā-ũ̃, I have brought; bhaṭ-nē dō handiyã̃ lāyā, the Bhaṭ brought two pots; lōkã̃-ne khānā dēnē lagē, the people began to give food.

Among peculiarities of pronunciation, we may note a local tendency to convert s to sẖ. Thus, usẖē for usē, to him; paisẖē, pice; sẖikāyā, he taught. In the latter case there is also a dropping of the aspiration of kh. The correct Urdū form would be sikhāyā. With this loss of aspiration we may compare the dropping of the initial h of the auxiliary verb in phrases like lāyā-ũ̃, I have brought, for lāyā-hũ̃, and lētā-ẽ̃, you are taking, miltā-ẽ̃, it is got. Words borrowed from Arabic are sometimes altered, q being changed to kẖ, as in sẖaukẖī, for sẖauqī, devoted to; waḳẖat, for waqt, time. There is a tendency to shorten long vowels when they fall in unaccented syllables, as in lejā-kō, for lējā-kar, having taken away, and bazār for bāzār, a market. So also sarkā for sarīkhā, like. In dālnā, to place, a cerebral ḍ has been dentalised. All these latter are regular Dakhinī peculiarities.

Other Dakhinī forms which are prominent are athā meaning 'was' and the regular use of the plural for the singular. Thus, un is over and over again used for us, and hẽ̃, they are, for hai, he is. The verb bōlnā is regularly treated as transitive, as in bhaṭ-nē bōlyā, the Bhaṭ said. Verbs of speaking and asking put the person addressed in the accusative and not in the ablative; thus, bhaṭ-kō pūchhyā, he asked the Bhaṭ. Note the curious way in which the words bōl-kō bōlyā, having said he said, are appended, like the Sanskrit iti, to every statement made by any of the characters of the story.

A few instances of borrowing from Marāṭhī occur. Such are the emphatic ch in waisā-ch, even in that way, and the word rāwã̃, a parrot.

The specimen is a folk-tale which is left unfinished by the original scribe.

[No. 22.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

HINDŌSTĀNĪ (DAKHINĪ OF BOMBAY). DISTRICT, NORTH KANARA.

ایک گاؤن مین ایک بھٹ اتھا * وہ جوگار کا بڑا شوخي اتھا * اُس جوگار ے کھیل مین اپني سب گھردار ھاریا اور بھیک منگنے کو نکلیا * تب اسکے ذات‌والے لوکان نے اپنے دلمین سمجھے کہ انھین بھیک منگنے لگیا تو اِکادے وَخت دوسرے ذات مین بھي جائیگا اسواسطے اسکے ذات ے لوکان نے ھر روز ایک شیر چاول کا کھانا پکا کو دینے لگے * یو بھٹ ھر روز جاکو وہ کھانا لیکو آتا تھا * ایک دن ایک کُنبي ایک جنگلي راوین ،کو بیچنے کو لایا * تَو وہ راوان عمر مین بڑا اتھا اسواسطے کون اُسے لیا نئي * کي بولے تو وہ بات شیکے سرکا نتھا * تَو وہ کُنبي پھر کو گھر کو جاتا تھا اُس وَخت مین وہ کھانا لاتا تھا * سو بھٹ کو وہ کُنبي ملیا * تو اُس کُنبي نے اُس بھٹ کو پوچھیا کہ یو راوان تو لیتائین کیا * تَو اُس بھٹ نے بولیا کہ ھوئي مین لیؤنگا لیکن میرے کنے کچھہ پیشے نئي میرے کنے جَرا کھانا ھین اسمین سو ادا کھانا مین تجے دیؤنگا * تَو وہ کُنبي بھوکا اتھا اسواسطے اُس کنبي نے اُس بات کو قبول کرکو راوان دیا * تَو اُس بھٹ نے وہ راوان لیکو اپنے گھر کو آیا اور اُس کھانے مین کا

جرا کھانا راوین کو دالکو باقي کھانا اپے کھایا * جرا وخت ہوے بادو وہ راوان بھٹ کني بات کرنے لگیا * تو بھٹ اپنے دلمین بڑا خوش ہوا اور راوین کو پوچھیا کہ تو کیا بولتائین * تو اُس راوین ني بولیا کي ارے بھٹ تُجے دن دروز کتنا کھانا ملتائین * بھٹ ني بولیا مَجے ایک شیر کا ملتائین * تو اُس راوین ني بھٹ کو شکایا کہ ابھي تو اُس لوکان کو بول کہ مَجے اِتا کھانانکو چاول دیو بولکو بول * ویساچ اُس بھٹ ني جاکو اُس لوکان کو بولیا * تو اُس لوکان ني اُسکي بات قبول کري اور اُشے ایک شیر چاول جري لکڑي اور جري دال دینے لگے * تو اُنھین ایک دن وہ سارا لیکو اپنے راوین کنے آیا اور راوین کو بولیا کہ تونے بولے سرکا مینں چاول لایاؤن * تو وہ راوین ني بولیا کہ اِسمین ے ادے چاول بزار مین لِجاکو بیچ - تو تُجے پانچ پیشے ملینگے * تو اُسمین سو تو ایک بڑي ھنڈي اور ایک ننھي ھنڈي لیکو آؤ بولکو بولیا * تو اُس بھٹ ني وہ چاول بیچ کو دو ھنڈیان لایا اور راوین ے سامنے رکھیا * تو راوین ني بولیا کہ اُس بڑي ھنڈي مین کھانا پکا اور ننھي مین دال * تو اُس بھٹ ني پکایا *

[No. 22.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

HINDŌSTĀNĪ (DAKHINĪ OF BOMBAY). DISTRICT, NORTH KANARA.

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ēk gāṍ-mẽ ēk bhaṭ athā. Woh jōgār-kā baṛā shaukhī athā.
A village-in one bhaṭ was. He gambling-of much fond was.

Us jōgār-kē khēl-mẽ apⁿnī sab ghar-dār hāryā, aur bhīk
That gambling-of play-in his-own whole household was-lost, and alms

maṅgnē-kō nikalyā. Tab us-kē z̄āt-wālē lōkā̃-nē apⁿnē begging-for he-went-out. Then his caste-men people-by their-own

dil-mẽ samjē ki, 'inhẽ bhīk maṅgnē lagyā, tō ikādē mind-in it-was-thought that, 'this(-man) alms to-beg began, then at-one wakhat dūsrē z̄āt-mẽ bhī jāẽgā.' Is-wāsṭē is-kē z̄āt-kē lōkā̃-nē time other caste-in also he-will-go.' Therefore his caste-of people-by har rōz ēk shēr chāwal-kā khānā pakā-kō dēnē lagē. Yō every day one seer rice-of food cooked-having to-give began. This

bhaṭ har rōz jā-kō woh khānā lē-kō ātā-thā. Ēk bhaṭ every day gone-having that food taken-having used-to-come. One

din. ēk kunbī ēk jaṅglī rāwẽ-kō bēchnē-kō lāyā. Tau woh day one cultivator one wild parrot-to selling-for brought. Then that rāwã̃ 'umr-mẽ baṛā athā, is-wāsṭē kaun ushē liyā naī; kī parrot age-in great was, therefore any-one him took not; what bōlē tō woh bāt shīkē sarkā na-thā. Tau woh kunbī should-say then he speech to-learn like not-was. Then that cultivator phir-kō ghar-kō jātā-thā, us wakhat-mẽ woh khānā lātā-thā.

returning home-to going-was, that time-in he food bringing-was.

Sō bhaṭ-kō woh kunbī milyā. Tau us kunbī-nē us
So the-bhaṭ-to that cultivator was-met. Then that cultivator-by that bhaṭ-kō pūchhyā ki, 'yō rāwã̃ tū lētā-ẽ, kyā?' Tau us bhaṭ-to was-asked that, 'this parrot thou buying-art, eh?' Then that bhaṭ-nē bōlyā ki, 'hōī, maī lēũgā, lēkin mērē-kanē kuchh paishē bhaṭ-by was-said that, 'yes, I will-take, but me-with any pice

naī, mērē-kanē jarā khānā hẽ; is-mẽ-sō adā khānā maī tujē (are-)not, me-with a-little food is; this-in-from half food I thee dēũgā.' Tau woh kunbī bhūkkā athā, is-wāsṭē us kunbī-nē will-give.' Then that cultivator hungry was, this-for that cultivator-by us bāt-kō kabūl kar-kō rāwã̄ diyā. Tau us that speech-to accepting made-having the-parrot was-given. Then that bhaṭ-nē woh rāwã̄ lē-kō apnē ghar-kō āyā, aur us bhaṭ-by that parrot taken-having his-own home-to came, and that khānē-mẽ̃-kā jarā khānā rāwẽ̃-kō dāl-kō, bāqī khānā food-in-of a-little food the-parrot-to placed-having, remaining food apē khāyā. Jarā wakhat hūē bādō woh rāwã̄

(by-)himself was-eaten. A-little time passed after that parrot bhaṭ-kanē bāt karnē lagyā. Tau bhaṭ apnē dil-mẽ̃ baṛā the-bhaṭ-with speech to-do began. Then the-bhaṭ his-own mind-in much khush huā, aur rāwẽ̃-kō pūchhyā ki, 'tū kyā bōltā-ẽ̃?'
pleased became, and the-parrot-to asked that, 'thou what speaking-art?'
Tau us rāwẽ̃-nē bōlyā kī, 'arē bhaṭ, tujhē din-darōz kitnā
Then that parrot-by was-said that, 'O bhaṭ, to-thee daily how-much khānā miltā-ẽ̃?' Bhaṭ-nē bōlyā, 'majē ēk shēr-kā dinner being-given-is?' The-bhaṭ-by was-said, 'to-me one seer-of miltā-ẽ̃.' Tau us rāwẽ̃-nē bhaṭ-kō shikāyā ki, 'abhī being-given-is.' Then that parrot-by the-bhaṭ-to was-advised that, 'now tū us lōkã̄-kō bōl ki, "majē ittā khānã̄-kō chāwal thou those people-to say that, "me so-much eating-for uncooked-rice dēō," bōl-kō bōl.' Waisā-ch us bhaṭ-nē jā-kō us lōkã̄-kō give," said-having say.' So-even that bhaṭ-by gone-having those people-to bōlyā. Tau us lōkã̄-nē us-kī bāt qabūl karī; aur was-said. Then those people-by his speech accepted was-made; and ushē ēk shēr chāwal jarī lakṛī aur jarī dāl dēnē lagē.
to-him one seer rice some wood and some split-peas to-give began.
Tau unhẽ̃ ēk din woh sārā lē-kō apnē rāwẽ̃-kanē āyā, aur
Then he one day that all taking his-own parrot-to came, and rāwẽ̃-kō bōlyā kī, 'tū-nē bōlē sarkā maĩ-nē chāwal parrot-to said that, 'thou-by saying according-to I rice lāyā-ũ̃.' Tau woh rāwẽ̃-nē bōlyā ki, 'is-mẽ̃-kē adē chāwal brought-have.' Then that parrot-by was-said that, 'this-in-of half rice bāzār-mẽ̃ lē-jā-kō bēch, tau tujē pã̄ch paishē milẽ̃gē; tau bazaar-in taking sell, then to-thee five pice will-be-got; then us-mẽ̃-sō tū ēk baṛī handī aur ēk nanhī handī that-in-from thou one big earthen-pot and one small earthen-pot lē-kō āō,' bōl-kō bōlyā. Tau us bhaṭ-nē woh taken-having come,' said-having it-was-said. Then that bhaṭ-by that chāwal bēch-kō dō handiyã̄ lāyā, aur rāwẽ̃-kē sāmnē rice sold-having two earthen-pots were-brought, and parrot-of before

[No. 22.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

HINDŌSTĀNĪ (DAKHINĪ OF BOMBAY). DISTRICT, NORTH KANARA.

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ēk gāõ-mẽ ēk bhaṭ athā. Woh jōgār-kā baṛā shaukhī athā.
A village-in one bhaṭ was. He gambling-of much fond was.

Us jōgār-kē khēl-mẽ apⁿnī sab ghar-dār hāryā, aur bhīk
That gambling-of play-in his-own whole household was-lost, and alms

maṅgnē-kō nikalyā. Tab us-kē z̧āt-wālē lōkā̃-nē apⁿnē begging-for he-went-out. Then his caste-men people-by their-own

dil-mẽ samjē ki, 'inhẽ bhīk maṅgnē lagyā, tō ikādē
mind-in it-was-thought that, 'this(-man) alms to-beg began, then at-one

wakhat dūsrē z̧āt-mẽ bhī jāẽgā.' Is-wāsṭē is-kē z̧āt-kē lōkā̃-nē time other caste-in also he-will-go.' Therefore his caste-of people-by har rōz ēk shēr chāwal-kā khānā pakā-kō dēnē lagē. Yō every day one seer rice-of food cooked-having to-give began. This

bhaṭ har rōz jā-kō woh khānā lē-kō ātā-thā. Ēk bhaṭ every day gone-having that food taken-having used-to-come. One

din. ēk kunbī ēk jaṅglī rāwẽ-kō bēchnē-kō lāyā. Tau woh day one cultivator one wild parrot-to selling-for brought. Then that

rāwã̄ 'umr-mẽ baṛā athā, is-wāsṭē kaun ushē liyā naī; kī parrot age-in great was, therefore any-one him took not; what

bōlē tō woh bāt shīkē sarkā na-thā. Tau woh kunbī
should-say then he speech to-learn like not-was. Then that cultivator

phir-kō ghar-kō jātā-thā, us wakhat-mẽ woh khānā lātā-thā.
returning home-to going-was, that time-in he food bringing-was.

Sō bhaṭ-kō woh kunbī milyā. Tau us kunbī-nē us
So the-bhaṭ-to that cultivator was-met. Then that cultivator-by that bhaṭ-kō pūchhyā ki, 'yō rāwã̄ tū lētā-ẽ, kyā?' Tau us bhaṭ-to was-asked that, 'this parrot thou buying-art, eh?' Then that bhaṭ-nē bōlyā ki, 'hōī, maī lẽū̃gā, lēkin mērē-kanē kuchh paishē

bhaṭ-by was-said that, 'yes, I will-take, but me-with any pice

naī, mērē-kanē jarā khānā hẽ; is-mẽ-sō adā khānā maī tujē
(are-)not, me-with a-little food is; this-in-from half food I thee

dẽū̃gā.' Tau woh kunbī bhūkkā athā, is-wāsṭē us kunbī-nē will-give.' Then that cultivator hungry was, this-for that cultivator-by us bāt-kō kabūl kar-kō rāwā̃ diyā. Tau us that speech-to accepting made-having the-parrot was-given. Then that bhaṭ-nē woh rāwā̃ lē-kō apnē ghar-kō āyā, aur us bhaṭ-by that parrot taken-having his-own home-to came, and that khānē-mē̃-kā jarā khānā rāwē̃-kō dāl-kō, bāqī khānā food-in-of a-little food the-parrot-to placed-having, remaining food apē khāyā. Jarā wakhat hūē bādō woh rāwā̃

(by-)himself was-eaten. A-little time passed after that parrot bhaṭ-kanē bāt karnē lagyā. Tau bhaṭ apnē dil-mē̃ baṛā the-bhaṭ-with speech to-do began. Then the-bhaṭ his-own mind-in much khush huā, aur rāwē̃-kō pūchhyā ki, 'tū kyā bōltā-ē̃?'
pleased became, and the-parrot-to asked that, 'thou what speaking-art?'
Tau us rāwē̃-nē bōlyā kī, 'arē bhaṭ, tujhē din-darōz kitnā
Then that parrot-by was-said that, 'O bhaṭ, to-thee daily how-much khānā miltā-ē̃? ' Bhaṭ-nē bōlyā, 'majē ēk shēr-kā dinner being-given-is?' The-bhaṭ-by was-said, 'to-me one seer-of miltā-ē̃.' Tau us rāwē̃-nē bhaṭ-kō shikāyā ki, 'abhī being-given-is.' Then that parrot-by the-bhaṭ-to was-advised that, 'now tū us lōkā̃-kō bōl ki, "majē ittā khānā̃-kō chāwal thou those people-to say that, "me so-much eating-for uncooked-rice dēō," bōl-kō bōl.' Waisā-ch us bhaṭ-nē jā-kō us lōkā̃-kō give," said-having say.' So-even that bhaṭ-by gone-having those people-to bōlyā. Tau us lōkā̃-nē us-kī bāt qabūl karī; aur was-said. Then those people-by his speech accepted was-made; and ushē ēk shēr chāwal jarī lakṛī aur jarī dāl dēnē lagē.
to-him one seer rice some wood and some split-peas to-give began.
Tau unhē̃ ēk din woh sārā lē-kō apnē rāwē̃-kanē āyā, aur
Then he one day that all taking his-own parrot-to came, and rāwē̃-kō bōlyā kī, 'tū-nē bōlē sarkā maī-nē chāwal parrot-to said that, 'thou-by saying according-to I rice lāyā-ũ.' Tau woh rāwē̃-nē bōlyā ki, 'is-mē̃-kē adē chāwal brought-have.' Then that parrot-by was-said that, 'this-in-of half rice bāzār-mē̃ lē-jā-kō bēch, tau tujē pā̃ch paishē milē̃gē; tau bazaar-in taking sell, then to-thee five pice will-be-got; then us-mē̃-sō tū ēk baṛī handī aur ēk nanhī handī that-in-from thou one big earthen-pot and one small earthen-pot
lē-kō āō,' bōl-kō bōlyā. Tau us bhaṭ-nē woh taken-having come,' said-having it-was-said. Then that bhaṭ-by that chāwal bēch-kō dō handiyā̃ lāyā, aur rāwē̃-kē sāmnē rice sold-having two earthen-pots were-brought, and parrot-of before rakhyā. Tau rāwẽ̆-nē bōlyā ki, 'us baṛī handī-mẽ̃ khānā were-put. Then parrot-by was-said that, 'that big earthen-pot-in food pakā aur nanhī-mẽ̃ dāl.' Tau us bhaṭ-nē pakāyā.

cook and small-in split-peas.' Then that bhaṭ-by was-cooked.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

In a certain village there was a Bhaṭ[1] who was a great gambler. By it he lost all his property, and so he went out to beg. His caste-fellows said to each other that if he went on begging he would some day lose his caste, and so they gave him every day a seer of cooked rice. Each day he used to go and fetch his dinner home. One day a cultivator brought a wild parrot for sale to the village, but it was too old for any one to buy it, as there was no likelihood of its learning to speak. As he was going home with the bird he met the Bhaṭ returning with his dinner. The cultivator asked him if he would buy the bird. 'That I will,' said the Bhaṭ, 'but I have no money. All that I have is this food, and if you like you can take half of it as the price.' The cultivator was hungry, and so he made a bargain on these terms. The Bhaṭ took the parrot home and after giving him a little of his half-share of the food ate the rest. Shortly afterwards the parrot began to speak to him, at which the Bhaṭ was much pleased, and asked him what he was saying. The parrot said, 'O Bhaṭ, how much dinner do you get each day?' 'I get one seer.' Said the parrot, 'tell those people to give you uncooked rice.' The Bhaṭ did so, and his people agreed, and gave him a seer of uncooked rice, some wood, and some split peas. One day he took all these and brought them to the parrot saying, 'I have brought uncooked rice as you told me.' The parrot said, 'sell half the rice in the bāzār, and you will get five pice for it. With these buy two earthen pots, a big and a small one.' He did so and showed the pots to the parrot. 'Now,' said the parrot, 'cook the rice in the big pot, and the split peas in the small one.' So the Bhaṭ cooked his dinner.

(Here the story ends abruptly. The remaining adventures of the parrot and the Bhaṭ are unknown to me.)

[1] Bhaṭs are a sept of Brāhmaṇs. Many of them live by begging.

The next specimen of Dakhinī comes from the State of Savantvadi, which lies just north of Goa. It is a folktale. The language closely resembles the Dakhinī of Madras, the most important exception being the use of the word hatā to mean 'was.' This word is used in Gujarat, Braj and Bundelkhand in the same meaning, and a possible explanation of its presence here may be that it is a survival from the tenth century, when Ratnagiri and the neighbouring country was ruled by Yādavas. Braj is the head-quarters of that tribe.

The principal peculiarities of this form of Dakhinī are as follows :—

Arabic words are deformed in the borrowing. Such are garīb for ġharīb, and khātar for khāṭir. We may also note as an irregular pronunciation mũgnā, instead of mãgnā, to demand. Hōr, and, is a dialectic form in Upper India. Āchhnā means 'to be.'

The sign of the Agent case is nī. For the dative we have kē-nī, as in us-kē-nī, to him. This shows the origin of the common Dakhinī form kanē.

As already stated, the word for 'was' is hatā. We have also tā in lagyā-tā, had happened. Tā is also a Bundēlī form. The present tense of the auxiliary verb loses its aspiration in composition, as in ātā-õ, I am coming; nhāṭṭ-ẽ, thou art running.

The case of the Agent is used in the Madras fashion, i.e. the verb agrees in number and gender with the noun in the Agent case and not with the object. I therefore ignore the suffix of the Agent in the interlinear translation, and treat it as non-existent. The case is even used before intransitive verbs. Examples of the way in which it is employed are,—un-nī bōlyā, he said; un-nī bōlī, she said; kinī milēlē māl-kī chāṛī karyā, someone made tale-bearing of (about) the treasure trove; un-nī munḍī halāyā, he shook his head; un-nī dil-mẽ lāyā, he brought into his mind, he thought.

The Gujarātī past participle in ēlā is common. Thus, bharēlā taplā, a filled vessel; milēlā māl, treasure trove; diēlā taplā, the vessel given (by the uncle).

[No. 23.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

HINDŌSTĀNĪ (DAKHINĪ OF BOMBAY). STATE, SAVANTVADI.

ایک گریب بُڈّي سوت کاتنے والي هتي * اُسکا ایک بیٹا هتا * اسکیني سوتکیان دو گُنڈیان بکانیکے کھاتر اُني دِئے * او جاتے جاتے باڑي ے اُوپر ایك سلڈا هتا * اُني آدمي کو دیکھتے برووبر ڈرکو مُنڈي هلایا * اُني بولیا مامو تُمنا هونا تو یو لیو * دونون گُنڈیان باڑي ے اوپر رکھیا هور گھر کو آیا * مان ني پوچھي پیسے لایا کیا * مامو نے مونگے سو اُسے دونون دِیا * بجت اُني آپے کاتکو باجار مین لیکو گئي * اُکڑے چاؤل لائے * تھوڑے دِن هوئے اُني بولیا مامون کیني سو پیسے لیکو آناؤن * اُني بولي چکھوٹ جا * اُسکے جؤ مین کھریان ے مامون کیني سو پیسے لانارا * وهان سو او گیا * باڑي ے اُوپر ایک موٹا سلڈا اِسے دیکھتے ے برووبر ڈرکو نهاٹنے لگیا * مامون نهاٹتئین کان * پیسے دیؤ اُس دِن ے نین تو سیپڑي کو پکڑ کو اداالاؤنگا * بجت وہ دوڑیا سنگت او بھي دوڑیا * ایک تپلا روپیان سو اُبھریلا جنگل مین نجیک هتا * اُسکے اُوپر سو سلڈا گیا * اُني مامونکا مال بولکو بھریلي پرات اُٹھا کو لایا * مارگ مین اُني دِل مین لایا یو روپئے پولے اچھینگے * اُني سرکو سون روپئے سارے اوتیا * تالوے اوپر دو روپئے رهیے دھڑے باکي سارے پولے * دو روپئے لیکو مان کیني لاکو دِیا مامون ني دِئیلے تپلے مین

سو دو دھڑي باکي سارے پولے * مان ني بولي چل دِکھا * مان ني جاکو سارے بھرکو ليکو آئي هور گھينؤن و گُڑ لاکو اُسکے گُلگُلے کري * گُلگُلے کرکو گھِؤ مين تلي هور پچھاڑے مين چارو باجو اُڑائي * ٹِے کو بولي گُلگُليان کا نِؤن لگيانئين چُنکو لاکو کھا * او چُنکو کھاتے رهيا * تھوڑے دِن سو کِني سرکار مين مِليلے مالکي چاڑي کريا * پولِس تپاس مين لِکھنا هُوا * دوسرا لِکھنا کورٹ مين هُوا * بُڈّي ني بولي مين ني دِئيلي جباني پولِس ے ڈرسون دي * کھرا پوچھ تو مجے کچھہ مالوم نہين * ٹِے کو پوچھو * ٹِے ني بوليا گُلگُليان کا نِؤن لگيا تا تاريک مہينا سال دِن مَجے مالوم نئين اُس نِؤن مين مجے سارا مال مِليا * پوراوا مُدّے سير اُسکے پر هُوا نئين * گُلگُليان کا نِؤن کدي لگيا نئين * دِئيلي جباني بولِس ے ڈرسو * بِنا پوراوے ے کورٹکي کھاتري هوئي نئين * چھورا انجان بولکو کُچھہ بھي بولتا نئين سبب کھاتري هوتي نئين *

[No. 23.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

HINDŌSTĀNĪ (DAKHINĪ OF BOMBAY). STATE, SAVANTVADI.

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ēk garīb buḍḍī sūt kātnēwālī hatī. Us-kā ēk bēṭā hatā;
One poor old thread spinner there-was. Her-of one son was;
us-kē-nī sūtkyã̄ dō guṇḍyã̄ bikānē-kē khātar un-nī diī. Ō him-to of-thread two reels selling-of for-purpose she gave. He jātē-jātē bāṛī-kē upar ēk salḍā hatā. Un-nī ādmī-kū dēkhtē going-going hedge-of upon one lizard was. He man-to on-seeing barōbar ḍar-kō munḍī halāyā. Un-nī bōlyā, 'māmū, tum-nā immediately feared-having head shook. He said, '(maternal-)uncle, to-you hōnā tō yō lēō.' Dōnō̃ guṇḍyã̄ bāṛī-kē upar rakhyā, if-they-are-wanted then these take.' Both reels hedge-of on were-put, hōr ghar-kū āyā. Mã̄-nī pūchhī, 'paisē lāyā, kyā?'
and house-to (he-)came. The-mother asked, 'pice are-brought, eh?'
'Māmū-nī mũ̄gē, sō usē dōnō̃ diyā.' Bajat
'The (maternal)-uncle asked-for, therefore to-him both were-given.' Then un-nī āpē kāt-kō bājār-mẽ̃ lē-kō gaī. Ukṛē chāwal she herself spun-having market-to taken-having went. Half-boiled rice lāī. Thōṛē din huē. Un-nī bōlyā, 'māmũ̄-kēnī-sū she-brought. A-few days passed. He said, '(maternal-)uncle-near-from paisē lē-kō ātā-õ.' Un-nī bōlī, 'chakhōṭ, jā.' Us-kē jiw-mẽ̃ pice taken-having (I-)coming-am.' She said, 'well, go.' Her mind-in kharyã̄-kē māmũ̄-kēnī-sū paisē lānārā. Whã̄-sū ō gayā.
(that-)real (maternal-)uncle-from pice (he-is-)a-bringer. There-from he went.
Bāṛī-kē upar ēk mōṭā salḍā isē dēkhtē-kē-barōbar ḍar-kō Hedge-of on one big lizard him on-seeing-just feared-having nhāṭnē lagyā. 'Māmū, nhāṭṭ-ẽ̃ kã̄? Paisē dēō to-flee began. '(Maternal-)uncle, (you-)running-are where? Pice give us din-kē; naĩ-tō sēpṛī-kū pakaṛ-kō adlāũ̄gā.' Bajat woh dauṛyā; that day-of; if-not tail-to held-having (I) shall-dash.' Then he ran;
sangat ō bhī dauṛyā. Ēk taplā rupayã̄-sū bharēlā jangal-mẽ̃ najīk in-company he also ran. One vessel rupees-with filled jungle-in near hatā. Us-kē upar-sū salḍā gayā. Un-nī māmũ̄-kā māl was. That-of upon lizard went. He (maternal-)uncle's property bōl-kō bharēlī parāt uṭhā-kō lāyā. Mārag-mẽ un-nī dil-mẽ said-having a-filled plate lifted-having brought. The-way-in he mind-in lāyā, 'yō rupaē pōlē āchhẽgē.' Un-nī sir-kō-sũ brought, 'these rupees unsubstantial will-be.' He from-on-head rupaē sārē ōtyā. Tālu-kē-upar dō rupaē rahyē dhaṛē, rupees all poured-out. On-top two rupees remained substantial, bākī sārē pōlē. Dō rupaē lē-kō mā-kēnī remaining all unsubstantial. Two rupees having-taken mother-to lā-kō diyā. 'Māmũ-nī diēlē taplē-mẽ-sū dō brought-having (he-)gave. 'By-(maternal-)uncle given out-of-vessel two dhaṛē, bākī sārē pōlē.' Mā-nī bōlī, 'chal, dīkhā.'

substantial, the-rest all unsubstantial.' The-mother said, 'come, show.'
Mā-nī jā-kō sārē bhar-kō lē-kō āī, hōr
The-mother gone-having all collected-having taken-having came, and ghẽũ o guṛ lā-kō us-kē gulgulē karī. Gulgulē wheat and molasses brought-having that-of balls made. Balls kar-kō ghiū-mẽ talī, hōr pichhāṛī-mẽ chārō bājū uṛāī.
having-made ghee-in (she-)fried, and compound-in four sides threw.
Bēṭē-kū bōlī, 'gulgulyã̃-kā niũ lagyã̃ī, chun-kō lā-kō Son-to (she-)said, 'balls-of rain has-fallen, gathered-having brought-having khā.' Ō chun-kō khātē rahyā. Thōṛē din-sū kinī eat.' He gathered-having eating remained. A-few days-in some-one sarkār-mẽ milēlē māl-kī chāṛī karyā. Pōlis tapās-mẽ government-in found property-of backbiting made. Police investigation-in likhnā huā. Dusrā likhnā kōraṭ-mẽ huā. Buḍḍī-nī bōlī, 'maĩ-nī writing became. Second writing court-in became. The-old-dame said, 'I diēlī jabānī pōlis-kē ḍar-sũ dī. Kharā pūchhē tō majē given statement police-of through-fear gave. Truth thou-ask then to-me kuchh mālūm nahĩ. Bēṭē-kū pūchhō.' Bēṭē-nī bōlyā, 'gulgulyã̃-kā niũ anything known is-not. Son-to ask.' The-son said, 'balls-of rain lagyā-tā, tārīk, mhainā, sāl, din, majē mālūm naĩ, us niũ-mẽ fallen-had, date, month, year, day, to-me known is-not, that rain-in majē sārā māl milyā.' Pūrāwā muddē-sīr us-kē-par huā naĩ.
to-me all property was-got.' Evidence conclusive him-of-on became not.
Gulgulyã̃-kā niũ kadī lagyā naĩ. Diēlī jabānī pōlis-kē ḍar-sū.
Balls-of rain ever fell not. Given statement police-of fear-through(-is).
Binā pūrāwē-kē kōraṭ-kī khātrī huī naĩ. 'Chhōrā anjān,' Without evidence-of court-of satisfaction was-made not. 'Boy ignorant(-is),' bōl-kō, 'kuchh-bhī bōltā naĩ; sabab khātrī hōtī naĩ.'
said-having, 'anything is-speaking not; therefore satisfaction becomes not.'

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

There was once a poor old woman who earned her living by spinning thread. She had one son. One day she gave him two balls of thread to take away and sell. As he went along he met a lizard sitting on the top of a hedge, who shook its head in terror at the sight of a man. The boy said, 'Nunkey, if these are for you, you can take them.' So he put the balls on the hedge and went home. His mother asked him for the money resulting from the sale, and he told her that his uncle had asked for them, and that he had given them to him. So she spun some more thread and went off herself to market to sell it, and with the money she got for it bought some half-boiled rice and returned home. A few days afterwards the boy said to his mother, 'I am going off to get the money from Nunkey.' She thought he was talking of his real uncle and said, 'very well.' So he started on his way. On the top of the hedge there was sitting a big lizard, which ran away in terror as soon as it saw him. Said the boy, 'Nunkey, where are you running to? Give me the pice which you owe me for the thread I gave you that day, or else I'll catch you by the tail and dash you to the ground.' He then ran after the lizard. There was a vessel full of rupees in the jungle hard by and over this glided the lizard. The boy thought it was his uncle's property, so he lifted up the filled plate and carried it home. On the way it occurred to him that the rupees might be hollow, so he poured them all from off his head on to the ground. Two of them remained on his head, and these he considered to be solid, but the rest he neglected as being hollow. So he took the two rupees and brought them home to his mother saying, 'two of those which were in the vessel given by Nunkey were solid. The rest were all hollow.' The mother told him to show the others to her, and went and picked them all up and brought them home. Then she bought some wheat and jaggery which she made into balls and fried in ghee. These she scattered over the courtyard and said to her son, 'it has been raining toffee-balls. Go out and pick them up and bring them home to eat.' So he picked them up and sat down to eat them.

A few days afterwards some good-natured friend told the government officers about the treasure trove. The old woman told the police at the inquiry what had occurred. Then she was sent for to the court, and there she said, 'the former statement was made by me through fear of the police. If you want to know the truth, I have nothing to tell. Ask my son.' The boy said, 'I found the property in the rain on the day on which it rained toffee-balls. I cannot give you the date.' There was no other evidence against him. There never was such a thing as a shower of toffee-balls. The magistrate considered that, 'it is plain that the first statement was made through fear of the police. The court can come to no decision without evidence. The boy is an idiot, and says the first thing that comes into his head. He cannot therefore be convicted.'

DAKHINĪ OF MADRAS.

The operations of the Linguistic Survey do not extend to the Presidency of Madras, or to the neighbouring States of Hyderabad and Mysore. I am hence unable to offer any specimens prepared for the Survey in these countries. In order, however, to make the subject complete I give, as an example of the Dakhinī of Madras, the following version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son, as issued by the Madras Auxiliary Bible Society. It will be seen that the language is that illustrated in the preceding grammatical sketch. The case of the agent nowhere occurs, and verbs of saying and asking govern an accusative and not an ablative of the person addressed. Note how, under the influence of the neighbouring Dravidian languages, the use of the relative pronoun is avoided as much as possible. I give a transliteration. An interlinear translation is unnecessary.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

There was once a poor old woman who earned her living by spinning thread. She had one son. One day she gave him two balls of thread to take away and sell. As he went along he met a lizard sitting on the top of a hedge, who shook its head in terror at the sight of a man. The boy said, 'Nunkey, if these are for you, you can take them.' So he put the balls on the hedge and went home. His mother asked him for the money resulting from the sale, and he told her that his uncle had asked for them, and that he had given them to him. So she spun some more thread and went off herself to market to sell it, and with the money she got for it bought some half-boiled rice and returned home. A few days afterwards the boy said to his mother, 'I am going off to get the money from Nunkey.' She thought he was talking of his real uncle and said, 'very well.' So he started on his way. On the top of the hedge there was sitting a big lizard, which ran away in terror as soon as it saw him. Said the boy, 'Nunkey, where are you running to? Give me the pice which you owe me for the thread I gave you that day, or else I'll catch you by the tail and dash you to the ground.' He then ran after the lizard. There was a vessel full of rupees in the jungle hard by and over this glided the lizard. The boy thought it was his uncle's property, so he lifted up the filled plate and carried it home. On the way it occurred to him that the rupees might be hollow, so he poured them all from off his head on to the ground. Two of them remained on his head, and these he considered to be solid, but the rest he neglected as being hollow. So he took the two rupees and brought them home to his mother saying, 'two of those which were in the vessel given by Nunkey were solid. The rest were all hollow.' The mother told him to show the others to her, and went and picked them all up and brought them home. Then she bought some wheat and jaggery which she made into balls and fried in ghee. These she scattered over the courtyard and said to her son, 'it has been raining toffee-balls. Go out and pick them up and bring them home to eat.' So he picked them up and sat down to eat them.

A few days afterwards some good-natured friend told the government officers about the treasure trove. The old woman told the police at the inquiry what had occurred. Then she was sent for to the court, and there she said, 'the former statement was made by me through fear of the police. If you want to know the truth, I have nothing to tell. Ask my son.' The boy said, 'I found the property in the rain on the day on which it rained toffee-balls. I cannot give you the date.' There was no other evidence against him. There never was such a thing as a shower of toffee-balls. The magistrate considered that, 'it is plain that the first statement was made through fear of the police. The court can come to no decision without evidence. The boy is an idiot, and says the first thing that comes into his head. He cannot therefore be convicted.'

DAKHINĪ OF MADRAS.

The operations of the Linguistic Survey do not extend to the Presidency of Madras, or to the neighbouring States of Hyderabad and Mysore. I am hence unable to offer any specimens prepared for the Survey in these countries. In order, however, to make the subject complete I give, as an example of the Dakhinī of Madras, the following version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son, as issued by the Madras Auxiliary Bible Society. It will be seen that the language is that illustrated in the preceding grammatical sketch. The case of the agent nowhere occurs, and verbs of saying and asking govern an accusative and not an ablative of the person addressed. Note how, under the influence of the neighbouring Dravidian languages, the use of the relative pronoun is avoided as much as possible. I give a transliteration. An interlinear translation is unnecessary.

[No. 24.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

HINDŌSTĀNĪ (DAKHINĪ OF MADRAS).

(Madras Auxiliary Bible Society, 1894.)

كسي آدمي كے دو بيٹے تھے - اور اُن مين سے چھوٹا باپ كو كہا اے
باپ مُجھے پہنچتا ہے سو مال كا حِصّہ مُجھے دے اور وہ اپني زندگاني اُن كو
بانٹ ديا - اور بہت دن نہين گُذرے كہ چھوٹا بيٹا سب كُچھہ جمع كر كر
ايک دور كے ملک كا سفر كيا اور وہان اپنا مال بدمعاشي مين اُڑايا - اور
سب خرچ كر چكا سو وقت اُس مُلك مين بڑا قحط پڑا - اور وہ مُحتاج ہونے
لگا - اور وہ اُس مُلک كے ايک باشندے سے جا ملا - اور وہ اُسے اپنے كھيتون
مين سؤر چرانے بھيجا - اور اُسے آرزو تھي كہ سؤر كھاتے تھے سو چھلكون سے
اپنے تئين سير كرے اور كوئي اسكو نہ ديتا تھا - تب ہوش مين آكر كہا
ميرے باپ كے كتنے مزدورن كو بہت سي روٹي ہے اور مَين يہان بھوكھہ
سے مرتا ہون - مَين اٹھكر اپنے باپ كے پاس جاؤنگا اور اُسے كہونگا اے باپ
مين آسمان كے خِلاف اور تيرے حُضور گناہ كيا ہون - اب سے مين تيرا بيٹا كہلانے كے لايق نہين ہون مُجھے اپنے مزدورون مين سے ايک كي مانند بنا -
اور اُٹھكر اپنے باپ كے پاس چلا اور ابھي دور تھا كہ اُس كا باپ اُسے ديكھا
اور رحم كيا اور دوڑكر اُسكو گلے لگايا اور بوسہ ديا - پھر بيٹا اُسے كہا اے باپ
مين آسمان كے خلاف اور تيرے حُضور گناہ كيا ہون اب سے تيرا بيٹا كہلانے

ے لایق نہین ہون - پر باپ اپنے نوکرون کو کہا اچھے سے اچھا جامہ جلدي باہر لاؤ اور اسے پہناؤ اور اُس ے ہاتھہ مین انگوٹھي اور پانؤن مین جوتي دو - اور پلے ہوے بچھڑے کو لاکر ذبح کرو کہ ہم کھاوین اور خوشي مُنّاوین - اِس لیئے کہ یہہ میرا بیٹا مرگیا تھا اور پھر جیا ہی گُم ہُوا تھا اور مِلا ہی اور وہ خوشي کرنا شروع کئے *

اور اُس کا بڑا بیٹا کھیت مین تھا اور جب آکر گھر ے نزدیک پہنچا راگ اور ناچ کي آواز سُنا - اور چھوکرون مین سے ایک کو پاس بُلاکر یہہ کیا ہے پوچھا - وہ اُسے کہا کہ تیرا بھائي آیا ہے اور تیرا باپ اُسے صحیح سلامت پانے سے پلا ہُوا بچھڑا ذبح کیا ہے - تب وہ خفا ہوا اور اندر جانے نہ چاہا - تب اُس کا باپ باہر آکر اُسے منایا - پر وہ جواب مین اپنے باپ کو کہا دیکھہ اتنے برسون سے تیري خدمت کرتا ہون اور کبھي تیرا حکم عدول نہ کیا اور تُو کبھي مجھے اپنے دوستون ے ساتھہ خوشي منانے ے لیئے ایک بکري ے بچے کو نہ دیا - پر جب تیرا یہہ بیٹا جو تیري زندگاني کو کسبیون ے ساتھہ کھا گیا سو آیا تو اُس ے لیئے پلے ہُوئے بچھڑے کو ذبح کیا - اور وہ اُسکو کہا کہ اے لڑکے تُو ہمیشہ میرے پاس ہے اور سب کُچھہ میرا ہے سو تیرا ہے - پر تیرا یہہ بھائي مرگیا تھا اب جیا ہے اور گُم ہُوا تھا ملا ہے سو خوش و خرم ہونا لازم تھا *

[No. 24.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

HINDŌSTĀNĪ (DAKHINĪ OF MADRAS).

(Madras Auxiliary Bible Society, 1894.)

TRANSLITERATION.

Kisī ādmī-kē dō bēṭē thē. Aur un-mẽ-sē chhōṭā bāp-kū kahā, 'ai bāp, mujhē pahunchtā-hai sō māl-kā ḥiṣṣa mujhē dē.' Aur woh apnī zindagānī un-kū bãṭ-diyā. Aur bahut din nahĩ guzrē ki chhōṭā bēṭā sab kuchh jam' kar-kē ēk dūr-kē mulk-kā safar kiyā, aur wahã apnā māl bad-ma'āshī-mẽ uṛāyā. Aur sab kharch kar chukā, sō waqt us mulk-mẽ baṛā qaḥṭ paṛā, aur woh muḥtāj hōnē lagā. Aur woh us mulk-kē ēk bāshindē-sē jā milā, aur woh usē apnē khētõ-mẽ sūar charānē bhējā. Aur usē ārzū thī ki sūar khātē-thē sō chhilkõ-sē apnē taĩ sēr karē, aur kōī us-kū na dētā-thā. Tab hōsh-mẽ ā-kar kahā, 'mērē bāp-kē kitnē mazdūrõ-kū bahut-sī rōṭī hai, aur maĩ yahã bhūkh-sē martā-hũ. Maĩ uṭh-kar apnē bāp-kē pās jāũgā, aur usē kahũgā, "'ai bāp, maĩ āsmān-kē khilāf aur tērē ḥuzūr gunāh kiyā-hũ; ab-sē maĩ tērā bēṭā kahlānē-kē lāiq nahĩ hũ; mujhē apnē mazdūrõ-mẽ-sē ēk-kī mānind banā."' Aur uṭh-kar apnē bāp-kē pās chalā, aur abhī dūr thā ki us-kā bāp usē dēkhā, aur raḥm kiyā, aur dauṛ-kar us-kū galē lagāyā, aur bōsa diyā. Phir bēṭā usē kahā, 'ai bāp, maĩ āsmān-kē khilāf aur tērē ḥuzūr gunāh kiyā-hũ; ab-sē tērā bēṭā kahlānē-kē lāiq nahĩ hũ.' Par bāp apnē naukarõ-kū kahā, 'achchhē-sē achchhā jāma jaldī bāhir lāō, aur isē pahnāō; aur us-kē hāth-mẽ ãgūṭhī, aur pāõ-mẽ jūtī dō; aur palē huē bachhṛē-kū lā-kar zabḥ karō; ki ham khāwẽ aur khūshī manāwẽ; is-liyē ki yeh mērā bēṭā mar-gayā-thā, aur phir jiyā-hai; gum huā thā, aur milā hai.' Aur woh khūshī karnā shurū' kiē.

Aur us-kā baṛā bēṭā khēt-mẽ thā. Aur jab ā-kar ghar-kē nazdīk pahunchā, rāg aur nāch-kī awāz sunā. Aur chhōkrõ-mẽ-sē ēk-kū pās bulā-kar, 'yeh kyā hai?' pūchhā. Woh usē kahā ki, 'tērā bhāī āyā hai, aur tera bap, usē ṣaḥīḥ salāmat pānē-sē, palā-huā bachhṛā zabḥ kiyā hai.' Tab woh khafā huā, aur andar jānē na chāhā. Tab us-kā bāp bāhir ā-kar usē manāyā. Par woh jawāb-mẽ apnē bāp-kū kahā, 'dēkh, itnē barsõ-sē tērī khidmat kartā-hũ, aur kabhī tērā ḥukm-'udūl na kiyā, aur tū kabhī mujhē apnē dōstõ-kē sāth khūshī manānē-kē liyē ēk bakrī-kē bachchē-kū na diyā. Par jab tērā yeh bēṭā, jō tērī zindagānī-kū kasbiyõ-kē sāth khā gayā, sō āyā, tō us-kē liyē palē-huē bachhṛē-kū zabḥ kiyā.' Aur woh us-kū kahā ki, 'ai larkē, tū hamēsha mērē pās hai, aur sab kuchh mērā hai, sō tērā hai. Par tērā yeh bhāī mar gayā thā, ab jiyā-hai; aur gum huā thā, milā hai; sō khūsh o khurram hōnā lāzim thā.'

As another specimen of Madras Dakhinī, I give the fable of the crane and the hawk, taken from Shakespear's grammar. The language is that illustrated by the foregoing grammatical sketch.

[No. 25.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

HINDŌSTĀNĪ (DAKHINĪ OF MADRAS).

(From Shakespear's Grammar, 1843.)

بول گئے هَین کِه ایک دهوبي کِسي نّدي ے کڑے اپنے دهندے
مین سڑك تها - هَور هر دِن ایك بغولے کُو دیکهتا کِه وه ڈهو ے
کِنارے پو بَیٹهتا هَور چیکڑ مین ے کیڑے چُن کر کهاتا هَور اُسپوچ
صبر کرکو چُپ رهتا هَور وهان سُون اپنے گُهونسلے کُو اُڑهکر چلے جاتا *
ایک دِن ایک بِاشه انچِت آ نِکلیا هَور ایک کٹّے تیتر کُو شِکار مار کر
تهوڑا کهایا هَور باقي کا چهوڑ دیکر چل نِکلیا * بغوله یِه دیکهه لیکر
اپنے مین اپے چِنتا کر لیا کِه یِه پنچهي اِتنا چهوٹا اَچهه کر اَیسے
بڑے بڑے جانوران شکار مارتا هَے * مَین اتنا موٹا اَچهه کر اَیسا نِجس
چاره کهاتا هون * سو یِه میري کم بختي هَور هلکي پائیري کا کام
هَے * مَین بهي کي اَیسا بِڑپنا نَین جگاتا هُون * اب سُون مَین
ایسے کِیڑے نَین کهاونگا هَور ایک دفعے کا آسمان پو پکهوٹا مارُونگا *

* نظم *

جو کہ دھوان گھن کے اوپر جاوینگے
ابر مین پھر کاھیکو وہ آوینگے
زندہ دلان ھین سو گگن پر چڑھین
بل سون اپن دل کے او یہان سون اُڑھین

یہہ سمجھہ لیکو اُنے کیڑے کھانا چھوڑ دیا ھور تیتر کبوتر کے شکار پو جپنے لگیا * دھوبي باشہ کا بھي تماشا دیکھیا تھا ھور بغولہ کیڑے کھانا چھوڑ دیکر کبوتر کے کدھن جھانستا ھے سو یہہ بھي دیکھہ لیکو دنگ ھوگیا ھور تماشا دیھکنے لگیا * یکایک کبوتر وھان آنکلیا ھور بغولہ اُڑھکر اُس کبوتر پو جھانسیا * کبوتر پاني کے کدھن ڈھک کر ھور اُسے چوندي دیکر اُسکے آگو سون پٹّا تڑایا * بغولہ اُسپو تٹ کر پاني کے کڑے پو گریا ھور اُسکے پران چیکڑ مین لوت پوت ھوگئے * دھوبي آکر اُسے پکڑ لیا ھور گھر کدھن چل دیا * باٹ مین اُسکا ایک دوست ملکر پوچھیا کہ کیا ھے * دھوبي بولیا یہہ بغولہ ھے * باشہ کا کام کرنے گئے لگون آپیچ سپڑ پڑیا *

[No. 25.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

HINDŌSTĀNĪ (DAKHINĪ OF MADRAS).

(From Shakespear's Grammar, 1843.)

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Bōl-gaē-haĩ ki, ēk dhōbī kisī naddī-kē kaṛkē
They-have-said that, a washerman a-certain river-of on-bank

apnē dhandē-mẽ saṛak thā, haur har din ēk bagẖōlē-kū his-own profession-in engaged was, and every day a crane dēkhtā ki, woh ḍhau-kē kinārē-pō baiṭhtā, haur chīkaṛ-mẽ-kē he-used-to-see that, it stream-of bank-on used-to-sit, and mud-in-of kīṛē chun-kar khātā, haur us-pō-ch ṣabr kar-kō worms picked-up-having used-to-eat, and that-on-even patience made-having chup rahtā haur wahã̄-sũ apnē ghũslē-kū uṛh-kar silent used-to-remain, and there-from his-own nest-to flown-having chalē-jātā. Ēk din ēk bāsẖa anchit ā-nikalyā, haur ēk used-to-go-away. One day a hawk suddenly came-forth, and a kaṭṭē tītar-kū shikār mār-kar thōṛā khāyā, haur bāqī-kā plump partridge (as-)prey struck-having a-little ate, and the-rest-of chhōṛ-dē-kar chal-nikalyā. Bagẖōla yeh dēkh-lē-kar apnē-mẽ apē left-having went-forth. The-crane this noticed-having himself-in himself chintā kar-liyā ki, 'yeh panchhī itnā chhōṭā achh-kar thinking made-for-himself that, 'this bird so small been-having aisē baṛē baṛē jānwarã̄ shikār mārtā-hai. Maĩ itnā mōṭā such big big creatures (as-)prey killing-is. I so stout achh-kar aisā najis chāra khātā-hũ. Sō yeh mērī kambakẖtī haur been-having such filthy food eating-am. So this my bad-fortune and halkī pāērī-kā kām hai. Maĩ bhī kī aisā baṛ-panā naĩ mean origin-of effect is. I also what such greatness not jagātā-hũ? Ab-sũ maĩ aisē kīṛē naĩ khāũgā, haur ēk arousing-am? Now-from I such worms not will-eat, and one daf'ē-kā āsmān-pō pakhōṭā mārũgā.

time-of heaven-on wing I-will-strike.

NAẓM.

VERSE.

(Metre, — ⏑ ⏑ — — ⏑ ⏑ — — ⏑ —.
In the following verse, vowels are marked long or short as required by the metre.)

"Jō ki dhuwā̃ ghan-ke upar jāwẽgē,
"When that smokes clouds-of above will-go,

"Abr-mẽ phir kāhe-ku woh āwẽgē?
"Cloud-in again why they will-come?

"Zinda dilā̃ haĩ, so gagan-par chaṛhẽ̃,
"Living hearts are, they heaven-on may-mount,

"Bal-sũ apan dil-ke o yhā̃-sũ uṛhẽ̃." '
"Force-by own heart-of they here-from may-fly." '

Yeh samajh-lē-kō unē kīṛē khānā chhōṛ-diyā, haur
This consideration-taken-having he worms to-eat abandoned, and tītar kabūtar-kē shikār-pō japnē lagyā. Dhōbī partridge pigeon-of prey-on to-lie-in-wait-for began. The-washerman

bāsha-kā bhī tamāshā dēkhyā-thā, haur baghōla kīṛē khānā
the-hawk-of also the-exhibition seen-had, and the-crane worms to-eat

chhōṛ-dē-kar kabūtar-kē kudhan jhā̃stā-hai, sō yeh bhī abandoned-having pigeon-of direction looking-eagerly-is, so this also dēkh-lē-kō dang hō-gayā, haur tamāshā dēkhnē lagyā.

watched-having surprised became, and the-exhibition to-watch began.

Yakāyak kabūtar wahā̃ ā-nikalyā haur baghōla uṛh-kar us
All-at-once the-pigeon there came-forth and the-crane flown-having that kabūtar-pō jhā̃syā. Kabūtar pānī-kē kudhan ḍhuk-kar pigeon-on looked-eagerly. The-pigeon the-water-of direction turned-having haur usē chōdī dē-kar us-kē āgū-sũ paṭṭā tuṛāyā.

and to-it evasion given-having it-of front-from collar broke (i.e. went-off).

Baghōla us-pō tuṭ-kar pānī-kē kaṛkē-pō giryā, haur us-kē
The-crane it-on swooped-having water-of edge-on fell, and it-of parā̃ chīkaṛ-mẽ lōt-pōt hō-gaē. Dhōbī ā-kar usē feathers mud-in entangled became. The-washerman come-having it pakaṛ-liyā, haur ghar kudhan chal-diyā. Bāṭ-mẽ̃ us-kā ēk dōst seized, and home direction went. Way-on him-of a friend

mil-kō pūchhyā ki, 'kyā hai?' Dhōbī bōlyā, 'yeh met-having asked that, 'what is?' The-washerman said, 'this baghōla hai. Bāsha-kā kām karnē gaē lagū apē-ch crane is. Hawk-of business to-do going while he-himself-even sapaṛ-paṛyā.'

he-was caught.'

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.[1]

They have related that a washerman was engaged in his business on the bank of some river, and every day observed a crane which was seated on the side of the stream, and which picking up the worms from within the mud used to eat them, patiently remaining silent. Then flying thence it used to go to his own nest. One day a hawk came forth suddenly, and having struck as his prey a fine partridge, ate a little, and leaving the rest went away. On seeing this the crane took to thinking within himself, that 'this bird, being so small, hunts and kills such very large creatures; I, being so large, am in the habit of eating such filthy food: this is the effect of my want of fortune and meanness of origin. What! cannot I, too, rouse such greatness! From this time I will not eat such worms, and will for once strike my wing up to heaven.

VERSE.

"When the columns of smoke ascend above the clouds,
"Why should they return with the showers?
"They who are lively of heart will mount up to the firmament,
"By the impulse of their heart alone they will fly hence above." '

Having taken this fancy into his head he left off eating worms, and began to lie in wait for a partridge or pigeon. The washerman had witnessed the exhibition of the hawk, and that the crane, having abandoned eating worms, was looking eagerly towards a pigeon; at beholding which he was struck with surprise, and began to direct his attention to the spectacle. All at once the pigeon came there, and the crane taking wing was intent upon it. The pigeon directing her flight towards the water, and eluding the other, fled away from before him, but the crane, having made a swoop at her, fell slap on the shore of the water, and his wings became entangled in the mire. The washerman then came and seized him, and proceeded towards home. On the way a friend meeting him asked, 'what is this?' The washerman replied, 'this is a crane that was himself caught whilst attempting to do the deed of a hawk.'

---

[1] Shakespear's, with a few verbal alterations.

NAZM.

VERSE.

(Metre, — ⏑ ⏑ — — ⏑ ⏑ — — ⏑ —.
In the following verse, vowels are marked long or short as required by the metre.)

"Jō ki dhuwā̃ ghan-ke upar jāwẽgē,
" When that smokes clouds-of above will-go,

"Abr-mẽ phir kāhe-ku woh āwẽgē?
" Cloud-in again why they will-come?

"Zinda dilā̃ haĩ, so gagan-par charhẽ̃,
" Living hearts are, they heaven-on may-mount,

"Bal-sũ apan dil-ke o yhā̃-sũ uṛhẽ̃." '
" Force-by own heart-of they here-from may-fly." '

Yeh samajh-lē-kō unē kīṛē khānā chhōṛ-diyā, haur
This consideration-taken-having he worms to-eat abandoned, and

tītar kabūtar-kē shikār-pō japnē lagyā. Dhōbī
partridge pigeon-of prey-on to-lie-in-wait-for began. The-washerman

bāsha-kā bhī tamāshā dēkhyā-thā, haur baghōla kīṛē khānā
the-hawk-of also the-exhibition seen-had, and the-crane worms to-eat

chhōṛ-dē-kar kabūtar-kē kudhan jhā̃stā-hai, sō ych bhī abandoned-having pigeon-of direction looking-eagerly-is, so this also

dēkh-lē-kō dang hō-gayā, haur tamāshā dēkhnē lagyā.
watched-having surprised became, and the-exhibition to-watch began.

Yakāyak kabūtar wahā̃ ā-nikalyā haur baghōla uṛh-kar us
All-at-once the-pigeon there came-forth and the-crane flown-having that

kabūtar-pō jhā̃syā. Kabūtar pānī-kē kudhan ḍhuk-kar pigeon-on looked-eagerly. The-pigeon the-water-of direction turned-having haur usē chōdī dē-kar us-kē āgū-sũ paṭṭā tuṛāyā.

and to-it evasion given-having it-of front-from collar broke (i.e. went-off).

Baghōla us-pō tuṭ-kar pānī-kē kaṛkē-pō giryā, haur us-kē
The-crane it-on swooped-having water-of edge-on fell, and it-of

parā̃ chīkaṛ-mẽ̃ lōt-pōt hō-gaē. Dhōbī ā-kar usē feathers mud-in entangled became. The-washerman come-having it

pakaṛ-liyā, haur ghar kudhan chal-diyā. Bāṭ-mẽ̃ us-kā ēk dōst seized, and home direction went. Way-on him-of a friend

mil-kō pūchhyā ki, 'kyā hai?' Dhōbī bōlyā, 'yeh met-having asked that, 'what is?' The-washerman said, 'this baghōla hai. Bāsha-kā kām karnē gaē lagũ apē-ch crane is. Hawk-of business to-do going while he-himself-even

sapaṛ-paṛyā.'
he-was caught.'

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.[1]

They have related that a washerman was engaged in his business on the bank of some river, and every day observed a crane which was seated on the side of the stream, and which picking up the worms from within the mud used to eat them, patiently remaining silent. Then flying thence it used to go to his own nest. One day a hawk came forth suddenly, and having struck as his prey a fine partridge, ate a little, and leaving the rest went away. On seeing this the crane took to thinking within himself, that 'this bird, being so small, hunts and kills such very large creatures; I, being so large, am in the habit of eating such filthy food: this is the effect of my want of fortune and meanness of origin. What! cannot I, too, rouse such greatness! From this time I will not eat such worms, and will for once strike my wing up to heaven.

VERSE.

"When the columns of smoke ascend above the clouds,
"Why should they return with the showers?
"They who are lively of heart will mount up to the firmament,
"By the impulse of their heart alone they will fly hence above." '

Having taken this fancy into his head he left off eating worms, and began to lie in wait for a partridge or pigeon. The washerman had witnessed the exhibition of the hawk, and that the crane, having abandoned eating worms, was looking eagerly towards a pigeon; at beholding which he was struck with surprise, and began to direct his attention to the spectacle. All at once the pigeon came there, and the crane taking wing was intent upon it. The pigeon directing her flight towards the water, and eluding the other, fled away from before him, but the crane, having made a swoop at her, fell slap on the shore of the water, and his wings became entangled in the mire. The washerman then came and seized him, and proceeded towards home. On the way a friend meeting him asked, 'what is this?' The washerman replied, 'this is a crane that was himself caught whilst attempting to do the deed of a hawk.'

---

[1] Shakespear's, with a few verbal alterations.

DAKHINĪ OF BERAR.

The Dakhinī of Berar in no way differs from that spoken in Madras, and specimens of it are not necessary. The same remark applies to the Dakhinī spoken in those districts of the Central Provinces which lie south of the Satpuras, and adjoin Berar and Hyderabad. Although, of course, no definite line can be drawn, we may take the Satpura range, and the connected hills, as the boundary between standard Hindōstānī and the Dakhinī variety.

VERNACULAR HINDŌSTĀNĪ.

The following account of the peculiarities of the Vernacular Hindōstānī of the Upper Doab and Western Rohilkhand is based on the specimens annexed. It will be noticed that many of them have been found to exist in the Hindōstānī of Gujarat and in Dakhinī.

PRONUNCIATION.—Vowels.—There is a strong tendency to prefer the letter ē to ai, and ō to au, thus, we have pēr, not pair, feet; hē, not hai, he is; hẽ, not haĩ, they are; ōr, not aur, and; lōnḍā, not launḍā, a son; dōṛ, not dauṛ, run. Ōr, and, is sometimes weakened to ar, and is then sometimes aspirated and becomes har. In Sahāranpur and Dehra Dun it becomes hōr. Similarly, baiṭh, sit, becomes baṭṭh, which, in the second Meerut specimen, becomes baṭṭ. In other respects vowels are frequently interchanged. Thus we have both kahā and kehā, said, and kuhāṇā, to be called. The letter i, in an unaccented syllable, has become a in sakārī, a hunter; maṭhāī, sweetmeats. In kaṭṭhā, for ikaṭṭhā, in one place, an initial unaccented i has been elided. In ak, for ki, that, i has become a, and the vowel has been transposed. In yād^{a}mī, a man, the vowel y has been prefixed.

Consonants.—The influence of Pañjābī is evidenced by the strong preference shown for cerebral letters. The dental न na, when medial or final, often becomes the cerebral ण ṇa, and the dental ल la, when medial or final, often becomes the cerebral ळ ḷa. The latter letter is unknown to standard Hindī, and to the more eastern dialects, but is common in Rājasthānī, Pañjābī, and Gujarātī. In the manuscripts received from the Upper Doab it is indicated by putting a dot under ल, thus, ल़, but in printing the specimens I have followed the usual custom of writing ळ. Examples of the employment of cerebral ण ṇa are māṇas, a man, for mānus; ap^{a}ṇā, own, for ap^{a}nā; khōwaṇ, to lose, for khōnā; suṇaṇ, to hear, for sun^{a}nā. In likaṛ, for nikal, come out, initial n has become a dental l, and l has become a cerebral ṛ. Examples of ḷ are jaṅgaḷ, a forest; kōḷī, the breast; baḷad, a bullock; bāḷ, hair. If the spelling of the specimens is to be trusted, the change of l to ḷ is not nearly so regular as that of n to ṇ. We often find dental l where we should expect the cerebral letter. Thus we have milẽ-gī, not miḷẽ-gī, she (i.e. it) will be got; chalā, not chaḷā, he went. Perhaps, however, this is due to carelessness in writing.

In standard Hindī and to the east, a medial ड ḍa or ढ ḍha is regularly pronounced ṛa or ṛha. Thus, बड़ा baṛā, not बडा baḍā, great. In the Upper Doab, the ḍa-sound is often preserved. Thus, gāḍī or gāḍḍī (see below), not gāṛī, a cart; baḍā, not baṛā, great; chaḍh^{a}ṇā, not chaṛh^{a}ṇā, to mount. I have, however, noted a few instances of ṛ such as ghōṛā, a horse; chiṛ^{a}yā, a bird; but these may be slips of the pen on the part of the writer. The preference is certainly for the ḍa (or ḍha) sound.

One of the most marked tendencies of this dialect is to double a consonant after an accented long vowel. In this case the preceding long vowel is usually shortened, i.e. ī becomes i, ū becomes u, ē becomes e, and ō becomes o. The only apparent exception is ā, which in writing remains long. It is, however, in such cases pronounced short, not like the u in 'nut', but like a in the German word 'mann'. Thus the sound of the word bāppū, a father, might be represented in English (not Hunterian) spelling by bappoo. So strong is this tendency to double consonants that even the t of the termination of the present participle is doubled after a long vowel. Examples of this doubling are bāppū, a father; bāssanh, a vessel; gāḍḍī, a cart; pāttā, obtaining (present participle of pāṇā); jāttā, going; bhukkhā, hungry; beṭṭā, a son; khettõ-mẽ, in the fields; dekkhā, seen; bhejjā, sent; roṭṭī, bread; chhoṭṭā, small; loggõ-pē, on people; hottā, becoming.

DECLENSION.—Nouns.—There is an oblique form singular of weak nouns which ends in õ or ũ. Thus, gharõ-mẽ, into the house; gharũ par rahā, he stayed at home; gharõ, to the house. The oblique plural sometimes ends in ũ, as in mar^{a}dũ-kā, of men; beṭyũ-kā, of daughters; chokkhē yād^{a}myũ-kā, of good men. In one case, chhol^{a}kã-nē, husks (Muzaffarnagar), we have an oblique plural in ã (as in Dakhinī). The nominative plural of feminine nouns in ī ends in ĩ, as in beṭṭĩ, daughters.

The sign of the case of the agent is nē or nẽ. For the accusative-dative, we have kē, kũ or kō, nũ (a Pañjābī form), and nē. Examples are bāp-kē, (a son has been born) to (my) father; Bīr^{a}bal-kũ, to Bīrbal; bāppū-nũ, to a father; chhol^{a}kã-nē sūr khã-hẽ, the swine are eating husks; bandar-nē us-nē dēkh-liyā, the monkey saw it; maṭhāī-nē chhōṛ-dē, (that) he should give up the sweetmeats. For the locative we have pē and pa, on; and for the ablative settī. In beṭṭē-nē chalā-giyā, the son went away (Muzaffarnagar), we have the agent case used with a neuter verb.

Pronouns.—The pronouns of the first and second persons are somewhat irregular. Their principal forms are as follows:—

	I.	Thou.
Sing. Nom.	mẽ	tū
Agent	mẽ	tẽ
Oblique	majh, mujh	tajh, tujh
Acc.-Dat.	majhē, mujhē	tajhē, tujhē
Genitive	mērā	tērā
Plur. Nom.	ham	tam
Agent	ham-nē	tam-nē
Oblique	ham	tam
Acc.-Dat.	hamẽ	tamẽ
Genitive	hamārā, mhārā	tumhārā, thārā

Note that in the singular these pronouns do not take nē in the case of the agent. Thus, mẽ (not mẽ-nē) bhēj-diyā-thā, I sent; tẽ yā chīj kis-kē-tẽ laī? from whose (house) did you take (i.e. buy) this thing?

The demonstrative pronouns have a feminine form in the nominative. They are as follows:—

	Nom. Masc.	Nom. Fem.
This,	yū, yah	yā
That, he, she, it,	o, ō, oh	wā

In other respects they are as in standard Hindī, except that the Nominative Plural of ō is wẽ.

Other pronominal forms are ap^{a}ṇā, own; jō, jōṇ, who; kōṇ or kē, who?; kē, what? (both substantive and adjective); kai, how many?; kō, any one (obl. kisī); jōṇ-sā, jō-kuchh, whatever; asā, such; ib, now; ibhī, ib-jã, even now; jib is both 'when' and

'then' as elsewhere in Western Hindī dialects; jib-jã̃, thereon; whã̃, whã̃-sī, there; jã̃, where.

CONJUGATION.—Verb substantive.—The present is—

	Sing.	Plur.
1.	hũ̃	hẽ̃
2.	hē	hō
3.	hẽ	hẽ̃

The past is thā, etc., as in the literary form of the dialect.

Active Verb.—The tense which in standard Hindī is mainly used as a present subjunctive, here often retains its original meaning of a present indicative. Thus, mẽ̃ mārũ̃, I strike, or may strike.

The Present Definite is formed by conjugating this simple present (not the present participle) with the present tense of the verb substantive. Thus,—

	Sing.	Plur.
1.	mārũ̃-hũ̃, I am striking	mārẽ̃-hẽ̃
2.	mārē-hē	mārō-hō
3.	mārē-hē	mārẽ̃-hẽ̃

Sometimes the present participle is used as in the literary dialect. Thus, hottā-hẽ, he is becoming; jāttē-hẽ̃, they are going.

The Imperfect is sometimes formed on the same principle as those on which the present definite is formed, substituting the past, for the present, tense of the verb substantive. Thus, mẽ̃ mārũ̃-thā, or mẽ̃ mār^{a}tā thā, I was striking. More usually, this tense is formed as in Rājasthānī and sometimes in Braj Bhākhā, by conjugating an oblique verbal noun in ē, with the past tense of the verb substantive. This form also occurs in the Magahī dialect of Bihārī. Thus, mārē-thā, I, thou, or he was striking, literally, was on striking; mārē-thē, we, you, they were striking. Compare the Old English 'was a-striking.'

Verbs whose roots end in a long vowel are contracted in the present and future. Thus, khã̃-hẽ̃, for khāẽ̃-hẽ̃, they eat; jāũ̃gā, for jāũ̃gā, I shall go; khāgā, for khāēgā, he will eat; khã̃gē, we shall eat.

The Infinitive ends in ṇā (oblique ṇē), or ṇ (oblique the same). Thus, khāṇā, to eat, dative khāṇē-kō, for eating; khōwaṇ, to lose (note the inserted w after ō); paṛaṇ, to fall; bharaṇ-kō, for filling.

The verb kar^{a}ṇā makes its past participle karā or kiyā. Thus, karā-hẽ, or kiyā-hẽ, (I) have done (sin). Jāṇā, to go, has both gayā and the Pañjābī giyā. Dharānā, to place, has its past tense irregularly dharyāyā.

In one place the word for 'it is proper' is given as chahāiyē. In maṭhāī kaḍh^{a}ṇī chāhī, he wished to take out the sweetmeats [literally, the sweetmeat to-be-taken-out (a gerundial adjective) was desired], we have an instructive illustration of the use of a desiderative verb.

In the second specimen from Meerut, we have an irregular conjunctive participle in ũ̃ which is borrowed from Rājasthānī. It is baṭṭũ̃ (for baṭṭhũ̃), having sat.

We have an example of a potential passive in kuhāṇā, to be able to be called.

The usual negative is nahĩ̃, not. Nē and nī are also used. Nī appears to be used with the first person as in mẽ̃ nī chalā, I did not go, and nē with the third person as in usē kō nē dētā, no one used to give to him.

The first specimens of Vernacular Hindōstānī come from the District of Meerut.

[No. I.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

VERNACULAR HINDŌSTĀNĪ. DISTRICT, MEERUT.

SPECIMEN I.

(G. R. Dampier, Esq., I.C.S., 1899.)

एक आदमी-के दो लोन्डे थे । उन-मेँ-तेँ छोटे-नेँ अपणे बाप-सेत्ती कहा ओ बाप तेरे मरे पिच्छे जो कुछ धन धरती मझेँ मिलेँगी वा इभी दे-दे । बाप-नेँ दोनोँ लोन्डोँ-को अपणी माया बाँट-दी । थोरे दिन पीछे छोटा भाई अपणा सारा माल ले-के परदेस-मेँ चला-गया ओर वहाँ बदमाखी-मेँ अपणा नावा खोवण लगा । जिब सारा धन सपड़-गया तो उस देस-मेँ बहोत ठाडा काळ पड़ण लगा । तो ओ गरीब हो-गया । फिर उन-नेँ उस देस-के एक माणस-सेत्ती जा-कर नोकरी माँगी । तो उस माणस-नेँ उसेँ जंगळ-मेँ अपणे सूर चुगावण-की खात्तर भेजा । फिर उसेँ इतनी भूक लगी की जो घास पात सूर खाँ-थे उन-ही-तेँ अपणा पेट भरण-को तयार था । ओर किसी माणस-नेँ उसेँ खाणे-को नहीँ दिया । जिब उसेँ कुछ सोद्धी आई तो उस-नेँ अपणे मन-मेँ कहा मेरे बाप-के धोरे बहोत नोकर हेँ ओर वहाँ कुछ घाटा नहीँ हे ओर मेँ इस देस-मेँ भुक्खा मरूँ-हूँ । मेँ अब उठ-के अपणे बाप-के धोरे जाऊँ ओर उसेँ कहूँगा की ओ बाप मेँ खुदा-के ओर तेरे रूबरू पाप करा-हे । अब मेँ असा नहीँ रहा की तेरा बेटा कुहाया जाऊँ । मझेँ अपणा नोकर कर-लो । ओ उठ-के अपणे बाप-के धोरे गया । जिब ओ अपणे बाप-के घर-तेँ टूर रहा-था तब उस-के बाप-नेँ उसेँ देखा ओर दया भी आ-गई । दोड़-के उस-की कोळी भर-ली ओर पुचकारा ओर उस-का चुम्मा लिया । तो लोन्डे-नेँ कहा ओ बाप मेँ खुदा-के रूबरू ओर तेरे रूबरू पाप किया-हे । मेँ अब असा नहीँ रहा जो तेरा बेटा कुहाया जाऊँ । फिर बाप-नेँ अपणे नोकरोँ-से कहा की सारोँ-मेँ अच्छे लत्ते इस लड़के-को पहाओ ओर उस-की अँगली-मेँ गुन्टी ओर पेर-मेँ जुत्ता पहाओ ओर एक ठाडा बहडा ला-के काटो । हम खाँगे

ओर खुसी मनावें । यू मेरा लोन्डा मर-गया-था ओर अब जी-गया । ओर खोया-गया-था ओर अब मिल-गया-हे । ओर आपस-में खुसी करण लगे ॥

ओर बडा भाई जंगळ-में था । जब जंगळ-तें घर-के धोरे आया तो उन-नें नाचण गावण-की वाज सुणी । फिर उन-नें एक नोकर-को बुला-कर पुँच्छा की या के बात हे । नोकर-नें उसें कहा की तेरा भाई घरों आया-हे ओर तेरा भाई जीता हुआ चला-आया । उस-की खुसी-में तेरे बाप-नें बहडा काटा-हे । इतनी बात सुण-के बडा भाई क्रोह-में आ-के घरों-में नहीं गया । फिर उस-के बाप-नें बहार आ-के उसें कहा तू भीतर चल । फिर उन-नें बाप-को जुबाब दिया की में घणें दिनों-से तेरी टहल करूँ ओर कदी तेरे हुक्म बिना कोई काम नहीं करा । तो फिर भी इब-लो मझें एक बकरी-का बच्चा भी नहीं दिया जिसे में काट-के अपणे यारों-का नोत्ता दूँ । पर जिब यू तेरा लोन्डा आया जिन-नें तेरा धन कंचन्यों-में खो दिया तो इस-की खात्तर ठाडा बहडा मार-दिया । फिर बाप-नें बडे भाई-तें कहा की अरः लोन्डे तू धुर-तें मेरे धोरे रहा-हे ओर जो मेरा हे सो-ही तेरा हे । फिर न्यों चहाइये की हम मिल-के शादी करें । तेरा भाई मरा-हुआ जी-गया । ओर खोया-गया-था ओर अब मिला-हे ॥

[No. I.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

VERNACULAR HINDŌSTĀNĪ. DISTRICT, MEERUT.

SPECIMEN I.

(G. R. Dampier, Esq., I.C.S., 1899.)

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ēk ādᵃmī-kē dō lōnḍē thē. Un-mẽ̃-tẽ̃ chhōṭē-nẽ̃ apᵃṇē
One man-of two sons were. Them-in-from the-younger-by his-own bāp-settī kahā, 'O bāp, tērē marē pichchhē jō-kuchh dhan father-to it-was-said, 'O father, thy death after whatever property dharᵃtī majhẽ̃ milẽ̃gī, wā ibhī dē-dē.' Bāp-nẽ̃ dōnõ̃ land to-me will-be-given, that now give.' The-father-by the-two lōnḍõ̃-kō apᵃṇī māyā bā̃ṭ-dī. Thōṛē din pīchhē sons-to his-own property was-divided-(and-)given. A-few days after chhōṭā bhāī apᵃṇā sārā māl lē-kē par-dēs-mẽ̃ the-younger brother his-own all property taken-having foreign-land-into chalā-gayā, ōr wahā̃ bad-māssī-mẽ̃ apᵃṇā nāwā khōwaṇ lagā. Jib went-away, and there evil-conduct-in his-own goods to-lose began. When sārā dhan sapaṛ-gayā, tō us dēs-mẽ̃ bahōt ṭhāḍā kāḷ paṛaṇ all property was-spent, then that country-in very mighty famine to-fall lagā; tō ō garīb hō-gayā. Phir un-nẽ̃ us dēs-kē ēk began; then he poor became. Then him-by that country-of one māṇas-settī jā-kar nōkᵃrī mā̃gī. Tō us māṇas-nẽ̃ usẽ̃ man-to gone-having service was-prayed-for. Then that man-by as-for-him jaṅgaḷ-mẽ̃ apᵃṇē sūr chugāwaṇ-kī-khāttar bhējā. Phir usẽ̃ forest-in his-own swine feeding-of-for it-was-sent. Then to-him itᵃnī bhūk lagī kī jō ghās pāt sūr khā̃-thē so-much hunger-by was-attached that what grass leaves the-swine eating-were un-hī-tẽ̃ apᵃṇā pēṭ bharaṇ-kō tayār thā; ōr kisī māṇas-nẽ̃ usẽ̃ them-with his-own belly filling-for ready he-was; and any man-by to-him khāṇē-kō nahī̃ diyā. Jib usẽ̃ kuchh soddhī āī, tō us-nẽ̃ eating-for not was-given. When to-him some sense came, then him-by apᵃṇē man-mẽ̃ kahā, 'mērē bāp-kē dhōrē bahōt nōkar hẽ̃, ōr his-own mind-in it-was-said, 'my father-of near many servants are, and wahã̃ kuchh ghāṭā nahĩ̃ hē; ōr mẽ̃ is dēs-mẽ̃ bhukkhā there anything wanting not is; and I this country-in hungry marũ̃-hũ̃. Mẽ̃ ab uṭh-kē apᵃṇē bāp-kē dhōrē jāũ̃ ōr dying-am. I now arisen-having my-own father-of near (will-)go and usẽ̃ kahũ̃gā kī, "Ō bāp, mẽ̃ Khudā-kē ōr tērē rūbᵃrū pāp to-him I-will-say that, "O father, by-me God-of and of-thee before sin karā-hē. Ab mẽ̃ asā nahĩ̃ rahā kī tērā bēṭā kuhāyā-jāũ̃.

been-done-is. Now I such not remained that thy son called-I-may-be.
Majhẽ̃ apᵃṇā nōkar kar-lō."' Ō uṭh-kē apᵃṇē bāp-kē Me thy-own servant appoint."' He arisen-having his-own father-of dhōrē gayā. Jib ō apᵃṇē bāp-kē ghar-tẽ̃ dūr rahā-thā, near went. When he his-own father-of house-from far-off remained-was, tab us-kē bāp-nẽ̃ usẽ̃ dēkhā ōr dayā bhī ā-gaī. Dōṛ-kē then his father-by as-for-him it-was-seen and pity also came. Run-having us-kī kōḷī bhar-lī, ōr puchᵃkārā, ōr us-kā chumbhā him-of embrace was-filled-and-taken, and he-was-kissed, and him-of kiss liyā. Tō lōnḍē-nẽ̃ kahā, 'Ō bāp, mẽ̃ Khudā-kē rūbᵃrū was-taken. Then the-son-by it-was-said, 'O father, by-me God-of before ōr tērē rūbᵃrū pāp kiyā-hē. Mẽ̃ ab asā nahĩ̃ rahā jō and thee-of before sin been-done-is. I now such not remained that tērā bēṭā kuhāyā-jāũ̃.' Phir bāp-nẽ̃ apᵃṇē nōkᵃrõ̃-sē kahā thy son called-I-may-be.' Again the-father-by his-own servants-to it-was-said kī, 'sārõ̃-mẽ̃ achchhē lattē is laṛᵃkē-kō parhāō, ōr us-kī ãgᵃlī-mẽ̃ that, 'all-in good clothes this son-to clothe, and his finger-on gunṭṭhī ōr pēr-mẽ̃ juttā parhāō; ōr ēk ṭhāḍā bahᵃḍā lā-kē a-ring and feet-on shoes clothe; and one fine calf brought-having kāṭō. Ham khãgē ōr khusī manāwẽ̃. Yũ mērā slaughter. We shall-eat and merriment shall-celebrate. This my lōnḍā mar-gayā-thā, ōr ab jī-gayā; ōr khōyā-gayā-thā, ōr ab son dead-gone-was, and now alive-went; and lost-gone-was, and now mil-gayā-hē.' Ōr āpas-mẽ̃ khusī karaṇ lagē.
found-gone-is.' And themselves-among merriment to-make (they-)began.

Ōr baḍā bhāī jaṅgaḷ-mẽ̃ thā. Jab jaṅgaḷ-tẽ̃ ghar-kē And the-elder brother forest-in was. When forest-from house-of dhōrē āyā tō un-nẽ̃ nāchaṇ gāwaṇ-kī wāj suṇī. Phir near he-came then him-by dancing singing-of sound was-heard. Then un-nẽ̃ ēk nōkar-kō bulā-kar pũchchhā kī, 'yā kē bāt him-by one servant-to called-having it-was-asked that, 'this what matter hē?' Nōkar-nẽ̃ usẽ̃ kahā kī, 'tērā bhāī gharõ̃ is?' The-servant-by to-him it-was-said that, 'thy brother to-the-house

āyā-hē, ōr tērā bhāī jītā-huā chalā-āyā; us-kī khusī-mẽ tērē come-is, and thy brother alive-been arrived; this-of happiness-in thy bāp-nẽ bah^{a}ḍā kāṭā-hē.' It^{a}ṇī bāt suṇ-kē baḍā father-by calf slaughtered-is.' So-much talk heard-having the-elder bhāi chhōh-mẽ ā-kē gharõ-mẽ nahĩ gayā. Phir us-kē bāp-nẽ brother wrath-in come-having house-into not went. Then his father-by bahār ā-kē usẽ kahā, 'tū bhītar chal.' Phir un-nẽ outside come-having to-him it-was-said, 'thou inside go.' Then him-by bāp-kō jubāb diyā kī, 'mẽ ghaṇẽ dinõ-sē tērī ṭahal the-father-to answer was-given that, 'I many days-from thy service karũ, ōr kadī tērē hukm-binā kōī kām nahĩ karā; tō do, and ever thy order-without any work not was-done; yet phir-bhī ib-lō majhẽ ēk bak^{a}rī-kā bachchā bhī nahĩ diyā, again-even now-up-to to-me one she-goat-of young-one even not was-given, jisē mẽ kāṭ-kē ap^{a}ṇē yārõ-kā nottā dũ. Par jib which I slaughtered-having my-own friends-of feast I-may-give. But when yū tērā lōṇḍā āyā, jin-nẽ tērā dhan kañchanyõ-mẽ khō-diyā, this thy son came, whom-by thy fortune harlots-among was-wasted-away, tō is-kī khāttar ṭhāḍā bah^{a}ḍā mār-diyā.' Phir bāp-nẽ then this-one-of for the-fine calf was-killed.' Again the-father-by baḍē bhāī-tẽ kahā kī, 'araḥ lōṇḍē, tū dhur-tẽ mērē dhōrē elder brother-to it-was-said that, 'O son, thou long-from my near rahā-hē, ō jō mērā hē sõ-hī tērā hē. Phir nyõ remained-art, and what mine is that-very thine is. Yet thus chahāiyē kī ham mil-kē śādī karẽ; tērā bhāī it-behoved that we united-having rejoicing should-make; thy brother marā-huā, jī-gayā; ōr khōyā-gayā-thā, ōr ab milā-hē.'
dead-was, alive-went; and lost-gone-was, and now found-is.'

[No. 2.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

VERNACULAR HINDŌSTĀNĪ. DISTRICT, MEERUT.

SPECIMEN II.

A FOLK-SONG.

(Sis Rām Brāhman.)

क्यौं धक्के खाता फिरे भरम-के टट्टू ।
जो लिखा करम-का मिल-जागा घर बट्टूँ ॥

क्यौं सिर-पे जटा बाँध-के बाँध लइ चुन्ड्या ।
टहाँ सँकड़ौं मुन्ड मुँडा-के मर-गय मुन्ड्या ॥ क्यौं दिया काख-में तुम्बी कुत्तक कुन्ड्या । क्यौं मुँह-के चाऊ लपेट बग-गय डुन्ड्या ॥
दिल साफ नहीं तो तुम हो नीखट्टू ।
जो लिखा करम-का मिल-जागा घर बट्टूँ ॥

क्यौं भसम रमावे क्यौं ओढ़े सिग-छाला ।
क्यौं पहर कंठ-में फिरे काठ-की माला ॥
क्यौं फुँक-फुँक-के किया आग-माँह तन काला ।
प्रभु-से मिलणे-का हे एक पंथ नीराला ॥
गफलत-का परदा खोल-दे काणे मट्टू ।
जो लिखा करम-का मिल-जागा घर बट्टूँ ॥

क्यौं ऊँची आवाज-से जा-के अलख जगावे ।
ओ सोवे तो फिर कोण जगाणे पावे ॥
तू बजा-के चिमटा किस-कु घोर सुनावे ।
ओ घट-घट-की सुनता-हे बेद न्योंही गावे ॥
माँगण-की तरयाँ माँग उतणी-के मट्टू ।
जो लिखा करम-का मिल-जागा घर बट्टूँ ॥

जो पावेगा सो घर बेठे-ही पावेगा ।
बण-बण-के भटके-से कुछ हाथ नहीं आवेगा ॥
जो सत-की मिहनत कर-कर-के खावेगा । उस-के बेड़े-को अलख पार लँघावेगा ॥ कहे सिस-राम मेरे लगा ग्यान-का चट्टू ।
जो लिखा करम-का मिल-जागा घर बट्टू ॥

[No. 2.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

VERNACULAR HINDŌSTĀNĪ. DISTRICT, MEERUT.

SPECIMEN II.

A FOLK-SONG.

(Sis Rām Brāhman.)

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Kyõ dhakkē khātā phirē bharama-kē ṭaṭṭū ?
Why pushes eating wanderest-thou deluded-having-become O-pony ?
Jō likhā karama-kā mila-jāgā ghara baṭṭũ.
What written fate-of will-be-got at-home sitting.

Kyõ sira-pē jaṭā bā̃dha-ke bā̃dha-laï chunḍyā ?
Why head-on matted-hair tied-having bindest-thou a-top-knot ?
Yhā̃ sẽkaṛõ munḍa mũḍā-ke mara-gaya munḍyā.
Here hundreds head shaved-having died ascetics.
Kyõ diyā kākha-mẽ tumbī kuttaka kunḍyā ?
Why was-placed armpit-in gourd mace cup ?
Kyõ mũha-kē chāḷa lapēṭa baṇa-gaya Ḍunḍyā ?
Why mouth-of fine-cloth having-wrapped becamest(-thou) a-Jain ?
Dila sāpha nahī tō tuma hō nīkhaṭṭū.
Heart clean not then you are worthless.
Jō likhā karama-kā mila-jāgā ghara baṭṭũ.
What written fate-of will-be-got at-home sitting.

Kyõ bhasama ramāwē kyõ ōṛhē mriga-chhālā ?
Why ashes dost-thou-put why dost-thou-wear deer-skin ?
Kyõ pahara kaṇṭha-mẽ phirē kāṭha-kī mālā ?
Why wearing neck-on dost-thou-wander wood-of necklace ?
Kyõ phũka-phũka-kē kiyā āga-mā̃ha tana kālā ?
Why burnt-burnt-having was-made fire-in body black ?
Prabhu-sē milaṇē-kā hē ēka pantha nīrālā.
God-with meeting-of is one path separate.
Gaphalata-kā paradā khōla-dē kāṇē maṭṭū !
Negligence-of the-veil open O-one-eyed vain-one !
Jō likhā karama-kā mila-jāgā ghara baṭṭũ.
What written fate-of will-be-got at-home sitting.

Kyō ũchī āwāja-sē jā-kē alakha jagāwē?
Why high voice-with gone-having God dost-thou-awaken?

Ō sōwē tō phira kōṇa jagāṇē pāwē?
He sleeps then again who to-awaken is-able?

Tū bajā-ke chimaṭā kisa-ku ghōra sunāwē?
Thou sounded-having tongs whom a-voice art-thou-causing-to-hear?

Ō ghaṭa-ghaṭa-kī sunatā-hē, bēda nyõhī gāwē.
He heart-heart-of (-voice) hearing-is, vēda thus-even sings.

Mãgaṇa-kī taryã mãga, utaṇī-kē maṭṭū!
Asking-of the-manner ask, barren-woman-of O-vain-one!

Jō likhā karama-kā mila-jāgā ghara baṭṭũ.
What written fate-of will-be-got at-home sitting.

Jō pāwēgā sō ghara bēṭhē-hī pāwēgā.
What thou-wilt-get that at-home sitting-even thou-wilt-get.

Baṇa-baṇa-kē bhaṭakē-sē kuchha hātha nahĩ āwēgā.
Forest-forest-of wandering-from anything hand not will-come.

Jō sata-kī mihanata kara-kara-kē khāwēgā,
Who truth-of labour done-done-having will-eat,

Usa-kē bēṛē-kō alakha pāra lãghāwēgā.
Him-of the-raft God across will-take-over.

Kahe Sisa-Rāma mērē lagā gyāna-kā chaṭṭū.
Saith Sis-Rām mine became knowledge-of the-plaything.

Jō likhā karama-kā mila-jāgā ghara baṭṭũ.
What written fate-of will-be-got at-home sitting.

In the above the word baṭṭũ is altered, for the sake of rhyme, from baṭṭhũ, i.e. baiṭhũ, a Rājasthānī form of the conjunctive participle.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

Why, thrust here and there, dost thou, O horse, wander about in illusion? That which is written in thy fate will come equally certainly to thee, though thou sit at home.

Why dost thou tie up thy matted hair, why dost thou bind the topknot (of a faqīr)? In this world have hundreds of shaveling ascetics shaved their heads and died. Why holdest thou under thine arm the ascetic's gourd and mace and cup? Why wrappest thou (an insect-strainer of) fine cloth before thy mouth, and becomest thou a Jain? If the heart be not clean then art thou worthless. That which is written in thy fate will come equally certain to thee, though thou sit at home.

Why dost thou cover thy body with ashes, and why dost thou wear the ascetic's deer-skin? Why dost thou wander about with a wooden rosary around thy neck? Why dost thou torture thyself, and burn thy body black in the fire? There is but one and one only path for finding the Lord. O one-eyed Vain One, tear the veil of ignorance from off thy face. That which is written in thy fate will come equally certain to thee, though thou sit at home.

Why with loud cries dost thou endeavour to awaken the Invisible One? If He sleeps, then who is there who can awaken Him? When thou soundest thy tongs, to whom art thou addressing thy cries? It is the voice of each heart that He heareth, as is sung in the Vēdas themselves. O thou Vain One, Son of a Barren Woman, ask thou the manner of asking. That which is written in thy fate will come equally certain to thee, though thou sit at home.

What thou wouldst get, that wilt thou get if thou sit at home. Naught will come to thee from wandering through the forests. Who eateth the fruit of honest labour, his raft will the Invisible One guide over the ocean of existence. Saith Sis-Rām, 'to me hath fallen the (excellent) toy of knowledge. That which is written in my fate will come equally certain to me, though I sit at home.'

[No. 3.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

VERNACULAR HINDŌSTĀNĪ. DISTRICT, MEERUT.

SPECIMEN III.

A FOLK-TALE.

(G. R. Dampier, Esq., I.C.S., 1899.)

एक दिन अकबर बादसा-नें बीरबल-तें पुच्छा ओ बीरबल तू हमें बऊद-का दूध ला-दे ओर नहीं तेरी खाल कढवाई जागी । बीरबल-कूँ बहोत रंज हुआ ओर हुन्तर आण-के अपने घरूँ पड़-रहा । बीरबल-की लोन्डी-नें अपणे मन-में कहा की आज तो मेरा बाप बहोत सोच-में पड़ा-हे । आज के जाणे इस-का के ढब हुआ । जिब उन-नें अपणे बाप-कूँ पुच्छा अरे बाप आज तेरा के ढब हे । बीरबल-नें कहा की बेटी कुछ ना हे । फेर लोन्डी-नें पुच्छा की पिता अपणे मन-का भेद बताणा चाहये । जिब उन-नें कहा की बादसा-नें कहा की के-तो बऊद-का दूध ला-दे नहीं तभें कोल्हू-में पिऊवाऊँगा । मेरे-तें कुछ नहीं कहा गया ओर हाम्मी भर-के आया-हूँ ओर कुछ राह नहीं पात्ता। लोन्डी-नें कहा की पिता-जी या तो कुछ-भी बात नाँ हे । तुम बेफिकर रहो । बीरबल उठ खड़ा हुआ ॥

खेर जिब तड़का हुआ तो उस लोन्डी-नें के काम करा की अपणा सब सिंगार करा ओर बहोत अच्छी पुसाक पहर-के ओर कुछ कपड़े हाथ-में ले-के बादसा-के किले-के आगे-कूँ लिकड़ जमना-पर गई । बादसा किले-पे चढ-के जमना-की सेल कर-रहे-थे । अकबर-नें देखा की बीरबल-की लोन्डी लत्ते धो-रही-हे । बादसा-नें लोन्डी-तें पुच्छा की ए लोन्डी आज क्यों तड़के-ही-तड़क लत्ते धोवण आई-हे । जिब उस लोन्डी-नें कहा की बादसा आज मेरे बाप-के लड़का हुआ-हे । बादसा-नें छोह-में आ-के कहा की अरी लोन्डी भला कहीं मरदूँ-के भी लोन्डे होते सुणे हें । लोन्डी-नें कहा की बादसा भला कहीं

बऊट-के भी दूध होता सुणा-हे । जिव बादसा-कूँ कुछ बोल नहीं आया और लोन्डी-कूँ कह-दिया की तड़के-ही-तड़क बीरबल-कूँ कचहड़ी-में भेज-दे ॥

बीरबल तड़के-ही कचहड़ी-में गया । बादसा-नें पुच्छा की बीरबल लाया बऊट-का दूध । बीरबल-नें कहा की बादसा सलामत में तो कल तड़के-ही लोन्डी-के हाथ भेज दिया-था । बादसा-कूँ कुछ बोल न आया ॥

[No. 3.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

VERNACULAR HINDŌSTĀNĪ. DISTRICT, MEERUT.

SPECIMEN III.

A FOLK-TALE.

(G. R. Dampier, Esq., I.C.S., 1899.)

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ēk din Akᵃbar Bādᵃsā-nẽ Bīrᵃbal-tẽ puchchhā, 'Ō Bīrᵃbal,
One day Akbar the-Emperor-by Bīrbal-to it-was-asked, 'O Bīrbal, tū hamẽ baḷad-kā dūdh lā-dē, ōr nahĩ tērī khāl kaḍhᵃwāī jāgī.'

thou to-me bullock-of milk bring, and not thy skin flayed shall-go.'

Bīrᵃbal-kũ bahōt rañj huā ōr huntar āṇ-kō apᵃṇē Bīrbal-to great anxiety became and therefrom come-having his-own gharũ paṛ-rahā. Bīrᵃbal-kī lōnḍī-nẽ apᵃṇē maṇ-mẽ kahā in-house lay-down. Bīrbal-of daughter-by her-own mind-in it-was-said

kī, 'āj tō mērā bāp bahōt sōch-mẽ paṛā-hē. Āj kē that, 'today indeed my father great anxiety-in fallen-is. Today who jāṇē is-kā kē ḍhab huā.' Jib un-nẽ apᵃṇē bāp-kũ knows this-man-of what manner became.' Then her-by her-own father-to puchchhā, 'arē bāp, āj tērā kē ḍhab hē?'' Bīrᵃbal-nẽ it-was-inquired, 'O father, today thy what manner is?' Bīrbal-by kahā kī, 'bēṭī, kuchh nā hē.' Phēr lōnḍī-nẽ it-was-said that, 'daughter, anything not is.' Again the-daughter-by puchchhā kī, 'pitā, apᵃṇē man-kā bhēd batāṇā chāhᵃyē.'

it-was-asked that, 'father, thy-own mind-of secret to-show is-necessary.'

Jib un-nẽ kahā kī, 'Bādᵃsā-nẽ kahā kī, "kē-tō
Then him-by it-was-said that, 'the-Emperor-by it-was-said that, "either baḷad-kā dūdh lā-dē, nahĩ tajhẽ kōlhū-mẽ piḷᵃwāũgā."

bullock-of milk bring, (or-)not thee the-mill-in I-shall-cause-to-be-pressed."

Mērē-tẽ kuchh nahĩ kahā gayā, ōr hāmmī-bhar-kē āyā-hũ, ōr Me-by anything not said went, and agreed-having come-I-am, and kuchh rāh nahĩ pāttā.' Lōnḍī-nẽ kahā kī, 'pitā-jī, any way not I-(am-)getting.' The-daughter-by it-was-said that, 'father, yā tō kuchh-bhī bāt nā̃ hē. Tum bē-phikar rahō.'

this indeed any-even thing not is. Thou without-anxiety remain.'
Bīrᵃbal uṭh khaṛā huā.
Bīrbal having-arisen standing-up became.

Khēr, jib taṛᵃkā huā, tō us lōnḍī-nē̃ kē kām karā, kī
Well, when dawn became, then that girl-by what deed was-done, that apᵃṇā sab siṅgār karā ōr bahōt achchhī pusāk pahar-kē, her-own all adornment was-made and very good dress put-on-having, ōr kuchh kapᵃṛē hāth-mē̃ lē-kē, Bādᵃsā-kē kilē-kē āgē-kū̃ and some clothes hand-into taken-having, the-Emperor-of fort-of before-to likaṛ Jamᵃnā-par gaī. Bādᵃsā kilē-par chaḍh-kē coming-out the-Jamnā-to went. The-Emperor the-fort-on mounted-having Jamᵃnā-kī sēl kar-rahē-thē. Akᵃbar-nē̃ dēkhā kī Bīrᵃbal-kī the-Jamnā-of survey making-was. Akbar-by it-was-seen that Bīrbal-of lōnḍī lattē dhō-rahī-hē. Bādᵃsā-nē̃ lōnḍī-tē̃ puchchhā the-daughter clothes washing-is. The-Emperor-by the-girl-from it-was-asked kī, 'ē lōnḍī, āj kyō̃ taṛᵃkē-hī-taṛak lattē dhōwaṇ that, 'O girl, today why very-early-in-the-morning clothes to-wash āī-hē?' Jib us lōnḍī-nē̃ kahā kī, 'Bādᵃsā, āj come-art-thou?' Then that daughter-by it-was-said that, 'Emperor, today mērē bāp-kē laṛᵃkā huā-hē.' Bādᵃsā-nē̃ chhōh-mē̃ ā-kē my father-to son has-been.' The-Emperor-by wrath-in come-having kahā ki, 'arī lōnḍī, bhalā, kahī̃ marᵃdū̃-kē bhī lōnḍē hōtē it-was-said that, 'O girl, well, ever men-to also sons being-born suṇē-hē̃.' Lōnḍī-nē̃ kahā kī, 'Bādᵃsā, bhalā, kahī̃ baḷad-kē heard-are.' The-girl-by it-was-said that, 'Emperor, well, ever bullock-of bhī dūdh hōtā suṇā-hē?' Jib Bādᵃsā-kū̃ kuchh bōl nahī̃ āyā. Ōr also milk being heard-is?' Then the-Emperor-to any talk not came. And lōnḍī-kū̃ kah-diyā kī, 'taṛᵃkē-hī-taṛak Bīrᵃbal-kū̃ kachahᵃrī-mē̃ the-girl-to it-was-ordered that, 'early-in-the-morning Bīrbal court-into bhēj-dē.'
send.'

Bīrᵃbal taṛᵃkē-hī kachahᵃṛī-mē̃ gayā. Bādᵃsā-nē̃ Bīrbal early-in-the-morning the-court-in went. The-Emperor-by puchchhā kī, 'Bīrᵃbal, lāyā baḷad-kā dūdh?' Bīrᵃbal-nē̃ it-was-asked that, 'Bīrbal, broughtest(-thou) bullock-of milk?' Bīrbal-by kahā kī, 'Bādᵃsā, salāmat, mē̃ tō kal it-was-said that, 'Emperor, peace(-be-unto-thee), by-me indeed yesterday taṛᵃkē-hī lōnḍī-kē hāth bhēj-diyā-thā.' Bādᵃsā-kū̃ in-the-morning the-daughter-of hand(-by) (it-)sent-was.' The-Emperor-to kuchh bōl na āyā.
any talk not came.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

One day the Emperor Akbar told Bīrbal to bring him some bullock's milk, 'otherwise,' said he, 'I shall have you flayed alive.'[1] Filled with anxiety as to how he was to comply with this order, Bīrbal went home and lay down on his bed. His daughter wondered at his condition, and asked him what was the matter. 'Nothing,' said he. She persisted in enquiring the secret cause of his evident trouble, and at length he said to her, 'the Emperor has ordered me to bring him some bullock's milk, "or else," says he, "I'll have you squeezed in an oil-press." I had no reply to make, and I have come home after having accepted the task.' Said she, 'Father, this is a matter of very slight importance. Don't worry about it.' So Bīrbal got up and went about his daily business.

Well, early next morning, what did this girl do but dress herself up in all her ornaments and fine apparel, and carry a lot of soiled clothes down to the bank of the Jamna, where it flowed below the Emperor's fort. The Emperor was taking a walk on the battlements and saw Bīrbal's daughter washing clothes in the river. 'My girl,' said he, 'why have you come out to wash clothes so early in the morning?' 'Your Majesty,' she replied, 'because my father was brought to bed of a son this morning.' This made the Emperor angry, and he cried, 'you impudent girl, well, upon my word, who ever heard of men having babies?' She answered, 'well, upon my word, your Majesty, who ever heard of bullocks giving milk?' The Emperor had no reply to make to this retort, so he simply told her to tell her father to come to court the first thing the next morning.

Early next morning Bīrbal appeared in court, and the Emperor asked him if he had brought the bullock's milk. He replied, 'your Majesty, peace be upon you, I sent it yesterday by my daughter's hand.' The Emperor had no reply to make to this.

---

[1] The procedure of this operation is to put the sufferer into an oil-press, and squeeze him out of his skin. Hence Bīrbal's reference to it later on. Bīrbal, as court-jester, should have made some witty retort, and thus got out of the difficulty. His ready tongue failed him on this occasion.

The language of the District of Muzaffarnagar is practically the same as that of Meerut. This will be evident from the following specimens, one of which is a portion of the Parable, while the other is a folk-tale.

[No. 4.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

VERNACULAR HINDŌSTĀNĪ. DISTRICT, MUZAFFARNAGAR.

SPECIMEN I.

एक यादमी-के दो बेट्टे थे। उन-में-ते छोट्टे-ने बाप्पू-ते कहा अक बाप्पू जोण-सा हिस्सा माल-में-ते मेरे बाँटे आवे-हे ओह मुझे दे। जिब उस-ने माल उन्हें बाँट दिया छोट्टे बेट्टे-ने थोड़े दिन पाच्छे सब कट्ठा कर-के दूर मुलक-में चला गया ओर व्हाँ-सी अपणा माल लुचपने-में खो-दिया। जिब जाँ ओह सारा खरच-में आ-लिया जिब उस मुलक-में काल पड़-गिया ओर ओह भुक्का हो-गिया। जिब-जाँ उस मुलक-में एक साहूकार-के जा लगा। उस-ने अपणे खेत्तों-में सूर चुगावण भेज्जा। उसे यह चाहणा थी अक जोण-सी छोलकाँ-ने सूर खाँ-हें उन-ते अपणा पेट भर-लूँ। वें भी उसे को ने देता। जिब सोधी-में आ-के केहा अक मेरे बाप्पू-के कितने नौकराँ-कूँ रोट्टी मिलें-हें अर में भुक्का मरूँ। में उठ-के अपणे बाप्पू धोरे जाउँगा अर उस-से कहूँगा हे बाप्पू में असमान की अर तेरे हजूर-की बड़ी खता करी। इब में इस जोगा नहीं रहा अक तेरा बेट्टा कुहाऊँ। मुझे अपणे नौकराँ-में-ते एक-की ढाल बना॥

[No. 4.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

VERNACULAR HINDŌSTĀNĪ. DISTRICT, MUZAFFARNAGAR.

SPECIMEN I.

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ēk yādᵃmī-kē dō beṭṭē thē. Un-mẽ-tē chhoṭṭē-nē bāppū-tē
One man-of two sons were. Them-in-from the-younger-by the-father-to kahā ak, 'bāppū, jōn-sā hissā māl-mẽ-tē mērē bā̃ṭē it-was-said that, 'father, whatever share property-in-from my in-share āwē-hē oh mujhē dē.' Jib us-nē māl unhẽ bā̃ṭ diyā, is-coming that to-me give.' When him-by property to-them dividing was-given, chhoṭṭē beṭṭē-nē thōṛē din pāchhē sab kaṭṭhā kar-kē dūr the-younger son-by a-few days after all together made-having distant mulak-mẽ chalā-gayā, ōr whā̃-sī apᵃṇā māl luchᵃpanē-mẽ country-into it-was-gone-away, and there his-own property debauchery-in khō-diyā. Jib-jā̃ oh sārā kharach-mẽ ā-liyā, jib us was-wasted-away. When that all expenditure-in was-brought, then that mulak-mẽ kāl paṛ-giyā, ōr oh bhukkā hō-giyā. Jib-jā̃ us country-in famine fell, and he hungry became. Then that mulak-mẽ ēk sāhūkār-kē jā lagā. Us-nē country-in one rich-man-to going got-himself-engaged. Him-by apᵃṇē khettõ-mẽ sūr chugāwaṇ bhejjā. Usē yah chāhᵃṇā thī his-own fields-in swine to-feed he-was-sent. To-him this desire was ak, 'jōṇ-sī chholᵃkā̃-nē sūr khā̃-hẽ un-tē apᵃṇā pēṭ that, 'whatever husks swine are-eating those-with my-own belly bhar-lū̃.' Wẽ bhī usē kō nē dētā. Jib sōdhī-mẽ

I-may-fill.' Those even to-him anyone not used-to-give. Then sense-in ā-kē kehā ak, 'mērē bāppū-kē kitᵃnē come-having it-was-said(-by-him) that, 'my father-of how-many naukᵃrõ-kū̃ roṭṭī milẽ-hẽ, ar mẽ bhukkā marū̃. Mẽ uṭh-kē servants-to bread is-given, and I hungry die. I arisen-having apᵃṇē bāppū dhōrē jāū̃gā ar us-sē kahū̃gā, "hē bāppū, mẽ my-own father near will-go and him-to will-say, "O father, by-me

Asᵃmān-kī ar tērē hajūr-kī baṛī khatā karī, ib mẽ is Heaven-of and thy presence-of great sin was-done, now I this-for jōgā nahĩ rahā ak tērā beṭṭā kuhāũ. Mujhē apᵃṇē worthy not remained that thy son I-may-be-called. Me thy-own naukᵃrõ-mẽ-tē ēk-kī ḍhāl banā."' servants-in-from one-of like make."'

[No. 5.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

VERNACULAR HINDŌSTĀNĪ. DISTRICT, MUZAFFARNAGAR.

SPECIMEN II.

A FOLK-TALE.

एक सकारी छोट्टे मुँह-के बास्सन्ह-में थोड़ी मठाई घाल-के जंगल-में बोल्ला-बोल्ला धरयाया। एक बन्दर-ने उस-ने देख-लिया। धोरे गया। मठाई देक्खी। जिभी बास्सन्ह-में हाथ दे-दिया और मुट्ठी भर-के मठाई काढणी चाही। इब जाँ लिकड़े तो किस ढाल लिकड़े। न-तो बर्तन का मुँह चौड़ा होत्ता-हे और न ओह मुट्ठी खोलता-हे। न-तो ओह लोभ-ते हटता न-तूँ उसे अकल रस्ता बताती अक मठाई-ने छोड़-दे और अपणी जान बचाने। होत्ते होत्ते यह हुआ अक सकारी आ-गया हर बन्दर पकड़-लिया। नेठम याही हाल उन लोग्गोँ-पे हे जो माल-के लोभ-में पड़-जात्ते-हैं। अखीर-में उन्हें बड़ा सकारी मौत गिरफदार कर-के ले-जात्ता-हे॥

[No. 5.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

VERNACULAR HINDŌSTĀNĪ. DISTRICT, MUZAFFARNAGAR.

SPECIMEN II.

A FOLK-TALE.

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ēk sakārī chhoṭṭē mũh-kē bāssanh-mẽ̃ thōṛī maṭhāī ghāl-kē
One hunter small mouth-of vessel-in some sweetmeat put-having jaṅgal-mẽ̃ bollā-bollā dharyāyā. Ēk bandar-nē us-nē dēkh-liyā. Dhōrē forest-in silently placed. One monkey-by that was-seen. Near gayā. Maṭhāī dekkhī. Jibhī bāssanh-mẽ̃ hāth dē-diyā, ōr he-went. Sweets he-saw. Then-even vessel-in hand was-put, and muṭṭhī bhar-kē maṭhāī kāḍhᵃṇī chāhī. Ib-jā̃ likᵃṛē, tō fist filled-having sweets to-take-out desired. Now it-may-come-out, then kis ḍhāl likᵃṛē. Na-tō bartan-kā mũh chauṛā what manner it-may-come-out. Not-either vessel-of mouth wide hottā-hai, ōr na oh muṭṭhī khōlᵃtā-hē. Na tō oh lōbh-tē becomes, and not he fist opening-was. Not either he avarice-from haṭᵃtā, na tũ usē akal rastā batātī, ak miṭhāī-nē would-withdraw, not or to-him wisdom a-way would-tell, that sweets chhōṛ-dē, ōr apᵃṇī jān bachāwē. Hottē-hottē he-may-give-up, and his-own life he-may-save. Becoming-becoming yah huā ak sakārī ā-gayā, har bandar pakaṛ-liyā.
this became that the-huntsman arrived, and the-monkey was-captured.
Nēṭham yāhī hāl un loggõ̃-pē hē, jō māl-kē lōbh-mẽ̃ Exactly this state those people-on is, who property-of covetousness-in paṛ-jāttē-hẽ̃. Akhīr-mẽ̃ unhẽ̃ baṛā sakārī maut giraphᵃdār kar-kē falling-are. Last-at them great huntsman death caught made-having lē-jāttā-hē.
takes-away.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

A hunter once put some sweetmeats into a vessel with a narrow mouth, and quietly laid it down in the forest. A monkey saw it and went up to it. He saw the sweets inside and at once put his hand in. He took a fistful and tried to pull his hand out. Come out it must, but how was it to come out? Neither would the mouth of the vessel become wider, nor would he open his fist. He wouldn't give up his greediness, nor did his wits tell him to give up the sweets and save his life. In process of time the hunter arrived, and caught the monkey.

This is exactly the fate of those people who fall into the pit of covetousness. In the end the Great Huntsman, Death, catches them and takes them away.

It is unnecessary to give any example of the Vernacular Hindōstānī of Sahāranpur. It is the same as that exhibited in the preceding specimens. The only peculiarities which I have noted are the use of the word hōr for 'and,' and the less frequent occurrence of doubled consonants.

Similar remarks apply to the dialect of the Dun proper in Dehra Dun District. In Jaunsar-Bawar the language is an altogether different one,—Jaunsārī, a dialect of Western Pahāṛī. The number of speakers of Vernacular Hindōstānī in these two districts is—

Saharanpur	970,000
Dehra Dun	90,000

WESTERN ROHILKHAND.

To the east of the Upper Doab, across the Ganges, lies Rohilkhand. The dialect of Eastern Rohilkhand is Braj Bhākhā and will be subsequently dealt with,—vide pp. 312 ff. Western Rohilkhand includes the State of Rāmpur and the two districts of Moradabad and Bijnaur. Here the dialect is Hindōstānī, and the Vernacular is much nearer the literary form of that speech than even the dialect of the Upper Doab. In fact the only difference is a slight broadening of the pronunciation, by which a final ō becomes au, and a final ē becomes ai. I have also noted the occasional use of kũ̃ instead of kō as the sign of the Accusative-Dative, and the common instrumental in õ̃, as in bhūkhõ̃, by hunger. In other respects the dialect of Western Rohilkhand does not differ from literary Hindōstānī. This will be evident from the following extract from the version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son which comes from Bijnaur.

[No. 6.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

VERNACULAR HINDŌSTĀNĪ. DISTRICT, BIJNAUR.

एक आदमी-के दो बेटे थे। उन-मेँ-से छोटे-ने बाप-से कहा कि जो कुछ मेरे हिस्से-की चीज है मुझे बाँट दे। तब उस-ने उस-के हिस्से-का माल बाँट-दिया। थोड़े दिन बाद छोटा बेटा सब माल-कूँ ले-कर परदेस-को चला गया और वहाँ सब माल कुचाल-मेँ खो-दिया और उस-के पास कुछ नहीँ रहा। उस मुल्क-मेँ भारी काल पड़ा और वुह कंगाल होने लगा। तब उस देस-के एक अमीर-के पास चला गया। उस-ने अपने खेतौँ-मेँ सुवर चराने भेज-दिया। और वुह उन छिलकौँ-से जो सुवर खा-कर छोड़-देते अपना पेट भरता और कोई आदमी उसे कुछ नहीँ देता। फिर जब उस-को सुध आई तब उस-ने सोचा कि मेरे बाप-के बहुत-से मिहंत्यौँ-को खाने-को है और वुह बच रहता-है और मैँ भूखौँ मरता-हूँ। मैँ अपने बाप-के धोरे जाऊँगा॥

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ēk ādᵃmī-kē dō bēṭē thē. Un-mẽ̃-sē chhōṭē-nē bāp-sē
One man-of two sons were. Them-in-from the-younger-by the-father-to kahā ki, 'jō-kuchh mērē hissē-kī chīj hai mujhē bā̃ṭ-dē.'
it-was-said that, 'whatever my share-of thing is to-me dividing-give.'
Tab us-nē us-kē hissē-kā māl bā̃ṭ diyā. Thōṛē din
Then him-by his share-of property having-been-divided was-given. A-few days bād chhōṭā bēṭā sab māl-kū̃ lē-kar par-dēs-kō chalā-gayā, after the-younger son all property taken-having foreign-land-to went-away, aur wahā̃ sab māl kuchāl-maĩ khō-diyā, aur us-kē pās kuchh and there all property evil-conduct-in was-wasted, and him-of near anything nahĩ rahā. Us mulk-maĩ bhārī kāl paṛā aur wuh kaṅgāl hōnē not remained. That country-in heavy famine fell and he indigent to-be lagā. Tab us dēs-kē ēk amīr-kē pās chalā-gayā. Us-nē began. Then that country-of one rich-man-of near he-went. Him-by apᵃnē khētaũ-mẽ̃ suwar charānē bhēj-diyā. Aur wuh un chhilᵃkaũ-sē, his-own fields-in swine to-feed he-was-sent. And he those husks-with, jō suwar khā-kar chhōṛ-dētē, ap^{a}nā pēṭ bhar^{a}tā, which swine having-eaten used-to-leave, his-own belly he-used-to-fill, aur kōī ād^{a}mī usai kuchh nahĩ dētā. Phir jab us-kō sudh and any man to-him anything not used-to-give. Again when him-to sense āī, tab us-nē sōchā ki, 'mērē bāp-kē bahut-sē came, then him-by it-was-thought that, 'my father-of many mihantyaũ-kō khānē-kō hai, aur wuh bach rah^{a}tā-hai, aur maĩ labourers-to eating-for is, and that saved remains, and I bhūkhõ mar^{a}tā-hũ. Maĩ ap^{a}nē bāp-kē dhōrē jāũgā.'

from-hunger dying-am. I my-own father-of near will-go.'

AMBALA.

The boundary line between Western Hindī and Pañjābī passes through the district of Ambala. Taḥṣīls Rupar and Kharar, in the west of the district, speak Pañjābī, the rest of the district Western Hindī. The frontier between the two languages may be taken as the river Ghaggar.

The east of Ambala is separated from Saharanpur by the river Jamna, and the language of the Western Hindī tract of the former district differs very slightly from the vernacular Hindōstānī of the Upper Doab. It has naturally more of a Pañjābī flavour as we go west, and moreover, the speech of the lower castes has a stronger tincture of that language than that of the rest of the people.

For instance, the language spoken round Dera Basi, near the Ghaggar, which is called by its speakers 'Pahār-talī,' or the tongue of the country at the foot of the hills, has even Pañjābī phrases like us-dā, of him, though, on the whole, it is distinctly Hindōstānī. Similarly, a folk-tale from Chachhrauli, which is in the State of Kalsia, in the extreme east of the district, although so near to Saharanpur, has the Pañjābī form laggiā, for 'he began.' This was because the version was in the language of a Chamār grass-cutter.

The average Vernacular Hindōstānī of the Hindī area of Ambala is, however, on the whole remarkably free from Pañjābī influence. This will appear from the two specimens of it which I append, viz. a portion of a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son, and a statement made in court by an accused person. I further give the folk-tale mentioned above, which was told at Chachhrauli by a Chamār.

The district of Ambala includes two portions of the State of Kalsia, and it is convenient to consider the number of speakers of Vernacular Hindōstānī in the three areas together. We must also include some speakers of the same dialect who live in Nizāmat Panjaur of the Patiala State, which lies close to Ambala city. The number of speakers is as follows:—

Ambala proper	506,500
Kalsia (Chachhrauli)	40,233
Kalsia (near Dera Basi)	18,933
Patiala (Panjaur)	136,500
TOTAL for Ambala	702,166

In the specimens which illustrate the average dialect of Ambala we may note the influence of Pañjābī in the use of kihā, for 'said'; bā̃ḍ^{a}nā, not bā̃ṭ^{a}nā, to divide; and the use of nū̃ or nō̃ to indicate the dative. Amongst other local forms, we may note ōr or hōr, and; pach^{a}kārā, not puch^{a}kārā, kissed; mā̃, in; man-nū̃, to me, and the employment of an oblique plural in ā̃, not ō̃, as in dōnā̃-nū̃, to both, and several other examples.

[No. 7.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

VERNACULAR HINDŌSTĀNĪ. DISTRICT, AMBALA.

SPECIMEN I.

एक आदमी-के दो छोकरे थे। उन-माँ-ते छोटे छोकरे-ने अपने बाप-ते किहा कि मन-नूँ जो हिँस्सा घर-माँ-ते आवे-हे ओह मेरा मन-नूँ बाँड-दे। तो बाप-ने दोनाँ-नूँ बाँड-दिया। थोरे दिनाँ पिच्छे ओह छोकरा ढेर-सारा जमा कर-के परदेस चला-गया। वहाँ उस-ने अपना सारा रुपया लचपन्याँ-माँ खो-खिँडा-दिया। ओर जब सारा रुपया बरोबर हो-लिया वहाँ काल पड़ गया। तो फेर वहाँ तंग होन लगा। ओर एक तकड़े-से जिमीँदार-के नोकर जा लगा। उस जिमीँदार-ने उस-नाँ अपने खेताँ-माँ सूँवर चगाने भेजा। उस-के जी-माँ थूँ आई कि जिन छोलकाँ-नाँ सूँवर खायँ-हँ उन-से अपना पेट भर-लूँ। पर उसे कोई नहीँ दे-था। तो फेर उस-नाँ अकल आई कि मेरे बाप-के कितने-ही नोकर रोटी खायँ-हँ होर मैं भूका मरूँ-हूँ। अब मैं अपने बाप-के पास जाऊँगा ओर उस-नाँ कहूँगा कि मेरे-ते रब-का ओर तेरा कसूर हुआ-हे ओर अब मैं इस लायक नहीँ हूँ कि तेरा बेटा कुहाऊँ। मन-नूँ भी अपने नोकराँ-माँ नोकर कर-के राख-ले। फेर ओह वहाँ-ते अपने बाप ओड़ी चला। होर ओह अजाँ दूर था कि उसे देख-के उस-के बाप-ने तरस आया। दोड-के भंफी-पाली ओर उसे पचकारा॥

[No. 7.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

VERNACULAR HINDŌSTĀNĪ. DISTRICT, AMBALA.

SPECIMEN I.

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ēk ādᵃmī-kē dō chhōkᵃrē thē. Un-mã̄-tē chhōṭē chhōkᵃrē-nē
One man-of two sons were. Them-in-from the-younger son-by apᵃnē bāp-tē kihā ki, 'man-nũ̄ jō hĩssā ghar-mã̄-tē āwē-hē his-own father-to it-was-said that, 'me-to what share house-in-from comes oh mērā man-nũ̄ bã̄ḍ-dē.' Tō bāp-nē dōnã̄-nũ̄ bã̄ḍ that mine me-to dividing-give.' Then the-father-by both-to dividing diyā. Thōṛē dinã̄ pichchhē oh chhōkᵃrā ḍhēr-sārā (riches-)were-given. A-few days after that boy heap-all jamā-kar-kē par-dēs chalā-gayā. Wahã̄ us-nē apᵃnā collected-made-having a-foreign-land(-to) went-away. There him-by his-own sārā rupᵃyā luchᵃpanyã̄-mã̄ khō-khĩḍā-diyā. Ōr jab sārā all rupee debauchery-in was-lost-(and-)frittered-away. And when all rupᵃyā barōbar hō-liyā, wahã̄ kāl paṛ-gayā. Tō phēr wahã̄ taṅg money levelled became, there famine fell. Then again there troubled hōn lagā. Ōr ēk takᵃṛē-sē jimĩdār-kē nōkar jā to-be he-began. And one well-to-do landlord-of servant going lagā. Us jimĩdār-nẽ̄ us-nȭ apᵃnē khētã̄-mã̄ sũ̄war got-himself-employed. That landlord-by him-to his-own fields-in swine chagānē bhējā. Us-kē jī-mã̄ yũ̄ āī ki, 'jin chhōlᵃkã̄-nȭ sũ̄war to-feed it-was-sent. His mind-in this came that, 'what husks swine khāyẽ̄-hẽ̄, un-sē apᵃnā pēṭ bhar-lū̃.' Par usē kōī nahĩ are-eating, those-with my-own belly I-may-fill.' But to-him anyone not dē-thā. Tō phēr us-nȭ akal āī ki, 'mērē bāp-kē kitᵃnē-hī was-giving. Then again him-to senses came that, 'my father-of how-many-indeed nōkar rōṭī khāyẽ̄-hẽ̄ hōr mẽ̄ bhūkā marũ̄-hũ̄. Ab mẽ̄ apᵃnē servants bread eat and I hungry am-dying. Now I my-own bāp-kē pās jāũ̄gā ōr us-nȭ kahũ̄gā ki, "mērē-tē Rab-kā aur father-of near will-go and him-to I-will-say that, "me-by God-of and tērā kasūr huā-hē. Ōr ab mẽ̄ is lāyak nahĩ hũ̄ ki thee-of sin has-been-committed. And now I this worthy not am that tērā bēṭā kuhāũ. Man-nũ-bhī apᵃnē nōkᵃrõ-mã̃ nōkar kar-kē thy son I-may-be-called. Me-also thy-own servants-among servant making rākh-lē."' Phēr oh wahã̃-tē apᵃnē bāp ōṛī chalā. Hōr oh ajõ̃ keep."' Again he there-from his-own father towards started. And he yet dūr thā ki usē dēkh-kē us-kē bāp-nē taras āyā. Dōṛ-kē far-off was that him seen-having his father-to compassion came. Run-having jhamphī-pālī ōr usē pachᵃkārā.

embrace-was-taken and as-for-him it-was-kissed.

[No. 8.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

VERNACULAR HINDŌSTĀNĪ. DISTRICT, AMBALA.

SPECIMEN II.

मुसम्मात महताबी मेरी घर-वाली-नूँ ताप चोथ्या दो साल-से आता-था। गात-माँ सत्या नहीँ रही-थी। फेर एक-दिन मुसम्मात महताबी घर गशी खा-कर गिर-पड़ी। उस-के गिर-कर चोट लग-गई। हत्था चक्की-का ओर लकड़ि-याँ वहाँ पड़ी थी। मैं-ने मारी नहीँ हे। मेरे घर-की ओरत हे। फेर नानक-ने कदावत-से थाने-माँ लिखा-दिया कि लेखू ओर हमारी चाची आपस-में घर-में बोल रहे-हैं। फेर मेरी ओरत-नूँ थाने-माँ बुला-लिया। मेरी ओरत-ने कह-दिया कि मन-नूँ मारा नहीँ ओर ना क्हेता-हे। यह मालिक हे मैं ओरत हूँ। फेर हमारा थानेदार साहब-ने चलान कर-दिया॥

[No. 8.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

VERNACULAR HINDŌSTĀNĪ. DISTRICT, AMBALA.

SPECIMEN II.

(Statement in Court of an accused Person.)

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Musammāt Mahªtābī mērī ghar-wālī-nũ̃ tāp chōthyā dō sāl-sē Musammāt Mahtābī my wife-to fever quartan two years-from ātā-thā. Gāt-mã̃ satyā nahĩ̃ rahī-thī. Phēr ēk din Musammāt coming-was. Body-in strength not remaining-was. Again one day Musammāt Mahªtābī ghar gaśī khā-kar gir-paṛī. Us-kē gir-kar Mahtābī (in-)the-house swooning eaten-having fell-down. Her-of fallen-having chōṭ lag-gaī. Hatthā chakkī-kā ōr lakªṛiyã̃ wahã̃ paṛī-thī.

hurt was-caused. The-handle grinding-stone-of and firewood there lying-were.

Mẽ̃-nē mārī nahĩ̃ hē. Mērē ghar-kī ōrat hē. Phēr Nānak-nē Me-by struck not she-is. My house-of woman she-is. Again Nānak-by kadāwat-sē thānē-mã̃ likhā-diyā ki, 'Lēkhū ōr hamārī enmity-from police-station-in it-was-got-written-down that, 'Lēkhū and my chāchī āpas-mẽ̃ ghar-mẽ̃ bōl-rahē-hẽ̃.' Phēr mērī ōrat-nũ̃ aunt each-other-in house-in speaking-are.' Again my wife-to thānē-mã̃ bulā-liyā. Mērī ōrat-nē kah-diyā ki, 'man-nũ̃ mārā police-station-in it-was-called. My wife-by it-was-said that, 'me-to-it struck nahĩ̃, ōr nā chhētā-hē. Yah mālik hē, mẽ̃ ōrat hũ̃.' Phēr hamārā not, and not it-beaten-is. This lord is, I wife am.' Again our thānēdār sāhab-nē chalān kar-diyā.

the-police-sergeant sāhib-by despatch was-made.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

My wife, Musammāt Mahtābī, had been suffering from quartan ague for two years, and had become very weak. One day she fell down in a swoon at the house, and was hurt by the fall. There was the handle of a grinding-mill and some fuel lying there. I did not beat her, she is my wife. It was Nānak who through enmity reported at the police station that I, Lēkhū, and my wife, his aunt, were quarrelling at home. My wife was thereupon sent for to the police station. She stated that no one had beaten her or struck her. That I was her lord and she my wife. The police sergeant then sent us off to court.

The following is a specimen of the dialect of the lower castes of the Ambala district. It is a folk-tale told by a Chamār of Chachhrauli.

Note the way in which a postposition is added, not to the noun itself, but to an oblique genitive, as in chamār-kē-nē, by a chamār. The dialect is fond of omitting aspirates, as in bī for bhī, also; mujē for mujhē, to me; tā for thā, was.

The sign of the case of the agent is nai, nē or nã̃. Both un-nai and an-nai are used for 'by them.' Yũ̃ and jũ̃ both mean 'thus.' Pān is 'five.' The influence of Pañjābī is shown in present participles like jāndā, knowing; in past participles in iā, like laggiā, began, dēkhiā, saw; and in the use of postpositions, such as nāl, with.

[No. 9.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

VERNACULAR HINDŌSTĀNĪ. DISTRICT, AMBALA.

SPECIMEN III.

(DIALECT OF LOWER CASTES.)

इक्क चमार-के-ने अपनी माँ-नूँ किहा अके मैं अपनी बय्यर-नूँ लियाऊँ। बई मुजे पान सेर खिल्लाँ दे-दे। बस उन-माँ-ते गाओने ते। गाड़ी जा-के देखिआ बाल-माँ डावन लग्गिआ। खिल्लाँ उड़-गईं गाओने रह-गए। बस ओह यूँ कहंदा चलिआ गिया अके आवें जाएँ। चिड़ियाँ-माराँ-ने क्षेत-दिया अके म्हारी चिड़ियाँ डाए-दीं। बस उनैं पूक्षनै लग्गिआ भई किक्कर कहूँ। उन-नै किहा कि लै-लै-जाओ अर धर-धर-जाओ। बस साहब गाड़ी मर-गिया-था मुरदा। अन-नै क्षेतिआ कि तू बे-सगन बोलिआ। ऐसी कहो ऐसी कहीं ना होए। बस ओह जूँ बी कहंदा चलिआ गिया। बई ऐसी कहीं ना होई। बाह उन-नों बिआह-वालियाँ-ने क्षेत-दिया अके यूँ कहो बई ऐसी बोंह कहीं हो। अग्गे गाँव-माँ लग रही-ती आग। उन-नाँ क्षेत-दिया कि म्हारे लग-रही आग तू कहे ऐसी सब कहीं हो। ओह अपने गाँव-माँ चलिआ-गिआ अपनी सास पास। बस साँझ-नूँ उसे रताँदा होइ गिया। रोटी-पर बुलाया रोटी खाने-नूँ। सास चुपकी चुपकी लग्गी उस-पा रोटी पावन। उन-ने उठाइ-के थाली मारी अपनी सास-के माथे-नाल बई कुत्ता लग गिया नाल। रात होई ओह पसाव करन गिया। अपने-के बहाने अपनी सास-के माँजे-पर चढ़-गिया। ओह बोली कौन है। कहन लग्गिआ तेरी चोट लग्गी रात। मैं देखन आया। ना बेट्टे मेरे नाहीं लग्गी। बस ओह कहन लग्गिआ जूँ-तान नाहीं मैं जांदा। मेरे माँजे-पर क्षोडि-आ तौ जानागा। क्षोड-आई॥

[No. 9.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

VERNACULAR HINDŌSTĀNĪ. DISTRICT, AMBALA.

SPECIMEN III.

(DIALECT OF LOWER CASTES.)

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ikk chamār-kē-nē ap^{a}nī mã̃-nũ̃ kihā akē, 'maĩ
One leather-worker-by his-own mother-to it-was-said that, 'I ap^{a}nī bayyar-nũ̃ liyāũ̃, baī, mujē pān sēr khillã̃ dē-dē.'
my-own wife bring, O-you, to-me five seers parched-maize give.'
Bas, un-mã̃-tē gāonē tē. Gāṛī jā-kē dēkhiā Enough, them-in-from hard-grains were. Further going it-was-seen bāl-mã̃ ḍāwan laggiā. Khillã̃ uṛ-gaĩ, gāonē wind-in to-be-winnowed began. Parched-grains blew-away, hard-grains rah-gaē. Bas, oh yũ̃ kah^{a}ndā chaliā-giyā akē, 'āwẽ̃ remained. Enough, he thus saying went-on that, 'let-them-come jāẽ̃.' Chiṛiyã̃-mārã̃-nē chhēt-diyā akē, 'mhārī chiṛiyã̃ let-them-go.' Bird-catchers-by he-was-beaten that, 'our birds ḍāē-dĩ.' Bas unaĩ pūchh^{a}nai laggiā, 'bhaī, were-caused-to-fly-away.' Enough them to-ask he-began, 'brother, kikkar kahũ̃?' Un-nai kihā ki, 'lai-lai-jāō, ar how should-I-say?' Them-by it-was-said that, 'take-take-go-away, and dhar-dhar-jāō.' Bas, sāhab, gāṛī mar-giyā-tā mur^{a}dā. An-nai put-put-go.' Enough, sir, further died-gone-was a-corpse. Them-by chhētiā ki, 'tū bē-sagan bōliā, aisī kahō "aisī kahĩ he-was-beaten that, 'thou ill-omen spakest, thus say "such anywhere nā hō."' Bas, oh jũ̃ bī kah^{a}ndā chaliā-giyā, 'baī, not may-be."' Enough, he thus also saying went-on, 'O-you, aisī kahĩ nā hōī.' Bāh, un-nõ̃ biāh-wāliyã̃-nē chhēt-diyā such anywhere not may-be.' Afterwards, him marriage-men-by he-was-beaten akē, 'yũ̃ kahō, "baī, aisī bõ̃h-kahĩ hō."' Aggē that, 'thus say, "O-you, such many-wheres may-be."' Further-on gã̃w-mã̃ lag-rahī-tī āg. Un-nã̃ chhēt-diyā ki 'mhārē village-in raging-was a-fire. They thrashed that '(in-)our(-village) lag-rahī āg, tū kahē, "aisī sab-kahĩ hō."' Oh apᵃnē raging-is a-fire, you say, "so everywhere may-be."' He his-own gãw-mã̃ chaliā-giyā apᵃnī sās pās. Bas, sãjh-nũ̃ village-into went his-own mother-in-law near. Enough, evening-in usē ratã̃dā hōi-giyā. Rōṭī-par bulāyā, rōṭī khānē-nũ̃. to-him night-blindness became. Bread-on he-was-called, bread eating-for.

Sās chupᵃkī chupᵃkī laggī us-pā rōṭī pāwan.
The mother-in-law silently silently began him-near bread to-put.
Un-nē uṭhāi-kē thālī mārī apᵃnī sās-kē māthē-nāl, Him-by raised-having the-dish was-struck his-own mother-in-law-of head-on, baī kuttā lag-giyā-nāl. Rāt hōī oh pasāb karan that a-dog is-joined-with(-him-in-eating). Night became he water to-make giyā. Apᵃnē-kē bahānē apᵃnī sās-kē mãjē-par went. His-own pretence-under his-own mother-in-law-of cot(-on)-to chaṛh-giyā. Oh bōlī 'kaun hai?' Kahan laggiā 'tērī chōṭ he-climbed. She spoke 'who is?' To-say he-began 'thy hurt laggī rāt. Maĩ dēkhan āyā.' 'Nā beṭṭē, mērē was-received at-night. I to-see came.' 'No son, (on-)my(-body) nāhĩ laggī.' Bas, oh kahan laggiā, 'jũ̃-tān nāhĩ maĩ jāndā.
not was-received.' Enough, he to-say began, 'thus not I believing.
Mērē mãjē par chhōḍi-ā, tau jānāgā.' Chhōḍ āī.
My couch on leaving-come, then I-shall-know.' Leaving she-came.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

A cobbler once asked his mother for five seers of parched maize, as he wanted to go off to bring home his wife. Among what she gave him were some hard, unparched grains. As he went along the wind began to winnow his load, and blew away the parched grain, but left the heavy hard ones behind. Not caring a bit, he went along saying, 'let them come, let them go,' meaning it was all the same to him.

As he went along saying this, whom should he meet but some bird-catchers. 'What's that you're saying?' said they. 'Let them come, let them go,' replied he. So they beat him. 'That's not the thing to say to bird-catchers,' said they, 'you have let go the birds we caught.' 'I am very sorry,' said he. 'What should I say?' 'Why, you should say, "catch plenty of 'em, and carry plenty of 'em home,"' answered they.

Well, Sāhib, he went along the road saying, 'catch plenty of 'em, and carry plenty of 'em home,' when whom should he meet but a funeral procession carrying a corpse to the burning-place. 'Catch plenty of 'em, and carry plenty of 'em home,' says he. Then the mourners gave him a thrashing for using ill-omened language. 'I'm very sorry,' says he, 'but what should I say?' 'Why, of course,' replied they, 'when you meet a funeral you should say "ah, may the like of this never happen again."'

So he went along saying, 'ah, may the like of this never happen again,' and, by and bye, he met a wedding party. 'Ah, may the like of this never happen again,' says he. So they beat him. 'What should I say?' says he. 'Why, of course,' answered they, 'when you meet a wedding you should say, "may this happen over and over again."'

So he went along saying, 'may this happen over and over again,' when he came to a village on fire. So the villagers beat him, because he wanted fires like that everywhere.

At length he got to his mother-in-law's house. Evening came, and he was moon-blind. They called him in to dinner. His mother-in-law put his dinner quietly down before him. He thought she was a dog wanting to share his dinner, so he hit her on the head with his dish.

When night fell he had to get up for a certain purpose, and when he came back climbed on to his mother-in-law's bed thinking that it was his own. 'Who's there?' said she. Said he, 'I am only come to see if you are still sore from the blow I gave you.' 'Not a bit, my son,' replied she. Then said he, 'I don't believe it. I won't believe it till you get off my bed.' So she got off.

(Here the story ends abruptly. I am not certain that I have given the correct meaning of the last two sentences. It is the best sense I can make of it.)

BĀNGARŪ, JĀṬŪ OR HARIĀNĪ.

This dialect is spoken in the South-East Panjab, in the country to the north and west of Delhi, on the west of the Jamna. Its habitat is more particularly described in the Introduction (pp. 66 ff.). It is the Vernacular Hindōstānī of the Upper Doab much mixed with Pañjābī and Rājasthānī. A full account of its peculiarities will be found in the description of the Bāngarū of Karnal which follows. Its most prominent characteristics are the oblique plural of substantives which (as in Dakhinī Hindōstānī) follows Pañjābī and Rājasthānī in ending in ã̃, not õ, and the employment of the Rājasthānī verb substantive sũ̃, I am.

BĀNGARŪ OF KARNAL AND PATIALA (NIRWANA).

The Bāngarū of Karnal and of the country round Nirwana in Patiala resembles in many respects the Vernacular Hindōstānī of Muzaffarnagar on the other side of the river Jamna. On the other hand it has all the typical peculiarities of the mixed dialects of the Eastern Panjab. It is in this latter point sharply distinguished from the dialect of Ambala, which is the same as that of the Upper Doab, with a varying amount of peculiarities borrowed from Pañjābī. The specimens of Ambala show hardly any of the marks which distinguish Bāngarū from the dialect of Muzaffarnagar, such, for instance, as the employment of sũ to mean 'I am.' The only book describing Bāngarū that I have seen is Jāṭū, being some grammatical notes and a glossary of the language of the Rohtak Jāṭs, by Mr. E. Joseph, I.C.S., which originally appeared in the Journal and Proceedings of the Asiatic Society of Bengal (N. S.), Vol. VI (1910), pages 693 ff. Free use has been made of this in writing the present account. The following are the main peculiarities of Bāngarū which appear in the specimens.

PRONUNCIATION.

The vowel scale is not very definite. Thus we have kohãũ for kahãũ, I may be called; rehyā for rahā, remained; jubāb for jawāb, an answer; bōhat for bahut, much. The vowel ē and the diphthong ai are freely interchanged. Thus, the postposition of the instrumental and dative, nē, is often written nai, and the postposition of the dative and the ablative is both tē and tai. Similarly, the oblique form of the genitive postposition is both kē and kai. There is the same preference for cerebral ṇ and ḷ which we have noted in the Upper Doab, as in apᵃṇā, own; hōṇā, to be; kāḷ, famine; chaḷaṇ, conduct. When l is doubled, it is protected from cerebralisation, as in chāllᵃṇā, not chāḷḷᵃṇā, to go; ghāllᵃṇā, not ghāḷḷᵃṇā, to send. The sound of ḍ is preferred to that of ṛ, as in baḍā, not baṛā, great. The specimens, however, give a few instances of ṛ, as in paṛā, he fell; nēṛē, near, and Mr. Joseph gives an example of ṛ becoming l in khalā, for khaṛā, erect. There is the same tendency as in the Upper Doab to double medial consonants, with shortening of a preceding long vowel. When the preceding vowel is ā, it is not shortened in writing, but is pronounced short, like the a in the German 'mann.' Examples of this doubling are chāllyā, he went; ghāllyā, he sent; lāggē, they began; rājjī, pleased; bhittar, within; bhukkā, hungry; kāll, tomorrow, but kāl, time, with a real long ā.

DECLENSION.

Nouns are declined much as in ordinary Hindōstānī, except that the oblique plural ends in ãĕ, not õ. We have noted a few sporadic cases of this in the Upper Doab, and some more in Ambala. Here, as in Dakhinī Hindōstānī, Pañjābī, and Rājasthānī, it is the rule. The following are examples of the declension of substantives :—

Sing.		Plur.
Nominative.	Oblique.	Nominative.	Oblique.
ghōṛā, a horse	ghōṛē	ghōṛē	ghōṛã̄
bābbū, a father	bābbū	bābbū	bābbuã̄
din, a day	din	din	dinã̄
khēt, a field	khēt	khēt	khētã̄
māṇas, a man	māṇas	māṇas	māṇ^{a}sã̄
baras, a year	baras	baras	bar^{a}sã̄
chhōrī, a girl	chhōrī	chhōryã̄	chhōryã̄
bayyar, a woman	bayyar	bayyarã̄	bayyarã̄.

Note that the feminine nouns are irregular.

The postpositions are employed rather indefinitely. In several instances, the same postposition is used for more than one case. The genitive takes kā as in ordinary Hindōstānī. Its masculine oblique form is kē or kai. Nē or nai is used not only for the case of the Agent, but also to indicate the dative and the accusative, corresponding to the Hindōstānī kō, thus, par-dēs-nē, to a foreign country. Tī, tē, or tai, is properly the sign of the ablative as in Hindōstānī, but is also used for the dative and the accusative, as in mai-nē chhōrē-tī māryā, I struck the boy. 'In' is mẽ̄ or maĩ. Kānī-tī is given as a sign of the ablative. A good example of the twofold meaning of tī, tē, or tai, is in the sentence un rōpaya-tī us-tī lē-lō, take those rupees from him. Sitē forms an instrumental, as jīwaryã̄-sitē, (bind) with ropes.

The Pronouns show several peculiar forms. The first two personal pronouns are—

		I.	Thou.
Sing.	Nom.	maĩ	thũ̄, tũ̄, taũ.
	Gen.	mērā, marā	tērā, tarā.
	Agent	mai-nē, mannē, mannai	tai-nē, tannē, tannai.
	Dat.	mannē, mannai	tannē, tannai.
Plur.	Nom.	ham, hamẽ̄	tham, tamhẽ̄.
	Gen.	mhārā	thārā.
	Agent	mhā-nē, -nai	thā-nē, -nai.
	Dat.	mhā-nē, -nai	thā-nē, -nai.

The Demonstrative pronouns are yăŭh, yoh, yũ, this; nom. fem. yāh; sing. obl. is; nom. plur. yē, yaĩ; obl. in: ăŭh, oh, he, that; nom. fem. wāh; sing. obl. us; plur. waĩ, oh; obl. un. The relative pronoun is jō or jauṇ, obl. sing. jis. The interrogative pronouns are kauṇ, who? obl. sing. kis; and kē or kai, what? Ib is 'now.'

VERBS.

A.—Auxiliary Verbs and Verbs Substantive.

The present tense is as follows :—

	Sing.	Plur.
1.	sũ̃, sã̃, I am	saĩ, sẽ̃, sã̃.
2.	sai, sē	sō.
3.	sai, sē	saĩ, sẽ̃.

This is the usual form. Sometimes h is substituted for s, so that we get hũ̃, etc.

The past tense is thā, etc., as in Hindōstānī.

B.—Active Verb.

The tense which in Hindōstānī is employed as a present subjunctive, is here also employed in its original sense of a simple present. It is conjugated as follows, closely agreeing with Dakhinī Hindōstānī.

	Sing.	Plur.
1.	mārũ̃, mārã̃, I strike	māraĩ, mārẽ̃, mārã̃.
2.	mārai, mārē	mārō.
3	mārai, mārē	māraĩ, mārẽ̃.

The definite present is formed either by suffixing the present tense of the auxiliary verb to the present participle, as in book-Hindōstānī, or to the simple present, as in the Upper Doab. Thus, maĩ mārᵃdā-sũ̃ or maĩ mārũ̃-sũ̃, I am striking.

The imperfect is formed by conjugating the past tense of the verb substantive with the present participle, as in book-Hindōstānī, or with the verbal noun in ē, as in the Upper Doab. Thus, maĩ mārᵃdā-thā, or maĩ mārē-thā, I was striking. In Rohtak the principle followed is the same as that of the definite present, as in maĩ mārũ̃-thā, I was striking.

The future is formed, on the same principle as in Hindōstānī, by suffixing gā (gē, gī) to the simple present. Thus, mārã̃gā, I shall strike.

The past tenses are formed from the past participle on the usual principle. Thus, mannē māryā, I beat him.

Mr. Joseph gives a past conditional formed either as in Hindōstānī, or, more usually, by suffixing hai to the simple present. The latter principle is that followed by Lahndā, which suffixes hā in the same way. Examples of each form of this tense, given by Mr. Joseph, are :—

(1) Jē thōṛā pānī na hõtā, tō tōṛ charh jātā, if so little water had not been (running), it would have flowed up (on to the fields).

(2) Jē maĩ nyũ̃ karũ̃-hai, tō maĩ marũ̃-(hai), if I had done so, I should have died. As indicated by marks of parenthesis the hai may be omitted in the apodosis.

The present participle is mārᵃdā, with d instead of t.

The past participle is māryā ; masc. obl. mārē ; fem. mārī.

The infinitive is māraṇ or mārᵃṇā.

The irregular verbs seem to be as in ordinary Hindōstānī, except that I have note l, āṇ-kai, having come; and mannē karā-sai, I have done. Jāṇ, to go, has its past participle both gayā and giyā.

The usual negative is nāhī̃. When the verb is in the first person we have also nī, as in maĩ nī jānū̃, I do not know. With the Imperative mat or mat-nā is used, as in mat-nā chaliyō, do not go (Mr. Joseph).

VOCABULARY.

Several peculiar words are used. I have noted the following in the specimens. Many of them are borrowed from Pañjābī.

ab^{a}ṛā, bad.
ak, conj., that = ki.
ar, and.
aṛai, aṛē, here.
as^{c}nā, a son-in-law.
bābbū or bāppū, a father.
baiṭaṇ, to sit.
balāṇ, to summon, call.
bāṇḍaṇ, to divide.
bar^{a}gā, like, resembling.
baṛaṇ, to enter.
bayyar, a woman, a wife.
bērā lēṇ, to visit.
bhājaṇ, to run.
bhukkā, hungry.
bhūṇḍā, bad.
bībī, a sister.
big-jāṇ, to arrive.
birān karaṇ, to destroy.
chāllaṇ, to go.
chhēl or chhail, good.
chhūraṭ, a boy.
chūn, flour.
dand, a tooth.
dhōrē, near.
dhūī, the back.
dhur, distance.
ḍhabī, a friend.
ḍhāṇḍī, a cow.
ḍhūṇḍ, a house.
gail, with.
giyān, matter, affair.
hāṭ, a shop.
ib, ibbī, ibbai, now.
jaryaṭ, a son.
jib, then, also when.
jīmaṇ, to eat.
kamand, a rope ladder.
kaṛai, kaṛē, where?
kēn, the ear.
khaṛaṇ, to stand up.
khās, a wish, desire.
khāttar (postposition), for; (substantive), entertainment, hospitality.
khottā, an ass.
khoṭṭā, sin, wrong-doing.
kuṛ, kaṛ, the back.
lāggaṇ, to begin.
lhawāī, a confectioner.
lōyā, iron.
mand-jāṇ, to be engaged in a thing (governs the infinitive).
mañgaṇ, to beg.
nakk, the nose.
niām, a reward = in'ām.
ōt, advantage, benefit.
pā, near = pās.
pallā, a sheet, a shawl.
sāpphā, a sheet, a handkerchief.
sātt, true.
siōnā, gold.
smāṇā, a forest, jungle.
tawal, haste.
thiyāwaṇ, to be got = Hindī hāth ānā.
turaṇ, to go.
ṭābar, a child.
ṭallā, service.
uṛai, uṛē, there.
wār, delay.

The following specimen comes from Karnal. It was originally written in the Persian character, which does not show the cerebral ṇ and ḷ. These were shown in the transliteration which accompanied the copy in the Persian character. I have transcribed it into the Nāgarī character, which is more appropriate. I also give a transcription in the Roman character. An interlinear translation is unnecessary.

[No. I.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BĀNGARŪ. DISTRICT, KARNAL.

एक माणस-कै दो छोरे थे । उन-मैं-तै छोट्टे छोरे-ने बाप्पू-तै कह्या अक बाप्पू हो धन-का जौण-सा हिस्सा मेरे बाँडे आवे-सै मन्नै दे-दे । तौ उस-ने धन उन्हैं बाँड-दिया । अर थोड़े दिनाँ पाछै छोट्टा छोरा सब कुछ कट्ठा कर-कै परदेस-ने चाल्ल-गया अर उड़ै अपणा धन खोट्टे चळण-मैं खो-दिया । अर जद सारा खो-खिँडा-दिया उस देस-मैं बडा काळ पड़ा अर औह कंगाळ हो-गया । फेर एक साहूकार-कै नौक्कर लाग-गया । उस-ने अपणे खेताँ-मैं सूर चरावण घाल्या । अर उस-ने चाहणा थी अक इन छोल्लकाँ-से जौण-स्याँ-ने सूर खावँ-सैं अपणा पेट भर-ले अक उस-ने कोई नाहीं दे-था । फेर उस-ने सोधी-मैं आण-कै कह्या मेरे बाप्पू-कै कितने कमेरे पेट भर खावँ-सैं अर मैं भुक्का मरूँ सूँ । अर मैं उठ-कै अपणे बाप्पू धोरे चाल्या-जाँगा अर उस-तै कहाँगा अक बाप्पू भगवान-का अर तेरा खोट करा-सै अर इब इस जोग्गा नाहीं सूँ अक मैं तेरा छोरा कोहाऊँ । मन्नै अपणे मिहनतियाँ बरगा बणा-ले । तौ उठ-कै अपणे बाप्पू धोरे गया अर औह दूब्बै टूर था अक उस-ने देख-कै उस-के बाप्पू-ने दया आई भाज-कै गळ ला-लिया अर बोहत चुंब्या । छोरे-ने बाप्पू-तै कह्या बाप्पू मन्ने भगवान-का अर तेरा खोट करा-सै अर इस जोग्गा नाहीं अक तेरा छोरा कोहाऊँ ॥ बाप्पू-ने अपणे नौकराँ-तै कह्या अक सुथरे-तै सुथरे लत्ते काढ ल्याओ अर उस-ने परहाओ अर उस-के हाथ-मैं गूँठी अर पाल्याँ-मैं जोड़ा पर-हाओ अर हम खावँ अर खुसी मणावँ अक मेरा छोरा मर-गया-था इब जी-गया अर खोया-गया-था इब पा-गया । तौ फेर वैं राज्जी होण लाग्गे ॥

उस-का बडा छोरा खेत-मैं था । जद औह घर-कै नेड़े आया गावण अर बजावण-की वाज सुणी । तौ एक नौकर-ने बुला-कै पूछा यौह कै सै । उस-ने उस-तै कह्या अक तेरा भाई आ-रेह्या-सै अर तेरे बाप्पू-ने इस-कौ बडी खात्तर करी इस खात्तर अक उस-ने अच्छा पाया । उस-ने छो-मैं आण-कै नाहीं चाह्या अक भित्तर जावे । तौ उस-के बाप्पू-ने बाहर आण-कै उसे मणाया । उस-ने जुबाब दिया देख मैं तेरे धोरे इतने बरसाँ-तै तेरी टहल करूँ-सूँ अर कधी तेरे हुकुम बिनाँ नाहीं चाह्या पर तन्ने कधी मन्ने बकरी-का बच्चा नाहीं दिया अक अपणे याराँ गैल खुसी मणाऊँ । अर जद यू तेरा छोरा आया जिस-ने तेरा धन कंचण्याँ-मैं उडाया तन्ने उस-की बडी खात्तर करी । उस-ने कह्या अक रे छोरे तौं मेरे धोरे धुर-तै सै अर जो कुछ मेरा सै औही तेरा सै । पर खुसी मणाणा अर राज्जी होणा चाहिये था अक यू तेरा भाई मर-गया-था सो इब जी-गया-सै अर खोया-गया-था इब पा-गया ॥

[No. I.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BĀNGARŪ. DISTRICT, KARNAL.

TRANSLITERATION.

Ēk māṇas-kai dō chhōrē thē. Un-maĩ-tai chhoṭṭē-nē bāppū-tai kahyā ak, 'bāppū hō, dhan-kā jauṇ-sā hissā mērē bā̃ḍē āwē-sai mannai dē-dē.' Tau us-nē dhan unhaĩ bā̃ḍ-diyā. Ar thoṛē dinā̃ pāchhai chhoṭṭā chhōrā sab kuchh kaṭṭhā kar-kē par-dēs-nē chāll-gayā, ar uṛai (there) apᵃṇā dhan khoṭṭē chaḷaṇ-maĩ khō-diyā. Ar jad sārā khō-khĩḍā-diyā us dēs-maĩ baḍā kāḷ paṛā, ar ăŭh kaṅgāḷ hō-gayā. Phēr ēk sāhūkār-kai năŭkkar lāg-gayā. Us-nē apᵃṇē khētā̃-maĩ sūr charāwāṇ ghāllyā. Ar us-nē chāhᵃṇā thī (there was a wish to him) ak in chhollᵃkõ-sē jauṇ-syā̃-nē sūr khāwē̃-saĩ apᵃṇā pēṭ bhar-lē, ak us-nē kōī nāhĩ dē-thā. Phēr us-nē sōdhī-maĩ āṇ-kai kahyā, 'mērē bāppū-kai kitᵃṇē kamērē pēṭ-bhar khāwē̃-saĩ ar maĩ bhukkā marū̃-sū̃. Ar maĩ uṭh-kai apᵃṇē bāppū dhōrē chāllyā-jā̃gā ar us-tai kahā̃gā ak, "bāppū, Bhagᵃwān-kā ar tērā khōṭ karā-sai, ar ib is joggā nāhĩ sū̃ ak maĩ tērā chhōrā kohāū̃. Mannai apᵃṇē mihᵃnᵃtiyā̃ barᵃgā (like) baṇā-lē."' Tau uṭh-kai apᵃṇē bāppū dhōrē gayā, ar ăŭh ibbai (now) dūr thā ak us-nē dēkh-kai us-kē bāppū-nē dayā āī, bhāj-kai gaḷ lā-liyā ar bōhat chumbyā. Chhōrē-nē bāppū-tai kahyā, 'bāppū, mannē Bhagᵃwān-kā ar tērā khōṭ karā-sai, ar is joggā nāhĩ ak tērā chhōrā kohāū̃' Bāppū-nē apᵃṇē naukᵃrā̃-tai kahyā ak, 'suthᵃrē-tai suthᵃrē lattē kaḍh lyāō, ar us-nē parᵃhāō; ar us-kē hāth-maĩ gū̃ṭhī, ar pāhyā̃-maĩ jōṛā parᵃhāō; ar ham khāwē̃ ar khusī maṇāwē̃ ak mērā chhōrā mar-gayā-thā, ib jī-gayā; ar khōyā-gayā-thā, ib pā-gayā.' Tau phēr waĩ rājjī hōṇ lāggē.

Us-kā baḍā chhōrā khēt-maĩ thā. Jad ăŭh ghar-kē nēṛē āyā gāwaṇ ar bajāwaṇ-kī wāj suṇī. Tau ēk naukar-nē bulā-kai pūchhā, 'yăŭh kē sai?' Us-nē us-tai kahyā ak, tērā bhāī ā-rehyā-sai, ar tērē bāppū-nē is-kī baḍī khāttar karī, is khāttar ak us-nē (him) achchhā pāyā.' Us-nē chhō-maĩ āṇ-kai nāhĩ chāhyā ak bhittar jāwē. Tau us-kē bāppū-nē bāhar āṇ-kai usē maṇāyā. Us-nē jubāb diyā, 'dēkh, maĩ tērē dhōrē itᵃnē barᵃsā̃-tai tērī ṭahal karū̃-sū̃, ar kadhī tērē hukum binā̃ nāhĩ chāllyā, par tannē kadhī mannē bakᵃrī-kā bachchā nāhĩ diyā ak apᵃṇē yārā̃ gail (with) khusī maṇāū̃. Ar jad yū tērā chhōrā āyā, jis-nē tērā dhan kañchaṇyā̃-maĩ uḍāyā, tannē us-kī baḍī khāttar karī.' Us-nē kahyā ak, 'rē chhōrē, taū mērē dhōrē dhur-tai (from long) sai, ar jō kuchh mērā sai, auhī tērā sai. Par khusī maṇāṇā ar rājjī hōṇā chāhiyē-thā, ak yū tērā bhāī mar-gayā-thā, sō ib jī-gayā-sai; ar khōyā-gayā-thā, ib pā-gayā.'

BĀNGARŪ (JĀṬŪ).

The Bāngarū of Rohtak, which is locally called Jāṭū, or the language of the Jāṭs, is practically the same as that of the foregoing specimen. The only point to notice is that the letter y is not used in the past participle of verbs. Thus, kahā, not kahyā. We may also note the idiomatic use of the oblique form of the genitive as an oblique base in mērē-sē, from me.

As a specimen I give a short story illustrating the reputed avarice of the people of the Ahīr (or, as they are locally called, Hīr) caste. An Ahīr has promised to give his son-in-law whatever he asks for. When the son-in-law asks for a very petty present, the Ahīr invents all kinds of excuses to get off giving it.

It is printed, as received, in the Persian character. It may also be taken as a specimen of the Jāṭū of Delhī.

[No. 2.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BĀNGARŪ (JĀṬŪ). DISTRICT. ROHTAK.

ایک هیر مانده پڑا تها - اوس کا اسنا بیرا لین آیا - جس دن
اوس کا اسنا آیا اوس دن ٹک ٹک اوس کو چین تهي - هیر اپني
بهاي سے بولا - اک یہہ چهورہ کون سے - اوس کا بهاي بولا - اک
مهارا اسنا سے - هیر نے کها - اک کون سا اسنا سے - وہ بولا - جیکلي
ے گهر والا سے - هیر ني کها اک چودهري آج تیري آني سے میري
چین هوي سے تو میري سے کچهہ مانگ - هیر کا جماي بولا - اک
چودهري میں مانگونگا - تو ناہ دیگا - هیر بولا - ناہ کیون دونگا -
تیري آنے سے میري اوت هوي سے - جو مانگیگا سو دونگا - هیر کا
جماي بولا - اک وہ چوسیگڑ جیلي تیري دهري سے - واہ دیدے - هیر
بولا - اک یاہ جیلے ناهین دونگا - یاہ جیلي تین پیڈهي سے دهري
سے - میرے کاکا حکملا ے هاتهہ کي - جس میں پوري گیل چهلہ - میرے کالجي کي کور - جس پر تین تین بیاہ بگڑ لئے - کیوکر دیدون *

[No. 2.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BĀNGARŪ (JĀṬŪ). DISTRICT, ROHTAK.

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ēk hīr mā̃dā paṛā thā. Us-kā asʰnā bērā-lēṇ āyā.
A Hīr sick fallen was. Him-of son-in-law to-visit came.

Jis din us-kā asʰnā āyā, us din ṭuk-ṭuk us-kō
On-what day him-of the-son-in-law came, on-that day somewhat him-to chain thī. Hīr apʰṇē bhāī-sē bōlā ak, 'yoh chhōrā kauṇ relief was. The-Hīr his-own brother-to said that, 'this youth who sai?' Us-kā bhāī bōlā ak, 'mhārā asʰnā sai.' Hīr-nē is?' Him-of brother said that, 'our son-in-law it-is.' The-Hīr-by kahā ak, 'kauṇ-sā asʰnā sai?' Oh bōlā, 'Jaikalī-it-was-said that, 'which son-in-law is-it?' He said, 'Jaikalīkē(not kā) ghar-wālā sai.' Hīr-nē kahā ak, 'Chaudhʰrī, of house-holder it-is.' The-Hīr-by it-was-said that, 'Chaudhrī, āj tērē āṇē-sē mērī chain huī-sai. Tū mērē-sē kuchh today thy coming-from my relief become-is. Thou my-from something mā̃g.' Hīr-kā jamāī bōlā ak, 'Chaudhʰrī, maĩ mā̃gū̃gā, ask.' The-Hīr-of son-in-law said that, 'Chaudhrī, I shall-ask,
tū nāh dēgā.' Hīr bōlā, 'nāh kyū̃ dū̃gā? Tērē thou not wilt-give.' The-Hīr said, 'not why shall-I-give? Thy āṇē-sē mērī ōt huī-sai. Jō mā̃gēgā, sō dū̃gā.'
coming-from my benefit become-is. What thou-shalt-ask, that I-shall-give.'
Hīr-kā jamāī bōlā ak, 'oh chau-sī̃gaṛ jēḷī tērī
The-Hīr-of son-in-law said that, 'that four-pronged corn-rake thine dharī sai, wāh dē-dē.' Hīr bōlā ak, 'yāh jēḷī nāhī̃ kept is, that give-away.' The-Hīr said that, 'this corn-rake not dū̃gā. Yāh jēḷī tīn pīḍhī-sē dharī sai. Mērē
I-shall-give. This corn-rake three generations-from kept is. My kākā, Ḥukamlā, -kē hāth-kī. Jis-mē̃ pōrī gail chhāla. Mērē father, Hukamlā, -of hand-of. Which-in joint with a-ring. My kālʰjē-kī kōr. Jis-par tīn tīn biyāh bigaṛ liyē.
liver-of piece. Which-on three three marriages spoilt were-taken.
Kyū-kar dē-dū̃?'
How am-I-to-give-away?'

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

There was a certain Ahīr who had fallen sick. His son-in-law came to visit him. It happened that he was a little better on the day that the son-in-law came. He asked his brother who the young fellow was. 'Our son-in-law,' was the reply. 'Which son-in-law?' 'Jaikalī's husband.' Then said the Ahīr to his son-in-law, 'Sir, today I feel better, and it is owing to your coming. You must ask me for a present.' The son-in-law replied, 'Sir, if I do ask, you won't give.' Said the Ahīr, 'why should I not give? It is your coming here which has done me so much good. Ask what you like, and I'll give it you.' Then said the son-in-law, 'give me that four-pronged corn-rake, which you have.' Said the Ahīr, 'that corn-rake is just what I can't give you. I've had it in my family for three generations, and it is the one which my poor old father, Hukamlā, used to work with. Besides it has rings on its joints. It's a regular bit of my heart, so it is. I have broken off three marriages rather than part with it, when it was asked for as part of the dowry. How on earth can I give it?'

[No. 2.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BĀNGARŪ (JĀṬŪ). DISTRICT, ROHTAK.

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ēk hīr mā̃dā paṛā thā. Us-kā asᵃnā bērā-lēṇ āyā.
A Hīr sick fallen was. Him-of son-in-law to-visit came.

Jis din us-kā asᵃnā āyā, us din ṭuk-ṭuk us-kō
On-what day him-of the-son-in-law came, on-that day somewhat him-to chain thī. Hīr apᵃṇē bhāī-sē bōlā ak, 'yoh chhōrā kauṇ relief was. The-Hīr his-own brother-to said that, 'this youth who sai?' Us-kā bhāī bōlā ak, 'mhārā asᵃnā sai.' Hīr-nē is?' Him-of brother said that, 'our son-in-law it-is.' The-Hīr-by kahā ak, 'kauṇ-sā asᵃnā sai?' Oh bōlā, 'Jaikalī-it-was-said that, 'which son-in-law is-it?' He said, 'Jaikalīkē(not kā) ghar-wālā sai.' Hīr-nē kahā ak, 'Chaudhᵃrī, of house-holder it-is.' The-Hīr-by it-was-said that, 'Chaudhrī, āj tērē āṇē-sē mērī chain huī-sai. Tū mērē-sē kuchh today thy coming-from my relief become-is. Thou my-from something mā̃g.' Hīr-kā jamāī bōlā ak, 'Chaudhᵃrī, maĩ mā̃gū̃gā, ask.' The-Hīr-of son-in-law said that, 'Chaudhrī, I shall-ask,
tū nāh dēgā.' Hīr bōlā, 'nāh kyū̃ dū̃gā? Tērē thou not wilt-give.' The-Hīr said, 'not why shall-I-give? Thy āṇē-sē mērī ōt huī-sai. Jō mā̃gēgā, sō dū̃gā.'
coming-from my benefit become-is. What thou-shalt-ask, that I-shall-give.'
Hīr-kā jamāī bōlā ak, 'oh chau-sĩgaṛ jēḷī tērī
The-Hīr-of son-in-law said that, 'that four-pronged corn-rake thine dharī sai, wāh dē-dē.' Hīr bōlā ak, 'yāh jēḷī nāhĩ kept is, that give-away.' The-Hīr said that, 'this corn-rake not dū̃gā. Yāh jēḷī tīn pīḍhī-sē dharī sai. Mērē
I-shall-give. This corn-rake three generations-from kept is. My kākā, Ḥukamlā, -kē hāth-kī. Jis-mē̃ pōrī gail chhāla. Mērē father, Hukamlā, -of hand-of. Which-in joint with a-ring. My kālᵃjē-kī kōr. Jis-par tīn tīn biyāh bigaṛ liyē.
liver-of piece. Which-on three three marriages spoilt were-taken.
Kyū-kar dē-dū̃?'
How am-I-to-give-away?'

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

There was a certain Ahīr who had fallen sick. His son-in-law came to visit him. It happened that he was a little better on the day that the son-in-law came. He asked his brother who the young fellow was. 'Our son-in-law,' was the reply. 'Which son-in-law?' 'Jaikalī's husband.' Then said the Ahīr to his son-in-law, 'Sir, today I feel better, and it is owing to your coming. You must ask me for a present.' The son-in-law replied, 'Sir, if I do ask, you won't give.' Said the Ahīr, 'why should I not give? It is your coming here which has done me so much good. Ask what you like, and I'll give it you.' Then said the son-in-law, 'give me that four-pronged corn-rake, which you have.' Said the Ahīr, 'that corn-rake is just what I can't give you. I've had it in my family for three generations, and it is the one which my poor old father, Hukamlā, used to work with. Besides it has rings on its joints. It's a regular bit of my heart, so it is. I have broken off three marriages rather than part with it, when it was asked for as part of the dowry. How on earth can I give it?'

BĀNGARŪ (HARIĀNĪ).

As a specimen of what is called Hariānī, I give the following excellent folktale from the Jind Tahsīl of the Jind State. The language is the same as in the other specimens. We may, however, note the following cases of exceptional pronunciation. Kahᵃnā, to say, has for its infinitive kaihᵃṇ, almost pronounced kaihṇ. Its causal is kauhāṇ, to cause to say. Maĩgaṇ is for mãgᵃnā, to ask, beg. In balāṇ, to summon, u or o has become a.

The verb rahaṇ, to remain, is much contracted. Thus we have rē-thē for rahē-thē, and rhyā for rahyā (standard Hindī rahā).

The verbs dēṇ, to give, and lēṇ, to take, prefer the vowel ī to the vowel ē in conjugation. Thus we have diãgā, I (masc.) will give ; dĩgī, I (fem.) will give.

[No. 3.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BĀNGARŪ (HARIĀNĪ). STATE, JIND (TAḤṢĪL, JIND).

एक बाह्मण था अर एक बाह्मणी थी। बाह्मण चून मँग-कै ल्या-आया करदा। बाह्मणी कैहण लाग्गी इस नगरी-मैं राज्जा भोज सै। यू सलोक कौहा-कै बाह्मणाँ-नै एक टका सिखोने-का दे-सै। इस राज्जा-कै तौं भी जा-कै कह-दे। बाह्मण कैहण लाग्गया मैं सलोक नी जाणदा। बाह्मणी कैहण लाग्गी सलोक तन्नै मैं सिख्या-दींगी। फेर उन बाह्मणी-नै सलोक सिख्या-दिया अक पैस्सा गाँठ-मैं।

राज्जा भोज-नै सै रोपया उस-नै निआम-के दे-दिया। बाह्मण तो अपणे घराँ चाल्या-आया॥

राज्जा भोज एक खूजीं रोपया-की भर-कै सैल-मैं चाल-पड़ा। चाल्या चाल्या अपणी सुसराड़ बिग-गिया। राज्जा भोज-नै एक ल्हवाई-की हाट-पर डेरा कर-दिया। ल्हवाई-नै उस-की खात्तर कर-दे वार हो-गई। ल्हवाई रोज-की रोज राज्जा भोज-की रानी-की महल-मैं जाया करदा। ल्हवाई रानी खात्तर लाड्डू ले-जाया करदा। उ दन तवल-मैं औह लाड्डू भूल-गया। ल्हवाई जद कमन्द-पर चढ़ण लाग्गया राज्जा भोज-नै थाप्पी अक तैं भी देख तो के गियान सै। राज्जा-की छोहरी कैहण लाग्गी लाड्डू ल्या-आया। ल्हवाई कैहण लाग्गया लाड्डू भूल-आया। राज्जा-की बेट्टी ले-कै कोरड़ा ल्हवाई-नै पिट्टण मँद-गई। राज्जा भोज-कै पल्ले-मैं चार लाड्डू बंध रे-थे। राज्जा भोज-नै औह साप्फा झरोखे-मैं बगा-कै मारा। राज्जा-की बेट्टी कैहण लाग्गी यिह लाड्डू कड़ै लाइ आए। ल्हवाई कैहण लाग्गया लाड्डू राम-नै दिए सैं। फेर वाह राज्जा-की बेट्टी लाड्डू खाण लाग्गी अर कैहण लाग्गी ल्हवाई ईसी लाड्डू मैं अपणे सासरे-मैं बिआह ले-गई जूँहीं खाए-थे। तेरे को बटेऊ आ र्‌ह्या-सै। ल्हवाई कैहण लाग्गया एक बटेऊ मेरे घोड़े-आला आ र्‌ह्या-सै। वाह राज्जा-की बेट्टी कैहण लाग्गी तन्नै चार सै रोपया दींगी उस बटेऊ-नै मरवा-दे॥

ल्हवाई उतर-कै चार जाल्लाहाँ-नै बला-कै लि-आया अक भाई चार सै रोपया लेओ। इस बटेऊ-नै स्माणे-मैं जा-कै मार-देओ। चार जाल्लाहाँ-नै औह राज्जा भोज पकड़-लिया। राज्जा भोज कैहण लाग्या भाई तम मेरा के करोगे। जाल्लाह बोल्ले हमें तन्नै जी-तै माराँगे। राज्जा पुच्छण लाग्या जी-तै मारे तन्नै के थियावैगा। जाल्लाह बोल्ले भाई चार सै रोपया थियावैंगे। राज्जा बोल्या भाई तम-नै रोपया पान सै दिआँगा जी-तै ना मारो। थारे शहर-मैं जिऊँदा नाहीं वड़ूँगा। उन्हाँ-नै पान सै रोपया ले-कै औह राज्जा छोड़-दिया॥

राज्जा भोज-कै बाह्मण-वाला सलोक साच्च आ-गिया अक पैस्सा गाँठ-मैं था जो जी वच-गया॥

[No. 3.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BĀNGARŪ (HARIĀNĪ). STATE, JIND (TAḤṢĪL, JIND).

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ēk Bāhmaṇ thā ar ēk Bāhmaṇī thī. Bāhmaṇ chūn
One Brāhmaṇ was and one Brāhmaṇī was. The-Brāhmaṇ flour maĩg-kai li-āyā-kar^{a}dā. Bāhmaṇī kaih^{a}ṇ lāggī, 'is nag^{a}rī-maĩ begged-having to-bring-used. The-Brāhmaṇī to-say began, 'this village-in rājjā Bhōj sai. Yū s^{a}lōk kauhā-kai Bāhmaṇā̃-nai King Bhōj is. This-person verse caused-to-say-having Brāhmaṇs-to ēk ṭakā siōnē-kā dē-sai. Is rājjā-kai taũ bhī jā-kai kah-dē.'
one coin gold-of giving-is. This king-to thou also gone-having recite.'
Bāhmaṇ kaih^{a}ṇ lāggyā, 'maĩ s^{a}lōk nī jāṇ^{a}dā.'
The-Brāhmaṇ to-say began, 'I a-verse am-not knowing.'
Bāhmaṇī kaih^{a}ṇ lāggī, 's^{a}lōk tannai maĩ sikhyā-dĩgī.' Phēr
The-Brāhmaṇī to-say began, 'a-verse to-thee I teach-will.' Then un Bāhmaṇī-nai s^{a}lōk sikhyā-diyā ak, 'păissā gā̃ṭh-maĩ.' Rājjā that Brāhmaṇī-by the-verse was-taught that, 'pice knot-in.' The-King Bhōj-nai sai rōpayā us-nai niām-kē dē-diyā.
Bhōj-by hundred rupees him-to reward-of were-given.
Bāhmaṇ tō ap^{a}ṇē gharā̃ chāllyā-āyā.
The-Brāhmaṇ indeed his-own to-house went-away.

Rājjā Bhōj ēk khūrjī rōpayā-kī bhar-kai sail-maĩ chāll-paryā.
King Bhōj a saddle-bag rupees-of filled-having tour-in started.
Chāllyā chāllyā ap^{a}ṇī sasurāṛ big-giyā. Rājjā Bhōj-nai Gone gone his-own father-in-law's-house he-arrived. King Bhōj-by ēk lhawāī-kī hāṭ-par ḍērā kar-diyā. Lhawāī-nai us-kī one confectioner-of shop-on lodging was-made. The-confectioner-by him-of khāttar kar-dē wār hō-gaī. Lhawāī rōj-kī rōj rājjā entertainment doing delay became. The-confectioner day-of day King Bhōj-kī rānī-kī mah^{a}l-maĩ jāyā-kar^{a}dā. Lhawāī rānī khāttar Bhōj-of Queen-of palace-in to-go-used. The-confectioner the-Queen for lāḍḍū lē-jāyā-kar^{a}dā. U dan tawal-maĩ ăŭh lāḍḍū bhūl-gayā cates to-bring-used. That day hurry-in he the-cates forgot.
Lhawāī jad kamand-par chaṛhaṇ lāggyā rājjā Bhōj-nai
The-confectioner when the-rope-ladder-on to-climb began King Bhōj-by thāppī ak, 'taĩ bhī dēkh tō kē giyān sai.'

it-was-determined that, 'thou also see indeed what matter is.'

Rājjā-kī chhoh^{a}rī kaih^{a}ṇ lāggī, 'lāḍḍū li-āyā?'
The-King-of daughter to-say began, 'cates hast-thou-brought?'

Lhawāī kaih^{a}ṇ lāggyā, 'lāḍḍū bhūl-āyā.' Rājjā-kī beṭṭī
The-confectioner to-say began, 'cates (I-) forgot.' The-King-of daughter lē-kai kōr^{a}ṛā lhawāī-nai piṭṭaṇ mand-gaī. Rājjā taken-having a-whip the-confectioner to-beat became-engaged. King

Bhōj-kē pallē-maĩ chār lāḍḍū bandh rē-thē. Rājjā Bhōj-nai ăŭh Bhōj-of cloth-in four cates tied-up were. King Bhōj-by that sāpphā jharōkhē-maĩ bagā-kai mārā. Rājjā-kī beṭṭī handkerchief window-in thrown-having was-struck. The-King-of daughter kaih^{a}ṇ lāggī, 'yih lāḍḍū kaṛai-lāi āē?' Lhawāī to-say began, 'these cates where-from came?' The-confectioner kaih^{a}ṇ lāggyā, 'lāḍḍū Rām-nai diē saĩ.' Phēr wāh rājjā-kī to-say began, 'cates God-by given are.' Then that King-of beṭṭī lāḍḍū khāṇ lāggī, ar kaih^{a}ṇ lāggī, 'lhawāī, īsī daughter the-cates to-eat began, and to-say began, 'confectioner, such lāḍḍū maĩ ap^{a}ṇē sās^{a}rē-maĩ biāh lē-gaī, cates I my-own father-in-law's-house-in (on-)marriage was-taken-away, jũhĩ khāē-thē. Tērē kō baṭēū ā rhyā-sai?'

then eaten-were. Thy (-house-in) any wayfarer having-come remaining-is?'

Lhawāī kaih^{a}ṇ lāggyā, 'ēk baṭēū mērē ghōṛē-ālā
The-confectioner to-say began, 'one wayfarer in-my(-house) horse-owner

ā rhyā-sai.' Wāh rājjā-kī beṭṭī kaih^{a}ṇ lāggī, 'tannai having-come remaining-is.' That King-of daughter to-say began, 'to-thee chār sai rōpayā dĩgī, us baṭēū-nai mar^{a}wā-dē.'

four hundred rupees I-will-give, that wayfarer get-killed.'

Lhawāī utar-kai chār jāllāddã̄-nai balā-kai
The-confectioner descended-having four executioners called-having li-āyā ak, 'bhāī, chār sai rōpayā lēō. Is baṭēū-nai brought that, 'brothers, four hundred rupees take. This wayfarer smāṇē-maĩ jā-kai mār-dēō.' Chār jāllāddã̄-nai ăŭh Rājjā Bhōj forest-in gone-having slay.' Four executioners-by that King Bhōj pakaṛ-liyā. Rājjā Bhōj kaih^{a}ṇ lāggyā, 'bhāī, tam mērā kē was-seized. King Bhōj to-say began, 'brothers, you of-me what karōgē?' Jāllādd bollē, 'hamẽ̄ tannai jī-tai mārã̄gē.' Rājjā will-do?' Executioners said, 'we thee life-from will-kill.' King puchchhaṇ lāggyā, 'jī-tai mārē tannai kē thiyāwaigā?'

to-ask began, 'life-from by-killing to-thee what will-be-gained?'

Jāllādd bollē, 'bhāī, chār sai rōpayā thiẏāwaĩgē.'
Executioners said, 'brother, four hundred rupees will-be-gained.'

Rājjā bollyā, 'bhāī, tam-nai rōpayā pān sai diãgā,
The-King said, 'brothers, you-to rupees five hundred I-will-give, jī-tai nā mārō. Thārē śahªr-maĩ jiũdā nāhĩ baṛũgā.'

life-from not kill. Your city-in living not I-will-enter.'

Unhã-nai pān sai rōpayā lē-kai ăŭh rājjā chhōṛ-diyā.
Them-by five hundred rupees taken-having that king was-released.

Rājjā Bhōj-kai Bāhmaṇ-wālā sºlōk sātt ā-giyā ak, 'păissā
King Bhōj-to the-Brāhmaṇ's verse true turned-out that, 'pice gãṭh-maĩ' thā, jō jī bach-gayā.

knot-in' was, therefore life escaped.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

Once upon a time there was a Brāhmaṇ and his wife. The Brāhmaṇ lived by begging. He would go out and come home with a little flour. One day his wife said to him, 'the king of this village is Rājā Bhōj, and he is in the habit of making Brāhmaṇs recite verses before him and of then giving them a gold coin.[1] You should also go and recite a verse before him.' 'But,' said the Brāhmaṇ, 'I don't know any verse.' 'Never mind,' replied his wife. 'I'll teach you one.' So she taught him the verse beginning 'pice in your poke.'[2] He went to the king, and recited his verse, and his Majesty gave him a reward[3] of a hundred rupees, and sent him home.

Well, King Bhōj put pice in his poke,—that is to say, he filled a saddle-bag with rupees, and started out for a riding-tour. By and bye he came to the village where lived his father-in-law. (His wife at the time was on a visit to her father.) He put up for the night in a confectioner's shop. While he was hospitably entreating him, the confectioner forgot the time, and finding himself late, hurried off to the palace. Every day he used to go to the palace of King Bhōj's queen, and serve her with cates. This day, in his hurry, he ran off, but forgot to take the cates with him. As he began to climb the rope ladder into the palace, King Bhōj made up his mind to see what was the matter, and followed him to its foot. Her Majesty[4] said to the confectioner, 'well, have

---

[1] A ṭakā is a double pice. Here it means a gold coin the size of a double pice.

[2] This is some well known Sanskrit saw, like the following one of Chāṇakya,— Svadāra-dhana-ratnāni nija-vaśyāni kārayēt;

Anyathā tāni gachchhanti tyaktvā kāpurushādhamam.

A man should always keep his wife, his money, and his jewels, in his own possession; otherwise they go off, and leave the poor wretch lamenting.

This has been crystallised into the Hindī proverb, paisā gãṭh-kā, jōrū sāth-kī, keep your pice in your poke, and your wife in your company. The first half of this is identical with the text.

The gãṭh is the knot in the waistband which serves as a purse. The story shows how King Bhōj kept only half the advice. He did not keep his wife with him, and hence she tried to get him murdered. He had, however, pice in his poke, and these saved his life.

[3] Niām is a corruption of in'ām.

[4] This young lady who, apparently out of mere light-heartedness, tried to get her husband murdered, is here and elsewhere called the 'King's daughter.' The 'King' in this case is, of course, not King Bhōj, but her own father, in whose house she was staying.

you brought the cates?' The poor confectioner had to confess that he had forgotten them, and so she picked up a whip and began to lay it on him. Now, it happened that King Bhōj had four cates of his own, wrapped up in his cloth, so, when he heard what was going on, he threw his kerchief and its contents in through the window. 'Where did these come from?' said the queen. All the poor confectioner could say was 'God sent them.' She tasted them, and said, 'confectioner, when I was carried off to my father-in-law's house after being married, I was there given cates with just the same smack. Have you any traveller staying in your house?' 'Yes, there is one,' said the confectioner,—'a man who came on horse-back.' 'Then,' replied she, 'take these four hundred rupees, and go and get that traveller murdered.'

So the confectioner climbed down the ladder, and sent for four executioners. 'Brothers,' said he, 'here are four hundred rupees. Take this traveller off into the forest and kill him.' So they caught hold of King Bhōj, and carried him off. 'Brothers,' said he, 'what are you going to do to me?' 'We're going to kill you dead,' said they. 'And how much are you to get for the job?' asked the king. 'We're to get four hundred rupees,' answered they. 'Well, brothers,' said the king, 'I'll give you five hundred rupees not to kill me dead, and I'll promise not to enter your city again so long as I live.' So he gave them five hundred rupees, and they let him go.

Thus, you see, the Brāhmaṇ's verse turned out true. King Bhōj had pice in his poke, and that is how he saved his life.

BRAJ BHĀKHĀ.

The first specimen which I give of this dialect comes from the district of Muttra, the head-quarters of Braj Bhākhā. The language is that illustrated by the grammatical sketch given in the introduction.

[No. I.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BRAJ BHĀKHĀ. (DISTRICT, MUTTRA.)

एक जने-कैं दो छोरा हे । उन-मैं-ते लोहरे-ने कही कि काका मेरे बट-कौ धन मोए दे । तब वा-ने धन उन्हैं बटि-करि दियौ । और थोरे दिनाँ पाछे लोहरे बेटा-ने सिगरौ धन इक-ठौरौ करि-कै दूर देसन-कुँ चल्यौ और वा जगे अपनौ धन उड़ाय-दियौ । और जब सिगरौ धन खर्च-कर-चुक्यौ वा देस-में बड़ौ अकाल पड्यौ और वह कंगाल होन लागौ । तो एक बड़े आदमी-के जाइ लगौ और वा-ने वाए सूअर चराइबे-कुँ अपने खेतन-में पठाइयौ । वा-के मन-में आई उन छिलकाँ-ते जिन्हैं सूअर खात-हैं अपनौ-इ पेट भरै और वाए कोई नाए देत-हौ । तब वाए चेत आयौ कि मेरे बाप-के बलाइ मजूरन-कौ रोटी चलत-है और हौं भोखन मरतु-हौं । अपने काका-के ढोरे जाऊँगौ और वा-से कहूँगौ कि काका मैं-ने तेरौ और भगवान-कौ बड़ौ पाप कियौ-है और अब ऐसौ नाए रह्यौ कि तेरौ बेटा बाजौं । मोए अपने मजूरन-कौ नाईं राख । और उठ्यौ और अपने बाप-के ढोरे चल्यौ । वह अभै दूरई हौ कि वा-के बाप-कुँ वाए देखत खेम तर्स आयौ और दौड़-कै वाए चिपटाइ लीनौ और बलाइ पिआर-कीनौ । बेटा-ने वा-से कही कि काका मैं-ने तेरौ और भगवान-कौ बड़ौ पाप कियौ-है और अब ऐसौ नाए रह्यौ कि तेरौ बेटा बाजौं । बाप-ने अपने नौकरन-ते कही चोखे चोखे लत्ता लाओ और याए पहराओ और या-के हाथन-में अँगूठी और पामन-में पनहा पहराओ और हम खाएँ और मगन रहैं । यह मेरौ छोरा मर-गयौ-हौ सो अब जिओ-है और खोइ गयौ-हौ सो अब पायौ-है । और वै खूसी करन लागे ॥

और वा-कौ बड़ौ छोरा खेत-पै हौ । जब बाखर-के ढिंग आयौ वा-ने गाइबे और नाचबे-की आहट सुनी । तब वा-ने नौकरे बुलायौ और वा-से

पूँछी यह कहा ह्वै-रह्यौ-है। तो वा-ने कही कि तेरौ भैया आयौ-है और तेरे काका-ने बड़ी जोनार करी-है या काजे कि वाए अच्छौ-भलौ देख्यौ-है। वा-ने रिस-के मारे भीतर जानौ न बिचारौ। तब वा-कौ बाप-ने वाए मनायौ और वा-ने बाप-सै कही हौं इतेक दिनाँ-से तेरी टहल करतु-हौं और कब-हूँ तेरी आग्या-ते बाहर नाए चल्यौ। पर तै-ने कब-हूँ मोए एक उन्ना-हूँ नाए दियौ कि मैं-ऊँ अपने दोस्तदारन-में खुस-लब्दी करतौ। जब तेरौ यह छोरा आयौ जा-ने सिगरौ धन राँड़ी-मूँड़नी-में बिगार दियौ तब तै-ने वा-कौ काजे बड़ी जोनार कीनी। तब वा-ने कही बेटा तू तो सदा मेरे ढिंग रह्यौ-है और जो मेरौ है सो तेरौ है। पर तोए खुसी करनी उचित है कि तेरौ भैया मर्‌यौ भयौ फिर जिय्यौ-है और खोयौ भयौ पायौ-है॥

[No. I.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BRAJ BHĀKHĀ. (DISTRICT, MUTTRA.)

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ēk janē-kē dō chhōrā hē. Un-mẽ̃-tē lōhᵃrē-nē kahī
A man-of two sons were. Them-in-from the-younger-by it-was-said ki, 'kākā, mērē baṭ-kau dhan mōē dē.' Tab wā-nē dhan that, 'father, my share-of fortune to-me give.' Then him-by fortune unhaĩ baṭi-kari diyau. Aur thōrē dinã̃ pāchhē lōhᵃrē to-them being-divided-having was-given. And a-few days after the-younger bēṭā-nē sigᵃrau dhan ik-ṭhaurau kari-kai dūr dēsan-kū son-by all fortune one-place made-having a-distant country-to chalyau, aur wā jagē apᵃnau dhan uṛāy-diyau. Aur it-was-gone, and that in-place his-own substance was-squandered. And jab sigᵃrau dhan kharch kar-chukyau, wā dēs-mẽ̃ baṛau when all fortune expenditure was-completed, that country-in a-great akāl paṛyau aur wah kaṅgāl hōn lāgau. Tō ēk baṛē ādᵃmīfamine fell and he poor to-be began. Then a great mankē jāi lagau, aur wā-nē wāē sūar of (house-in) having-gone he-attached-himself, and him-by as-for-him swine charāibē-kū apᵃnē khētan-mẽ̃ paṭhāiyau. Wā-kē man-mẽ̃ āī un feeding-for his-own fields-in it-was-sent. Him-of mind-in it-came those chhilᵃkã̃-tē jinhaĩ sūar khāt-haĩ apᵃnau-hū pēṭ bharai, aur wāē husks-with which swine eating-are his-own-also belly he-may-fill, and to-him kōī nāē dēt-hau. Tab wāē chēt āyau ki, 'mērē bāp-kē anybody not giving-was. Then to-him sense came that, 'my father-of balāi maj̃ūran-kī rōṭī chalat-hai aur haũ bhōkhan maratu-haũ. Apᵃnē many labourers-of bread going-is and I by-hunger dying-am. My-own kākā-kē ḍhōrē jāũgau aur wā-sē kahũgau ki, "kākā, maĩ-nē tērau father-of near I-will-go and him-to I-will-say that, "father, me-by of-thee aur Bhagᵃwān-kau baṛau pāp kiyau-hai, aur ab aisau nāē rahyau and God-of great sin made-is, and now such not I-remained ki tērau bēṭā bājaũ. Mōē apᵃnē majūran-kī nāĩ rākh."' that thy son I-may-be-called. Me thy-own labourers-of like keep."'

Aur uṭhyau aur apªnē bāp-kē ḍhōrē chalyau. Wah abhai dūraī And he-arose and his-own father-of near started. He as-yet far-off-even hau ki wā-kē bāp-kũ wāē dēkhat khēm tarṣ āyau, aur dauṛ-kai was that him-of father-to him seeing presently pity came, and run-having wāē chipªṭāi līnau, aur balāi piār kīnau. Bēṭā-nē as-for-him having-embraced it-was-taken, and much affection was-made. The-son-by wā-sē kahī ki, 'kākā, maĩ-nē tērau aur Bhagªwān-kau baṛau him-to it-was-said that, 'father, me-by of-thee and God-of great pāp kiyau-hai aur ab aisau nāē rahyau ki tērau bēṭā sin done-is and now such not I-remained that thy son bājaũ.' Bāp-nē apªnē naukªran-tē kahī, 'chōkhē
I-may-be-called.' The-father-by his-own servants-to it-was-said, 'good chōkhē lattā lāō aur yāē pahªrāau, aur yā-kē hāthan-mẽ good garments bring and this-one cause-to-wear, and this-one-of hands-on ãgūṭhī aur pāman-mẽ panªhā pahªrāau, aur ham-khāaĩ aur magan a-ring and feet-on shoes cause-to-wear, and we-may-eat and rejoiced rahaĩ. Yah mērau chhōrā mar gayau-hau, sō ab jiau-hai; aur may-remain. This my son dead gone-was, he now alive-is; and khōi-gayau-hau, sō ab pāyau-hai.' Aur wai khūsī karan lāgē.
lost-gone-was, he now found-is.' And they merriment to-make began.

Aur wā-kau baṛau chhōrā khēt-pai hāu. Jab bākhar-kē ḍhiṅg And him-of elder son field-on was. When house-of near āyau wā-nē gāibē aur nāchªbē-kī āhaṭ sunī. Tab wā-nē he-came him-by singing and dancing-of sound was-heard. Then him-by naukªrē bulāyau, aur wā-sē pũchhī, 'yeh kahā hwai-rahyaua-servant was-called, and him-from it-was-enquired, 'this what occurring-hai?' Tō wā-nē kahī ki, 'tērau bhaiyā āyau-hai, aur tērē is?' Then him-by it-was-said that, 'thy brother come-is, and thy kākā-nē baṛī jōnār karī-hai; yā kājē ki wāē achchhau-bhalau father-by great feast made-is; this for that as-for-him safe-and-sound dēkhyau-hai.' Wā-nē ris-kē-mārē bhītar jānau na bichārau. Tab it-seen-is.' Him-by anger-of-from inside to-go not it-was-thought. Then wā-kē bāp-nē wāē manāyau, aur wā-nē bāp-sē kahī, him-of father-by as-for-him it-was-appeased, and him-by father-to it-was-said,
'haũ itēk dinã̃-sē tērī ṭahal karatu-haũ, aur kab-hũ
'I so-many days-from thy service doing-am, and ever-even tērī āgyā-tē bāhar nāē chalyau; par tai-nē kab-hũ mōē thy orders-from outside not I-went; but thee-by ever-even to-me ēk unnā-hũ nāē diyau ki, maĩ-ũ apªnē dōstdāran-mẽ a kid-even not was-given that I-too my-own friends-among khus-labdī karªtau. Jab tērau yah chhōrā āyau jā-nē merriment might-have-made. When thy this son came whom-by sigªrau dhan rā̃ṛī-mū̃ṛªnī-mē̃ bigār-diyau tab tai-nē wā-kē kājē all fortune harlots-etc.-among was-wasted then thee-by him-of for baṛī jōnār kīnī.' Tab wā-nē kahī, 'bēṭā, tū tō great feast was-done.' Then him-by it-was-said, 'son, thou verily sadā mērē ḍhiṅg rahyau-hai, aur jō mērau hai sō tērau always me-of near having-dwelt-art, and what mine is that thine hai; par tōē khūsī karªnī uchit hai ki tērau bhaiyā is; but to-thee merriment to-make proper was because thy brother maryau bhayau, phir jiau hai; aur khōyau bhayau, pāyau hai.' dead became, again alive is; and lost became, found is.'

OLD BRAJ BHĀKHĀ.

I now proceed to give specimens of old literary Braj Bhākhā. To those able to read them transliteration and interlinear translation will be unnecessary. I therefore, in each case, give only the text in the vernacular character, and a literal translation. A short extract from the Sūr Sāgar is here given in order to illustrate the Braj Bhākhā of the sixteenth century.

[No. 2.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BRAJ BHĀKHĀ (SŪR DĀS).

ब्रज घर घर सब भोजन साजत ।
सब-कें द्वार बधाई बाजत ॥
सकट जोरि लै चले देव बलि ।
गोकुल ब्रजबासी सब हिलि मिलि ॥ दधि-लोनी मधु साजि मिठाई ।
कहँ लगि कहउँ सबै बहुताई ॥
घर-घर-तें पकवान चलाये ।
निकसि गाँव-के गोइँड़े आये ॥
ब्रज बासी तहँ जुरे अपारा ।
सिंधु समान न वार न पारा ॥ पैड़े चलन नहीं कोउ पावत । सकट चले सब भोजन आवत ॥
सहस सकट चले नंद महर-के । अवर सकट कितने घर-घर-के ॥
सूर-दास प्रभु महिमा सागर ।
गोकुल प्रकटे-हैं हरि नागर ॥

TRANSLATION.

[Kṛishṇa has persuaded the cowherds of Gōkula to abandon the worship of Indra, and instead to offer homage to Mount Gōvardhana. The verses describe how they bring offerings of food to the mountain.]

In every house in Braj are they preparing food, and joyful music is being played in the doorway of each. The inhabitants of Gōkul and Braj all yoked their carts and carried off the offerings to the God. Salted tyre did they prepare and sweetmeats of honey. How am I to tell all the exceeding quantity of it. Cates did they despatch from every house, as they issued from the village and came to the cultivated land around it. There did the inhabitants form a wondrous collection, broad as the shoreless ocean. No one had to go on foot for they travelled in the carts which carried the provisions. From Prince Nand's[1] house alone went forth a thousand carts, so how many others were there of the other houses? Says Sūr-dās, the Lord is an Ocean of Majesty, and he became manifest in Gōkul as the youthful Hari.

---

[1] Nand was the leader of the cowherds, and the foster-father of Kṛishṇa, who was an incarnation of Vishṇu (Hari). The tradition that these cowherds travelled en masse in carts is very old, and is not without historical importance. This mode of conveyance, used by a whole tribe, is elsewhere unknown in Northern India. The legend has been used to support the theory that these cowherd worshippers of the infant Kṛishṇa were members of a pastoral tribe that had migrated from Central Asia, bringing with them reminiscences of the Gospels of the Infancy. See Mr. J. Kennedy in J. R. A. S., 1907, pp. 951 ff.

I next give a few of the easier verses of the Sat-saī of Bihārī, as examples of the Braj Bhākhā of the seventeenth century.

[No. 3.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BRAJ BHĀKHĀ. (EXTRACTS FROM THE SAT-SAĪ.)

(Bihārī-lāl, c. 1650.)

वसंत-ऋतु वर्णन ।

दिस-दिस कुसुमित देखिये उपबन बिपिन समाज ।
मनहु बियोगिनि-कौं कियौ सर-पंजर रितु-राज ॥ १ ॥

ग्रीष्म-ऋतु वर्णन ।

नाहिन ये पावक प्रबल लुएँ चलति चहुँ पास ।
मनौ बिरह बसंत-के ग्रीखम लेति उसास ॥ २ ॥

समीर वर्णन ।

चुवतु खेद मकरंद-कन तरु तरु तर बिरमाय । आवतु दच्छिन देस-तें थक्यौ बटोही बाय ॥ ३ ॥

TRANSLATION.

1. THE SPRING.

In every quarter appears the array of gardens and of groves in blossom. (Each flower is a Cupid's shaft) and it is as though the King of Seasons had built a cage of these arrows (in which to imprison) fair ones distraught by love.

2. THE HOT SEASON.

This is not a mighty conflagration. 'Tis the fierce hot winds blowing on every side. The summer is, as it were, heaving hot sighs for the departed spring.

3. THE BREEZE.

From the (sandal-scented) south country, there comes a wanderer,—the breeze. He lingers beneath each tree. The sweat (upon his brow) is the nectar which (he has gathered from) the flowers on his way.

Finally, I give an extract from the Rāj-nīti, to illustrate the Braj Bhākhā of the early part of the 19th century.

[No. 4.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

(BRAJ BHĀKHĀ.) (EXTRACT FROM THE RĀJ-NĪTI.)

(Lallū-jī Lāl, 1843.)

गोदावरी नदी-के तीर एक सेमल-कौ रूख। ता-पै सब दिस-के पंछी आय बिश्राम लेतु-हैं। एक दिन प्रात-ही लघुपतनक नाम काग जाग्यौ। वह एक काल-रूप व्याधी-कौं दूर-तें आवतु देखि चिचाय-करि कहनि लाग्यौ आज भोर-ही-की बेला अधर्मी दुराचारी-कौ मुख देख्यौ। सो न जानियै कहा होय। ऐसें बिचारि लघुपतनक काग उड़ि-गयौ। कह्यौ-है कि—

उतपात-की ठाम पंडित चतुर न रहै।
मूरख भय सोग बैठ्यौ सहै॥

इतेक-में व्याधी-नें रूख तरै चाँवर-के कनिका डारि ता-पर जाल पसार्यौ। तहाँ चित्रग्रीव कपोत कुटुंब समेत उड़त उत आय कढ़्यौ। तिन-में-तें एक पंछी देखि बोल्यौ इन चाँवरनि-कौं हौं चुग्यौ चहतु-हौं। चित्रग्रीव कही अरे या बन में चाँवर कहाँ-तें आये। यह कछु कौतुक है। या-तें ये मो-कौं नीके नाहीं लागतु॥

TRANSLATION.

On the bank of the river Gōdāvarī was a silk-cotton tree, on which birds of every quarter used to roost. One day, very early in the morning, a crow named Laghupatanaka, awoke and saw a hunter approaching from a distance, like the God of Death himself. He screamed out and began to remark (what an unlucky omen it was that) the first thing he should see on the dawn of that day was an unscrupulous villainous countenance. 'Who knows,' thought he, 'what is going to happen next.' Having thus considered, the crow Laghupatanaka flew away. For it is said,—

'A wise man remains not in the place of calamity;
'But a fool stays there, and sups fear and sorrow.'

In the meantime the hunter scattered grains of husked rice at the foot of the tree and over them spread his net. There came flying Chitragrīva (the king of the pigeons) with his family. One of them said, 'I should like to have a peck at that husked rice.' But Chitragrīva said, 'hullo, how does husked rice come into this forest? This is something quite out of the way. I therefore don't like the look of it.'

BRAJ BHĀKHĀ OF ALIGARH.

To the north-east of Muttra lies the district of Aligarh. Here the language is Braj Bhākhā, but it has some prominent local peculiarities, or, at least, has peculiarities which do not occur in the specimens received from Muttra.

I give two specimens of the Braj Bhākhā of Aligarh, a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son, and a Folksong. The following points may be noted:—

Pronunciation.—There is a tendency of the letter r to disappear when it precedes a consonant, which is doubled in compensation. Thus, naukannu-sũ̃, for naukaranu-sũ̃, from the servants. This is very common in the Bhadaurī form of Bundēlī. The letter w when preceded by a long vowel often becomes m. Thus, manāman, for manāwan, to celebrate; bāman, fifty-two; rōmati, she (was) weeping. Ky is sometimes softened to ch, as in chõ̃ for kyõ̃, why. J before d sometimes becomes d, as in bhēd-dayau for bhēj-dayau, he sent. A final aspirate surd consonant is disaspirated, as in hāt for hāth, a hand. In the word kulaph for qufl, a bolt, consonants have been transposed.

Declension.—A final short u is added to weak nouns even more commonly than in standard Braj Bhākhā. The u is retained in all cases and both numbers. Thus, bāp or bāpu, a father; bāpu-sũ̃, (he said) to the father; khētanu-mẽ̃, in the fields; majūranu-kau, of the servants. In one instance we find the word rājai used as the accusative-dative of rājā, a king.

The postpositions are as in standard Braj Bhākhā, but we have also nu (as well as nē) for the agent, as in tum-nu mahʳmānī karī-ē, you have given a feast, and kẽ̃ (as well as kũ̃) for the accusative-dative, as in ēk janē-kẽ̃, to a certain man.

In the Pronouns, the accusative-dative of maĩ is mōy or mōē, as in the standard, and mō-ū-ē is 'me also.' The pronoun of the third person is very peculiar. It is gu or gwa with an accusative-dative gwai, and an oblique form gwā. The plural is gwē, oblique guni. With it is connected gwã̃ (often written ŋwā, ङ्वा), there = wahã̃. 'This' is ji; accusative-dative jāy; oblique, jā.

The present of the Verb Substantive is—

Sing.	Plur.
1. ũ̃	ẽ̃
2. ē	au
3. ē	ẽ̃

No doubt ē is often pronounced ai, and ẽ̃, aĩ. The Past Tense masculine is ō (or au), plural ē. In other words, in Aligarh the initial h of standard Braj Bhākhā is dropped.

When the verb substantive is used as an auxiliary with a present participle, the two are sometimes joined so as to form one word. Thus, marᵃtũ̃ for marat-ũ̃, I am dying. Hatu-ē is used to mean, he is. The conjunctive participle which is hwai in standard Braj Bhākhā, becomes hai in Aligarh. Thus, hai-gayau, for hwai-gayau, he became.

In all verbs the sign of the conjunctive participle is kẽ̃, not kai.

Braj Bhākhā is reported to be spoken in Aligarh by 992,200 people.

[No. 5.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BRAJ BHĀKHĀ. (DISTRICT, ALIGARH.)

SPECIMEN I.

एक जने-कें द्वै बेटा ए। उन-में-तें छोटे-ने बाप-सूँ कह्यौ कि ए बाप मेरौ जो बाँटु होतु-ए सो मोय दै-देउ। तब ग्वा-ने मालु उन्हैं बाँटि दयौ। तब छोटौ बेटा सबु इक-ठौरौ करि-कें परदेस-कूँ चल्यौ-गयौ और ग्वाँ अपनौ सबु मालु गुलछर्रनु-में उड़ायौ। जब सबु उड़ाय खाय चुक्यौ ग्वा देस-में बड़ौ अकालु पर्‌यौ। फिरि गु बड़ौ कंगालु है-गयौ। तब ग्वा देस-कौ एक भागिमान-के सहारे-सूँ जाय लग्यौ। ग्वा-ने ग्वा-कूँ अपने खेतनु-में सूअर चुगाइबे भेद-दयौ। सूअर जो खात-एँ ग्वा-की छूँछि-सूँ पेटु भरिबे-कूँ तय्यार हौ। ग्वाय कोई कछू ना ओ देतु। जब ग्वाय होसु आयौ तब ग्वा-ने कही मेरे बापु-कें बहुत-से मजूरनु-कूँ मुकतेरौं रोटीं एँ और मैं भूखनु मरतूँ। मैं याँ-तें उठि-कें अपने बाप-के जौरें जाऊँगौ और ग्वा-तें कहूँगौ कि मैं-ने भगमान-के सामने और तिहारे अगार पापु कर्‌यौ-ए और अब में तिहारौ बेटा कहाइबे लायक ना ऊँ। जैसे और मजूर रहत-एँ तैसे मो-ऊ-ए राखि-लै। ग्वाँ-ते चलि-कें अपने बाप-के जौरें आयौ। परि बहुत दूरि-तें-ई ग्वा-के बाप-कूँ लखाय पर्‌यौ और तब बाप-कूँ तसुँ आय-गयौ और दौर्‌यौ और बेटा-की जेट भरि-लई और पुचकार्‌यौ। और बेटा-ने बाप-सूँ कही कि ए बाप मैं-ने भगमान-के अगार और तिहारे देखत पापु कर्‌यौ और अब मैं तिहारौ बेटा कहाइबे लायक ना ऊँ। परि बाप-ने अपने नौकनु-सूँ कही कि अच्छे अच्छे ओढ़ना लाओ और जाय पहराओ और छाप जा-के हात-में पहराओ और पनही पायनु-में पहराओ। चलौ खाँय और चैन करें। काहे-तें कि जि मेरौ बेटा मरि गयौ-ओ और फिरि जी-पर्‌यौ। खोय गयौ-ओ और पाय-गयौ। और फिरि वे खुसी मनामन लगे॥

ग्वा खन ग्वा-कौ बड़ौ बेटा खेत-में ओ। जब गु घर-के जौरें आयौ तौ ग्वा-ने गाइबौ नाचिबौ सुन्यौ। और एकु नौकरु बुलायौ और पूछी कि याँ का है-रह्यो-ए। ग्वा-ने ग्वा-सूँ कही कि तेरौ भैया आय-गयौ-ए और तेरे बाप-ने ग्वा-की महमानी

करी-ए। काहे-तें कि गु भलौ चंगौ आय-गयौ-ए। तब गु बड़ौ रिस भयौ औरु भीतर न धस्यौ। जा-तें ग्वा-कौ बापु बाहिर निकसि आयौ औरु ग्वा-कूँ मनायौ। तब ग्वा-ने अपने बाप-कूँ ज्वाबु दयौ कि मैं इतने बर्सनु-तें तिहारी टहल कर-रह्यौ-ऊँ औरु न मैं तिहारी बात-तें कब-हूँ बाहिर भयौ। तौ-ऊ तुम-ने कब-हूँ मोय एकु बकरिया-कौ बच्च-ऊ न दयौ कि यारनु-में लहरि उड़ावतौ। परि जैसें जि तिहारौ बेटा आयौ जा-ने तिहारी सब जमा पूँजी रंडिनु-के संग उड़ाय खाय डारी ग्वा-कौ तुम-नु महमानी करी-ए। ग्वा-ने ग्वा-सूँ कह्यौ कि बेटा हमेस तू मेरे-ई जौरें रहतु-ए। जो कछू मो-पे हतु-ए सो तेरौ-ई ए। जि हम-कूँ चहियति-ई कि हम खुसी मनावते औरु खुस होते। काहे-तें कि जि तेरौ भैया मरि-गयौ-ओ फिरि जी-पर्यौ। औरु जातु-रह्यौ-ओ फिरि आय-गयौ॥

[No. 5.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BRAJ BHĀKHĀ. DISTRICT, ALIGARH.

SPECIMEN I.

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ēk janē-kẽ dwai bēṭā ē. Un-mẽ-tẽ chhōṭē-nē bāp-sũ
A man-to two sons were. Them-in-from the-younger-by the-father-to kahyau ki, 'ē bāp, mērau jō bā̃ṭu hōtu-ē sō mōy it-was-said that, 'O father, my what share becoming-is that to-me dai-dēu.' Tab gwā-nē mālu unhaĩ bā̃ṭi dayau. Tab give.' Then him-by the-property to-them dividing was-given. Then chhōṭau bēṭā sabu ik-ṭhaurau kari-kẽ par-dēs-kũ the-younger son all in-one-place made-having a-foreign-country-to chalyau-gayau, auru gwā̃ apⁿau sabu mālu gul-chharranu-mẽ uṛāyau.

went-away, and there his-own all property debauchery-in was-wasted.

Jab sabu uṛāy khāy chukyau gwā dēs-mẽ baṛau akālu paryau.
When all wasting eating was-finished that country-in a-great famine fell.

Phiri gu baṛau kaṅgālu hai-gayau. Tab gwā dēs-kē ēk Again he very poor became. Then that country-of a bhāgimān-kē sahārē-sũ jāy lagyau. Gwā-nē gwā-kũ rich-man-of support-by having-gone he-attached-himself. Him-by him-as-for apⁿē khētanu-mẽ sūar chugāibē bhēd-dayau. Sūar jō khāt-ẽ his-own fields-in swine for-feeding it-was-sent. Swine what eating-are gwā-kī chhũchhi-sũ pēṭu bharibē-kũ tayyār hau. Gwāy kōī that-of the-husk-with the-belly filling-for ready he-was. To-him anyone kachhū nā ō dētu. Jab gwāy hōsu āyau, tab gwā-nē anything not was giving. When to-him sense came, then him-by kahī, 'mērē bāpu-kẽ ḅahut-sē majūranu-kũ mukⁿtērī rōṭī ẽ, it-was-said, 'my father-to many-very servants-to abundant loaves are, auru maĩ bhūkhanu marⁿtũ. Maĩ yā̃-tẽ uṭhi-kẽ apⁿē and I by-hunger dying-am. I here-from arisen-having my-own bāp-kē jaurẽ jāũgau, auru gwā-tẽ kahũgau ki, "maĩ-nē Bhagⁿmān-kē father-of near will-go, and him-to I-will-say that, "me-by God-of sāmⁿnē auru tihārē agār pāpu karyau-ē, auru ab maĩ tihārau bēṭā before and of-you in-front sin done-is, and now I your son kahāibē lāyak nā ũ. Jaisē auru majūr rahat-ẽ, taisē for-being-called worthy not am. As other servants living-are, so mō-ū-ē rākhi-lai."' Gwã-tẽ chali-kẽ apᵃnē bāp-kē jaurẽ me-also keep."' There-from gone-having his-own father-of near āyau. Pari bahut dūri-tẽ-ĩ gwā-kē bāp-kũ lakhāy he-came. But great distance-from-even his father-to being-visible paryau. Auru tab bāp-kũ tarsu āy-gayau, auru dauryau, auru he-fell. And then the-father-to compassion arrived, and he-ran, and bēṭā-kī jēṭ bhari-laī, auru puchᵃkāryau. Auru bēṭā-nē bāp-sũ the-son-of arm was-filled, and he-was-kissed. And the-son-by the-father-to kahī ki, 'ē bāp, maĩ-nē Bhagᵃmān-kē agār auru tihārē it-was-said that, 'O father, me-by God-of before and of-you dēkhat pāpu karyau, auru ab maĩ tihārau bēṭā kahāibē in-the-sight sin was-done, and now I your son for-being-called lāyak nā ũ.' Pari bāp-nē apᵃnē naukannu-sũ kahī ki, worthy not am.' But the-father-by his-own servants-to it-was-said that,

'achchhē achchhē ōṛhᵃnā lāau, auru jāy pahᵃrāau, auru chhāp
'good good clothing bring, and to-this-one put-on, and a-ring jā-kē hāt-mẽ pahᵃrāau, auru panᵃhī pāyanu-mẽ pahᵃrāau. Chalau, this-one-of hand-on put-on, and shoes feet-on put-on. Come, khãy, auru chain karaĩ. Kāhē-tẽ ki ji let-us-eat, and rejoicing let-us-make. What-from (i.e. because) that this mērau bēṭā mari-gayau-ō, auru phiri jī-paryau; khōy-gayau-ō, auru my son having-died-gone-is, and again came-to-life; lost-gone-was, and pāy-gayau.' Auru phiri wē khusī manāman lagē.
found-went.' And again they happiness to-celebrate began.

Gwā khan gwā-kau baṛau bēṭā khēt-mẽ ō. Jab gu (At-)that time him-of the-big son the-field-in was. When he ghar-kē jaurẽ āyau, tau gwā-nē gāibau nāchibau sunyau. Auru the-house-of near came, then him-by singing dancing was-heard. And ēku naukaru bulāyau auru pūchhī ki, 'yã kā hai-rahyau-ē?'
a servant was-called and it-was-asked that, 'here what happening-is?'
Gwā-nē gwā-sũ kahī ki, 'tērau bhaiyā āy-gayau-ē, auru tērē Him-by him-to it-was-said that, 'thy brother arrived-is, and thy bāp-nē gwā-kī mahᵃmānī karī-ē; kāhē-tẽ ki gu bhalau chaṅgau father-by him-of feast made-is; because that he well healthy āy-gayau-ē.' Tab gu baṛau ris bhayau, auru bhītar na dhasyau.
arrived-is.' Then he very angry became, and within not he-entered.
Jā-tẽ gwā-kau bāpu bāhir nikasi āyau, auru gwā-kũ
This-from him-of the-father outside having-emerged came, and him-to manāyau. Tab gwā-nē apᵃnē bāp-kũ jwābu dayau ki, it-was-remonstrated. Then him-by his-own father-to answer was-given that,

'maĩ itᵃnē barsanu-tẽ tihārī ṭahal kar-rahyau-ũ, auru na maĩ
'I so-many years-from your service doing-been-am, and not I tihārī bāt-tẽ kab-hũ bāhir bhayau. Tau-ū tum-nē kab-hũ your word-from ever outside became. Nevertheless you-by ever mōy ēku bakariyā-kau bachcha-ū na dayau ki yāranu-mẽ to-me a she-goat-of young-one-even not was-given that friends-among lahari uṛāwᵃtau. Pari jaisẽ ji tihārau bēṭā āyau, pleasure (I-)might-have-aroused. But as-soon-as this your son came, jā-nē tihārī sab jamā pũjī raṇḍinu-kē saṅg uṛāy khāy whom-by your all collection property harlots-of with wasting eating ḍārī, gwā-kī tum-nu mahᵃmānī karī-ē.' Gwā-nē gwā-sũ was-thrown-away, him-of you-by a-feast made-is.' Him-by him-to kahī ki, 'bēṭā, hamēs tū mērē-ī jaurẽ rahatu-ē. Jō it-was-said that, 'son, always thou me-of-even near living-art. What kachhū mō-pē hatu-ē, sō tērau-ī ē. Ji ham-kũ chahiyatī-ī, anything me-on being-is, that thine-even is. This us-to is-proper-verily, ki ham khusī manāwᵃtē auru khus hōtē.
that we rejoicing should-have-celebrated and rejoiced should-have-been.
Kāhē-tẽ ki ji tērau bhaiyā mari-gayau-ō, phiri jī-paryau;
Because that this thy brother dead-having-gone-is, again came-to-life;
auru jātu-rahyau-ō, phiri āy-gayau.'
and lost-was, again arrived.'

The next specimen from Aligarh is a popular song in four verses. It tells the story of the departure of Nala and his Queen, Damayanti, from his home and kingdom. Nala had been ruined by gambling and lost all that he possessed. The whole tale is one of the most famous in Indian literature.

[No. 6.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BRAJ BHĀKHĀ. (DISTRICT, ALIGARH.)

SPECIMEN II.

सोने रूपे-के महल बने राजा नल-के जा-के सुन-पीतरि-के है-गये । औराँ जौराँ खास अन्न मुठी भरि ना रह्यौ । नल-के है गये कौला माटी राख । सोने-की साँकर ग्वै-ऊ सुन-पीतरि-की है-गई । ग्वा-ऊ-तें है-गयौ लोहु । रानी तौ राजे समझावे बलमा छोड़ौ नगर-कौ मोहु । अब रानी राजा दोऊ पंथ सिधारैं पमरि-पै ॥ १ ॥

भरि चौमासे सोई दुमँती जाय चिन्ता ब्यापी गैल-की । आभूखन लये सम्हारि । खम्म-खम्म-सूँ मिलति दुमँती रानी रोमति छाती फारि । नल राजा-ने बान सम्हारे । काच महल कोठार कुलफ नल-ने जड़ि-दये तारे । करी किल्ले-सूँ परनाम । ज्वाला-मुखी लयौ नल-ने खाँड़ौ कोठनु-पै लाल कमान । गोटा फाँसे नल-ने सब धरि लीने फेंट-में ॥ २ ॥

रानी राजा निकरि फैरि दरवाजे-पै आये । करि आधीनि दई परिकम्मा जब किल्ले-कूँ नल-ने ज्वाब सुनाये । मेरौ अमरु रहौ खाई कोटु । मेरौ तेरौ बिछुरौ है किल्ले दादा जोटु । मेरौ तेरौ बिछुरनु सुनि किल्ले भैया है-चुक्यौ । अब मेरी तेरी हरि-ने बिगारी आजु । तो-में किल्ले बैठि-कें भूँज्यौ बामन-गढ़-कौ मैं-ने राजु । आजु उठ्यौ किल्ले दानो तो-तें पानी । जीऊँगौ तौ फैरि मिलूँगौ । नईं आय-गई मेरी काल-की बानी । सुनि किल्ले मेरे बीर नल राजा-के कारने तू मति छूजौ दल-गीर । सो भड़क-भड़क नल आँसू डारै रोय किल्ले-सूँ यौं कहै ॥ ३ ॥

रानी-उ रोवै राजा-उ रोवै जा-कौ गढ़ पथरा-कौ गहभह्यौ । सुनि राजा मेरी बात । जा दिन तै-ने हूँ बनवायौ तै-ने चौं न बनाय-दये मेरे दोऊ हात ।

जा दिन राजा कारीगर बुलवाये औरु ऊँचे नीचे तै-ने बुर्ज चिनाये खोदि नीव मेरी धरि-दई औंड़ी । जब राजा तै-ने पाँय न बनवाये । देतौ पाँय बनाय । संग तिहारे चलतौ राजा आधी बिपिता लेतौ बटाय । सो कैसी करूँ हीरा नरबर-वारे मेरौ धरु बासुक-ने गहि-लयौ ॥ ४ ॥

[No. 6.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BRAJ BHĀKHĀ. DISTRICT, ALIGARH.

SPECIMEN II.

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

I

Sōnē rūpē-kē mahal banē Rājā Nal-kē, jā-kē sun-pītari-kē Gold silver-of palaces were-made king Nal-of, which-of brass-of hai-gayē. Aurā̃-jaurā̃ khās ann muṭhī-bhari nā rahyau, Nal-kē became. There(-and)-here pits (of-) grain a-handful not remained, Nal-of hai-gayē kaulā māṭī rākh. Sōnē-kī sā̃kar gwai-ū sun-pītari-kī hai-gaī.
they-became charcoal earth ashes. Gold-of chain that-too brass-of became.
Gwā-ū-tē̃ hai-gayau lōhu. Rānī tau Rājai samajhāwai,
That-too-from became iron. Rānī then Rājā-to makes-to-understand,
'Bal[a]mā, chhōṛau nagar-kau mōhu.' Ab Rānī Rājā dōū panth 'Beloved, give-up city-of affection.' Now queen king both way sidhārai pamari-pai.
go the-gate-at.

II

Bhari chaumāsē sōī Dumē̃tī, jāy
The-entire four-months (i.e. rainy season) slept Damayantī, all-whom chintā byāpī gail-kī. Ābhūkhan layē-samhārī. Khamm-khamm-sū̃ anxiety pervaded road-of. Ornaments she-arranged. Pillar-after-pillar-with milati Dumē̃tī Rānī rōmati chhātī phāri. Nal Rājā-nē bān embracing Damayantī queen weeping bosom rending. Nal Rājā-by arrows samhārē. Kāch mahal, kōṭhār, kulaph Nal-nē jaṛi-dayē tārē.
were-arranged. Crystal palace, store-house, bolts Nal-by were-fastened locks.
Karī killē-sū̃ par[a]nām. Jwālā-mukhī layau Nal-nē khā̃ṛau Was-made the-fort-to salutations. Jwālāmukhī was-taken Nal-by sword kōṭhanu-pai lāl kamān. Gōṭā phā̃sē Nal-nē sab dhari shoulders-at red bow. Counters dice Nal-by all having-been-placed līnē phē̃ṭ-mē̃.
were-taken waistband-in.

III

Rānī Rājā nikari phairi dar^{a}bājē-pai āyē. Kari Rānī Rājā having-come-out again the-doorway-at came. Doing ādhīni, daī parikammā jab, killē-kũ Nal-nē jwāb supplication, was-given perambulation when, fort-to Nal-by answers sunāyē. 'Mērau amaru rahau khāī kōṭu. Mērau were-caused-to-be-heard. 'My everlasting remain moat (and-)fort. My tērau bichhuryau hai, Killē Dādā, jōṭu. Mērau tērau bichhuranu, thy separated is, Fort Brother, company. My thy separation, suni, Killē Bhaiyā, hai-chukyau. Ab mērī tērī Hari-nē bigārī hear, Fort Brother, is-completed. Now mine thine God-by has-been-undone āju. Tō-mẽ, Killē, baiṭhi-kẽ bhũjyau bāman gaṛh-kau maĩ-nē today. Thee-in, Fort, having-sat was-enjoyed fifty-two forts-of me-by rāju. Āju uṭhyau, Killē, dānō tō-tẽ pānī. Jīũgau kingdom. Today rose, Fort, grain thee-from water. (If-)I-shall-live tau phairi milũgau; naĩ āy-gaī merī kāl-kī bānī. Suni, then again I-shall-meet; otherwise came my death-of words. Hear, Killē, mērē bīr, Nal Rājā-kē kār^{a}nē tū mati hūjau dal-gīr.'
Fort, my brother, Nal Rājā-of reason-by thou do-not become sad.'
Sō bhaṛak-bhaṛak Nal ãsū ḍārai rōy killē-sũ yõ kahai.
Thus, in-agitation Nal tears sheds crying fort-to thus says.

IV

Rānī-u rōwai, Rājā-u rōwai, jā-kau gaṛhu path^{a}rā-kau gah^{a}bharyau.
Rānī-too weeps, Rājā-too weeps, whose fort stone-of melted.
'Suni, Rājā, mērī bāt. Jā din tai-nē hũ ban^{a}wāyau, tai-nē 'Hear, Rājā, my word. What day thee-by I was-caused-to-be-built, thee-by chõ na banāy-dayē mērē dōū hāt. Jā din, Rājā, kārīgar why not were-made my two hands. What day, King, masons bul^{a}wāyē, auru ũchē nīchē tai-nē burj chināyē; khōdi were-summoned, and high low thee-by towers were-carved-out; having-dug nīb mērī dhari-daī aũṛī; jab, Rājā, tai-nē pãy na foundations my were-placed deep; then, King, thee-by feet not ban^{a}wāyē, dētau pãy banāy. Saṅg were-caused-to-be-made, (thou-)shouldst-have-given feet having-made. With tihārē chal^{a}tau, Rājā, ādhī bipitā lētau of-thee (I-)would-have-walked, King, half the-misfortune (I-)would-have-taken baṭāy. Sō kaisī karũ, hīrā Nar^{a}bar-wārē, mērau dharu having-shared. So how am-I-to-do, jewel Nar^{a}bar-of, my body Bāsuk-nē gahi-layau.'
Bāsuk-by is-firmly-held.'

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

1. The gold and silver palaces of King Nala all were turned to brass. There were store-houses (pits) on this side and that, but not a handful of grain was left. All his substance was reduced to charcoal, earth, and ashes. His chains of gold, they too changed into brass, and brass itself to iron. The Queen thus counsels the King: 'Forsake, my lord, thy attachment to the city.' Bound for the journey both the King and Queen stand at the threshold.

2. Queen Damayantī who had slept at ease throughout the four months of the rainy season, is now weighed down with anxiety thinking of the journey. She counts her jewels. She gives the parting embrace to each pillar of her home, she weeps as if her very heart would break. King Nala arranges his arrows. He closes his crystal palaces, does King Nala, and locks the store-houses. Saluting the fort King Nala takes up his scimitar Jwālā-mukhī, and hangs the crimson bow over his shoulders, while in his waistband he put his counters and his dice.[1]

3. The King and the Queen then issue forth to the gate. With humble steps the King goes round the fort and addresses it as follows: 'Stand firm, for ever, ye moat and walls, although we must part. Listen, O Fort, the time has come that we must bid farewell, for the Fates have ordained that we must be separated. Seated here in thee I held sway over fifty-two other forts, but henceforth must I seek my bread elsewhere. I will return if life last; if not, death will have summoned me. But, O dear brother Fort, feel not thou care on my account.' Nala shed hot tears while he thus addressed the fort.

4. The King weeps and weeps the Queen; and the heart of the stony fort melts. 'Listen to me, O King, when thou didst build me, why didst not thou construct for me a pair of hands. Thou didst collect the builders and they made the towers high and low, and laid the foundations deep; but why didst not thou shape a pair of feet for me. Had I feet I would go with ye and share half your troubles. Alas! I am helpless, held fast, O jewel of Narbar, as I am in the grasp of Bāsukī.[2]'

---

[1] The ruling passion of gambling still prevails.

[2] Bāsukī supports the earth. The meaning is that the fort cannot accompany the king as it is rooted in the earth.

BRAJ BHĀKHĀ OF AGRA.

Four principal dialects have been reported as spoken in the district of Agra. The town of Agra, the head-quarters of the district, was for many years the capital of the Mughul emperors, hence we have here, and in the country immediately surrounding it, Urdū. In the south of the district, on the bank of the Chambal, the language is the Bhadaurī form of Bundēlī. The rest of the district is divided into two nearly equal parts by a line running approximately north and south. To the west of this line, in the country touching the district of Muttra and the State of Bhartpur, the local officials report the dialect to be Braj Bhākhā: to its east, in the country bounded by Aligarh, Etah, and Mainpuri, they call the dialect simply 'Gā̃w-wārī' or 'Kharī Bōlī.' As will be seen from the specimens, both of these are Braj Bhākhā,—the western dialect agreeing with that of Muttra, and the eastern closely resembling that of Aligarh.

The following are the language figures for the district of Agra:—

Urdū		200,000
Braj Bhākhā, West of District	330,000
„ „ East of District	217,000
		547,000
Bhadaurī		250,000
Other languages		6,796
		1,003,796

These figures are based on the census of 1891.

As a specimen of the form of Braj Bhākhā spoken on the west of the district, I give the first few lines of the Parable of the Prodigal Son. It will be seen that it is quite the same as the dialect of Muttra.

[No. 7.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BRAJ BHĀKHĀ. (WEST OF DISTRICT AGRA.)

एकु आदिमी-कैँ दो पूत हे । उनि-मैँ-से लौहरे-नैँ बाप-तैँ कही कै ऐ काका मेरे बाँट-कौ मालु मोइ दै-दै । तब बा-नैँ मालु बिनि-कूँ बाँटि दियौ । कछुक दिन बीतैँ लौहरौ छौरा सबु इकट्ठौ करि-कैँ दूरि देस-कूँ चल्यौ-गयौ । महाँ बा-नैँ अपनौ मालु कुसंग-मैँ उड़ायौ । जब सबु निबटाइ चुक्यौ बा देस-मैँ अकालु पर्‌यौ । वुह गरीबु होन लाग्यौ । तब बा देस-के एकु बड़े आदिमी-के जहाँ जाइ लग्यौ । बा-नैँ बा-कूँ अपने खेतनि-मैँ सूगर चराइबे-कूँ भेज्यौ ॥

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ēku ādimī̃-kaī̃ dō pūt hē. Un-maī̃-sē lauhᵃrē-naī̃ bāp-tē̃ A man-to two sons were. Them-in-from the-younger-by father-to kahī kai, 'ai kākā, mērē bā̃ṭ-kau mālu mōi dai-dai.' Tab it-was-said that, 'O father, my share-of property to-me give.' Then bā-naī̃ mālu bini-kū̃ bā̃ṭi diyau. Kachhuk din bītaī̃ him-by fortune them-to having-divided was-given. Some days on-passing lauhᵃrau chhaurā sabu iḳaṭṭhau kari-kaī̃ dūri dēs-kū̃ chalyau-gayau.
the-younger son all together made-having distant land-to went-away.
Mahā̃ bā-naī̃ apᵃnau mālu kusaṅg-maī̃ uṛāyau. Jab sabu
There him-by his-own property evil-company-in was-wasted-away. When all nibᵃṭāi-chukyau bā dēs-maī̃ akālu paryau. Buh garību hōn completely-was-finished that country-in famine fell. He poor to-be lāgyau. Tab bā dēs-kē ēku baṛē ādimī-kē jahā̃ jāi began. Then that country-of a great man-of here having-gone lagyau. Bā-nē bā-kū̃ apᵃnē khētanⁱ-maī̃ sūgar charāibē-kū̃ he-attached-himself. Him-by him-as-for his-own fields-in swine feeding-for bhējyau.
it-was-sent.

The Braj Bhākhā spoken in the east of Agra is almost the same as that of Aligarh. It has all the peculiarities of the dialect of the latter district, including the typical pronoun of the third person gu or gwa.

The only important local peculiarity (which also exists to a less extent elsewhere in the Braj Bhākhā tract) is the tendency to drop the y in the past participle. Thus, chalau instead of chalyau. In the specimen we may also notice the following :—

An instrumental singular in ani, as bhūkhani, by hunger, and an oblique plural in enu, as in kamērenu-kũ̃, to servants. Note also the frequent use of contractions observed also in other forms of Braj, Kanaujī, and Bundēlī. Such are khātaĩ, for khāt-aĩ, are eating; dētō, for dēt-ō, he was giving; and mattũ̃, for marat-ũ̃, I am dying.

The specimen consists of the first few lines of the Parable of the Prodigal Son.

[No. 8.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDÍ.

BRAJ BHĀKHĀ. (EAST OF DISTRICT AGRA.)

एक आदिमी-कैँ दो बेटा हे । छोटे बेटा-नै अपने बाप-ते कही कै अरे कक्कू मेरे बाँट-कौ मालु मो-कूँ दै-दै । तब ग्वा-नें मालु गुनि-कूँ बाँटि दयौ । थोड़े दिन पीछे छोटौ मौंड़ा सबु समेंटि-कैँ दूरि देस-कूँ चलौ गयौ । महाँ ग्वा-नें अपनौ मालु खोटे संग-मैँ उड़ाय दयौ । जब सबु निबटाइ चुकौ ग्वा देस-मैँ बड़ौ अकालु परौ । जब गरीब होन लगौ तब ग्वा देस-के एक बड़े आदिमी-कैँ जाइ लगौ । ग्वा-नें ग्वा-कूँ अपने खेतनु-मैँ सूगर घेरिबे-कूँ खँदयौ । ग्वा-की मज्जी जिह ही कै गुनि छोलिकन-ते जिन्हैँ सूगर खातैँ अपनौ पेटु भरूँ जा-के मारैँ कै कोऊ ग्वा-कूँ नहीँ देतौ । तब होस-मैँ आइ-कैँ कही कै मेरे बाप-कैँ भौत-से कमेरेनु-कूँ भौत—सी रोटी हैँ औरु मैँ भूखनि मत्तूँ ॥

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ēk ādimī-kaĩ dō bēṭā hē. Chhōṭē bēṭā-nē apᵃnē bāp-tē
A man-to two sons were. The-younger son-by his-own father-to kahī kai, 'arē kakkū, mērē bā̃ṭ-kau mālu mō-kū̃ dai-dai.' Tab it-was-said that, 'O father, my share-of property me-to give.' Then gwā-nē̃ mālu guni-kū̃ bā̃ṭi dayau. Thōṛē din pīchhē him-by property them-to having-divided was-given. A-few days after chhōṭau maū̃ṛā sabu samaĩṭi-kaĩ dūri dēs-kū̃ chalau-gayau.
the-younger son all collected-having a-distant country-to went-away.
Mahā̃ gwā-nē̃ apᵃnau mālu khōṭē saṅg-maĩ uṛāy-dayau. Jab
There him-by his-own property evil company-in was-squandered. When sabu nibᵃṭāi-chukau gwā dēs-maĩ baṛau akālu parau. Jab all was-finished-completely that country-in a-great famine fell. When garīb hōn lagau, tab gwā dēs-kē ēk baṛē ādimī-kaĩ jāi poor to-be he-began, then that country-of a great man-to going lagau. Gwā-nē̃ gwā-kū̃ apᵃnē khētanu-maĩ sūgar ghēribē-kū̃ he-attached-himself. Him-by him-as-for his-own fields-in swine tending-for khādyau. Gwā-kī majjī jih hī kai, 'guni chhōlikan-tē jinhaĩ sūgar it-was-sent. Him-of desire this was that, 'those husks-with which swine

khātaĩ apᵃnau pēṭu bharũ;' jā-kē-māraĩ kai kōū gwā-kũ eating-are my-own belly I-may-fill;' this-of-on-account that anybody him-to nahĩ dētau. Tab hōs-maĩ āi-kaĩ kahī kai, 'mērē bāp-kaĩ not giving-was. Then senses-in come-having it-was-said that, 'my father-to bhaut-sē kamērenu-kũ bhaut-sī rōṭī haĩ, auru maĩ bhūkhani many-very workers-to many-very loaves are, and I from-hunger maṭṭũ.
dying-am.

[No. 8.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDÍ.

BRAJ BHĀKHĀ. (EAST OF DISTRICT AGRA.)

एक आदिमी-कैँ दो बेटा हे । छोटे बेटा-ने अपने बाप-ते कही कै अरे कक्कू मेरे बाँट-कौ मालु मो-कूँ दै-दै । तब ग्वा-नें मालु गुनि-कूँ बाँटि दयौ । थोड़े दिन पीछे छोटौ मौंड़ा सबु समैटि-कैँ दूरि देस-कूँ चलौ गयौ । महाँ ग्वा-नें अपनौ मालु खोटे संग-मैँ उड़ाय दयौ । जब सबु निबटाइ चुकौ ग्वा देस-मैँ बड़ौ अकालु परौ । जब गरीब होन लगौ तब ग्वा देस-के एक बड़े आदिमी-कैँ जाइ लगौ । ग्वा-नें ग्वा-कूँ अपने खेतनु-मैँ सूगर घेरिबे-कूँ खँदयौ । ग्वा-की मज्जी जिह ही कै गुनि छोलिकन-ते जिन्हैँ सूगर खातैँ अपनौ पेटु भरूँ जा-के मारैँ कै कोऊ ग्वा-कूँ नहीँ देतौ । तब होस-मैँ आइ-कैँ कही कै मेरे बाप-कैँ भौत-से कमेरेनु-कूँ भौत-सी रोटी हैँ औरु मैँ भूखनि मत्तूँ ॥

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ēk ādimī-kaĩ dō bēṭā hē. Chhōṭē bēṭā-nē apᵃnē bāp-tē
A man-to two sons were. The-younger son-by his-own father-to kahī kai, 'arē kakkū, mērē bā̃ṭ-kau mālu mō-kū̃ dai-dai.' Tab

it-was-said that, 'O father, my share-of property me-to give.' Then

gwā-nē̃ mālu guni-kū̃ bā̃ṭi dayau. Thōṛē din pīchhē him-by property them-to having-divided was-given. A-few days after chhōṭau maũṛā sabu samaĩṭi-kaĩ dūri dēs-kū̃ chalau-gayau.

the-younger son all collected-having a-distant country-to went-away.

Mahā̃ gwā-nē̃ apᵃnau mālu khōṭē saṅg-maĩ uṛāy-dayau. Jab
There him-by his-own property evil company-in was-squandered. When sabu nibᵃṭāi-chukau gwā dēs-maĩ baṛau akālu parau. Jab all was-finished-completely that country-in a-great famine fell. When

garīb hōn lagau, tab gwā dēs-kē ēk baṛē ādimī-kaĩ jāi
poor to-be he-began, then that country-of a great man-to going

lagau. Gwā-nē̃ gwā-kū̃ apᵃnē khētanu-maĩ sūgar ghēribē-kū̃
he-attached-himself. Him-by him-as-for his-own fields-in swine tending-for khādyau. Gwā-kī majjī jih hī kai, 'guni chhōlikan-tē jinhaĩ sūgar

it-was-sent. Him-of desire this was that, 'those husks-with which swine

khātaĩ apᵃnau pēṭu bharũ;' jā-kē-māraĩ kai kōū gwā-kũ eating-are my-own belly I-may-fill;' this-of-on-account that anybody him-to nahĩ dētau. Tab hōs-maĩ āi-kaĩ kahī kai, 'mērē bāp-kaĩ not giving-was. Then senses-in come-having it-was-said that, 'my father-to bhaut-sē kamērenu-kũ bhaut-sī rōṭī haĩ, auru maĩ bhūkhani many-very workers-to many-very loaves are, and I from-hunger mattũ.
dying-am.

BRAJ BHĀKHĀ OF DHOLPUR.

To the south of the district of Agra, and, on the east, separated from Gwalior by the river Chambal, lies the State of Dholpur. Here the language is good Braj Bhākhā. The only local peculiarities which I have noticed are the tendency to omit the letter y in the past tenses of verbs (thus, parau instead of paryau, he fell), and the occasional use of the termination ani instead of an for the instrumental singular (e.g. bhũ̃khani, for bhũ̃khan, by hunger). Both of these irregularities also occur in Eastern Agra.

We may also note the word bhã̃, for wahã̃, there.

The number of speakers of Braj Bhākhā in Dholpur is estimated to be 262,335.

A very short specimen of the dialect will suffice.

[No. 9.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BRAJ BHĀKHĀ. (DHOLPUR STATE.)

एक आदमी-कैँ दो मोड़ा हे । उन-मैँ-ते छोटे मोड़ा-नैँ बाप-ते कही बाप जो तेरे पास धन है ता-मैँ-ते मेरे बट-कौ बैठै ते मो-कौँ दै-दै । तौ वा-के बाप-नैँ वा-कौँ बाँटि दयौ । थोरे दिन पाछै छोटौ मोड़ा सबरौ धन इकसूतौ करि परदेस-कौँ चलौ गयौ । भाँ जाइ-कै कछु दिनन-मैँ खोटे कर्मन-मैँ सगरौ धन लुटाइ दयौ । तब वा देस-मैँ बड़ौ भारी अकाल परौ । अब तौ भूँखनि मरन लगौ ॥

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ēk ādᵃmī-kaĩ dō mōṛā hē. Un-maĩ-tē chhōṭē
A-certain man-to two sons were. Them-in-from the-younger mōṛā-naĩ bāp-tē kahī, 'bāp, jō tērē pās dhan hai, son-by father-to it-was-said, 'father, what of-thee near wealth is, tā-maĩ-tē mērē baṭ-kau baiṭhai tē mō-kaũ dai-dai.' Tau wā-kē that-in-from my share-of sits that me-to give.' Then his bāp-naĩ wā-kaũ bãṭi dayau. Thōrē din pāchhai chhōṭau father-by him-to dividing was-given. A-few days after the-younger mōṛā sabᵃrau dhan ikᵃsūtau kari par-dēs-kaũ chalau-gayau.

son all wealth together having-made foreign-country-to went-away.

Bhã jāi-kai kachhu dinan-maĩ khōṭē karman-maĩ sagᵃrau dhan
There gone-having some days-in bad deeds-in entire wealth luṭāi-dayau. Tab wā dēs-maĩ baṛau-bhārī akāl parau.

was-squandered-away. Then that country-in a-mighty famine fell.

Ab tau bhũkhani maran lagau.
Now verily by-hunger to-die he-began.

JĀDŌBĀṬĪ.

The State of Karauli consists partly of plains country, and partly, on the north, south, and east, of broken hill country, known as the Ḍāṅg. In the Ḍāṅg we find a number of broken dialects, mixtures of Braj Bhākhā and Jaipurī which will be discussed later on (vide pp. 329 ff.). The plains country is inhabited mainly by Rājpūts of the Yādava or Jādõ tribe. This tribe also extends across the Chambal into the Gwalior State, where it occupies the district of Sabalgarh, and the north of the district of Shiopur. Oveṛ the whole of the tract in which these Yādavas dwell, the local dialect is known as Jādōbāṭī. This is good Braj Bhākhā, purer even than in Dholpur immediately to its north, for it preserves the y in the past tense. A few lines of the Parable will make this clear.

The only local peculiarities which we may notice are the following :—

The word lahurau, younger, is contracted to lhaurau, which is also common in the Ḍāṅgs, and in Jaipurī. Bhẽṭhānī (literally, in that place) is used to mean 'there.' This too occurs in the Ḍāṅgs, where we have also bhyã and mhã in the same meaning.

The number of speakers of this Jādōbāṭī form of Braj is reported to be as follows : –

Karauli	80,000
Gwalior	60,000
TOTAL .	140,000

[No. 10.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BRAJ BHĀKHĀ (JĀDŌBĀṬĪ). (STATES, KARAULI AND GWALIOR.)

काऊ आदमी-कैं दो माँड़ा हे । विन-में-तैं ल्हौरे-नैं अपने बाप-तैं कही बाप मौं-कौं सामाँ-में-तैं अपनो बट दै-चुकौ । और वा-नैं विन-कौं अपनी सामाँ बाँट-दई । और बौत दिनन-के पीछैं ल्हौरौ माँड़ा सब जोरि-कैं दूर परदेस-में निकर-गयो और भैंठानी सगरी सामाँ उड़ाय दई ॥

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Kāū ādᵃmī-kẽ dō mõṛā hē. Win-mẽ-tẽ lhaurē-nẽ apᵃnē
A-certain man-to two sons were. Them-in-from the-younger-by his-own bāp-tẽ kahī, 'bāp, mõ-kõ sāmã̄-mẽ-tẽ apᵃnō baṭ father-to it-was-said, 'father, me-to property-in-from your-own share dai-chukau.' Aur wā-nẽ win-kõ apᵃnī sāmã̄ bā̃ṭ-daī. Aur give-completely.' And him-by them-to his-own property was-divided. And baut dinan-kē pīchhẽ lhaurau mõṛā sab jōri-kẽ dūr par-dēs-mẽ many days-of after the-younger son all collected-having far foreign-country-in nikar-gayō, aur bhẽṭhānī sagᵃrī sāmã̄ uṛāy-daī.
departed and there entire property was-wasted.

SIKARWĀṚĪ.

North of the tract in the State of Gwalior in which Jādōbāṭī is spoken, and opposite the State of Dholpur, from which it is separated by the river Chambal, lies the Gwalior District of Sikarwar, which is the country of the Sikarwāṛ Rājputs. Here also a form of Braj Bhākhā is found, which is known as Sikarwāṛī. It is not nearly so pure as the Jādōbāṭī to its south or the Braj Bhākhā to its west. Immediately to its east, in the rest of the Gwalior State the dialect is Bundēlī, mainly the Bhadaurī variety. Hence Sikarwāṛī is much mixed with Bundēlī. Jādōbāṭī has been preserved from contamination by that dialect owing to the traditions of the tribe which speaks it, whose history centres round Muttra. Sikarwāṛī has had nothing of the sort to preserve it. It is reported to be spoken by 127,000 people. As a specimen I give a portion of the Parable of the Prodigal Son. The following are the local peculiarities. It will be recognised that they are nearly all due to the neighbouring Bundēlī.

The termination ō is everywhere preferred to au, and the termination of the past participle is ō, not yau. Thus, chukō, he finished; paṛō, he fell. There is the Bhadaurī love for contraction, as in chatt for charat, grazing; matt for marat, dying. As in Bhadaurī, vowels are apt to change, as in keh for kahi, having said. So, also, there is a negative verb substantive, as in nānẽ̃, I am not. The past tense of the verb substantive is hatō or hō, as in Bundēlī. The conjunctive participle is hai-kē, not hwai-kai.

Note also the word for 'there.' It is bhẽ̃ṭhōnī or bhaĩ̃. Compare Jādōbāṭī bhẽ̃ṭhānī, and the Ḍāṅgī bhyã̃ and mhã̃.

The word for 'I' is hũ̃. This is here used not only for the nominative, but also for the oblique singular, as in hũ̃-nē, by me, and hũ̃-kō, to me. In standard Hindōstānī, the reverse has taken place, for in it maĩ̃, I, is by origin an oblique form.

[No. II.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BRAJ BHĀKHĀ (SIKARWĀṚĪ). (GWALIOR STATE.)

किसू मान्स-के दो मोड़ा हते । बिन-में-से लुहरे भैया-ने बाप-से कही बाप मेरो बट मोइ दे-घाल । और बा-ने अपनी जागीर बिन-में बाट-दई । और बहुत दिनन बाद लुहरो मोड़ा सगको भेलो-कर-के टूर-के देस-को चल-दियो और भँठोनी सगरो माल वाहियात-में उड़ाय-दयो । और जब सगरो माल उड़ाय-चुको मँठोनी बड़ो अकाल पड़ो और बो तंगी-में है-गयो । और बा देस-की बस्ती-के एक मान्स-से मिलो । और बा-ने बिस-को सुअरियाँ चराने अपने खेत-में पठै-दयो । और मैं बा-ने सोया-से जो सुअरियाँ चत्त-हीं अपनो पेट भरो । जब बा-के मूड़-में लगी तौ सोचो और जी-में कह-उठो मेरे बाप-के बहुत-से महीन्दार खूब रोटी खात-हैं और बचाय लेत-हैं और हूँ भूखन मत्त-हौं । हूँ अपने बाप-के ढिंग जाओंगो और कहौंगो हूँ-ने राम-जी-की मर्जी-के गैर काम कियो और तेरे सामने कियो और अब तेरो मोड़ा कहलायबे-के लायक नानें । हूँ-को अपने महीन्दारन-में राख-ले । और ठाड़ो है-के अपने बाप-के ढिंग-को चलो ॥

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Kisū māns-kē dō mōṛā hatē. Bin-mẽ̃-sē luhªrē bhaiyā-nē
A-certain man-of two sons were. Them-in-from the-younger brother-by bāp-sē kahī, 'bāp, mērō baṭ mōi dē-ghāl.' Aur bā-nē father-to it-was-said, 'father, my share to-me give.' And him-by apªnī jāgīr bin-mẽ̃ bāṭ daī. Aur bahut dinan bād his-own estate them-in dividing was-given. And many days after luhªrō mōṛā sag-kō bhēlō kar-kē dūr-kē dēs-kō the-younger son all-to together made-having a-far-of country-to chal-diyō, aur bhẽ̃ṭhōnī sagªrō māl wāhiyāt-mẽ̃ took-his-journey, and there all property riotous-living-in uṛāy-dayō. Aur jab sagªrō māl uṛāy-chukō bhẽ̃ṭhōnī baṛō was-squandered. And when all property had-been-wasted there a-great akāl paṛō. Aur bō taṅgī-mẽ̃ hai-gayō; aur bā dēs-kī famine fell. And he difficulty-in became; and that country-of bastī-kē ēk māns-sē milō. Aur bā-nē bis-kō suariyā̃ charānē village-of one man-to he-joined. And him-by him-to swine to-feed apⁿnē khēt-mẽ̃ paṭhai-dayō. Aur bhaĩ bā-nē mōthā-sē jō suariyā̃ his-own field-in it-was-sent. And there he husks-with which swine chatt-hĩ̃ apⁿnō pēṭ bharyō. Jab bā-kē mūṛ-mẽ̃ lagī eating-were his-own belly was-filled. When his head-in it-was-applied tau sōchō aur jī-mẽ̃ keh-uṭhō, 'mērē bāp-kē bahut-sē then he-thought and heart-in he-said, 'my father-of many-very mahīn-dār khūb rōṭī khāt-haĩ, aur bachāy-lēt-haĩ; aur hũ̃ bhūkhan servants much bread eating-are, and saving-are; and I of-hunger matt-hõ̃. Hũ̃ apⁿnē bāp-kē ḍhiṅg jāõ̃gō aur kahõ̃gō, "hũ̃-nē dying-am. I my-own father-of near will-go and will-say, "me-by Rāmⁿjī-kī marjī-kē gair kām kiyō, aur tērē sāmⁿnē kiyō;

God-of will-of against work was-done, and thy in-presence was-done;
aur ab tērō mōṛā kahⁿlāyⁿbē-kē lāyak nānẽ̃. Hũ̃-kō apⁿnē and now thy son being-called-of worthy I-am-not. Me-to your-own mahīndāran-mẽ̃ rākh-lē."' Aur ṭhāṛō-hai-kē apⁿnē bāp-kē servants-among keep."' And arisen-having his-own father-of ḍhiṅg-kō chalō.
near he-went.

BRAJ BHĀKHĀ OF ETAH.

The District of Etah lies between Aligarh, in which the dialect is Braj Bhākhā, and Farukhabad, where Kanaujī is spoken. The Etah dialect is nearly pure Braj Bhākhā. It does not show any of the peculiarities of Aligarh, but agrees much more closely with the standard of Muttra. The only local peculiarity is the preference of the termination ō, instead of the Braj Bhākhā au. Also y is dropped in the past participle, so that we have forms like chalō instead of chalyau, he went. These are Kanaujī peculiarities, and are to be expected from the geographical position of the country in which they are found. We may also note the Braj Bhākhā change of w to m, as in jāmẽ, they may take away, and the usual tendency to contraction, as in põchō, for pahũchō, he arrived; kã, for kahã, there; and bã, for bahã or wahã, there. Note also the contraction ṭhākus-sā, for ṭhākur-sāhib, in which we have the common elision of r before another consonant with doubling of the latter. The contraction sā for sāhib, is found in widely distant parts of India, e.g. both in Kāshmīrī and in Bihārī. Note also the Braj Bhākhā spelling hāt for hāth, a hand.

The specimen of the Etah dialect is a folk-tale illustrating the stupidity of the men of the Kōrī, or Hindū weaver, caste. In Indian folklore weavers, whether Hindūs or Musalmāns, occupy the place of the fool of European story. In the present tale, a Kōrī is taken on forced labour by his Ṭhākur landlord, and exhibits the usual desperate silliness of his tribe.

No. 12.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BRAJ BHĀKHĀ. (DISTRICT, ETAH.)

एकु ठाकुरु हो। बा-नें एक कोरिया-कूँ बेगार-में पकरो और अपनी घुड़िया-के संग बाइ लिबाइ-कें अपनी सुसरार-कूँ चलो। तब कोरिया-की मैतारी-नें कही कि बेटा जब ठाकुरु खुसी हों तब अढ़ाई सेर रुई माँग-लीये। कोरिया ठाकुरु-के संग चल-भयो। जब ठाकुरु सुसरार-में भीतर गओ कोरिया-कूँ अपनी घुड़िया थमाय-गओ और जताइ-गओ कि जाइ चोट्टा न लै-जामें। आधी रात भयें कोरिया सोइ-गओ। घुड़िया चोर लै-गये। धौतायें बा-नें देखो तो घुड़िया न पाई। लगाम लै-कें अटरिया-में जा जग्गे ठाकुरु सोवत-हे पौंचो और कही कि ओ ठाकुस-सा अटलन-खुनखुन तो मो-पै है। हुनहुन का तुम लै-गये-हो। जे सुनि ठाकुरु उठि-कें ढूँड़बे-कूँ भाजे। कोरिया बिन-के संग लगि-लओ। राह-में एक नदिया परी। ठाकुरु-नें कोरिया-कूँ अपनी तरबार गहाइ-दई और कही कि मेरे संग उतरि-आ। जब बीचौं-बीच पौंचो तरबार मियान-में-तें निकरि-परी। कोरिया-नें कही ओ ठाकुस-सा जा-में-सूँ मिंगी निकरि-परी और चोकलो मो-पै रहि-गओ। ठाकुरु-नें कही कि काँ गिरि-परी। तब बा कोरिया-नें नदिया-में मियान फेंक-कें बतायो कि बाँ गिरो-है। मियान-हू बह-गओ। जा-पै ठाकुरु खूब हँसे। कोरिया-नें हात जोरि-कें कही कि भले ठाकुरु अम्मा-नें अढ़ाई सेर रुई माँगी-है।

[No. 12.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BRAJ BHĀKHĀ. (DISTRICT, ETAH.)

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ēku ṭhākuru hō. Bā-nẽ ēk kōriyā-kũ bēgār-mẽ pakᵃrō,
A Ṭhākur was. Him-by a Kōrī-to forced-labour-in it-was-seized, aur apᵃnī ghuṛiyā-kē saṅg bāi libāi-kẽ apᵃnī susᵃrār-kũ and his-own mare-of with him taken-having his-own father-in-law's-house-to chalō. Tab kōriyā-kī maitārī-nẽ kahī ki, 'bēṭā, jab he-went. Then the-Kōrī-of mother-by it-was-said that, 'son, when ṭhākuru khusī hõ̃, tab aṛhāī sēr ruī mãg-līyē.'
the-Ṭhākur pleased may-be (plur.), then two-and-a-half seers cotton ask-for.'
Kōriyā ṭhākuru-kē saṅg chal-bhayō. Jab ṭhākuru
The-Kōrī the-Ṭhākur-of with departed. When the-Ṭhākur susᵃrār-mẽ bhītar gaō, kōriyā-kũ apᵃnī ghuṛiyā thamāy-gaō, father-in-law's-house-in inside went, the-Kōrī-to his-own mare he-entrusted, aur jatāi-gaō ki, 'jāi choṭṭā na la-jāmẽ.' Ādhī rāt and warned(-him) that, 'this thieves not let-take-away.' Half night bhayẽ kōriyā sōi-gaō. Ghuṛiyā chōr lai-gayē. Dhautāyẽ on-becoming the-Kōrī to-sleep-went. The-mare thieves took-away. At-dawn bā-nẽ dēkhō, tō ghuṛiyā na pāī. Lagām lai-kẽ him-by it-was-seen, verily mare not was-found. The-bridle taken-having aṭariyā-mẽ jā jaggai ṭhākuru sōwat-hē põ̃chō, the-upper-chamber-in what place the-Ṭhākur sleeping-was (plur.) he-arrived, aur kahī ki, 'ō ṭhākus-sā, aṭᵃlan-khunᵃkhun tō mō-pai hai;
and it-was-said that, 'O Ṭhākur-Sir, aṭlan-khunkhun verily me-with is;
hunᵃhun kā tum lai-gayē-hō?' Jē suni ṭhākuru hunhun (interrogative) you took-away?' These having-heard the-Ṭhākur uṭhi-kẽ ḍhūṇᵃbē-kũ bhājē. Kōriyā bin-kē saṅg lagi-laō.
arisen-having searching-for ran (plur.). The-Kōrī him-of with accompanied.
Rāh-mẽ ēk nadiyā parī. Ṭhākuru-nẽ kōriyā-kũ apᵃnī tarᵃbār
The-road-in a river fell. The-Ṭhākur-by the-Kōrī-to his-own sword gahāi-daī, aur kahī ki, 'mērē saṅg utari-ā.' Jab was-handed-over, and it-was-said that, 'me-of with across-come.' When bīchõ̃-bīch põ̃chō tarᵃbār miyān-mẽ-tẽ nikari-parī.
middle-middle he-arrived the-sword the-scabbard-in-from out-fell.

Kōriyā-nẽ kahī, 'ō ṭhākus-sā, jā-mẽ-sũ miṅgī nikari-parī,
The-Kōrī-by it-was-said, 'O Ṭhākur-Sir, this-in-from the-kernel out-fell, aur chōk[a]lō mō-pai rahi-gaō.' Ṭhākuru-nẽ kahī ki, 'kã and the-shell me-with remained.' The-Ṭhākur-by it-was-said that, 'where giri-parī?' Tab bā kōriyā-nẽ nadiyā-mẽ miyān phẽk-kẽ did-it-fall?' Then that Kōrī-by the-river-in the-scabbard thrown-having batāyō ki, 'bã girō-hai.' Miyān-hū bah-gaō.
it-was-shown that, 'there it-fallen-is.' The-scabbard-also floated-away.
Jā-pai ṭhākuru khūb hãsē. Kōriyā-nẽ hāt jōri-kẽ This-on the-Ṭhākur much laughed. The-Kōrī-by hands folded-having kahī ki, 'bhalē, ṭhākuru, ammā-nẽ aṛhāī sēr ruī it-was-said that, 'good, Ṭhākur, mammy-by two-and-a-half seers cotton mãgī-hai.'
asked-for-is.'

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

There was a Ṭhākur. He caught a Kōrī for forced labour, and taking him with his mare departed to his wife's home. Then the mother of the Kōrī said, 'O son, when the Ṭhākur is in a good humour, ask for 2½ seers of cotton.' The Kōrī departed with the Ṭhākur. When the Ṭhākur went inside his wife's house, he entrusted his mare to the Kōrī and warned him to take care that it was not taken away by thieves. At midnight the Kōrī slept, and some thieves took away the mare. At morning when the mare could not be found, the Kōrī, taking the bridle, went to the upper-room where the Ṭhākur was sleeping and said, 'O Ṭhākur Sāhib, Aṭlan Khunkhun[1] is with me, have you taken away Hunhun?' Hearing this the Ṭhākur got up and ran to search for the mare. The Kōrī went with him. On the way they came to a stream. The Ṭhākur handed over his sword to the Kōrī and ordered him to cross over with him. When they had just reached the middle of the stream the sword fell out from its scabbard. Said the Kōrī, 'O Ṭhākur Sāhib, the kernel has fallen out and only the shell has remained with me.' The Ṭhākur asked where it had fallen out. Then the Kōrī threw the sheath into the stream and pointed out, 'there is where it has fallen.' The scabbard also flowed away. On this the Ṭhākur laughed heartily. Then the Kōrī folding his hands said, 'Good Ṭhākur, my mammy has asked for 2½ seers of cotton.'[2] [1] Aṭlan Khunkun is meant to represent the jingling sound of the bridle, and Hunhun, the neighing of the mare.

---

[2] The Ṭhākur, of course, laughed at the stupidity of the Kōrī; but the latter thought he was pleased with him, and hence put in his petition for the cotton.

BRAJ BHĀKHĀ OF MAINPURI.

Immediately to the south of Etah lies the District of Mainpurī. The following specimen from that locality shows that the dialect is just the same as that of Etah. There is the same tendency to use the Kanaujī termination ō instead of au, and to omit the y of the past participle. The specimen consists of the first few lines of the Parable of the Prodigal Son. There are several examples of the elision of r with doubling of the following consonant. Thus, khachchu for kharchu, expenditure; kad-daō for kar-daō, he made; mann for maran, to die: and mattu for maratu, dying.

This form of Braj Bhākhā is spoken over the whole of the district except in the extreme south-west, on the banks of the Jamna, where we find about 8,000 people employing the Bhadaurī form of Bundēlī.

[No. 13.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BRAJ BHĀKHĀ. (DISTRICT, MAINPURĪ.)

एकु-के दो लड़िका हे। उन-में-से छोटे-ने बाप-से कही बाप हो जो हमारो हिस्सा निकरै सो हमैं दे देउ। तब वा-ने उन-को मालु बाँटि दओ। कछु दिन पीछे छोटे लड़िका-ने सब मालु इक-ठोरो करो और दूर-के मुलिक-को चलो गयो और हुअन वा-ने अपनो मालु बुरी बातन-में खच्चु कद्दओ। और जब-हीं वा-को सबरो मालु उठि गओ तब-हीं हुआँ अकालु परो। और जब-हीं वह भूँखन मन्न लगो तब-हीं एकु वा मुलिक-के बड़े आदमी-के ढिंग गओ। तब वा-ने वा-को अपने खेतन-में सूअर चराइबे-को पठओ। और वह चाँहतु-ई-हो कि सूअर-के बचे खुचे छुकलन-से अपनो पेट भरै काहे-सों कि वाय कोई कछु देतु नाहीं हो। और जब वा-की अकिलि ठिकाने आई वा-ने कही कि मेरे-ई बाप-के हिअन बहुत-से मजूरन-को रोटी ही और मैं भूँखन मत्तु-हौं॥

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ēku-kē dō laṛikā hē. Un-mẽ-sē chhōṭē-nē bāp-sē
One-of two sons were. Them-in-from the-younger-by the-father-to kahī, 'bāp hō, jō hamārō hissā nikarai, sō hamaĩ il-was-said, 'father O, what my share may-come-out, that to-me dē-dēu.' Tab wā-nē un-kō mālu bãṭi-daō. Kachhu din give-away.' Then him-by them-to property was-divided. Some days pīchhē chhōṭē laṛikā-nē sab mālu ik-ṭhōrō karō, aur afterwards the-younger son-by all property in-one-place was-made, and dūr-kē mulik-kō chalō-gayō, aur huan wā-nē apᵃnō mālu distance-of country-to he-went-away, and there him-by his-own property burī bātan-mẽ kachchu kad-daō. Aur jab-hĩ wā-kō sabᵃrō evil affairs-in expenditure was-made. And when-even his all mālu uṭhi-gaō, tab-hĩ huã akālu parō. Aur jab-hĩ property was-squandered, then-even there a-famine fell. And when-even wah bhũkhan mann lagō, tab-hĩ ēku wā mulik-kē baṛē ādᵃmī-kē he by-hunger to-die began, then-even one that country-of a-great man-of ḍhiṅg gaō. Tab wā-nē wā-kō apᵃnē khētan-mẽ̃ sūar charāibē-kō near he-went. Then him-by him-to his-own fields-in swine feeding-for paṭhaō. Aur wah chā̃hatu-ī-hō ki sūar-kē bachē-khuchē it-was-sent. And he wishing-even-was that the-swine-of superfluous chhukᵃlan-sē apᵃnō pēṭ bharai, kāhē-sõ̃ ki wāy husks-by his-own belly he-may-fill, why-from(i.e. because) that to-him kōī kachhu dētu-nāhī̃-hō. Aur jab wā-kī akili ṭhikānē anyone anything giving-not-was. And when him-of sense in-correctness āī, wā-nē kahī ki, 'mērē-ī bāp-kē hian bahut-sē came, him-by it-was-said that, 'my-even father-of near many-very majūran-kō rōṭī hī, aur maĩ bhū̃khan mattu-hõ̃.'

servants-to bread was, and I by-hunger dying-am.'

BRAJ BHĀKHĀ OF BAREILLY.

North of Budaun lies the district of Bareilly with the district of Pilibhit to its east and the State of Rampur to its west. The dialect of the former is Kanaujī (with an admixture of Braj Bhākhā), and of the latter Hindōstānī.

The dialect spoken in Bareilly is good Braj Bhākhā. The only local peculiarities which I have noticed are the use of ō instead of au as the termination of strong adjectives, and the form bau or bahu for 'he.' The verbs dēnaũ, to give, and lēnaũ, to take, make their past participles dawō, and lawō, after the Kanaujī fashion, instead of diyau or dayau. We may also note that owing to the fact that Bareilly was long under Musalmān domination there is a greater use of Arabic and Persian words than in the Braj Bhākhā tract proper.

The population of Bareilly was 1,040,691 in 1891. The languages spoken were (taking corrected figures) divided as follows :—

Braj Bhākhā (wrongly returned as Rōhilkhaṇḍī)	857,213
Urdū	180,000
Other languages	3,478
TOTAL .	1,040,691

The Urdū is spoken principally by Musalmāns, by Kāyasths, and in the towns.

[No. 14.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BRAJ BHĀKHĀ. (DISTRICT, BAREILLY.)

एक जने-के दुइ लौंड़ा है। उन-में-से लहुरे-ने बाप-से कही कि ए बाप माल-में जो मेरा बाँट है बौ मोय दै-देव। तब बाप-ने उसै माल बाँट दवो। थोड़े दिन पाछे लहुरो लड़का सब माल एकट्ठो कर-के परदेस-को चलो-गवो। और हुँआ सब रुपया बाइयात-में उड़ाय-दवो। जब उस-के ढिंग कछु नाँहि रहो और उस देस-में बड़ो अक्काल पड़ो तौ बौ नंगो भूँखो और दुखी हुइ-के उस देस-के एक भागमान आदमी-के घर गवो॥

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ēk janē-kē dui laũṛā hē. Un-mẽ-sē lahurē-nē bāp-sē
One man-of two sons were. Them-in-from the-younger-by the-father-to kahī ki, 'ē bāp, māl-mẽ jō mērā bãṭ hai bau mōy it-was-said that, 'O father, property-in what my share is that to-me dai-dēw.' Tab bāp-nē usai māl bãṭ dawō.
give-away.' Then the-father-by him-to property having-divided was-given.
Thōṛē din pāchhē lahurō laṛ^{a}kā sab māl ēkaṭṭhō kar-kē
A-few days after the-younger son all property in-one-place made-having par-dēs-kō chalō-gawō. Aur hũā sab rup^{a}yā bāiyāt-mẽ uṛāy-dawō.
foreign-land-to went-away. And there all rupees dissipation was-squandered.
Jab us-kē ḍhiṅg kachhu nãhi rahō, aur us dēs-mẽ baṛō
When him-of near anything not remained, and that country-in great akkāl paṛō, tau bau naṅgō bhũkhō aur dukhī hui-kē us famine fell, then he naked hungry and distressed become-having that dēs-kē ēk bhāg^{a}mān ād^{a}mī-kē ghar gawō.
country-of one fortunate man-of house(-to) he-went.

BRAJ BHĀKHĀ MERGING INTO HINDŌSTĀNĪ.

The dialect of the districts of Bulandshahr and Budaun is on the whole good Braj Bhākhā, but in both localities it is much mixed with the Hindōstānī of the upper Doab and of western Rohilkhand. In Bareilly, to the north of Budaun, this mixture is not apparent, although Bareilly and Budaun both show traces of the influence of the Kanaujī spoken to their east. We thus see that Budaun is infected from both directions. The Kanaujī infection consists in the use of ō instead of yau as the termination of past participles, as in chalō instead of chalyau.

In the Naini Tal Tarai there is spoken a mongrel mixture of Braj Bhākhā, Hindōstānī and Kanaujī. We thus get the following figures for the districts in which Braj Bhākhā merges into Hindōstānī:—

Bulandshahr	941,000
Budaun	826,500
Naini Tal	199,521
	1,967,021

BRAJ BHĀKHĀ OF BULANDSHAHR.

Bulandshahr is the most northern district of the Doab in which Braj Bhākhā is spoken. Beyond it lies Meerut, of which the language is ordinary Vernacular Hindōstānī. The Braj Bhākhā of Bulandshahr does not vary much from that of Muttra. The main difference is the preference for the termination ō, instead of the au which is so characteristic of the standard form of the dialect. Even this is probably only a question of spelling and not of pronunciation, for in Muttra, where the au-sound undoubtedly exists, it is as often as not represented by ō, in writing.

Bulandshahr is separated from Muttra by Aligarh, but we do not find the pronoun of the third person, gu, which is so prominent in the latter district.

On the other hand, we sometimes meet with a few instances of borrowing from the Hindōstānī of Meerut,—usually the employment of the termination ā instead of ō or au. Thus, hamārā for hamārō. These borrowings, as might be expected, occur in the north of the district on the Meerut border.

The Hindōstānī of Meerut is called by those natives of India who live to its east Pachhāṛī, i.e. the language of the west. The original rough list of the languages of Bulandshahr showed 939,000 people as speaking Pachhāṛī, and 2,000 as speaking Braj Bhākhā. The local authorities evidently meant that there 939,000 people used a language differing from Braj Bhākhā. The difference consists, as explained above, in the occasional use of Pachhāṛī expressions. The basis of the whole is, however, undoubtedly Braj Bhākhā, so that we are justified in putting the number of speakers of that dialect in Bulandshahr as 941,000, it being remembered that about 2,000, in the south of the district, speak it more purely than elsewhere. This will be evident from the following specimen which consists of the first few lines of the Parable of the Prodigal Son :—

The following are the main peculiarities of the Bulandshahr Braj Bhākhā. The sign of the accusative dative is kō, and not kũ̃. The accusative plurals of the first two personal pronouns are hamẽ̃ and tumhẽ̃, and their genitive plurals are hamārā and tumhārā. The nominative singular of the pronoun of the third person is wō or wā. The past tense of the auxiliary verb is hō, not hau, and its masculine plural is hē or hai. Finite verbs form their present and imperfect tense with a form in ē, instead of atu. Thus, ham rahē haĩ, I am living; sūar charē-hē, the pigs were grazing; pēṭ bharē-hē, he was filling his belly. So, kōī dē-nāī, no one was giving. This peculiarity, and also the forms hamẽ̃, etc. are also found in Meerut.

[No. 15.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BRAJ BHĀKHĀ. (DISTRICT, BULANDSHAHR.)

एक आदमी-के दो लड़के है । छोटे-ने कही बापू हमारा हिस्सा हमें दे-दे । उस-ने अपना हिस्सा वा-को बाँट-देओ । छोटो थोरे-ही दिन-में अपनो माल जमा परदेस-को ले-के चलो गयो । वहाँ सब लुँगाड़पने-में बरबाद कर्यो । जब सब बरबाद कर चुक्यो वा देस-में जबरा अकाल पर्यो । वा भूखो कंगाल हो-गयो । वा एक कोई-के नौकर हो-गयो । वा-ने सुअरन चुगाने-पे नौकर कर-दियो । जब वा-को कोई कुछ दे-नाई तो वो जो सूअर चरे-हे खोकटा वा-से पेट भरे-हे ॥

[No. 15.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

BRAJ BHĀKHĀ. (DISTRICT, BULANDSHAHR.)

Ēk ādᵃmī-kē dō laṛᵃkē hai. Chhōṭē-nē kahī, 'bāpū,
One man-of two sons were. The-younger-by it-was-said, 'father hamārā hissā hamẽ dē-dē.' Us-nē apᵃnā hissā wā-kō bāṭ my share to-me give.' Him-by his-own share him-to dividing

dēō. Chhōṭō thōrē-hī din-mẽ apᵃnō māl was-given. The-younger a-few-very days-in his-own property jamā par-dēs-kō lē-kē chalō-gayō. Wahã̄ sab (having-)collected a-foreign-country-to taken-having went-away. There all lũgāṛᵃpanē-mẽ barᵃbād karyō. Jab sab barᵃbād kar-chukyō wickedness-in wasted was-made. When all wasting was-completed wā dēs-mẽ jabᵃrā akāl paryō. Wā bhūkhō kaṅgāl hō-gayō.

that country-in a-great famine fell. He hungry indigent became.

Wā ēk kōī-kē naukar hō-gayō. Wā-nē suaran chugānē-pē He one someone-of servant became. Him-by swine feeding-on naukar kar-diyō. Jab wā-kō kōī kuchh dē-nāī, servant he-was-made. When him-to any anything giving-was-not,

tō wō jō sūar charē-hē khōkᵃṭā wā-sē pēṭ bharē-hē.
then he what swine eating-were husks that-with belly filling-he-was.

BRAJ BHĀKHĀ (KAṬHĒRIYĀ) OF BUDAUN.

North of Etah, across the Ganges, lies the district of Budaun, in Rohilkhand. Here also Braj Bhākhā (not Rōhilkhaṇḍī as originally reported) is spoken. The dialect is locally known as Kaṭhēriyā, from Kaṭhēr, the name of Eastern Rohilkhand, although the true Kaṭhēr country is to the north in the district of Bareilly. North-west of Budaun lies the district of Moradabad, the dialect of which is Hindōstānī, and hence we see traces of the influence of that dialect in Budaun. Such are the use of thā (plural thē), as well as hō for 'was'; of us as well as wā, him; and of kō for the accusative-dative as well as for the genitive. The only peculiar local form which I have noticed is tumhrō, for tumhārō, your. For adjectives and participles, the termination ō is preferred to au.

As a specimen, I give a short extract from the Parable of the Prodigal Son. It is in the Persian character, as received from the local officers.

The number of speakers of Kaṭhēriyā in Budaun is reported to be 826,500.

[No. 16.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BRAJ BHĀKHĀ (KAṬHĒRIYĀ). (DISTRICT, BUDAUN.)

ایک آدمی کے دو لڑکا تھے۔ تا مین سے چھوٹے نے اپنے پتا سے کہی کہ
پتا تمھرے دھن مین جو میرو ہوت ہو وا مجکو بانٹ دو۔ وا کے پتا نے
اوسکے بانٹے کا جو تھا واکو دیدیو۔ نیک دنن مین واکو چھوٹو پوت سگرو
دھن اکٹھو کرکے کہون دور کے دیس کو نکس گئو اور وا دیس مین
اپنو سگرو دھن بُرے کامن مین بتار دیو۔ جب وا کے پاس کچھو نا
بچو وا دیس مین گمبھیر اکال پرو کہ وا بھکاری ہیگیو۔ تو ایک
بھاگوان دھنی کی بکھریمین گئو اور وا کے چیلن مین نوکر بھیو۔ دانے
یاکو اپنے کھیتن مین سورن چراون کو بھیجدیو۔ یا کھوسی سے اپنو
پیٹ اون جڑن سے بھر لیتو جاکو سور جنا ور کھات ہین۔ جڑن
بھی یاکو کوُ نا دیت ہو۔

[No. 16.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

BRAJ BHĀKHĀ (KAṬHĒRIYĀ). (DISTRICT, BUDAUN.)

Ēk ādmī-kē dō laṛkā thē. Tā-mẽ-sē chhōṭē-nē apnē
One man-of two sons were. Them-in-from the-younger-by his-own pitā-sē kahī ki, 'pitā, tumhrē dhan-mẽ jō mērō hōt-hō, father-to it-was-said that, 'father, your wealth-in what mine may-be,

wā muj(h)-kō bãṭ dō.' Wā-kē pitā-nē us-kē bãṭē-kā jō that me-to dividing give.' Him-of father-by his share-of what thā wā-kō dē-diō. Nēk dinan-mẽ wā-kō chhōṭō pūt sigrō was him-to was-given-away. A-few days-in his younger son entire

dhan ikṭhō kar-kē kahũ dūr-kē dēs-kō nikas-gayō, aur wealth together made-having some distance-of country-to out-went, and

wā dēs-mẽ apnō sigrō dhan burē kāman-mẽ, bitār-diō.
that country-in his-own entire wealth evil deeds-in was-squandered.

Jab wā-kē pās kachhō nā bachō, wā dēs-mẽ gambhīr
When him-of near anything not remained, that country-in a-severe

akāl parō ki wā bhikārī hai-gayō. Tō ēk bhāgwān dhanī-kī famine fell that he poor became. Then a fortunate rich-man-of bakhri-mẽ gayō aur wā-kē chēlan-mẽ nōkar bhayō. Wā-nē house-in he-went and him-of dependents-in servant became. Him-by

yā-kō apnē khētan-mẽ sūaran charāwan-kō bhēj-diō. Yā him-for his-own fields-in swine feeding-for it-was-sent. He

khūsī-sē apnō pēṭ un jaṛan-sē bhar-lēto, jā-kō happiness-with his-own belly those roots-with would-have-filled, which sūar janāwar khāt-hẽ. Jaṛan bhī yā-kō kōū nā the-swine animals eating-were. Roots even him-to anyone not dēt-hō.

giving-was.

THE BHUKSĀ DIALECT OF THE TARĀĪ.

The Tarāī parganas of the Naini-Tal district run by the foot of the Kumaon Hills along the northern border of the State of Rampur and the districts of Bareilly and Pilibhit. The dialect of Rampur is Hindōstānī, of Bareilly Braj Bhākhā, and of Pilibhit Kanaujī. The Tarāī is inhabited by a number of broken hill tribes, such as the Thārūs and Bhuksās, as well as by immigrants from the plains. These have developed a mongrel mixed dialect, made up of Hindōstānī, Braj Bhākhā, and Kanaujī, with an infusion of the Kumaunī of the hills. The Thārūs and Bhuksās have lost their aboriginal languages, if they ever had one. The dialect has been returned as 'Bhuksā' from the name of one of these tribes. I class it as a form of Braj Bhākhā, but it might just as easily appear as a form of Kanaujī. The number of its speakers is reported to be 199,521.

A brief extract from a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son will suffice as an example of this dialect, and well illustrates its mixed character.

In the first sentence we have kā used as a sign of the oblique genitive, which comes from Kumaunī. In the next line we have kā as the sign of the direct genitive which is Hindōstānī. So are kō, the sign of the accusative-dative and words like mērā, my, and others. On the other hand, hē, were, is Braj Bhākhā, while dāo, gave, gaō, went, are Kanaujī. The only peculiar form which I have noticed is nāī (beside nē) as the sign of the agent case.

[No. 16.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDÎ.

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

BRAJ BHĀKHĀ (KAṬHĒRIYĀ). (DISTRICT, BUDAUN.)

Ēk ādmī-kē dō laṛkā thē. Tā-mẽ-sē chhōṭē-nē apnē
One man-of two sons were. Them-in-from the-younger-by his-own

pitā-sē kahī ki, 'pitā, tumhrē dhan-mẽ jō mērō hōt-hō, father-to it-was-said that, 'father, your wealth-in what mine may-be,

wā muj(h)-kō bãṭ dō.' Wā-kē pitā-nē us-kē bãṭē-kā jō that me-to dividing give.' Him-of father-by his share-of what

thā wā-kō dē-diō. Nēk dinan-mẽ wā-kō chhōṭō pūt sigrō was him-to was-given-away. A-few days-in his younger son entire

dhan ikṭhō kar-kē kahũ dūr-kē dēs-kō nikas-gayō, aur
wealth together made-having some distance-of country-to out-went, and

wā dēs-mẽ apnō sigrō dhan burē kāman-mẽ bitār-diō.
that country-in his-own entire wealth evil deeds-in was-squandered.

Jab wā-kē pās kachhō nā bachō, wā dēs-mẽ gambhīr
When him-of near anything not remained, that country-in a-severe

akāl parō ki wā bhikārī hai-gayō. Tō ēk bhāgwān dhanī-kī famine fell that he poor became. Then a fortunate rich-man-of bakhri-mẽ gayō aur wā-kē chēlan-mẽ nōkar bhayō. Wā-nē house-in he-went and him-of dependents-in servant became. Him-by

yā-kō apnē khētan-mẽ sūaran charāwan-kō bhēj-diō. Yā him-for his-own fields-in swine feeding-for it-was-sent. He

khūsī-sē apnō pēṭ un jaṛan-sē bhar-lēto, jā-kō happiness-with his-own belly those roots-with would-have-filled, which sūar janāwar khāt-hẽ. Jaṛan bhī yā-kō kōū nā

the-swine animals eating-were. Roots even him-to anyone not

dēt-hō.
giving-was.

THE BHUKSĀ DIALECT OF THE TARĀĪ.

The Tarāī parganas of the Naini-Tal district run by the foot of the Kumaon Hills along the northern border of the State of Rampur and the districts of Bareilly and Pilibhit. The dialect of Rampur is Hindōstānī, of Bareilly Braj Bhākhā, and of Pilibhit Kanaujī. The Tarāī is inhabited by a number of broken hill tribes, such as the Thārūs and Bhuksās, as well as by immigrants from the plains. These have developed a mongrel mixed dialect, made up of Hindōstānī, Braj Bhākhā, and Kanaujī, with an infusion of the Kumaunī of the hills. The Thārūs and Bhuksās have lost their aboriginal languages, if they ever had one. The dialect has been returned as 'Bhuksā' from the name of one of these tribes. I class it as a form of Braj Bhākhā, but it might just as easily appear as a form of Kanaujī. The number of its speakers is reported to be 199,521.

A brief extract from a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son will suffice as an example of this dialect, and well illustrates its mixed character.

In the first sentence we have kā used as a sign of the oblique genitive, which comes from Kumaunī. In the next line we have kā as the sign of the direct genitive which is Hindōstānī. So are kō, the sign of the accusative-dative and words like mērā, my, and others. On the other hand, hē, were, is Braj Bhākhā, while dāo, gave, gaō, went, are Kanaujī. The only peculiar form which I have noticed is nāī (beside nē) as the sign of the agent case.

[No. 17.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BRAJ BHĀKHĀ (MIXED BHUKSA DIALECT). (TARĀĪ, NAINI TAL.)

एक फलाने सखस-का दो लौंड़ा हे। छोटे-ने अपने बूआ-से कहो कि बूओ मेरा जो माल-का हिस्सा है सो दे-दो। और उस-नाईं अपने माल दोनौं-को बाँट दओ। थोरे दिन बाद छोटा लौंड़ा अपने माल-को बटोर-के दूर देस-को चलो-गओ। और वहाँ जा-के अपने माल लुचापन-में बरबाद कर-दओ। जब सब खरच हो-गओ तब उस देस-मे बड़ा काल पड़ गओ और खाने-को भी तंग हो गओ। तब उस देस-के एक रहीस-के घर-मे सामिल हो गओ। ओर वोह सूअर चुगाने उस-को खेत-मे भेज-दओ। ओर वोह चाहो कि जो बक्कल सूअर खाते-हौं वोह जदर भरने-को चाहो। किसी-ने ना दओ॥

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ēk phalānē sakhas-kā dō laũṛā hē. Chhōṭē-nē apᵃnē
A certain person-of two sons were. The-younger-by his-own būā-sē kahō ki 'būō, mērā jō māl-kā hissā hai sō father-to it-was-said that 'father, my what property-of share is that dē-dō.' Aur us-nāī apᵃnē māl dōnõ̃-kō bãṭ daō.
give.' And him-by his-own property both-to divided was-given.
Thōrē din bād chhōṭā laũṛā apᵃnē māl-kō baṭōr-kē
A-few days after the-younger son his-own property collected-having dūr dēs-kō chalō-gaō. Aur bahã̃ jā-kē apᵃnē māl a-distant country-to went-away. And there going his-own fortune luchāpan-mẽ̃ barᵃbād kar-daō. Jab sab kharach hō-gaō tab debauchery-in wasted was-made. When all expended became then us dēs-mē baṛā kāl paṛ-gaō aur khānē-kō bhī taṅg that country-in great famine fell and food-for even in-want hō-gaō. Tab us dēs-kē ēk rahīs-kē ghar-mē sāmil he-became. Then that country-of one well-to-do-man-of house-in joined hō-gaō. Ōr woh sūar chugānē us-kō khēt-mē bhēj-daō. Ōr he-became. And he swine to-feed him-as-for field-in it-was-sent-away. And

woh	chāhō	ki	jō	bakkal	sūar	khātē-hõ	woh	ūdar
he	wished	that	what	husks	swine	eating-may-be	those	belly

bhar^{a}nē-kō	chāhō.	Kisī-nē	nā	daō.
filling-for	he-desired.	Anybody-by	not	it-was-given.

BRAJ BHĀKHĀ MERGING INTO RĀJASTHĀNĪ.

To the south of Braj Bhākhā lie the Mēwātī and Jaipurī dialects of Rājasthānī, into both of which it gradually merges. In Gurgaon we see it becoming Mēwātī. In the State of Bharatpur we notice the first signs of the influence of Jaipurī, which becomes stronger as we go south, until in the Ḍāṅgs, or broken country in the south of that State, in Karauli, and in the east of Jaipur, we find a number of sub-dialects which are grouped together under the name of Ḍāṅgī. The number of speakers of these intermediate forms of Braj Bhākhā are reported to be as follows :—

Gurgaon	149,700
Bharatpur	502,303
Ḍāṅg dialects	774,781
	1,426,784

BRAJ BHĀKHĀ OF GURGAON.

The district of Gurgaon is under the Government of the Panjab. It has the river Jamna to its east, being separated by it from the district of Aligarh. To its south lie the district of Muttra, and the State of Bharatpur. In Gurgaon there are three principal dialects, viz. Ahīrwāṭī and Mēwātī, which are forms of Rājasthānī, and Braj Bhākhā, spoken by 149,700 people, in Palwal Tahsīl, where the district meets Aligarh and Muttra.

The Braj Bhākhā spoken in Gurgaon is very fairly pure. It bears slight traces of the influence of the neighbouring Rājasthānī. Such are the use of the termination ō instead of au, for adjectives and participles, and the masculine form of the genitive singular (e.g. baṭ-kō, not baṭ-kau, of a share); the oblique ending ā, instead of ē; and the use of the Rājasthānī form of the Present Definite tense, as explained under the head of Braj.

The use of ō for au is also common in the neighbouring State of Bharatpur. The oblique ending is usually ē, as in good Braj, but now and then we meet ā, as in thā, they were.

The word jab is used to mean 'then,' as well as 'when,' as in Rājasthānī. The imperfect tense is also formed as in that language, by adding the past tense of the auxiliary verb to the verbal noun in ē, as in chāhē-hō, I was, thou wast, or he was wishing. The past tense of the auxiliary verb is usually hō (plural hē) as in Braj Bhākhā, but sometimes thō (plural thā) is borrowed from Rājasthānī. The past participle of verbs ends in either yō or ō, as in kahyō or kahō, he said.

An extract from a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son will be a sufficient specimen.

[No. 18.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BRAJ BHĀKHĀ. (DISTRICT, GURGAON.)

एक आदमी-के दै बेटा हे । उन-ते लोहरे-ने बाप-ते कह्यो कि भाई हमारे वट को हिस्सा बाँट-दीजो । जब तो वा-कूँ बाँट-दियो । थोरे दिन पीछे सब धन ले-के लोहरो लरिका पर-देस-कूँ चल-दियो और वह अपनो माल खोटी संगत-में उड़ा-दियो । और जब सब खरच कर-चुको तो वा देस-में अकाल पर-गयो और वह माँगन लग्यो । जब फिर वहाँ-के रहीस-के जा-लग्यो । तब तो वा लरिका-कूँ सूवर चरावने-के-लिये अपने खेत-में खंदा-दियो । और वह चाहे-हो कि उन छोलकाँ-ते जो सूवर खाँय-था अपना पेट पालन करे क्योंकि उसे कोई ना दे-हो । जब होस-में आ-के कहो देखो मेरे बाप-के कितने नोकर हैं और में भूखन मरूँ-हूँ । अब में अपने बाप-के ढोरे जाऊँगो और वा-ते कहूँगो कि हे बाप में-ने तेरा और धनी-को खोट बहुत करो और तेरे लायक में बेटा ना हूँ । तुम्हारे जो महिनती रहे-हैं उन-में मो-कूँ समझ ॥

[No. 18.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BRAJ BHĀKHĀ. (DISTRICT, GURGAON.)

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ēk ādᵃmī-kē dwai bēṭā hē. Un-tē lohᵃrē-nē bāp-tē
A-certain man-of two sons were. Them-from the-younger-by the-father-to kahyō ki, 'bhāī, hamārē baṭ-kō hissā bā̃ṭ-dījō.'
it-was-said that, 'brother,[1] my share-of share having-divided-give.'
Jab tō wā-kū̃ bā̃ṭ-diyō. Thōrē din pīchhē sab Then indeed him-to having-divided-it-was-given. A-few days after all dhan lē-kē lohᵃrō larikā par-dēs-kū̃ chal-diyō. Aur property taken-having the-younger son a-foreign-country-to went-away. And wah apᵃnō māl khōṭī saṅgat-mē̃ uṛā-diyō. Aur jab sab he his-own wealth evil company-in was-squandered. And when all kharach kar-chukō, tō wā dēs-mē̃ akāl par-gayō, expenditure was-made-completely, then that country-in a-famine fell, aur wah mā̃gan lagyō. Jab phir wahā̃-kē rahīs-kē and he to-beg began. Then again there-of rich-man-of(-near) jā lagyō. Tab tō wā larikā-kū̃ sūwar having-gone he-engaged-himself. Then indeed that boy-as-for swine charāwᵃnē-kē-liyē apᵃnē khēt-mē̃ khandā-diyō. Aur wah chāhē-hō feeding-of-for his-own field-in it-was-sent-away. And he wishing-was ki un chholᵃkā̃-tē, jō sūwar khā̃y-thā apᵃnā pēṭ pālan that those husks-with, which swine eating-were his-own belly cherishing karē; kyō̃-ki usē kōī nā dē-hō. Jab hōs-mē̃ he-may-make; because to-him anyone not giving-was. Then senses-in ā-kē kahō, 'dēkhō, mērē bāp-kē kitᵃnē nōkar haĩ, come-having it-was-said, 'see, my father-of how-many servants are, aur mē̃ bhūkhan marū̃-hū̃. Ab mē̃ apᵃnē bāp-kē ḍhōrē jāū̃gō and I by-hunger dying-am. Now I my-own father-of near will-go aur wā-tē kahū̃gō ki, "hē bāp, mē̃-nē tērā aur Dhanī-kō[2] and him-to I-will-say that, "O father, me-by thy and The-Rich-One-of khōṭ bahut karō aur tērē-lāyak mē̃ bēṭā nā hū̃. Tumhārē jō evil much was-done and thee-of-worthy I son not am. Your who mihinᵃtī rahē-haĩ un-mē̃ mō-kū̃ samajh."' labourers are them-in me (obj.) consider."'

---

[1] Here simply used as a form of respectful address to a father.

[2] God is said to be 'sabkā Dhanī,' i.e. a rich one from whose store every one is provided.

BRAJ BHĀKHĀ OF BHARATPUR.

To the south of the district of Muttra lies the State of Bharatpur. The main language of the State is Braj Bhākhā. Only in the north-west, on the border of Alwar, is Mēwātī spoken, and, on the south-west, in the hill-country bordering on Kerauli, Ḍāṅgī. The former is a dialect of Rājasthānī, and the latter, a broken mixture of that language and Braj Bhākhā. To the west of Bharatpur lies the Rājasthānī-speaking State of Jaipur. Hence, although the Braj Bhākhā of Bharatpur is on the whole fairly pure, it shows traces of the influence of Rājasthānī.

The following figures show the estimated number of speakers of the three dialects in Bharatpur:—

Braj Bhākhā	502,303
Ḍāṅgī	40,000
Mēwātī	80,000
TOTAL . .	622,303

As a specimen of the Braj Bhākhā of Bharatpur I give the first few lines of the Parable of the Prodigal Son. The following are the local peculiarities, mostly borrowed from Rājasthānī, which differentiate it from the Standard dialect of Muttra.

Instead of the termination au for strong adjectives and participles we have ō. Thus, diyō, he gave; paryō, he fell. Sometimes, however, we also find au, as in bhalau, good; ũchau, high.[1] There is a strong tendency to nasalise a final vowel, as in janẽ-kẽ, to a man; apᵉnaĩ dāū-taĩ, (he said) to his father. In some cases this final nasal appears to represent an old neuter gender, as in apᵉnõ dhan, his own wealth. The vowels ō and ū seem to be interchangeable. Thus the sign of the accusative-dative is kõ or kũ, and both bhūkhõ and bhūkhũ are used to mean 'by hunger.' Strong nouns in ā do not change in the oblique form, in this following Rājasthānī; thus, chhōrā-nẽ, by the son. Sometimes such nouns substantive end in au or ō, not ā. Thus, the list of words received from Bharatpur gives mhauṛau, a mouth, and sõnõ (another neuter form), gold. In one case, in the specimen, we have a strong adjective, chhōṭā, small, ending in ā in the nominative, with an oblique form in ē.

The past tense of the verb substantive is hau, as in Braj Bhākhā. The list of words gives an additional form, hatau or hatyau. Hatau is like the Bundēlī and Kanaujī hatō.

In the active verb, the definite present is made as in Rājasthānī by conjugating the simple present with the present of the verb substantive. This is sometimes found in the Braj of Muttra, but appears to be universal in Bharatpur. The tense is conjugated as follows:—

	Sing.	Plur.
1.	mārũ-hũ	māraĩ-haĩ
2.	mārai-hai	mārau-hau
3.	mārai-hai	māraĩ-haĩ

There are several examples in the specimen.

The only other peculiarity worth noting is the use of huō, instead of bhayau, he became.

[1] These examples are quoted from a list of words received from Bharatpur, but not here printed.

[No. 19.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BRAJ' BHĀKHĀ. (STATE, BHARATPUR.)

एक जनैं-कैं दौ छोरा हे। और बिन-मैं-तैं छोटे छोरा-नैं अपनैं दाऊ-तैं कही दाऊ-जी धन-में तैं जो मेरे बट-में आवै सो मो-कूँ देउ। और वा-नैं अपनौं धन बिन-कूँ बाँट दियो। और घनैं दिन नाँइ बीते छोटा छोरा अपनैं बट-कूँ इकट्ठा ले-कैं दूर देस-कौं डिगिर-गयो और वहाँ लुच्चपनैं-में अपनौं धन बिगार दियो। और जब वा-पै-तैं सब उठ-गयो तब वा देस-में बड़ो भारी जवाल पर्‌यो और वो भूखौं मरिबे लग्यो। तब वो चल-दियो और वा देस-के एक रहवैआ-के यहाँ जाइ रह्यो। और वा-नैं वा-कूँ अपनैं खेतन-में सूअर घेरबे-पै कर-दियो। और जो भुसी सूअर खावै-हे वा-तैं वो अपनौं पेट भरनौं चाहे-हौ। पन कोई आदमी वा-कूँ नाँइ देइ। और जब वाकूँ सोच हुओ तब वा-नैं कही मेरे दाऊ-कैं कितनैं-ही आदमी रोटीं खाँइ-हैं और बच-रहे-हैं और मैं भूखूँ मरूँ-हूँ।

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ēk janẽ-kẽ dō chhōrā hē. Aur bin-maĩ-taĩ chhōṭē
A-certain person-of two sons were. And them-in-from the-younger chhōrā-nẽ apⁿnaĩ dāū-taĩ kahī, 'dāūjī, dhan-mẽ-tẽ jō son-by his-own father-to it-was-said, 'father, the-property-in-from what mērē baṭ-mẽ āwai sō mō-kũ dēu.' Aur wā-nẽ apⁿnõ dhan my share-in may-come that me-to give.' And him-by his-own wealth bin-kũ bãṭ diyō. Aur ghanẽ din nãi bītē chhōṭā them-to dividing was-given. And many days not passed the-younger chhōrā apⁿnẽ baṭ-kũ ikaṭṭhā lē-kaĩ dūr dēs-kõ ḍigir-gayō, son his-own share-to together taken-having a-far country-to went-away, aur wahã luchchⁿpanẽ-mẽ apⁿnõ dhan bigār-diyō. Aur jab and there riotous-living-in his-own wealth was-squandered. And when wā-pai-tẽ sab uṭh-gayō tab wā dēs-mẽ baṛō-bhārī jawāl him-near-from all had-been-wasted then that country-in a-very-great famine paryō, aur wō bhūkhõ maribē lagyō. Tab wō chal-diyō aur wā fell, and he by-hunger to-die began. Then he went-away and that dēs-kē ēk rahᵃwaiā-kē yahã̄ jāi rahyō. Aur wā-nẽ̄ country-of one inhabitant-of near having-gone remained. And him-by wā-kũ̄ apᵃnẽ̄ khētan-mẽ̄ sūar ghērᵃbē-pai kar-diyō. Aur jō him-as-for his-own fields-in swine tending-for it-was-employed. And what bhusī sūar khāwai-hē, wā-tẽ̄ wō apᵃnȭ pēṭ bharᵃnȭ chāhē-hau.

chaff swine eating-were, that-by he his-own belly to-fill wishing-was.
Pan kōī ādᵃmī wā-kũ̄ nãi dēi. Aur jab wā-kũ̄ sōch huō, But any man him-to not gives. And when him-to thought became, tab wā-nẽ̄ kahī, 'mērē dāū-kẽ̄ kitᵃnẽ̄-hī ādᵃmī rōṭī̃ then him-by it-was-said, 'my father-of how-many-verily men bread khãi-haĩ, aur bach-rahai-haĩ; aur maĩ bhūkhũ̄ marũ̄-hũ̄.'
eating-are, and saved-remaining-are; and I of-hunger dying-am.'

THE BROKEN DIALECTS OF THE ḌĀṄGS.

The State of Karaulī lies between the river Chambal and Jaipur. Its physical aspects are thus described in the Imperial Gazetteer :—

Hills and broken ground characterise almost the whole territory, which lies within a tract locally termed the 'Ḍāṅg' being the name given to the rugged region which lies above the narrow valley of the Chambal. The principal hills in the State are on the northern border, where several ranges run along or parallel to the frontier line, forming formidable barriers; but there are no lofty peaks, the highest being less than 1,400 feet above sea-level . . . . Along the valley of the Chambal an irregular and lofty wall of rock separates the lands on the river bank from the uplands, of which the southern part of the State consists. From the summits of the passes fine views are often obtainable, the rocks standing out in striking contrast to the comparatively rich and undulating plain below, through which winds the glittering river. For some miles the country north of these passes is high, and too rocky to be deeply cut by ravines or to be pierced for water, and the few inhabitants depend upon tanks and dams; but further north the country falls, the alluvial deposit is deeper, level ground becomes more frequent, and hills stand out more markedly, while in the neighbourhood of the city of Karaulī the low ground is cut into a labyrinth of ravines.

According to the Census of 1891, the population of Karauli was 156,587, divided thus according to language :—

Jādōbāṭī	80,000
Ḍāṅgī	60,000
Urdū	10,000
Others	6,587
	156,587

Of these Urdū is spoken by the Paṭhāns and Muhammadans of the State, and by the educated portion of the urban population. In the plains country, which is mainly inhabited by Rajputs of the Yādava or Jādõ tribe, the language spoken is the Jādōbāṭī form of Braj Bhākhā, and has been described ante (pp. 298 and ff.). The broken hill country, known as the Ḍāṅg, is the home of Ḍāṅgī. The Ḍāng, with its language, extends beyond the limits of Karauli State, to the north into Bayānā Taḥṣil of Bharatpur in the south of that State, and to the west into Jaipur. In the latter State, besides Ḍāṅgī proper, we find variations of it, called Ḍũgar-wāṛā, Kālīmāl, and Ḍāṅgbhāṅg, all spoken in the broken country bordering on Karaulī. The people who speak Ḍāṅgī are mostly Gūjars.

The following are the figures for the various forms of Ḍāṅgī :—

Ḍāṅgī proper, or Kā-kachhū-kī bōlī.
Karauli	60,000
Bharatpur	40,000
Jaipur[1]	404,436
		504,436
Ḍũgar-wāṛā of Jaipur		108,766
Kālīmāl of Jaipur		81,216
Ḍāṅgbhāṅg of Jaipur		80,363
TOTAL		774,781

For Ḍāṅgī proper, I propose to give specimens of that spoken in Karauli and Jaipur. The Ḍāṅgī of Bharatpur closely resembles that of Jaipur, showing, however, greater affinities with the Braj Bhākhā spoken immediately to its north, specimens of it are unnecessary. Of the other Jaipur dialects, I give specimens only of Ḍāṅgbhāṅg. The others are intermediate between it and Ḍāṅgī of Jaipur. I also give a List of Words and Phrases in the Ḍāṅgī of Karaulī and Jaipur, and in all the three other dialects of the latter State.

[1] Includes 217,531 speakers of a mixed dialect.

The examination of all the forms of speech current in Jaipur has been greatly facilitated by a book which will be frequently referred to in the following pages :—Specimens of the Dialects spoken in the State of Jeypore, prepared, at the instance of His Highness The Mahārājā, by the Rev. G. Macalister, M.A., in the year 1898. This admirable work gives a vocabulary, grammars, and specimens of all the dialects spoken in the State. It contains many details which cannot find place in the present Survey.

Ḍāṅgī exhibits Braj Bhākhā in the act of shading off into Rājasthānī. In the standard dialect of the south of the Braj tract we have, indeed, noticed the use of a form of the present definite (karũ̃-haũ̃ instead of karᵉtu-haũ̃, I am doing) which is borrowed from that language, and in the centre of Bharatpur other examples of its influence have been pointed out, but in both these cases the instances are sporadic. In the Ḍāṅg dialects, on the other hand, they are quite common, and give a distinct colour to the whole. Ḍāṅgī, in short, shows the first signs of idioms which we shall meet more and more frequently as we go west, till they arrive at their fullest development in Gujarātī. In one notable instance (the impersonal use of the past tense of a transitive verb) we find the Gujarātī idiom already established in the Ḍāṅgī of Jaipur.

As in many rude languages, we find idioms preserved, which throw light on more abraded forms employed in more civilised speeches. For instance (as in old Gujarātī) Ḍāṅgī clearly forms a dative by putting the genitive into the locative case. Thus, mērō, of me, makes a locative mērai, which means 'to me.' This explains the origin of the Hindī suffix kō (Braj Bhākhā kaũ̃), which is really the locative of the genitive post-position kā (Braj Bhākhā kau).[1]

We have noticed in the Braj Bhākhā of Aligarh and of the east of Agra a curious pronoun of the third person, gu or gwa. The corresponding form in Ḍāṅgī, wha or hwa, probably indicates the origin of this peculiar form. Wha is only another form of the familiar wah.

In Braj Bhākhā nouns form (amongst several methods) their oblique plural in n preceded by a short vowel. Thus, ghōṛā, a horse; ghōṛan-kau, of horses: nārī, a woman; nārin-kau, of women. In Rājasthānī, these end in a nasalised long vowel. Thus, ghōṛã̄-kō, nāryã̄-kō. Ḍāṅgī occupies an intermediate position, and exhibits a form older than either, from which both are derived. The oblique plural ends in n, always preceded by a long vowel. Thus, ghōṛān-kō, of horses; nārīn-kō, of women; din or dan, a day; dinān-kō or danān-kō, of days.

In all the Western Hindī dialects, the past tense is simply the past participle of the verb without any suffix. We have seen that in Eastern Hindī and Bihārī (and other languages of the group) certain suffixes are added to the verb in all its tenses. Thus

[1] Kō is derived directly from an old form kahũ̃, which in its turn represents the Sanskrit kṛitē. Kṛitē (which in Sanskrit means 'for') is the locative of kṛitaḥ, which itself is the origin of the Hindī kā meaning 'of'.

(Eastern Hindī) mārya-s, he struck. This s-suffix is, as has been explained, the relic of an enclitic personal pronoun.

We shall see, in dealing with Jaipurī, that this very termination can also be added to words, but here it is recognised as a distinct enclitic word, not as verbal terminations, and can be added or not at will. Thus, gayō or gayō-s, he went (it will be noticed that the same peculiarity occurs in Banāpharī Bundēlī, vide post, p. 485).

This enclitic is common in Ḍāṅgī, as in bulāī-s, she was called.

In Western Hindī the sign of the Agent case is nē or nai. In Rājasthānī and Gujarātī this case takes no postposition, but nē or nai is used to indicate the Accusative-dative. In Ḍāṅgī nai is used (in the case of pronouns) for both the Agent and the Accusative-dative. In the first case it is used with the form of the nominative, and in the latter case with the oblique form. Thus, taĩ-nai, by thee; tō-nai, or tō-kũ̃, to thee. Here we see the postposition in the actual circumstances of the change of its meaning.

In Rājasthānī the conjunctive participle may be formed by adding ar to the root. Thus, mārar, having struck. In Western Hindī it is formed by adding the suffix kar, the letter i being optionally added at the same time to the root. Thus, mar-kar, or māri-kar. In Ḍāṅgī, it is formed by suffixing kar, or by adding ar or ir. Thus, mār-kar, mārar or mārir. Here we see the origin of the suffix ar. It is formed by the elision of the k of kar, and that this is the fact is proved by the form mārir, which is evidently a contraction of the form māri-kar. This, also, incidentally throws light on the Rājasthānī genitive in rō. The Mārwāṛī ghōṛā-rō is by parity of reasoning a contraction of ghoṛā-karō, just as the Bengalī bālakēr, of a boy, is a contraction of bālaka-kēr.

Owing to the interesting character of these Ḍāṅg dialects, I have appended a special List of Words and Sentences, which illustrates their various forms.

ḌĀṄGĪ OF KARAULI.

In the State of Karauli, Ḍāṅgī is reported to be spoken by 60,000 people. Here it is a rude Braj Bhākhā, with a strange vocabulary, and various infusions of Jaipurī. Two specimens are given,—a portion of the Parable of the Prodigal Son, and a letter written in the locality, given just as it was put down, except that the formal salutation at the commencement has been omitted. The following are the principal divergencies from Standard Braj Bhākhā which should be noted.

Pronunciation.—The letter a often becomes i in an unaccented syllable, as in bālik, a child; sūrij, the sun. The letters ē and ai are apparently interchangeable. It is quite common to find the same word spelt with one or other indifferently. Thus, pīṭai or pīṭē, he beats. So ō and au are absolutely interchangeable. Thus, maũṛā, mõ̃ṛā, mōṛā, or even muṛā, a son. So chalyō or chalyau, he went. The letter h is sometimes inserted between two vowels, as in sūhar, swine. It is sometimes omitted, as in ran for rahan, to remain. When a vowel precedes a doubled consonant, it may be lengthened, and one consonant of the doublet omitted. Thus, ūtar for uttar, an answer. In the word khūp, well, an initial k has become kh. Instances of contraction are bhōt or bhaut, for bahut, much, and dōk for dō-ēk, one or two.

Strong nouns which in Braj Bhākhā end in ā, here usually end in au or ō. Thus, ghōrau, a horse. A few nouns of relationship, such as maũṛā, a son, still end in ā. The oblique form singular of nouns in au (ō), usually ends in ē, as in ghorē-kau, of a horse. The Rājasthānī form in ā is, however, also common. Thus, from baiyō, baiyā-kũ̃, to the mother. Note that this word ends in ō, although it is feminine. The Nominative Plural usually takes the form ghōrē, but occasionally we have ghōrā. The oblique plural usually takes the form ghōrān. The long vowel in the last syllable of the oblique plural is typical of Ḍāṅgī. Sometimes we have ēn instead of ān, as in jēgᵃrēn-kẽ̃, to the calves, nom. sing. jēgᵃrō. Nouns like maũṛā have obl. sing. and nom. plur. maũṛā, and obl. plur. maũṛān. Nouns ending in consonants have a nom. plur. in ā, as in din, a day, dinā, days; purikh, a father, plur. purikhā. The oblique plural ends in an, ēn, or ān, as in dinan or dinēn, janēn (jan, a person), and purikhān. Nouns in ī and ū preserve the long vowel in the oblique plural. Thus, mehᵃnatī, a servant, has mehᵃnatīn: and paṛūrū, a buffalo calf, has paṛūrūn.

The case suffixes are the same as in Braj, but there are also some irregular forms. Thus, for the accusative-dative, besides kaũ, kẽ̃, and kũ̃, we have nẽ̃ (properly belonging to the case of the agent). Thus, win rupaiyān-nẽ̃ lai-lai, take those rupees. The suffixes of the instrumental-ablative are sũ̃, sē, sõ̃, with the usual variations, but very common is pai-sē, as in wā-pai-sē lai-lai, take from him. We have even pai (properly belonging to the locative) used alone as an ablative in sentences such as mō-pai ḍigyau nānē jāt, it is not gone by me, I cannot go.

Besides the two ordinary genders, masculine and feminine, there are distinct traces of a neuter, which is indicated by the nasalisation of a final au or ō. Thus, pānyaũ sūkhi-gayõ̃, the water has dried up; sūkhā-kāl paryõ̃, a famine fell; bichāryõ̃, it was considered (by him), he considered; apᵃnõ̃ pēṭ, his own belly.

The pronoun of the first person is hũ̃, hõ̃, mẽ̃, or mai. The genitives plural of the first and second persons are (1) hamārau or hamᵃrau, (2) tumārau, tumᵃrau, or tiyārau.

The oblique forms plural are haman and tuman, respectively. The genitive of āp, self, is ap^{a}nau or āp-kau. As pronominal adverbs note jhã̃, here; jab, at this time, as well as 'when'; bhã̃ there.

The verbal irregularities are few in number. There is a negative verb substantive. The only form noted is nānē, which means both 'I am not' and 'he is not.' We have already noted nānẽ̃, I am not, in Sikaṛwārī Braj Bhākhā.

As in Bhadaurī Bundēlī, the initial h of the verb substantive is often dropped when the verb is used as an auxiliary. Sometimes y is inserted. Thus we have, rōpat-ē, he sets up; jāt-yē, he goes; dēt-ō, he was giving; charat-ē, they were grazing. The full form is also used, as in ḍōlat-hai, he is walking about.

The definite present generally prefers the Rājasthānī principle of conjugating the auxiliary with the simple present, instead of with the present participle.

The past participle nearly always ends in yau. Sometimes the y is omitted. We have both chukyau and chukau, he finished.

Precative forms of the imperative are aīyō, come; dhō-ghālijau, give; lījau, take, and dījau, give.

The following is a list of unusual words which occur in the specimens. Verbs are quoted under their root forms:—

ātyau, weary.
ārā, a wall-niche.
ōjhyũ̃ or aujhũ̃, again.
kaṭṭhān, a buffalo.
kūkas, a husk.
khirak, a cattle-pen.
ghur, to fight.
chalū, durable.
chhaṭṭā, good, handsome.
jēg^{a}rō, a calf.
ṭarak-dē, to walk away.
ṭārā-ṭūrī, evasion.
ṭhāṭh^{a}rō, dry stalks of bajrā.
ḍig, to walk.
ḍōl, to wander about.
ḍhũ̃k-lē, to see.
dājū, a father.
dhō-ghāl or dhō-dē, to give.
nākh, to leave behind. In Jaipur this means 'to vomit.'
nyār-phūs, straw and chaff, fodder.
pānyaũ̃, water.
phiṭak, in wāy phiṭak sūjhī, he came to his senses.
phūs, chaff.
baiyō, a mother.
bair^{a}bānī, a woman, a wife.
bhāy^{a}lō, a friend.
bhiā, a brother.

bhūs, to bark (like a dog).
malūk, handsome, good.
muk^{a}tau, much.
meh^{a}natī, or mehantī, a servant.
rāhau, a stove.
lāgan, enmity.
lār, to throw food before cattle, to tend them.
lōṭhā, grown up.
lōhyau, blood.
hal, to move (intransitive).

[No. 20.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BRAJ BHĀKHĀ (ḌĀṄGĪ). (STATE, KARAULI.)

SPECIMEN I.

कोई आदमी-के दो मोड़ा हे। विन-में-से ल्हौरे मोड़ा-ने दाजू-से कही अरे दाजू बिसुधा-में जो मेरो बट है वाय मों-को बाँट-दे। तब बाप-ने अपनी बिसुधा बाँट दीनी। कछूक थोरे-ई दिनन-में ल्हौरा मोड़ा सब बिसुधा समेटि दूर परदेस-कूँ चल्यो-गयो और भाँ गुलाम्यों-से सब दिना खोय-दीए सब बिसुधा लुटाय-दीनी। जब सबे गमाय-चुक्यौ तब भाँ बड़ो भारी सूखा-काल पर्यो और वो नंगा हे बैठ्यो। वो वा देस-में बसिबे-वारे एक कोई-के भाँ रहबे लग्यो। वा-ने वा-कूँ आप-के खेतन-में सूहर चरायबे पठायो। भाँ जा कूकस-कूँ सूहर चरते वा-से अपनों पेट भरबो विचार्यो। वा-कूँ कोई नही देतो। जब वाय फिटक सूझी और वा-ने कही के मेरे दाजू-के भाँ भोत मेहनतीन-कौं पेट-से ऊबर रोटी होय-है और में भूखन मरूँ। जा-से भाँ-से दाजू-के घर जाऊँगो और भाँ वा-से कहूँगो अरे बाप में-ने तेरे अगारी पापै पाप-को धंधो कर्यो-है। में तेरो लाड़िलो बजबे-वारो नही रह्यो। मोय तू तेरे एक मेहंती-की नाई राखि-ले॥

[No. 20.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BRAJ BHĀKHĀ (ḌĀṄGĪ). (STATE, KARAULI.)

SPECIMEN I.

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Kōī ādᵃmī-kē dō mōṛā hē. Wiṉ-mẽ̃-sē lhaurē mōṛā-nē
A-certain man-of two sons were. Them-in-from the-younger son-by dājū-sē kahī, 'arē dājū, bisudhā-mẽ̃ jō mērō baṭ hai, the-father-to it-was-said, 'O father, property-in what my share is, wāy mõ̃-kō bā̃ṭ-dē.' Tab bāp-nē apᵃnī bisudhā bā̃ṭ-dīnī.
that me-to divide-give.' Then the-father-by his-own property was-divided.
Kachhūk thōrē-ī dinan-mẽ̃ lhauryā mōṛā sab bisudhā samēṭi
Some few-even days-in the-younger son all property having-collected dūr par-dēs-kũ̃ chalyō-gayō, aur bhā̃ gulāmyõ̃-sē sab dinā a-far foreign-country-to went-away, and there debauchery-in all days khōy-dīē sab bisudhā luṭāy-dīnī. Jab sabē having-wasted all the-property was-squandered. When everything gamāy-chukyau, tab bhā̃ baṛō bhārī sūkhā-kāl paryõ̃, aur wō wasted-was-completely, then there a-great heavy dry-time fell, and he naṅgā hē baiṭhyō. Wō wā dēs-mẽ̃ basibē-wārē ēk naked having-become sat-down. He that country-in dweller one kōī-kē jhā̃ rahᵃbē lagyō. Wā-nē wā-kũ̃ āp-kē khētan-mẽ̃ certain-person-of near to-dwell began. Him-by him himself-of fields-in sūhar charāyᵃbē paṭhāyau. Bhā̃ jā kūkas-kũ̃ sūhar charᵃt-ē, swine to-feed it-was-sent. There what husks the-swine eating-were, wā-sē apᵃnõ̃ pēṭ bharᵃbō bichāryõ̃. Wā-kũ̃ kōī nahī that-by his-own belly to-fill it-was-thought. Him-to anyone not dēt-ō. Jab wāy phiṭak sūjhī aur wā-nē giving-was. At-this-time to-him discrimination became-apparent and him-by kahī kē, 'mērē dājū-kē jhā̃ bhōt mehᵃnatīn-kaũ̃ pēṭ-sē it-was-said that, 'my father-of near many servants-to belly-than ūbar rōṭī hōy-hai, aur mẽ̃ bhūkhan marũ̃. Jā-sē exceeding bread is, and I of-hunger die. This-by (i.e. hence) jhā̃-sē dājū-kē ghar jāũ̃gō, aur bhā̃ wā-sē kahũ̃gō, here-from the-father-of house (-to) I-will-go, and there him-to I-will-say,
"arē bāp, mẽ̃-nē tērē agārī pāpai-pāp-kau dhandhō karyau-hai.
" O father, me-by thee-of before on-sin-sins-of occupation made-has-been.

Mẽ tērō lāṛilō bajªbē-wārō nahī rahyau. Mōy tū tērē ēk
I thy son one-who-is-called not was. Me thou thy one mehantī-kī nāī rākhi-lē."' servant-of like keep."'

[No. 21.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BRAJ BHĀKHĀ (ḌĀṄGĪ). (STATE, KARAULI.)

SPECIMEN II.

मै मुकते-ऊ दिनन-से तुमन-कौं लिख-लिखा हार-चुकौ कि भाँ डाँग-में ढोर-ढारेन-कूँ न्यार-फूस भी नाने रह्यौ । पान्यौं-पात नदी-में सूखि गयौं । तुमारे मुड़ा-से कट्टान-कूँ ठाँठरे लारिबे-की कहत-हौं तो टारा-टूरी करत-है । मोड़ा लोठा हो-गयो तो भी हाल-ई जानत बूझत नाने । अब ढुँक-ले भिआ तेरो मुड़ा जेगरेन-कें लार-लार भी नाने जात-ये । हूँ भूसत भूसत थकि मखो । हमन-से दिनेन-के दिनेन लागन रोपते । अब हौं बाखर-में-से कढ़ि-जाऊँगो । वो घुरिबे डोलत-है । मै-ने भोत समझाय बुझाय कह्यौ तो औभूँ ऊतर नाने देत-ई । कैयो जनेन-ने समझायो तब वो भाँ-से टरक-देत-है । तै-ने झाँ बैयो भी नै रन दीनी । जब बैरबानी झौपरी-से खिरक-में आवत-ए तब पड़रून-कूँ न्यार-फूस डारत्ये । मो-पै तनक भी नाने हल्यौ डिग्यौ जात-ई । अब भिआ इन रूपकन-से दिन-उठि लोह्यौ सूखत-है । अब तू झाँ अईयो । हौं लिखि चुक्यौ । अब हौं नाने जानतौ । आ-में-ई तू सब समझ बूझ लीजौ । हौं तो बाट निहारतौ निहारतौ आल्यौ हो-चल्यौ । नई-तो थोरे दिनन-में हूँ आवतौ । अनाज कुठीला-में रन दीजौ । हमन-कौं मुकतौ चेय्येगौ । और आ-में-ते दो मन अनाज झंडू-कौं धो-घालिजौ । मोय झरनो हो-गयौ-हौ । सो दोक दिना-सें कल है । और ननूआ भायले-से टेर-कें कीजो के राहे पीछे-के आरे-में तीन रुपैया नाखि आयौ-हूँ । सो हाट-में-से मलूक चलू अँगरखी और पन्हा और छुट्टा कखा ले-के बैया-कूँ फाय-देय । वो झाँ मिलि भेंट-जायगी । मिती बैसाख सुदी ७ सम्बत १९५६ ॥

[No. 21.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BRAJ BHĀKHĀ (ḌĀṄGĪ). (STATE, KARAULI.)

SPECIMEN II.

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Mai mukᵃtē-ū dinan-sē tuman-kaũ likh-likhā hār-chukau
I many-also days-from you-to writing-writing am-tired-completely ki jhā̃ ḍā̃g-mẽ̃ ḍhōr-ḍhārēn-kũ nyār-phūs bhī nānē that here the-Ḍāṅg-in the-cattle-herd-for straw-chaff (i.e. fodder) even not rahyau. Pānyaũ-pāṭ nadī-mẽ̃ sūkhi-gayō. Tumārē muṛā-sē kaṭṭhān-kũ was. Water-stream the-river-in dried-went. Your son-to buffalo-to ṭhā̃ṭhᵃrē lāribē-kī kahat-hõ, tō ṭārā-ṭūrī karat-hai.
dry-stalks-of-bajrā throwing-of(-word) saying-I-am, then evasion doing-he-is.
Mōṛā lōṭhā hō-gayō, tō-bhī hāl-ī jānat būjhat
The-boy grown-up became, nevertheless now-even knowing understanding nānē. Ab ḍhũk-lē, bhiā, tērō muṛā jēgᵃrēn-kẽ̃ lār-lār bhī he-is-not. Now see, brother, thy son the-calves-to tending even nānē jāt-yē. Hũ̃ bhūsat bhūsat thaki maryau. Haman-sē is-not going-is. I barking barking being-weary am-dead. Me-with dinēn-kē dinēn-sē lāgan rōpat-ē. Ab hõ bākhar-mẽ̃-sē kaṛhi-jāũ̃gō.
days-of days-from enmity setting-up-he-is. Now I house-in-from will-go-away Wō ghuribē ḍōlat-hai. Mai-nē bhōt samᵃjhāy bujhāy He for-fighting wandering-is. Me-by much remonstrating explaining kahyau, tō aujhũ̃ ūtar nānē dēt-ī. Kaiyō janēn-nē was-said, still again answer he-is-not giving-even. Several persons-by samᵃjhāyō, tab wō bhā̃-sē ṭarak-dēt-hai. Tai-nē jhā̃ it-was-remonstrated, then he there-from walking-away-is. Thee-by here baiyō bhī nai ran dīnī. Jab bairᵃbānī jhaupᵃrī-sē mother also not to-remain was-allowed. When (my-)wife the-hut-from khirak-mẽ̃ āwat-ē, tab paṛūrūn-kũ nyār-phūs ḍārᵃt-yē. Mō-pai the-pen-in coming-is, then buffalo-calves-to fodder giving-she-is. Me-by tanak bhī nānē halyau ḍigyau jāt-ī. Ab, bhiā, in a-little even is-not moving walking going-even. Now, brother, these rūpᵃkan-sē din-uṭhi lōhyau sūkhat-hai. Ab tū jhā̃ aīyō.
conducts-from day-arising blood drying-up-is. Now thou here please-come.
Hõ likhi chukyau. Ab hõ nānē jānᵃtau. A-mẽ̃-sē
I having-written finished. Now I am-not knowing. This-in-from.

tū sab samajh būjh lījau. Hõ tō bāṭ nihārªtau thou all understand know please-take. I indeed the-road watching nihārªtau āṭyau hō-chalyau. Naī-tō thōrē dinan-mẽ hũ āwªtau.
watching weary became. Otherwise a-few days-in I shall-come.
Anāj kuṭhīlā-mẽ ran dījau. Haman-kaũ mukªtau
The-corn the-granary-in to-remain please-allow. Me-to much chaiyyēgau. Aur ā-mẽ-tē dō man anāj Jhaṇḍū-kaũ will-be-necessary. And it-in-from two maunds grain Jhaṇḍū-to dhō-ghālijau. Mōy jharªnō hō-gayau-hau. Sō dōk dinā-sē please-give-away. To-me diarrhœa become-was. That two(-or)-one days-from kal hai. Aur Nanūā bhāyªlē-sē ṭēr-kẽ kījō kē rāhē peace is. And Nanūā friend-to seen-having please-say that the-stove pīchhē-kē ārē-mẽ tīn rupaiā nākhi āyau-hũ. Sō behind-of niche-in three rupees having-left come-I-am. Therefore hāṭ-mẽ-sē malūk chalū āgarªkhī aur panhā aur chhaṭṭā the-market-in-from handsome lasting shirt and shoes and a-selected kakhā lē-kē baiyā-kũ phāy-dēy. Wō jhã mili comb taken-having the-mother-to make-over. She here having-joined bhēṭ-jāyªgī. Mitī Bēsākh sudī 7 Sambat 1956.
will-meet(-me). Date Baisākh bright-half 7 Year 1956.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

I am weary with writing to you this long time, that there is no food for the cattle in this jungle. The very water in the streams has dried up. When I tell your son to give the buffaloes bajrā stalks he shirks the work. The boy is now grown up, but still he won't understand anything. Look here, brother, your son won't even go to feed the calves. I rail and bark at him till I am tired, and the only result is that he hates me more and more every day. Now I won't stay in this house any longer. He goes about seeking whom he can fight with. No matter how much I reason with him, he won't give me an answer. A number of people have reasoned with him, but he just walks away from them. You did not let even my mother stay here, and so my wife has to feed the buffalo-calves when she goes out from the hut to the cattle pen. I am quite unable to get about myself. Now, brother, through these goings-on my blood is fairly drying up. Please come here yourself. I have already (before) written to ask you this. Now I don't know anything. From this letter you can understand the state of affairs. I am weary watching the road for your coming. If you don't, I leave this in a few days and go to you.

Let the corn stay in the granary. We'll want a great deal. You may give two maunds of corn to Jhaṇḍū. I have been ill with diarrhœa, but have been better for the last day or two. Tell my friend Nanūā that I have left three rupees in the wall-niche behind the stove. I want him to buy with them a handsome, durable shirt, and a pair of shoes, and a good comb, and to make them over to my mother. She will come here and see me. Dated 7th of the bright half of Baisākh, Sam. 1956.

ḌANGĪ OF JAIPUR.

The Ḍāṅgī proper of Jaipur is spoken in the north-west corner of the state on the borders of Bharatpur and Karauli. It is continuous with the Ḍāṅgī of the former state. To the west of the Ḍāṅgī proper, along the southern border of Alwar, there is a mixed dialect, through which Ḍāṅgī shades off into Jaipurī. It may also be included under the head of Ḍāṅgī. The number of speakers is reported to be as follows :—

Ḍāṅgī proper	186.905
Mixed dialect	217,531
TOTAL .	404,436

As in the case of the other Jaipur dialects I am indebted to the Rev. G. Macalister for the two excellent specimens of Ḍāṅgī proper which follow. The grammatical sketch of the main peculiarities of the dialect is based on his grammar, and on the specimens.

Pronunciation.—Like all the Jaipur dialects Ḍāṅgī shows a marked preference for the cerebral ṇ (which is strongly pronounced) over the dental n which we meet in Braj. In fact we may say that every n which represents a medial single n in Prakrit is cerebral : while only the few that represent a double nn in Prakrit are dental. Thus, the ṇ in jaṇū, a man, has a cerebral ṇ, because in Prakrit the word is jaṇō, but sōnū, gold, has a dental n, because the corresponding Prakrit word is soṇṇō or sonnō, with a double nn. Mr. Macalister states that a medial l is also pronounced as a cerebral, and it is probable that the same rule applies in this case also. The cerebral ḷ (ळ) is not written in the specimens, so I do not mark it in the transliteration.

There is a tendency to disaspiration in the middle or at the end of a word. Thus, we have bhūkan for bhūkhan, by hunger ; kaī for kahī, said ; hāt for hāth, a hand ; chāṛ for chaṛh, mount.

The letter ch sometimes becomes s, as in sōsī for sōchī, he thought.

Mr. Macalister always transliterates a final y preceded by a long vowel as ya, thus, wāya, to him ; jāya, he goes ; khōya, having lost.

As an instance of contraction we may quote lhōṛō for lahuṛo, small.

When the letter a falls in an unaccented syllable, it is liable to be changed to i. Thus, bālik, for bālak, a boy ; pōkhir, for pōkhar, a tank. So u becomes a in ṭhākar for ṭhākur.

Nouns, adjectives, and participles, which in Braj Bhākhā end in au, in this dialect end in ō. Thus, jēwaṛō, a rope ; bhalō, good. The y is preserved in the past participle, as in chalyō (Braj Bhākhā, chalyau), not chalō, he went.

Nouns are declined much as in the Ḍāṅgī of Karauli. There is the same typical retention of the long vowel in the oblique form plural.

As a rule strong masculine nouns (as distinct from adjectives and participles) end in ā, not ō. The termination ō is Jaipurī and is occasionally met with. Now and then we meet ū, thus, sōnū, gold ; jaṇū, a person. Of nouns of this class, the oblique singular as well as the nominative plural ends either in ē, as in Braj Bhākhā, or in ā, as in Jaipurī. Nouns in ā have only the form in ā. Thus, potā, a grandson; accusative pōtā-kũ̃, nom. plur. pōtā; ghōṛā, a horse or horses. The other nouns seem to prefer ē. Thus, from rahᵃbē-wālō (or -wāṛō), a dweller, we have as genitive rahᵃbē-wālē-kō, and from jaṇū, oblique jaṇē. The oblique plural of all these nouns ends in ān or ēn, as in pōtān-kũ̃ or pōtēn-kũ̃, to grandsons.

Masculine nouns ending in a consonant have a nominative plural in ā, as in dinā, days. The oblique plural ends in ān, as dinān. Sometimes we have the Braj Bhākhā termination an, as in nōkᵃran-kō, of servants.

Feminine nouns in ī, such as chhōrī, a girl, have obl. sing. and nom. plur. chhōrī, and obl. plur. chhōrīn.

The case suffixes are the following:—

Agent.	nē
Acc.-dat.	kũ̃, kẽ̃, kai
Obl.-instr.	tē, tẽ̃, taĩ, pai-tē, paĭ-tē, kai-tē
Gen.	kō, obl. masc. kē; fem. kī.
Loc.	mẽ̃, in; pai, mãũ̃, on.

The oblique masculine of the genitive is sometimes (as in Jaipurī) kā, as in ū dēs-kā ēk rahᵃbē-wālē-kē ḍhĩgārē, near an inhabitant of that country.

The accusative-dative sometimes takes the termination ya, as in pōtāya, to a grandson. There is also, as usual, an instrumental in an, as in bhūkan, by hunger.

There are traces of a neuter gender. Thus, suṇyũ̃, it was heard, he heard. Strong adjectives which in Braj Bhākhā end in au, in this dialect end in ō, with an oblique masculine in ā or ē. Thus, bhalō, good, oblique bhalā, bhalē.

As regards Pronouns, that of the second person has its plural (nominative and oblique) tam, not tum, and a genitive plural tumᵃrō or tyārō. 'He,' 'that,' is ū, wā or wha; obl. sing. wā; nom. plur. wē, obl. plur. un. An optional form of the acc.-dat. sing. is wāya.

'This' is yā or ī; sing. obl. yā; acc.-dat. yāya: plur. nom. yē; obl. in.

Another word for 'that' is jē; sing. obl. jā; acc.-dat. jāya; plur. nom. jē; obl. jin. So also jab, 'then,' as well as 'when.'

The Relative pronoun is jē, declined exactly like jē, that.

Kōṇ is 'who?' kā, 'what?' and kachhū, anything. Hence, Ḍāṅgī is also called Kā-kachhū-kī bōlī. Kāu or kōu is any. None of these change their bases in declension.

The genitive of āp, self, is āp-kō or āpᵃṇō. The word is sometimes (as in Jaipurī) used to mean 'we.' Quite frequently, the personal pronouns mērō, wā-kō, etc., are used where, according to the rules of Braj Bhākhā, we should expect āpᵃṇō.

The Verb Substantive is the same as in Braj Bhākhā, except that one of the forms of the past is hattyō instead of hutau. Hattyō is also used as the present participle of haibō, to become. Other forms of this latter verb are 1 pres., hōũ̃; 1 fut., hũ̃gō; past, hūyō; conjunctive participle hai (not hwai), hair, etc.

The conjugation of the Active Verb is on the whole the same as in Braj Bhākhā. The definite present follows the Rājasthānī principle of conjugating the auxiliary verb with the simple present tense, and not with the present participle. The present participle seems to be sometimes used as a past tense, as in khãdātō, he sent (him to the fields); dẽtō, (no one) gave.

The form of the conjunctive participle is borrowed from Jaipurī, and is noteworthy. Its typical sign is the letter r, as in bōlar, bōlar-kaĩ, bōlar-kaĩn, or bōlar-kain, having said. Sometimes the termination is ir instead of ar, as in uṭhir or uṭhar, having arisen. The termination ar is often written as a separate word and is hence liable to confusion with the word ar, and. Thus, chãṛar, having mounted, is written both चँड़र and चँड़ अर.

There are also traces of the Braj Bhākhā conjunctive participle in i (or y), as in jāya, having gone; khōya, having lost; kai (i.e. kahi), having said. Care should be taken not to confound kai, having said, with kai, that (conjunction). The matter is further complicated by kai being also used for kahī, (he or she) said.

This conjunctive participle in i or y is often compounded with the verb ābō, to come, the two members being written as one word. Thus, कर्याऊँ, kary-āũ, having done I come, I will come back after doing it. So जीयायो, jīy-āyō, having lived he came, he came to life.

*Kar*ªbō, to do, is regular, its past being karyō; dēbō, to give, and lēbō, to take, make diyō and liyō (also dīyō and līyō) respectively. 'Gone' is gayō.

For further particulars and for a number of excellent specimens, the reader is referred to Mr. Macalister's work.

[No. 22.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BRAJ BHĀKHĀ (ḌĀṄGĪ). (STATE, JAIPUR.)

(Rev. G. Macalister, M.A.)

SPECIMEN I.

एक-कैं दो बेटा हे । उन-मैं-ते ल्होड़े बेटा-ने वा-के बाप-ते कही अरे दाऊ धन-में मेरो बट है जाय मो-कूँ बाँट-दे । जे वा-पै धन हत्यो जे उन-कूँ बाँट-दीयो । भौत दिना नहीं हूयं ल्होड़ो बेटा सब-ई लैर भौत दूर परदेस-में चल्यो-गो । व्हाँ जार आप-को सग धन लुचापणे-में उड़ा दीयो । जब वा-ने सग धन उड़ा-दीयो जब वा देस-में ऐसो भारो जवाल पड़ो अर ऊ कंगाल है-गो । पीछै वा ऊ देस-का एक रहबेवाले-के ढिँगारे जा रह्यो । ऊ वाय सूवर चरावे खेत-में खँदातो । जे पातड़ा सूवर खावै-हे जिन-के खायबे-कूँ ऊ राजी हत्यो । अर काऊ-ई आदमी वाय नहीं देंतो । जब वा-कूँ सुरत आई वा-ने कही अरे मेरे बाप-के-ई नोकरन-कैं निरी रोटी अर मैं भूकन मरूँ । मैं उठूँगो अर मेरे बाप-के ढिँगारे जाऊँगो अर वा-ते कहूँगो दाऊ मैं-ने सुरग-को पाप कर्यो अर तेरो पाप कर्यो । अर अब मैं ऐसो नहीं रह्यो जे तेरो बेटा कहवाऊँ । मो-कूँ तेरो नोकर राख-लै । ऊ उठिर वा-के बाप-के ढिँगारे आयो । बाप-कूँ वा-कूँ दूर-ते आतो-ई देखर दया आय गई । जब बाप दौड़ो जार गले-ते लगा-लीयो अर मट्टी लई वा-की । जब बेटा-ने वा-ते कई अरे दाऊ मैं-ने सुरग-को पाप कर्यो अर तेरो पाप कर्यो । अर अब ऐसो मैं नहीं रह्यो जे तेरो बेटा कहवाऊँ । जब बाप-ने आप-की नोकरन-ते कई आछे-ते आछे ओढ़णा लावो अर वा-कूँ पेहरावो । अर वा-के हात-में अँगूटी पेहरावो । अर पाँवन-में पणाँ पेहरावो । अर हम खावँ पीवँ अर चैन करैं । क्यौं अक ई मेरो बेटा मर-गो हो जे फेर जी आयो । अर खोय-गो हो जे पाय-गो । अर वे खुसी हैबे लगे ॥

वा-को बड़ो बेटा हो जे खेत-में हो । जब ऊ आयो अर जब घर-ते लगतो आयो जब वा-ने बजाबो गाबो अर नचबो सुण्यूँ । जब वा-ने एक जणू

नोकरन-मैं-ते बुलायो । जब वा-ते पूछी अक आज ई का वात है । जव वा-ने वा-ते कई तेरो भैया आय-गो है । तेरे वाप-ने जिँवाँये-हैं अक वा-ने ऊ राजी-वाजी आखैं देख-लीयो । ऊ रिसाय-गो । जा-ते भीतर नहीँ गयो । जा-ते वा-के दाऊ-ने वाहर आर ऊ मनायो । जव वा-ने वा-के वाप-कूँ जुवाव दीयो अक देख इतेक वरसन-ते मैँ तेरी चाकरी करूँ अर मैँ-ने कभूँ-हीँ तेरो कह्यो नहीँ राख्यो । तो-ऊ तैँ-ने मो-कूँ एक वकरा-ऊ नहीँ दीयो अक मेरे भायलेन-के साजे मैँ खुसी करतो । पण तेरे या छोरा-कूँ आते-ई जा-ने तेरो धन वेड़णीन-मैँ उड़ा-दीयो या-के लहैं तो तैँ-ने जिँवाँये । वा-ने वा-ते कई बेटा तू-तो सदाँई मेरे ढिँगारे रहै । जे मेरे ढिँगारे है जे तेरो-ई है । खुसी करवो अर राजी हैवो तो हम-कूँ चैयेई हो क्यों अक ई तेरो भैया मर-गो हो जे फेरूँ जीयायो । खोय-गो हो जे फेर पायगो ॥

[No. 22

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BRAJ BHĀKHĀ (ḌĀṄGĪ). (STATE, JAIPUR.)

(Rev. G. Macalister, M.A.)

SPECIMEN I.

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ēk-kẽ dō bēṭā hē. Un-mẽ-tē lhōṛē bēṭā-nē
A-certain-one-to two sons were. Them-in-from the-younger son-by wā-kē bāp-tē kahī, 'arē dāū, dhan-mẽ mērō baṭ hai, his father-to it-was-said, 'O father, wealth-in my share is, jāya mō-kũ bãṭ-dē.' Jē wā-pai dhan hattyō jē un-kũ that me-to dividing-give.' What him-with wealth was that them-to bãṭ dīyō. Bhaut dinā nahĩ hūyē lhōṛō bēṭā sab-ī dividing was-given. Many days not became the-younger son entire-even lair bhaut dūr par-dēs-mẽ chalyō-gō. Whã having-taken very distant foreign-country-into went-away. There jār āp-kō sag dhan luchchā-paṇē-mẽ uṛā-dīyō.

having-gone his-own all wealth riotous-living-in was-squandered.

Jab wā-nē sag dhan uṛā-dīyō, jab wā dēs-mẽ aisō
When him-by all wealth had-been-wasted, then that country-in such bhārō jawāl paṛyō, ar ū kaṅgāl hai-gō. Pīchhai wā ū great famine fell, and he poor became. Afterwards he that dēs-kā ēk rahªbē-wālē-kē ḍhĩgārē jā-rahyō. Ū wāya sūwar country-of one inhabitant-of near having-gone-remained. He him swine charābē khēt-mẽ khãdātō. Jē pātªṛā sūwar khāwai-hē, jin-kē to-feed field-in sent. What husks swine eating-were, those-of khāyªbē-kũ ū rājī hattyō. Ar kāū-ī ādªmī wāya nahĩ dẽtō.

eating-for he pleased was. And any-even man to-him not gave.

Jab wā-kũ surat āī, wā-nē kahī, 'arē! mērē bāp-kē-ī
When him-to understanding came, him-by it-was-said, 'O! my father-of-verily nōkªran-kẽ nirī rōṭī, ar maĩ bhūkan marũ. Maĩ uṭhũgō, servants-to plenty bread(-is), and I of-hunger am-dying. I will-arise, ar mērē bāp-kē ḍhĩgārē jāũgō, ar wā-tē kahũgō, "dāū, and my father-of near I-will-go, and him-to I-will-say, "father, maĩ-nē surag-kō pāp karyō, ar tērō pāp karyō; ar ab maĩ aisō me-by heaven-of sin done, and thy sin done; and now I such nahĩ rahyō, jē tērō bēṭā kahªwāũ; mō-kũ tērō nōkar not remained, that thy son I-may-be-called; me (acc.) thy a-servant rākh-lai."' Ū uṭhir wā-kē bāp-kē ḍhĩgārē āyō. Bāp-kũ keep."' He having-arisen his father-of near came. Father-to wā-kũ dūr-tē ātō-ī dēkhar dayā āya-gaī. Jab bāp him (acc.) distance-from on-coming-just having-seen compassion came. Then the-father dauṛyō jār galē-tē lagā-līyō, ar maṭṭī laī wā-kī.

ran having-gone the-neck-to was-applied, and kisses were-taken him-of.
Jab bēṭā-nē wā-tē kaī, 'arē dāū, maĩ-nē surag-kō pāp
Then the-son-by him-to it-was-said, 'O father, me-by heaven-of sin karyō, ar tērō pāp karyō; ar ab aisō maĩ nahĩ rahyō, jē tērō done, and thy sin done; and now such I not remained, that thy bēṭā kahªwāũ.' Jab bāp-nē āp-kē nōkªran-tē kaī, son I-may-be-called.' Then the-father-by his-own servants-to it-was-said,
'āchhē-tē āchchē ōṛhaṇā lāwō ar wā-kũ pehªrāwō, ar wā-kē hāt-mẽ good-from good clothes bring and him-to put-on, and his hand-in ãgūṭhī pehªrāwō, ar pãwan-mẽ paṇã pehªrāwō; ar ham khāwẽ a-ring put-on, and feet-in shoes put-on; and let-us eat pīwẽ ar chain karẽ. Kyõ ak ī mērō bēṭā let-us-drink and merriment let-us-make. Because that this my son mar-gō hō, jē phēr jī āyō; ar khōya-gō hō, jē pāya-gō.'
dead was, who again living came; and lost-gone was, who was-found.'
Ar wē khusī haibē lagē.
And they merry to-be began.

Wā-kō baṛō bēṭā hō, jē khēt-mẽ hō. Jab ū āyō, ar His elder son was, who field-in was. When he came, and jab ghar-tē lagªtō āyō, jab wā-nē bajābō gābō ar nachªbō suṇyũ.
when house-to near came, then him-by music singing and dancing was-heard.
Jab wā-nē ēk jaṇū nōkªran-mẽ-tē bulāyō. Jab wā-tē Then him-by one person servants-from-among was-called. Then him-to pūchhī ak, 'āj ī kā bāt hai?' Jab wā-nē wā-tē it-was-asked that, 'today this what thing is?' Then him-by him-to kaī, 'tērō bhaiyā āya-gō hai; tērē bāp-nē jĩwãyē-haĩ, it-was-said, 'thy brother come is; thy father-by a-feast-has-been-given, ak wā-nē ū rājī-bājī āchhẽ dēkh-līyō.' Ū risāya-gō, jā-tē that him-by he safe-and-sound well was-seen.' He became-angry, therefore bhītar nahĩ gayō. Jā-tē wā-kē dāū-nē bāhar ār ū inside not went. Therefore his father-by out having-come he manāyō. Jab wā-nē wā-kē bāp-kũ juwāb dīyō ak, 'dēkh, was-persuaded. Then him-by his father-to reply was-given that, 'see, itēk barˢsan-tē meĩ tērī chākˢrī karũ, ar maĩ-nē kabhũ-hĩ tērō so-many years-from I thy service do, and me-by ever-even thy kahyō nahĩ rālyō; tō-ū taĩ-nē mō-kũ ēk bakˢrā-ū nahĩ order not was-disobeyed; still thee-by me-to one goat-even not dīyō ak mērē bhāyalēn-kē sājē maĩ khusī karˢtō. Paṇ was-given so-that my friends-of with I merriment might-make. But tērē yā chhōrā-kũ ātē-ī, jā-nē tērō dhan bēṛˢṇīn-mẽ thy this son-to on-coming-just, whom-by thy wealth prostitutes-in uṛā-dīyō, yā-kē lahẽ tō taĩ-nē jĩwãyē.' Wā-nē wā-tē was-wasted, him-of for indeed thee-by a-feast-is-given.' Him-by him-to kaī, 'bēṭā, tū-tō sadãī mērē ḍhĩgārē rahai. Jē mērē it-was-said, 'son, thou-indeed always my near livest. What my ḍhĩgāre hai, jē tērō-ī hai. Khusī karˢbō ar rājī haibō near is, that thine-verily is. Merriment to-make and pleased to-be tō ham-kũ chaiyē-ī hō; kyõ ak ī tērō bhaiyā mar-gō indeed us-to proper was; because that this thy brother dead hō, jē phērũ jīy-āyō; khōya-gō hō, jē phēr pāya-gō.'

was, who again living-came; lost-gone was, who again was-found.'

[No. 23.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BRAJ BHĀKHĀ (ḌĀṄGĪ). (STATE, JAIPUR.)

(Rev. G. Macalister, M.A.)

SPECIMEN II.

एक ठाकर हो। तो वा-कै खायबे-कूँ घर-में कछू हत नहीं हो। तो झटसीदेण वा-ने कही कि भाई चाकरी-कूँ जाऊँगो। तो एक सोण-चिड़ैया ही। जा-के सोण लेबे जाय। रोजीना तो ऊ सोण-चिड़ैया वा-कूँ सोण नहीं दे। सोण-चिड़ैया तो चुगेरे-कूँ जाय। और वा-के बच्चान-तें कह जाय बेटा काउ-कूँ सोण मत दे-दीज्यो। तो ऊ तो चुकबे-कूँ गई अर पीछे-तै आयो ठाकर। तो सोण-चिड़ैया-के बच्चान-ने वा-कूँ सोण दै-दीयो। तो ठाकर ऊँट-की काठी खूब कस-अर ऊँट-पै चँड़-अर चल-दियो। तो पीछे-तै सोण-चिड़ैया आई। वा-ने पूछी बेटाओ काउ-कूँ सोण तो नहीं दियो-है। तो कै मैया हम-ने तो सोण दै-दीयो। ठाकर आबो करै जा-कूँ। तो सोण-चिड़ैया भजी व्हाँ-तैं। तो गैल-में ठाकर जा-लियो। तो व्हाँ जार बैरबानी-को रूप धर-लियो। तो ठाकर-ने पूछी तू कोण। मैं तेरी बैरबानी। तो कै आ एक-ते दो हुये। तो ऊँट-पै ऊ बैठा-लई। खटकेन-की दब लगी। तो एक पोखिर भरी ही पाणी-ते। तो वा सोण-चिड़ैया-तें बोल्यो कै मैं खटके कराऊँ। वा-ने कही कै जा करा। तो वा पोखिर-कै ढँगारे खटके करबे गयो। तो खटको कर-कैन सीसो लेर उलटो बगद्यो। तो पोखिर-की पाड़-में स्याँप मैंड़का माँऊँ लपकै। तो वा-ने कही कै या-को ज्यो या अजाँय ले। तो वा-ने चक्कू-तें काट माँस आपणी जाँग-में-ते और वा स्याँप-कूँ फैकबो कर्यो। तो स्याँप खूब धाप-गो। तो आप-ई उठर चल्यो-गो। तो ऊ जार पौंछ्यो ऊँट-कै ढँगारे। तो लोईन-ते वा-की जाँग भीज रही। तो सोण-चिड़ैया-ने देखी। कही का हुयो। तो वा-ने कही कै एक मैंड़का-कूँ स्याँप खावै-हो। जा-तें मैं-ने मेरी जाँग-को माँस राड़ो काट-काट-कैं। झटसीदेण सोण-चिड़ैया-ने हात फेर दियो। तो ऐसी-की ऐसी जाँग है-गई। तो चँड़ ऊँट-पै दोन्यूँ चले। तो वा मैंड़का-ने सोसी कै तू वा-कूँ आड़ो कब आवैगो तो होय न होय। अब-ई चलो। तो झटसीदेण व्हाँ-तैं चल दियो॥

[No. 23.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BRAJ BHĀKHĀ (ḌĀṄGĪ). (STATE, JAIPUR.)

(Rev. G. Macalister, M.A.)

SPECIMEN II.

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ēk Ṭhākar hō. Tō wā-kai khāy[a]bē-kũ ghar-mẽ kachhū
One Ṭhākur there-was. Then him-to to-eat house-in anything haṭ nahĩ hō. Tō jhaṭ[a]sīdēṇ wā-nē kahī ki, 'bhāī, even not was. Then immediately him-by it-was-said that, 'brother, chāk[a]rī-kũ jāũgō.' Tō ēk sōṇ-chiṛaiyā hī, jā-kē sōṇ service-for I-will-go.' Then one omen-bird there-was, whose omen lēbē jāya. Rōjīnā tō ū sōṇ-chiṛaiyā wā-kũ sōṇ nahĩ to-take he-goes. Every-day indeed that omen-bird him-to omen not dē. Sōṇ-chiṛaiyā tō chugērē-kũ jāya; aur wā-kē bachchān-tẽ gives. The-omen-bird then picking-food-for goes; and her young-ones-to kah jāya, 'bēṭā, kāu-kũ sōṇ mat dē-dījyō.' Tō ū tō saying goes, 'sons, any-one-to omen do-not give.' Then she on-her-part chuk[a]bē-kũ gaī, ar pīchhē-tai āyō Ṭhākar. Tō sōṇ-chiṛaiyā-kē feeding-for went, and behind-from came the-Ṭhākur. Then the-omen-bird-of bachchān-nē wā-kũ sōṇ dai-dīyō. Tō Ṭhākar ũṭ-kī kāṭhī young-ones-by him-to omen was-given. Then the-Ṭhākur camel-of saddle khūb kas-ar ũṭ-pai chāṛ-ar chal-diyō. Tō pīchhē-tai tightly tied-having camel-on mounted-having set-off. Then behind-from sōṇ-chiṛaiyā āī. Wā-nē pūchhī, 'bēṭāō, kāu-kũ sōṇ tō nahĩ the-omen-bird came. She asked, 'children, any-one-to omen indeed not diyō hai?' Tō kai, 'maiyā, ham-nē tō sōṇ dai-dīyō.
given is?' Then it-was-said, 'O-mother, us-by indeed omen was-given.
Ṭhākar ābō karai, jā-kũ. Tō sōṇ-chiṛaiyā bhajī whã-taĩ;
The-Ṭhākur coming does, him-to. Then the-omen-bird ran there-from;
tō gail-mẽ Ṭhākar jā-liyō. Tō whã jār then the-way-in the-Ṭhākur was-overtaken. Then there having-gone bair[a]bānī-kō rūp dhar-liyō. Tō Ṭhākar-nē pūchhī, 'tū a-woman-of form was-assumed. Then the-Ṭhākur-by it-was-asked, 'thou kōṇ?' 'maĩ tērī bair[a]bānī.' Tō kai, 'ā, ēk-tē dō huyē.'
who?' 'I thy wife.' Then it-was-said, 'come, one-from two became.'

Tō ūṇṭ-pai ū baiṭhā-laī. Khaṭ[a]kēn-kī dab lagī; tō
Then camel-on she was-caused-to-sit. Nature's-call-of necessity was-felt; then ēk pōkhir bharī hī pāṇī-tē. Tō wā sōṇ-chiṛaiyā-tẽ̃ bōlyō kai, one tank full was water-with. Then he the-omen-bird-to spoke that,
'maĩ khaṭ[a]kē kary-āũ̃.' Wā-nē kahī kai, 'jā,
'I a-call-of-nature having-done-come.' Her-by it-was-said that, 'go, kary-ā.' Tō wā pōkhir-kai ḍhãgārē khaṭ[a]kē kar[a]bē gayō.
having-done-come.' Then he tank-of near call-of-nature for-doing went.
Tō khaṭ[a]kō kar-kain sīsō lēr ul[a]ṭō bag[a]dyō. Tō
Then call-of-nature done-having water having-taken back he-returned. Then pōkhir-kī pāṛ-mẽ̃ syãp maĩṛ[a]kā-mãũ̃ lap[a]kai. Tō wā-nē kahī the-tank-of bank-on a-serpent a-frog-at darted. Then him-by it-was-said kai, 'yā-kō jyō yā ajãy lē.' Tō wā-nē chakkū-tẽ̃ that, 'this-of life this-one untimely takes.' Then him-by pen-knife-with kāṭ mãs āp[a]ṇī jãg-mẽ̃-tē, aur wā syãp-kũ̃ phaik[a]bō karyō.
having-cut flesh his-own thigh-in-from, and that serpent-to throwing was-done.
Tō syãp khūb dhāp-gō. Tō āp-ī uṭhar chalyō-gō.
Then the-serpent much satisfied-went. Then himself having-arisen went-away.
Tō ū jār põchhyō ũṭ-kai ḍhãgārai. Tō lōīn-tē wā-kī Then he having-gone arrived the-camel-of near. Then blood-with his jãg bhīj-rahī. Tō sōṇ-chiṛaiyā-nē dēkhī, kahī, 'kā huyō?'
thigh wetted-was. Then the-omen-bird-by it-was-seen, it-was-said, 'what became?'
Tō wā-nē kahī kai, 'ēk maĩṛ[a]kā-kũ̃ syãp khāwai-hō;
Then him-by it-was-said that, 'one frog-to a-serpent eating-was;
jā-tẽ̃ maĩ-nē mērī jãg-kō mãs rāryō, kāṭ-kāṭ-kaĩ.' Jhaṭ[a]sīdēṇ therefore me-by my thigh-of flesh was-thrown, cut-cut-having.' At-once sōṇ-chiṛaiyā-nē hāt phēr-diyō. Tō aisī-kī aisī jãg hai-gaī.
the-omen-bird-by hand was-passed-on. Then such-of such the-thigh became.
Tō chãṛ ũṭ-pai dōnyũ̃ chalē. Tō wā maĩṛ[a]kā-nē Then mounting the-camel-on both set-off. Then that frog-by sōsī kai, 'tū wā-kũ̃ āṛō kab āwaigō tō hōya it-was-thought said, 'thou him-to serviceable when will-come then it-may-be na hōya; ab-ī chalō.' Tō jhaṭ[a]sīdēṇ whã̃-taĩ chal-diyō.
not it-may-be; now-even go.' Then at-once there-from he-started.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

There was a Ṭhākur who had nothing to eat in his house, so he said to himself, 'brother, I'm going to look for service.' There was also a bird of omen, and the Ṭhākur went to her to get an omen, but though he went every day she never gave him one. One day she went out to pick up some food, and before she started she told her children on no account to give an omen to any one. While she was away the Ṭhākur came as usual, and the chicks gave him the looked-for indication, so he saddled his camel, mounted and set off.

Back came the omen-bird, 'My children, are you sure you gave no one an omen?' 'Indeed we did, mother. We gave it to the Ṭhākur who comes every day.'

Up flew the omen-bird, and overtook the Ṭhākur on his way. She assumed the form of a woman. 'Who are you?' said he. 'I'm your wife.' 'Come along; one has become two.' So he took her up on his camel. They came to a tank full of water, and he was compelled to descend for a certain purpose. 'I'll be back in a moment,' said he. 'All right,' said she. On the bank of the tank he saw a snake pursuing a frog. 'It's a shame to let the poor thing be killed,' said he. So he took out his penknife and cut bits of flesh out of his thigh with which he fed the snake till it could eat no more. Then he got up and went back to the camel. His thigh was all bloody. 'What's happened?' said the omen-bird. 'A snake was going to eat a frog, so I threw it lumps of flesh from my thigh instead.'

Straightway the omen-bird passed her hand over the wound, and it healed up as it was before. Then they got up on the camel and went on their way.

But the frog said to himself, 'some day or other you may be of use to him. Go at once.' So he started off at once.

[This is the end of the extract. The entire story, which is a long one, will be found on pp. 82 and ff. of Mr. Macalister's book. The frog takes the form of a barber and overtakes the Ṭhākur. The three then go on. The snake, out of gratitude for his good meal, also joins the company as a Brāhmaṇ. The four settle in a city, where the omen-bird gets the Ṭhākur service under the king, on a salary of a lākh of rupees. The king's barber persuades the king to set the Ṭhākur three apparently impossible tasks (to get a snake's jewel, to find a ring thrown into a well, and to get news of his dead and gone ancestors), all of which the Ṭhākur performs with the aid of the snake, the frog, and the omen-bird. To carry out the third task, the omen-bird assumes the form of the Ṭhākur and gets the king to make a huge funeral pyre on which she sits. It is lighted, and she flies away in the smoke. She then sends the Ṭhākur to the king with the news that he has come back from the king's ancestors, and that they are all well, but want a barber. So the king makes another pyre and sets his barber on it to go off to his ancestors. The pyre is lighted. The barber is, of course, burnt to death, and the king and the Ṭhākur live happy ever afterwards.]

ḌĀṄGBHĀṄG.

In the south-east corner of the Jaipur State, on the borders of Kotah and Karauli, and separated from Ḍāṅgī by Kālīmāl and the Ḍāṅgī of Karauli we have Ḍāṅgbhāṅg.

The estimated number of its speakers is 80,363.

Ḍāṅgbhāṅg is more infected with Jaipurī idioms than Ḍāṅgī. It even exhibits modes of expression which have hitherto been considered to be peculiar to Gujarātī. In its grammatical forms the following are the main points in which it differs from Ḍāṅgī of Jaipur.

Pronunciation.—There is a tendency for i to become a, as in dan, a day; lakhyō, written. So u becomes i in ripyō, a rupee.

The tendency to disaspiration appears to be stronger even than in Ḍāṅgī. We have cases like kusī, pleasure; bā̃dō, bind; sūkō, dry; sād (sādhu), a saint; bhūkō, hungry; jīb, a tongue; lō, iron; rākas (rākhas), a fiend. The letter h is often transferred to the first letter of a word, as in mhal for mahal, a palace; mhārāj, as well as māhārāj, a great king; ghadō, for gadᵃhō, an ass. Similarly m is transferred in lmabō, for lambō, long. Disaspiration is, as usual, prominent in the conjugation of the roots rah, remain, and kah, say. We have rai-hai for rahai-hai, he lives; rayō, lived; kaī, said; kai, say (imperative, 2nd sing.); and kū̃gō, I will say.

As a rule strong masculine nouns end in ō,—not ā, as in Ḍāṅgī and Braj Bhākhā,—thus, bēṭō, not bēṭā, a son. The oblique singular of these nouns, and the nominative plural, end in ā. Thus, bēṭā-kō, of a son; bēṭā, sons. The oblique plural ends in ān, as in Ḍāṅgī. In other respects nouns form their oblique forms as in Ḍāṅgī.

There is no accusative-dative in ya, like the pōtāya of Ḍāṅgī. There is a locative in ā̃, as in mhalā̃, in the palace; sā̃chyā̃, in truth; and in ai for nouns and adjectives ending in ō, as in mahīnai, in a month; āgai, in front, before. This last locative is common, and when an adjective (or genitive) agrees with a noun in the locative, it too is put into that case, which is a most interesting survival. Thus we have āp-kai (not āp-kē) mhalā̃, in his own palace; mērai (not mērē) āgai, in my front, i.e. before me; tumārai pachhai, in thy behind, behind thee.

The postpositions are the same as in Ḍāṅgī, except that the agent has nai, instead of nē, and that the oblique genitive ends in kā, not kē, as in ū̃ dēs-kā raibālā-kai, to an inhabitant of that country.

The termination kai of the dative (which also occurs in Ḍāṅgī) is here clearly seen to be the locative case of kō, the sign of the genitive. In other words, in Ḍāṅgbhāṅg, a dative may be formed by putting the genitive into the locative, i.e. by changing the termination ō to ai. Thus, raibālā-kai, to an inhabitant; chāyᵃnā hai mērai, there is a desire to me, I have a desire; dō putr hō-jyāyᵃgā tērai, two sons will become to thee, thou wilt have two sons; bēṭā hōya āpᵃṇai, sons will be to us, we (i.e. I) shall have sons.

When an adjective or pronoun agrees with a noun, the postposition is sometimes added to both, as in ū̃-nai rājā-nai kaī, by that by the king it was said, it was said by that king; raibālā-kai ēk-kai, to inhabitant to one, to one (i.e. an) inhabitant.

Sometimes the sign of the agent is omitted (as in Jaipurī), as in ū̃ (for ū̃-nai) maitᵃrī-kū̃ mārī, he beat the sweeper-woman.

Adjectives which in Braj Bhākhā end in au, and in Ḍāṅgī in ō, often end in yō in Ḍāṅgbhāṅg. Thus, āchhyō, good (obl. sing. masc. āchhyā); sā̃chhyō, true (fem. sā̃chī, loc. sing. masc. sā̃chyā̃); asyō, of this kind (=Hindōstānī aisā). It will thus be seen that they agree in form with past participles.

As to pronouns, the first person is the same as in Ḍāṅgī, except that we now and then meet a Jaipurī form, such as mhārō, as well as mērō, my. The accusative-datives mōya, tōya, wāya, etc., do not occur.

The nominative plural of the second person is tum, tam or tamū, and its genitive is tumārō. This pronoun takes nai, the sign of the agent case, also as the sign of the accusative-dative (in this case suffixed to the oblique form, and not to the nominative). Thus, taī-nai, by thee; tō-nai, to thee; tum-nai, by you or to you.

As in Ḍāṅgī, the reflexive pronoun āpā̃, self, is also used to mean 'we,' including the person addressed, or even 'I.' Its oblique form is āpā̃, or (plural) āpā̃n. Its genitive is āpᵉṇō or āp-kō. The personal pronouns are often used instead of āpᵉṇō, in the sense of 'own.' Thus, ū̃-kā (or āpᵉṇā) bāp-sū̃ kaī, he said to his father.

The pronoun of the third person ('he,' 'that') is wō; obl. sing. ū̃; nom. plur. wē; obl. plur. un: whā̃='there.'

'This' is yō (sometimes yā); obl. sing. ī̃; nom. plur. yē; obl. plur. in: nyā̃='here;' nyō̃=thus.

Jō, obl. sing. jī̃, nom. plur. jē, obl. plur. jin, is the demonstrative pronoun 'that,' and the relative pronoun 'who;' jad or jab='then,' 'when'; jhyā̃='there,' 'where.'

Kuṇ (which does not change in declension) is 'who?' kāī̃='what?'; kōī='anyone,' 'some'; kāī̃='anything'; khā̃='where?'; kyō̃='why?'

The conjugation of verbs is generally as in Ḍāṅgī, except that (as in Jaipurī) the first person plural ends in ā̃, and the third person plural is not nasalised. Thus,—

I strike, etc.

	Sing.	Plur.
1.	mārū̃	mārā̃.
2.	mārai	mārō.
3.	mārai	mārai.

The conjunctive participle ends in kai, kar or ar, as mār-kai, mār-kar, mār-ar; having struck. The noun of agency ends in bāḷō, as in rai-bāḷō, an inhabitant.

The auxiliary verb uses both the Braj and the Jaipurī forms. Thus—(Braj) maī hū̃, I am; maī hō (plur. masc. hā), I was.

(Jaipurī) maī chhū̃, I am; maī chhō (plur. masc. chhā), I was. The Braj form is the more usual.

The definite present is formed by adding the auxiliary verb to the simple present. Thus, maī mārū̃-hū̃. The imperfect is formed by adding ai to the root which is conjugated with the past tense of the auxiliary. Thus (singular) maī mārai hō, (plural) ham mārai hā, and so for all persons.

The letters s and k are often added pleonastically to the third person of verbs. They are relics of old pronouns. Thus, kaī-as, he said; pūchhī-s, he asked; mārai-k, he may strike.

In one important point of construction Ḍāṅgbhāṅg agrees with most of the Rājasthānī dialects, and with Gujarātī. When a transitive verb occurs in Hindī in the past tense, it is used either passively, or impersonally. Thus (passively) us-nē strī mārī, a woman was struck by him, i.e. he struck a woman, in which the verb (mārī) agrees in gender with the object (strī): (impersonally) us-nē strī-kō mārā, by him, with reference to the woman, striking was done, in which the verb (mārā), being used impersonally, always remains masculine whatever the gender of the object may be.

In Ḍāṅgbhāṅg, as in Gujarātī, when this impersonal construction is used, the verb is attracted by the gender of the object, and becomes feminine when it is feminine. Thus, rājā-nai maitʳrī-kū̃ bulāī, literally, by the king, with reference to the female-sweeper, she (not 'it') was called, i.e. the king called the female-sweeper. Here, it will be observed, the word bulāī agrees in gender with maitʳrī, although the latter has the sign of the dative, kū̃, attached to it.

We may also note the employment of the Jaipurī word kōnī or kō . . . . . nī, meaning 'not.'

[No. 24.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BRAJ BHĀKHĀ (ḌĀṄGBHĀṄG). (STATE, JAIPUR.)

(Rev. G. Macalister, M.A.)

SPECIMEN I.

कोई आदमी-कै दो बेटा हा। उन-में-सूँ छोटा बेटा-नै ऊँ-का बाप-सूँ कई बाप पूँजी-में-सूँ जो मेरी पाँती आवै सो मो-कूँ दै। ऊँ-नै ऊँ-की पूँजी उन-कूँ बाँट-दी। थोड़ा दन पाछै छोटो बेटो सारी पूँजी ले-कै दूर परदेस-में चल्यो-गयो। व्हाँ जा-कर ऊँ-नै ऊँ-की पूँजी गैर चलण-में उड़ा-दी। ऊँ-नै सब पूँजी उड़ा-दी। पाछै ऊँ देस-में भोत-सो काल पड़-गयो। जद वो कँगाल हो-गयो। वो गयो अर ऊँ देस-का रैवाला-कै एक-कै जा-कर रयो। ऊँ-नै ऊँ-कूँ सूर चरावा-कूँ खेतन-पै खँदायो। जो पातड़ा सूर खावै-हा जिन-सूँ वो पेट भरवा-कूँ राजी हो। कोई आदमी ऊँ-कूँ काँई बी नईं दे-हो। जब ऊँ-कूँ च्यान आयो जब ऊँ-नै कई मेरा बाप-का चाकरन-कूँ रोटी घणी अर मैं भूको मरूँ-हूँ। मैं उठूँगो अर मेरा बाप कनै जाऊँगो अर ऊँ-सूँ कूँगो बाप मैं-नै सरग-को पाप कर्यो अर तेरो पाप कर्यो अर मैं अस्यो नै रह्यो सो तेरो बेटो कुवाऊँ। तेरा नोकरन-में मो-कूँ बी एक नोकर राख-लै॥

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Kōī ādᵃmī-kai dō bēṭā hā. Un-mẽ-sũ chhōṭā bēṭā-nai
A-certain man-to two sons were. Them-in-from the-younger son-by ũ-kā bāp-sũ kaī, 'bāp, pũjī-mẽ-sũ jō mērī pãtī āwai his father-to it-was-said, 'father, property-in-from what my share comes sō mō-kũ dai.' Ũ-nai ũ-kī pũjī un-kũ bãṭ-dī. Thōṛā that me-to give.' Him-by his property them-to dividing-was-given. A-few dan pāchhai chhōṭō bēṭō sārī pũjī lē-kai dūr days after the-younger son all property taken-having a-far par-dēs-mẽ chalyō-gayō. Whã jā-kar ũ-nai ũ-kī pũjī foreign-country-into went-away. There gone-having him-by his property gair chalaṇ-mẽ uṛā-dī. Ũ̃-nai sab pũ̃jī uṛā-dī, pāchhai bad conduct-in was-wasted. Him-by all property was-squandered, afterwards ũ̃ dēs-mẽ bhōt-sō kāl paṛ-gayō. Jad wō kã̃gāl hō-gayō. Wō that country-in a-great famine fell. Then he poor became. He gayō ar ũ̃ dēs-kā raibālā-kai ēk-kai jā-kar rayō. Ũ̃-nai ũ̃-kũ̃ went and that country-of inhabitant-to one-to gone-having lived. Him-by him-to sūr charābā-kũ̃ khētan-pai khãdāyō. Jō pāt^{a}ṛā sūr khāwai-hā swine feeding-for fields-in was-sent. Which husks swine eating-were jin-sũ̃ wō pēṭ bhar^{a}bā-kũ̃ rājī hō. Kōī ād^{a}mī ũ̃-kũ̃ kã̃ĩ them-from he belly filling-for pleased was. Any man him-to anything bī naĩ dē-hō. Jab ũ̃-kũ̃ gyã̃n āyō jab ũ̃-nai even not giving-was. When him-to understanding came then him-by kaī, 'mērā bāp-kā chākaran-kũ̃ rṓṭī ghaṇī, ar maĩ bhūkō it-was-said, 'my father-of servants-to bread much(-is), and I hungry marũ̃-hũ̃. Maĩ uṭhũ̃gō, ar mērā bāp kanai jāũ̃gō, ar ũ̃-sũ̃ dying-am. I will-arise, and my father near will-go, and him-to kũ̃gō, "bāp, maĩ-nai sarag-kō pāp karyō, ar tērō pāp karyō, will-say, "father, me-by heaven-of sin was-done, and thy sin was-done, ar maĩ asyō nai rahyō sō tērō bēṭō kuwāũ̃; tērā and I such not remained that thy son I-should-be-called; thy nōkaran-mẽ mō-kũ̃ bī ēk nōkar rākh-lai."' servants-in me also one servant keep."'

[No. 25.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BRAJ BHĀKHĀ (ḌĀṄGBHĀṄG). (STATE, JAIPUR.)

(Rev. G. Macalister, M.A.)

SPECIMEN II.

एक राजा क्षो नपुत्री । जो मैतरी झाड़ू काड़वा आवै-ही राजा हात मूँडो धोवै-क्षो । मैतरी-नै राजा-कूँ देखर आप-का मूँडा-कै आडो ढोकरो लगा-लीयो । फेर राजा-नै कईअस मैं देसपती तो राजा अर मैतरी-नै मो-कूँ देखर मूँडा-कै आडो ढोकरो कसाँ लगायो । फेर मैतरी-कूँ बुलाई । पूछीस मैं देसपती तो राजा । तैं-नै आडो ढोकरो क्यों लगायो मो-कूँ देखर । मैतरी-नै कई माहाराज क्यों-ई नई । न्यों-ई कुसी मेरी लगा-लीयो । ऊँ-नै राजा-नै कई कै साँची कै । फेर ऊँ-नै कई कै म्हाराज म्हारो घर-को मैतर मो-कूँ मारै । तुम नपुत्री हो । तुमारो मूँडो देखबा-को धरम नई । जब राजा-नै अपणा नौकरन-कूँ हुकम दे-दीयोस जा-कर देखो साँच्याँ-ई ई-कूँ भंगी मारैक नई । उन-नै जार देखीस साँच्याँ-ई ऊँ मैतरी-कूँ मारी । फेर उन-नै आ कयोअस मारी । जब ऊँ-नै राजा-नै देखीअस साद-संत-की बंदगी करो । सो साद-संत आवै जौं-की-ई वो बंदगी करै । अर रोजीना धरम पुन्न करै । अब ऊँ-कै तो बेटा-की लग्गीअस कोई दाय कर्र बेटा होय आपणै । आपाँ तो नपुत्री हाँ । ऊँ-को बाग सूको पड्यो-हो । एक साद ऊँ-मैं आर अस्यो उतर्यो सो बाग हर्यो हो-गयो । राजा-नै ऊँ-की बंदगी करी साद-की । साद करामाँती है । सो अलबत या आपाँन-कूँ बेटो देगो । उन-नै राजी होर कई बच्चा माँग । बचन द्यो तो माँगूँ । बचन-ई है । माँग । पुत्र-की चायना है मेरै । तेरा करम-मैं लख्या तो कोनी । जा दो पुत्र हो-ज्यायगा तेरै । वो तो साद हो रमतो । सो रम-गयो अर राजा म्हलाँ आ-गयो आप-कै । ऊँ-कै नवैं महीनै पुत्र हो-गया । राजा राजी हो-गयो । ऊँ-का घरबार बस्या ॥

[No. 25.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BRAJ BHĀKHĀ (ḌĀṄGBHĀṄG). (STATE, JAIPUR.)

(Rev. G. Macalister, M.A.)

SPECIMEN II.

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ēk rājā chhō naputrī. Jō maitᵃrī jhāṛū kāṛᵃba awai-hī,
A king was sonless. When the-mihtarānī broom to-wield coming-was,

rājā hāt mũ̃ḍō dhōwai-chhō. Maitᵃrī-nai rājā-kũ̃ dēkhar
the-king hand face washing-was. The-mihtarānī-by the-king having-seen āp-kā mũ̃ḍā-kai āḍō ḍhōkᵃrō lagā-līyō. Phēr rājā-nai kaī-as, her-own face-to screen a-basket was-applied. Then the-king-by it-was-said,

'maĩ dēs-patī tō rājā, ar maitᵃrī-nai mō-kũ̃
'I country-lord verily king(-am), and the-mihtarānī-by me

dēkhar mũ̃ḍā-kai āḍō ḍhōkᵃrō kasã̃ lagāyō mō-kũ̃ dēkhar?'
having-seen the-face-to screen a-basket why was-applied me having-seen?'

Phēr maitᵃrī-kũ̃ bulāī, pūchhīs, 'maĩ dēs-patī tō
Then the-mihtarānī-to it-was-called, she-was-asked, 'I country-lord verily

rājā; taĩ-nai āḍō ḍhōkᵃrō kyõ̃ lagāyō?' Maitᵃrī-nai king(-am); thee-by screen a-basket why was-applied?' The-mihtarānī-by kaī, 'Māhārāj, kyõ̃-ĩ naĩ. Nyõ̃-ĩ kusī mērī it-was-said, 'Your-Majesty, why-indeed is-not. Thus-verily pleasure my lagā-līyō.' Ũ̃-nai rājā-nai kaī kai, 'sã̃chī kai.' Phēr it-was-applied.' Him-by the-king-by it-was-said that, 'truth speak.' Then

ũ̃-nai kaī kai, 'Mhārāj, mhārō ghar-kō maitar mō-kũ̃ mārai.
her-by it-was-said that, 'Your-Majesty, my house-of mihtar me may-beat.

Tum naputrī hō. Tumārō mũ̃ḍō dēkhᵃbā-kō dharam naĩ.' Jab
You sonless are. Your face seeing-of religion is-not.' Then

rājā-nai apᵃṇā naukᵃran-kũ̃ hukam dē-dīyōs, 'jā-kar dēkhō
the-king-by his-own servants-to command was-given, 'gone-having see sã̃chyã̃-ĩ ĩ-kũ̃ bhaṅgī māraik naĩ.' Un-nai jār in-truth-verily this-one the-mihtar beats (or-)not.' Them-by having-gone dēkhīs, sã̃chyã̃-ĩ ũ̃ maitᵃrī-kũ̃ mārī. Phēr un-nai she-was-seen, in-truth-verily that mihtarānī-to she-was-beaten. Then them-by

[No. 25.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BRAJ BHĀKHĀ (ḌĀṄGBHĀṄG). (STATE, JAIPUR.)

(Rev. G. Macalister, M.A.)

SPECIMEN II.

एक राजा छो नपुचो । जो मैतरी झाड़ू काड़बा आवै-ही राजा हात मूँडो धोवै-छो । मैतरी-नै राजा-कूँ देखर आप-का मूँडा-कै आडो ढोकरो लगा-लीयो । फेर राजा-नै कईअस मैं देसपती तो राजा अर मैतरी-नै मो-कूँ देखर मूँडा-कै आडो ढोकरो कसाँ लगायो । फेर मैतरी-कूँ बुलाई । पूछीस मैं देसपती तो राजा । तैं-नै आडो ढोकरो क्यों लगायो मो-कूँ देखर । मैतरी-नै कई माहाराज क्यों-ई नईं । न्यों-ई कुसी मेरी लगा-लीयो । ऊँ-नै राजा-नै कई कै साँची कै । फेर ऊँ-नै कई कै म्हाराज म्हारो घर-को मैतर मो-कूँ मारै । तुम नपुचो हो । तुमारो मूँडो देखबा-को धरम नईं । जब राजा-नै अपणा नौकरन-कूँ हुकम दे-दीयोस जा-कर देखो साँच्याँ-ई ई-कूँ भंगी मारैक नईं । उन-नै जार देखीस साँच्याँ-ई ऊँ मैतरी-कूँ मारी । फेर उन-नै आ कयोअस मारी । जब ऊँ-नै राजा-नै देखीअस साद-संत-की बंदगी करी । सो साद-संत आवै जीं-की-ई वो बंदगी करै । अर रोजीना धरम पुन्न करै । अब ऊँ-कै तो बेटा-की लग्गीअस कोई दाय कर्र बेटा होय आपणै । आपाँ तो नपुचो हाँ । ऊँ-को बाग सूको पड्यो-हो । एक साद ऊँ-मैं आर अस्यो उतस्यो सो बाग हर्यो हो-गयो । राजा-नै ऊँ-की बंदगी करी साद-की । साद करामाँती है । सो अलबत या आपाँन-कूँ बेटो देगो । उन-नै राजी होर कई बच्चा माँग । बचन द्यो तो माँगूँ । बचन-ई है । माँग । पुच-की चायना है मेरै । तेरा करम-मैं लख्या तो कोनी । जा दो पुच हो-ज्यायगा तेरै । वो तो साद हो रमतो । सो रम-गयो अर राजा म्हलाँ आ-गयो आप-कै । ऊँ-कै नवैं महीनै पुच हो-गया । राजा राजी हो-गयो । ऊँ-का घरबार बस्या ॥

[No. 25.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BRAJ BHĀKHĀ (ḌĀṄGBHĀṄG). (STATE, JAIPUR.)

(Rev. G. Macalister, M.A.)

SPECIMEN II.

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ēk rājā chhō naputrī. Jō maitᵃrī jhāṛū kāṛᵃba awai-hī,
A king was sonless. When the-mihtarānī broom to-wield coming-was,

rājā hāt mũḍō dhōwai-chhō. Maitᵃrī-nai rājā-kũ dēkhar
the-king hand face washing-was. The-mihtarānī-by the-king having-seen āp-kā mũḍā-kai āḍō ḍhōkᵃrō lagā-līyō. Phēr rājā-nai kaī-as, her-own face-to screen a-basket was-applied. Then the-king-by it-was-said,

'maĩ dēs-patī tō rājā, ar maitᵃrī-nai mō-kũ
'I country-lord verily king(-am), and the-mihtarānī-by me

dēkhar mũḍā-kai āḍō ḍhōkᵃrō kasã̃ lagāyō mō-kũ dēkhar?'
having-seen the-face-to screen a-basket why was-applied me having-seen?'

Phēr maitᵃrī-kũ bulāī, pūchhīs, 'maĩ dēs-patī tō
Then the-mihtarānī-to it-was-called, she-was-asked, 'I country-lord verily

rājā; taĩ-nai āḍō ḍhōkᵃrō kyõ lagāyō?' Maitᵃrī-nai king(-am); thee-by screen a-basket why was-applied?' The-mihtarānī-by

kaī, 'Māhārāj, kyõ-ĩ naĩ. Nyõ-ĩ kusī mērī
it-was-said, 'Your-Majesty, why-indeed is-not. Thus-verily pleasure my lagā-līyō.' Ũ̃-nai rājā-nai kaī kai, 'sã̃chī kai.' Phēr

it-was-applied.' Him-by the-king-by it-was-said that, 'truth speak.' Then

ũ-nai kaī kai, 'Mhārāj, mhārō ghar-kō maitar mō-kũ mārai.
her-by it-was-said that, 'Your-Majesty, my house-of mihtar me may-beat.

Tum naputrī hō. Tumārō mũḍō dēkhᵃbā-kō dharam naĩ.' Jab
You sonless are. Your face seeing-of religion is-not.' Then

rājā-nai apᵃṇā naukᵃran-kũ hukam dē-dīyōs, 'jā-kar dēkhō
the-king-by his-own servants-to command was-given, 'gone-having see

sã̃chyã̃-ĩ ĩ-kũ bhaṅgī māraik naĩ.' Un-nai jār in-truth-verily this-one the-mihtar beats (or-)not.' Them-by having-gone

dēkhīs, sã̃chyã̃-ĩ ũ maitᵃrī-kũ mārī. Phēr un-nai
she-was-seen, in-truth-verily that mihtarānī-to she-was-beaten. Then them-by ā kayō-as, 'mārī.' Jab ũ-nai rājā-nai having-come it-was-said, 'she-was-beaten.' Then that-by king-by dēkhī-as, 'sād-sant-kī band^{a}gī karō.' Sō it-was-seen (i.e. thought), 'saints-holy-men-of service do.' So sād-sant āwai, jĩ-kī-ī wō bandagī karai. Ar rōjīnā dharam saints-holy-men come, them-of-verily he service does. And daily virtue punn karai. Ab ũ-kai tō bēṭā-kī laggī-as, holy-actions he-does. Now him-to verily son-of (the-thought-)was-pleasing,

'kōī dāy karar bēṭā hōya āp^{a}nai. Āpã tō
'some contrivance having-made sons may-become to-us. We verily naputrī hã.' Ũ-kō bāg sūkō paṛyō-hō. Ēk sād ũ-maĩ sonless are.' Him-of the-garden dry fallen-was. A saint it-in ār asyō utaryō sō bāg haryō hō-gayō. Rājā-nai ũ-kī having-come such alighted that garden green became. The-king-by him-of bandagī karī sād-kī. 'Sād karāmãtī hai. Sō service was-done the-saint-of. 'The-saint a-worker-of-miracles is. So al^{a}bat yā āpãn-kũ bēṭō dēgō.' Un-nai rājī hōr certainly he us-to a-son will-give.' Him-by pleased having-become kaī, 'bachchā, mãg.' 'Bachan dyō tō mãgũ.' 'Bachan-ī it-was-said, 'child, ask.' 'Promise give then I-ask.' 'Promise-verily hai. Mãg.' 'Putr-kī chāy^{a}nā hai mērai.' 'Tērā karam-maĩ lakhyā is. Ask.' 'Son-of desire is to-me.' 'Thy fate-in written tō kōnī. Jā, dō putr hō-jyāy^{a}gā tērai.' Wō tō verily (they-are-)not. Go, two sons will-become to-thee.' That verily sād hō ram^{a}tō. Sō ram-gayō, ar rājā mhalã saint was a-wanderer. So he-wandered-away, and the-king to-the-palace
ā-gayō āp-kai. Ũ-kai nawaĩ mahīnai putr hō-gayā. Rājā came his-own-in. Him-to ninth in-month sons became. The-king rājī hō-gayō. Ũ-kā ghar-bār basyā.
pleased became. His house-(and-)home were-established.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

Once upon a time there was a king who had no sons. One day he was washing his hands and face when the Dame of the Broom[1] came to sweep up the place. Directly she saw the king she hid her face behind her basket. Said the king, 'Here am I monarch and lord of all. Why did the Mihtarānī hide her face with a basket directly she saw me?' So he called her to him and asked her saying, 'Here am I monarch and lord of all, why did you hide your face behind a basket?' Said she, 'Your Majesty, there was no particular reason for me to do it. I just put the basket before my face, because it struck me to do so.' Said the king, 'tell the truth.' Then she replied, 'Your Majesty, the Mihtar, my husband, will give me a drubbing. For you have no son, and it is not right that I should see your face.' Then the king told his servants to go and see if really and truly the Mihtar would beat her or not. So they went and saw that, as a matter of fact, she was beaten; and they returned to the king and told him that she had got the drubbing she expected.

[1] A woman of the Mihtar or Sweeper caste; commonly called a Mihtarānī. A man of the same caste is called Mihtar or Bhaṅgī. It is an unlucky thing for a woman to see a childless person.

So the king thought to himself that he must do homage to saints and holy men. And whenever a saint or a holy man came to his kingdom he did homage to him, and every day occupied himself in virtuous and charitable deeds. For he thought to himself how nice it would be to have a son, and that he must do all he could to get one. Now his garden was all dry and withered up, and one day a saint who alighted in it was so very holy that it immediately all over became fresh and green. The king did homage to him. 'This is a worker of miracles,' said he to himself, 'and will certainly give me a son.' The saint was pleased at his devotion and said to him, 'my child, ask a boon.' 'Promise to grant it,' said the king, 'and I will ask it.' 'The promise is given. Ask.' 'Holy sir, I long for a son.' 'Sons are not written in your fate. But nevertheless depart in peace, for two sons will be born to you.' The saint was a wanderer, and went his way, and the king returned to his palace. On the ninth month the sons were born, and he was happy, for now his family was established.

ā kayō-as, 'mārī.' Jab ũ̃-nai rājā-nai
having-come it-was-said, 'she-was-beaten.' Then that-by king-by dēkhī-as, 'sād-sant-kī band^{a}gī karō.' Sō
it-was-seen (i.e. thought), 'saints-holy-men-of service do.' So sād-sant āwai, jĩ̃-kī-ī wō bandagī karai. Ar rōjīnā dharam saints-holy-men come, them-of-verily he service does. And daily virtue punn karai. Ab ũ̃-kai tō bēṭā-kī laggī-as,
holy-actions he-does. Now him-to verily son-of (the-thought-)was-pleasing,
'kōī dāy karar bēṭā hōya āp^{a}nai. Āpã̃ tō
'some contrivance having-made sons may-become to-us. We verily naputrī hã̃.' Ũ̃-kō bāg sūkō paṛyō-hō. Ēk sād ũ̃-maĩ sonless are.' Him-of the-garden dry fallen-was. A saint it-in ār asyō utaryō sō bāg haryō hō-gayō. Rājā-nai ũ̃-kī having-come such alighted that garden green became. The-king-by him-of bandagī karī sād-kī. 'Sād karāmãtī hai. Sō service was-done the-saint-of. 'The-saint a-worker-of-miracles is. So al^{a}bat yā āpã̃n-kũ̃ bēṭō dēgō.' Un-nai rājī hōr certainly he us-to a-son will-give.' Him-by pleased having-become kaī, 'bachchā, mã̃g.' 'Bachan dyō tō mã̃gũ̃.' 'Bachan-ī
it-was-said, 'child, ask.' 'Promise give then I-ask.' 'Promise-verily
hai. Mã̃g.' 'Putr-kī chāy^{a}nā hai mērai.' 'Tērā karam-maĩ lakhyā is. Ask.' 'Son-of desire is to-me.' 'Thy fate-in written tō kōnī. Jā, dō putr hō-jyāy^{a}gā tērai.' Wō tō verily (they-are-)not. Go, two sons will-become to-thee.' That verily
sād hō ram^{a}tō. Sō ram-gayō, ar rājā mhalã̃ saint was a-wanderer. So he-wandered-away, and the-king to-the-palace
ā-gayō āp-kai. Ũ̃-kai nawaĩ mahīnai putr hō-gayā. Rājā came his-own-in. Him-to ninth in-month sons became. The-king rājī hō-gayō. Ũ̃-kā ghar-bār basyā.
pleased became. His house-(and-)home were-established.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

Once upon a time there was a king who had no sons. One day he was washing his hands and face when the Dame of the Broom[1] came to sweep up the place. Directly she saw the king she hid her face behind her basket. Said the king, 'Here am I monarch and lord of all. Why did the Mihtarānī hide her face with a basket directly she saw me?' So he called her to him and asked her saying, 'Here am I monarch and lord of all, why did you hide your face behind a basket?' Said she, 'Your Majesty, there was no particular reason for me to do it. I just put the basket before my face, because it struck me to do so.' Said the king, 'tell the truth.' Then she replied, 'Your Majesty, the Mihtar, my husband, will give me a drubbing. For you have no son, and it is not right that I should see your face.' Then the king told his servants to go and see if really and truly the Mihtar would beat her or not. So they went and saw that, as a matter of fact, she was beaten; and they returned to the king and told him that she had got the drubbing she expected.

[1] A woman of the Mihtar or Sweeper caste; commonly called a Mihtarānī. A man of the same caste is called Mihtar or Bhaṅgī. It is an unlucky thing for a woman to see a childless person.

So the king thought to himself that he must do homage to saints and holy men. And whenever a saint or a holy man came to his kingdom he did homage to him, and every day occupied himself in virtuous and charitable deeds. For he thought to himself how nice it would be to have a son, and that he must do all he could to get one. Now his garden was all dry and withered up, and one day a saint who alighted in it was so very holy that it immediately all over became fresh and green. The king did homage to him. 'This is a worker of miracles,' said he to himself, 'and will certainly give me a son.' The saint was pleased at his devotion and said to him, 'my child, ask a boon.' 'Promise to grant it,' said the king, 'and I will ask it.' 'The promise is given. Ask.' 'Holy sir, I long for a son.' 'Sons are not written in your fate. But nevertheless depart in peace, for two sons will be born to you.' The saint was a wanderer, and went his way, and the king returned to his palace. On the ninth month the sons were born, and he was happy, for now his family was established.

KĀLĪMĀL.

Kālīmāl is spoken in Jaipur State immediately to the south of Ḍāṅgī, between it and Ḍāṅgbhāṅg, on the borders of the Karauli State. It is spoken by 81,216 people.

It closely resembles Ḍāṅgbhāṅg. Nouns and adjectives in ō have their oblique forms both in ā and ē. 'My' is mhārō and mērō; 'thy,' thārō and tērō; 'your,' tamārō; 'this,' yā; 'he,' 'that,' wā or ũ (obl. plur. ūn); 'who?' kaũṇ. Verbs form their first persons plural as in Ḍāṅgbhāṅg, and their third persons plural as in Ḍāṅgī.

Samples of Kālīmāl will be found in the List of Words. It is quite unnecessary to give further specimens. A grammar and specimens of the dialect will be found in Mr. Macalister's book.

ḌŨGAR-WĀṚĀ.

In Jaipur the word ḍũgar means 'a hill,' and hence Ḍũgar-wāṛā means the language of the hill country. It is spoken by 108,766 people, south-west of Ḍāṅgī, and immediately to the north-west of Kālīmāl. It only differs from the latter dialect in being more strongly infected with Jaipurī. In fact it could with equal propriety be classed as a form of that language. The main points in which it differs from Kālīmāl are that it is fond of using the suffix of kai-tãĩ to represent the dative case; 'your' is thamārō; and 'who?' is kuṇ. In the verb substantive it prefers the Jaipurī forms chhũ (present) and chhō (past) to hũ and hō, and the verb is conjugated in the plural sometimes like Ḍāṅgī, and sometimes like Jaipurī.

As in the case of Kālīmāl, this dialect is sufficiently illustrated for present purposes by the List of Words appended. Further specimens and a full grammar will be found in Mr. Macalister's work.

STANDARD LIST OF WORDS AND SENTENCES

English.	Ḍāṅgī (Karauli).	Ḍāṅgī (Jaipur) (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Karauli).	Kālīmāl of Jaipur (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Jaipur).
1. One	Ēk	.....	.....
2. Two	Dō	.....	.....
3. Three	Tīn	.....	.....
4. Four	Chyāri	Chyār	.....
5. Five	Pāch	.....	.....
6. Six	Chhai	Chhui	.....
7. Seven	Sāt	.....	.....
8. Eight	Aṭh	.....	.....
9. Nine	Nau	.....	.....
10. Ten	Das	.....	.....
11. Twenty	Bīs	.....	.....
12. Fifty	Pachās	.....	.....
13. Hundred	Saikā	.....	Sau
14. I	Hũ, hõ	Maĩ	Maĩ, hũ
15. Of me	Mērau	Mērō	Mhārō
16. Mine	Mērau	Mērō	Mhārō
17. We	Ham	.....	.....
18. Of us	Hamārau, ham^{a}rau	Hamārō	.....
19. Our	Hamārau, ham^{a}rau	Hamāro	.....
20. Thou	Tū, tai	Tū	.....
21. Of thee	Tērau	Tērō	Thārō
22. Thine	Tērau	Tērō	Thārō
23. You	Tum	Tam	.....
24. Of you	Tumārau, tum^{a}rau, tiyārau	Tum^{a}rō, tyārō	Tamārō
25. Your

IN THE ḌĀṄG DIALECTS.

Ḍũgar-wāṛā of Jaipur (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Jaipur).	Ḍāṅgbhāṅg (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Jaipur).	English.
.....	.....	1. One.
.....	.....	2. Two.
.....	.....	3. Three.
.....	.....	4. Four.
.....	.....	5. Five.
.....	.....	6. Six.
.....	.....	7. Seven.
.....	.....	8. Eight.
.....	.....	9. Nine.
.....	.....	10. Ten.
.....	.....	11. Twenty.
.....	.....	12. Fifty.
Sau	Sō	13. Hundred.
Maĩ, hũ	.....	14. I.
Mhārō	.....	15. Of me.
Mhārō	.....	16. Mine.
.....	.....	17. We.
.....	.....	18. Of us.
.....	.....	19. Our.
.....	.....	20. Thou.
Thārō	.....	21. Of thee.
Thārō	.....	22. Thine.
.....	Tamū, tam, tum . .	23. You.
Thamārō . . .	Tumārō	24. Of you.
Thamārō . . .	Tumārō	25. Your.

English.	Ḍāṅgī (Karauli).	Ḍāṅgī (Jaipur) (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Karauli).	Kālīmāl of Jaipur (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Jaipur
26. He	Wō	Ū, wā, wha	Wā, ũ
27. Of him	Wā-kau	Wā-kō	Ū̃-kō
28. His	Wā-kau	Wā-kō	Ū̃-kō
29. They	Wē	Wē	Wai, wē
30. Of them	Win-kau, un-kau	Un-kō	Ūn-kō
31. Their	Win-kau, un-kau	Un-kō	Ūn-kō
32. Hand	Hāt	Hāt	.....
33. Foot	Pām	Pãw	Pag
34. Nose	Nāk	.....	.....
35. Eye	Ãkh	.....	.....
36. Mouth	Mõ̃rhau	Mõ̃hᵃrō	Mhõ̃ḍō, mhũ
37. Tooth	Dãt	.....	.....
38. Ear	Kān	.....	.....
39. Hair	Rõ̃gᵃṭā	Bāl	Bār
40. Head	Mũ̃r	Mũ̃r	Māthō
41. Tongue	Jībh	.....	Jīb
42. Belly	Pēṭ	.....	.....
43. Back	Pīṭhi	Pīṭh	Pīṭh, maṅgar
44. Iron	Lōh, laṅkar	Lōh	Lhō
45. Gold	Sunnõ̃	Sōnū	Sōnō
46. Silver	Chãdī, rūpau	Chãdi	.....
47. Father	Dājū, dāū	Dāū	Bāp, dāū
48. Mother	Baiyō	Maiyā	Mā
49. Brother	Bhiā, bhẽ̃kᵃṛau	Bhiā	Bhāī
50. Sister	Bhaĩ̃nã	Jījī	Bhaiṇ, jījī
51. Man	Mānikh, mōṭyār	Mōṭyār	Ādᵃmī, mōṭyār, mard
52. Woman	Baiyar, bairᵃbānī	Bairᵃbānī	Bairᵃbānī

Ḍūgar-wāṛā of Jaipur (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Jaipur).	Ḍāṅgbhāṅg (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Jaipur).	English.
Wā	Wō	26. He.
Ũ-kō	Ũ-kō	27. Of him.
Ŭ-kō	Ŭ-kō	28. His.
Wai	.....	29. They.
Ūn-kō	.....	30. Of them.
Ūn-kō	.....	31. Their.
.....	.....	32. Hand.
Pag	Pãw, pag . . .	33. Foot.
.....	.....	34. Nose.
.....	.....	35. Eye.
Mhũḍō	Mũṛō, mhõṛō . . .	36. Mouth.
.....	.....	37. Tooth.
.....	.....	38. Ear.
.....	.....	39. Hair.
Māthō	Māthō	40. Head.
Jīb	Jīb	41. Tongue.
.....	.....	42. Belly.
Maṅgar	Mōr	43. Back.
Lhō	Lō	44. Iron.
.....	.....	45. Gold.
.....	.....	46. Silver.
Bāp, dādō . . .	Bāp	47. Father.
Mā, māī	Mā	48. Mother.
Bhāī	Bhāī	49. Brother.
Bhaiṇ	Bhaĩṇ	50. Sister.
.....	Ādᵃmī, manakh . .	51. Man.
.....	Lugāī, bairᵃbānī . .	52. Woman.

	Ḍāṅgī (Karauli).	Ḍāṅgī (Jaipur) (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Karauli).	Kālīmāl of Jaipur (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Jaipur)
. .	Wō	Ū, wā, wha	Wā, ũ . . . .
. .	Wā-kau	Wā-kō	Ũ-kō . . . .
. .	Wā-kau	Wā-kō	Ũ-kō . . . .
. .	Wē	Wē	Wai, wē . . . .
. .	Win-kau, un-kau . .	Un-kō	Ūn-kō . . . .
. .	Win-kau, un-kau . .	Un-kō	Ūn-kō . . . .
. .	Hāt	Hāt	.....
. .	Pām	Pãw	Pag . . . .
. .	Nāk	.....	.....
. .	Ãkh	.....	.....
. .	Mõṛhau	Mõh^{a}rō	Mhõḍō, mhũ . . .
. .	Dãt	.....	.....
. .	Kān	.....	.....
. .	Rõg^{a}ṭā	Bāl	Bār . . . .
. .	Mũṛ	Mũṛ	Māthō . . . .
. .	Jībh	.....	Jīb . . . .
. .	Pēṭ	.....	.....
. .	Pīṭhi	Pīṭh	Pīṭh, maṅgar . . .
. .	Lōh, laṅkar . . .	Lōh	Lhō . . . .
. .	Sunnõ	Sōnū	Sōnō . . . .
. .	Chãdī, rūpau . . .	Chãdi	.....
. .	Dājū, dāū . . .	Dāū	Bāp, dāū . . .
. .	Baiyō	Maiyā	Mā . . . .
. .	Bhiā, bhẽk^{a}ṛau . .	Bhiā	Bhāī . . . .
. .	Bhaĩnā	Jījī	Bhaiṇ, jījī . . .
. .	Mānikh, mōṭyār . .	Mōṭyār	Ād^{a}mī, mōṭyār, mard .
. .	Baiyar, bair^{a}bānī . .	Bair^{a}bānī	Bair^{a}bānī . . .

Dūgar-wāṛā of Jaipur (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Jaipur).	Ḍāṅgbhāṅg (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Jaipur).	English.
Wā	Wō	26. He.
Ũ-kō	Ũ-kō	27. Of him.
Ŭ-kō	Ŭ-kō	28. His.
Wai	.....	29. They.
Ūn-kō	.....	30. Of them.
Ūn-kō	.....	31. Their.
.....	.....	32. Hand.
Pag	Pãw, pag . . .	33. Foot.
.....	.....	34. Nose.
.....	.....	35. Eye.
Mhũḍō	Mũṛō, mhõṛō . . .	36. Mouth.
.....	.....	37. Tooth.
.....	.....	38. Ear.
.....	.....	39. Hair.
Māthō	Māthō	40. Head.
Jīb	Jīb	41. Tongue.
.....	.....	42. Belly.
Maṅgar	Mōr	43. Back.
Lhō	Lō	44. Iron.
.....	.....	45. Gold.
.....	.....	46. Silver.
Bāp, dādō . . .	Bāp	47. Father.
Mā, māī	Mā	48. Mother.
Bhāī	Bhāī	49. Brother.
Bhaiṇ	Bhaĩṇ . . .	50. Sister.
.....	Ādᵃmī, manakh . .	51. Man.
.....	Lugāī, bairᵃbānī . .	52. Woman.

English.	Ḍāṅgī (Karauli).	Ḍāṅgī (Jaipur) (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Karauli).	Kālīmāl of Jaipur (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Jaipur).
53. Wife	Lugāī, bair^{a}bānī	Bhauṭīyā	Bair^{a}bānī, aurat
54. Child	Bālik, chhōṭō	Bālik	Bachchā, bālak
55. Son	Mõṛā	Bēṭā, chhōrā, lālā	Chhōrō, bēṭō
56. Daughter	Mõṛī	Bēṭī, chhōrī, lālī	Chhōṛī, bēṭī
57. Slave	Bandōrā	Bādō	.....
58. Cultivator	Jōtā, kisān	Jimidār	.....
59. Shepherd	Bhēṛi-wārau, chhir-wārau	Guwāl	Guwār
60. God	Rām-jī, Īsur	Par^{a}mēsur	Rām-jī, Par^{a}mēsur
61. Devil	Pirēt	Bhūt	Rãkas, bhũt, palīt
62. Sun	Sūrij	Sūraj-nārān	Sūraj
63. Moon	Chandā	.....	Chãd
64. Star	Taraĩyã	.....	Tārō
65. Fire	Ãch	Āg	Āgai
66. Water	Pānyaũ	Pāṇī	Pānī
67. House	Bākhir	Ghar	.....
68. Horse	Ghōrau	Ghōṛā	Ghōrō
69. Cow	Gaiyā, ṭālī	Gāya	.....
70. Dog	Kūk^{a}rā	Kuttā	Kuttō
71. Cat	Billō	Biliyā	Billī
72. Cock	Mur^{a}gā	Kūk^{a}rā	Murgā
73. Duck	Batak	.....	.....
74. Ass	Gadhā	.....	.....
75. Camel	Ũṭ	.....	.....
76. Bird	Charērū	Chiṛiyā	Chīrī
77. Go	Jāibau (Infinitive)	Jā (Imperative Singular)	.....
78. Eat	Khāibau	Khā	.....

Dũgar-wārā of Jaipur (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Jaipur).	Ḍāṅgbhāṅg (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Jaipur).	English.
Lugāī	Lugāī, bhaū . . .	53. Wife.
Bālak	Bachchō	54. Child.
Bēṭō, chhōrō . . .	Bēṭō, laṛ^{a}kō, chhōrō . .	55. Son.
Bēṭī, chhōrī . . .	Bēṭī, laṛ^{a}kī, chhōrī . .	56. Daughter.
.....	.....	57. Slave.
Kasān, pāl^{a}tī . . .	Kasān	58. Cultivator.
.....	.....	59. Shepherd.
Bhag^{a}wān . . .	Rām-jī, Bhag^{a}wān . .	60. God.
.....	Rākas, bhūt, jand . .	61. Devil.
Sūraj	Sūraj	62. Sun.
Chãd	Chãdar^{a}mā. chãd . .	63. Moon.
Tārō	Tārō	64. Star.
.....	Āg, ag^{a}nī, basãdar . .	65. Fire.
.....	.....	66. Water.
.....	Ghar, jāg . . .	67. House.
Ghōṛō	Ghōṛō	68. Horse.
.....	.....	69. Cow.
Kūk^{a}rō	Kuttō, gãḍak . . .	70. Dog.
Balāī	Bilyāī, balāī . . .	71. Cat.
Murgō	Mur^{a}gō	72. Cock.
.....	.....	73. Duck.
Ghadō	Ghadō	74. Ass.
.....	.....	75. Camel.
Chiṛī	Chaṛī	76. Bird.
.....	.....	77. Go.
.....	.....	78. Eat.
.....	.....	79. Sit.

English.	Ḍāṅgī (Karauli).	Ḍāṅgī (Jaipur) (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Karauli).	Kālīmāl of Jaipur (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Jaipur).
80. Come	Āibau	Ā	.....
81. Beat	Piṭibau	Pīṭ	Mār
82. Stand	Ṭhairibau, ḍatibau	Ṭhāṛē hō	Ũbō hō
83. Die	Maribau	Mar	.....
84. Give	Dhōi-daibau	Dē, dai	Dē
85. Run	Dauribau, bhajibau	Bhaj	Bhag, daur
86. Up	Ūpar	Ūpar	.....
87. Near	Ḍhiṅg	Lag[a]tō	Gōḍyã̄, kanai
88. Down	Nīchẽ	Nīchē	Nīchai
89. Far	Dūri, alag	Dūr	.....
90. Before	Agārī	Āgē	Āgai
91. Behind	Pichhārī	Pīchhē	Pīchhai
92. Who	Kaun, kō	Kōṇ	Kaũn
93. What	Kā, kahā	Kā	Kãĩ̃
94. Why	Kyõ̃	Kyõ̃	Kyõ̃, chũ̃, chyũ̃
95. And	Aur	Ōr, ar	Aur, ar
96. But	Pari	Paṇi	Pan
97. If	Jau	Jai	Jō
98. Yes	Hã̄	Hã̄	.....
99. No	Nā, naĩ̃	Nahĩ̃	Naĩ̃
100. Alas	Hāi	Hāya	.....
101. A father	Dājū	Dāū	Bāp
102. Of a father	Dājū-kau	Dāū-kō	.....
103. To a father	Dājū-kũ̃	Dāū-kũ̃	.....
104. From a father	Dājū-sē	Dāū-tē	Bāp-sũ̃
105. Two fathers	Dō dājū	Dō dāū	.....
106. Fathers	Mātrān [illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]

Ḍūgar-wāṛā of Jaipur (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Jaipur).	Ḍāṅgbhāṅg (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Jaipur).	English.
.....	.....	80. Come.
Mār	Mār	81. Beat.
Ūbā hai-jā . . .	Ūbō ho	82. Stand.
.....	.....	83. Die.
Dē	.....	84. Give.
Bhāj	Dōṛ, bhāg . . .	85. Run.
.....	.....	86. Up.
Khanyā̃ . . .	Khanai, najīk . . .	87. Near.
Nīchai	Nīchai	88. Down.
.....	Dūrō, dūr . . .	89. Far.
Āgai	Āgai	90. Before.
Pāchhai	Pīchhai, pachhokaṛā . .	91. Behind.
Kuṇ	Kuṇ	92. Who.
Kāĩ̃	Kāĩ̃	93. What.
Kyā̃, chaũ . . .	Kyũ	94. Why.
Ar	Aur, ar	95. And.
Paṇya	Paṇ	96. But.
Jē	Jō	97. If.
.....	.....	98. Yes.
Nahĩ̃	Naĩ̃	99. No.
.....	.....	100. Alas.
Bāp	Bāp	101. A father.
.....	.....	102. Of a father.
.....	.....	103. To a father.
Bāp-sũ	Bāp-sũ	104. From a father.
.....	.....	105. Two fathers.
Bāp	Bāp	106. Fathers.

English.	Ḍāṅgī (Karauli).	Ḍāṅgī (Jaipur) (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Karauli).	Kālīmāl of Jaipur (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Jaipur)
80. Come	Āibau	Ā	.....
81. Beat	Piṭibau	Pīṭ	Mār
82. Stand	Ṭhairibau, ḍatibau	Ṭhāṛē hō	Ũbō hō
83. Die	Maribau	Mar	.....
84. Give	Dhōi-daibau	Dē, dai	Dē
85. Run	Dauribau, bhajibau	Bhaj	Bhag, daur
86. Up	Ūpar	Ūpar	.....
87. Near	Ḍhiṅg	Lagªtō	Gōḍyã̄, kanai
88. Down	Nīchẽ	Nīchē	Nīchai
89. Far	Dūri, alag	Dūr	.....
90. Before	Agārī	Āgē	Āgai
91. Behind	Pichhārī	Pīchhē	Pīchhai
92. Who	Kaun, kō	Kōṇ	Kaũn
93. What	Kā, kahā	Kā	Kãĩ
94. Why	Kyõ	Kyõ	Kyõ, chũ, chyũ
95. And	Aur	Ōr, ar	Aur, ar
96. But	Pari	Paṇi	Pan
97. If	Jau	Jai	Jō
98. Yes	Hã̄	Hã̄	.....
99. No	Nā, naĩ	Nahĩ	Naĩ
100. Alas	Hāi	Hāya	.....
101. A father	Dājū	Dāū	Bāp
102. Of a father	Dājū-kau	Dāū-kō	.....
103. To a father	Dājū-kũ	Dāū-kũ	.....
104. From a father	Dājū-sẽ	Dāū-tē	Bāp-sũ
105. Two fathers	Dō dājū	Dō dāū	.....
106. Fathers	Mātyār barō bāpbā

Ḍũgar-wāṛā of Jaipur (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Jaipur).	Ḍāṅgbhāṅg (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Jaipur).	English.
.....	.....	80. Come.
Mār	Mār	81. Beat.
Ūbā hai-jā . . .	Ūbō ho	82. Stand.
.....	.....	83. Die.
Dē	.....	84. Give.
Bhāj	Dōṛ, bhāg . . .	85. Run.
.....	.....	86. Up.
Khanyā̃ . . .	Khanai, najīk . . .	87. Near.
Nīchai	Nīchai	88. Down.
.....	Dūrō, dūr . . .	89. Far.
Āgai	Āgai	90. Before.
Pāchhai	Pīchhai, pachhokaṛā . .	91. Behind.
Kuṇ	Kuṇ	92. Who.
Kā̃ī	Kā̃ī	93. What.
Kyā̃, chaũ . . .	Kyũ	94. Why.
Ar	Aur, ar	95. And.
Paṇya	Paṇ	96. But.
Jē	Jō	97. If.
.....	.....	98. Yes.
Nahī̃	Naī̃	99. No.
.....	.....	100. Alas.
Bāp	Bāp	101. A father.
.....	.....	102. Of a father.
.....	.....	103. To a father.
Bāp-sũ	Bāp-sũ	104. From a father.
.....	.....	105. Two fathers.
Bāp	Bāp	106. Fathers.

English.	Ḍāṅgī (Karauli).	Ḍāṅgī (Jaipur) (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Karauli).	Kālimāl of Jaipur (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Jaipur).
80. Come	Āibau	Ā	.....
81. Beat	Pīṭibau	Piṭ	Mār
82. Stand	Ṭhairibau, ḍatibau	Ṭhāṛō hō	Ūbō hō
83. Die	Maribau	Mar	.....
84. Give	Dhōi-daibau	Dē, dai	Dē
85. Run	Dauribau, bhajibau	Bhaj	Bhag, daur
86. Up	Ūpar	Upar	.....
87. Near	Ḍhiṅg	Lagᵃtō	Gōḍyā̃, kanai
88. Down	Nīchē	Nichē	Nīchai
89. Far	Dūri, alag	Dur	.....
90. Before	Agārī	Agē	Agai
91. Behind	Pichhārī	Pichhē	Pichhai
92. Who	Kaun, kō	Kōn	Kaũn
93. What	Kā, kahā	Ka	Kāĩ
94. Why	Kyŏ	Kyŏ	Kyŏ, chũ, chyũ
95. And	Aur	Ōr, ar	Aur, ar
96. But	Pari	Pan	Pan
97. If	Jau	Jai	Jō
98. Yes	Hā	Hā	.....
99. No	Nā, naĭ	Nahĭ	Naĭ
100. Alas	Hāi	Hāya	.....
101. A father	Dājū	Dāū	Bap
102. Of a father	Dājū-kau	Dāū-kō	.....
103. To a father	Dājū-kũ	Dāu-kũ	.....
104. From a father	Dājū-sē	Dāu-tē	Bap-sũ
105. Two fathers	Dō dājū	Dō dāū	.....

Dũgar-wāṛā of Jaipur (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Jaipur).	Ḍāṅgbhāṅg (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Jaipur).	English.
.....	.....	80. Come.
Mār	Mār	81. Beat.
Ūbā hai-jā . . .	Ūbō ho	82. Stand.
.....	.....	83. Die.
Dē	.....	84. Give.
Bhāj	Dōṛ, bhāg . . .	85. Run.
.....	.....	86. Up.
Khanyā̃ . . .	Khanai, najīk . . .	87. Near.
Nīchai	Nīchai	88. Down.
.....	Dūrō, dūr . . .	89. Far.
Āgai	Āgai	90. Before.
Pāchhai	Pīchhai, pachhokaṛā . .	91. Behind.
Kuṇ	Kuṇ	92. Who.
Kā̃ī̃	Kā̃ī̃	93. What.
Kyā̃, chaũ . . .	Kyũ	94. Why.
Ar	Aur, ar	95. And.
Paṇya	Paṇ	96. But.
Jē	Jō	97. If.
.....	.....	98. Yes.
Nahī̃	Naī̃	99. No.
.....	.....	100. Alas.
Bāp	Bāp	101. A father.
.....	.....	102. Of a father.
.....	.....	103. To a father.
Bāp-sũ	Bāp-sũ̃	104. From a father.
.....	.....	105. Two fathers.
Bāp	Bāp	106. Fathers.

English.	Ḍāṅgī (Karauli).	Ḍāṅgī (Jaipur) (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Karauli).	Kālimāl of Jaipur (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Jaipur).
80. Come	Āibau	Ā	.....
81. Beat	Pīṭibau	Pīṭ	Mār
82. Stand	Ṭhairibau, ḍatibau	Ṭhāṛō hō	Ūbō hō
83. Die	Maribau	Mar	.. ...
84. Give	Dhōi-daibau	Dē, dai	Dē
85. Run	Dauribau, bhajibau	Bhaj	Bhag, daur
86. Up	Ūpar	Upar	.....
87. Near	Ḍhiṅg	Lag*tō	Gōḍyā̃, kanai
88. Down	Nīchē	Nichē	Nīchai
89. Far	Dūri, alag	Dur	.....
90. Before	Agāṛi	Agē	Agai
91. Behind	Pichhāṛi	Pichhe	Pichhai
92. Who	Kaun, kō	Kōn	Kuñn
93. What	Kā, kahā	Kā	Kāĩ
94. Why	Kyŏ	Kyŏ	Kyŏ, chŭ, chyŭ
95. And	Aur	Ōr, ar	Aur, ar
96. But	Pari	Paṛi	Pan
97. If	Jau	Jai	Jō
98. Yes	Hā	Hā	.....
99. No	Nā, naĩ	Nahĩ	Naĩ
100. Alas	Hāi	Hāya	.....
101. A father	Dājū	Dāu	Bap
102. Of a father	Dājū-kau	Dāu-kō	.....
103. To a father	Dājū-kŭ	Dau-kŭ	.....
104. From a father	Dājū-sē	Dāu-tē	Bap-sŭ
105. Two fathers	Dō dājū	Dō dāu	.....

Dũgar-wāṛā of Jaipur (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Jaipur).	Ḍāṅgbhāṅg (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Jaipur).	English.
.....	.....	80. Come.
Mār	Mār	81. Beat.
Ūbā hai-jā . . .	Ūbō ho	82. Stand.
.....	.....	83. Die.
Dē	.....	84. Give.
Bhāj	Dōṛ, bhāg . . .	85. Run.
.....	.....	86. Up.
Khanyā̃ . . .	Khanai, najīk . . .	87. Near.
Nīchai	Nīchai	88. Down.
.....	Dūrō, dūr . . .	89. Far.
Āgai	Āgai	90. Before.
Pāchhai	Pīchhai, pachhokaṛā . .	91. Behind.
Kuṇ	Kuṇ	92. Who.
Kā̃ī̃	Kā̃ī̃	93. What.
Kyā̃, chaũ . . .	Kyũ	94. Why.
Ar	Aur, ar	95. And.
Paṇya	Paṇ	96. But.
Jē	Jō	97. If.
.....	.....	98. Yes.
Nahī̃	Naī̃	99. No.
.....	.....	100. Alas.
Bāp	Bāp	101. A father.
.....	.....	102. Of a father.
.....	.....	103. To a father.
Bāp-sũ	Bāp-sũ	104. From a father.
.....	.....	105. Two fathers.
Bāp	Bāp	106. Fathers.

English.	Ḍāṅgī (Karauli).	Ḍāṅgī (Jaipur) (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Karauli).	Kālimāl of Jaipur (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Jaipur).
80. Come	Āibau	Ā	.....
81. Beat	Pīṭibau	Pīṭ	Mār
82. Stand	Ṭhairibau, ḍatibau	Ṭhāṛō hō	Ūbō hō
83. Die	Maribau	Mar	.....
84. Give	Dhōi-daibau	Dō, dai	Dē
85. Run	Dauribau, bhajibau	Bhaj	Bhag, daur
86. Up	Ūpar	Upar	.....
87. Near	Ḍhiṅg	Lagᵃtō	Gōdyā̃, kanai
88. Down	Nīchē	Nichē	Nīchai
89. Far	Dūri, alag	Dur	.....
90. Before	Agāṛī	Agē	Agai
91. Behind	Pichhāṛī	Pichhe	Pichhai
92. Who	Kaun, kō	Kōn	Kaũn
93. What	Kā, kahā	Kā	Kāĩ
94. Why	Kyō	Kyō	Kyō, chũ, chyũ
95. And	Aur	Ōr, ar	Aur, ar
96. But	Pari	Paṛi	Pau
97. If	Jau	Jai	Jō
98. Yes	Hā	Hā	.....
99. No	Nā, naĭ	Nahĩ	Naĭ
100. Alas	Hai	Hāya	.....
101. A father	Dājū	Dāṛi	Bap
102. Of a father	Dājū-kau	Dāṛi-kō	.....
103. To a father	Dājū-kā̃	Dāṛi-kā̃	.....
104. From a father	Dājū-sē	Dāṛi-tē	Bap-sā̃
105. Two fathers	Dō dājū	Dō dāṛi	.....

Ḍũgar-wāṛā of Jaipur (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Jaipur).	Ḍāṅgbhāṅg (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Jaipur).	English.
.....	.....	80. Come.
Mār	Mār	81. Beat.
Ūbā hai-jā . . .	Ūbō ho	82. Stand.
.....	.....	83. Die.
Dē	.....	84. Give.
Bhāj	Dōṛ, bhāg . . .	85. Run.
.....	.....	86. Up.
Khanyā̃ . . .	Khanai, najīk . . .	87. Near.
Nīchai	Nīchai	88. Down.
.....	Dūrō, dūr . . .	89. Far.
Āgai	Āgai	90. Before.
Pāchhai	Pīchhai, pachhokaṛā . .	91. Behind.
Kuṇ	Kuṇ	92. Who.
Kā̃ī̃	Kā̃ī̃	93. What.
Kyā̃, chaũ . . .	Kyũ	94. Why.
Ar	Aur, ar	95. And.
Paṇya	Paṇ	96. But.
Jē	Jō	97. If.
.....	.....	98. Yes.
Nahī̃	Naī̃	99. No.
.....	.....	100. Alas.
Bāp	Bāp	101. A father.
.....	.....	102. Of a father.
.....	.....	103. To a father.
Bāp-sũ	Bāp-sũ	104. From a father.
.....	.....	105. Two fathers.
Bāp	Bāp	106. Fathers.

English.	Ḍāṅgī (Karauli).	Ḍāṅgī (Jaipur) (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Karauli).	Kālīmāl of Jaipur (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Jaipur).
107. Of fathers	Purikhān-kau	Dāūn-kō	Bāpan-kō
108. To fathers	Purikhān-kũ	Dāūn-kũ	Bāpan-kũ
109. From fathers	Purikhān-sē	Dāūn-tē	Bāpan-sũ
110. A daughter	Mõṛī	Chhōrī	.....
111. Of a daughter	.....	.....	.....
112. To a daughter	.....	.....	.....
113. From a daughter	.....	.....	.....
114. Two daughters	.....	.....	.....
115. Daughters	Bhaut mõṛī	Chhōrī	.....
116. Of daughters	Mõṛīn-kau	Chhōrīn-kō	.....
117. To daughters	.....	.....	.....
118. From daughters	.....	.....	.....
119. A good man	Ēk chōkhō manikh	Ēk bhalō ādᵃmī	.....
120. Of a good man	Ēk chōkhē manikh-kau	Ēk bhalā ādᵃmī-kō	.....
121. To a good man	.....	.....	.....
122. From a good man	.....	.....	.....
123. Two good men	.....	.....	.....
124. Good men	Mukᵃtē-ū chōkhē manikh	Bhalē ādᵃmī	Bhalā ādᵃmī
125. Of good men	.....	.....	.....
126. To good men	.....	.....	.....
127. From good men	.....	.....	.....
128. A good woman	Ēk chōkhī bairᵃbānī	Ēk bhalī bairᵃbānī	.....
129. A bad boy	Ēk baṇḍ mõṛā	Ēk burō chhōrā	Ēk burō chhōrō
130. Good women	Mukᵃtī chōkhī bairᵃbānī	Bhalī bairᵃbānī	.....
131. A bad girl	Ēk burī mõṛī	Ēk burī chhōrī	.....
132. Good	Malūk, chokau	Āchhyō, bhalō	Chōkō, āchhyō
133. Better	.....	.....	.....

Ḍũgar-wāṛā of Jaipur (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Jaipur).	Ḍāṅgbhāṅg (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Jaipur).	English.
Bāpan-kō . . .	Bāpan-kō . . .	107. Of fathers.
Bāpan-kũ̃ . . .	.....	108. To fathers.
Bāpan-sũ̃ . . .	.....	109. From fathers.
.....	.....	110. A daughter.
.....	.....	111. Of a daughter.
.....	.....	112. To a daughter.
.....	.....	113. From a daughter.
.....	.....	114. Two daughters.
.....	Chhōrī, chhōryā̃ . .	115. Daughters.
.....	.....	116. Of daughters.
.....	.....	117. To daughters.
.....	.....	118. From daughters.
Ēk chōkhō ād^{a}mī . .	Ēk āchhyō ād^{a}mī . .	119. A good man.
Ēk chokhā ād^{a}mī-kō .	Ēk āchhyā ād^{a}mī-kō . .	120. Of a good man.
.....	.....	121. To a good man.
.....	.....	122. From a good man.
.....	.....	123. Two good men.
Chōkhā ād^{a}mī . . .	Bhalā ād^{a}mī . . .	124. Good men.
.....	.....	125. Of good men.
.....	.....	126. To good men.
.....	.....	127. From good men.
Ēk chōkhī bair^{a}bānī . .	Ēk āchhī lugāī . .	128. A good woman.
Ēk barō chhōrō . .	Ēk burō chhōrō . .	129. A bad boy.
Chōkhī bair^{a}bānī . .	Āchhī lugāyā̃ . . .	130. Good women.
Ēk barī chhōrī . .	.....	131. A bad girl.
Chōkhō, āchhyō . .	.....	132. Good.
.....	.....	133. Better.

English.	Ḍāṅgī (Karauli).	Ḍāṅgī (Jaipur) (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Karauli).	Kālīmāl of Jaipur (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Jaipur).
107. Of fathers	Purikhān-kau	Dāūn-kō	Bāpan-kō
108. To fathers	Purikhān-kũ	Dāūn-kũ	Bāpan-kũ
109. From fathers	Purikhān-sē	Dāūn-tē	Bāpan-sũ
110. A daughter	Mõṛī	Chhōrī	.....
111. Of a daughter	.....	.....	.....
112. To a daughter	.....	.....	.....
113. From a daughter	.....	.....	.....
114. Two daughters	.....	.....	.....
115. Daughters	Bhaut mõṛī	Chhōrī	.....
116. Of daughters	Mõṛīn-kau	Chhōrīn-kō	.....
117. To daughters	.....	.....	.....
118. From daughters	.....	.....	.....
119. A good man	Ēk chōkhō manikh	Ēk bhalō ādᵃmī	.....
120. Of a good man	Ēk chōkhē manikh-kau	Ēk bhalā ādᵃmī-kō	.....
121. To a good man	.....	.....	.....
122. From a good man	.....	.....	.....
123. Two good men	.....	.....	.....
124. Good men	Mukᵃtē-ū chōkhē manikh	Bhalē ādᵃmī	Bhalā ādᵃmī
125. Of good men	.....	.....	.....
126. To good men	.....	.....	.....
127. From good men	.....	.....	.....
128. A good woman	Ēk chōkhī bairᵃbānī	Ēk bhalī bairᵃbānī	.....
129. A bad boy	Ēk baṇḍ mõṛā	Ēk burō chhōrā	Ēk burō chhōrō
130. Good women	Mukᵃtī chōkhī bairᵃbānī	Bhalī bairᵃbānī	.....
131. A bad girl	Ēk burī mõṛī	Ēk burī chhōrī	.....
132. Good	Malūk, chokau	Āchhyō, bhalō	Chōkō, āchhyō
133. Better	.....	.....	.....

Ḍũgar-wāṛā of Jaipur (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Jaipur).	Ḍāṅgbhāṅg (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Jaipur).	English.
Bāpan-kō . . .	Bāpan-kō . . .	107. Of fathers.
Bāpan-kũ̃ . . .	.....	108. To fathers.
Bāpan-sũ̃ . . .	.....	109. From fathers.
.....	.....	110. A daughter.
.....	.....	111. Of a daughter.
.....	.....	112. To a daughter.
.....	.....	113. From a daughter.
.....	.....	114. Two daughters.
.....	Chhōrī, chhōryã̃ . .	115. Daughters.
.....	.....	116. Of daughters.
.....	.....	117. To daughters.
.....	.....	118. From daughters.
Ēk chōkhō ād^{a}mī . .	Ēk āchhyō ād^{a}mī . .	119. A good man.
Ēk chokhā ād^{a}mī-kō .	Ēk āchhyā ād^{a}mī-kō . .	120. Of a good man.
.....	.....	121. To a good man.
.....	.....	122. From a good man.
.....	.....	123. Two good men.
Chōkhā ād^{a}mī . .	Bhalā ād^{a}mī . . .	124. Good men.
.....	.....	125. Of good men.
.....	.....	126. To good men.
.....	.....	127. From good men.
Ēk chōkhī bair^{a}bānī . .	Ēk āchhī lugāī . .	128. A good woman.
Ēk barō chhōrō . .	Ēk burō chhōrō . .	129. A bad boy.
Chōkhī bair^{a}bānī . .	Āchhī lugāyã̃ . . .	130. Good women.
Ēk barī chhōrī . .	.....	131. A bad girl.
Chōkhō, āchhyō . .	.....	132. Good.
.....	.....	133. Better.

English.	Ḍāṅgī (Karauli).	Ḍāṅgī (Jaipur) (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Karauli).	Kālīmāl of Jaipur (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Jaipur)
134. Best	.....	.....	.....
135. High	Ũchau	Ũchō	.....
136. Higher	.....	.....	.....
137. Highest	.....	.....	.....
138. A horse	Ghōrau	Ghōṛā	Ghōrō
139. A mare	Ghōrī	Ghōṛī	.....
140. Horses	Mukᵃtē ghōrē	Ghōṛā	.....
141. Mares	Mukᵃtī-ū ghōrī	Ghōṛī	.....
142. A bull	Akailā	Bijār	Ākō
143. A cow	Gāy, ṭālī	Gāya	.....
144. Bulls	Mukᵃtē-ū bijār, akailā	Bijār	Ākā
145. Cows	Mukᵃtī-ū gāy, ṭālī	Gāya	.....
146. A dog	Kūkᵃrā	Kuttā	Kuttō
147. A bitch	Kutīyā	.....	Kuttī
148. Dogs	Mukᵃtē-ū kūkᵃrā	Kuttā	.....
149. Bitches	Mukᵃtī-ū kutīyā	Kuttīyā	Kuttī
150. A he goat	Bōk	Bakᵃrā	Bakᵃrō
151. A female goat	Bōkᵃrī	Bakᵃriyā	Bakᵃrī, chhērī
152. Goats	Bōkᵃrā	Bakᵃrā	Bakᵃrā-bakᵃrī
153. A male deer	Hinn	Hiran	.....
154. A female deer	Hinnīyã	Hirᵃnī	.....
155. Deer	Hinn	Hiran	.....
156. I am	Hũ hũ	Maĩ hũ	.....
157. Thou art	Tū hai	Tū hai	.....
158. He is	Wō hai	Ū hai	.....
159. We are	Ham haĩ	.....	Ham hã̃
160. You are	Tum hau	Tam hō	.....

Ḍũgar-wāṛā of Jaipur (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Jaipur).	Ḍāṅgbhāṅg (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Jaipur).	English.
.....	.....	134. Best.
.....	.....	135. High.
.....	.....	136. Higher.
.....	.....	137. Highest.
Ghōṛō	Ghōṛō	138. A horse.
.....	.....	139. A mare.
.....	.....	140. Horses.
.....	Ghōṛyā̃	141. Mares.
Nārō	Ā̃kō	142. A bull.
.....	.....	143. A cow.
Nārā	Ā̃kā	144. Bulls.
.....	Gāyā̃	145. Cows.
Kūkᵃrō	Kuttō	146. A dog.
Kūkᵃrī	Kuttī	147. A bitch.
Kūkᵃrā	.....	148. Dogs.
Kūkᵃrī	Kuttī	149. Bitches.
Bākᵃrō	Bakᵃrō	150. A he goat.
Bākᵃrī	Chhēlī	151. A female goat.
Bākᵃrā	Bakᵃrā-bakᵃrī . . .	152. Goats.
.....	Haran . . .	153. A male deer.
.....	Harᵃnī	154. A female deer.
.....	Haran	155. Deer.
Hũ chhũ . . .	Maĩ hũ, chhũ . . .	156. I am.
Tū chhai . . .	Tū hai, chhai . . .	157. Thou art.
Wā chhai .	Wō hai, chhai . . .	158. He is.
Ham chhā̃ . . .	Ham hā̃, chhā̃ . .	159. We are.
Tam chhō . . .	Tum hō, chhō . . .	160. You are.

English.	Ḍāṅgī (Karauli).	Ḍāṅgī (Jaipur) (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Karauli).	Kālīmāl of Jaipur (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Jaipur)
161. They are	Wē haĩ	.....	.....
162. I was	Mẽ hau	Maĩ hō, hattyō	Maĩ hō
163. Thou wast	Tū hau	Tū hō, hattyō	Tū hō
164. He was	Wō hau	Ū hō, hattyō	Wā hō
165. We were	Ham hē	Ham hē, hattē	Ham hā
166. You were	Tum hē	Tam hē, hattē	Tam hā
167. They were	Wē hē	Wē hē, hattē	Wai hā
168. Be	Hō	Hō	Hō
169. To be	Hōibau	Haibō	Hōbō
170. Being	Hōtau	Hattyō (sic)	Hōtō
171. Having been	Hai-kaĩ	Hair	Hōr
172. I may be	.....	.....	.....
173. I shall be	Hũ hāũgō	Maĩ hũgō	Maĩ hōũgō
174. I should be	.....	.....	.....
175. Beat	Pīṭ	Pīṭ	Mār
176. To beat	Pīṭibau	Pīṭ^{a}bō	Mār^{a}bō
177. Beating	Pīṭ^{a}tau	Pīṭ^{a}tō	Mār^{a}tō
178. Having beaten	Pīṭi-kaĩ	Pīṭar	Mārar
179. I beat	Hũ pīṭũ	Maĩ pīṭũ	Maĩ mārũ, and so on
180. Thou beatest	Tū pīṭai	Tū pīṭai	.....
181. He beats	Wō pīṭai	Ū pīṭai	.....
182. We beat	Ham pīṭaĩ	Ham pīṭaĩ	Ham mārã̃
183. You beat	Tum pīṭau	Tam pīṭō	.....
184. They beat	Wē pīṭaĩ	Wē pīṭaĩ	.....
185. I beat (Past Tense)	Mẽ-nẽ pīṭyau	Maĩ-nē pīṭyō	Maĩ-nai māryō, and so on
186. Thou beatest (Past Tense).	Tẽ-nẽ pīṭyau	Tai-nē pīṭyō	.....
187. He beat (Past Tense)	Wā-nẽ pīṭyau	Wā-nē pīṭyā

Ḍũgar-wāṛā of Jaipur (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Jaipur).	Ḍāṅgbhāṅg (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Jaipur).	English.
Wai chhaĩ, chhai . .	Wē haĩ, chhai . .	161. They are.
Hũ chhō . . .	Maĩ hō, chhō . . .	162. I was.
Tũ chhō	Tũ hō, chhō . . .	163. Thou wast.
Wā chhō . . .	Wō hō, chhō . . .	164. He was.
Ham chhā . . .	Ham hā, chhā . . .	165. We were.
Tam chhā . . .	Tum hā, chhā . . .	166. You were.
Wai chhā . . .	Wē hā, chhā . . .	167. They were.
Hai	Hō	168. Be.
Haibō	Hōbō	169. To be.
Haitō (Past Part. hēō) .	Hōtō	170. Being.
.....	Hōr	171. Having been.
.....	.....	172. I may be.
Hũ hũgō . . .	.....	173. I shall be.
.....	.....	174. I should be.
Mār	Mār	175. Beat.
Mārªbō	Mārªbō	176. To beat.
Mārªtō	Mārªtō	177. Beating.
Mārar	Mārar, mār-kar . .	178. Having beaten.
Hũ mārũ, and so on . .	Maĩ mārũ . . .	179. I beat.
.....	Tũ mārai . . .	180. Thou beatest.
.....	Wō mārai . . .	181. He beats.
Ham māraĩ or mārã̃ .	Ham mārã̃ . . .	182. We beat.
Tam mārō . . .	Tum mārō . . .	183. You beat.
Wai māraĩ, mārai . .	Wē mārai . . .	184. They beat.
Maĩ-nai māryō, and so on .	Maĩ māryō . . .	185. I beat (Past Tense).
.....	Tũ māryō . . .	186. Thou beatest (Past Tense).
.....	Wō māryō . . .	187. He beat (Past Tense).

English.	Ḍāṅgī (Karauli).	Ḍāṅgī (Jaipur) (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Karauli).	Kālīmāl of Jaipur (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Jaipur)
161. They are	Wē haĩ	.....	.....
162. I was	Mẽ hau	Maĩ hō, hattyō	Maĩ hō
163. Thou wast	Tū hau	Tū hō, hattyō	Tū hō
164. He was	Wō hau	Ū hō, hattyō	Wā hō
165. We were	Ham hē	Ham hē, hattē	Ham hā
166. You were	Tum hē	Tam hē, hattō	Tam hā
167. They were	Wē hē	Wē hē, hattē	Wai hā
168. Be	Hō	Hō	Hō
169. To be	Hōibau	Haibō	Hōbō
170. Being	Hōtau	Hattyō (sic)	Hōtō
171. Having been	Hai-kaĩ	Hair	Hōr
172. I may be	.....	.....	.....
173. I shall be	Hũ hāũgō	Maĩ hũgō	Maĩ hōũgō
174. I should be	.....	.....	.....
175. Beat	Pīṭ	Pīṭ	Mār
176. To beat	Pīṭibau	Pīṭ^{a}bō	Mār^{a}bō
177. Beating	Pīṭ^{a}tau	Pīṭ^{a}tō	Mār^{a}tō
178. Having beaten	Pīṭi-kaĩ	Pīṭar	Mārar
179. I beat	Hũ pīṭũ	Maĩ pīṭũ	Maĩ mārũ, and so on
180. Thou beatest	Tū pīṭai	Tū pīṭai	.....
181. He beats	Wō pīṭai	Ū pīṭai	.....
182. We beat	Ham pīṭaĩ	Ham pīṭaĩ	Ham mārã
183. You beat	Tum pīṭau	Tam pīṭō	.....
184. They beat	Wē pīṭaĩ	Wē pīṭaĩ	.....
185. I beat (Past Tense)	Mẽ-nẽ pīṭyau	Maĩ-nē pīṭyō	Maĩ-nai māryō, and so on
186. Thou beatest (Past Tense).	Tẽ-nẽ pīṭyau	Tai-nē pīṭyō	.....
187. He beat (Past Tense)	Wā-nẽ pīṭyau	Wā-nā pīṭyō

Ḍūgar-wārā of Jaipur (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Jaipur).	Ḍāṅgbhāṅg (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Jaipur).	English.
Wai chhaĩ, chhai . .	Wē haĩ, chhai . .	161. They are.
Hũ chhō . . .	Maĩ hō, chhō . . .	162. I was.
Tū chhō	Tū hō, chhō . . .	163. Thou wast.
Wā chhō . . .	Wō hō, chhō . . .	164. He was.
Ham chhā . . .	Ham hā, chhā . . .	165. We were.
Tam chhā . . .	Tum hā, chhā . . .	166. You were.
Wai chhā . . .	Wē hā, chhā . . .	167. They were.
Hai	Hō	168. Be.
Haibō	Hōbō	169. To be.
Haitō (Past Part. hēō) .	Hōtō	170. Being.
.....	Hōr	171. Having been.
.....	.....	172. I may be.
Hũ hũgō . . .	.....	173. I shall be.
.....	.....	174. I should be.
Mār	Mār	175. Beat.
Mārªbō	Mārªbō	176. To beat.
Mārªtō	Mārªtō	177. Beating.
Mārar	Mārar, mār-kar . .	178. Having beaten.
Hũ mārũ, and so on . .	Maĩ mārũ . . .	179. I beat.
.....	Tū mārai . . .	180. Thou beatest.
.....	Wō mārai . . .	181. He beats.
Ham maraĩ or mārã̃ .	Ham mārã̃ . . .	182. We beat.
Tam mārō . . .	Tum mārō . . .	183. You beat.
Wai maraĩ, mārai . .	Wē mārai . . .	184. They beat.
Maĩ-nai māryō, and so on .	Maĩ māryō . . .	185. I beat (Past Tense).
.....	Tū māryō . . .	186. Thou beatest (Past Tense).
.....	Wō māryō . . .	187. He beat (Past Tense).

English.	Ḍāṅgī (Karauli).	Ḍāṅgī (Jaipur) (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Karauli).	Kālīmāl of Jaipur (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Jaipur).
161. They are	Wō haĩ	.....	.....
162. I was	Mẽ hau	Maĩ hō, hattyō	Maĩ hō
163. Thou wast	Tū hau	Tū hō, hattyō	Tū hō
164. He was	Wō hau	Ū hō, hattyō	Wā hō
165. We were	Ham hẽ	Ham hẽ, hattẽ	Ham hā
166. You were	Tum hẽ	Tum hẽ, hattẽ	Tam hā
167. They were	Wẽ hẽ	Wẽ hẽ, hattẽ	Wai hā
168. Be	Hō	Hō	Hō
169. To be	Hōibau	Haibō	Hōbō
170. Being	Hōtau	Hattyō (sic)	Hōtō
171. Having been	Hai-kaĩ	Hair	Hōr
172. I may be	.....	.....	.....
173. I shall be	Hũ hãũgō	Maĩ hōũgō	Maĩ hōũgō
174. I should be	.....	.....	.....
175. Beat	Piṭ	Pit	Mar
176. To beat	Piṭibau	Pirbō	Mārbō
177. Beating	Piṭtau	Pirtō	Mārtō
178. Having beaten	Piṭi-kaĩ	Pirar	Mārar
179. I beat	Hũ piṭũ	Maĩ pirũ	Maĩ mārũ, and so on
180. Thou beatest	Tū piṭai	Tū pirai	.....
181. He beats	Wō piṭai	Ū pirai	.....
182. We beat	Ham piṭaĩ	Ham piraĩ	Ham mārã
183. You beat	Tum piṭau	Tam pirau	.....
184. They beat	Wẽ piṭaĩ	Wẽ piraĩ	.....
185. I beat (Past Tense)	Mẽ-nẽ piṭyau	Maĩ-nẽ piryō	Maĩ-nai māryō, and so on
186. Thou beatest (Past Tense).	Tẽ-nẽ piṭyau	Tai-nẽ piryō	.....

Ḍūgar-wāṛā of Jaipur (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Jaipur).	Ḍāṅgbhāṅg (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Jaipur).	English.
Wai chhaĩ, chhai . .	Wē haĩ, chhai . .	161. They are.
Hũ chhō . . .	Maĩ hō, chhō . . .	162. I was.
Tū chhō	Tū hō, chhō . . .	163. Thou wast.
Wā chhō . . .	Wō hō, chhō . . .	164. He was.
Ham chhā . . .	Ham hā, chhā . . .	165. We were.
Tam chhā . . .	Tum hā, chhā . . .	166. You were.
Wai chhā . . .	Wē hā, chhā . . .	167. They were.
Hai	Hō	168. Be.
Haibō	Hōbō	169. To be.
Haitō (Past Part. hēō) .	Hōtō	170. Being.
.....	Hōr	171. Having been.
.....	.....	172. I may be.
Hũ hũgō . . .	.....	173. I shall be.
.....	.....	174. I should be.
Mār	Mār	175. Beat.
Mārªbō	Mārªbō	176. To beat.
Mārªtō	Mārªtō	177. Beating.
Mārar	Mārar, mār-kar . .	178. Having beaten.
Hũ mārũ, and so on . .	Maĩ mārũ . . .	179. I beat.
.....	Tū mārai . . .	180. Thou beatest.
.....	Wō mārai . . .	181. He beats.
Ham māraĩ or mārã̃ .	Ham mārã̃ . . .	182. We beat.
Tam mārō . . .	Tum mārō . . .	183. You beat.
Wai māraĩ, mārai . .	Wē mārai . . .	184. They beat.
Maĩ-nai māryō, and so on .	Maĩ māryō . . .	185. I beat (Past Tense).
.....	Tū māryō . . .	186. Thou beatest (Past Tense).
.....	Wō māryō . . .	187. He beat (Past Tense).

English.	Ḍāṅgī (Karauli).	Ḍāṅgī (Jaipur) (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Karauli).	Kālīmāl of Jaipur (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Jaipur).
188. We beat (Past Tense) .	Haman-nẽ pīṭyau . .	Ham-nē pīṭyō . . .	.....
189. You beat (Past Tense)	Tuman-nẽ pīṭyau . .	Tam-nē pīṭyō . . .	.....
190. They beat (Past Tense)	Win-nẽ pīṭyau . .	Un-nē pīṭyō . . .	.....
191. I am beating . .	Hũ pīṭũ-hũ . . .	Maĩ pīṭũ-hũ . . .	Maĩ mārũ-hũ . . .
192. I was beating . .	Hũ pīṭi rahyau-hau . .	Maĩ pīṭai-hō . . .	Maĩ mārai-hō . . .
193. I had beaten . .	Mẽ-nẽ pīṭyau-hau . .	Maĩ-nē pīṭyō-hō . .	Maĩ-nai māryō-hō . .
194. I may beat . .	Hũ pīṭũ	Maĩ pīṭũ . . .	Maĩ mārũ . . .
195. I shall beat . .	Mẽ pīṭũgau . . .	Maĩ pīṭũgō . . .	Maĩ mārũgō, and so on .
196. Thou wilt beat . .	Tū pīṭaigau . . .	Tū pīṭaigō . . .	.....
197. He will beat . .	Wō pīṭaigau . . .	Ū pīṭaigō . . .	.....
198. We shall beat . .	Ham pīṭaĩgai . . .	Ham pīṭaĩgē . . .	Ham mārãgā . . .
199. You will beat . .	Tum pīṭaugai . . .	Tam pīṭōgē . . .	Tam mārōgā . . .
200. They will beat . .	Wē pīṭaĩgē . . .	Wē pīṭaĩgē . . .	Wai māraĩgā . . .
201. I should beat .	.....	.....	.....
202. I am beaten . .	Mẽ pīṭyau jāũ-hũ . .	Maĩ pīṭyō (or piṭyō) hũ .	Maĩ piṭyō hũ . . .
203. I was beaten . .	Hũ pīṭyau . . .	Maĩ pīṭyō (or piṭyō) hō .	Maĩ piṭyō hō . .
204. I shall be beaten .	Hũ pīṭyau jāũgau . .	Maĩ piṭũgō . . .	.....
205. I go . . .	Hũ ḍigũ, jāũ . . .	Maĩ jāũ	.....
206. Thou goest . .	Tū ḍigai, jāai . . .	Tū jāya	Tū jyā-hai . . .
207. He goes . . .	Wō ḍigai, jāai . . .	Ū jāya	Wā jyā-hai . . .
208. We go . . .	Ham ḍigaĩ, jāaĩ . .	Ham jãya . . .	Ham jāwã . . .
209. You go . . .	Tum ḍigau, jāau . .	Tam jāwō . . .	Tam jāwō . . .
210. They go . . .	Wẽ digaĩ, jāaĩ . .	Wē jãya . . .	Wai jāwaĩ . . .
211. I went . . .	Hũ gayau . . .	Maĩ gayō . . .	.....
212. Thou wentest . .	Tū gayau . . .	Tū gayō . . .	.....
213. He went . . .	Wō gayau . . .	Ū gayō . . .	.....

Ḍūgar-wāṛā of Jaipur (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Jaipur).	Ḍāṅgbhāṅg (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Jaipur).	English.
.....	Ham māryō . . .	188. We beat (Past Tense).
.....	Tum māryō . . .	189. You beat (Past Tense).
.....	Wē māryō . . .	190. They beat (Past Tense).
Hũ mārũ-chhũ . .	Maĩ mārũ-hũ . . .	191. I am beating.
Hũ mārai-chhō . .	Maĩ mārai-hō . . .	192. I was beating.
Maĩ-nai māryō-chhō .	Maĩ-nai māryō-hō . .	193. I had beaten.
Hũ mārũ . . .	Maĩ mārũ . . .	194. I may beat.
Hũ mārũgō, and so on .	Maĩ mārũgō . . .	195. I shall beat.
.....	Tū māraigō . . .	196. Thou wilt beat.
.....	Wō māraigō . . .	197. He will beat.
Ham mārãgā	Ham mārãgā . . .	198. We shall beat.
Tam mārōgā . . .	Tum mārōgā . . .	199. You will beat.
Wai māraĩgā . . .	Wē māraigā . . .	200. They will beat.
.....	.....	201. I should beat.
Hũ paṭyō chhũ . .	Maĩ paṭyō-hũ . . .	202. I am beaten.
Hũ paṭyō chhō . .	Maĩ paṭyō-hō . . .	203. I was beaten.
Hũ paṭũgō . . .	Maĩ paṭũgō . . .	204. I shall be beaten.
Hũ jāũ	.....	205. I go.
Tū jyā-chhai . . .	Tū jāwai . . .	206. Thou goest.
Wā jyā-chhai . . .	Wō jāwai . . .	207. He goes.
Ham jāwã . . .	Ham jāwã . . .	208. We go.
Tam jāwō . . .	Tum jāwō . . .	209. You go.
Wai jyã	Wē jāwai . . .	210. They go.
.....	.....	211. I went.
.....	.....	212. Thou wentest.
.....	.....	213. He went.
Ham gayā . . .	Ham gayā . . .	214. We went.

English.	Ḍāṅgī (Karauli).	Ḍāṅgī (Jaipur) (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Karauli).	Kālīmāl of Jaipur (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Jaipur).
215. You went . . .	Tum gayē . . .	Tam gayē . . .	Tam gayā . . .
216. They went . .	Wē gayē . . .	Wē gayē . . .	Wai gayā . . .
217. Go	Jā	Jā	.....
218. Going . . .	Jātau	Jātō	.....
219. Gone . . .	Gayau	Gayō	.....
220. What is your name? .	Tiyārau kā nām hai? .	Tērō kā nãw hai? . .	Tamārō kãĩ nãw hai? .
221. How old is this horse?	Yē ghōrau kitēk dinan-kau hai?	Ī ghōṛā kitēk dinān-kō hai?	Yā ghōrō kitēk barˢsan-kō hai?
222. How far is it from here to Kashmir?	Jhã-sũ Kashmīr kitēk parai?	Yhã-tē Kasmīr kitēk dūr hai?	Kasmīr nyã-sũ kitēk dūr hai?
223. How many sons are there in your father's house?	Tiyārē dājū-kī bākhari-mẽ kitēk maũṛā hai?	Tyārē dāū-kē ghar-mẽ kitēk bēṭā haĩ?	Tamārē (sic) bāp-kē (sic) ghar-maĩ kitēk bēṭā haĩ?
224. I have walked a long way to-day.	Āji hũ nirī dūri ḍigyō-hũ .	Āj maĩ bhaut dūr chalyō-hũ.	Āj maĩ bhaut chalyō hũ .
225. The son of my uncle is married to his sister.	Mērē kākā-kau mõṛā wā-kī bhaĩnā-kũ byāhyau-hai.	Mērē kākā-kē bēṭā-kō bhyāw wā-kī bhaiṇ-tē hūyō-hai.	Mērē (sic) kākā-kā bēṭã-kō bhyāw wā-kī bhaiṇ-sũ huyō-hai.
226. In the house is the saddle of the white horse.	Dhaurē ghōrē-kau palẽchā bākhari-mẽ hai.	Dhaulē ghōṛā-kī jīn ghar-mẽ hai.	Suphēd ghōrā-ki jīn ghar-maĩ hai.
227. Put the saddle upon his back.	Wā-kī pīṭhi-pai palaĩchā ghāli-dē.	Jīn wā-kī pīṭh-pai dharō .	Jīn wā-kī pīṭh-pai dhar-dai.
228. I have beaten his son with many stripes.	Mẽ-nẽ wā-kē mõṛā-kaĩ kitēkau kōrrā mārē.	Maĩ-nē wā-kē bēṭā-kũ bhaut kōrˢṛān-tē pīṭyō-hai.	Maĩ-nai wā-kē (sic) bēṭā-kũ bhaut kōrˢṛān-sũ māryō-hai.
229. He is grazing cattle on the top of the hill.	Ḍaṅgarīyā-pai wō ḍhōr charāy rahyau-hai.	Ū pāhāṛ-kē ūpar ḍhōr charāwai-hai.	Wā ḍõgar-kai upar ḍhōr charā-rō-hai.
230. He is sitting on a horse under that tree.	Rūkh-kẽ nīchẽ wō ghōrē-pai baiṭhyau-hai.	Wā rūkh-kē nīchē ū ghōṛā-par baiṭhyō-hai.	Wā rūkh-kai nichai wā ghōrā-pai baiṭhyō-hai.
231. His brother is taller than his sister.	Wā-kau bhẽkˢrau wā-kī bhaĩnā-sē ũchau hai.	Wā-kō bhāī wā-kī bhaiṇ-tē lambō hai.	Wā-kō bhāī wā-kī bhaiṇ-sũ lambō hai.
232. The price of that is two rupees and a half.	Wā-kau mōl aṛhāī rupaiyā hai.	Wā-kō mōl ḍhāī rupiyā haĩ .	Wā-kō mōl ḍhāī ripyā-haĩ.
233. My father lives in that small house.	Mērau dājū wā lhaurī bākhari-mẽ hai.	Mērō dāū wā lhōṛē ghar-mẽ rahai-hai.	Mērō (sic) bāp wā chhōṭē (sic) ghar-maĩ rahai-hai.
234. Give this rupee to him .	Yā rupaiyā-i wā-kũ dhō-ghāli.	Yā rupiyā wā-kũ dai-dai .	Yā ripyō wā-kũ dyō . .
235. Take those rupees from him.	Win rupaiyān-nẽ wā-pai-sē lai-lai.	Wē rupiyā wā-pai-tē lai-lẽwō.	Wai ripyā wā-sũ lyō .
236. Beat him well and bind him with ropes.	Wā-kũ jewarā-sē bādhau, aur khūp pīṭau.	Wāya khūb pīṭō ar wāya jewaṛān-tē bādhō.	Wā-kũ khūb mārō, ar rassīn-sũ bāndyō.
237. Draw water from the well.	Kūã-sē pānyaũ khaĩchau .	Kūwā-mẽ-tē pāṇī aĩchō .	Kuwā-sũ pānī kāḍ-lai .
238. Walk before me .	Mērē āgē ḍigi . . .	Mērē āghaĩ chalō . .	Mērē (sic) āgai chal . .
239. Whose boy comes behind you?	Tumārē pichhārī kaun-kō maũṛā āwai-hai?	Kōṇ-kō chhōrā tyārē pīchhaĩ āwai-hai?	Tērē (sic) pichhārī kaũn-kō chhōrā āwai-hai?
240. From whom did you buy that?	Tuman-nẽ wā-kũ kaun-pai-sē mōl līnaũ?	Kōṇ-pai-tē tam-nē ū mōl līyō?	Tam-nai wā kaũn-sũ mōl līnū?
241. From a shopkeeper of	Gām-kē ēk banīyā-sē	Gãw-kō ēk dukān-wālē pai	Gãw-kā ēk banīyã-sũ

Ḍũgar-wāṛā of Jaipur (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Jaipur).	Ḍaṅgbhāṅg (where different from Ḍāṅgī of Jaipur).	English.
Tam gayā . . .	Tum gayā . . .	215. You went.
Wai gayā . . .	Wē gayā . . .	216. They went.
.....	Jā	217. Go.
.....	Jātō	218. Going.
.....	Gayō	219. Gone.
Thārō kãĩ nãw chhai ? .	Tumārō kãĩ nãw hai ? .	220. What is your name ?
Yā ghōṛō katēk danã̄-kō chhai ?	Yō ghōṛō kē baras-kō hai ?	221. How old is this horse ?
Yhã̄-sũ Kasmīr katēk dūr chhai ?	Kasmīr nyhã̄-sũ kattī dūr hai ?	222. How far is it from here to Kashmir ?
Thamārā bāp-kā ghar-maĩ katēk bēṭā chhai ?	Tumārā bāp-kā ghar-mẽ kē bēṭā haĩ ?	223. How many sons are there in your father's house ?
Āj hũ ghaṇī dūr chalyō-chhũ.	Āj maĩ bhōt dūr chalyō-hũ.	224. I have walked a long way to-day.
Mhārā kākā-kā bēṭā-kō byāw ũn-kī bhaiṇ-sũ hīō-chhai.	Mērā kākā-kō bēṭō ũ-kī bhaĩṇ-kũ par^{a}ṇyũ hai.	225. The son of my uncle is married to his sister.
Dhaulā ghōṛā-kī jīn ghar-maĩ chhai.	Dhōlā ghōṛā kī jīn ghar-mẽ hai.	226. In the house is the saddle of the white horse.
Jīn ũ-kā mãg^{a}ran-pai dhar-dyō.	Ũ̃-kī pīṭh-par jīn karō .	227. Put the saddle upon his back.
Maĩ-nai ũ-kā bēṭā-kũ ghaṇā kōr^{a}ṛān-sũ māryō-chhai.	Maĩ-nai ũ-kā bēṭā-kũ bhōt kor^{a}ṛān-sũ̃ māryō-hai.	228. I have beaten his son with many stripes.
Wā ḍũgar-kai ūpar ḍhã̄ḍā charāwai-chhai.	Wō ḍũgar-kā māthā-par ḍhã̄ḍā charā-rayō-hai.	229. He is grazing cattle on the top of the hill.
Wā ũ rũkh^{a}rā-kai nīchai ghōṛā-pai baiṭhyō-chhai.	Wō ũ raũkh^{a}ṛā nīchai ghōṛā-par baiṭhyō-hai.	230. He is sitting on a horse under that tree.
Ũ̃-kō bhāī ũ-kī bhaiṇ-sũ lãmbō chhai.	Ũ̃-kō bhāī ũ-kī bhaĩṇ-sũ lmabō-hai.	231. His brother is taller than his sister.
Ũ̃-kō mōl ḍhāī ripyā chhai.	Ũ̃-kā mōl ḍhāī ripyā hai .	232. The price of that is two rupees and a half.
Mhārō bāp ũ lhōṛyā ghar-maĩ rahai-chhai.	Mērō bāp ũ chhōṭā ghar-mẽ rai-hai.	233. My father lives in that small house.
Yā ripyō ũ-kai-tãĩ dē-dai .	Yō ripyō ũ-kũ saũpō . .	234. Give this rupee to him.
Wai ripyā ũ-sũ lē-lyō .	Wai ripyā ũ-sũ lyō . .	235. Take those rupees from him.
Ũ̃-kai-tãĩ khūb mārō, ar jew^{a}rān-sũ bã̄dh-dyō.	Ũ̃-kũ khūb mārō ar jew^{a}ṛān-sũ bã̄dō.	236. Beat him well and bind him with ropes.
Kuwā-maĩ-sũ pāṇī kāḍō .	Kūwā-sũ pāṇī bharō . .	237. Draw water from the well.
Mhārai āgai chālō . .	Mērai āgai chalō . .	238. Walk before me.
Kuṇ-kō chhōrō thamārai pāchhai āwai-chhai ?	Tumārai pāchhōk^{a}ṛai kuṇ-kō laṛ^{a}kō āwai-hai ?	239. Whose boy comes behind you ?
Tam-nai wā kuṇ-sũ mōl-līyō ?	Tum-nai wō kuṇ-sũ mōl-līyō ?	240. From whom did you buy that ?
Gã̄w-kā ēk dukandār-sũ . .	Gã̄w-kā ēk dukandār-sũ .	241. From a shopkeeper of the village.

KANAUJĪ.

The town of Kanauj is situated at the south-east end of the Farukhabad district, and the language of that locality may be considered to be the standard form of Kanaujī. It is that illustrated by the preceding skeleton Grammar.

It has hitherto been wrongly considered that at the north-western end of Farukhabad the language was Braj-Bhākhā or Antarbēdī. This is wrong. Kanaujī is, as will be shown, spoken all over the district. The total number of speakers of Kanaujī in Farukhabad is 712,500. The local authorities divided this into—

Antarbēdī	678,900
'Hindī'	33,600
TOTAL .	712,500

Both are, however, Kanaujī.

[No. I.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

KANAUJĪ. (EAST OF DISTRICT FARUKHABAD.)

एक जने-के दोए लड़िका हते। उनमैं-से छोटे-ने बाप-से कही कि हे पिता मालु-को हौंसा जो हमारो चाहिये सो देओ। तब उन-ने मालु उन्हैं बाँट-दओ। औरु थोरे दिनन पीछे छोटे लड़िका-ने सब कुछ इकट्ठा करि-कै एक दूरि-के देस-को चलो-गओ औरु हुआँ अपनो मालु बुरे चलन-मैं उड़ाओ। औरु जब सब खरच कर-चुको उस मुल्क-मैं बड़ो अकालु परो औरु वहु कंगाल हुइ-गओ। तब उस मुल्क-के एक रईस-के हियाँ लगि-गओ। उन-ने उसे अपने खेतन-मैं सूअर चरइबे-को पठओ। औरु उसे चाह हती कि उन बकलन-से जो सूअर खात-हैं अपनो पेटु भरैं कि कोई उसे-देत-नाईं-हतो। तब होसु-मैं आय-के कहन लगो कि हमारे बापु-के कितने मजूरनको रोटी बहुत है औरु हम भूखों मरतहैं। मैं उठ-कै अपने बापु-के तीर जैहौं औरु उन-से कैहौं कि पिता हम-ने दैव-को औरु तुम्हारो दोख करो-है औरु अब इस लाइक नाहीं कि फिरि तुम्हारे बेटा कहावैं। हमैं अपने मजूरन-मैं-से एक-की बरोबर बनाओ। तब उठि-कै अपने बाप-के तीर चलो। औरु वे अभै दूर हते कि उसै देखिके बापु-काँ दया लगी औरु दौरि-के उस-काँ गरे लगाय-लओ औरु चूमो। बेटाने उस-से कही कि हे पिता मैं-ने दैव-को औरु तुम्हारो पापु करो औरु अब इस लाइक नाहीं कि फिरि तुम्हारो लड़िका कहाऊँ। बाप-ने अपने नौकरन-से कही कि अच्छी-से अच्छी पोशाक निकास-लावो औरु इस-काँ पहिरावो औरु हम-सब खायें औरु खुसी मनावैं। काहे-से कि हमारो यहु लड़िका मरो-हतो सो अब जिओ-है। खुइ-गओ-हतो अब मिलि गओ-है। तब वे खुसी करन लागे॥

उस-को बड़ो लड़िका खेत-मैं हतो। जब घर-के नगीच आवो औरु गैबो औरु नाचिबो सुनो तब एक नौकर-को बुलाय-के पूछो कि यौ का है। उस-ने उस-से कही कि तुम्हारो भाई आवो-है औरु तुम्हारे बापु-ने बड़ी जेओनार करी-है काहे-से कि उसै भलो चंगा पाओ। उस-ने रिसाय-कै भीतर जानो

नाहीँ चाहो। तब उस-के बापु-ने बाहिर आय-के वहि-काँ मनाओ। उहि-ने बापु-से कही देखो इतनी बरसन-से हम तुम्हारी सेवा करत-हैँ औरु कब-हूँ तुम्हारे अगिया-की बहिर नाहीँ चलत-हैँ। परंतु तुम-ने कब-हूँ एक बकरी-को बच्चा हमैँ नाहीँ दओ कि हम अपने मिलापिन-के संग खुसी मनाते। औरु जब तुम्हारो यहु लड़िका आवो जिन-ने तुम्हारो मालु पतुरिअन-मैँ उड़ाओ तुम-ने उहि-की बड़ी जेओनार करी। उहि-ने उस-से कही अरे बेटा तुम सदा हमारे तीर रहे औरु जो-कुछो हमारो है सो तेरो-ई है। पर खुसी मनइबो औरु राजी होइबो चाहिये काहे-से कि तुम्हारो यहु भाई मरो-हतो सो जिओ-है औरु खुइ-गओ-हतो सो अब मिलो-है॥

[No. I.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

KANAUJĪ. (EAST OF DISTRICT FARUKHABAD.)

एक जने-के दोए लड़िका हते । उनमैं-से छोटे-ने बाप-से कही कि हे पिता मालु-को हौंसा जो हमारो चाहिये सो देओ । तब उन-ने मालु उन्हैं बाँट-दओ । औरु थोरे दिनन पीछे छोटे लड़िका-ने सब कुछ इकट्ठा करि-कै एक दूरि-के देस-को चलो-गओ औरु हुआँ अपनो मालु बुरे चलन-मैं उड़ाओ । औरु जब सब खरच कर-चुको उस मुल्क-मैं बड़ो अकालु परो औरु वहु कंगाल हुइ-गओ । तब उस मुल्क-के एक रईस-के हियाँ लगि-गओ । उन-ने उसे अपने खेतन-मैं सूअर चरइबे-को पठओ । औरु उसे चाह हती कि उन बकलन-से जो सूअर खात-हैं अपनो पेटु भरैं कि कोई उसे-देत-नाईं-हतो । तब होसु-मैं आय-के कहन लगो कि हमारे बापु-के कितने मजूरनको रोटी बहुत है औरु हम भूखौं मरतहैं । मैं उठ-कै अपने बापु-के तीर जैहौं औरु उन-से कैहौं कि पिता हम-ने दैव-को औरु तुम्हारो दोख करो-है औरु अब इस लाइक नाहीं कि फिरि तुम्हारे बेटा कहावैं । हमैं अपने मजूरन-मैं-से एक-की बरोबर बनाओ । तब उठि-कै अपने बाप-के तीर चलो । औरु वे अभै दूर हते कि उसै देखिके बापु-काँ दया लगी औरु दौरि-के उस-काँ गरे लगाय-लओ औरु चूमो । बेटाने उस-से कही कि हे पिता मैं-ने दैव-को औरु तुम्हारो पापु करो औरु अब इस लाइक नाहीं कि फिरि तुम्हारो लड़िका कहाऊँ । बाप-ने अपने नौकरन-से कही कि अच्छी-से अच्छी पोशाक निकास-लावो औरु इस-काँ पहिरावो औरु हम-सब खायें औरु खुसी मनावैं । काहे-से कि हमारो यहु लड़िका मरो-हतो सो अब जिओ-है । खुइ-गओ-हतो अब मिलि गओ-है । तब वे खुसी करन लागे ॥

उस-को बड़ो लड़िका खेत-मैं हतो । जब घर-के नगीच आवो औरु गैबो औरु नाचिबो सुनो तब एक नौकर-को बुलाय-के पूछो कि यौ का है । उस-ने उस-से कही कि तुम्हारो भाई आवो-है औरु तुम्हारे बापु-ने बड़ी जेओनार करी-है काहे-से कि उसै भलो चंगा पाओ । उस-ने रिसाय-कै भीतर जानो

नाहीँ चाहो। तब उस-के बापु-ने बाहिर आय-के वहि-काँ मनाओ। उहि-ने बापु-से कही देखो इतनी बरसन-से हम तुम्हारी सेवा करत-हैँ औरु कब-हूँ तुम्हारे अग्गिया-की बहिर नाहीँ चलत-हैँ। परंतु तुम-ने कब-हूँ एक बकरी-को बच्चा हमैँ नाहीँ दओ कि हम अपने मिलापिन-के संग खुसी मनाते। औरु जब तुम्हारो यहु लड़िका आवो जिन-ने तुम्हारो मालु पतुरिअन-मैँ उड़ाओ तुम-ने उहि-की बड़ी जेओनार करी। उहि-ने उस-से कही अरे बेटा तुम सदा हमारे तीर रहे औरु जो-कुछो हमारो है सो तेरो-ई है। पर खुसी मनइबो औरु राजी होइबो चाहिये काहे-से कि तुम्हारो यहु भाई मरो-हतो सो जिओ-है औरु खुइ-गओ-हतो सो अब मिलो-है॥

[No. I.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

KANAUJĪ. (EAST OF DISTRICT FARUKHABAD.)

एक जने-के दोए लड़िका हते। उनमैं-से छोटे-ने बाप-से कही कि हे पिता मालु-को हौंसा जो हमारो चाहिये सो देओ। तब उन-ने मालु उन्हें बाँट-दओ। औरु थोरे दिनन पीछे छोटे लड़िका-ने सब कुछ इकट्ठा करि-के एक दूरि-के देस-को चलो-गओ औरु हुआँ अपनो मालु बुरे चलन-में उड़ाओ। औरु जब सब खरच कर-चुको उस मुल्क-में बड़ो अकालु परो औरु वहु कंगाल हुइ-गओ। तब उस मुल्क-के एक रईस-के हियाँ लगि-गओ। उन-ने उसे अपने खेतन-में सूअर चरइबे-को पठओ। औरु उसे चाह हती कि उन बकलन-से जो सूअर खात-हैं अपनो पेटु भरैं कि कोई उसे-देत-नाइँ-हतो। तब होसु-में आय-के कहन लगो कि हमारे बापु-के कितने मजूरनको रोटी बहुत है औरु हम भूखों मरतहैं। मैं उठ-के अपने बापु-के तीर जैहौं औरु उन-से कैहौं कि पिता हम-ने दैव-को औरु तुम्हारो दोख करो-है औरु अब इस लाइक नाहीं कि फिरि तुम्हारे बेटा कहावैं। हमैं अपने मजूरन-में-से एक-को बरोबर बनाओ। तब उठि-के अपने बाप-के तीर चलो। औरु वे अभै दूर हते कि उसै देखिके बापु-काँ दया लगी औरु दौरि-के उस-काँ गरे लगाय-लओ औरु चूमो। बेटाने उस-से कही कि हे पिता मैं-ने दैव-को औरु तुम्हारो पापु करो औरु अब इस लाइक नाहीं कि फिरि तुम्हारो लड़िका कहाऊँ। बाप-ने अपने नौकरन-से कही कि अच्छी-से अच्छी पोशाक निकास-लावो औरु इस-काँ पहिरावो औरु हम-सब खायँ औरु खुसी मनावैं। काहे-से कि हमारो यहु लड़िका मरो-हतो सो अब जिओ-है। खुइ-गओ-हतो अब मिलि गओ-है। तब वे खुसी करन लागे॥

उस-को बड़ो लड़िका खेत-मैं हतो। जब घर-के नगीच आवो औरु गैबो औरु नाचिबो सुनो तब एक नौकर-को बुलाय-के पूछो कि यौ का है। उस-ने उस-से कही कि तुम्हारो भाई आवो-है औरु तुम्हारे बापु-ने बड़ी जेओनार करी-है काहे-से कि उसै भलो चंगा पाओ। उस-ने रिसाय-के भीतर जानो

नाहीँ चाहो। तब उस-के बापु-ने बाहिर आय-के वहि-काँ मनाओ। उहि-ने बापु-से कही देखो इतनी बरसन-से हम तुम्हारी सेवा करत-हैँ औरु कब-हूँ तुम्हारे अग्गिया-की बहिर नाहीँ चलत-हैँ। परंतु तुम-ने कब-हूँ एक बकरी-को बच्चा हमैँ नाहीँ दओ कि हम अपने मिलापिन-के संग खुसी मनाते। औरु जब तुम्हारो यहु लड़िका आवो जिन-ने तुम्हारो मालु पतुरिअन-मैँ उड़ाओ तुम-ने उहि-की बड़ी जेओनार करी। उहि-ने उस-से कही अरे बेटा तुम सदा हमारे तीर रहे औरु जो-कुछो हमारो है सो तेरो-ई है। पर खुसी मनइबो औरु राजी होइबो चाहिये काहे-से कि तुम्हारो यहु भाई मरो-हतो सो जिओ-है औरु खुइ-गओ-हतो सो अब मिलो-है॥

[No. I.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

KANAUJĪ. (EAST OF DISTRICT FARUKHABAD.)

एक जने-के दोए लड़िका हते । उनमैं-से छोटे-ने बाप-से कही कि हे पिता मालु-को हींसा जो हमारो चाहिये सो देओ । तब उन-ने मालु उन्हें बाँट-दओ । औरु थोरे दिनन पीछे छोटे लड़िका-ने सब कुछ इकट्ठा करि-के एक टूरि-के देस-को चलो-गओ औरु हुआँ अपनो मालु बुरे चलन-में उड़ाओ । औरु जब सब खरच कर-चुको उस मुल्क-में बड़ो अकालु परो औरु वहु कंगाल हुइ-गओ । तब उस मुल्क-के एक रईस-के हियाँ लगि-गओ । उन-ने उसे अपने खेतन-में सूअर चरइबे-को पठओ । औरु उसे चाह हती कि उन बकलन-से जो सूअर खात-हैं अपनो पेटु भरैं कि कोई उसे-देत-नाईं-हतो । तब होसु-में आय-के कहन लगो कि हमारे बापु-के कितने मजूरनको रोटी बहुत है औरु हम भूखों मरतहैं । में उठ-के अपने बापु-के तीर जैहौं औरु उन-से कैहौं कि पिता हम-ने दैव-को औरु तुम्हारो दोख करो-है औरु अब इस लाइक नाहीं कि फिरि तुम्हारे बेटा कहावैं । हमें अपने मजूरन-मैं-से एक-को बरोबर बनाओ । तब उठि-के अपने बाप-के तीर चलो । औरु वे अभै टूर हते कि उसे देखिके बापु-काँ दया लगी औरु दौरि-के उस-काँ गरे लगाय-लओ औरु चूमो । बेटाने उस-से कही कि हे पिता मैं-ने दैव-को औरु तुम्हारो पापु करो औरु अब इस लाइक नाहीं कि फिरि तुम्हारो लड़िका कहाऊँ । बाप-ने अपने नौकरन-से कही कि अच्छी-से अच्छी पोशाक निकास-लावो औरु इस-काँ पहिरावो औरु हम-सब खायें औरु खुसी मनावैं । काहे-से कि हमारो यहु लड़िका मरो-हतो सो अब जिओ-है । खुइ-गओ-हतो अब मिलि गओ-है । तब बे खुसी करन लागे ॥

उस-को बड़ो लड़िका खेत-में हतो । जब घर-के नगीच आवो औरु गैबो औरु नाचिबो सुनो तब एक नौकर-को बुलाय-के पूछी कि यौ का है । उस-ने उस-से कही कि तुम्हारो भाई आवो-है औरु तुम्हारे बापु-ने बड़ी जेओनार करी-है काहे-से कि उसे भलो चंगा पाओ । उस-ने रिसाय-के भीतर जानो

नाहीँ चाहो। तब उस-के बापु-ने बाहिर आय-के वहि-काँ मनाओ। उहि-ने बापु-से कही देखो इतनी बरसन-से हम तुम्हारी सेवा करत-हैँ औरु कब-हूँ तुम्हारे अगियाा-की बहिर नाहीँ चलत-हैँ। परंतु तुम-ने कब-हूँ एक बकरी-को बच्चा हमैँ नाहीँ दओ कि हम अपने मिलापिन-के संग खुसी मनाते। औरु जब तुम्हारो यहु लड़िका आवो जिन-ने तुम्हारो मालु पतुरिअन-मैँ उड़ाओ तुम-ने उहि-की बड़ी जेओनार करी। उहि-ने उस-से कही अरे बेटा तुम सदा हमारे तीर रहे औरु जो-कुछो हमारो है सो तेरो-ई है। पर खुसी मनइबो औरु राजी होइबो चाहिये काहे-से कि तुम्हारो यहु भाई मरो-हतो सो जिओ-है औरु खुइ-गओ-हतो सो अब मिलो-है॥

[No. I.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

KANAUJĪ. (EAST OF DISTRICT FARUKHABAD.)

एक जने-के दोए लड़िका हते। उनमैं-से छोटे-ने बाप-से कही कि हे पिता मालु-को हौंसा जो हमारो चाहिये सो देओ। तब उन-ने मालु उन्हें बाँट-दओ। औरु थोरे दिनन पीछे छोटे लड़िका-ने सब कुछ इकट्ठा करि-के एक दूरि-के देस-को चलो-गओ औरु हुआँ अपनो मालु बुरे चलन-मैं उड़ाओ। औरु जब सब खरच कर-चुको उस मुल्क-मैं बड़ो अकालु परो औरु वहु कंगाल हुइ-गओ। तब उस मुल्क-के एक रईस-के हियाँ लगि-गओ। उन-ने उसे अपने खेतन-मैं सूअर चरइबे-को पठओ। औरु उसे चाह हती कि उन बकलन-से जो सूअर खात-हैं अपनो पेटु भरैं कि कोई उसे-देत-नाईं-हतो। तब होसु-में आय-के कहन लगो कि हमारे बापु-के कितने मजूरनको रोटी बहुत है औरु हम भूखों मरतहैं। मैं उठ-के अपने बापु-के तीर जैहौं औरु उन-से कैहौं कि पिता हम-ने दैव-को औरु तुम्हारो दोख करो-है औरु अब इस लाइक नाहीं कि फिरि तुम्हारे बेटा कहावैं। हमैं अपने मजूरन-मैं-से एक-को बरोबर बनाओ। तब उठि-के अपने बाप-के तीर चलो। औरु वे अभै दूर हते कि उसे देखिके बापु-काँ दया लगी औरु दौरि-के उस-काँ गरे लगाय-लओ औरु चूमो। बेटाने उस-से कही कि हे पिता मैं-ने दैव-को औरु तुम्हारो पापु करो औरु अब इस लाइक नाहीं कि फिरि तुम्हारो लड़िका कहाऊँ। बाप-ने अपने नौकरन-से कही कि अच्छी-से अच्छी पोशाक निकास-लावो औरु इस-काँ पहिरावो औरु हम-सब खायें औरु खुसी मनावैं। काहे-से कि हमारो यहु लड़िका मरो-हतो सो अब जिओ-है। खुइ-गओ-हतो अब मिलि गओ-है। तब वे खुसी करन लागे॥

उस-को बड़ो लड़िका खेत-मैं हतो। जब घर-के नगीच आवो औरु गैबो औरु नाचिबो सुनो तब एक नौकर-को बुलाय-के पूछी कि यौ का है। उस-ने उस-से कही कि तुम्हारो भाई आवो-है औरु तुम्हारे बापु-ने बड़ी जेओनार करी-है काहे-से कि उसे भलो चंगा पाओ। उस-ने रिसाय-के भीतर जानो

नाहीँ चाहो। तब उस-के बापु-ने बाहिर आय-के बहि-काँ मनाओ। उहि-ने बापु-से कही देखो इतनी बरसन-से हम तुम्हारी सेवा करत-हैँ औरु कब-हूँ तुम्हारे अग्गिया-की बहिर नाहीँ चलत-हैँ। परंतु तुम-ने कब-हूँ एक बकरी-को बच्चा हमैँ नाहीँ दओ कि हम अपने मिलापिन-के संग खुसी मनाते। औरु जब तुम्हारो यहु लड़िका आवो जिन-ने तुम्हारो मालु पतुरिअन-मैँ उड़ाओ तुम-ने उहि-की बड़ी जेओनार करी। उहि-ने उस-से कही अरे बेटा तुम सदा हमारे तीर रहे औरु जो-कुछो हमारो है सो तेरो-ई है। पर खुसी मनइबो औरु राजी होइबो चाहिये काहे-से कि तुम्हारो यहु भाई मरो-हतो सो जिओ-है औरु खुइ-गओ-हतो सो अब मिलो-है॥

[No. I.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

KANAUJĪ. (WEST OF DISTRICT FARUKHABAD.)

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ēk janē-kē dōē laṛikā hatē. Un-maĩ-sē chhōṭē-nē bāp-
One man-of two sons were. Them-in-from the-younger-by the-fathersē kahī ki, 'hē pitā, mālu-kō hĩsā jō hamārō chāhiyē to it-was-said that, 'O father, property-of share which mine is-proper sō dēō.' Tab un-nē mālu unhẽ bãṭ daō. Auru thōrē that give.' Then him-by property to-them dividing was-given. And a-few dinan pīchhē chhōṭē laṛikā-nē sab kuchh ikaṭṭhā kari-kē days after the-younger son-by all anything together made-having ēk dūri-kē dēs-kō chalō-gaō. Auru huã apⁿnō mālu burē one distance-of country-to it-was-gone. And there his-own property evil chalan-mẽ uṛāō. Auru jab sab khaṛⁿch kar-chukō, conduct-in was-squandered. And when all expenditure was-done-completely, us mulk-mẽ baṛō akālu parō auru wahu kaṅgāl hui-gaō. Tab that country-in great famine fell and he indigent became. Then us mulk-kē ēk raīs-kē hiyã lagi gaō. Unthat country-of one native-of near having-engaged-himself he-went. Him-nē usē apⁿnē khētan-mẽ sūar charaïbē-kō paṭhaō. Auru usē by him his-own fields-in swine to-feed it-was-sent. And to-him chāh hatī ki, 'un bakⁿlan-sē jō sūar khāt-haĩ apⁿnō
the-desire was that, 'those husks-with which swine eating-are my-own pēṭu bharaĩ,' ki kōī usē dēt nāĩ hatō. Tab hōsu-mẽ belly I-may-fill,' that anybody to-him giving not was. Then senses-in āy-kē kahan lagō ki, 'hamārē bāpu-kē kitⁿnē majūrancome-having to-say he-began that, 'my father-of how-many labourerskō rōṭī bahut hai auru ham bhūkhõ marat-haĩ. Maĩ uṭh-kē to bread much is and I from-hunger dying-am. I arisen-having apⁿnē bāpu-kē tīr jaihaũ auru un-sē kaihaũ ki, "pitā, ham-nē my-own father-of near will-go and him-to will-say that, "father, me-by Daiw-kō auru tumhārō dōkh karō-hai, auru ab is lāik nāhĩ ki
God-of and thy sin done-is, and now this worthy not that phiri tumhārē bēṭā kahāwaĩ. Hamaĩ apⁿnē majūran-maĩ-sē ēk-again thy son I-may-be-called. Me thy-own labourers-in-from onekī barōbar banāō."' Tab uṭhi-kē apᵃnē bāp-kē tīr chalō.

of (to) equal make."' Then arisen-having his-own father-of near he-went.
Auru wē abhai dūr hatē ki usai dēkhi-kē bāpu-kã̄ daṛā
And he yet far-off was that him seen-having the-father-to pity lagī auru dauri-kē us-kã̄ garē lagāṛ-laō, auru chūmō. Bēṭāwas-attached and run-having him on-neck embraced, and kissed. The-son-nē us-sē kahī ki, 'hē pitā, maĩ-nē Daiw-kō auru tumhārō pāpu
by him-to it-was-said that, 'O father, me-by God-of and thy sin
karō auru ab is lāik nāhĩ ki phiri tumhārō laṛikā was-done and now this worthy not that again thy son kahāũ.' Bāp-nē apᵃnē naukaran-sē kahī ki 'achchhī-sē
I-may-be-called.' The-father-by his-own servants-to it-was-said that, 'good-than achchhī pōśāk nikās-lāwau auru is-kã̄ pahirāwau, auru ham-sab khāṛẽ good dress bring-out and this-one-on put, and (let-)us-all eat auru khusī manāwaĩ; kāhē-sē ki hamārō ẏahu laṛikā marō-hatō, and merriment make; what-from that my this son dead-was, sō ab jiō-hai; khui-gaō-hatō, ab mili-gaō-hai.' Tab bē khusī he now alive-is; lost-gone-was, now found-gone-is.' Then they merriment karan lāgē.
to-make began.

Us-kō baṛō laṛikā khēt-maĩ hatō. Jab ghar-kē nagīch āwō auru
His elder son field-in was. When house-of near he-came and gaibō auru nāchibō sunō, tab ēk naukar-kō bulāy-kē singing and dancing was-heard, then one servant called-having pūchhī ki, 'yau kā hai'? Us-nē us-sē kahī ki it-was-asked that, 'this what is'? Him-by him-to it-was-said that
'tumhārō bhāī āwō-hai, auru tumhārē bāpu-nē baṛī jeonār karī-hai,
'thy brother come-has, and thy father-by great feast made-is,
kāhē-sē ki usai bhalō chaṅgā pāō.' Us-nē what-from that him well healthy it-has-been-found.' Him-by risāy-kē bhītar jānō nāhĩ chāhō. Tab us-kē bāpu-nē become-angry-having inside to-go not it-was-wished. Then his father-by bāhir āy-kē bahi-kã̄ manāō. Uhi-nē bāpu-sē kahī, outside come-having him it-was-appeased. Him-by the-father-to it-was-said,
'dēkhō, itᵃnī barᵃsan-sē ham tumhārī sēwā karat-haĩ auru kab-hũ
'see, so-many years-from I your service doing-am and ever-even tumhārē aggiyā-kī bāhir nāhĩ chalat-haĩ; parantu tum-nē kab-hũ ēk your orders-of out not going-am; but you-by ever-even one bakᵃrī-kō bachchā hamaĩ nāhĩ daō, ki apᵃnē milāpin-kē saṅg goat-of young-one to-me not was-given, that my-own friends-of with

[No. I.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

KANAUJĪ. (WEST OF DISTRICT FARUKHABAD.)

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ēk janē-kē dōē laṛikā hatē. Un-maĩ-sē chhōṭē-nē bāp-
One man-of two sons were. Them-in-from the-younger-by the-fathersē kahī ki, 'hē pitā, mālu-kō hĩsā jō hamārō chāhiyē
to it-was-said that, 'O father, property-of share which mine is-proper sō dēō.' Tab un-nē mālu unhẽ bãṭ daō. Auru thōrē that give.' Then him-by property to-them dividing was-given. And a-few dinan pīchhē chhōṭē laṛikā-nē sab kuchh ikaṭṭhā kari-kē days after the-younger son-by all anything together made-having ēk dūri-kē dēs-kō chalō-gaō. Auru huã̃ apⁿnō mālu burē one distance-of country-to it-was-gone. And there his-own property evil chalan-mẽ uṛāō. Auru jab sab khaṛⁿch kar-chukō, conduct-in was-squandered. And when all expenditure was-done-completely, us mulk-mẽ baṛō akālu parō auru wahu kaṅgāl hui-gaō. Tab that country-in great famine fell and he indigent became. Then us mulk-kē ēk raīs-kē hiyã̃ lagi gaō. Unthat country-of one native-of near having-engaged-himself he-went. Him-nē usē apⁿnē khētan-mẽ sūar charaïbē-kō paṭhaō. Auru usē
by him his-own fields-in swine to-feed it-was-sent. And to-him
chāh hatī ki, 'un bakⁿlan-sē jō sūar khāt-haĩ apⁿnō
the-desire was that, 'those husks-with which swine eating-are my-own pēṭu bharaĩ,' ki kōī usē dēt nāĩ hatō. Tab hōsu-mẽ belly I-may-fill,' that anybody to-him giving not was. Then senses-in āy-kē kahan lagō ki, 'hamārē bāpu-kē kitⁿnē majūran-
come-having to-say he-began that, 'my father-of how-many labourerskō rōṭī bahut hai auru ham bhūkhõ marat-haĩ. Maĩ uṭh-kē to bread much is and I from-hunger dying-am. I arisen-having apⁿnē bāpu-kē tīr jaihaũ auru un-sē kaihaũ ki, "pitā, ham-nē
my-own father-of near will-go and him-to will-say that, "father, me-by Daiw-kō auru tumhārō dōkh karō-hai, auru ab is lāik nāhĩ ki
God-of and thy sin done-is, and now this worthy not that phiri tumhārē bēṭā kahāwaĩ. Hamaĩ apⁿnē majūran-maĩ-sē ēk-again thy son I-may-be-called. Me thy-own labourers-in-from onekī barōbar banāō."' Tab uṭhi-kē apⁿnē bāp-kē tīr chalō.

of (to) equal make."' Then arisen-having his-own father-of near he-went.
Auru wē abhai dūr hatē ki usai dēkhi-kē bāpu-kã̄ daṛā
And he yet far-off was that him seen-having the-father-to pity lagī auru dauri-kē us-kã̄ garē lagāṛ-laō, auru chūmō. Bēṭāwas-attached and run-having him on-neck embraced, and kissed. The-son-nē us-sē kahī ki, 'hē pitā, maĩ-nē Daiw-kō auru tumhārō pāpu
by him-to it-was-said that, 'O father, me-by God-of and thy sin
karō auru ab is lāik nāhĩ ki phiri tumhārō laṛikā
was-done and now this worthy not that again thy son
kahāũ.' Bāp-nē apⁿnē naukaran-sē kahī ki 'achchhī-sē
I-may-be-called.' The-father-by his-own servants-to it-was-said that, 'good-than achchhī pōśāk nikās-lāwau auru is-kã̄ pahirāwau, auru ham-sab khāṛẽ good dress bring-out and this-one-on put, and (let-)us-all eat auru khusī manāwaĩ; kāhē-sē ki hamārō ṛahu laṛikā marō-hatō, and merriment make; what-from that my this son dead-was,
sō ab jiō-hai; khui-gaō-hatō, ab mili-gaō-hai.' Tab bē khusī
he now alive-is; lost-gone-was, now found-gone-is.' Then they merriment karan lāgē.
to-make began.

Us-kō baṛō laṛikā khēt-maĩ hatō. Jab ghar-kē nagīch āwō auru
His elder son field-in was. When house-of near he-came and gaibō auru nāchibō sunō, tab ēk naukar-kō bulāṛ-kē singing and dancing was-heard, then one servant called-having pūchhī ki, 'yau kā hai'? Us-nē us-sē kahī ki
it-was-asked that, 'this what is'? Him-by him-to it-was-said that
'tumhārō bhāī āwō-hai, auru tumhārē bāpu-nē baṛī jeonār karī-hai,
'thy brother come-has, and thy father-by great feast made-is,
kāhē-sē ki usai bhalō chaṅgā pāō.' Us-nē what-from that him well healthy it-has-been-found.' Him-by risāṛ-kē bhītar jānō nāhĩ chāhō. Tab us-kē bāpu-nē become-angry-having inside to-go not it-was-wished. Then his father-by bāhir āṛ-kē bahi-kã̄ manāō. Uhi-nē bāpu-sē kahī, outside come-having him it-was-appeased. Him-by the-father-to it-was-said,
'dēkhō, itⁿnī barⁿsan-sē ham tumhārī sēwā karat-haĩ auru kab-hũ
'see, so-many years-from I your service doing-am and ever-even tumhārē aggiyā-kī bāhir nāhĩ chalat-haĩ; parantu tum-nē kab-hũ ēk your orders-of out not going-am; but you-by ever-even one bakⁿrī-kō bachchā hamaĩ nāhĩ daō, ki apⁿnē milāpin-kē saṅg goat-of young-one to-me not was-given, that my-own friends-of with khusī manātē. Auru jab tumhārō yahu laṛikā āwō merriment I-might-have-made. And when your this son came jin-nē tumhārō mālu paturian-maĩ uṛāō, tum-nē uhi-kī baṛī whom-by your fortune harlots-in was-wasted, you-by his great jeonār karī.' Uhi-nē us-sē kahī, 'arē bēṭā, tum sadā hamārē feast was-made.' Him-by him-to it-was-said, 'O son, you always me tīr rahē, auru jō-kuchhō hamārō hai sō tērō-ī hai: par khusī near were, and whatever mine is that thine-verily is: but joy manaïbō auru rājī hōibō chāhiyē kāhē-sē ki tumhārō yahu to-celebrate and pleased to-be is-proper what-from that your this bhāī marō-hatō, sō jiō-hai; auru khui-gaō-hatō sō ab milo-hai.'

brother dead-was, he alive-is; and lost-gone-was he now found-is.'

In the north-western portions of Farukhabad, the language is also Kanaujī,—not Antarbēdī or Braj Bhākhā as has been hitherto supposed. This will be evident from the following specimen, which is the first few lines of the Parable. The language is identical with that of the corresponding portion of the preceding specimen.

[No. 2.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

KANAUJĪ. (WEST OF DISTRICT FARUKHABAD.)

एक मनई-कै दोए लड़िका हते । छोटे लड़िका-ने बाप-सन कही कि हमारे हींसा-को बाँटु करि देओ । बाप-ने उस-को हींसा बाँटि दओ । थोड़े दिन पाछे छोटे लड़िका-ने अपनो सब धनु इकट्ठो करि-के परदेस निकसि-गओ। हुआँ सबरो माल-टाल खोंटे राह-माँ उड़ाय-दओ । जब सब खर्च हुइ-गओ तब उस देस-माँ अकाल पड़ो औरु बहु भूखन मरन लगो ॥

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ēk manaī-kē dōē laṛikā hatē. Chhōṭē laṛikā-nē bāp-san One man-of two sons were. The-younger son-by the-father-to kahī ki, 'hamārē hĩsā-kō bā̃ṭu kari dēō.' Bāp-it-was-said that, 'my share-of division having-made give.' The-father-nē us-kō hĩsā bā̃ṭi daō. Thōṛē din pāchhē chhōṭē by his share dividing was-given. A-few days after the-younger laṛikā-nē ap^{a}nō sab dhanu ikaṭṭhō kari-kē par-dēs son-by his-own all fortune together made-having a-foreign-land nikasi-gaō. Huā̃ sab^{a}rō māl-ṭāl khō̃ṭē rāh-mā̃ uṛāy-daō. Jab went-away. There all riches evil way-in was-squandered-away. When sab kharch hui-gaō, tab us dēs-mā̃ akāl paṛō. Auru bahu all expenditure became, then that country-in famine fell. And he bhūkhan maran lagō.
from-hunger to-die began.

KANAUJĪ (PACHARUĀ) OF ETAWAH.

The language spoken over the greater part of the district of Etawah is Kanaujī. Only in the south, in the Dōāb of the Chambal and the Jamna, do we hear the Bhadaurī dialect of Bundēlī. To the north-west of Etawah lies the district of Mainpurī, the language of which is Braj Bhākhā or Antarbēdī. To its north lies Farukhabad and to its east Cawnpore, in both of which Kanaujī is spoken. As might be expected the Kanaujī of Etawah shows traces of the influence of Braj Bhākhā and of Bhadaurī, but on the whole, it is fairly pure.

In the original Rough List of the languages of this district, what is now stated to be Kanaujī, was wrongly shown as Antarbēdī. That it is Kanaujī will not be doubted after a perusal of the specimens which follow.

The district of Etawah is divided into two nearly equal parts by the river Sengar, which runs north-west and south-east, parallel to the course of the Jamna. There are therefore (if we exclude the Chambal-Jamna Dōāb) two main tracts, a south-western, between the Sengar and the Jamna, and a north-eastern beyond the former river. The latter tract is locally known as the Pachār, and local officials distinguish between the Kanaujī of the Pachār, which they call Pacharuā, and that of the rest of the district. Pacharuā shows more traces of the influence of Braj Bhākhā, and less of that of Bhadaurī than does the Kanaujī of the unnamed south-western tract.

The following is the estimated number of speakers of these two forms of Kanaujī:—

Pacharuā	250,000
Kanaujī of south-west	101,000
TOTAL .	351,000

In 1891, the total population of the district was 727,629, and the balance is mainly made up by 55,000 speakers of Bhadaurī and 285,000 people who are reported to speak Urdū. The latter figures appear to be a needlessly large estimate, but no better one is available. I proceed to give specimens of both forms of Kanaujī.

For Pacharuā, I give a few lines of a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son. It will be seen that there are very few local peculiarities. We have kẽ̃, kõ̃, and kaũ̃ for the sign of the accusative-dative, and nẽ or naĩ̃ (Bhadaurī) for the agent. The sign of the conjunctive participle is kẽ̃, as we also find in Bhadaurī. We meet the form aĩ̃ for haĩ̃, they were, which properly belongs to Braj Bhākhā. The third personal pronoun is bū, with an oblique form wā or bā (again Bhadaurī). There is also the tendency to eliminate an r before another consonant which is a marked peculiarity of Bhadaurī. Thus khachchu for kharch, expenditure, and paddēs for par°dēs, a foreign country. The form juã̃, there, is noteworthy.

[No. 3.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

KANAUJĪ (PACHARUĀ). (DISTRICT, ETAWAH.)

एक मनई-कें दुइ लरिका हते। उन-में-तें छोटे-ने बाप-तें कही ए बाप धन-में-ते जो हमारो हींसा होय सो हमें दै-देउ। तब वा-ने वा-कौं अपनो धनु बाँटि-दओ। कछु बहुत दिन नाहीं भये-एँ की छोटो लरिका सब कछु जोरि-बटोरि-कें पदेस निकरि-गओ और जुआँ लच्चई-में दिन काटत अपनो धनु उड़ाय-भड़ाय-दओ। जब वा-को सब खचु हुय-चुको औरु वा देस-में बड़ो भारी अकालु परो औ बू कंगालु हुइ-गओ तब बू जाय-कें वा मुलिक-कें रहै-य्यन-में-तें एक-के हियाँ रहन लगो जा-नें वा-कौं अपने खेत-में सूअर चरैवे-कौं पठओ॥

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ēk manaī-kẽ dui larikā hatē. Un-mẽ-taĩ chhōṭē-nē
A-certain man-to two sons were. Them-in-from the-younger-by bāp-tẽ kahī, 'ē bāp, dhan-mẽ-tē, jō hamārō hĭsā the-father-to it-was-said, 'O father, property-in-from, which my share hōy, sō hamẽ dai-dēu.' Tab wā-nē wā-kaũ ap^{s}nō dhanu may-be, that to-me give-away.' Then him-by him-to his-own substance bā̃ṭi daō. Kachhu bahut din nāhĩ bhayē-aĩ kī chhōṭō having-divided was-given. Some many days not become-were that the-younger larikā sab-kachhu jōri-baṭōri-kẽ paddēs nikari-gaō aur juā̃ son all-anything collected-having another-country out-went and there luchchaī-mẽ din kāṭat ap^{s}nō dhanu uṛāy-bhaṛāy-daō. Jab bā-kō debauchery-in days passing his-own fortune was-squandered. When him-of sab khachchu huy-chukō auru wā dēs-mẽ baṛō bhārī akālu all expenditure was-completed and that country-in greatly heavy famine parō au bū kaṅgālu hui-gaō tab bū jāy-kẽ wā mulik-kē fell and he poor became then he gone-having that country-of rahaiyyan-mẽ-taĩ ēk-kē hiyā̃ rahan lagō; jā-naĩ bā-kõ ap^{s}nē inhabitants-in-from one-of near to-live began; whom-by him-as-for his-own khēt-mẽ sūar charaibē-kõ paṭhaō.
field-in swine feeding-for it-was-sent.

KANAUJĪ OF SOUTH-WEST ETAWAH.

The dialect spoken in the south-west of Etawah hardly differs from that which prevails in the Pachār tract. The influence of Bhadaurī is felt a little more strongly, and that is all. To this we may attribute the use of bā (and not wā) for the oblique form of the third personal pronoun. To the same influence is due the use of bā (Bhadaurī bā) for the nominative as well as wah. We may also note the use of the Agent case for the subject of an intransitive verb in the past tense. In this case the verb is used impersonally. Thus ōchhē laṛ^{a}kā-nē chalō, the younger son went, literally, by the younger son it was gone. This of course is altogether contrary to the rules of Standard Hindī, but is all the same quite common in this part of India. It is an instance of the preservation of a very old idiom. Compare the Sanskrit tēna chalitam.

[No. 4.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

KANAUJĪ. (SOUTH-WEST OF DISTRICT ETAWAH.)

कोई आदमी-के दो लड़का हते । दोऊ-में-से नन्हें-ने बाप-से कही कि अरे बाप रुपया पैसा-में-से जो मेरो हींसा होय सो मो-कौं देओ । तब बा-कौं हींसा रुपया पैसा बाँट दओ । थोरे दिन भये कि ओछे लड़का-ने सब चीजें जोर-कर परदेस चलो और हुआँ बुरे काम रोज रोज करत रहो। और रुपया पैसा अपनो खोय दओ । जब बा-ने सब कौड़ी पैसा खोय दओ तब परदेस-में भारी काल परो और वह गरीब हुइ-गयो । और वह जाय-के हुअन-के आदमियों-में-से एक-के हियाँ रहन लगो जने बा-को अपने खेतों-में सूअर चराइबे-को पठओ । और बा उन कौंसों-को जो सूअर खात-हते आपौ खायौ चाहत-हतो और कोऊ बा-कौं कुछ नहीं देत-हतो ॥

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Kōī ādᵃmī-kē dō laṛᵃkā hatē. Dōū-mẽ̃-sē nanhẽ̃-nē
A-certain man-of two sons were. The-two-in-from the-younger-by bāp-sē kahī ki, 'arē bāp, rupayā paisā-mẽ̃-sē jō mērō the-father-to it-was-said that, 'O father, rupees pice-in-from what my hĩsā hōy sō mō-kõ̃ dēō.' Tab bā-kõ̃ hĩsā rupayā paisā bā̃ṭ-daō.
share may-be that me-to give.' Then his share rupees pice was-divided.
Thōrē din bhayē ki ōchhē laṛᵃkā-nē sab chījẽ̃ jōr-kar
A-few days became that the-younger son-by all things collected-having par-dēs chalō aur huã̄ burē kām rōj-rōj karat-rahō.
a-foreign-country-to it-was-started and there evil deed daily he-doing-was.
Aur rupayā paisā apᵃnō khōy-daō. Jab bā-nẽ̀ sab kauṛī paisā
And rupees pice his-own was-lost. When him-by all cowries pice khōy-daō, tab par-dēs-mẽ̃ bhārī kāl parō, aur wah garīb was-lost, then the-foreign-country-in heavy famine fell, and he poor hui-gayō. Aur wah jāy-kē huan-kē ādᵃmiyõ̃-mẽ̃-sē ēk-kē hiyã̄ rahan became. And he gone-having there-of men-in-from one-of near to-live lagō, jā-nē bā-kō apᵃnē khētõ̃-mẽ̃ sūar charāibē-kō paṭhaō. Aur began, whom-by him his-own fields-in swine feeding-for it-was-sent. And bā un kõsõ-kō jō sūar khāt-hatē āpau khāyau chāhat-hatō.

he those husks which swine eating-were himself-also to-eat wishing-was.
Aur kōū bā-kõ kuchh nahĩ dēt-hatō.
And anybody him anything not giving-was.

KANAUJĪ OF HARDOI.

Crossing the Ganges from the district of Farukhabad we come to Hardoi, the only western district of Oudh of which the language is not Awadhī. Here it is everywhere Kanaujī. Local authorities recognise three or four sub-varieties, but the differences are merely as to the amount of Awadhī with which the Kanaujī is mixed.

The number of speakers of Kanaujī in Hardoi is estimated at 1,030,500. The district has to its east Unao and Lucknow, and to its north Sitapur and Kheri, in all of which the language is Awadhī. It is hence natural to expect a certain infusion of that form of speech in the local Kanaujī. This infusion varies from place to place, but is generally very slight in amount. Only in the extreme east of the district, in Taḥṣīl Sandila and the neighbourhood is the infusion so strong as to form a mixed dialect requiring separate treatment. We may estimate the number of speakers of each of the two forms of Kanaujī employed in Hardoi as follows :—

Standard Kanaujī slightly mixed with Awadhī	880,500
Mixed dialect of Sandila	150,000
TOTAL .	1,030,500

The mixed dialect of Sandila will not be considered here. It will be found dealt with, together with other mixed dialects, on p. 411 ff. At present I confine myself to the Kanaujī of the rest of the district. As a sample I give an abstract of the main story of the Parable of the Prodigal Son, which illustrates the dialect of the centre and south of the district. This is locally known as Bangrahī from the name (Bangar) of one of the Parganas in which it is spoken. Illustration of the dialects of other parts of the district (except Sandila) is quite unnecessary.

We may trace the influence of Awadhī in the rare use of the typical Kanaujī termination u of weak masculine nouns; in the employment of tehi as the oblique form of sō, that; and in the locative par-dēsaï (Awadhī par-dēsahi), in a foreign country.

Note also the way in which the letter i is added to a word ending in a consonant, as in khusāmadi, entreaty. This addition of i is common in the Kanaujī spoken north of the Ganges, and in Cawnpore.

[No. 5.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

KANAUJĪ. (CENTRAL AND SOUTH-WEST OF DISTRICT HARDOI.)

एक आदमी-के दुइ लरिका हते । तेहि-माँ-ते जो छोटो लरिका हतो सो अपने बाप-पर कहन लागो कि जो कुछु रुपया हमारे हींसा-को होइ सो बाँटि देउ । तब बाप-ने वहि-के हींसा-को रुपया बाँटि दओ । तब छोटो लरिका अपनो हींसा लेइ-के परदेसइ चलो-गओ और हुआँ सब रुपया कुचाल-में उड़ाइ दओ । और जब बनाइ-के खरखीन हुइ-गओ तब कुछु दिनन-के पीछू वहि देस-माँ अकाल परो । तब वहु केहु बड़े अमीर-के दुआरे गओ । तब वहि-ने वहि-का खेतन-माँ सुअरी चरैबे-पर करि दओ । जब वहु हुअ-ऊँ ब्याकुल भओ तब फिरि अपने घर लौटि आओ और अपने बाप-की खुसामदि करी और कहन लागो कि हमारी खता माफु करौ । तब बाप आनंद हुइ-गओ और कसूर माफु करि-दओ ॥

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ēk ādᵃmī-kē dui larikā hatē. Tehi-mã̄-tē jō chhōṭō larikā
One man-of two sons were. Them-in-from who younger son hatō sō apᵃnē bāp-par kahan lāgō ki, 'jō kuchhu rupayā was he his-own father-to to-say began that, 'what anything money hamārē hĩsā-kō hōi sō bā̃ṭi dēu.' Tab bāp-nē wahi-kē my share-of may-be that dividing give.' Then the-father-by him-of hĩsā-kō rupayā bā̃ṭi daō. Tab chhōṭō larikā apᵃnō share-of money dividing was-given. Then the-younger son his-own hĩsā lēi-kē par-dēsaï chalō-gaō, aur huã̄ sab rupayā share taking to-a-foreign-country went-away, and there all money kuchāl-mẽ̃ uṛāi-daō. Aur jab banāi-kē evil-conduct-in was-wasted-away. And when made-having (i.e. very) khar-khīn hui-gaō, tab kuchhu dinan-kē pīchhū wahi-dēs-mã̄ akāl indigent became, then some days-of after that-country-in famine parō. Tab wahu kēhu baṛē amīr-kē duārē gaō. Tab wahi-nē fell. Then he some very rich-man-of at-door went. Then him-by wahi-kā khētan-mã̃ suarī charaibē-par kari-daō. Jab wahu hua-ũ̃ him-to fields-in swine feeding-on it-was-made. When he there-too byākul bhaō tab phiri apᵃnē ghar lauṭi āō, aur distraught became then again his-own house-to returning he-came, and apᵃnē bāp-kī khusāmadi karī, aur kahan lāgō ki, 'hamārī his-own father-of entreaty was-made, and to-say he-began that, 'my khatā māphu karau.' Tab bāp ānand hui-gaō, aur kasūr sin forgiveness make.' Then the-father happy became, and fault māphu kari-daō.

forgiveness was-made.

KANAUJĪ OF SHAHJAHANPUR.

To the west of the districts of Hardoi and Kheri lies the district of Shahjahanpur in the province of Rohilkhand. It is commonly stated that this province has a dialect of its own. This is a mistake. The language of Eastern Rohilkhand is Kanaujī, and that of the west is the same as that of Meerut and Muzaffarnagar, or else Braj Bhākhā.

It will be seen from the following specimen that the dialect of Shahjahanpur is ordinary standard Kanaujī. There are hardly any local peculiarities. We may mention the forms kā, the sign of the accusative-dative ; nẽ, the sign of the agent ; and mã̃ or mahiyã̃, the sign of the locative, as local forms of the case suffixes. The use of ohi instead of uhi for 'him,' is probably due to the influence of the Awadhī of Kheri. We may also notice the tendency to add the vowel i to a word ending in a consonant, as in bādi, after ; dēti, giving, which is characteristic of north Gangetic Kanaujī, and of that of Cawnpore. Finally, note the way in which an intransitive verb can be used impersonally with the subject in the agent case, as in larikā-nẽ chalō, it was gone by the son ; i.e. the son went.

The specimen consists of the first few lines of the Parable of the Prodigal Son.

[No. 6.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

KANAUJĪ. (DISTRICT, SHAHJAHANPUR.)

एक आदमी-के दुइ लरिका हते। उन-मेँ-से छोटे-नेँ बाप-से कही कि हे बाप माल-को हीँसा जो हम-का मिलिबो चहियेँ सो हम-का दै-देउ। तब ओहि-नेँ मालु उन-का बाँटि दओ। और थोरे दिन बादि छोटे लरिका-नेँ सबु एक-हाओ करि-के एक दूर-के देस-को चलो और हुँआँ अपनो मालु कुचालि-मेँ उड़ाइ-दओ। और जब सबु खर्चु हुइ-गओ तब ओहि देस-मेँ बड़ो अक्काल परो और वहु बनाइ-के सखत हाल होन लगो। तब ओहि देस-के एक भागमान-के हियाँ जाइ लगो। ओहि-नेँ उसै अपने खेतन-महियाँ सूकर चराओन-क पठओ। और ओहि-को मनु भओ कि उन बकलन-से जो सूकर खात-हैँ हम-हूँ अपनो पेट भरि लेहिँ कि कोई ओहि-का नाहीँ देति हतो॥

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ēk ādᵃmī-kē dui larikā hatē. Un-mẽ-sē chhōṭē-nẽ
One man-of two sons were. Them-in-from the-younger-by bāp-sē kahī ki, 'hē bāp, māl-kō hĩsā jō ham-kā the-father-to it-was-said that, 'O father, property-of share which me-to milibō chahiyẽ, sō ham-kā dai-dēu.' Tab ohi-nẽ mālu to-be-got is-proper, that me-to give-away.' Then him-by the-property un-kā bãṭi daō. Aur thōrē din bādi chhōṭē them-to having-divided was-given. And a-few days after the-younger larikā-nẽ sabu ēk-hāō kari-kē ēk dūr-kē dēs-kō chalō son-by all in-one-place made-having a distant country-for it-was-started aur hũã apᵃnō mālu kuchāli-mẽ uṛāi-daō. Aur jab and there his-own property evil-conduct-in was-wasted-away. And when sabu kharchu hui-gaō tab ohi dēs-mã baṛō akkāl parō aur all expenditure became then that country-in great famine fell and wahu banāi-kē sakhat hāl hōn lagō. Tab he made-having (i.e. extremely) hard condition to-be began. Then ohi dēs-kē ēk bhāgᵃmān-kē hiyã jāi lagō. Ohi-nẽ usai that country-of one rich-man-of near having-gone he-joined. Him-by him-as-for apⁿnē	khētan-mahiyã̃	sūkar	charāon-ka	paṭhaō.	Aur	ohi-kō	manu

his-own	fields-in	swine	feeding-for	it-was-sent.	And	his	mind
bhaō	ki,	‘un	bakⁿlan-sē	jō	sūkar	khāt-haĩ	ham-hũ̃	apⁿnō became	that	‘those	husks-with	which	swine	eating-are	I-too	my-own
pēṭ	bhari-lēhĩ,’	ki	kōī	uni-kā	nāhĩ̃	dētī-hatō.
stomach	will-fill,’	because	anybody	him-to	not	giving-was.

KANAUJĪ OF PILIBHIT.

The District of Pilibhit, to the north of Shahjahanpur, was originally a portion of Bareilly. The dialect of the latter district is Braj Bhākhā. That of Pilibhit is Kanaujī in the main, but with here and there a Braj inflexion. For instance while the Kanaujī thō, was, is quite common, we have also the Braj hō. Thus, in a witness's deposition received from Pilibhit, we have baiyār-bānī sōat-hī, my women folk were sleeping, and again, a few sentences lower down, wā-nē mō-kō bulāō-thō, she had called me. With the exception of these few borrowed Braj expressions the language is the same as the Kanaujī of Shahjahanpur, and it is unnecessary to give any specimen of it.

MIXED DIALECTS.

Kanaujī of Cawnpore.

The district of Cawnpore has Farukhabad and Etawah, of which the language is Kanaujī, to its north-west. To its east, across the Ganges, lies the district of Unao, in which Eastern Hindī is spoken. To its south-east, in the Doab between the Ganges and the Jamna we have Fatehpur, of which the language is also Eastern Hindī. To its south, across the Jamna, in order from east to west are Hamirpur and Jalaun, of both of which the dialect is Bundēlī. Being thus surrounded by three different dialects, we may naturally accept that the local form of speech is a mixed one, and so it is. It is everywhere based on Kanaujī, but is generally mixed with Eastern Hindī. Eastern Hindī prevails on both banks of the Jamna as far as the common boundary of Hamirpur and Jalaun. Here it is nowhere pure, and is known as Tirhārī, or the language of the River Bank. In Hamirpur it is infected with Bundēlī, but is still based on Eastern Hindī. In Fatehpur, to the south-east of Cawnpore, it also preserves its Eastern Hindī character, but in Cawnpore, the infusion of that language is weaker than elsewhere, and the Tirhārī is like the Kanaujī of the rest of the district, only more strongly infected with Eastern Hindī. I therefore do not class it under the latter language as has been done with the Tirhārī of Hamirpur, Banda, and Fatehpur, but consider it as a form of Kanaujī. The following are the estimated numbers of the speakers of Kanaujī and Tirhārī in Cawnpore :—

Kanaujī	1,090,000
Tirhārī	40,000
Total .	1,130,000

The following specimen of the Kanaujī of Cawnpore is a folktale. I here give a brief sketch of the chief peculiarities of the dialect which differentiate it from Standard Kanaujī.

In pronunciation, we may note the way in which ē optionally becomes yā, e optionally becomes ya, ō optionally becomes wā, and o optionally becomes wa. Thus, we have ēku or yāku, one: jehi or jyahi, this (obl. form) ; tōrō or twārō, thy ; and tohi or twahi, thee. These peculiarities also occur in Eastern Hindī.

Nouns are declined as in ordinary Kanaujī. The termination u of weak nouns, as ghar or gharu, a house, is very common. The sign of the accusative-dative is kō, kaihã̂ or (Eastern Hindī) kā. Nitin is 'for.' The instrumental-ablative has sē, tē, or tẽ̂. The genitive has the standard Kanaujī kō (kē, ki), and also the Eastern Hindī forms kēr or kyār (not changing for form or gender), and kērō or kyārō (obl. -rē, fem. -ri). The locative has mẽ̃, mã̃, or (Eastern Hindī) mahã̃, in ; par, pai, on ; lõ̃, up to.

The Pronouns are,—

1st person,—maĩ̃, I ; mōrō, my ; ham, hamu, or hamaĩ̃, we ; hamᵉrō, or hamārō, our.

2nd person,—tū, thou ; tōrō, thy ; tum or tumh, you ; tumhᵉrō or tumhārō, your.

3rd person,—wah, wuh, wahu (often written bahu), or wau (often written bau), he, that ; obl. sing. wahi, wuhi, wohi, or ui ; agent, wahĩ̃, wuhĩ̃, wohĩ̃, or uĩ̃ ; Nom. plur. wē, ui ; obl. plur. un.

This,—ī, yah (or jah), yahu (or jahu), or yau (or jau); obl. sing. ī, yahi, jahi, or jyahi; agent, yahī, jahī, or jyahī; nom. plur. yē, jē; obl. plur. in.

In all the above, especially in the first and second persons, the plural is commonly used for the singular.

The Relative pronoun is jaunu, etc., and the Interrogative kaunu, etc., as in standard Kanaujī. 'What' is kāhā, obl. kāhē.

The Verb is irregular in the first person plural, which may optionally end in anu. This seems to be a combination of the Eastern Hindī -an, with the favourite Kanaujī termination -u. The Verb substantive is thus conjugated :—

	Present.		Past.
	Sing.	Plur.	Sing.	Plur.
1.	haũ	hanu or haĩ	rahaũ	rahanu or rahaĩ
2.	hai	hau	rahai	rahau.
3.	hai	haĩ	rahai	rahaĩ.

We sometimes find present forms borrowed from Eastern Hindī, such as ham āhinu (for ham āhen), we are.

For the past we have also the typical Kanaujī thō, and I have met one or two instances of forms like maĩ thõ, I was. Rahĩ (plur. fem. of rahō) is used to mean 'she remained.'

In the Active Verb, the infinitive is māran, māranu, mār^{a}nō, mārab, mārabu, or mar^{a}bō. The Present Participle is mārat, māratu, or mār^{a}tō. In three or four instances I have met a masculine form mārati. Thus larikā āwati-hai, the boy is coming; tū saugandh khāti-hai auru tayai-kā bāpu banāwati-hai, thou art taking an oath and making only the devotee your father. Similar additions of i are found in other forms of Kanaujī used north of the Ganges. The Past Participle is mārō. The Conjunctive Participle is māri-kai.

The Present tense, 'I strike,' or 'I may strike' is—sing. māraũ, mārai, mārai; plur. māranu or māraĩ, mārau, māraĩ. Mārat-haũ, etc., is also common.

The Future is marihaũ, marihai, marihai; marihanu or marihaĩ, marihau, marihaĩ. Note that the first vowel is shortened, as in Eastern Hindī, owing to its falling in the penultimate. Here and there I have met instances of the Eastern Hindī future, of which the typical note is the letter b. Thus, ham maribē, I shall strike.

In other respects, the conjugation of the verb follows standard Kanaujī. Sometimes we meet stray Eastern Hindī forms, such as dīnheni, he (or they) gave.

[No. 7.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

KANAUJĪ (MIXED DIALECT). (DISTRICT, CAWNPORE.)

याकैं हते राजा वीर विकरमाजीत। तिन-के याक रानी रहै। उइ राजा औ रानी-माँ वाजी लागी कि याक चिरैया वोलति-रहै। तौन राजा तौ कहत-रहैं कि हंस वोलतु-है। औ रानी कहती-हतीं कि कौनवाँ वोलतु-हुइहै। ऐसी हुज्जत रहै कि वहै चिरैया पेंड़े-पै-से उड़ि भाजी। तौ कौनवै निकसो। तव तो सरमाय-कै राजा रानी-कइहाँ निकारि दीन्हेनि। रानी-के उइ राजा-ते अढ़ाई महिना-को औधान हतो। उइ रानी-का चलत चलत याक मड़ैया मिली। तौन तया-केरी मड़ैया कहावति-हती। तौने-माँ जाय-कै रहौं-जाय औरु मड़ैया-माँ टटिया लगाय-लीन्हेनि। जव थोरी विरियाँ-माँ तया उइ मड़ैया-के नेरे आये तव कहन लागे कि ई मड़ैया-माँ लरिकिनी होय तौ लरिकिनी औ लरिका होय तौ लरिका होय। तव वहि-माँ-से उइ रानी-ने जवावु दओ कि हम फलानी आहिनु। औरु अपनु सव विथा तया-से कहि-डारी। तया वहि-की लरिकिनी-ही-की नाईं रच्छा कीन्हेनि॥

फिरि नवयें महिना-माँ उइ रानी-के एकु लरिका भओ। जव वहु लरिका वड़ो भओ तव औरे लरिकवन-माँ खेलिवे-का जान लागो। औरु जव अनवाटु करै तव उइ लरिकन-ते सौगंधैं खाय कि हम ऐसो नाहीं करो-है। तव सव लरिकवा वहि-के धौलैं मारैं। तव फिरि हर दाँय तयै-की सौगंध खाय औ कहै कि हम अनवाटु नाहीं करो-है। आखिर-का उइ सव लरिकवा वहि-से कहैं कि अपने वाप-को नाउँ वताव। तव वहि-ने तयै-को नाउँ वताय-दओ। तव फिरि उइ लरिकवा वहि-से कहैं कि धा ससुर तयै-की सौगंध खाति-है औरु तयै-का वापु वनावति-है औरु वैसे तौ तया-केरो गुलामु है। तव फिरि महैं सरमाय-करि-कै अपनी मैया-से वापु-को नाउँ पूँछो। तव वहि-की मैया-ने वापु-को नाउँ विकरमाजीत वताय दओ। दुसरे दिना विकरमाजीत-की सौगंध खाई। तव उइ लरिकवन वहि-से कहो कि ससुर-ऊ औरौ कव-हूँ विकरमाजीत-को नाउँ सुनो-है कि अव-हीं जानत-हौ। तव

फिरि सरमाय-गओ औरु अपनी मैया-से कहो-जाय कि हम अपने बाप-के तीरा जैबे औरु कहि-कै चलो-गओ ॥

जाय-कै उइ देस-माँ पहुँचो-जाय । हुवाँ याक कुआँ-माँ पानी भरतौ-हतौं । उन-ते कहो कि हम-का पानी पियाय-देउ । उइ कहन लागीं कि पियाय देती-हनु । तब फिरि वहि-ने कहो कि हम-का जल्दी पियाय देव । तौ उइ कहन लागीं ऐसे जल्दी होय तौ कुआँ-माँ कूदि परौ । तब कूदि परो । तौ वहि-माँ देखो कि याक वहि-माँ बहुते नीकी लरिकिनी दैन्तुर-केरी बैठी-है । तौन दैन्तुर बारा कोस दूंगे औरु बारा कोस उंगे मानुस-केरी महँक तक नाहीं राखति-रहै । तौन मानुस-की महँक पाय-कर अपनी लरिकिनी-से पूँछो कि ह्याँ मानुस-की महँक जानि-परति-है । लेकिन वहि-ने भुनगा बनाय-कै लुकाय राखो । जब दैन्तुर चलो-गओ तब भेदै-भेद उइ लरिका-ने लरिकिनी-ते उइ दैन्तुर-केरे मरिबे-की जुगुति पूँछि-लई औ ओही जुगुति-ते वहि-का मारि-डारो औरु वहि-का ओही कोनवाँ से ऐंचि लाओ औरु वहि-के साथ बिआह करि-लओ औरु बिकरमाजीत-को लरिका बनि-गओ ॥ जा भैया अढ़ाई मानिक-केरी कथा कहावति है ॥

[No. 7.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

KANAUJĪ (MIXED DIALECT). (DISTRICT, CAWNPORE.)

Yākaĩ hatē Rājā Bīr Bikarᵃmājīt. Tin-kē yāk
One-only there-was King the-mighty Vikramāditya. Him-of one Rānī rahai. Ūi Rājā au Rānī-mā̃ bājī lāgī ki yāk Queen was. That King and Queen-in a-wager was-made that one chiraiyā bōlati-rahai. Taun Rājā tau kahat-rahaĩ ki, bird calling-was. Therefore the-King on-the-one-hand saying-was that,
'hans bōlatu-hai,' au Rānī kahatī-hatī ki, 'kăŭnᵃwā̃ bōlatu-
'a-swan calling-is,' and the-Queen saying-was that, 'a-crow callinghuihai.' Aisī hujjat rahai ki wahai chiraiyā pē̃ṛē-pai-sē will-be.' Such discussion was when that-very bird the-tree-on-from uṛi bhājī, tau kăŭnawai nikᵃsō. Tab tō flying departed, then a-crow-verily it-turned-out-to-be. Then indeed sarᵃmāy-kai Rājā Rānī-kaĩhā̃ nikāri-dīnheni. Rānī-kē ui become-ashamed-having the-King the-Queen turned-out. The-Queen-of that Rājā-tē aṛhāī mahinā-kō audhān hatō. Ui Rānī-kā chalat
King-by two-and-a-half months-of pregnancy was. That Queen-to walking chalat yāk maṛaiyā milī. Taun tayā-kērī maṛaiyā kahāwatiwalking one hut was-found. That the-devotee-of hut being-calledhatī. Taunē-mā̃ jāy-kai rahĩ-jāy, auru maṛaiyā-mā̃ was. That-very-in gone-having she-remained-having-gone, and the-hut-in ṭaṭiyā lagāy-līnheni. Jab thōrī biriyā̃-mā̃ tayā ui maṛaiyā-the-screen fastened. When little time-in the-devotee that hut-kē nērē āyē, tab kahan lāgē ki 'ī maṛaiyā-mā̃ larikinī of near came, then to-say he-began that 'this hut-in (if-)a-girl hōy, tau larikinī; au larikā hoy, tau larikā hōy.' Tab be, then a-girl; and (if-)a-boy be, then a-boy will-be.' Then wahi-mā̃-sē ui Rānī-nē jawābu daō ki, 'ham phalānī āhinu,' that-in-from that Queen-by answer was-given that, 'I so-and-so am,' auru apanu sab bithā tayā-sē kahi-ḍārī. Tayā wahi-kī and her-own all suffering the-devotee-to was-told. The-devotee her-of larikinī-hī-kī nāĩ rachchhā kīnheni.
a-daughter-even-of like protection made.

फिरि सरमाय-गओ औरु अपनी मैया-से कहो-जाय कि हम अपने बाप-के तीरा जैबे औरु कहि-कै चलो-गओ ॥

जाय-कै उइ देस-माँ पहुँचो-जाय । हुवाँ याक कुआँ-माँ पानी भरतो-हतीं । उन-ते कहो कि हम-का पानी पियाय-देउ । उइ कहन लागीं कि पियाय देती-हनु । तब फिरि वहि-ने कहो कि हम-का जल्दी पियाय देव । तौ उइ कहन लागीं ऐसे जल्दी होय तौ कुआँ-माँ कूदि परौ । तब कूदि परो । तौ वहि-माँ देखो कि याक वहि-माँ बहुतै नीकी लरिकिनी दैन्तुर-केरी बैठी-है । तौन दैन्तुर बारा कोस दूंगे औरु बारा कोस उंगे मानुस-केरी महँक तक नाहीं राखति-रहै । तौन मानुस-की महँक पाय-कर अपनी लरिकिनी-से पूँछो कि ह्याँ मानुस-की महँक जानि-परति-है । लेकिन वहि-ने भुनगा बनाय-कै लुकाय राखो । जब दैन्तुर चलो-गओ तब भेदै-भेद उइ लरिका-ने लरिकिनी-ते उइ दैन्तुर-केरे मरिबे-की जुगुति पूँछि-लई औ ओही जुगुति-ते वहि-का मारि-डारो औरु वहि-का ओही कोनवाँ से ऐंचि लाओ औरु वहि-के साथ बिआह करि-लओ औरु बिकरमाजीत-को लरिका बनि-गओ ॥ जा भैया अढ़ाई मानिक-केरी कथा कहावति है ॥

[No. 7.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

KANAUJĪ (MIXED DIALECT). (DISTRICT, CAWNPORE.)

Yākaĩ hatē Rājā Bīr Bikarᵃmājīt. Tin-kē yāk
One-only there-was King the-mighty Vikramāditya. Him-of one Rānī rahai. Ui Rājā au Rānī-mã̃ bājī lāgī ki yāk Queen was. That King and Queen-in a-wager was-made that one chiraiyā bōlati-rahai. Taun Rājā tau kahat-rahaĩ ki, bird calling-was. Therefore the-King on-the-one-hand saying-was that,
'hans bōlatu-hai,' au Rānī kahatī-hatī ki, 'kăŭnᵃwã̃ bōlatu-
'a-swan calling-is,' and the-Queen saying-was that, 'a-crow callinghuihai.' Aisī hujjat rahai ki wahai chiraiyā pẽṛē-pai-sē will-be.' Such discussion was when that-very bird the-tree-on-from uṛi bhājī, tau kăŭnawai nikᵃsō. Tab tō flying departed, then a-crow-verily it-turned-out-to-be. Then indeed sarᵃmāy-kai Rājā Rānī-kaïhã̃ nikāri-dīnheni. Rānī-kē ui become-ashamed-having the-King the-Queen turned-out. The-Queen-of that Rājā-tē aṛhāī mahinā-kō audhān hatō. Ui Rānī-kā chalat
King-by two-and-a-half months-of pregnancy was. That Queen-to walking chalat yāk maṛaiyā milī. Taun tayā-kērī maṛaiyā kahāwatiwalking one hut was-found. That the-devotee-of hut being-calledhatī. Taunē-mã̃ jāy-kai rahĩ-jāy, auru maṛaiyā-mã̃ was. That-very-in gone-having she-remained-having-gone, and the-hut-in ṭaṭiyā lagāy-līnheni. Jab thōrī biriyã̃-mã̃ tayā ui maṛaiyā-
the-screen fastened. When little time-in the-devotee that hut-kē nērē āyē, tab kahan lāgē ki 'ī maṛaiyā-mã̃ larikinī of near came, then to-say he-began that 'this hut-in (if-)a-girl
hōy, tau larikinī; au larikā hoy, tau larikā hōy.' Tab be, then a-girl; and (if-)a-boy be, then a-boy will-be.' Then wahi-mã̃-sē ui Rānī-nē jawābu daō ki, 'ham phalānī āhinu,' that-in-from that Queen-by answer was-given that, 'I so-and-so am,' auru apanu sab bithā tayā-sē kahi-ḍārī. Tayā wahi-kī and her-own all suffering the-devotee-to was-told. The-devotee her-of larikinī-hī-kī nãĩ rachchhā kīnheni.
a-daughter-even-of like protection made.

Phiri nawayẽ mahīnā-mã̃ ui rānī-kē ēku larikā bhaō. Jab Again ninth month-in that Queen-to one son was-born. When wahu larikā baṛō bhaō, tab aurē larikawan-mã̃ khelibē-kā jān that boy big became, then other children-among playing-for to-go lāgō. Auru jab anᵃwādu karai, tab ui larikan-tē he-began. And when a-wickedness he-used-to-do, then those boys-to saugandhaĩ khāy ki, 'ham aisō nāhĩ karō-hai.' Tab oaths he-used-to-eat that, 'me(-by) such not done-has-been.' Then sab larikawā wahi-kē dhaulaĩ māraĩ. Tab phiri har dãy all children him cuffs used-to-strike. Then again every time tayai-kī saugandh khāy au kahai ki, 'ham
the-devotee-even-of oath he-used-to-eat and used-to-say that, 'me(-by) anᵃwādu nāhĩ karō-hai.' Ākhir-kā ui sab larikawā wahi-sē wickedness not done-has-been.' At-last those all children him-to kahaĩ ki, 'apᵃnē bāp-kō nāũ batāw.' Tab wahi-nē used-to-say that, 'thy-own father-of name tell.' Then him-by tayai-kō nāũ batāy-daō. Tab phiri ui larikawā wahi-sē the-devotee-even-of name was-told. Then again those children him-to kahaĩ ki, 'dhā, sasur, tayai-kī saugandh used-to-say that, 'away, father-in-law, the-devotee-even-of(-on) oath khāti-hai auru tayai-kā bāpu banāwati-hai. Auru waisē (thou-)eating-art and the-devotee father (thou-)making-art. And thus tau tayā-kērō gulāmu hai.' Tab phiri mahaĩ indeed the-devotee-of slave thou-art.' Then again very-much sarᵃmāy-kari-kai apᵃnī maiyā-sē bāpu-kō nāũ pũchhō.
become-ashamed-having his-own mother-from father-of name was-asked.
Tab wahi-kī maiyā-nē bāpu-kō nāũ Bikarᵃmā-jīt batāy-daō.
Then his mother-by the-father-of name Vikramāditya was-told.
Dusᵃrē dinā Bikarᵃmājīt-kī saugandh khāī. Tab ui
The-second on-day Vikramāditya-of oath was-eaten. Then those larikawan wahi-sē kahō ki, 'sasur-ū, aurau kab-hũ
(by-)children him-to it-was-said that, 'father-in-law, other-also ever Bikarᵃmājīt-kō nāũ sunō-hai, ki ab-hĩ jānat-hau.' Tab phiri Vikramāditya-of name was-heard, or now knowing-are-you.' Then again sarmāy-gaō, auru apᵃnī maiyā-sē kahō jāy ki, 'ham
he-was-ashamed, and his-own mother-to it-was-said having-gone that, 'I apᵃnē bāp-kē tīrā jaibē,' auru kahi-kai chalō-gaō.
my-own father-of near will-go,' and said-having he-went-away.

Jāy-kai ui dēs-mã̃ pahũchō-jāy. Huwã̃ yāk kuã̃-mã̃ Gone-having that country-in he-arrived-going. There one well-in pānī bharᵃtī-hatĩ. Un-tē kahō ki, 'ham-kā pānī water (women-)drawing-were. Them-to it-was-said that, 'me water

piyāy-dēu.' Ui kahan lāgī̃ ki, 'piyāy-dētī-hanu.' Tab give-to-drink.' They to-say began that, 'giving-to-drink-we-are.' Then phiri wahi-nē kahō ki, 'ham-kā jaldī piyāy-dēw.' Tau ui again him-by it-was-said that, 'me-to soon give-to-drink.' Then they kahan lāgī̃, 'aisai jaldī hōy, tau kuā̃-mā̃ kūdi parau.'
to-say began, 'such haste (if-)there-be, then well-into jumping fall.'
Tab kūdi parō. Tau wahi-mā̃ dēkhō ki yāk wahi-mā̃ Then jumping he-fell. Then that-in it-was-seen that one that-in bahutai nīkī larikinī daintur-kērī baiṭhī-hai. Taun daintur bārā very-indeed beautiful daughter ogre-of seated-is. That ogre twelve kōs iṅgē auru bārā kōs uṅgē mānus-kērī mahāk tak kōs on-this-side and twelve kōs on-that-side man-of smell even nāhī̃ rākhati-rahai. Taun mānus-kī mahāk pāy-kar apᵃnī larikinīnot keeping-was. Him(-by) man-of smell finding his-own daughtersē pū̃chhō ki, 'hyā̃ mānus-kī mahāk jāni-parati-hai.' Lēkin from it-was-asked that, 'here man-of smell felt-is.' But wahi-nē bhunᵃgā banāy-kai lukāy rākhō. Jab daintur her-by a-mosquito made-having having-concealed was-kept. When demon chalō gaō tab bhēdai-bhēd ui larikā-nē larikinī-tē ui went away then secret-by-secret that boy-by the-girl-from that daintur-kērē maribē-kī juguti pū̃chhi-laī. Au ōhī juguti-tē demon-of the-killing-of scheme was-asked. And that-very scheme-by wahi-kā māri-ḍārō, auru wahi-kā ōhī konᵃwā̃-sē aī̃chi-lāō, him it-was-killed, and her that-very well-from he-dragged-out, auru wahi-kē sāth biāh kari-laō, auru Bikarᵃmājīt-kō larikā and her-of with marriage he-did, and Vikramāditya-of son bani-gaō.
became.

Jā bhaiyā 'aṛhāī mānik-kērī kathā' kahāwati-hai.
This story 'two-and-a-half gem-of story' being-called-is.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

Once upon a time the mighty Vikramāditya was king. He had a queen, and one day they had a dispute about a bird they heard singing. The king said it was a swan, and the queen said that she thought it was probably a crow. While they were discussing the matter, the bird flew off the tree on which it was sitting, and it turned out to be a crow after all. The king was so ashamed at being put in the wrong that he turned the queen out of doors, although she was two and a half months gone with child by him.

Phiri nawayẽ mahīnā-mã̃ ui rānī-kē ēku larikā bhaō. Jab Again ninth month-in that Queen-to one son was-born. When wahu larikā baṛō bhaō, tab aurē larikawan-mã̃ khelibē-kā jān
that boy big became, then other children-among playing-for to-go lāgō. Auru jab anᵃwādu karai, tab ui larikan-tē
he-began. And when a-wickedness he-used-to-do, then those boys-to saugandhaĩ khāy ki, ‘ham aisō nāhĩ karō-hai.’ Tab oaths he-used-to-eat that, ‘me(-by) such not done-has-been.’ Then sab larikawā wahi-kē dhaulaĩ māraĩ. Tab phiri har dã̃y all children him cuffs used-to-strike. Then again every time
tayai-kī saugandh khāy au kahai ki, ‘ham
the-devotee-even-of oath he-used-to-eat and used-to-say that, ‘me(-by) anᵃwādu nāhĩ karō-hai.’ Ākhir-kā ui sab larikawā wahi-sē wickedness not done-has-been.’ At-last those all children him-to kahaĩ ki, ‘apᵃnē bāp-kō nāũ batāw.’ Tab wahi-nē used-to-say that, ‘thy-own father-of name tell.’ Then him-by tayai-kō nāũ batāy-daō. Tab phiri ui larikawā wahi-sē the-devotee-even-of name was-told. Then again those children him-to kahaĩ ki, ‘dhā, sasur, tayai-kī saugandh
used-to-say that, ‘away, father-in-law, the-devotee-even-of(-on) oath
khāti-hai auru tayai-kā bāpu banāwati-hai. Auru waisē (thou-)eating-art and the-devotee father (thou-)making-art. And thus tau tayā-kērō gulāmu hai.’ Tab phiri mahaĩ
indeed the-devotee-of slave thou-art.’ Then again very-much sarᵃmāy-kari-kai apᵃnī maiyā-sē bāpu-kō nāũ pũchhō.
become-ashamed-having his-own mother-from father-of name was-asked.
Tab wahi-kī maiyā-nē bāpu-kō nāũ Bikarᵃmā-jīt batāy-daō.
Then his mother-by the-father-of name Vikramāditya was-told.
Dusᵃrē dinā Bikarᵃmājīt-kī saugandh khāī. Tab ui
The-second on-day Vikramāditya-of oath was-eaten. Then those larikawan wahi-sē kahō ki, ‘sasur-ū, aurau kab-hũ
(by-)children him-to it-was-said that, ‘father-in-law, other-also ever Bikarᵃmājīt-kō nāũ sunō-hai, ki ab-hĩ jānat-hau.’ Tab phiri
Vikramāditya-of name was-heard, or now knowing-are-you.’ Then again
sarmāy-gaō, auru apᵃnī maiyā-sē kahō jāy ki, ‘ham
he-was-ashamed, and his-own mother-to it-was-said having-gone that, ‘I apᵃnē bāp-kē tīrā jaibē,’ auru kahi-kai chalō-gaō.
my-own father-of near will-go,’ and said-having he-went-away.

Jāy-kai ui dēs-mã̃ pahũchō-jāy. Huwã̃ yāk kuã̃-mã̃ Gone-having that country-in he-arrived-going. There one well-in pānī bharᵃtī-hatĩ. Un-tẽ kahō ki, ‘ham-kā pānī water (women-)drawing-were. Them-to it-was-said that, ‘me water

piyāy-dēu.' Ui kahan lāgī ki, 'piyāy-dētī-hanu.' Tab give-to-drink.' They to-say began that, 'giving-to-drink-we-are.' Then phiri wahi-nē kahō ki, 'ham-kā jaldī piyāy-dēw.' Tau ui again him-by it-was-said that, 'me-to soon give-to-drink.' Then they kahan lāgī, 'aisai jaldī hōy, tau kuã̄-mã̄ kūdi parau.'
to-say began, 'such haste (if-)there-be, then well-into jumping fall.'
Tab kūdi parō. Tau wahi-mã̄ dēkhō ki yāk wahi-mã̄ Then jumping he-fell. Then that-in it-was-seen that one that-in bahutai nīkī larikinī daintur-kērī baiṭhī-hai. Taun daintur bārā very-indeed beautiful daughter ogre-of seated-is. That ogre twelve kōs iṅgē auru bārā kōs uṅgē mānus-kērī mahãk tak kōs on-this-side and twelve kōs on-that-side man-of smell even nāhī rākhati-rahai. Taun mānus-kī mahãk pāy-kar apᵃnī larikinīnot keeping-was. Him(-by) man-of smell finding his-own daughtersē pũchhō ki, 'hyã̄ mānus-kī mahãk jāni-parati-hai.' Lēkin from it-was-asked that, 'here man-of smell felt-is.' But wahi-nē bhunᵃgā banāy-kai lukāy rākhō. Jab daintur
her-by a-mosquito made-having having-concealed was-kept. When demon chalō gaō tab bhēdai-bhēd ui larikā-nē larikinī-tē ui went away then secret-by-secret that boy-by the-girl-from that daintur-kērē maribē-kī juguti pũchhi-laī. Au ōhī juguti-tē demon-of the-killing-of scheme was-asked. And that-very scheme-by wahi-kā māri-ḍārō, auru wahi-kā ōhī konᵃwã̄-sē aīchi-lāō, him it-was-killed, and her that-very well-from he-dragged-out,
auru wahi-kē sāth biāh kari-laō, auru Bikarᵃmājīt-kō larikā
and her-of with marriage he-did, and Vikramāditya-of son
bani-gaō.
became.

Jā bhaiyā 'aṛhāī mānik-kērī kathā' kahāwati-hai.
This story 'two-and-a-half gem-of story' being-called-is.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

Once upon a time the mighty Vikramāditya was king. He had a queen, and one day they had a dispute about a bird they heard singing. The king said it was a swan, and the queen said that she thought it was probably a crow. While they were discussing the matter, the bird flew off the tree on which it was sitting, and it turned out to be a crow after all. The king was so ashamed at being put in the wrong that he turned the queen out of doors, although she was two and a half months gone with child by him.

She walked on till she came to a hut known as 'the hut of Tayā[1], the devotee.' She went into it and shut the mat door on herself. In a short time the devotee came home and when he found the door shut he said, 'if there's a girl inside, she will be my daughter, and if there's a boy, he will be my son.' Then the queen answered from inside that she was so-and-so, and told him the tale of all her woes, and the devotee took her under his[2] protection as if she were a daughter.

In due course the queen had a son, who grew up and began to play with the other children of the neighbourhood. When he did anything wrong he used, like the other children, to take oath that he had not done it. Then the children would cuff him, and each time he used to swear by the devotee (as the other children swore by their fathers) that he had not done it. At last the children asked what was his father's name. He gave the name of the devotee. 'Away, foul one,[3] you are swearing by the devotee, and making him out to be your father, while you are really his slave.' At this he was much ashamed, and asked his mother who his father was, and she told him that his father's name was Vikramāditya. So next day he swore by Vikramāditya, and, the children said to him, 'foul one, did you ever hear the name of Vikramāditya before, or have you learnt it just now?' At this he was again ashamed and he went to his mother and said, 'I'm going to my father,' and started off.

As he went along he came to his father's country, and found some women drawing water from a well. He asked them to give him to drink, and they said, 'yes, we will.' Then he asked them to give the water quickly, and they replied, 'if you are in such a hurry, you can jump into the well.' So he did jump in, and there he saw a very beautiful ogre's daughter sitting. Now this ogre could not stand the smell of a man if he was even twelve kōs off on this side, or twelve kōs off on that. So he said to his daughter, 'I smell the smell of a man.' But she turned the boy into a mosquito, and so concealed him. Then the ogre went out and the boy asked the damsel all the secrets by which he could devise some scheme for killing him. So he made his scheme and killed the ogre. Then he hauled the damsel out of the well and married her, and became known as the son of Vikramāditya.

This story is known as the 'Tale of the two and a half gems.'

---

[1] Tayā is said to be a local form of tapā, a devotee. It may possibly be a proper name.

[2] Wahi-kī rachchhā kīnhenī, made protection of her.

[3] Sasur, father-in-law, is a low term of abuse.

TIRHĀRĪ OF CAWNPORE.

As explained in the introduction to the preceding specimen, the Tirhārī of Cawnpore is spoken on the banks of the Jamna opposite the district of Hamirpur, by some 40,000 people. Its basis is Kanaujī, but it is much mixed with Eastern Hindī, and also with the form of Bundēlī spoken in East Hamirpur, which we may call Banāpharī.

A few sentences from a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son will show the nature of this dialect. The mixture of speech is purely mechanical. Thus, in one sentence we have the Kanaujī laṛikā, and in the next the Eastern Hindī larikā, a son. We have the Kanaujī kahō, said, and the Bundēlī dīnhōs, gave, līnhōs, took, ḍārōs, threw away. Paṭhaus, sent, is a contraction of the Bundēlī paṭhaōs. Other Eastern Hindī forms are oh, him ; moh, me ; and the oblique plurals janen, persons, kāmen, actions.

[No. 8.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

KANAUJĪ (TIRHĀRĪ). (DISTRICT, CAWNPORE.)

याक मनई-के दुइ लड़िका हते । उन-माँ-ते छोटे लड़िका-ने कहो अपने बाप-तन कि माल-को जौन हींसा मोह-का चहिये वह मोह-का दै-दे। तब बाप–ने उन दूनौं जनेन-का वह मालु अलग-अलग कै दीन। और फिर थोरे दिनन-में जब छोटे लरिका-ने सब मालु इकठौरी कै-लीन्होस तब एक बड़ी दूर-के मुलुक-का चलो और हुन पहुँच-कै सब मालु खराब खराब कामेन-माँ उठाय-डारोस। और फिर जब ओई मुलुक-माँ सूखा परो और वह पिटागेन मरैं लाग तब फिर ओई मुलुक-माँ याक ठिकाने याक तालेबर रहत-रहै। ओ-खी इहाँ चाकरी करैं गा। ओह-ने यह-का सोरियाँ चरावैं अपने खितवा-माँ पठौस ॥

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Yāk manaī-kē dui laṛikā hatē. Un-mã̄-tē chhōṭē laṛikā-nē
One man-of two sons were. Them-in-from the-younger son-by kahō apᵃnē bāp-tan ki, 'māl-kō jaun hĩsā moh-kā chahiyē
it-was-said his-own father-to that, 'property-of which share me-to is-proper wah moh-kā dai-dē.' Tab bāp-nē un dūnaũ janen-kā wah that me-to give-away.' Then the-father-by those both persons-to that mālu alag-alag kai-dīn. Aur phir thōrē dinan-mẽ jab chhōṭē property separate was-made. And again a-few days-in when the-younger larikā-nē sab mālu ik-ṭhauṛī kai-līnhōs, tab ēk baṛī dūr-kē son-by all property one-place was-made, then one very distant muluk-kā chalō, aur hun pahũch-kai sab mālu kharāb kharāb country-to he-started, and there arrived-having all property evil evil kāmen-mã̄ uṭhāy-ḍārōs. Aur phir jab ōī muluk-mã̄ sūkhā parō deeds-in was-squandered. And again when that country-in famine fell aur wah piṭāgen maraĩ lāg tab phir ōī muluk-mã̄ yāk ṭhikānē and he by-belly-fire to-die began then again that country-in one in-place yāk tālēbar rahat-rahai. Ō-khī ihã̄ chākᵃrī karaĩ gā. Oh-nē one rich-man was-living. Him-of near service to-do he-went. Him-by yah-kā soriyã̄ charāwaĩ apᵃnē khitᵃwā-mã̄ paṭhaus.
him swine to-feed his-own fields-in it-was-sent.

THE MIXED DIALECT OF EAST HARDOI.

The principal dialect of the district of Hardoi is Kanaujī slightly mixed with the Awadhī dialect of Eastern Hindī. Specimens of it will be found on pp. 395 ff. In the eastern portion of the district, i.e. in Taḥṣīl Sandila and the neighbourhood, which has on three of its sides the districts of Unao, Lucknow, and Sitapur, all of which are Awadhī speaking. The dialect is, it is true, based on Kanaujī, but is largely mixed with Awadhī. We may estimate that this form of speech is employed by, roughly speaking, 150,000 people.

As an example of this dialect, I give below an abstract of the main story of the Parable of the Prodigal Son, and from this, and from some other materials, I have noted the following peculiarities. In the first place the termination of strong masculine nouns, adjectives, and participles is no longer ō, but is the Awadhī ā. Thus we have ghōṛā, a horse, not ghōṛō; ghōṛē-kā, not ghōṛē-kō, of a horse; hatā (this is a Kanaujī form with an Awadhī termination), not hatō, he was; gawā, gā, not gaō, he went; bhawā, bhā, not bhaō, he became.

In the conjugation of the past tense, we have both the Kanaujī principle of using the past participle alone (mārā, I, thou, he, she, it struck), or else the conjugated form peculiar to Awadhī. Thus, (masculine)—

	Sing.	Plur.
1.	māreũ	mārā.
2.	māris	māreā.
3.	māris	mārin.

The conjugation of the future in Awadhī differs only from that in Kanaujī in the third person singular. In the dialect under consideration the Awadhī custom is followed. Thus (I shall strike)—

	Sing.	Plur.
1.	marihaũ	marihaĩ.
2.	marihai	marihau.
3.	mārī (not marihai)	marihaĩ.

In the specimens we may also note the following miscellaneous Awadhī forms,—kā, as the sign of the accusative-dative: dīnh, the past participle of dēnā, to give: the formation of a verbal noun in aĩ, as in kahaĩ lāg, he began to say.

We may also note the manner in which the letter i is added to words ending in a consonant, as in bādi, after; bar^{a}bādi, ruined. This occurs elsewhere in Hardoi, and has also been pointed out in the case of present participles in Cawnpore.

[No. 8.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

KANAUJĪ (TIRHĀRĪ). (DISTRICT, CAWNPORE.)

याक मनई-के दुइ लड़िका हते । उन-माँ-ते छोटे लड़िका-ने कहो अपने बाप-तन कि माल-को जौन हींसा मोह-का चहिये वह मोह-का दै-दे। तब बाप–ने उन दूनौं जनेन-का वह मालु अलग-अलग कै दीन। और फिर थोरे दिनन-में जब छोटे लरिका-ने सब मालु इकठौरी कै-लीन्होस तब एक बड़ी दूर-के मुलुक-का चलो और हुन पहुँच-कै सब मालु खराब खराब कामेन-माँ उठाय-डारोस। और फिर जब ओई मुलुक-माँ सूखा परो और वह पिटागेन मरैं लाग तब फिर ओई मुलुक-माँ याक ठिकाने याक तालेबर रहत-रहै। ओ-खी इहाँ चाकरी करैं गा। ओह-ने यह-का सोरियाँ चरावैं अपने खितवा-माँ पठौस ॥

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Yāk manaī-kē dui laṛikā hatē. Un-mã̄-tē chhōṭē laṛikā-nē
One man-of two sons were. Them-in-from the-younger son-by kahō apᵃnē bāp-tan ki, 'māl-kō jaun hĩsā moh-kā chahiyē
it-was-said his-own father-to that, 'property-of which share me-to is-proper wah moh-kā dai-dē.' Tab bāp-nē un dūnaũ janen-kā wah that me-to give-away.' Then the-father-by those both persons-to that mālu alag-alag kai-dīn. Aur phir thōrē dinan-mẽ jab chhōṭē property separate was-made. And again a-few days-in when the-younger larikā-nē sab mālu ik-ṭhauṛī kai-līnhōs, tab ēk baṛī dūr-kē
son-by all property one-place was-made, then one very distant
muluk-kā chalō, aur hun pahũch-kai sab mālu kharāb kharāb country-to he-started, and there arrived-having all property evil evil kāmen-mã̄ uṭhāy-ḍārōs. Aur phir jab ōī muluk-mã̄ sūkhā parō deeds-in was-squandered. And again when that country-in famine fell aur wah piṭāgen maraĩ lāg tab phir ōī muluk-mã̄ yāk ṭhikānē
and he by-belly-fire to-die began then again that country-in one in-place yāk tālēbar rahat-rahai. Ō-khī ihã̄ chākᵃrī karaĩ gā. Oh-nē one rich-man was-living. Him-of near service to-do he-went. Him-by yah-kā soriyã̄ charāwaĩ apᵃnē khitᵃwā-mã̄ paṭhaus.
him swine to-feed his-own fields-in it-was-sent.

THE MIXED DIALECT OF EAST HARDOI.

The principal dialect of the district of Hardoi is Kanaujī slightly mixed with the Awadhī dialect of Eastern Hindī. Specimens of it will be found on pp. 395 ff. In the eastern portion of the district, i.e. in Taḥṣīl Sandila and the neighbourhood, which has on three of its sides the districts of Unao, Lucknow, and Sitapur, all of which are Awadhī speaking. The dialect is, it is true, based on Kanaujī, but is largely mixed with Awadhī. We may estimate that this form of speech is employed by, roughly speaking, 150,000 people.

As an example of this dialect, I give below an abstract of the main story of the Parable of the Prodigal Son, and from this, and from some other materials, I have noted the following peculiarities. In the first place the termination of strong masculine nouns, adjectives, and participles is no longer ō, but is the Awadhī ā. Thus we have ghōṛā, a horse, not ghōṛō; ghōṛē-kā, not ghōṛē-kō, of a horse; hatā (this is a Kanaujī form with an Awadhī termination), not hatō, he was; gawā, gā, not gaō, he went; bhawā, bhā, not bhaō, he became.

In the conjugation of the past tense, we have both the Kanaujī principle of using the past participle alone (mārā, I, thou, he, she, it struck), or else the conjugated form peculiar to Awadhī. Thus, (masculine)—

	Sing.	Plur.
1.	māreũ	mārā.
2.	māris	māreā.
3.	māris	mārin.

The conjugation of the future in Awadhī differs only from that in Kanaujī in the third person singular. In the dialect under consideration the Awadhī custom is followed. Thus (I shall strike)—

	Sing.	Plur.
1.	marihaũ	marihaĩ.
2.	marihai	marihau.
3.	mārī (not marihai)	marihaĩ.

In the specimens we may also note the following miscellaneous Awadhī forms,—kā, as the sign of the accusative-dative: dīnh, the past participle of dēnā, to give: the formation of a verbal noun in aĩ, as in kahaĩ lāg, he began to say.

We may also note the manner in which the letter i is added to words ending in a consonant, as in bādi, after; bar[a]bādi, ruined. This occurs elsewhere in Hardoi, and has also been pointed out in the case of present participles in Cawnpore.

[No. 9.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

KANAUJĪ (MIXED DIALECT). (TAHSIL SANDILA, DISTRICT HARDOI.)

एक मनइँ-के दुइ लरिका हते । वहि-माँ-से जौन छोटकवा लरिका हता सो अपने बाप-पर कहैं लाग कि जो हमार हिस्से-का रुपया होई सो हमार बाँटि देव । तब वहि-के बाप-नें बाँटि दीन्ह । रुपया लै-के छोटकवा लरिका कहुँ बिदेस-का चला-गा । हुँआँ अपन सब रुपया बद्-चलनी-माँ खरच कइ-डारेसि औ बनाइ-के बरबादि हुइ-गा । थोरे दिन-के बादि हुँआँ सूखा परि-गा । फिरि वहु केहूँ अमीर-के दुवारे गा । तब वहि अमीर-नें अपने खेतन-में सोरी चरावैं-पर करि दीन्ह । जब वहु हुँआँ कायल भवा तब वहु अपने बाप-के तीर आइ-के कहैं लाग कि हमार खता माँफ कै-देउ । तब वहि-के बाप-नें खता माँफ कीन्ह और खुसी भा ॥

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ēk manaĩ-kē duī larikā hatē. Wahi-mã̃-sē jaun chhoṭ[a]kawā larikā
One man-of two sons were. Them-in-from who the-younger son hatā, sō ap[a]nē bāp-par kahaĩ lāg ki, 'jō hamār hissē-kā rupayā was, that his-own father-to to-say began that, 'what my share-of money hōī sō hamār bã̃ṭi dēw.' Tab wahi-kē bāp-nẽ bã̃ṭi dīnh.
will-be that mine dividing give.' Then his father-by dividing it-was-given.
Rupayā lai-kē chhoṭ[a]kawā larikā kahũ bidēs-kā chalā-gā.
Money taken-having younger son somewhere foreign-country-to went-away.
Hũã̃ apan sab rupayā bad-chal[a]nī-mã̃ kharach kaï-ḍāresi, au
There his-own all money evil-conduct-in expenditure he-made-away, and banāi-kē bar[a]bādi hui-gā. Thōrē din-kē bādi hũã̃ made-having (i.e. extremely) ruined he-became. A-few days-of after there sūkhā pari-gā. Phiri wahu kehũ̃ amīr-kē duwārē gā. Tab wahi drought fell. Then he a-certain richman-of on-door went. Then that amīr-nẽ ap[a]nē khētan-mẽ sōrī charāwaĩ-par kari-dīnh. Jab wahu richman-by his-own fields-in swine feeding-on he-was-employed. When he hũã̃ kāyal bhawā tab wahu ap[a]nē bāp-kē tīr āi-kē kahaĩ there convinced became then he his-own father-of near come-having to-say lāg ki, 'hamār khatā mãph kai-dēu.' Tab wahi-kē bāp-nẽ he-began that, 'my fault forgiveness make.' Then his father-by khatā mãph kīnh, aur khusī bhā.

fault forgiveness was-made, and glad he-became.

BUNDĒLĪ OR BUNDĒLKHAṆḌĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ OF JHANSI.

The district of Jhansi is situated in the heart of Bundelkhand, and the dialect there spoken may be taken as the Standard form of Bundēlī. Out of a total population of 683,619 (according to the Census of 1891) 679,700 have been reported as speaking it. I therefore give the two following specimens from that district,—one a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son, and the other a folktale :—

[No. I.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ. (DISTRICT, JHANSI.)

SPECIMEN I.

एक जने-के दो मोड़ा हते । ओर ता-में-सें लोरे-ने अपने दद्दा-से कई धन-में-सें मेरो हिस्सा मो-खों देइ राखो । ता-के पीछे ऊँ-ने अपनो धन बरार दओ । बिलात दिना नईं भये हते लोरो मोड़ा सब कछू जोर-कें पल्ले मुलक चलो गओ ओर हुना बा-ने कुकर्मन-में अपनो सबरो धन गमा-दओ । जब बा-ने सब कछू उड़ा-दै बैठो तब बा मुलक-में बड़ो काल परो ओर वो माँगनो हो गओ । ता-खों पीछे बा-ने उस मुलक-के रहाइय्यन-में सें एक जने-कें ढिगा रन लगो । बा-ने बा-खों अपने खेत-में सुँगरा चरावे-कें-लाने पठै-दओ । ओर बा-ने जो भुस सुँगरा खात-तो ता-सों अपनो पेट भरो चाउत-तो । कोऊ बा-खों कछू नईं देत-तो । तब बा-खों होस भओ ओर बा-ने कई मेरे बाप-के कतेक मइँदार-खों खेबे-के लाने बिलात रोटीं होत-हैं ओर बच रतीं हैं ओर मैं भूखन-के मारे मरो-जात । मैं उठ-कें अपनो बाप-के ढिंगा जेहौं ओर बा-सों केहौं दद्दा-ए मैं-ने स्वरग-के उल्टो ओर तेरे आँगें पाप करो । मैं फिर तुमारो छोरा कुआबे-के लाक नइँआ। मो-खों आपनो कमीनन-कें बिरोबर लेखो । रायी का की बो उठो ओर बाप-कें हिना चलो । बो अपने दद्दा-सें दूर हतो अतेक-में बा-के बाप-ने बा-खों देख-लओ ओर भागत गओ ओर बा-खों गले-से लगाओ ओर मुँह चूमो । तब मोड़ा-ने बाप-सों कई दद्दा-ए मैं-ने स्वरग-के उल्टो ओर तेरे आँगें पाप

करो । मैं तेरो छोरा कुआवे-के लाक नइआँ । वा-के बाप-ने चाकरन-सें कई सब से नोने उन्ना लाओ ओर जा-खौं पैरा देओ ओर हात-के नुगरिअन-में मुदरिया ओर पाओं-में पनइया पैरा देओ । अब सब जने जुर-के पाँत करें ओर बधाई करें । काये-सें कि बो मोड़ा मरो हतो अब जो उठो । जात रओ तो फिर-के मिल गओ ॥

रायी का की वा-को बड़ो भइया खेत-में हतो ओर जब वा आउत-के बेरे घर-के नेरे आ गओ तब बाजो ओर नाच-के बोल सुनो । वा-ने अपने चाकरन-में-सें एक-खौं दै-टेरो ओर वा-सें बूझन लगो कि जो सब का होत। वा-ने कई तेरो भैया आओ सो तेरे बाप-ने पाँत करी जा-के लाने कि वा-खौं जियत अच्छो पाओ । ता पै बो रिस-में भर गओ ओर भीतर जावे-खौं वा-खौं मन ना भओ । ता-पै वा-खौं बाप-ने आ-के थराई करी । वा-ने अपने बाप-सौं जुआब करो के देख-लो मैं तुमारे कतेक दिनन-सें सेवा करत-हौं । कभ-ऊँ आप-की कयी-खौं नयी टारी । तऊ आप-ने मोए कभऊँ एक बुकरिया भी ना दई के मैं अपने हेतिओं-के संग हँसी खेल करूँ । अब देख-लो अपन-खौं जो मोड़ा जो हुरकिनिन-के संग अपनो धन खा-गओ तऊ आप-ने वा-खौं आउत-यी पाँत करी । तब बाप-ने वा-से कयी ए बेटा तैं मेरे ढिंगा आठौं पहर रउत ओर जो कछू मो-नो है सो सब तेरो है । तऊ बधाई करनो चाउनो हतो काये कि तेरो लोरो भइया मरो हतो उठ जिओ ओर जात रओ तो फिर मिलो ॥

[No. I.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ. (DISTRICT, JHANSI.)

SPECIMEN I.

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ēk janē-kē dō mōṛā hatē. Ōr tā-mẽ̃-sẽ̃ lōrē-nē apᵃnē
One man-of two sons were. And them-in-from the-younger-by his-own daddā-sē kaī, 'dhan-mẽ̃-sẽ̃ mērō hissā mō-khõ̃ dēi-rākhō.' Tā-kē father-to it-was-said, 'property-in-from my share me-to give-up.' That-of pīchhē ũ̃-nē apᵃnō dhan barār daō. Bilāt dinā naī after him-by his-own property having-divided was-given. Many days not bhayē-hatē, lōrō mōṛā sab kachhū jōr-kẽ̃ pallē become-were, the-younger son all anything having-collected a-far-off mulak chalō-gaō, ōr hunā bā-nē ku-karman-mẽ̃ apᵃnō sabᵇrō country(-to) went-away, and there him-by evil-conduct-in his-own all dhan gamā-daō. Jab bā-nē sab kachhū uṛā-dai baiṭhō, tab bā fortune was-wasted. When him-by all anything having-wasted it-was-sat, then that mulak-mẽ̃ baṛō kāl parō, aur bō mãg̃ᵃnō hō-gaō. Tā-khõ̃ pīchhē country-in great famine fell, and he beggar became. That-to after bā-nē us mulak-kē rahāiyyan-mẽ̃-sẽ̃ ēk janē-kē ḍhigā ran lagō.
him-by that country-of inhabitants-in-from one person-of near to-live it-was-begun.
Bā-nē bā-khõ̃ apᵃnē khēt-mẽ̃ sũgᵃrā charābē-kē-lānē paṭhai-daō. Ōr Him-by him-for his-own fields-in swine feeding-of-for it-was-sent-away. And bā-nē jō bhus sũgᵃrā khāt-tō tā-sõ̃ apᵃnō pēṭ bharō him-by what husks the-swine used-to-eat those-with his-own stomach to-fill chāut-tō. Kōū bā-khõ̃ kachhū naī dēt-tō. Tab bā-khõ̃ hōs wished. Any-body him-to anything not used-to-give. Then him-to sense bhaō, ōr bā-nē kaī, 'mērē bāp-kē katēk maĩdār-khõ̃ became, and by-him it-was-said, 'my father-of how-many labourers-to khaibē-kē-lānē bilāt rōṭī̃ hōt-haĩ, ōr bach ratī̃-haĩ, ōr maĩ eating-of-for much loaves becoming-are, and saved remaining-are, and I bhūkhan-kē-mārē marō-jāt. Maĩ uṭh-kē apᵃnō bāp-kē ḍhĩgā jẽ̃hõ̃, hunger-of-from dying-am. I having-arisen my-own father-of near will-go, ōr bā-sõ̃ kẽ̃hõ̃, "daddā-ē, maĩ-nē Swarag-kē ulṭō ōr tērē ãg̃ẽ̃ and him-to I-will-say, "father-O, me-by God-of against and thee before pāp karō. Maĩ phir tumārō chhōrā kuābē-kē lāk naiã̃. Mō-khõ̃ sin was-done. I again thy son being-called-of worthy not-am. Me āp^{a}nō kamīnan-kē birōbar lēkhō."' Rāẏī kā, kī bō thy-own servants-of (lit. menials) equal consider."' Remained what, that he uṭhō ōr bāp-kē hinā chalō. Bō ap^{a}nē daddā-sē dūr hatō arose and the-father-of near went. He his-own father-from at-a-distance was atēk-mẽ̃ bā-kē bāp-nē bā-khõ̃ dēkh-laō, ōr bhāgat the-meantime-in him-of the-father-by him-to it-happened-to-be-seen, and running gaō, ōr bā-khõ̃ galē-sē lagāō, ōr mũh chūmō. Tab went, and him-to neck-by it-was-embraced, and mouth was-kissed. Then mōṛā-nē bāp-sõ̃ kaī, 'daddā-ē, maĩ-nē swarag-kē ulṭō ōr the-son-by the-father-to it-was-said, 'father-O, me-by heaven-of against and tērē ãgẽ̃ pāp karō. Maĩ tērō chhōrā kuābē-kē lāk naiã̃.'

thee before sin was-done. I thy son being-called-of worthy not-am.'
Bā-kē bāp-nē chāk^{a}ran-sẽ̃ kaī, 'sab-sē nōnē unnā
Him-of the-father-by the-servants-to it-was-said, 'all-than good wrapper lāō, ōr jā-khõ̃ pairā-dēō; ōr hāt-kē nugarian-mẽ̃ mudariẏā, ōr bring, and this-one-to put-on; and hand-of fingers-on rings, and pāõ̃-mẽ̃ panaïẏā pairā-dēō. Ab sab janē jur-kē pãt karẽ̃ ōr feet-on shoes put. Now (let-us-)all persons assembling feast make and badhāī karẽ̃. Kāyē-sẽ̃ ki bō mōṛā marō hatō, ab jī rejoicings make. Because that that son dead was, now having-become-alive uṭhō; jāt-raō-tō, phir-kē mil-gaō.'
arose; had-been-lost, again has-been-found.'

Rāẏī-kā kī bā-kō baḍḍō bhaïẏā khēt-mẽ̃ hatō. Ōr jab bā Remained-what that his elder brother the-field-in was. And when he āut-kē bērē ghar-kē nērē ā-gaō, tab bājō ōr nāch-kē coming-of at-the-time the-house-of near came, then music and dancing-of bōl sunō. Bā-nē ap^{a}nē chāk^{a}ran-mẽ̃-sẽ̃ ēk-khõ̃ dai-ṭērō, ōr sound was-heard. Him-by his-own servants-in-from one-to it-was-summoned, and bā-sẽ̃ būjhan lagō ki, 'jō sab kā hōt?' Bā-nē kaī, 'tērō him-from to-ask began that, 'this all what is?' Him-by it-was-said, 'thy bhaiẏā āō, sō tērē bāp-nē pãt karī, jā-kē-lānē ki bā-khõ̃ brother came, so thy father-by a-feast was-made, this-of-for that him-to jiyat achchhō pāō.' Tā-pai bō ris-mẽ̃ bhar-gaō, ōr bhītar alive healthy it-was-found.' That-on he anger-with was-filled, and inside jābē-khõ̃ bā-khõ̃ man nā bhaō. Tā-pai bā-khõ̃ bāp-nē ā-kē going-for him-to mind not became. That-on him-to the-father-by having-come tharāī karī. Bā-nē ap^{a}nē bāp-sõ̃ juāb karō kē, 'dēkh-lō, entreaty was-made. Him-by his-own father-to answer was-made that, 'see,

[No. I.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ. (DISTRICT, JHANSI.)

SPECIMEN I.

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ēk janē-kē dō mōṛā hatē. Ōr tā-mẽ̃-sẽ̃ lōrē-nē apᵃnē
One man-of two sons were. And them-in-from the-younger-by his-own daddā-sē kaī, 'dhan-mẽ̃-sẽ̃ mērō hissā mō-khõ̃ dēi-rākhō.' Tā-kē father-to it-was-said, 'property-in-from my share me-to give-up.' That-of pīchhē ũ̃-nē apᵃnō dhan barār daō. Bilāt dinā naī after him-by his-own property having-divided was-given. Many days not bhayē-hatē, lōrō mōṛā sab kachhū jōr-kẽ̃ pallē become-were, the-younger son all anything having-collected a-far-off mulak chalō-gaō, ōr hunā bā-nē ku-karman-mẽ̃ apᵃnō sabᵃrō country(-to) went-away, and there him-by evil-conduct-in his-own all dhan gamā-daō. Jab bā-nē sab kachhū uṛā-dai baiṭhō, tab bā fortune was-wasted. When him-by all anything having-wasted it-was-sat, then that mulak-mẽ̃ baṛō kāl parō, aur bō mãgᵃnō hō-gaō. Tā-khõ̃ pīchhē country-in great famine fell, and he beggar became. That-to after bā-nē us mulak-kē rahāiyyan-mẽ̃-sẽ̃ ēk janē-kē ḍhigā ran lagō.
him-by that country-of inhabitants-in-from one person-of near to-live it-was-begun.
Bā-nē bā-khõ̃ apᵃnē khēt-mẽ̃ sũgᵃrā charābē-kē-lānē paṭhai-daō. Ōr Him-by him-for his-own fields-in swine feeding-of-for it-was-sent-away. And bā-nē jō bhus sũgᵃrā khāt-tō tā-sõ̃ apᵃnō pēṭ bharō him-by what husks the-swine used-to-eat those-with his-own stomach to-fill chāut-tō. Kōū bā-khõ̃ kachhū naī dēt-tō. Tab bā-khõ̃ hōs wished. Any-body him-to anything not used-to-give. Then him-to sense
bhaō, ōr bā-nē kaī, 'mērē bāp-kē katēk maĩdār-khõ̃ became, and by-him it-was-said, 'my father-of how-many labourers-to khaibē-kē-lānē bilāt rōṭ̃ī hōt-haĩ, ōr bach ratī̃-haĩ, ōr maĩ eating-of-for much loaves becoming-are, and saved remaining-are, and I bhūkhan-kē-mārē marō-jāt. Maĩ uṭh-kē apᵃnō bāp-kē ḍhĩgā jēhõ̃, hunger-of-from dying-am. I having-arisen my-own father-of near will-go, ōr bā-sõ̃ kēhõ̃, "daddā-ē, maĩ-nē Swarag-kē ulṭō ōr tērē ãgẽ̃ and him-to I-will-say, "father-O, me-by God-of against and thee before pāp karō. Maĩ phir tumārō chhōrā kuābē-kē lāk naĩā. Mo-khō sin was-done. I again thy son being-called-of worthy not-am. Me

āpᵃnō kamīnan-kē birōbar lēkhō."' Rāyī ka, ke ha thy-own servants-of (lit. menials) equal consider."' Remained what, that he uṭhō ōr bāp-kē hinā chalō. Bō apᵃnē daddā-sō dur hato arose and the-father-of near went. He his-own father-from at-a-distance was atēk-mẽ̃ bā-kē bāp-nē bā-khõ̃ dēkh-laō. or bā the-meantime-in him-of the-father-by him-to it-happened-to-be-seen, and compassion gaō, ōr bā-khõ̃ galē-sē lagāō, ōr mũh chumo. Te went, and him-to neck-by it-was-embraced, and mouth was-kissed. Then

mōṛā-nē bāp-sõ̃ kaī, 'daddā-ē, maĩ-nē swarag-ke dhō
the-son-by the-father-to it-was-said, 'father-O, me-by heaven-of against and tērē ãgẽ̃ pāp karō. Maĩ tērō chhōrā kuābē-kē lak thee before sin was-done. I thy son being-called-of worthy not-am'

Bā-kē bāp-nē chākᵃran-sẽ̃ kaī, 'sab-sē mane mata
Him-of the-father-by the-servants-to it-was-said, 'all-than good wrapper lāō, ōr jā-khõ̃ pairā-dēō; ōr hāt-kē mugarian-mẽ̃ mundaiyā o bring, and this-one-to put-on; and hand-of fingers-on rings, and pāõ-mẽ̃ panaïyā pairā-dēō. Ab sab janē jur-ke pāt kar feet-on shoes put. Now (let-us-)all persons assembling feast make and badhāī karẽ̃. Kāyē-sẽ̃ ki bō mōṛā marō hato, ab ji rejoicings make. Because that that son dead was, now having-become alive

uṭhō; jāt-raō-tō, phir-kē mil-gaō.'
arose; had-been-lost, again has-been-found.'

Rāyī-kā kī bā-kō baḍḍō bhaïyā khēt-mẽ̃ hato. Ōr jab ha Remained-what that his elder brother the-field-in was. And when he āut-kē bērē ghar-kē nērē ā-gaō, tab bājo or nachnē coming-of at-the-time the-house-of near came, then music and dancing bōl sunō. Bā-nē apᵃnē chākᵃran-mẽ̃-sẽ̃ ēk-khõ̃ dai-tērō, sound was-heard. Him-by his-own servants-in-from one-to it-was-summoned, and bā-sẽ̃ būjhan lagō ki, 'jō sab kā hōt ?' Ba-nē kaī, him-from to-ask began that, 'this all what is ?' Him-by it-was-said, bhaiyā āō, sō tērē bāp-nē pãt karī, jā-ke-lāne ki brother came, so thy father-by a-feast was-made, this-of-for that jiyat achchhō pāō.' Tā-pai bō ris-mẽ̃ bhar-gao or ch alive healthy it-was-found.' That-on he anger-with was-filled, and inside jābē-khõ̃ bā-khõ̃ man nā bhaō. Tā-pai bā-khõ̃ bāp-nē going-for him-to mind not became. That-on him-to the-father-by tharāī karī. Bā-nē apᵃnē bāp-sõ̃ juāb karo ke, 'dēkh entreaty was-made. Him-by his-own father-to answer was-made that, 'see maĩ tumārē katēk dinan-sẽ sēwā karat-hõ. Kabha-ũ āp-kī

I thy how-many days-since service doing-am. Ever-even your-honour-of kayī-khõ naī ṭārī. Taũ āp-nē mōē kabha-ũ ēk saying not was-disobeyed. Even-then your-honour-by me ever-even one bukariyā bhī nā daī kē maĩ apᵃnē hẽṭiõ-kē saṅg hãsī-khēl she-goat even not was-given that I my-own friends-of with rejoicings karũ. Ab dēkh-lō apan-khõ jō mōṛā hurᵃkinin-kē saṅg may-do. Now see your-honour-to what son harlots-of in-company apᵃnō dhan khā-gaō, taũ āp-nē bā-khõ āuta-yī pãt his-own fortune ate-up, even-then your-honour-by him-for just-as-he-came a-feast karī.' Tab bāp-nē bā-sē kayī, 'ē bēṭā, taĩ mērē ḍhĩgā was-made.' Then the-father-by him-to it-was-said, 'O son, thou me near āṭhõ-pahar raüt ōr jō-kachhū mō-nō hai sō sab tērō hai.
the-eight-watches livest and what-ever mine is that all thine is.
Taũ badhāī karᵃnō chāunō hatō, kāyē ki tērō lōrō bhaïyā
Therefore rejoicings to-make proper was, because that thy younger brother marō hatō, uṭh jiyō; ōr jāt-raō-tō, phir milō.'
dead was, having-arisen lived; and had-been-lost, again was-found.'

[No. 2.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ. (DISTRICT, JHANSI.)

SPECIMEN II.

एक गाँव-के माते-की छीर-के ढिगाँ एक गरीब किसान-की खेती ठाढ़ी-ती। ता-खौं लख-कें माते बोलो कि काये-रे तैं-ने हमारी खेती अपने ढोरन-सें चरा लयी। तो-खौं देख नयी परत कि हम रखवारी करे-हैं। किसान बोलो कि माते कक्का ढोर तो मेरे भुन्सारे-से हारे बरेदी लइ-गओ। माते-ने सुन-के कयी कि काल तेरो बाप हमारी फिराद-के लाने चऊतरे जात-तो। किसान-ने जुआब दओ कि बाप मेरो तीन मइना-से परदेस-में है। तब माते-ने कयी के तो तेरी मतायी हुए। किसान बोलो मतायी मेरी बेजारी-से मर-गयी। तब मैं नन्नो हतो। बा-की मो-खौं खबर नइय्या। माते-ने दौर-के बा-खौं तीन चार लातें ओर गतकिन-से भौत मारो। फरेब-से सबरी खेती बा-की काट-के अपने ढोरन-सौं चरा-लयी ओर कयी के जो तैं फिराद-के-लाने राज-में जैहे तो हमारे मारे गाउँ-में बसन ना पेहे। किसान हार-सौं अपने घरे आओ ओर अपने मानसन-सें माते-की सबरी हकीगत कयी। तब सब-की सम्मत भयी के चलो राज-में फिराद करें। हुना हाकिम-के आँगें सबरो ठीक हो-जैहे। ओर जो माँगे बैठ रैहें तो गाओं-में निब्बो बड़ी दारें हुहे। तब किसान सब-की मुँह की कुटाई हेर-के बोलो कि सुनो भइय्या तला-में रेइ-के मगरा-सौं बैर करबो भलो नइयाँ ओर अब तो हम-ने जा ठान-लयी कि खेती पाती जा गाँव-में ना करें। बन्जी-भोरी कर-कें अपनो पेट भरहें ओर अपनी मड़य्या-में डरे तो रेहें॥

बा बेरा हुना मुतके मान्स जुरे ते। किसान-की बातें सुन-के माँगे हो-गये। उन-में-सें एक जने-ने कयी के सुनो भैय्या जबर फरेबी-के आँगें निबल बे-अपराधी-की बात काम नई आउत। ता-सें भइय्या गम खाओ ओर अपने घरें बैठ-रओ॥

[No. 2.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ. (DISTRICT, JHANSI.)

SPECIMEN II

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ēk gā̃w-kē mātē-kī chhīr-kē ḍhigā̃ ēk garīb kisān-kī
One village-of headman-of sīr-land-of near one poor cultivator-of khētī ṭhāṛhī-tī. Tā-khõ̃ lakh-kē̃ mātē bōlō ki, 'kāyē fields standing-were. Them having-seen the-headman spoke that, 'why rē, taĩ-nē hamārī khētī apᵃnē ḍhōran-sē charā-layī. Tō-khõ̃ O, thee-by my crops thy-own cattle-by were-caused-to-be-grazed. Thee-to dēkh-nayī-parat ki ham rakhᵃwārī karē-haĩ?' Kisān bōlō ki, the-seeing-not-does-fall that I watch doing-am?' The-peasant spoke that,
'mātē kakkā, ḍhōr, tō, mērē bhunsārē-sē hārē barēdī
'headman uncle, cattle, verily, my morning-from fields(-to) the-herdsman laï-gaō.' Mātē-nē sun-kē kayī ki, 'kāl tērō took-away.' The-headman-by having-heard it-was-said that, 'yesterday thy bāp hamārī phirād-kē-lānē chaūtᵃrē jāt-tō.' Kisān-nē juāb father my complaint-of-for court-to going-was.' The-cultivator-by answer daō ki, 'bāp mērō tīn maïnā-sē par-dēs-mē̃ hai.' Tab was-given that, 'father my three months-from foreign-land-in is.' Then mātē-nē kayī kē, 'tō tērī matāyī huē.' Kisān the-headman-by it-was-said that, 'then thy mother it-may-be.' The-cultivator bōlō, 'matāyī mērī bējārī-sē mar-gayī. Tab maĩ nannō hatō.
spoke, 'mother my illness-from died. Then I small was.
Bā-kī ṃō-khõ̃ khabar naïyyā.' Mātē-nē daur-kē bā-khõ̃ Her to-me remembrance is-not.' The-headman-by having-run him-to tīn chār lātē̃ ōr gatᵃkin-sē bhaut mārō. Pharēb-sē sabᵃrī three four kicks and thumps-with much it-was-beaten. Deceit-by all khētī bā-kī kāṭ-kē apᵃnē ḍhōran-sõ̃ charā-layī, ōr crops him-of cut-having his-own cattle-by were-caused-to-be-grazed, and kayī kē, 'jō taĩ phirād-kē-lānē rāj-mē̃ jaihē, tō hamārē-mārē it-was-said that, 'if thou complaint-of-for the-state-to will-go, then me-of-by gāū-mē̃ basan nā pēhē.' Kisān hār-sõ̃ apᵃnē village-in to-live not thou-wilt-be-allowed.' The-peasant fields-from his-own gharē āō, ōr apᵃnē mānᵃsan-sē̃ mātē-kī sabᵃrī hakīgat house-to came, and his-own men-to the-headman-of all true-account kaṛī. Tab sab-kī sammat bhayī kē, 'chalō, rāj-mē̃ phirād karē̃.

said. Then all-of opinion became that, 'go, state-in complaint let-us-make.
Hunā hākim-kē ā̃gē̃ sabᵃrō ṭhīk hō-jēhē. Aur jō mō̃gē baiṭh-raihē̃, There ruler-of before all right will-become. And if mute we-will-sit, tō gā̃ō̃-mē̃ nibbō baṛī dārē̃ huhē.' Tab kisān sab-kī then village-in to-live-safely great time will-be.' Then the-peasant all-of mū̃h-kī kudāī hēr-kē bōlō ki, 'sunō, bhaïyyā, "talā-mē̃ rēi-kē face-of leaping having-seen spoke that, 'hear, brother, "tank-in living magᵃrā-sō̃ bair karᵃbō bhalō naïyā̃." Ōr ab, tō, ham-nē jā crocodile-with enmity to-do good not-is." And now, verily, me-by this ṭhān layī ki khētī-pātī jā gā̃w-mē̃ nā karē̃, determination has-been-taken that cultivation this village-in not I-may-do, banjī-bhōrī kar-kē̃ apᵃnō pēṭ bharᵃhē̃, ōr apᵃnī marayyā-mē̃ trade-etcetera having-done my-own stomach I-shall-fill, and my-own cottage-in ḍarē tō rēhē̃.'
I-being verily will-remain.'

Bā bērā hunā mutᵃkē mānṣ jurē tē. Kisān-kī bātē̃
That time there many persons collected were. The-peasant-of words sun-kē mō̃gē hō-gayē. Un-mē̃-sē̃ ēk jaṅē-nē kayī kē, having-heard silent they-became. Them-in-from one person-by it-was-said that,
'suno, bhaiyyā, jabar pharēbī-ke ā̃gē̃ nibal bē-apᵃrādhī-kī bāt
'hear, brother, strong deceiver-of before weak innocent-of words kām-naī-āut. Tā-sē̃, bhaïyyā, gam-khāō ōr apᵃnē gharē̃ baiṭh-raō.'
do-not-avail. Therefore, brother, endure and thy-own house-at sit.'

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

The headman of a village, having seen a poor farmer's harvest standing by his sīr land, said to him, 'how, fellow, is that you let loose your cattle in my field? Do you not happen to see that I keep watch on it?' The farmer replied, 'uncle headman, why, at daybreak the herdsman took away my cattle to the pasture.' On hearing this the headman said, 'yesterday your father went to court[1] to complain against me.' Replied the farmer, 'my father has been away from home for the last three months.' Then said the headman, 'it may have been your mother.' Answered the other, 'my mother died of sickness long ago, when I was a boy. I do not even remember her.' Then the headman fell upon him, kicked him three or four times, and gave him a pounding with his fists. After that, he artfully got the farmer's crop cut and grazed down by his cattle, and said to him, 'if you go to court[1] about this, I'll take care that you won't be able to stay in the village any longer.' So the farmer went home, and told his people all that had come to pass between him and the headman. Said they all with one voice, 'let us go to the court, and the magistrate will make everything all right. Otherwise it will be long before we shall be able to live at ease in the village.'

[1] The council of village elders. It is not recognised by law but meets in the evening on a mud platform (chaūtᵉrā) somewhere in the centre of the village, and settles petty disputes.

But the farmer, seeing that all this was only lip-courage, said, 'look here, brothers, it is not wise to live in water and to make an enemy of the crocodile. I have made up my mind not to till lands in this village any longer. I had rather earn my livelihood by some trade or other which will at least allow me to live at peace in my own hut.'

There were many people present there at the time, and when they heard what he said they became silent, until one of them replied, 'listen, brothers, there is no good in the weak and harmless facing those who are strong and wily. Forbear, therefore, and let us sit quietly at home.'

[1] This time it is the regular court, not the council of village elders.

BUNDĒLĪ OF JALAUN.

Immediately to the north of the district of Jhansi lies the district of Jalaun. The dialects spoken on the eastern border are Nibhaṭṭā (see p. 529) and Lodhāntī (see p. 465), but over the rest of the district the dialect is the same as that of Jhansi, slightly influenced by the Kanaujī spoken in Cawnpore. It is spoken by 360,129 people. It may be taken as practically pure Standard Bundēlī, although in the north of the district it is more affected by Kanaujī than in the south. To the west of the district it varies slightly.

The following specimen comes from Central Jalaun, and illustrates the form of Bundēlī spoken by the great mass of the Bundēlī-speaking population. The influence of Kanaujī is most evident in the pronunciation. This is not so broad as in Bundelkhand proper. The vowel ē is preferred to ai and ō to au. Thus we have ēsō instead of aisō, of this kind; pē for pai, on; jēhai for jaihai, he will go; ōr for aur, and; lōṭan for lauṭan, to return; ōrat for aurat, a woman.

Vowels seem to be interchanged under the influence of a neighbouring h. We have sahir for sahar or shahr, a city; pihᵃrān for pahirān, to clothe; kihᵃhai for kahᵃhai, he will say; buhut for bahut, much.

In nouns the oblique form in an is often used for the singular, as in ḍēran-pē, at the house. This is more common in Hamirpur immediately to the south-east. In the specimen, the Kanaujī form tumhẽ, to you, once occurs.

Note how commonly the past tense of the verb meaning 'to say' is put in the feminine (to agree with bāt understood) when used impersonally. Thus we have kahī, it was said. Very good instances of this idiom are jā kahī, he said this, lit. this was said. Here jā, the feminine of jō, this, agrees with bāt understood. So tīsᵃrē din-kī kahī for tīsᵃrē din-kī bāt kahī, the (word) of the third day was said, i.e. the third day was fixed.

The following are revised figures for the dialects spoken in Jalaun:—

Bundēlī (Standard)	360,129
„ (Nibhaṭṭā)	10,200
„ (Lodhāntī)	8,000
Hindōstānī	10,244
Other languages	7,788
TOTAL (1891)	396,361

The following specimen is a folktale from Jalaun:—

[No. 3.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ. (DISTRICT, JALAUN.)

घासी-राम बाबा-नें पूत-बुलाकी नाऊ-सें कही के हमारे संग तीरथन-कौं चलो। तब नाऊ-नें अपनी नाइन-सें सलाह कर-कें जा कही के हमारे किसानन-कें बुहत आमदनी हुइहै सो मारी जेहै। बाबा-नें कही जो आम-दनी हुइहै सो हम देहैं। तब नाऊ-नें फिर बात बनाई के हम दुनियाँ-दारी-में जो चरित्र देख आयहैं सो तुम्हें बतावने परहै। जभ-ईं नहीं बतायहो तभ-ईं लोट आयहैं। तब दोऊ एसी कह-कें चल-दये।

एक मुकाम-पे नाऊ बाजार-सें सब सामान ले-कें बाहर कढ़ो। तब बा-नें कही के कोन-ऊँ चरित्र हम-नें नहीं देखो-है। तो का देखत-है के एक डाँक चली-जात-है ओर डाँक-कौं सिपाई चला-चल कहत चलो-जात-है। एसो देख-कें बो डेरन-पे आओ ओर जब दो-ऊ जनें रोटी बनाय खाय-कें तय्यार भये तब नाऊ-नें कही के बाबा एक बात हम देख आये हैं सो बताओ। उन-नें कही कहो। तब बा-नें कही के एक डाँक चली जात-है ओर सिपाई चला-चल कहत चलो-जात-है। ता-को मायनो बताओ। उन-नें कही तुम पाँय दाबो हम कहत-हैं। सुनो। जा सहिर-में एक साहूकार-की बहू बड़ी कबूल सूरत है ओर बा-को खामिंद पदेस-में है। बा एक दिन अपनी बिरादरी-में बुलौआँ गई-हती। जब उतें-सें लोटी तो आँधी पानी आओ। बा एक मुसल्मान-के घर-में अपने घर-के धोखे-सें घुस गई। जब बा-ने जानी के जो हमारो घर नहियाँ तब बिलबिलाय-कें अपने घर-कौं भजी। इत्ते-में मुसल्मान निकरो। बा-नें कही जा कौन-की ओरत हमारे मकान-में घुस आई। देखें चहियें। तब बो बाही-के पीछूँ-पीछूँ चल-कें बा-के घर-पे जाय-कें पता सुराक लगाओ। देखी के जा ओरत-के घर-में कोऊ आदमी नहियाँ। कोऊ एसो उपाय करें चहियें जा-सें जा-कौं अपने घर-में डार-लें। बो सहिर-में जाय-कें एक भटियारी-के मोड़ा-कौं दस पचीस रुपय्या दे-कें बाय सिखओ ओर जनाने उढ़ना पहिराय-कें बाद-

साह-के दरबार-में पीनस-में बैठाय-कें लिवाय-गओ। साहूकार-की बहू-के नाँव-सें अर्जी दई के में साहूकार-सों राजी नहीं हों। में मुसल्मान-सों राजी हों। बादसाह-नें कही के हिंदू-कों एसें मुसल्मान न भयें चहियें। जब न मानी तब कही के काल फिर अर्जी दियो। तब फिर दूसरे दिन बा-नें अर्जी दई। बादसाह-नें फिर तीसरे दिन-की कही। अब साहूकार-की बहू-कों खबर भई के मेरे नाम-सें मेरे लेबे-की अर्जी दई गई-है। बा-नें अपने खामिंद-कें लिवायबे-कों डाँक रमाने करी-है।

सो घासी-राम बाबा कहत-हैं के इत्ती बात तो हुइ-गई जो हम-नें कही। अब जो नई हुइहै सो हम कहत-हैं के सबेरें बो साहूकार आय-जेहै ओर बादसाह-के दरबार-में बा ओरत-के नाम-सें अर्जी लगहै सोई साहूकार पुहुँच-जेहै ओर बादसाह-सों हाँत जोर-कें किहहै के हजूर जा ओरत हमारो माल जो जहाँ धरो-है बताय-दे फिर चली-जाय। जब बा ओरत निकरहै तब साहूकार किहहै के हजूर जा हमारी ओरत नहियाँ। देखें चहियें के कोन है। जब बादसाह देखहैं तो भटियारे-को मोड़ा निकरहै। तब बादसाह बा मुसल्मान ओर मोड़ा-कों धरती-में गड़ाय देहैं ओर साहूकार अपने घर-कों चलो-जेहै ॥

[No. 3.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ. (DISTRICT, JALAUN.)

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ghāsī-rām bābā-nẽ Pūt-bulākī nāū-sẽ kahī kē, 'hamārē saṅg Ghāsī-rām saint-by Pūt-bulākī barber-to it-was-said that, 'me-of with tīrªthan-kõ chalō.' Tab nāū-nẽ apªnī nāin-sẽ salāh holy-places-to go.' Then the-barber-by his-own barber's-wife-from counsel kar-kẽ jā kahī kē, 'hamārē kisānan-kẽ buhut āmªdanī huihai, made-having this was-said that, 'my clients-to great income will-be, sō mārī jēhai.' Bābā-nẽ kahī, 'jō āmªdanī huihai sō that destroyed will-go.' The-saint-by it-was-said, 'what income will-be that ham dēhaĩ.' Tab nāū-nẽ phir bāt banāī kē, we (I) will-give.' Then the-barber-by again word (excuse) was-made that,
'ham duniyā̃dārī-mẽ jō charitra dēkh-āyªhaĩ, sō tumhẽ
'we (I) worldly-affairs-in what actions having-seen-shall-come, that to-you batāwªnē parªhai. Jabha-ĩ nahĩ batāyªhō, tabha-ĩ lōṭ-āyªhaĩ.'
to-explain will-fall. When-even not you-will-explain, then-even I-shall-return.'
Tab dō-ū ēsī kah-kẽ chal-dayē.
Then both such said-having went-off.

Ēk mukām-pē nāū bajār-sẽ sab sāmān lē-kẽ
One place-at the-barber the-market-from all materials taken-having bāhar kaṛhō. Tab bā-nẽ kahī kē, 'kōna-ũ charitra ham-nẽ nahĩ out came. Then him-by it-was-said that, 'any action me-by not dēkhō-hai.' Tō kā dēkhat-hai kē ēk ḍā̃k chalī-jāt-hai, ōr been-seen-has.' Then what seeing-he-is that a post going-along-is, and ḍā̃k-kõ sipāī 'chalā-chal' kahat chalō-jāt-hai. Ēsō dēkh-kẽ the-post-to a-peon 'get-on-get-on' saying going-along-is. Such seen-having bō ḍēran-pē āō, ōr, jab dō-ū janẽ rōṭī banāy-khāy-kẽ tayyār
he lodging-to came, and, when both persons bread made-eaten-having ready bhayē, tab nāū-nẽ kahī kē, 'bābā, ēk bāt ham became, then the-barber-by it-was-said that, 'Holy-Sir, one thing I dēkh āyē-haĩ, sō batāō.' Un-nẽ kahī, 'kahō.' Tab bā-nẽ having-seen come-am, that explain.' Him-by it-was-said, 'say.' Then him-by kahī kē, 'ēk ḍā̃k chalī-jāt-hai, ōr sipāī "chalā-chal"
it-was-said that, 'a post going-along-is, and a-peon "get-on-get-on"

kahat chalō-jāt-hai. Tā-kō māyᵃnō batāō.' Un-nẽ kahī, saying going-along-is. That-of the-meaning explain.' Him-by it-was-said,
'tum pãy dābō, ham kahat-haĩ. Sunō. Jā sahir-mẽ ēk
'you (my-)feet shampoo, I telling-am. Hear. This city-in a sāhūkār-kī bahū baṛī kabūl-sūrat hai, ōr bā-kō khāmind paddēs-mẽ merchant-of wife very beautiful is, and her-of the-husband far-country-in hai. Bā ēk din apᵃnī birādarī-mẽ bulauã gaī-hatī. Jab utẽ-sẽ is. She one day her-own relations-in on-invitation gone-had. When there-from lōṭī, tō ãdhī pānī āō. Bā ēk Musalmān-kē ghar-mẽ apᵃnē she-returned, then storm rain came. She a Musalmān-of house-in her-own ghar-kē dhōkhē-sẽ ghus-gaī. Jab bā-nẽ jānī kē jō hamārō house-of mistake-from entered. When her-by it-was-known that this my ghar nahiyã, tab bilᵃbilāy-kẽ apᵃnē ghar-kõ bhajī. Ittē-mẽ house is-not, then horrified-being her-own house-to she-fled. Meanwhile Musalmān nikᵃrō. Bā-nẽ kahī, "jā kaun-kī ōrat hamārē the-Musalmān came-out. Him-by it-was-said, "this whom-of wife my makān-mẽ ghus-āī. Dēkhẽ chahiyẽ." Tab bō bāhī-kē pīchhũ-pīchhũ house-in entered. To-see is-proper." Then he (by-him) her-of after-after chal-kẽ bā-kē ghar-pē jāy-kẽ patā surāk lagāō. Dēkhī gone-having her-of house-on gone-having clue trace was-applied. It-was-seen (-by-him) kē, "jā ōrat-kē ghar-mẽ kōū ādᵃmī nahiyã. Kōū ēsō upāy karẽ that, "this woman-of house-in any man is-not. Some such device to-make chahiyẽ jā-sẽ jā-kõ apᵃnē ghar-mẽ ḍār-lẽ." Bō is-proper which-from this-one my-own house-in I-may-put." He (by-him)
sahir-mẽ jāy-kẽ ēk bhaṭiyārī-kē mōṛā-kõ das pachīs rupayyā
the-city-in gone-having an innkeeper's lad ten twenty-five rupees dē-kẽ bāy sikhaō, ōr janānē uṛhᵃnā pihᵃrāy-kẽ bādᵃsāh-kē given-having him it-was-taught, and woman's clothing put-on-having the-king-of darᵃbār-mẽ pīnas-mẽ bãiṭhāy-kẽ libāy-gaō. Sāhūkār-kī court-in palanquin-in caused-to-sit-having got-him-taken-away. The-merchant-of bahū-kē nãw-sẽ arjī daī kē, "mẽ sāhūkār-sõ rājī wife-of name-by a-petition was-given that, "I the-merchant-with content nahĩ hõ. Mẽ Musalmān-sõ rājī hõ." Bādᵃsāh-nẽ kahī kē, not am. I the-Musalmān-with content am." The-king-by it-was-said that,
"Hindū-kõ ēsẽ Musalmān na bhayẽ chahiyẽ." Jab na manī,
"a-Hindū-to thus a-Musalmān not to-become is-proper." When not she-heeded, tab kahī kē, "kāl phir arjī diyō." Tab phir then it-was-said that, "to-morrow again petition give." Then again dūsᵃrē din bā-nẽ arjī daī. Bādᵃsāh-nẽ phir tīsᵃrē (on-)the-second day him-by petition was-given. The-king-by again the-third din-kī kahī. Ab sāhūkār-kī bahū-kõ khabar bhaī kē, "mērē day-of it-was-said. Now the-merchant-of wife-to news became that, "my

[No. 3.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ. (DISTRICT, JALAUN.)

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ghāsī-rām bābā-nẽ Pūt-bulākī nāū-sẽ kahī kē, 'hamārē saṅg Ghāsī-rām saint-by Pūt-bulākī barber-to it-was-said that, 'me-of with tīrªthan-kõ chalō.' Tab nāū-nẽ apªnī nāin-sẽ salāh holy-places-to go.' Then the-barber-by his-own barber's-wife-from counsel kar-kẽ jā kahī kē, 'hamārē kisānan-kẽ buhut āmªdanī huihai, made-having this was-said that, 'my clients-to great income will-be,
sō mārī jēhai.' Bābā-nẽ kahī, 'jō āmªdanī huihai sō that destroyed will-go.' The-saint-by it-was-said, 'what income will-be that ham dēhaĩ.' Tab nāū-nẽ phir bāt banāī kē,
we (I) will-give.' Then the-barber-by again word (excuse) was-made that,
'ham duniyā̃dārī-mẽ jō charitra dēkh-āyªhaĩ, sō tumhẽ
'we (I) worldly-affairs-in what actions having-seen-shall-come, that to-you batāwªnē parªhai. Jabha-ĩ nahĩ batāyªhō, tabha-ĩ lōṭ-āyªhaĩ.'
to-explain will-fall. When-even not you-will-explain, then-even I-shall-return.'
Tab dō-ū ēsī kah-kẽ chal-dayē.
Then both such said-having went-off.

Ēk mukām-pē nāū bajār-sẽ sab sāmān lē-kẽ
One place-at the-barber the-market-from all materials taken-having bāhar kaṛhō. Tab bā-nẽ kahī kē, 'kōna-ũ charitra ham-nẽ nahĩ out came. Then him-by it-was-said that, 'any action me-by not dēkhō-hai.' Tō kā dēkhat-hai kē ēk ḍā̃k chalī-jāt-hai, ōr been-seen-has.' Then what seeing-he-is that a post going-along-is, and ḍā̃k-kõ sipāī 'chalā-chal' kahat chalō-jāt-hai. Ēsō dēkh-kẽ
the-post-to a-peon 'get-on-get-on' saying going-along-is. Such seen-having bō ḍēran-pē āō, ōr, jab dō-ū janẽ rōṭī banāy-khāy-kẽ tayyār
he lodging-to came, and, when both persons bread made-eaten-having ready
bhayē, tab nāū-nẽ kahī kē, 'bābā, ēk bāt ham
became, then the-barber-by it-was-said that, 'Holy-Sir, one thing I dēkh āyē-haĩ, sō batāō.' Un-nẽ kahī, 'kahō.' Tab bā-nẽ having-seen come-am, that explain.' Him-by it-was-said, 'say.' Then him-by kahī kē, 'ēk ḍā̃k chalī-jāt-hai, ōr sipāī "chalā-chal"
it-was-said that, 'a post going-along-is, and a-peon "get-on-get-on" kahat chalō-jāt-hai. Tā-kō māyⁿnō batāō.' Un-kō saying going-along-is. That-of the-meaning explain.' Him-by 'tum pā̃y dābō, ham kahat-haĩ. Sunō. Ja

'you (my-)feet shampoo, I telling-am. Hear. This sāhūkār-kī bahū baṛī kabūl-sūrat hai, ōr bā-kō khasam-kō merchant-of wife very beautiful is, and her-of the-husband hai. Bā ēk din apⁿnī birādarī-mē̃ bulauā̃ gai-hatī. Ja is. She one day her-own relations-in on-invitation gone-had. He lōṭī, tō ā̃dhī pānī āō. Bā ēk Musalmān-kō she-returned, then storm rain came. She a Musalmān-of ghar-kē dhōkhē-sē̃ ghus-gaī. Jab bā-nē̃ jānō house-of mistake-from entered. When her-by it-was-known ghar nahiyā̃, tab bilⁿbilāy-kē̃ apⁿnē ghar-kō house is-not, then horrified-being her-own house-to Musalmān nikⁿrō. Bā-nē̃ kahī, "jā the-Musalmān came-out. Him-by it-was-said, "this makān-mē̃ ghus-āī. Dēkhē̃ chahiyē̃." Tab house-in entered. To-see is-proper." Then chal-kē̃ bā-kō ghar-pē jāy-kē̃ patā surak gone-having her-of house-on gone-having clue trace kē, "jā ōrat-kō ghar-mē̃ kōu adⁿmī nahiyā̃ that, "this woman-of house-in any man is-not chahiyē̃ jā-sē̃ jā-kō apⁿnē ghar-mē̃ is-proper which-from this-one my-own house-in sahir-mē̃ jāy-kē̃ ēk bhaṭiyarī-kē mōra-kō the-city-in gone-having an innkeeper's lad dē-kē̃ bāy sikhaō, ōr janānē urhⁿnā given-having him it-was-taught, and woman's clothing darⁿbār-mē̃ pīnas-mē̃ bāiṭhāy-kē̃ court-in palanquin-in caused-to-sit-having bahū-kē nā̃w-sē̃ arjī daī kī, "mē̃ wife-of name-by a-petition was-given that, "I nahī̃ hō̃. Mē̃ Musalmān-sō̃ rājī hō̃." Bād'shāh-nē̃ not am. I the-Musalmān-with content am." The-king-by "Hindū-kō ēsē̃ Musalmān na bhayē̃ chahiyē̃." Ja
"a-Hindū-to thus a-Musalmān not to-become is-proper" When tab kahī kē, "kāl phir arji then it-was-said that, "to-morrow again petition dūsⁿrē din bā-nē̃ arjī daī. Bād'shāh-nē̃ (on-)the-second day him-by petition was-given. The-king-by din-kī kahī. Ab sāhūkār-kī bahu-kō khabar day-of it-was-said. Now the-merchant-of wife-to news

[No. 3.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ. (DISTRICT, JALAUN.)

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ghāsī-rām bābā-nẽ Pūt-bulākī nāū-sẽ kahī kē, 'hamārē saṅg Ghāsī-rām saint-by Pūt-bulākī barber-to it-was-said that, 'me-of with tīrªthan-kõ chalō.' Tab nāū-nẽ apªnī nāin-sẽ salāh holy-places-to go.' Then the-barber-by his-own barber's-wife-from counsel kar-kẽ jā kahī kē, 'hamārē kisānan-kẽ buhut āmªdanī huihai, made-having this was-said that, 'my clients-to great income will-be,
sō mārī jēhai.' Bābā-nẽ kahī, 'jō āmªdanī huihai sō that destroyed will-go.' The-saint-by it-was-said, 'what income will-be that ham dēhaĩ.' Tab nāū-nẽ phir bāt banāī kē,
we (I) will-give.' Then the-barber-by again word (excuse) was-made that,
'ham duniyãdārī-mẽ jō charitra dēkh-āyªhaĩ, sō tumhẽ
'we (I) worldly-affairs-in what actions having-seen-shall-come, that to-you batāwªnē parªhai. Jabha-ĩ nahĩ batāyªhō, tabha-ĩ lōṭ-āyªhaĩ.'
to-explain will-fall. When-even not you-will-explain, then-even I-shall-return.'
Tab dō-ū ēsī kah-kẽ chal-dayē.
Then both such said-having went-off.

Ēk mukām-pē nāū bajār-sẽ sab sāmān lē-kẽ
One place-at the-barber the-market-from all materials taken-having bāhar kaṛhō. Tab bā-nẽ kahī kē, 'kōna-ũ charitra ham-nẽ nahĩ out came. Then him-by it-was-said that, 'any action me-by not dēkhō-hai.' Tō kā dēkhat-hai kē ēk ḍãk chalī-jāt-hai, ōr been-seen-has.' Then what seeing-he-is that a post going-along-is, and ḍãk-kõ sipāī 'chalā-chal' kahat chalō-jāt-hai. Ēsō dēkh-kẽ the-post-to a-peon 'get-on-get-on' saying going-along-is. Such seen-having bō ḍēran-pē āō, ōr, jab dō-ū janẽ rōṭī banāy-khāy-kẽ tayyār
he lodging-to came, and, when both persons bread made-eaten-having ready
bhayē, tab nāū-nẽ kahī kē, 'bābā, ēk bāt ham
became, then the-barber-by it-was-said that, 'Holy-Sir, one thing I dēkh āyē-haĩ, sō batāō.' Un-nẽ kahī, 'kahō.' Tab bā-nẽ having-seen come-am, that explain.' Him-by it-was-said, 'say.' Then him-by kahī kē, 'ēk ḍãk chalī-jāt-hai, ōr sipāī "chalā-chal"
it-was-said that, 'a post going-along-is, and a-peon "get-on-get-on"

kahat chalō-jāt-hai. Tā-kō māyᵃnō batāō.' Un-nẽ kahī, saying going-along-is. That-of the-meaning explain.' Him-by it-was-said,
'tum pãy dābō, ham kahat-haĩ. Sunō. Jā sahir-mẽ ēk
'you (my-)feet shampoo, I telling-am. Hear. This city-in a sāhūkār-kī bahū baṛī kabūl-sūrat hai, ōr bā-kō khāmind paddēs-mẽ merchant-of wife very beautiful is, and her-of the-husband far-country-in hai. Bā ēk din apᵃnī birādarī-mẽ bulauã gaī-hatī. Jab utẽ-sẽ is. She one day her-own relations-in on-invitation gone-had. When there-from lōṭī, tō ãdhī pānī āō. Bā ēk Musalmān-kē ghar-mẽ apᵃnē
she-returned, then storm rain came. She a Musalmān-of house-in her-own ghar-kē dhōkhē-sẽ ghus-gaī. Jab bā-nẽ jānī kē jō hamārō house-of mistake-from entered. When her-by it-was-known that this my ghar nahiyã, tab bilᵃbilāy-kẽ apᵃnē ghar-kõ bhajī. Ittē-mẽ house is-not, then horrified-being her-own house-to she-fled. Meanwhile Musalmān nikᵃrō. Bā-nẽ kahī, "jā kaun-kī ōrat hamārē
the-Musalmān came-out. Him-by it-was-said, "this whom-of wife my makān-mẽ ghus-āī. Dēkhẽ chahiyẽ." Tab bō bāhī-kē pīchhũ-pīchhũ house-in entered. To-see is-proper." Then he (by-him) her-of after-after chal-kẽ bā-kē ghar-pē jāy-kẽ patā surāk lagāō. Dēkhī gone-having her-of house-on gone-having clue trace was-applied. It-was-seen (-by-him)
kē, "jā ōrat-kē ghar-mẽ kōū ādᵃmī nahiyã. Kōū ēsō upāy karẽ that, "this woman-of house-in any man is-not. Some such device to-make chahiyẽ jā-sẽ jā-kõ apᵃnē ghar-mẽ ḍār-lẽ." Bō is-proper which-from this-one my-own house-in I-may-put." He (by-him)
sahir-mẽ jāy-kẽ ēk bhaṭiyārī-kē mōṛā-kõ das pachīs rupayyā
the-city-in gone-having an innkeeper's lad ten twenty-five rupees
dē-kẽ bāy sikhaō, ōr janānē uṛhᵃnā pihᵃrāy-kẽ bādᵃsāh-kē given-having him it-was-taught, and woman's clothing put-on-having the-king-of darᵃbār-mẽ pīnas-mẽ bǎiṭhāy-kẽ libāy-gaō. Sāhūkār-kī court-in palanquin-in caused-to-sit-having got-him-taken-away. The-merchant-of bahū-kē nãw-sẽ arjī daī kē, "mẽ sāhūkār-sõ rājī wife-of name-by a-petition was-given that, "I the-merchant-with content nahĩ hõ. Mẽ Musalmān-sõ rājī hõ." Bādᵃsāh-nẽ kahī kē, not am. I the-Musalmān-with content am." The-king-by it-was-said that,
"Hindū-kõ ēsẽ Musalmān na bhayẽ chahiyẽ." Jab na manī,
"a-Hindū-to thus a-Musalmān not to-become is-proper." When not she-heeded, tab kahī kē, "kāl phir arjī diyō." Tab phir
then it-was-said that, "to-morrow again petition give." Then again
dūsᵃrē din bā-nẽ arjī daī. Bādᵃsāh-nẽ phir tīsᵃrē (on-)the-second day him-by petition was-given. The-king-by again the-third din-kī kahī. Ab sāhūkār-kī bahū-kõ khabar bhaī kē, "mērē day-of it-was-said. Now the-merchant-of wife-to news became that, "my nām-sẽ̃ mērē lēbē-kī arjī daī-gaī-hai." Bā-nẽ̃ apᵃnē khāmind-kẽ̃ name-by my taking-of petition given-been-has." Her-by her-own husband libāyᵃbē-kō ḍā̃k ramānē karī-hai.'

causing-to-take-for a-post dispatched been-made-has.'

Sō Ghāsī-rām bābā kahat-haĩ kē, 'ittī bāt tō hui-gaī,
So Ghāsī-rām the-saint saying-is that, 'so-much affair indeed been-has,
jō ham-nẽ̃ kahī. Ab jō naī huihai sō ham kahat-haĩ kē, what me-by was-said. Now what new will-be that I telling-am that, sabērẽ̃ bō sāhūkār āy-jēhai, ōr bādᵃsāh-kē darᵉbār-mẽ̃ bā in-the-morning that merchant will-arrive, and the-king-of court-in that ōrat-kē nām-sẽ̃ arjī lagᵃhai. Sōī sāhūkār pahũch-jēhai, ōr woman-of name-by petition will-be-brought-up. That merchant will-arrive, and bādᵃsāh-sō hā̃t jōr-kẽ̃ kihᵃhai kē, "hajūr, jā ōrat
the-king-to hands folded-having will-say that, "Your-Majesty, this woman(-by) hamārō māl jō jahā̃ dharō-hai, batāy-dē; phir chalī-jāy."
my property which where been-placed-has, let-her-show; again let-her-go-away."
Jab bā ōrat nikarᵃhai, tab sahūkār kihᵃhai kē, "hajūr,
When that woman will-come-out, then the-merchant will-say that, "Your-Majesty, jā hamārī ōrat nahiyā̃. Dēkhẽ̃ chahiyẽ̃ kē kōn hai." Jab bādᵃsāh this my wife is-not. To-see is-proper that who she-is." When the-king dēkhᵃhaĩ, tō bhaṭiyārē-kō mōṛā nikarᵃhai. Tab bādᵃsāh bā will-see, then the-innkeeper-of lad will-come-out. Then the-king that Musalmān ōr mōṛā-kō̃ dharᵃtī-mẽ̃ gaṛāy-dēhaĩ, ōr sāhūkār apᵃnē Musalmān and lad the-ground-in will-bury, and the-merchant his-own ghar-kō̃ chalō-jēhai.'
house-to will-go.'

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

The Saint Bābā Ghāsī-rām once asked his barber, Pūt-bulākī, to accompany him on a pilgrimage. The barber took counsel with his wife, and refused on the ground that he would lose the large income which he got from his other clients. The Saint replied that he would make good any loss on that account. Then the barber tried to get off by saying he would go on condition that the Saint promised to explain every circumstance which he might see on the way, and that if he ever failed to do so, he would immediately let him return. To this the Saint agreed.

At one place at which they stopped, the barber went to market to buy provisions, and saw nothing about which he could ask the holy man, till on the way home he noticed a postman going along, urged by a peon, who kept saying 'hasten, hasten.' So when he had come to their lodging, and both had finished their meal, he said to the Saint, 'Holy Sir, I have seen something which I wish you to explain.' 'What is it,' was the answer. Said the barber, 'I saw a postman going along, and a peon urging him, saying "hasten, hasten." What is the meaning of that?' The Saint said, 'I will tell you while you shampoo my feet. Now, listen. In this city there is a very beautiful merchant's wife, whose husband is away on a journey. One day she went on invitation to her own people, and on the way home was overtaken by a heavy storm of wind and rain. The consequence was that she mistook her road, and went into a Musalmān's house instead of her own. As soon as she discovered her mistake she was horrified and ran off to her own house. The Musalmān saw her, and wondered who she could be. So he made up his mind to find out, and followed her to her home. There he made enquiries, and found out that there was no man there. So he determined to make up some device by which he could get her into his own house. He went into the city and got hold of an innkeeper's lad, to whom he gave ten or twenty rupees, and instructed him as to how he should act. Then he dressed him in women's clothes and brought him to the court of the king in a palanquin. There the pretended woman put in a petition under the name of the merchant's wife to this effect, "I am tired of the merchant, and want to live with the Musalmān." The king said that it was not right that a Hindū should become a Musalmān, but when the pretended woman would not listen to his remonstrances, he told her to come to-morrow. The next day the lad put in a petition again, and the king told him to come again the next day. In the meantime the news came to the merchant's wife that a false petition had been put in in her name, so she has dispatched a postman to call her husband.'

The Saint continued, 'So much for what has occurred. I have told you what has happened. Now I shall tell you what is going to happen. To-morrow morning the merchant will come, and the petition in his wife's name will again be presented. At the same moment the merchant will arrive, and with folded hands will say, "Your Majesty, if this woman will tell me where she has stowed away my property, she may go her way." Then the false woman will have to get out of the palanquin, and the merchant will say, "Your Majesty, this is not my wife. Justice demands that you should enquire who she is." Then the king will enquire, and she will turn out to be the innkeeper's lad. Then the king will bury alive the Musalmān and the lad, and the merchant will go in peace to his own house.'

nām-sẽ mērē lēbē-kī arjī daī-gaī-hai." Bā-nẽ apᵃnē khāmind-kẽ
name-by my taking-of petition given-been-has." Her-by her-own husband libāyᵃbē-kō ḍāk ramānē karī-hai.'
causing-to-take-for a-post dispatched been-made-has.'

Sō Ghāsī-rām bābā kahat-haĩ kē, 'ittī bāt tō hui-gaī,
So Ghāsī-rām the-saint saying-is that, 'so-much affair indeed been-has,
jō ham-nẽ kahī. Ab jō naī huihai sō ham kahat-haĩ kē, what me-by was-said. Now what new will-be that I telling-am that, sabērẽ bō sāhūkār āy-jēhai, ōr bādᵃsāh-kē darᵃbār-mẽ bā in-the-morning that merchant will-arrive, and the-king-of court-in that ōrat-kē nām-sẽ arjī lagᵃhai. Sōī sāhūkār pahũch-jēhai, ōr woman-of name-by petition will-be-brought-up. That merchant will-arrive, and bādᵃsāh-sō hā̃t jōr-kẽ kihᵃhai kē, "hajūr, jā ōrat
the-king-to hands folded-having will-say that, "Your-Majesty, this woman(-by) hamārō māl jō jahā̃ dharō-hai, batāy-dē; phir chalī-jāy."
my property which where been-placed-has, let-her-show; again let-her-go-away."
Jab bā ōrat nikarᵃhai, tab sahūkār kihᵃhai kē, "hajūr,
When that woman will-come-out, then the-merchant will-say that, "Your-Majesty, jā hamārī ōrat nahiyā̃. Dēkhẽ chahiyẽ kē kōn hai." Jab bādᵃsāh this my wife is-not. To-see is-proper that who she-is." When the-king dēkhᵃhaĩ, tō bhaṭiyārē-kō mōṛā nikarᵃhai. Tab bādᵃsāh bā will-see, then the-innkeeper-of lad will-come-out. Then the-king that Musalmān ōr mōṛā-kō dharᵃtī-mẽ gaṛāy-dēhaĩ, ōr sāhūkār apᵃnē
Musalmān and lad the-ground-in will-bury, and the-merchant his-own ghar-kō chalō-jēhai.'
house-to will-go.'

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

The Saint Bābā Ghāsī-rām once asked his barber, Pūt-bulākī, to accompany him on a pilgrimage. The barber took counsel with his wife, and refused on the ground that he would lose the large income which he got from his other clients. The Saint replied that he would make good any loss on that account. Then the barber tried to get off by saying he would go on condition that the Saint promised to explain every circumstance which he might see on the way, and that if he ever failed to do so, he would immediately let him return. To this the Saint agreed.

At one place at which they stopped, the barber went to market to buy provisions, and saw nothing about which he could ask the holy man, till on the way home he noticed a postman going along, urged by a peon, who kept saying 'hasten, hasten.' So when he had come to their lodging, and both had finished their meal, he said to the Saint, 'Holy Sir, I have seen something which I wish you to explain.' 'What is it,' was the answer. Said the barber, 'I saw a postman going along, and a peon urging him, saying "hasten, hasten." What is the meaning of that?' The Saint said, 'I will tell you while you shampoo my feet. Now, listen. In this city there is a very beautiful merchant's wife, whose husband is away on a journey. One day she went on invitation to her own people, and on the way home was overtaken by a heavy storm of wind and rain. The consequence was that she mistook her road, and went into a Musalmān's house instead of her own. As soon as she discovered her mistake she was horrified and ran off to her own house. The Musalmān saw her, and wondered who she could be. So he made up his mind to find out, and followed her to her home. There he made enquiries, and found out that there was no man there. So he determined to make up some device by which he could get her into his own house. He went into the city and got hold of an innkeeper's lad, to whom he gave ten or twenty rupees, and instructed him as to how he should act. Then he dressed him in women's clothes and brought him to the court of the king in a palanquin. There the pretended woman put in a petition under the name of the merchant's wife to this effect, "I am tired of the merchant, and want to live with the Musalmān." The king said that it was not right that a Hindū should become a Musalmān, but when the pretended woman would not listen to his remonstrances, he told her to come to-morrow. The next day the lad put in a petition again, and the king told him to come again the next day. In the meantime the news came to the merchant's wife that a false petition had been put in in her name, so she has dispatched a postman to call her husband.'

The Saint continued, 'So much for what has occurred. I have told you what has happened. Now I shall tell you what is going to happen. To-morrow morning the merchant will come, and the petition in his wife's name will again be presented. At the same moment the merchant will arrive, and with folded hands will say, "Your Majesty, if this woman will tell me where she has stowed away my property, she may go her way." Then the false woman will have to get out of the palanquin, and the merchant will say, "Your Majesty, this is not my wife. Justice demands that you should enquire who she is." Then the king will enquire, and she will turn out to be the innkeeper's lad. Then the king will bury alive the Musalmān and the lad, and the merchant will go in peace to his own house.'

BUNDĒLĪ OF WEST JALAUN.

The following folktale comes from western Jalaun, and illustrates the patois of that portion of the district. Out of the 360,129 speakers of Standard Bundēlī in Jalaun, it is estimated that about 20,000 speak this patois. It was incorrectly entered as Bhadaurī in the original Rough List of the Jalaun dialects. It has nothing to do with that dialect, which is a mixture of Bundēlī and Braj.

The principal distinction between the dialect of the west of Jalaun and that of the rest of the district is that the pronunciation is much broader. Ai and au are preferred to ē and ō respectively. Thus, we have pai, not pē, on; kau as well as kō, of; kaũ as well as kõ̃, the sign of the accusative-dative; hau, you are; chalau and gaau, he went; baiṭhau, he sat; karau, he was made; baṛau, great. There is the same fluctuation of vowel sounds that we have noticed in Central Jalaun. Thus, sib, all; buhut, many; puhũchan, to arrive. In the pronouns, 'he, that,' is ba, not bō, and 'this' is ja, not jō. The oblique forms are bā and jā, as in the Standard Dialect. The plural of ja, who, is jāy.

The specimen is a folktale relating one of the wit-contests between the Emperor Akbar and his famous minister Bīrbal.

[No. 4.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ. (WEST OF DISTRICT JALAUN.)

एक बेर बाम्हाय और बीरन बैठे-हते। बाम्हाय-ने बीरन-सें पूछो कै पट कौन-को बड़ो है। तब बीरन-ने कही कै महराज जा-कौ जैसौ डोल ता-कौ तैसौ पेट। तब बाम्हाय-ने फिर कही कै नइँ बताओ सब-तें बड़ो पेट कौन-कौ है। तब बीरन-ने कही कै सिब-तें बड़ो पेट तौ जिमीदारन-को है। अब बाम्हाय-ने कही कै बताओ जिमीदार-को पेट कैसें बड़ो है। अच्छो बतायहैं। ज कह-कें बीरन एक दिना काऊ गाँव-के जिमीदारन-के हिंयाँ जाय टुके। जब बीरन दरबार-में न गये तब बाम्हाय-ने बुलाइबे-कौं आदमी पठओ। जब न मिले तब अपने राज-भर-में और और-ऊ देसन-में ढुँड़ौआ पुहुँचाये। जब ढूँड़ ढूँड़-कें हार-गये और न मिले तब बाम्हाय-ने बुहुत-से बुकरा मँगाये और उन-कौं तौल-कें गाँवन गाँवन-के जिमीदारन-के हिंयाँ पठये और कही कै इन-कौं छे महिना-लौं खूब चरावें। अकेलौं तौल-में न बढ़न पावें। तौल बढ़है तो बड़ो डंड दैहैं। सिब जिमीदार अपनो अपनो उपाव सोचन लगे। जा गाँव-में बीरन हते हुँआँ-के जिमीदार उन-के ढिगाँ गये और उन-सौं कही कै जा-कौ जतन बताओ। बीरन-ने कही बेहड़ा-में-तें एक भिड़ा मँगाय-कें बुकरा-के आगे बँधाय देव। फिर बाय खूब चराओ। व डर-के मारें कभ-ऊँ न चेतहै न तौल-तें जादाँ बढ़है। उन लोगन-ने ऐसो-ई करो। जब छे महिना-में सिब बुकरा मँगाये और तौले-गये तो सिब तौ तौल-तें बढ़े और जा-में बीरन हते बा गाँव-के जिमीदारन-कौ बुकरा तौलउतें पौआ-भर कम कढ़ो। तब बाम्हाय-ने उन जिमीदारन-सौं कही कै तुमारे हिंयाँ बीरन हैं। उन-कौं लिआओ। उन-ने कही हमारे हिंयाँ नइँया। बाम्हाय-ने बड़ी घुरकी दिखाई तौ-ऊ उन-ने न बताये। तब बाम्हाय-ने कही कै बुकरा काये कम भओ। उन-ने कही कै हमारे हिंयाँ रोगी बुकरा पठओ-हतो। बा-ने चारो-सारो कछू नइँ खाओ। अभै नेक चेतो-है। ता-सें कम भओ-है। फिर बाम्हाय-ने ऐसे-ई कइयक उपाव करे अकेलौं बीरन-कौ पतो न लगो। तब कही कै जो कोऊ बीरन लिआबे ता-कौं एक हजार रुपैया इनाम दैहैं। तब बे जिमीदार

बीरन-कौं लिवाय-गये । बाम्हाय बीरन-सौं उठ-कैं मिले और पूछी कै तुम कहाँ दुके ते । हम-ने तौ सिब मुलक ढूँढ़-डारौ । तब बीरन-ने कही कै हम तौ हेंई कोस-भर-पै इन जिमीदारन-के घर-में दुके-ते । देखो जिमीदार-कौ कितनो बड़ौ पेट है कै हम-कौं दुकायें रहे और तुम-ने मुलक-भर ढूँढ़-डारौ तौ-ऊ हमैं न पाओ । तब बाम्हाय-ने कही कै बीरन तुम साँची कहत-हौ जिमीदार-कौ पेट सिब-तें बड़ौ है । और उन जिमीदारन-कौं बुहुत इनाम दओ ॥

[No. 4.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ. (WEST OF DISTRICT JALAUN.)

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ēk bēr bāssāy aur Bīran baiṭhē-hatē. Bāssāy-nē
One time the-Emperor and Bīrbal seated-were. The-Emperor-by Bīran-sẽ pūchhī kai, 'pēṭ kaun-kō baṛau hai?' Tab Bīran-nē Bīrbal-to it-was-asked that, 'belly whom-of large is?' Then Bīrbal-by kahī kai, 'Mahᵃrāj, jā-kau jaisau ḍīl tā-kau taisau pēṭ.'

it-was-said that, 'O-great-king, whom-of as-large form him-of so-large belly.'

Tab bāssāy-nē phir kahī kai, 'naĩ, batāō sab-tẽ baṛau
Then the-Emperor-by again it-was-said that, 'no, tell all-than large pēṭ kaun-kau hai?' Tab Bīran-nē kahī kai, 'sib-tẽ baṛau belly whom-of is?' Then Bīrbal-by it-was-said that, 'all-than large pēṭ tau jimīdār-kō hai.' Ab bāssāy-nē kahī kai, belly then the-landholder-of is.' Now the-Emperor-by it-was-said that,

'batāō, jimīdār-kō pēṭ kaisẽ baṛau hai.' 'Achchhī, batāyᵃhaĩ,'
'tell-me, the-landholder-of belly how large is.' 'Very-good, I-shall-tell,' ja kah-kẽ Bīran ēk dinā kāū gā̃w-kē jimīdāran-kē hĩyā̃ this said-having Bīrbal one day a-certain village-of landholders-of near jāy dukē. Jab Bīran darᵃbār-mẽ na gayē tab bāssāy-nē going hid-himself. When Bīrbal court-in not went then the-Emperor-by bulāibē-kō ādᵃmī paṭhaō. Jab na milē, tab apᵃnē calling-for men were-sent. When not he-was-found, then his-own rāj-bhar-mẽ, aur aura-ū dēsan-mẽ ḍhū̃ṛauā puhū̃chāyē. Jab kingdom-entire-in, and other-too countries-in searchers were-despatched. When ḍhū̃ṛ-ḍhū̃ṛ-kẽ hār-gayē aur na milē tab bāssāy-nē searched-searched-having they-were-tired and not he-was-found then the-Emperor-by buhut-sē bukᵃrā mā̃gāyē, aur, un-kaū taul-kẽ, gā̃wan-gā̃wan-kē many-very goats were-sent-for, and, them weighed-having, villages-villages-of jimīdāran-kē hĩyā̃ paṭhayē, aur kahī kaĩ, 'in-kō̃ chhē landholders-of near they-were-sent, and it-was-said that, 'these six mahinā-lō̃ khūb charābẽ. Akēlō̃ taul-mẽ na baṛhan pāwẽ.

months-for well feed. But weight-in not to-increase they-may-get.

Taul baṛhᵃhai, tō baṛau ḍaṇḍ daihaĩ.' Sab jimīdār (If-)weight increase, then great punishment I-will-give.' All landholders apⁿnau apⁿnau upāw sōchan lagē. Jā gãw-mẽ Bīran hatē, their-own their-own device to-think began. What village-in Bīrbal was, hũã-kē jimīdār un-kē ḍhigã gayē, aur un-sõ kahī kai, 'jā-kau there-of landholders him-of near went, and him-to it-was-said that, 'this-of jatan batāō.' Bīran-nē kahī, 'behⁿṛā-mẽ-tẽ ēk bhiṛā mãgāy-kẽ means tell.' Bīrbal-by it-was-said, 'forest-in-from one wolf sent-for-having bukⁿrā-kē āgē bãdhāy-dēw. Phir bāy khūb charāō. Ba ḍar-kē goat-of before tie-up. Then him well feed. He fear-of mārẽ kabha-ũ na chetⁿhai, na taul-tẽ jādã barhⁿhai.'

on-account ever-even not will-be-healthy, nor weight-by much will-increase.'

Un lōgan-nē aisō-ī karau. Jab chhē mahinā-mẽ sib bukⁿrā
Those people-by so-even it-was-done. When six months-in all goats

mãgāyē aur taulē-gayē, tō sib tau taul-tẽ barhē, aur were-sent-for and weighed-were, then all verily weight-by increased, and jā-mẽ Bīran hatē, bā gãw-kē jimīdāran-kau bukⁿrā taulaütẽ which-in Bīrbal was, that village-of landholders-of goat by-weighing pauā-bhar kam kaṛhau. Tab bāssāy-nē un one-quarter-of-a-seer-full less came-out. Then the-Emperor-by those jimīdāran-sõ kahī kai, 'tumārē hĩyã Bīran haĩ; un-kõ liāō.'

landholders-to it-was-said that, 'you-of near Bīrbal is; him bring.'

Un-nē kahī, 'hamārē hĩyã naĩyā.' Bāssāy-nē baṛī Them-by it-was-said, 'us-of near he-not-is.' The-Emperor-by much ghurⁿkī dikhāī, tau-ũ un-nē na batāyē. Tab bāssāy-nē browbeating was-shown, then-he them-by not was-told. Then the-Emperor-by kahī kai, 'bukⁿrā kāyē kam bhaau?' Un-nē kahī kai, it-was-said that, 'the-goat why less became?' Them-by it-was-said that,

'hamārē hĩyã rōgī bukⁿrā paṭhaō-hatō. Bā-nē chārau-sārau kachhū
'us-of near diseased goat sent-was. Him-by grass, etc. anything

naĩ khāau. Abhai nēk chētau-hai, tā-saĩ kam bhaau-hai.' Phir not was-eaten. Now well well-it-is, that-from less become-has.' Then bāssāy-nē aisē-ī kaĩyak upāw karē. Akēlõ

the-Emperor-by of-this-nature-even several devices were-employed. But

Bīran-kau patau na lagau. Tab kahī kai, 'jō kōū
Bīrbal-of clue not was-found. Then it-was-said that, 'if anybody

Bīran liābē tā-kõ ēk hajār rupaiyā inām daihaĩ.' Tab Bīrbal will-bring him-to one thousand rupees reward I-will-give.' Then bē jimīdār Bīran-kõ libāy-gayē. Bāssāy Bīran-sõ uṭh-kẽ those landholders Bīrbal produced. The-Emperor Bīrbal-with arisen-having milē, aur puchhī kai, 'tum kahã dukē-tē. Ham-nē tau met, and it-was-asked that, 'you where concealed-were. Me-by verily sīb mulak ḍhũṛ-ḍārau.' Tab Bīran-nē kahī kai, 'ham all countries have-been-searched-out.' Then Bīrbal-by it-was-said that, 'I tau hẽĩ kōs-bhar-pai in jimīdāran-kē ghar-mẽ dukē-tē. Dēkhō, verily here a-kōs-full-at these landholders-of house-in hid-was. See, jimīdār-kau kitⁿnō baṛau pēṭ hai kai ham-kõ dukāyẽ-rahē;

a-landholder-of how large belly is that me they-concealing-remained;
aur tum-nē mulak bhar ḍhũṛ-ḍārau, tau-ū hamaĩ na pāō.'
and you-by country whole was-searched-out, then-even for-me not it-was-found.'
Tab bāssāy-nē kahī kai, 'Bīran, tum sẽchī kahat-hau.
Then the-Emperor-by it-was-said that, 'Bīrbal, you truth speaking-are.
Jimīdār-kau pēṭ sīb-tẽ baṛau hai.' Aur un jimīdāran-kõ buhut
The-landholder-of belly all-than large is.' And those landholders-to great inām daō.
reward was-given.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

Once upon a time the Emperor Akbar and Bīrbal were seated together, and the Emperor asked Bīrbal what people had big bellies. Bīrbal replied that it depended on the size of the man. 'But,' said the Emperor, 'who has the biggest belly of all?' 'A landlord,' said Bīrbal. 'Tell me,' said the Emperor, 'why you say that a landlord has the biggest belly.' 'Very well, I shall tell,' and with these words Bīrbal went and hid himself in a village close by owned by some landlords. When he did not appear in court next day, the Emperor sent for him, but he could not be found. Then he had search made throughout his own kingdom, and other countries also, but without avail.

Then the Emperor got a lot of goats, and after having them weighed, had one sent to each village, owned by landlords, in his kingdom with this order, 'Feed this goat well for six months, but take care that it does not increase in weight. If its weight increases, I shall punish you severely.' All the landlords began to think of some device or other for carrying out His Majesty's behest, and those who owned the village in which Bīrbal was hidden came to him, and asked him what they were to do. 'Send,' said he, 'to the jungle and fetch a wolf. Tie it in front of the goat, to whom you must offer plenty of food. His fear of the wolf will prevent his eating, and he will pine away and won't increase in weight.' They followed his advice, and at the end of the six months all the goats were sent for by the Emperor and weighed in his presence. All the other goats had increased in weight, but the one brought by the landlords of the village in which Bīrbal was hidden was a quarter of a seer less than it was before. Then the Emperor felt sure that Bīrbal was hiding with them, and told them to produce him. They denied that he was with them, and, no matter how much the Emperor browbeat them, they stuck to their denial. Then he asked them how it was that their goat had become less in weight. 'Because,' said they, 'it was sick when it was sent to us.'

In the same way the Emperor tried several other tricks but failed to get a clue as to where Bīrbal was. Finally he offered a reward of one thousand rupees to whoever apᵃnau apᵃnau upāw sōchan lagē. Jā gā̃w-mē̃ Bīran hatē, their-own their-own device to-think began. What village-in Bīrbal was,

hũā̃-kē jimīdār un-kē ḍhigā̃ gayē, aur un-sõ kahī kai, 'jā-kau
there-of landholders him-of near went, and him-to it-was-said that, 'this-of jatan batāō.' Bīran-nē kahī, 'behᵃṛā-mē̃-tē̃ ēk bhiṛā mā̃gāy-kē̃ means tell.' Bīrbal-by it-was-said, 'forest-in-from one wolf sent-for-having bukᵃrā-kē āgē bā̃dhāy-dēw. Phir bāy khūb charāō. Ba ḍar-kē goat-of before tie-up. Then him well feed. He fear-of mārē̃ kabha-ũ na chetᵃhai, na taul-tē̃ jādā̃ baṛhᵃhai.'

on-account ever-even not will-be-healthy, nor weight-by much will-increase.'

Un lōgan-nē aisō-ī karau. Jab chhē mahinā-mē̃ sib bukᵃrā
Those people-by so-even it-was-done. When six months-in all goats

mā̃gāyē aur taulē-gayē, tō sib tau taul-tē̃ baṛhē, aur were-sent-for and weighed-were, then all verily weight-by increased, and jā-mē̃ Bīran hatē, bā gā̃w-kē jimīdāran-kau bukᵃrā taulaütē̃ which-in Bīrbal was, that village-of landholders-of goat by-weighing pauā-bhar kam kaṛhau. Tab bāssāy-nē un

one-quarter-of-a-seer-full less came-out. Then the-Emperor-by those jimīdāran-sõ kahī kai, 'tumārē hĩyā̃ Bīran haĩ; un-kõ liāō.'

landholders-to it-was-said that, 'you-of near Bīrbal is; him bring.'

Un-nē kahī, 'hamārē hĩyā̃ naĩyā.' Bāssāy-nē baṛī Them-by it-was-said, 'us-of near he-not-is.' The-Emperor-by much ghurᵃkī dikhāī, tau-ū un-nē na batāyē. Tab bāssāy-nē browbeating was-shown, then-he them-by not was-told. Then the-Emperor-by kahī kai, 'bukᵃrā kāyē kam bhaau?' Un-nē kahī kai, it-was-said that, 'the-goat why less became?' Them-by it-was-said that,

'hamārē hĩyā̃ rōgī bukᵃrā paṭhaō-hatō. Bā-nē chārau-sārau kachhū
'us-of near diseased goat sent-was. Him-by grass, etc. anything

naĩ khāau. Abhai nēk chētau-hai, tā-saĩ kam bhaau-hai.' Phir not was-eaten. Now well well-it-is, that-from less become-has.' Then

bāssāy-nē aisē-ī kaĩyak upāw karē. Akēlõ
the-Emperor-by of-this-nature-even several devices were-employed. But

Bīran-kau patau na lagau. Tab kahī kai, 'jō kōū
Bīrbal-of clue not was-found. Then it-was-said that, 'if anybody

Bīran liābē tā-kõ ēk hajār rupaiyā inām daihaĩ.' Tab Bīrbal will-bring him-to one thousand rupees reward I-will-give.' Then bē jimīdār Bīran-kõ libāy-gayē. Bāssāy Bīran-sõ uṭh-kē̃ those landholders Bīrbal produced. The-Emperor Bīrbal-with arisen-having milē, aur puchhī kai, 'tum kahā̃ dukē-tē. Ham-nē tau met, and it-was-asked that, 'you where concealed-were. Me-by verily sib mulak ḍhũṛ-ḍārau.' Tab Bīran-nē kahī kai, 'ham all countries have-been-searched-out.' Then Bīrbal-by it-was-said that, 'I tau hẽĩ kōs-bhar-pai in jimīdāran-kē ghar-mẽ dukē-tē. Dēkhō, verily here a-kōs-full-at these landholders-of house-in hid-was. See, jimīdār-kau kitᵃnō baṛau pēṭ hai kai ham-kõ dukāyẽ-rahē;

a-landholder-of how large belly is that me they-concealing-remained;
aur tum-nē mulak bhar ḍhũṛ-ḍārau, tau-ū hamaĩ na pāō.'
and you-by country whole was-searched-out, then-even for-me not it-was-found.'
Tab bāssāy-nē kahī kai, 'Bīran, tum sãchī kahat-hau.
Then the-Emperor-by it-was-said that, 'Bīrbal, you truth speaking-are.
Jimīdār-kau pēṭ sib-tẽ baṛau hai.' Aur un jimīdāran-kõ buhut
The-landholder-of belly all-than large is.' And those landholders-to great inām daō.
reward was-given.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

Once upon a time the Emperor Akbar and Bīrbal were seated together, and the Emperor asked Bīrbal what people had big bellies. Bīrbal replied that it depended on the size of the man. 'But,' said the Emperor, 'who has the biggest belly of all?' 'A landlord,' said Bīrbal. 'Tell me,' said the Emperor, 'why you say that a landlord has the biggest belly.' 'Very well, I shall tell,' and with these words Bīrbal went and hid himself in a village close by owned by some landlords. When he did not appear in court next day, the Emperor sent for him, but he could not be found. Then he had search made throughout his own kingdom, and other countries also, but without avail.

Then the Emperor got a lot of goats, and after having them weighed, had one sent to each village, owned by landlords, in his kingdom with this order, 'Feed this goat well for six months, but take care that it does not increase in weight. If its weight increases, I shall punish you severely.' All the landlords began to think of some device or other for carrying out His Majesty's behest, and those who owned the village in which Bīrbal was hidden came to him, and asked him what they were to do. 'Send,' said he, 'to the jungle and fetch a wolf. Tie it in front of the goat, to whom you must offer plenty of food. His fear of the wolf will prevent his eating, and he will pine away and won't increase in weight.' They followed his advice, and at the end of the six months all the goats were sent for by the Emperor and weighed in his presence. All the other goats had increased in weight, but the one brought by the landlords of the village in which Bīrbal was hidden was a quarter of a seer less than it was before. Then the Emperor felt sure that Bīrbal was hiding with them, and told them to produce him. They denied that he was with them, and, no matter how much the Emperor browbeat them, they stuck to their denial. Then he asked them how it was that their goat had become less in weight. 'Because,' said they, 'it was sick when it was sent to us.'

In the same way the Emperor tried several other tricks but failed to get a clue as to where Bīrbal was. Finally he offered a reward of one thousand rupees to whoever

brought Bîrbal to him, and those very landlords did so. As Bîrbal approached the Emperor rose and embraced him, and asked him where he had been hidden. 'I searched in every land for you, but without result.' 'Sire,' replied Bîrbal, 'I have been the whole time in the house of one of these landlords, a couple of miles from this palace. See, now, how big is the belly of a landlord. These men kept me safely concealed, while Your Majesty searched out the whole country, and could not find me.' Then the Emperor replied, 'Bîrbal, you speak the truth. A landlord's belly is the biggest of all.' He then gave rich rewards to these landlords.

BUNDĒLĪ OF HAMIRPUR.

The language of the central portion of Hamirpur is the same as the standard Bundēlī of Jhansi. This will be evident from a perusal of the first few lines of a local version of the Parable which are given below. We may note the form mau-kã̃, to me, which in Jhansi would be mō-khõ̃. The change of mō to mau is merely a matter of spelling as explained in the introduction to the dialect. The kã̃ instead of khõ̃ is due to the influence of the corrupt Awadhī spoken immediately to the East. So is mōrō instead of mērō.

The dialects spoken in Hamirpur are as follows :—

Standard Bundēlī spoken by	384,000
Lodhāntī	98,000
Kuṇḍrī	11,000
Banāpharī	5,000
Tirhārī	3,000
Hindōstānī	12,000
Other languages	720
	513,720

Of these Banāpharī and Tirhārī are (in this district) not forms of Bundēlī, but are based on Eastern Hindī mixed with Bundēlī forms. They have been already dealt with under the head of Eastern Hindī (see Vol. VI, pp. 140, 142, and 146). Kuṇḍrī is spoken both in Hamirpur and Banda, on the banks of the Ken, which forms the boundary between the two districts. On the Banda side it is Eastern Hindī mixed with Bundēlī, and has been described under the former language (Vol. VI, pp. 152 ff.). The Kuṇḍrī of Hamirpur is described below on pp. 527 ff. as it has a Bundēlī basis, though mixed with Eastern Hindī.

[No. 5.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ. (DISTRICT, HAMIRPUR.)

एक जने-के दो कुवँर ते । लौरे-ने मालकान-तँ कई कि ऐं जू मौ-काँ धन-मेँ-से जो मोरो हीसा होय सो मिलवै आवै । तब उन-ने अपनो धन बाँट दओ । कछू दिनन भये-ते कि लौरे कुवँर बोत धन जोर-के परदेस जात रये । माँ लुचपन-मेँ दिन खोये और अपनो धन वड़ा डारो ॥

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ēk janē-kē dō kuwãr tē. Laurē-nē mālªkān-tẽ kaī
One man-of two sons were. The-younger-by father-to it-was-said ki, ‘aĩ jū, mau-kã̃ dhan-mẽ-sē jō mōrō hīsā hōy, sō that, ‘O sir, me-to wealth-in-from what my share may-be, that milªbai-āwai. Tab un-nē apªnō dhan bã̃ṭ daō.
let-it-be-obtained. Then him-by his-own wealth having-divided was-given.
Kachhū dinan bhayē-tē ki laurē kuwãr bōt dhan jōr-kē
Some days been-had that the-younger son much wealth having-collected parªdēs jāt rayē. Mã̃ luchªpan-mẽ din khōyē aur apªnō far-country going was. There debauchery-in days were-lost and his-own dhan waṛā-ḍārō.
wealth was-squandered.

BUNDĒLĪ OF EAST GWALIOR.

To the west of the District of Jhansi lies the Gwalior Agency of Central India. Along the northern half of the border it is separated from that Agency by the State of Datia which belongs to the Bundelkhand Agency, but towards the south, in what formed the old District of Lalitpur, it marches directly with the Gwalior State.

The Gwalior Agency now includes the old Guna Agency, which lies to its south. We may say, as a broad statement that the main language of the original Gwalior Agency (excluding the old Guna Agency) is the mixed form of Bundēlī known as Bhadaurī, to be described later on, and that of the old Guna Agency is the Mālwī dialect of Rājasthānī. The old Gwalior Agency principally consists of what may be called the home districts of the Gwalior State. The main language of these districts is therefore Bhadaurī.

Where, however, the Gwalior State marches with the District of Jhansi, i.e. along the western border of the old District of Lalitpur, and, again, going south along the western border of the Saugor District, the language is the standard Bundēlī of Jhansi. It is spoken in the Gwalior Districts of Chanderi, Mungaoli, and in the eastern half of Bhilsa District, by an estimated number of 200,000 people.

The following folktale comes from the Bhilsa District, and may be taken as a specimen.

[No. 5.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ. (DISTRICT, HAMIRPUR.)

एक जने-के दो कुवँर ते । लौरे-ने मालकान-तँ कई कि ऐं जू मौ-काँ धन-मँ-से जो मोरो हीसा होय सो मिलबै आवै । तब उन-ने अपनो धन बाँट दओ । कछू दिनन भये-ते कि लौरे कुवँर बोत धन जोर-के परदेस जात रये । माँ लुचपन-मँ दिन खोये और अपनो धन वड़ा डारो ॥

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ēk janē-kē ḍō kuwãr tē. Laurē-nē mālᵃkān-tẽ kaī
One man-of two sons were. The-younger-by father-to it-was-said ki, 'aĩ jū, mau-kã̃ dhan-mẽ-sē jō mōrō hīsā hōy, sō that, 'O sir, me-to wealth-in-from what my share may-be, that milᵃbai-āwai. Tab un-nē apᵃnō dhan bã̃ṭ daō.
let-it-be-obtained. Then him-by his-own wealth having-divided was-given.
Kachhū dinan bhayē-tē ki laurē kuwãr bōt dhan jōr-kē
Some days been-had that the-younger son much wealth having-collected parᵃdēs jāt rayē. Mã̃ luchᵃpan-mẽ din khōyē aur apᵃnō far-country going was. There debauchery-in days were-lost and his-own dhan waṛā-ḍārō.
wealth was-squandered.

BUNDĒLĪ OF EAST GWALIOR.

To the west of the District of Jhansi lies the Gwalior Agency of Central India. Along the northern half of the border it is separated from that Agency by the State of Datia which belongs to the Bundelkhand Agency, but towards the south, in what formed the old District of Lalitpur, it marches directly with the Gwalior State.

The Gwalior Agency now includes the old Guna Agency, which lies to its south. We may say, as a broad statement that the main language of the original Gwalior Agency (excluding the old Guna Agency) is the mixed form of Bundēlī known as Bhadaurī, to be described later on, and that of the old Guna Agency is the Mālwī dialect of Rājasthānī. The old Gwalior Agency principally consists of what may be called the home districts of the Gwalior State. The main language of these districts is therefore Bhadaurī.

Where, however, the Gwalior State marches with the District of Jhansi, i.e. along the western border of the old District of Lalitpur, and, again, going south along the western border of the Saugor District, the language is the standard Bundēlī of Jhansi. It is spoken in the Gwalior Districts of Chanderi, Mungaoli, and in the eastern half of Bhilsa District, by an estimated number of 200,000 people.

The following folktale comes from the Bhilsa District, and may be taken as a specimen.

[No. 6.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ. (STATE, GWALIOR.)

एक साहूकार तो। बा-के चार बेटा ते और धन मुतकेरो तो। बा-ने अपने जीयत-में अपनो धन चारौ बेटन-को बराबर बाँट दओ। और चार लाल अपनी मौत जिन्दगी-को निआरे रख छोड़े। पनमेसर-की मरजी-से साहूकार मर-गओ। और वे चारौं लाल बेटन-ने एक टिपारी-में धर दए।

जब कुछ दिन बीत गए तो बड़े बेटा-ने टिपारी-को देखो। बा-में एक लाल कम हतो। तब आपस-में चारौं-ने बिचार करो कि सिवाय हम चारन-के और काहू-को खबर न ती। लाल कौन ले-गयो। ता-पै राजा-के पास निआव-को गए और कही है राजा हमारो निसाफ़ कर और लाल ऐसे हेर कि लाल मिले और चोर-की लाज रहे। राजा-ने अपने दीवान-से कही कि जा-को निसाफ़ कर नहीं-तो अन पानी न खाऊँगो।

राजा जा-ही सोंच-में तो कि बा-की मोड़ी-ने कही कि अरे बाप जा निआव मोए सौंप-दे। और मोड़ी-ने उन चारन-के पाछे मुखबर छोड़ दए कि वे बिन-की बात-चीत सुन-के खबर देत-रहें। मुखबरन-ने बिन चारन-के मन-में भर-दई कि राजा-की बेटी अन्तर-गियानी है कोई बात बा-से डोकी नहीं रह-सकत-है। जब मोड़ी-ने अपनो भय उन चारन-के मन-पर खूब जमाए लओ तौ चारन-को टिपारी और लालन सुद्धाँ अपने सामने बुलाय-के कही कि हम आज रात-को लाल हेरेंगे। और रात-के बखत अँधेरे-में लाल निआरे कर-के और कुछ अपने-पास-से मिलाए-के बिन-को दए कि वे टिपारी-में डालत-जाएँ। तब सबन-ने लालन-को टिपारी-में डालो और जब गेने तो एक लाल बढ़ो। जा सुरत-से लाल मिल गओ और चोर-की लाज रही॥

[No. 6.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ. (STATE, GWALIOR.)

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ēk sāhūkār tō. Bā-kē chār bēṭā tē, aur dhan mut^{a}kērō
One banker was. Him-to four sons were, and fortune plenty tō. Bā-nē ap^{a}nē jīyat-mẽ ap^{a}nō dhan chārau bēṭan-kō barābar was. Him-by his-own living-in his-own wealth the-four sons-to equally bā̃ṭ daō; aur chār lāl ap^{a}nī maut jind^{a}gī-kō having-been-divided was-given; and four rubies his-own death life-for niārē rakh-chhōṛē. Pan^{a}mēsar-kī mar^{a}jī-sē sāhūkār mar-gaō.
separately were-kept-apart. God-of will-from the-banker died.
Aur bē chārō̃ lāl bēṭan-nē ēk ṭipārī-mai dhar-daē.
And those four rubies sons-by one basket-in were-kept.

Jab kuchh din bīt-gaē tō baṛē bēṭā-nē ṭipārī-kō
When some days had-passed then the-elder son-by the-basket dēkhō. Bā-mẽ ēk lāl kam hatō. Tab āpas-mẽ was-seen. That-in one ruby less was. Then themselves-among chārō̃-nē bichār karō ki, 'sibāy ham chāran-kē aur the-four-by consideration was-made that, 'except us four other kāhū-kō khabar na tī. Lāl kaun lē-gayō?' Tā-pai anyone-to information not was. The-ruby who took-away?' There-upon Rājā-kē pās niāw-kō gaē, aur kahī, 'hē Rājā, hamārō the-king-of near justice-for they-went, and it-was-said, 'O King, our nisāph kar, aur lāl aisē hēr ki lāl milē aur justice do, and ruby so search that the-ruby may-be-found and chōr-kī lāj rahē.' Rājā-nē ap^{a}nē dīwān-sē kahī the-thief-of honor may-endure.' The-king-by his-own minister-to it-was-said ki, 'jā-kō nisāph kar, nahī̃-tō an pānī na khāī̃gō.'
that, 'this-of decision do, otherwise food water not I-will-eat.'

Rājā jā-hī sōch-mẽ tō ki bā-kī mōṛī-nē kahī
The-king this-very anxiety-in was that his daughter-by it-was-said ki, 'arē bāp, jā niāw mōē saū̃p-dē.' Aur mōrī-nē that, 'O father, this decision to-me entrust.' And the-daughter-by un chāran-kē pāchhē mukh^{a}bar chhōṛ-daē ki bē bin-kī bāt-chīt those four-of after spies were-set that they their conversation sun-kē khabar dēt-rahẽ. Mukhᵃbaran-nē bin chāran-kē man-mẽ hearing information might-be-giving. The-spies-by those four-of mind-in bhar-daī ki, 'Rājā-kī bēṭī antar-giyānī hai; kōī bāt it-was-filled that, 'the-king-of daughter internal-knower is; any thing bā-sē ḍōkī nahĩ rah-sakat-hai.' Jab mōṛī-nē apᵃnō her-from concealed not remain-can.' When the-daughter-by her-own bhay un chāran-kē man-par khūb jamāe-laō, tau chāran-kō fear those four-of mind-on well had-been-impressed, then the-four-to ṭipārī aur lālan suddhã apᵃnē sāmᵃnē bulāy-kē kahī ki, 'ham basket and rubies along-with herself before calling it-was-said that, 'I āj rāt-kō lāl hērẽgē.' Aur rāt-kē bakhat ãdhērē-mẽ to-day night-at rubies will-search.' And night-of time darkness-in lāl niārē kar-kē, aur kuchh apᵃnē-pās-sē milāy-kē rubies separate made-having, and some her-own-near-from mixed-having bin-kō daē ki bē ṭipārī-mẽ ḍālat-jāẽ. Tab them-to they-were-given that they basket-in dropping-may-continue. Then saban-nē 'lālan-kō ṭipārī-mẽ ḍālō aur jab all-by rubies-with-reference-to basket-into it-was-dropped and when genē tō ēk lāl baṛhō. Jā sūrat-sē lāl they-counted then one ruby increased. This manner-from rubies mil-gaō; aur chōr-kī lāj rahī.

were-found; and the-thief-of honor remained.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

Once upon a time there was a banker, with four sons and great wealth. While he was yet alive he divided his property equally amongst his four children, except four rubies which he kept for himself as long as he lived. At God's appointed time the banker died, and his sons put the four rubies by in a basket. After some time had elapsed, the eldest son looked into the basket and found one ruby missing. So he and his brothers discussed who could be the thief, and came to the conclusion that he must have been one of the four, as no one else had been aware where the jewels had been put. So they agreed to go to the king, and they made the following petition to him: 'Your Majesty, do justice among us and have the ruby found; but in such a manner that the face of the thief may be saved.' The king told his minister to comply with the request, and added that he would neither eat nor drink till the matter was settled.

Seeing His Majesty troubled over the affair his daughter addressed him, and said, 'O father, make over the settlement of this to me.' She then set spies to watch the brothers, and to report to her what they might be saying amongst themselves. The spies were moreover instructed to fill the minds of the four with the idea that the princess could read a man's inmost thoughts. When the princess had thoroughly filled their hearts with the fear of her supernatural power, she sent for them and directed them to bring along the basket and the three remaining gems. When they came she told them that she intended to look for the missing stone that night. Accordingly, when night fell and it was quite dark, she took the three rubies out of the basket, and mixed them up with some of her own. She then gave them all to the four brothers, and told them to drop the whole lot into the basket. They did so, and after they had finished, the rubies were counted, and one more was found than the princess had given. In this way the stolen ruby was recovered, and at the same time the face of the thief was saved.

BUNDĒLĪ OF ORCHHA.

The Bundēlī of the western portion of the Bundelkhand Agency, which lies to the east of the former British District of Lalitpur, and consists of the State of Orchha, and the Jagirs of Tori Fatehpur, Bijna, Banka Pahari, and Dhurwai, is the standard form of the dialect. It has a few local peculiarities, of which we may note the following. The oblique plural of strong adjectives sometimes ends in aĩ or ẽ̃, as in apᵃnaĩ or apᵃnẽ̃, own; dharẽ̃, placed, agreeing in each case with a noun in the oblique plural. The usual sign of the accusative-dative is kaĩ, kaũ, or khã̃ (not khõ̃); of the agent, naĩ; and of the instrumental-ablative saĩ. Unaĩ is used to mean 'to them', or (respectfully) 'to him.' The nominative of the reflexive pronoun is apun, he himself, or they themselves. The sign of the conjunctive participle is kaĩ, as in uṭh-kaĩ, having arisen. Note the contracted form rāt, remaining. Note also that like kahī, he said, pũchhī, he asked, is always in the feminine, agreeing with bāt, understood. These peculiarities are illustrated in the accompanying folktale, which has been prepared by Rai Sahib Kashi Pershad, Vakīl, Charkhari.

[No. 7.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ. (STATE, ORCHHA.)

एक बेरै एक हाँथी मर गवो तो। जब ऊ-कौ जी जमराज-कै गवो तौ उन-नैं पूँछी कै तैं इतनौ बड़ौ है और आदमी जो इतनौ हलकौ है ऊ-कैं बस-मैं काये रात। हाँथी-कौ जी बोलो कि तुमैं मुरदन-सैं काम परत-है। अबै जिंदन-सैं काम नहीं परो। जम-राज सोचे कि जिंदा कैसे होत हूहैं। अपने जमदूतन-खाँ हुकम दवो कि जाव सिंसार-सैं एक जिंदा लै आवो। वे गये और एक मुसद्दी-कौं लै आये जो अपनी खाट-में सब अपनें कागद आगद धरें सोवत-तो। जब जमपुरी-में पहुँचे तौ मुसद्दी-खाँ एक जागाँ उतार दवो। और अपुन जमराज-कैं गये। इतनैं बीच-मैं मुसद्दी-नैं उठ-कैं अपनें सब कपड़ा पहिने और एक परवानौ बिसनु-की कचहरी-को लिखो कि जमराज खारज व सिवराज बहाल। और त्यार हो-कैं बैठ रहे। जब जमराज के सामनै गये तब झट परवानौ उनैं दवो। जमराज-नै परवानौ देखतनइँ सब अपनी जागाँ-कौ काम सिवराज-खाँ सौंपो और अपुन बिसनु-कैं गये। और बिंतवारी करी कि मो-सैं का काम बिगरो कि मैं बरखास कर दवो गवो। इतनैं बीच-मैं सिवराज-नैं अपनैं हेती ब्यवहारी मिरत-लोक-सैं बुला-कैं खूब सुख करो और फिर उतइँ पठुवा दवो। बिसनु जमराज-खाँ संगै लै-कैं सिवराज-कै पास आये और बोले सिवराज-सैं कि तुम-नैं अब खूब काम कर लवो-है। और फिर सिवराज-खाँ मिरत-लोक-मैं पठुवा दवो। और जमराज-सैं कही कि देखौ जिंदा कैसे होत-हैं और फिर जमराज-खाँ उन-कौ काम सौंप-कैं अपनैं लोक-खाँ चले गये॥

[No. 7.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ. (STATE, ORCHHA.)

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ēk bērai ēk hā̃thī mar-gawō-tō. Jab ū-kau jī Jam-rāj-kai
One time one elephant died-had. When his soul Jamrāj-to gawō, tau un-naĩ pū̃chhī kai, 'taĩ itᵃnau baṛau hai aur ādᵃmī went, then him-by it-was-asked that, 'thou so large art and man jō itᵃnau halᵃkau hai, ū-kē bas-maĩ kāyē rāt.' Hā̃thī-kau who so small is, his subjection-in why livest.' The-elephant-of jī bōlō ki, 'tumaĩ murᵃdan-saĩ kām parat-hai; abai soul spoke that, 'to-thee dead-bodies-with business falls; now-even jindan-saĩ kām nahĩ parō.' Jam-rāj sōchē ki, 'jiṅdā kaisē living-beings-with business not fell.' Jamrāj thought that, 'living how hōt hūhaĩ?' Apᵃnē Jam-dūtan-khā̃ hukam dawō ki, 'jāw, being will-be?' His-own death-angels-to order was-given that, 'go, sinsār-saĩ ēk jindā lai-āwō.' Bē gayē aur ēk musaddī-kaũ world-from one living-being bring.' They went and one writer lai-āyē jō apᵃnī khāṭ-mē̃ sab apᵃnē̃ kāgad āgad dharē̃ sōwat-tō.

brought who his-own cot-on all his-own papers etc. putting sleeping-was.

Jab Jam-purī-mē̃ pahũchai tau musaddī-khā̃ ēk jāgā̃
When Jampurī-in he-reaches then the-writer-as-for one place(-in) utār-dawō; aur apun Jam-rāj-kaĩ gayē. Itᵃnaĩ-bīch-maĩ it-was-put-down; and themselves Jamrāj-to went. In-the-meantime musaddī-naĩ uṭh-kaĩ apᵃnē̃ sab kapᵃṛā pahinē aur ēk

the-writer-by arisen-having his-own all dress was-put-on and one parᵃwānau Bisᵃnu-kī kachahᵃrī-kō likhō ki 'Jam-rāj khāraj wa letter Vishṇu-of court-of was-written that 'Jamrāj dismissed and

Siv-rāj bahāl,' aur tyār hō-kaĩ baiṭh-rahē. Jab Jam-rāj-kē Sivrāj appointed,' and ready become-having sat-down. When Jamrāj-of sāmᵃnai gayē tab jhaṭ parᵃwānau unaĩ dāwō. Jam-rāj-nai before he-went then suddenly the-letter to-him was-given. Jamrāj-by parᵃwānau dēkhᵃtana-ī sab apᵃnī jāgā̃-kau kām Siv-rāj-khā̃ the-letter seeing-on-even all his-own office-of work Sivrāj-to saũpō aur apun Bisᵃnu-kaĩ gayē. Aur bintᵃwārī karī was-made-over and himself Vishṇu-to he-went. And petition was-made ki, 'mō-saĩ kā kām big'rō ki maĩ bar^{a}khās-kar-dawō-gawō.'

that, 'me-by what work was-spoiled that I dismissed-made-was.'
It^{a}naĩ-bīch-maĩ Siv-rāj-naĩ ap^{a}naī hētī byaw^{a}hārī mir^{a}t-lōk-saĩ
In-the-meantime Sivrāj-by his-own friends companions the-mortal-world-from bulā-kaĩ khūb sukh karō aur phir utaĩ paṭhuwā-dawō.
called-having well merriment was-done and again thither were-sent-away.
Bis^{a}nu Jam-rāj-khā̃ saṅgai lai-kaĩ Siv-rāj-kē pās āyē aur Vishṇu Jamrāj with(-him) taken-having Sivrāj-of near came and bōlē Siv-rāj-saĩ ki, 'tum-naĩ ab khūb kām kar-lawō-hai.' Aur spoke Sivrāj-to that, 'you-by now well work been-done-has.' And phir Siv-rāj-khā̃ mir^{a}t-lōk-mē̃ paṭhuwā-dawō. Aur Jam-rāj-saĩ kahī again Sivrāj-to mortal-world-in was-sent-away. And Jamrāj-to it-was-said ki, 'dēkhau, jindā kaisē hōt-haĩ,' aur phir Jam-rāj-khā̃ un-kau that, 'see, living-beings how are,' and again Jamrāj-to his kām saũp-kaĩ ap^{a}naĩ lōk-khā̃ chalē-gayē.
office entrusted-having his-own world-to went-away.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

HOW THE WRITER CHEATED THE GOD OF DEATH.

Once upon a time an elephant died. When he appeared before Jamrāj, the God of Death,[1] the latter asked him how it came to pass that a huge creature like him lived in subjection to a puny creature like man. The elephant replied, 'All you have to do is with dead bodies. You have nothing yet to do with living beings (and what can you know about them).' Jamrāj thought to himself that he would like to see what sort of thing a living being was, so he sent his angels to bring one down for his inspection from the World Above. They went off and brought down a writer as he was sleeping on his bed surrounded by his papers and his writing materials. When they reached Jampurī, they set him down and went off to report their arrival to His Majesty. In the meantime the Writer (whose name was Seorāj) got up and put on his clothes. He then wrote a forged order from Vishṇu to this effect, 'Jamrāj is dismissed, and Seorāj is appointed in his place,' and when he had made it ready sat down to await his summons. As soon as he was brought before Jamrāj, he presented his forged order, and the King of the Dead on seeing it made over his office to Seorāj, and hurried off to Vishṇu's Court, where he humbly made a representation asking what fault he had committed to earn his dismissal.

In the meantime Seorāj sent for his friends and companions from the World Above, gave them a great feast, and sent them home rejoicing. On the other hand,

[1] Jamrāj, or Yama, is the king of the Land of Shades. His realm is called Jampurī, something like the Hebrew Sheol. His messengers or Angels are called Jamdūt. According to the story, Jamrāj is a subordinate of Vishṇu. He is outwitted by a man of the writer caste. This caste plays in stories such as this much the same part that a lawyer does in European folklore.

[No. 7.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ. (STATE, ORCHHA.)

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ēk bērai ēk hā̃thī mar-gawō-tō. Jab ū-kau jī Jam-rāj-kai
One time one elephant died-had. When his soul Jamrāj-to gawō, tau un-naĩ pū̃chhī kai, 'taĩ itª nau baṛau hai aur ādª mī went, then him-by it-was-asked that, 'thou so large art and man

jō itª nau halª kau hai, ū-kē bas-maĩ kāyē rāt.' Hā̃thī-kau who so small is, his subjection-in why livest.' The-elephant-of jī bōlō ki, 'tumaĩ murª dan-saĩ kām parat-hai; abai soul spoke that, 'to-thee dead-bodies-with business falls; now-even jindan-saĩ kām nahī̃ parō.' Jam-rāj sōchē ki, 'jiṅdā kaisē living-beings-with business not fell.' Jamrāj thought that, 'living how hōt hūhaĩ?' Apª nē Jam-dūtan-khā̃ hukam dawō ki, 'jāw, being will-be?' His-own death-angels-to order was-given that, 'go,

sinsār-saĩ ēk jindā lai-āwō.' Bē gayē aur ēk musaddī-kaũ world-from one living-being bring.' They went and one writer lai-āyē jō apª nī khāṭ-mē̃ sab apª nē̃ kāgad āgad dharē̃ sōwat-tō.

brought who his-own cot-on all his-own papers etc. putting sleeping-was.

Jab Jam-purī-mē̃ pahũchai tau musaddī-khā̃ ēk jāgā̃
When Jampurī-in he-reaches then the-writer-as-for one place(-in) utār-dawō; aur apun Jam-rāj-kaĩ gayē. Itª naĩ-bīch-maĩ

it-was-put-down; and themselves Jamrāj-to went. In-the-meantime musaddī-naĩ uṭh-kaĩ apª nē̃ sab kapª ṛā pahinē aur ēk

the-writer-by arisen-having his-own all dress was-put-on and one parª wānau Bisª nu-kī kachahª rī-kō likhō ki 'Jam-rāj khāraj wa letter Vishṇu-of court-of was-written that 'Jamrāj dismissed and

Siv-rāj bahāl,' aur tyār hō-kaĩ baiṭh-rahē. Jab Jam-rāj-kē Sivrāj appointed,' and ready become-having sat-down. When Jamrāj-of sāmª nai gayē tab jhaṭ parª wānau unaĩ dāwō. Jam-rāj-nai before he-went then suddenly the-letter to-him was-given. Jamrāj-by parª wānau dēkhª tana-ī̃ sab apª nī jāgā̃-kau kām Siv-rāj-khā̃

the-letter seeing-on-even all his-own office-of work Sivrāj-to saũpō aur apun Bisª nu-kaĩ gayē. Aur bintª wārī karī was-made-over and himself Vishṇu-to he-went. And petition was-made ki, 'mō-saĩ kā kām big'rō ki maĩ bar^{a}khās-kar-dawō-gawō.'

that, 'me-by what work was-spoiled that I dismissed-made-was.'
It^{a}naĩ-bĩch-maĩ Siv-rāj-naĩ ap^{a}naī hētī by̦aw^{a}hārī mir^{a}t-lōk-saĩ
In-the-meantime Sivrāj-by his-own friends companions the-mortal-world-from bulā-kaĩ khūb sukh karō aur phir utaĩ̃ paṭhuwā-dawō.
called-having well merriment was-done and again thither were-sent-away.
Bis^{a}nu Jam-rāj-khã̄ saṅgai lai-kaĩ Siv-rāj-kē pās āy̦ē aur Vishṇu Jamrāj with(-him) taken-having Sivrāj-of near came and bōlē Siv-rāj-saĩ ki, 'tum-naĩ ab khūb kām kar-lawō-hai.' Aur spoke Sivrāj-to that, 'you-by now well work been-done-has.' And phir Siv-rāj-khã̄ mir^{a}t-lōk-mẽ̃ paṭhuwā-dawō. Aur Jam-rāj-saĩ kahī again Sivrāj-to mortal-world-in was-sent-away. And Jamrāj-to it-was-said ki, 'dēkhau, jindā kaisē hōt-haĩ,' aur phir Jam-rāj-khã̄ un-kau that, 'see, living-beings how are,' and again Jamrāj-to his kām saũp-kaĩ ap^{a}naĩ lōk-khã̄ chalē-gayē.
office entrusted-having his-own world-to went-away.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

HOW THE WRITER CHEATED THE GOD OF DEATH.

Once upon a time an elephant died. When he appeared before Jamrāj, the God of Death,[1] the latter asked him how it came to pass that a huge creature like him lived in subjection to a puny creature like man. The elephant replied, 'All you have to do is with dead bodies. You have nothing yet to do with living beings (and what can you know about them).' Jamrāj thought to himself that he would like to see what sort of thing a living being was, so he sent his angels to bring one down for his inspection from the World Above. They went off and brought down a writer as he was sleeping on his bed surrounded by his papers and his writing materials. When they reached Jampurī, they set him down and went off to report their arrival to His Majesty. In the meantime the Writer (whose name was Seorāj) got up and put on his clothes. He then wrote a forged order from Vishṇu to this effect, 'Jamrāj is dismissed, and Seorāj is appointed in his place,' and when he had made it ready sat down to await his summons. As soon as he was brought before Jamrāj, he presented his forged order, and the King of the Dead on seeing it made over his office to Seorāj, and hurried off to Vishṇu's Court, where he humbly made a representation asking what fault he had committed to earn his dismissal.

In the meantime Seorāj sent for his friends and companions from the World Above, gave them a great feast, and sent them home rejoicing. On the other hand,

[1] Jamrāj, or Yama, is the king of the Land of Shades. His realm is called Jampurī, something like the Hebrew Sheol. His messengers or Angels are called Jamdūt. According to the story, Jamrāj is a subordinate of Vishṇu. He is outwitted by a man of the writer caste. This caste plays in stories such as this much the same part that a lawyer does in European folklore.

Vishṇu took Jamrāj with him, and came down to Seorāj, whom he congratulated on his cleverness and sent back to the Land of Mortals. Then said he to Jamrāj, 'now you have seen what sort of thing a living being is,' and after reappointing him to his former duties, went off to his own heaven.

BUNDĒLĪ OF SAUGOR.

South of Jhansi and Orchha lies the Central Provinces District of Saugor. Here also the language is standard Bundēlī. This will be evident from the following specimen, which consists of the first few lines of the Parable of the Prodigal Son.

[No. 8.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ. (DISTRICT, SAUGOR.)

एक जने-के दो लरका हते। और उन-में-सें लुहरे-नें अपनें बाप-सें कही, दद्दा, जाजात-को हँसा जो कछू मोरो कड़े मो-खौं दे देउ। और ऊ-ने अपनी गिरस्ती उन-खौं बाँट दई। और भौत दिना ने बीते नंने लरका-ने सबरो दुखट्टो समेटो और अपनी गैल आन मुलक-खौं धरी। और उते अपनो धन गुडोड्डें-में गमा दओ। और जब ऊ सब उड़ा चुको, तबड्डें-कें ऊ देस-में एक बड़ो भारी काल परो और ऊ तंग होन लगो॥

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ēk janē-kē dō lar^{a}kā hatē. Aur un-mẽ-sē luh^{a}rē-nẽ
One man-of two sons were. And them-in-from the-younger-by ap^{a}nẽ bāp-sẽ kahī, 'daddā, jājāt-kō hẽsā jō kachhū his-own father-to it-was-said, 'father, property-of share what anything mōrō kaṛē, mō-khõ dē-dēū.' Aur ū-nē ap^{a}nī girastī mine may-come-out, me-to give-away.' And him-by his-own property un-khõ bãṭ daī. Aur bhaut dinā nē bītē nannē them-to having-divided was-given. And many days not passed the-younger lar^{a}kā-nẽ sab^{a}rō ikhaṭṭō samēṭō aur ap^{a}nī gail ān mulak-khõ son-by all together was-gathered and his-own way another country-to dharī, aur utē ap^{a}nō dhan guṇḍōī-mẽ gamā-daō. Aur was-taken, and there his-own fortune debauchery-in was-wasted. And jab ū sab uṛā-chukō tabaī-kẽ ū dēs-mẽ ēk baṛō bhārī kāl when he all had-wasted then that country-in one very heavy famine parō, aur ū taṅg hōn lagō.
fell, and he poor to-be began.

BUNDĒLĪ OF NARSINGHPUR.

To the East of Saugor lies the District of Damoh in which Bundēlī is also spoken. There it is an Eastern variety of the dialect similar to the Khaṭōlā spoken in Panna (see pp. 457 and 464). South-East of Damoh, and separated from it by the Bhānrēr range of Hills, lies the District of Jabalpur. The Dialect of Jabalpur is a mixed one, and has been described under the head of Baghēlī (see Vol. VI, pp. 172 ff.). In the South-Western part of this last-named District, the dialect may be classed as Bundēlī with equal propriety, and shades off into pure Baghēlī in the North-East.

To the West of the Saugor District lie the States of Gwalior and Bhopal. The main language of Bhopal is the Mālwī dialect of Rājasthānī but along the Saugor border standard Bundēlī is spoken by about 67,000 people. It gradually fades off into Mālwī. In Gwalior the main language is the Bhadaurī form of Bundēlī, but along the Eastern frontier, we have, to the north, where it marches with the state of Datiā, Pāwārī Bundēlī, and further south, on the borders of Jhansi and Saugor, standard Bundēlī spoken by about 200,000 people.

South of Saugor lies the district of Narsinghpur, which is separated from it by the Vindhya range, and consists of the upper half of the Narbada valley proper. Here also, as in Saugor, the language is ordinary Bundēlī. As in the case of that district, I give a few lines of the Parable as a specimen.

[No. 9.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ. (DISTRICT, NARSINGHPUR.)

कोई आदमी-के दो मोड़ा हते। तिन-में-से नन्हे-ने अपने बाप-से कही के ए दादा घर-के धन-में-सि जो मेरो हींसा हो सो मो-खों दे-दो। तब बाप-ने उन-खों अपनो धन बाँट दओ। कछू दिनों-के पीछें नन्हो मोड़ा अपनो धन-दौलत ले-कें दूर देस-खों चलो गओ और भाँ गवाँरी चाल-से सब खो दओ। जब सब धन बढ़ा-गओ तब वा देस-में बड़ो काल परो और वो भूखों मरन लगो॥

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Kōī ādᵃmī-kē dō mōṛā hatē. Tin-mẽ-sē nanhē-nē
A-certain man-of two sons were. Them-in-from the-younger-by apᵃnē bāp-sē kahī ke, 'ē dādā, ghar-kē dhan-mẽ-sē jō his-own father-to it-was-said that, 'O father, house-of property-in-from which mērō hĩsā hō sō mō-khõ dē-dō.' Tab bāp-nē un-khõ my share may-be that me-to give.' Then the-father-by them-to apᵃnō dhan bãṭ daō. Kachhū dinõ-kē pīchhẽ his-own fortune having-divided was-given-away. Some days-of after nanhō mōṛā apᵃnī dhan-daulat lē-kẽ dūr dēs-khõ chalō-gaō, the-younger son his-own property taking distant country-to went-away, aur bhã gawãrī chāl-sē sab khō-daō. Jab sab dhan and there bad conduct-by all was-wasted-away. When all fortune baṛhā-gaō tab bā dēs-mẽ baṛō kāl parō aur bō bhūkhõ was-spent then that country-in great famine fell and he from-hunger maran lagō.
to-die began.

BUNDĒLĪ OF HOSHANGABAD.

Immediately to the west of Narsinghpur lies the district of Hoshangabad, which lies between the Narbada valley and the Mahadeo Hills. In the Rough List of Languages of the District, its main dialect was shown as Mālwī. This was an error. The language of the Western, or Harda Tahsīl is, it is true, Mālwī, but that of the rest of the district is good Bundēlī. This will be evident from the following extract from a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son, for which I am indebted to Mr. L. N. Chowdhri. A few traces of foreign influence appear, such as the occasional use of the Hindōstānī wah for 'that' and of the Mālwī thō (as well as the Bundēlī hatō) for 'was.' The sign of the accusative-dative is khõ̃ or khã̃. It is worth noting that here, as in the broken Bundēlī of Chhindwārā, there is a tendency to use the past tense of an intransitive verb impersonally, with the subject in the agent case, as in mõ̃ṛā-nē chalō-gaō, by-the-son it-was-gone-away, for the son went away. So, in Sanskrit we should have putrēṇa gatam. We may estimate the number of Bundēlī speakers in Hoshangabad as 300,000.

[No. 10.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ. (DISTRICT, HOSHANGABAD.)

(Assistant Surgeon L. N. Chowdhri, 1899.)

कोई आदमी-के दो मौंड़ा हते । उन-में-से नेंनें-ने बाप-से कई दादा धन-में-से मेरो बाँटो होय सो मोय दे-दो । तब बा-ने अपनो धन बाँट दओ । मुतके दिन नईं भए कि नेंनें मौंड़ा-ने अपनो बाँटो सबरो समेट कर-के दूर देस चलो-गओ और व्हाँ गँमारी-में दिन काटते अपनो धन उड़ा-दओ । जब सबरो धन उड़ा दओ तब वा देस-में बड़ो काल पड़ो और वह गरीब हो-गओ । और वो जा-के व्हाँ-के रैनबारौं-में-से एक-खाँ रैन लगो जे-ने वा-के खेत-में सूअर चरान-खौं भेजो । और वो उन छीमियौं-में-से जिनें वे सुंगर खात-थे अपनो पेट भरन चाहत-थो । और वाय कोई कछू नहीं देत-थो ॥

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Kōī ādᵃmī-kē dō mõṛā hatē. Un-mẽ-sē nẽnẽ-nē
A-certain man-of two sons were. Them-in-from the-younger-by bāp-sẽ kaī, 'dādā, dhan-mẽ-sē mērō bãṭō hōy sō the-father-to it-was-said, 'father, property-in-from my share may-be that mōy dē-dō.' Tab bā-nē apᵃnō dhan bãṭ daō.

to-me give.' Then him-by his-own fortune having-divided was-given.

Mutᵃkē din naĩ bhaē ki nẽnẽ mõṛā-nē apᵃnō bãṭō sabᵃrō
Many days not became that the-younger son-by his-own share all samēṭ-kar-kē dūr dēs chalō-gaō, aur whã gãmārī-mẽ having-been-collected foreign land-to it-was-gone-away, and there profligacy-in din kāṭᵃtē apᵃnō dhan uṛā-daō. Jab sabᵃrō dhan days passing his-own property was-wasted-away. When all property

uṛā-daō tab bā dēs-mẽ baṛō kāl paṛō aur wah garīb was-spent then that country-in great famine fell and he indigent hō-gaō. Aur bō jā-kē whã-kē rain-wārõ-mẽ-sē ēk-khã rain lagō, became. And he going there-of inhabitants-in-from one-with to-live began, jē-nē bā-kē khēt-mẽ sūar charān-khõ bhējō. Aur bō un whom-by he fields-in swine to-feed was-sent. And he those chhīmiyõ̃-mẽ̃-sē	jinẽ̃	bē	suṅgar	khāt-thē	ap^{a}nō	pēṭ	bharan husks-in-from	which	those	swine	eating-were	his-own	stomach	to-fill chāhat-thō,	aur	bāy	kōī	kachhū	nahĩ̃	dēt-thō.

wished,	and	to-him	anybody	anything	not	giving-was.

BUNDĒLĪ OF SEONI.

South-east of Narsinghpur lies the district of Seoni. Bundēlī is spoken in the northern two-thirds of this district. South of this the language is Marāthī. At the same time it must be noted that in the part of the district immediately round the town of Seoni there are some 8,000 people, mainly Musalmāns, whose vernacular is Urdū.

The number of Bundēlī-speakers in Seoni district is estimated at 195,000. Immediately to the East lie the districts of Mandla and Balaghat in which the vernacular is a form of Baghēlī, so that Seoni District is the extreme south-eastern limit of Bundēlī. As will be seen from the few lines of the Parable of the Prodigal Son given below, the language is quite ordinary Bundēlī. The only sign of Baghēlī influence is the use of kõ instead of khõ as the sign of the accusative-dative.

In the Rough List of Languages originally compiled for Seoni, the vernacular was wrongly shown as Baghēlī, not Bundēlī.

[No. II.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ. (DISTRICT, SEONI.)

कोई आदमी-के दो लरका हते । ऊ-में-से नन्हें-ने अपने दद्दा-से कही, अरे दद्दा धन-में-से जो मोरे हींसा बाँटा-को हो सो मोरो मों-कों दे-दे । तब ऊ-ने ऊ-कों अपनो धन बाँट दओ । बहुत दिना नहीं भये-हते के नन्हों लरका सब हींसा बाँटा-को धन लै-के दूर मुलक-कों चलो गओ और हुँआँ खोटे कामों-में सबरो हींसा-बाँटा-को धन खो दओ ।

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Kōī adᵃmī-kē dō larᵃkā hatē. Ū-mẽ-sē nanhẽ-nē
A-certain man-of two sons were. Them-in-from the-younger-by

apᵃnē daddā-sē kahī, 'arē daddā, dhan-mẽ-sē jō mōrē his-own father-to it-was-said, 'O father, property-in-from which my hĩsā-bãṭā-kō hō sō mōrō mõ-kõ dē-dē.' Tab ū-nē ū-kõ share-divided-of may-be that mine me-to give-away.' Then him-by him-to apᵃnō dhan bãṭ daō. Bahut dinā nahĩ bhayē-hatē his-own fortune having-divided was-given. Many days not had-become

kē nanhõ larᵃkā sab hĩsā-bãṭā-kō dhan lai-kē dūr
that the-younger son all share-lot-of property taking distant

mulak-kõ chalō-gaō aur hũã khōṭē kamõ-mẽ sabᵃrō hĩsā-bãṭā-kō country-to went-away and there evil deeds-in all share-lot-of dhan khō-daō.

property wasted-away.

KHAṬŌLĀ BUNDĒLĪ OF BUNDELKHAND.

Leaving the Central Provinces, we now return to Bundelkhand proper. The Bundēlī spoken in the South-centre and West-centre of the Bundelkhand Agency, i.e. in the Bijawar and Panna States, and in the Parganas of Rampur and Maharajnagar belonging to the State of Charkhari, in the Chhattarpur, Man, Deora, and Rajnagar Parganas of the Chhattarpur State, and in the Jagirs of Lugasi, Garauli, Alipura, Bihat, and Bilahri, is locally called Khaṭōlā. It is practically the same as that spoken round Orchha in the western part of the Agency, as will be evident from the following folktale, for which I am indebted to Rai Sahib Kashi Pershad of Charkhari. The number of speakers of Khaṭōlā is said to be 569,200.

We may note the following local peculiarities,—nahiyã̄, are not; daihau, you will give; and jaihai, he will go. Jō, this, has a nominative feminine jā.

[No. II.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ. (DISTRICT, SEONI.)

कोई आदमी-के दो लरका हते । ऊ-में-से नन्हें-ने अपने दद्दा-से कही, अरे दद्दा धन-में-से जो मोरे हींसा बाँटा-को हो सो मोरो मों-कों दे-दे । तब ऊ-ने ऊ-कों अपनो धन बाँट दओ । बहुत दिना नहीं भये-हते के नन्हों लरका सब हींसा बाँटा-को धन लै-के दूर मुलक-कों चलो गओ और हुँआँ खोटे कामों-में सबरो हींसा-बाँटा-को धन खो दओ ।

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Kōī adᵃmī-kē dō larᵃkā hatē. Ū-mẽ-sē nanhẽ-nē
A-certain man-of two sons were. Them-in-from the-younger-by

apᵃnē daddā-sē kahī, 'arē daddā, dhan-mẽ-sē jō mōrē
his-own father-to it-was-said, 'O father, property-in-from which my hĩsā-bãṭā-kō hō sō mōrō mõ-kõ dē-dē.' Tab ū-nē ū-kõ share-divided-of may-be that mine me-to give-away.' Then him-by him-to apᵃnō dhan bãṭ daō. Bahut dinā nahĩ bhayē-hatē

his-own fortune having-divided was-given. Many days not had-become

kē nanhõ larᵃkā sab hĩsā-bãṭā-kō dhan lai-kē dūr
that the-younger son all share-lot-of property taking distant

mulak-kõ chalō-gaō aur hũã khōṭē kamõ-mẽ sabᵃrō hĩsā-bãṭā-kō country-to went-away and there evil deeds-in all share-lot-of

dhan khō-daō.
property wasted-away.

KHAṬŌLĀ BUNDĒLĪ OF BUNDELKHAND.

Leaving the Central Provinces, we now return to Bundelkhand proper. The Bundēlī spoken in the South-centre and West-centre of the Bundelkhand Agency, i.e. in the Bijawar and Panna States, and in the Parganas of Rampur and Maharajnagar belonging to the State of Charkhari, in the Chhattarpur, Man, Deora, and Rajnagar Parganas of the Chhattarpur State, and in the Jagirs of Lugasi, Garauli, Alipura, Bihat, and Bilahri, is locally called Khaṭōlā. It is practically the same as that spoken round Orchha in the western part of the Agency, as will be evident from the following folktale, for which I am indebted to Rai Sahib Kashi Pershad of Charkhari. The number of speakers of Khaṭōlā is said to be 569,200.

We may note the following local peculiarities,—nahiyã̃, are not; daihau, you will give; and jaihai, he will go. Jō, this, has a nominative feminine jā.

[No. 12.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ (KHAṬŌLĀ). (STATE, PANNA.)

(Rai Sahib Kashi Pershad.)

एक राजा-कैँ एक बेटी हती। राजा पूजा-के लानै एक बाबा राखे-हते। और बाबा-को कही बहुत मानत-हते। राजा-की बेटी बहुत सुन्दर हती। जब हुस्यार भई तब राजा-नैँ ऊ-के ब्याह-की बिचार करो। बेटी-की नुनाई-पै बाबा जो राजा पूजा-के लानै राखे-हते मोहत-हतो। बाबा-नैँ राजा-सैँ कही कै ई बेटी-के लछिन अच्छे नहियाँ और जो ई-कौँ अपनै इतै रहन दैहौ तो राज छूट जैहै। सो आप-कौँ चाहिये कै ई-कौँ अपनै राज-सैँ निकार देव। राजा-नैँ कही अच्छी और पूँछी कै कैसैँ निकारैँ। बाबा बोलो एक कठारा बनवा-कैँ ऊ-मैँ खैबे-खाँ धर देव और बेटी-कौँ ऊ-मैँ बैठार देव और नदी-मैँ बहा देव। बाबा-नैँ इतै तौ राजा-सैँ जा कही और माँड़ नदी-के नीचैँ दो चार कोस-के फासले-पर जो चेला रहत-हते उनैँ इसारौ लगा-राखो कै नदी-मैँ जो कौनउँ कठारा कड़े तौ रोक-राखिओ और बिना हमारे आए ना खोलिओ। राजा-नैँ बेटी-कौँ कठारा-मैँ बंद कर-कैँ और खैबे-खाँ धर-कैँ नदी-मैँ बहा दओ। कठारा बहत बहत एक दूसरे राजा-के गाँउ हो-कर जो नदी-के किनारैँ थोड़ी दूर-पै हतो निकरो। राजा-नैँ जो कठारा बहत देखो मँगवा लओ और जो खोलो तौ ऊ-मैँ-सैँ बेटी निकर आई। राजा-नैँ पूँछी तुम को हौ। बेटी-नैँ बतायो कै हम फलानै राजा-की बेटी आँय। राजा-नैँ कही कै जैसी उन-की बेटी तैसी हमारी। जाव रनवास-मैँ रही और राजा-नैँ एक घुर-मूँआ बाँदर मँगा-कैँ ऊ कठारा-मैँ बंद कर-कैँ छुड़ा दओ। कठारा बहत बहत जब चेलन-के ऐंगर हो-कर कड़ो तौ उन-नैँ पकर लओ और बाबा-खाँ खबर दई कै कठारा रोक राखो-है। बाबा राजा-सैँ कौनउँ मिस-सैँ छुटी लै-कर चेलन-कैँ गओ और कठारा धरो देख-कैँ बहुत खुसी भओ। बाबा चेलन-सैँ बोलो कै आज रात भर खूब भजन गाव और जो कोई टेरै वा चिल्लाइ तौ काऊ-की ना सुनिओ। चेला खूब भजन गाउन लगे और बाबा कठारा उठा-कैँ एक घर-मैँ लै गओ और घर-के

किवारे खूब बंद कर-कैँ जो कठारा खोलो तौ ऊ-मैँ-सैँ बाँदर निकर आओ। बाबा जानत-तो कै बेटी हूहै और बाबा-खाँ चीँथन लगो। रात भर चीँथो और बाबा खूब चिल्लात रहो अकेलैँ काऊ-नैँ ना सुनी। जब अँधयारी भई और बाबा बड़ी देर-लौँ ना निकरो तब चेलन-नैँ जो किवारे टारे तौ एक बड़ा बाँदर निकर-कैँ भग्ग गओ और बाबा एक कौनै-मैँ मरो डरो मिलो ॥

कहावत

जो जा-कौँ जैसी करै सो तैसो फल पाइ।
सुंदर बैठी राज-घर बाबै बन्दर खाइ ॥

[No. 12.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ (KHAṬŌLĀ). (STATE, PANNA.)

(Rai Sahib Kashi Pershad.)

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ēk rājā-kaĩ ēk bēṭī hatī. Rājā pūjā-kē lānai ēk
One king-to one daughter was. The-king worship-of for one bābā rākhē-hatē. Aur bābā-kī kahī bahut mendicant-priest keeping-was. And the-mendicant-of saying much mānat-hatē. Rājā-kī bēṭī bahut sundar hatī. Jab husyār heeding-was. The-king-of daughter much beautiful was. When of-age bhaī, tab Rājā-naĩ ū-kē byāh-kau bichār karō.
she-became, then the-king-by her marriage-of consideration was-made.
Bēṭī-kī nunāī-pai bābā, jō rājā pūjā-kē lānai
The-daughter-of beauty-on the-mendicant, whom the-king worship-of for rākhē-hatē, mōhat-hatō. Bābā-naĩ rājā-saĩ kahī kai, keeping-was, enamoured-was. The-mendicant-by the-king-to it-was-said that,
'ī bēṭī-kē lachhin achchhē nahiyā̃ aur jō ī-kaũ apᵃnai itai
'this daughter-of signs good not-are and if this-one yourself near rahan daihau, tau rāj chhūṭ-jaihai. Sō āp-kaũ to-remain you-will-allow, then the-kingdom will-be-lost. Therefore you-to chāhiyē kai ī-kaũ apᵃnai rāj-saĩ nikār-dēo.' Rājā-naĩ it-is-proper that this-one your-own kingdom-from you-turn-out.' The-king-by kahī, 'achchhī,' aur pũchhī kai, 'kaisaĩ it-was-said, 'good (word),' and it-was-inquired that, 'how nikāraĩ?' Bābā bōlō, 'ēk kaṭhārā banᵃwā-kaĩ may-we-turn(-her)-out?' The-mendicant spoke, 'one wooden-chest got-made-having ū-maĩ khaibē-khā̃ dhar-dēo, aur bēṭī-kaũ ū-maĩ baiṭhār-dēo, aur that-in eating-for put, and daughter it-in to-set-cause, and nadī-maĩ bahā-dēo.' Bābā-naĩ itai tau rājā-saĩ river-in to-float-away-allow.' The-mendicant-by here on-the-one-hand king-to jā kahī, aur mā̃i nadī-kē nīchaĩ dō chār kōs-kē this was-said, and on-the-other-hand river-of downwards two four kōs-of phāsᵃlē-pai jō chēlā rahat-hatē unaĩ isārau lagā-rākhō kai, distance-on what disciples living-were to-them hint was-arranged that,

'nadī-maĩ jō kaunaũ kaṭhārā kaṛē tau rōk-rākhiau, aur binā
'river-in if any wooden-chest pass then stop(-it), and without hamārē āē nā khōliau.'
my coming not open(-it).'

Rājā-naĩ bēṭī-kaũ kaṭhārā-maĩ band kar-kaĩ, aur
The-king-by daughter wooden-chest-in shut-up made-having, and khaibē-khā̃ dhar-kaĩ, nadī-maĩ bahā-daō. Kaṭhārā eating-for put-having, river-in to-flow-away-it-was-given. The-wooden-chest bahat-bahat ēk-dūsᵃrē rājā-kē gā̃u hō-kar jō floating-floating another king-of village been-having (i.e. through) which nadī-kē kināraĩ thōṛī dūr-pai hatō nikᵃrō. Rājā-naĩ jō river-of side little distance-at was came-out. The-king-by when kaṭhārā bahat dēkhō mãgᵃwā-laō aur jō khōlō tau wooden-chest floating was-seen it-was-sent-for and when it-was-opened then ū-maĩ-sai bēṭī nikar-āī. Rājā-naĩ pũchhī, 'tum kō that-in-from the-daughter came-out. The-king-by it-was-asked, 'you who hau?' Bēṭī-naĩ batāyō kai, 'ham phalānai rājā-kī are?' The-daughter-by it-was-explained that, 'I such-and-such king-of bēṭī ā̃y.' Rājā-naĩ kahī kai, 'jaisī un-kī bēṭī taisī daughter am.' The-king-by it-was-said that, 'as his daughter so hamārī. Jāo ranᵃwās-maĩ rahō,' aur rājā-naĩ ēk ghur-mũā mine. Go seraglio-in live,' and the-king-by one horse-faced bā̃dar mãgā-kaĩ ū kaṭhārā-maĩ band kar-kaĩ monkey having-sent-for that wooden-chest-in shut-up made-having chhuṛā-daō. Kaṭhārā bahat-bahat jab chēlan-kē was-let-loose(-into-the-river). The-wooden-chest floating-floating when disciples-of aĩgar hō-kar kaṛō, tau un-naĩ pakar-laō, aur bābā-khā̃ near become-having passed, then them-by it-was-caught, and the-mendicant-to khabar daī kai, 'kaṭhārā rōk-rākhō-hai.' Bābā information was-given that, 'the-wooden-chest stopped-been-has.' The-mendicant Rājā-saĩ kaunaũ mis-saĩ chhuṭī lai-kar chēlan-kaĩ gaō the-king-from some pretence-from leave taken-having disciples-to went aur kaṭhārā dharō dēkh-kaĩ bahut khusī bhaō.
and the-wooden-box put seen-having much pleased became.
Bābā chēlan-saĩ bōlō kai, 'āj rāt-bhar khūb
The-mendicant the-disciples-to spoke that, 'to-day the-whole-night well bhajan gāo aur jō kōī ṭērai wā chillāi tau kāū-kī hymns sing and if anybody call or cry-out then anybody-of(-words) nā suniau.' Chēlā khūb bhajan gāun lagē aur bābā not listen.' The-disciples well hymns to-sing began and the-mendicant

kaṭhārā uṭhā-kaĩ ēk ghar-maĩ lai-gaō aur ghar-kē
the-wooden-chest lifted-up-having one room-into took-away and room-of kibārē khūb band kar-kaĩ jō kaṭhārā khōlō tau shutters well shut made-having when the-wooden-chest was-opened then ū-maĩ-saĩ bā̃dar nikar-āō, (bābā jānat-tō kai, that-in-from a-monkey came-out, (the-mendicant thinking-was that,
'bēṭī hūhai,') aur bābā-khā̃ chĩthan lagō. Rāt-bhar
'the-daughter will-be,') and the-mendicant to-rend began. The-whole-night chĩthō aur bābā khūb chillāt rahō, akēlaĩ kāū-naĩ
he-was-rent and the-mendicant much screaming remained, but anybody-by nā sunī. Jab ādhᵃyārī bhaī aur bābā barī not he-was-listened-to. When morning became and the-mendicant a-long dēr-laū nā nikᵃrō, tab chēlan-naĩ jō kibārē ṭārē time-for not came-out, then the-disciples-by as the-shutters were-opened tau ēk baṛā bā̃dar nikar-kaĩ bhagg-gaō, aur bābā
then one large monkey come-out-having ran-away, and the-mendicant ēk kaunai-maĩ marō ḍarō milō.
a corner-in dead thrown-down was-found.

KAHĀWAT.
SAYING.

Jō jā-kaū jaisī karai sō taisō phala pāi;
Who whom-to as he-does he such fruit obtains;

Sundara baiṭhī rāja-ghara bābai bā̃dara khāi.
The-beautiful-one sat (in-)a-king's-house the-mendicant-indeed a-monkey eats.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

THE PRINCESS AND THE CHEST.

Once upon a time there was a king who had one daughter. His family chaplain was a mendicant devotee who had great influence over him. The princess was very beautiful, and when she came to years of discretion her father began to think about getting her married. But the wicked chaplain himself became enamoured of her loveliness, and so, in order to keep her for himself, he persuaded the king that her birth-marks were unlucky, and that the only way to save his kingdom from ruin, was to turn her out of it. The king was quite taken in by his evil counsel, and asked how he was to get rid of her. 'Shut her up,' said the devotee, 'in a wooden chest with some food, and set her floating off down the river.' Now he had some disciples living some five or six miles down the stream, and he sent word to them to look out for any wooden chest they might see floating on the river, and to bring it ashore, but not to open it till he came.

So the king shut the princess up in a wooden chest with some food, and sent her floating away. It chanced to float by the capital of another king which was also on the river bank. This king saw the chest and had it brought ashore and opened. What was his surprise to see a beautiful young princess come out of it. He asked her who she was, and she explained to him her sad fate, and that she was the daughter of such-and-such a king. 'Never mind, my dear,' said the other king. 'As you were his daughter, now you have become mine. You must live in my palace with the other women of my family.' He then got hold of a horse-faced monkey, shut it up in the chest, and sent it floating away down the river. By and bye it passed the place where the mendicant's disciples were watching, and they saw it and brought it ashore, and sent word to him that it had been successfully stopped. So he took leave from the king on some pretext or other, and hastened to his disciples. He was filled with joy when he saw the chest, and said to his disciples, 'now, you must sing hymns throughout the whole night, and if you hear any screams or calls for help, you must not pay any attention.' So they began to sing hymns at the tops of their voices, and the mendicant took up the chest and carried it into a room, where he shut the doors and windows tight, and hastened to open his box. He, of course, expected to find the princess inside, but instead there came out a monkey who at once savagely attacked him and began to tear him to pieces. The mendicant screamed out loudly for help, but the disciples remembered his instructions, and no one paid any heed to him. In the morning,[1] as there was no sign of their preceptor, the disciples at length broke open the door of the room. As they did so, a huge monkey rushed out, and, thrown in a corner, they found the mangled corpse of the mendicant.

So the Saying runs—

As a man deals with others, so will he reap himself;
The fair one sat in a king's house, but the monkey ate the chaplain.

---

[1] *Ādh*ᵉ*yārī* is so translated, and this meaning is required; but the word usually means 'darkness.'

kaṭhārā uṭhā-kaĩ ēk ghar-maĩ lai-gaō aur ghar-kē
the-wooden-chest lifted-up-having one room-into took-away and room-of kibārē khūb band kar-kaĩ jō kaṭhārā khōlō tau shutters well shut made-having when the-wooden-chest was-opened then ū-maĩ-saĩ bā̃dar nikar-āō, (bābā jānat-tō kai, that-in-from a-monkey came-out, (the-mendicant thinking-was that,
'bēṭī hūhai,') aur bābā-khā̃ chĩthan lagō. Rāt-bhar
'the-daughter will-be,') and the-mendicant to-rend began. The-whole-night
chĩthō aur bābā khūb chillāt rahō, akēlaĩ kāū-naĩ
he-was-rent and the-mendicant much screaming remained, but anybody-by nā sunī. Jab ā̃dhᵃyārī bhaī aur bābā baṛī not he-was-listened-to. When morning became and the-mendicant a-long dēr-laū nā nikᵃrō, tab chēlan-naĩ jō kibārē ṭārē
time-for not came-out, then the-disciples-by as the-shutters were-opened tau ēk baṛā bā̃dar nikar-kaĩ bhagg-gaō, aur bābā
then one large monkey come-out-having ran-away, and the-mendicant ēk kaunai-maĩ marō ḍarō milō.
a corner-in dead thrown-down was-found.

KAHĀWAT.
SAYING.

Jō jā-kaū jaisī karai sō taisō phala pāi;
Who whom-to as he-does he such fruit obtains;

Sundara baiṭhī rāja-ghara bābai bā̃dara khāi.
The-beautiful-one sat (in-)a-king's-house the-mendicant-indeed a-monkey eats.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

THE PRINCESS AND THE CHEST.

Once upon a time there was a king who had one daughter. His family chaplain was a mendicant devotee who had great influence over him. The princess was very beautiful, and when she came to years of discretion her father began to think about getting her married. But the wicked chaplain himself became enamoured of her loveliness, and so, in order to keep her for himself, he persuaded the king that her birth-marks were unlucky, and that the only way to save his kingdom from ruin, was to turn her out of it. The king was quite taken in by his evil counsel, and asked how he was to get rid of her. 'Shut her up,' said the devotee, 'in a wooden chest with some food, and set her floating off down the river.' Now he had some disciples living some five or six miles down the stream, and he sent word to them to look out for any wooden chest they might see floating on the river, and to bring it ashore, but not to open it till he came.

So the king shut the princess up in a wooden chest with some food, and sent her floating away. It chanced to float by the capital of another king which was also on the river bank. This king saw the chest and had it brought ashore and opened. What was his surprise to see a beautiful young princess come out of it. He asked her who she was, and she explained to him her sad fate, and that she was the daughter of such-and-such a king. 'Never mind, my dear,' said the other king. 'As you were his daughter, now you have become mine. You must live in my palace with the other women of my family.' He then got hold of a horse-faced monkey, shut it up in the chest, and sent it floating away down the river. By and bye it passed the place where the mendicant's disciples were watching, and they saw it and brought it ashore, and sent word to him that it had been successfully stopped. So he took leave from the king on some pretext or other, and hastened to his disciples. He was filled with joy when he saw the chest, and said to his disciples, 'now, you must sing hymns throughout the whole night, and if you hear any screams or calls for help, you must not pay any attention.' So they began to sing hymns at the tops of their voices, and the mendicant took up the chest and carried it into a room, where he shut the doors and windows tight, and hastened to open his box. He, of course, expected to find the princess inside, but instead there came out a monkey who at once savagely attacked him and began to tear him to pieces. The mendicant screamed out loudly for help, but the disciples remembered his instructions, and no one paid any heed to him. In the morning,[1] as there was no sign of their preceptor, the disciples at length broke open the door of the room. As they did so, a huge monkey rushed out, and, thrown in a corner, they found the mangled corpse of the mendicant.

So the Saying runs—

As a man deals with others, so will he reap himself;
The fair one sat in a king's house, but the monkey ate the chaplain.

---

[1] Ãdh^{e}yārī is so translated, and this meaning is required; but the word usually means 'darkness.'

KHAṬŌLĀ BUNDĒLĪ OF DAMOH.

In the Central Provinces District of Damoh, the vernacular is a form of Bundēlī closely agreeing with the Khaṭōlā spoken immediately to its north in the State of Panna. This will be evident from the following short extract from the Parable of the Prodigal Son.

[No. 13.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ (KHAṬŌLĀ). (DISTRICT, DAMOH.)

कोई मनखे-कै दो लरका हते । ऊ-में-से लुहरे-ने अपने दद्दा-से कई कै ए दद्दा धन-में-से जो मोरो हौंसा होय सो मो-खाँ बाँट दवै । तब ऊ-नें ऊ-खाँ अपनो धन बाँट दवो । भौत दिन नईं भये कै लुहरो लरका सबरो धन समेट-के दूर मुलक-में कड़ गयौ और उतै बदमासी-में अपनो धन बढ़ा-डारो । जब ऊ-नें सबरो धन बढ़ा-डारो तब उतै काल परो और ऊ गरीब हो-गओ ॥

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Kōī manᵃkhē-kē dō larᵃkā hatē. Ū-mẽ-sē luhᵃrē-nē
A-certain man-of two sons were. Them-in-from the-younger-by apᵃnē daddā-sē kaī kai, 'ē daddā, dhan-mẽ-sē jō mōrō his-own father-to it-was-said that, 'O father, property-in-from which my hĩsā hōy sō mō-khã̄ bãṭ dawai.' Tab ū-nẽ ū-khã̄ apᵃnō share may-be that me-to dividing give.' Then him-by him-to his-own dhaṇ bãṭ-dawō. Bhaut din naĩ bhayē kai luhᵃrō fortune having-divided-was-given. Many days not became that the-younger larᵃkā sabᵃrō dhan samēṭ-kē dūr mulak-mẽ kaṛ-gayau aur son all property having-collected distant country-into went-out and utai badmāsī-mẽ apᵃnō dhan baṛhā-ḍārō. Jab ū-nẽ sabᵃrō there bad-conduct-in his-own fortune wasted-away. When him-by all dhan baṛhā-ḍārō, tab utai kāl parō, aur ū garīb hō-gaō.
property had-been-spent, then there famine fell, and he poor became.

LODHĀNTĪ OR RĀṬHŌRĀ BUNDĒLĪ OF HAMIRPUR AND JALAUN.

The north-western portion of the district of Hamirpur and the neighbouring country of Pargana Urai in Jalaun, across the river Betwa, have a population consisting largely of the Lōdhā caste. The tract is accordingly known as Lodhānt. The most important fiscal division in it is Pargana Rāṭh of Hamirpur, and the form of Bundēlī here spoken is known as Lodhāntī or Rāṭhōrā. In the heart of the Hamirpur district there are portions of the native states of the Bundelkhand Agency, viz. Pargana Bawan Chaurasi of the Charkhari State, the Sarila State, and the Jigni Jagir. Here also the language is Rāṭhōrā.

We thus get the following figures for the number of people speaking Lodhāntī or Rāṭhōrā. They are not the same as those originally published in the Rough Lists of languages of these districts.

Jalaun	8,000
Hamirpur	98,000
Bundelkhand Agency	39,500
TOTAL .	145,500

The Lodhāntī dialect is nearly pure Bundēlī. It has all the peculiarities of the Bundēlī of Orchha described above, such as kaũ or khā̃, the sign of the accusative-dative; saĩ, the sign of the instrumental-ablative; and kaĩ, the sign of the conjunctive participle. The vocabulary is peculiar. The following words occurring in the specimen (a folktale provided by Rai Sahib Kashi Pershad of Charkhari) and elsewhere are worth taking as examples:—

anuā, a false accusation, a calumny. In ordinary Hindōstānī this is considered a woman's word.

upadrai, a quarrel. Cf. Hindōstānī upadrav, a calamity.

baiyar, a woman, a wife.

chunāṭū, a box for holding lime, Hindōstānī chunauṭī.

khālaĩ, below.

baĩṛan, to imprison; bĩṛan, to be imprisoned. Cf. Hindōstānī bē̃ṛā, a bolt.

nibēran, to decide, discriminate. Cf. Hindōstānī nibēṛ^{a}nā, to divide.

khuwāhand (= khāwand), a husband.

suānau, gold.

luāhau, iron.

akēlaĩ, but.

Generally speaking the pronunciation of Lodhāntī is more broad than elsewhere in Hamirpur. The sound of au is often preferred to that of ō. Thus, we have kau instead of kō to mean 'of', and mautī instead of mōtī, a pearl. 'My' is sometimes even muārau, cf. suānau, luāhau above. Strong adjectives, also, such as baṛau, great, end in au instead of ō. Similarly, we have ap^{a}nai for ap^{a}nē, and byāṭā, a son, for bēṭā. Most strong nouns end in ō or au, but some, especially nouns of relationship like byāṭā, end in ā. The oblique form of such nouns in ā also ends in ā. Thus, accusative lar^{a}kā-khā̃, a boy. So supēt ghùrā-kau palaĩchā, the saddle of the white horse.

Nouns are declined as usual. As in many other dialects there are instances of locatives or instrumentals ending in ē. Thus, gharē, in a house; bhūkhē, in or by hunger. Janaĩ, persons, is a nominative plural.

Among the pronouns we may note bau, he; bā, she; oblique bā for both genders. Jau is 'this.' Ūē is 'him,' and una-ī, 'them also.' 'Anyone' is kōū, obl. kāū. Āp or apun is 'Your Honour.'

In the case of verbs, again note the use of the feminine, agreeing with bāt understood in forms like bichārī, it was considered; kahī, it was said; pũchhī, it was asked. Other forms worth noting are ān, having come; khabā, having caused to eat; khāaĩ, the act of eating, a feminine verbal noun as in Banāpharī; and pahinai for pahinī, worn, a feminine in ai, again as in Banāpharī.

[No. 14.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ (LODHĀNTĪ OR RĀṬHŌRĀ). (DISTRICT, HAMIRPUR.)

(Rai Sahib Kashi Pershad.)

एक कोऊ साहूकार रहै । वा चार जनैं घर-मैं हते । साहूकार वा साहूकारिन वा साहूकार-का बहू वा ब्याटा । जौन गाँव-मैं साहूकार रहत-तो बा गाँव-के राजा-नैं बिचारी कै साहूकार-सैं हजार दो हजार रुपैया कौनउ अनुआ उपद्रै-सैं लै लओ चाहिये । रात-कैं राजा ऊ-के घर-की पछीत आन लगो कि साहूकार-की बहू वा ब्याटा रात-कैं जो निकरहैं तौ एही-मैं ऊखाँ डाँड़ लैहौं । अकेलैं साहूकार-के घर-मैं-सैं कोऊ ना गओ आओ । और जहाँ तहाँ पर रहे ॥

साहूकार-की बहू वा ब्याटा जो भीतर परे-ते बहू-नैं अपने स्वामिया-सैं कही कि सोओ बहुत रात जात-रही-है । ऊ-नैं कही कि पान लगा-देव । खा-कैं सो रहैं । बिगर पान खाऐं मोरी आँखी ना लगहै । बदूयर-नैं कही कि चुनाटू-मैं चूना नही आय । बौ बोलो खालैं डुकर-की थैलिया-मैं-सैं चूना लै-आओ । बा खालैं आई । उतईं चूना ना मिलो । सो जा-कैं ऊ-नैं स्वामिया-सैं कही कि ओई थैलिया-मैं चूना नहियाय । बौ बोलो कि बिगर पान मोरी आँखी ना लगहै सो अपनी नथुनिया-मैं जो नौ लाख-कौ मौती पहिने-है सो ई-खाँ दिया-की जोत-सैं जरा-देव कि चूना हो-जाय । ऊ-नैं मौती-कौ चूना बना-कैं पान लगाओ और ऊए खबा-दओ और फिर वे सो-रहे ॥

राजा-नैं जो पछीतै लगो हते सब सुनो और मन-मैं बोलो कि जब एक बिरी पान-के लानै नौ लाख-कौ मौती जरा-दओ-है तौ जा-के धन-कौ कौन मित है ॥

राजा अपने महलन-कौं आवत-रहे और जब सकारो भओ तब साहू-कार-कौं पकर बुलाओ वा पूँछी कि तुम बड़े कि हम बड़े । साहूकार-नैं कही कि मैं नही जानत कै को बड़ो आय । आप-ई जानै। राजा-नैं साहूकार-कौं

हवालात-मैँ बैँड़ दश्रो और फिर राजा-नैँ साहूकारिन वा ऊ-के लरका-कौँ बुलाश्रो वा पूँछी कै हम बड़े हैँ कै तुम। उन-ईं-नैँ निबेरौ ना करो। तब उन-ईं-कौँ हवालात-मैँ बिँड़ा-दश्रो। फिर साहूकार-की बहू-कौँ बुला-कैँ पूँछो कि हम बड़े कि साहूकार बड़ौ है। ऊ-नैँ कही कि गरी-परवर जो मैँ जान माफ़-कर पाऊँ तौ कहौँ। राजा-नैँ कही कि तोरी जान माफ़ है कहू। ऊ-नैँ कही कै ना-तौ अपुन बड़े आँय ना मोरौ ससुर बड़ौ आय। दिन बड़ौ है। राजा-नैँ पूँछी कि कैसैँ दिन बड़ौ है। ऊ-नैँ कही देखौ काल मोरे ससुर-कौ दिन बड़ौ हतो कि मोरे खुवाहंद-नैँ नौ लाख-कौ चूना एक बिरी पान-मैँ खा-लश्रो। और आज अपुन-कौ दिन बड़ौ है कि अपुन-के हुकम-सैँ मोरे सास ससुर वा खुवाहंद भूखे हवालात-मैँ बिँड़े-हैँ। सो दिन बड़ौ है। कोऊ काऊ-सैँ बड़ौ नही आय। राजा जा सुन-कैँ खुसी भए और ऊ-के सास ससुर वा खुवाहंद-कौँ हवालात-सैँ छोड़-दश्रो वा ऊ-खाँ इनाम दई और ऊ-कौँ ऊ-के घरे पठवा-दश्रो ॥

[No. 14.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ (LODHĀNTĪ OR RĀṬHŌRĀ). (DISTRICT, HAMIRPUR.)

(Rai Sahib Kashi Pershad.)

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ēk kōū sāhūkār rahai. Wā chār janaĩ ghar-maĩ hatē.
A certain merchant was. And four persons house-in were.

Sāhūkār, wā sāhūkārin, wā sāhūkār-kā bahū
The-merchant, and the-merchant's-wife, and the-merchant's daughter-in-law wā byāṭā. Jaun gā̃w-maĩ sāhūkār rahat-tō, bā gā̃w-kē and son. What village-in the-merchant living-was, that village-of rājā-naĩ bichārī kai, 'sāhūkār-saĩ hajār dō hajār the-king-by it-was-thought that, 'the-merchant-from thousand two thousand rupaiyā kaunaü anuā upadrai-saĩ lai laō chāhiyē.'

rupees some pretended quarrel-by having-taken to-take is-proper.'

Rāt-kaĩ rājā ū-kē ghar-kī pachhīt ān lagō ki, Night-at the-king his house-of rear having-come stayed that,

'sāhūkār-kī bahū wā byāṭā rāt-kaĩ jō nikarᵃhaĩ,
'the-merchant-of daughter-in-law and son night-by if they-will-come-out, tau ēhī-maĩ ū-khā̃ ḍā̃ṛ laihaũ.' Akēlaĩ sāhūkār-kē ghar-maĩ-saĩ then this-in him-to fine I-will-take.' But the-merchant's house-in-from kōū nā gaō āō, aur jahā̃-tahā̃ par-rahē.

anyone not went came, and where-there they-lay-down.

Sāhūkār-kī bahū wā byāṭā jō bhītar parē-tē,
The-merchant-of daughter-in-law and son who inside lying-down-were,

bahū-naĩ apᵃnai swāmiyā-saĩ kahī ki, 'sōō, bahut rāt
the-daughter-in-law-by her-own husband-to it-was-said that, 'sleep, much night

jāt-rahī-hai.' Ū-naĩ kahī ki, 'pān lagā-dēo, khā-kaĩ going-been-has.' Him-by it-was-said that, 'betel prepare, eaten-having sō-rahaĩ. Bigar pān khāaĩ mōrī ā̃khī nā lagᵃhai.'

let-us-go-to-sleep. Without betel eating my eye not will-close.'

Baĩyar-naĩ kahī ki, 'chunāṭū-maĩ chūnā nahī āy.' Bau
The-woman-by it-was-said that, 'the-limebox-in lime not is.' He bōlō, 'khālaĩ ḍukar-kī thāĩliyā-maĩ-saĩ chūnā lai-āō.' Bā khālaĩ āī.

spoke, 'below old-man-of bag-in-from lime bring.' She below came.

Uṭa-ī̃ chūnā nā milō. Sō jā-kaĩ ū-naĩ swāmiyā-saĩ
There-even lime not was-got. Therefore gone-having her-by the-husband-to kahī ki, 'ō-ī thāĩliyā-maĩ chūnā nahiyāy.' Bau bōlō ki, it-was-said that, 'that-even bag-in lime is-not.' He spoke that,
'bigar pān mōrī ā̃khī nā lagᵃhai, sō apᵃnī nathuniyā-maĩ
'without betel my eye not will-close, therefore your-own nosering-in jō nau lākh-kau mautī pahinai-hai, sō ī-khā̃ diyā-kī jōt-saĩ what nine lakhs-of pearl worn-is, that this-for lamp-of flame-in jarā-dēo, ki chūnā hō-jāy.' Ū-naĩ mautī-kau chūnā banā-kaĩ burn, that lime may-become.' Her-by pearl-of lime made-having pān lagāō, aur ūē khabā-daō, aur phir bē sō-rahē.
betel was-prepared, and to-him to-eat-was-given, and again they went-to-sleep.

Rājā-naĩ, jō pachhītai lagō-hatē, sab sunau, aur man-maĩ
The-king-by, who in-the-rear stayed-had, all was-heard, and mind-in bōlō ki, 'jab ēk birī pān-kē lānai nau lākh-kau mauti he-spoke that, 'when one roll (of) betel-of for-the-sake nine lakhs-of pearl jarā-daō-hai, tau jā-kē dhan-kau kaun mit hai?'
burnt-been-has, then this(-person)-of wealth-of what limit is?'

Rājā apᵃnai mahᵃlau-kaũ āwat-rahē, aur jab sakārau bhaō,
The-king his-own palace-to coming-was, and when morning became,
tab sāhūkār-kaũ pakar bulāō, wā pū̃chhī ki, 'tum then the-merchant having-seized was-summoned, and it-was-asked that, 'you baṛē ki ham baṛē?' Sāhūkār-naĩ kahī ki, 'maĩ nahī great or we (I) great?' The-merchant-by it-was-said that, 'I not jānat kai kō baṛau āy. Āp-ī jānai.' Rājā-naĩ knowing that who great is. Your-Honour-alone knows.' The-king-by sāhūkār-kaũ hawālāt-maĩ baĩṛ daō, aur phir rājā-naĩ
the-merchant-to jail-in imprisoning was-given, and again the-king-by sāhūkārin wā ū-kē larᵃkā-kaũ bulāō wā pū̃chhī the-merchant's-wife and his son-to it-was-summoned and it-was-asked kai, 'ham baṛē haĩ kai tum?' Una-ī-naĩ nibērau nā that, 'we (I) great are or you?' Them-also-by distinguishing not karō. Tab una-ī-kaũ hawālāt-maĩ bī̃ṛā-daō. Phir was-made. Then them-also-to jail-in it-was-imprisoned. Again sāhūkār-kī bahū-kaũ bulā-kaĩ pū̃chhī ki, 'ham
the-merchant-of daughter-in-law summoned-having it-was-asked that, 'we (I) baṛē ki sāhūkār baṛau hai?' Ū-naĩ kahī ki, 'garī-parᵃwar, great or the-merchant great is?' Her-by it-was-said that, 'poor-cherisher, jō maĩ jān māph-kar pāū̃, tau kahaū̃.' Rājā-naĩ kahī
if I life pardon-making get, then I-may-say.' The-king-by it-was-said ki, 'tōrī jān māph hai, kahū.' Ū-naĩ kahī kai, 'nā-tau that, 'thy life pardon is, say.' Her-by it-was-said that, 'neither apun baṛē ãy, nā mōrau sasur baṛau āy. Din

Your-Honour great is, nor my father-in-law great is. The-day baṛau hai.' Rājā-naĩ pũchhī ki, 'kaisaĩ din baṛau hai?'
great is.' The-king-by it-was-asked that, 'how the-day great is?'
Ū-naĩ kahī, 'dēkhau, kāl mōrē sasur-kau din baṛau
Her-by it-was-said, 'behold, yesterday my father-in-law-of the-day great hatō, ki mōrē khuwāhand-naĩ nau lākh-kau chūnā ēk birī pān-maĩ was, that my husband-by nine lakhs-of lime one roll (of) betel-in khā-laō. Aur āj apun-kau din baṛau hai, ki was-eaten. And today Your-Honour-of the-day great is, that apun-kē hukam-saĩ mōrē sās, sasur, wā khuwāhand
Your-Honour-of the-order-by my mother-in-law, father-in-law, and husband bhūkhē hawālāt-maĩ bĩṛē-haĩ. Sō din baṛau hai. Kōū in-hunger jail-in imprisoned-are. Therefore the-day great is. Anyone kāū-saĩ baṛau nahī āy.' Rājā jā sun-kaĩ khusī bhaē, anyone-than great not is.' The-king this heard-having pleased became, aur ū-kē sās, sasur, wā khuwāhand-kaũ hawālāt-saĩ and her mother-in-law, father-in-law, and husband-to jail-from chhōṛ-daō, wā ū-khã̄ ū-kē gharē paṭh[a]wā-daō.
it-was-released, and her-to her in-house it-was-sent.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

Once upon a time there was a merchant, whose family consisted of four persons, himself, his wife, his son's wife, and his son. Now the king of the town in which the merchant dwelt thought to himself, 'I must get up some fictitious quarrel with this merchant, and get one or two thousand rupees out of him.' So one night he went and hid himself in the rear of the merchant's house, expecting to catch his son and daughter-in-law going out, and to be able to get a fine out of him on that account. But no one came in or went out. The good folks went quietly to bed.

After a time, the daughter-in-law said to her husband, the merchant's son, 'it's getting very late, why don't you go to sleep?' Said he, 'first prepare a roll of betel for me,[1] and after I have had a chew we can go to sleep. I'll never close my eyes unless I first have a chew of betel.' She answered, 'there is no lime in the lime-box.' Then said he, 'go downstairs, and get some lime from the Old Man's (his father's) bag.' She did so, but neither was there any lime there. So she came back and told her husband. Said he, 'if I don't get some betel, I won't close my eyes. There's a pearl worth nine lakhs of rupees in your nose-ring. Make some lime by burning it in the lamp-flame.'

[1] A roll of betel is prepared with betel leaf, arecanut, and spices, of which the most important is lime.

Uta-ī chūnā nā milō. Sō jā-kaĩ ū-naĩ swāmiyā-saĩ
There-even lime not was-got. Therefore gone-having her-by the-husband-to kahī ki, 'ō-ī thăĭliyā-maĩ chūnā nahiyāy.' Bau bōlō ki, it-was-said that, 'that-even bag-in lime is-not.' He spoke that,
'bigar pān mōrī ãkhī nā lagªhai, sō apªnī nathuniyā-maĩ
'without betel my eye not will-close, therefore your-own nosering-in jō nau lākh-kau mautī pahinai-hai, sō ī-khã̄ diyā-kī jōt-saĩ what nine lakhs-of pearl worn-is, that this-for lamp-of flame-in jarā-dēo, ki chūnā hō-jāy.' Ū-naĩ mautī-kau chūnā banā-kaĩ burn, that lime may-become.' Her-by pearl-of lime made-having pān lagāō, aur ūē khabā-daō, aur phir bē sō-rahē.
betel was-prepared, and to-him to-eat-was-given, and again they went-to-sleep.

Rājā-naĩ, jō pachhītai lagō-hatē, sab sunau, aur man-maĩ
The-king-by, who in-the-rear stayed-had, all was-heard, and mind-in bōlō ki, 'jab ēk birī pān-kē lānai nau lākh-kau mautī
he-spoke that, 'when one roll (of) betel-of for-the-sake nine lakhs-of pearl jarā-daō-hai, tau jā-kē dhan-kau kaun mit hai?'
burnt-been-has, then this(-person)-of wealth-of what limit is?'

Rājā apªnai mahªlan-kaũ āwat-rahē, aur jab sakārau bhaō,
The-king his-own palace-to coming-was, and when morning became,
tab sāhūkār-kaũ pakar bulāō, wā pũchhī ki, 'tum
then the-merchant having-seized was-summoned, and it-was-asked that, 'you baṛē ki ham baṛē?' Sāhūkār-naĩ kahī ki, 'maĩ nahī great or we (I) great?' The-merchant-by it-was-said that, 'I not jānat kai kō baṛau āy. Āp-ī jānai.' Rājā-naĩ knowing that who great is. Your-Honour-alone knows.' The-king-by sāhūkār-kaũ hawālāt-maĩ baĩṛ daō, aur phir rājā-naĩ
the-merchant-to jail-in imprisoning was-given, and again the-king-by sāhūkārin wā ū-kē larªkā-kaũ bulāō wā pũchhī
the-merchant's-wife and his son-to it-was-summoned and it-was-asked kai, 'ham baṛē haĩ kai tum?' Una-ī-naĩ nibērau nā that, 'we (I) great are or you?' Them-also-by distinguishing not karō. Tab una-ī-kaũ hawālāt-maĩ bĩṛā-daō. Phir was-made. Then them-also-to jail-in it-was-imprisoned. Again
sāhūkār-kī bahū-kaũ bulā-kaĩ pũchhī ki, 'ham
the-merchant-of daughter-in-law summoned-having it-was-asked that, 'we (I) baṛē ki sāhūkār baṛau hai?' Ū-naĩ kahī ki, 'garī-parªwar, great or the-merchant great is?' Her-by it-was-said that, 'poor-cherisher, jō maĩ jān māph-kar pāũ, tau kahaũ.' Rājā-naĩ kahī
if I life pardon-making get, then I-may-say.' The-king-by it-was-said ki, 'tōrī jān māph hai, kahū.' Ū-naĩ kahī kai, 'nā-tau that, 'thy life pardon is, say.' Her-by it-was-said that, 'neither apun baṛē ãy, nā mōrau sasur baṛau āy. Din

Your-Honour great is, nor my father-in-law great is. The-day baṛau hai.' Rājā-naĩ pũchhī ki, 'kaisaĩ din baṛau hai?'
great is.' The-king-by it-was-asked that, 'how the-day great is?'
Ū-naĩ kahī, 'dēkhau, kāl mōrē sasur-kau din baṛau
Her-by it-was-said, 'behold, yesterday my father-in-law-of the-day great hatō, ki mōrē khuwāhand-naĩ nau lākh-kau chūnā ēk birī pān-maĩ was, that my husband-by nine lakhs-of lime one roll (of) betel-in khā-laō. Aur āj apun-kau din baṛau hai, ki was-eaten. And today Your-Honour-of the-day great is, that apun-kē hukam-saĩ mōrē sās, sasur, wā khuwāhand
Your-Honour-of the-order-by my mother-in-law, father-in-law, and husband
bhūkhē hawālāt-maĩ bĩṛē-haĩ. Sō din baṛau hai. Kōū in-hunger jail-in imprisoned-are. Therefore the-day great is. Anyone kāū-saĩ baṛau nahī āy.' Rājā jā sun-kaĩ khusī bhaē, anyone-than great not is.' The-king this heard-having pleased became,
aur ū-kē sās, sasur, wā khuwāhand-kaũ hawālāt-saĩ
and her mother-in-law, father-in-law, and husband-to jail-from chhōṛ-daō, wā ū-khã̄ ū-kē gharē paṭhᵃwā-daō.
it-was-released, and her-to her in-house it-was-sent.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

Once upon a time there was a merchant, whose family consisted of four persons, himself, his wife, his son's wife, and his son. Now the king of the town in which the merchant dwelt thought to himself, 'I must get up some fictitious quarrel with this merchant, and get one or two thousand rupees out of him.' So one night he went and hid himself in the rear of the merchant's house, expecting to catch his son and daughter-in-law going out, and to be able to get a fine out of him on that account. But no one came in or went out. The good folks went quietly to bed.

After a time, the daughter-in-law said to her husband, the merchant's son, 'it's getting very late, why don't you go to sleep?' Said he, 'first prepare a roll of betel for me,[1] and after I have had a chew we can go to sleep. I'll never close my eyes unless I first have a chew of betel.' She answered, 'there is no lime in the lime-box.' Then said he, 'go downstairs, and get some lime from the Old Man's (his father's) bag.' She did so, but neither was there any lime there. So she came back and told her husband. Said he, 'if I don't get some betel, I won't close my eyes. There's a pearl worth nine lakhs of rupees in your nose-ring. Make some lime by burning it in the lamp-flame.'

[1] A roll of betel is prepared with betel leaf, arecanut, and spices, of which the most important is lime.

So she made some lime out of the pearl, and prepared some betel, which he chewed, and the two went off to sleep.

Now the king, who had been hiding in the rear of the house, heard all this, and he said to himself, 'they've burnt a nine-lakh pearl for the sake of one roll of betel. This man's wealth must be limitless.'

So he went home to his palace, and as soon as morning came he had the merchant arrested and brought before him. As soon as he appeared, the king asked him, 'who is the greater, you or I?' The merchant replied, 'I do not know. Your Majesty alone knows.' Then the king put him in jail, and sent for the merchant's wife and son. 'Who,' asked he, 'is greater, I or you?' They also were unable to reply, so he put them, too, in jail, and sent for the merchant's daughter-in-law, and asked her, 'who is the greater, I or the merchant?' She replied, 'Cherisher of the Poor, if you will promise me my life I will tell.' Said the king, 'you have the promise of your life, tell.' Said she, 'neither is Your Majesty great, nor is my father-in-law. It is the day which is great.' The king asked her what she meant. Said she, 'behold, yesterday my father-in-law's day was great, so that my husband was able to eat nine lakhs worth of lime in a single betel roll; but to-day Your Majesty's day is great, for by Your Majesty's order my father-in-law, my mother-in-law, and my husband have been cast into jail, and are now lying there in hunger. Therefore, it is the day which is great. No one person is greater than anyone else.' When the king heard this reply he was much pleased, and released her father-in-law, her mother-in-law, and her husband from jail, and sent her home to her house.

PĀWĀRĪ BUNDĒLĪ OF DATIA AND THE NEIGHBOURHOOD.

Pãwārī is the name for the variety of Bundēlī which is spoken in those parts of the Gwalior and Bundelkhand Agencies of Central India, in which the Paramāra or Pãwār Rājpūts are one of the principal clans. In the Bundelkhand Agency it is spoken in the tract lying to the west of the Jhansi District, which includes the State of Datia, and the Alampur Pargana of the State of Indore. In Gwalior it is spoken in the tract adjoining Datia, i.e. in the east of the Gird Gwalior, and in the Bhander Districts of that State.

The number of its speakers is reported as follows:—

Bundelkhand Agency	203,500
Gwalior	150,000
TOTAL	353,500

Pãwārī hardly differs at all from ordinary Bundēlī. It has a few local peculiarities, most of which it shares with the Lodhāntī just described. This will be evident from the following folktale, which, like so many of these Bundēlī specimens, has been prepared by Rai Sahib Kashi Pershad of Charkhari. We may note the following words which do not occur in ordinary dictionaries:—

hāi-pĩg^{a}lā, lamentation.
lĩraiyā, a fox.
kōl-kadaiyã̃, carrying on the shoulders.
sĩkā, a swing-shelf.

We see very strongly in force the Bundēlī tendency to omit a medial h and to contract. Thus, we have kai for kahi, having said; raũgau, I shall remain; raō, remained; similarly rahat-tō, he was remaining, becomes ratō. Other verbal forms worth noting are lag^{a}hai, he will reach, and lakhaĩ-ratō, he was remaining gazing. The following causal verbs occur in the specimen, kuān, to cause to say; dikhāban (neuter in sense, really a potential passive), to be visible; dibān, to cause to give.

[No. 15.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ (PĀWĀRĪ). (STATE, DATIA.)

(Rai Sahib Kashi Pershad.)

एक साहूकार एक तलाव-के किनारै रतो। एक दिन एक कंगाल साहूकार-के इतै माँगबे-कौं आओ। साहूकार बोलो कि जो तलाव-मैं सब रात ठाड़ो-रहै बाए मैं बीस रुपैया देंव। कंगाल बोलो मैं ठाड़ो रऔंगो और साहूकार-सैं तीन बेर कुवा-कैं रुपैयन-की पक्की कर लई। और कंगाल तलाव-मैं रात-के समैयाँ जाय-कैं ठाड़ो भओ। और इन-बीचाँ बाए कोऊ ना दिखावै अकेलैं एक दिया दूर गाँव-के दिबाले-मैं उजरत दिखावै। सो बाए अपनी नजर-सैं लखैं रतो। सकारैं तलाव-मैं-सैं कढ़-कैं साहूकार-के ढिकाँ गओ और साहूकार-सैं बोलो कि रुपैया देव। साहूकार बोलो जा तौ बता रात भर तो-कौं काऊ-की आसरौ तौ नाईं रओ। कंगाल बोलो मोए काऊ-की आसरौ नाईं रओ। अकेलैं दिबाले-मैं एक दिया उजरत दिखात-रओ। साहूकार-नैं कही कि तैं-नैं सब रात दिया-सैं तापो और बाए कछू ना दओ।

बौ हाइ-पिंगला करत चलो गओ। गैल-मैं बाए एक लिंरैया मिलो और पूँछी कि हाइ-पिंगला कैसौ करत-जात-है। बा-नैं सब हाल कहि सुनाओ। लिंरैया बोलो कि मैं रुपैया तोए दिबा देहौं। अकेलैं तैं मोए कोल-कदैयाँ धर लै-चल और इत-ई-कौ-इत-ई उतार जाइये। और पैलाँ गाँव-मैं कै आ कि बन-कौ राजा आउत-है सो अपनै अपनै कुत्ता बाँध लेव। कंगाल गाँव-मैं कै आओ और लिंरैया-कौं लिवा-गओ। लिंरैया-नैं जा-कैं पँचाइत जोरी और कही कि दो खम्भ गार-देव जा-सैं सींका बाँध-देव और जा-मैं चावरन-की हंडी धर-देव और तरैं आग बार-देव कि चावर चुर-जावैं। पंच बोले कैं हंडी दूर टंगी-है। आँच ना लगहै। चावर कैसैं चुरहैं। लिंरैया बोलो कि दिया-सैं तापत कैसैं हैं। ऐसैं चावर चुरहैं।

पंच कछू ना बोले । लिँरैया बोलो कि ना दिया-सैँ कंगाल-नैँ तापो-है ना चावर चुरहैँ । बाए रुपैया गिन-देव । और साहूकार-सैँ बाए रुपैया गिना-दए । कंगाल-नैँ रुपैया लै-कैँ लिँरैया-कौँ कोल-कदैयाँ धरो और वन-मैँ बाए उतार-आओ और फिर अपनै घरे गओ ॥

[No. 15.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ (PĀWĀRĪ). (STATE, DATIA.)

(Rai Sahib Kashi Pershad.)

एक साहूकार एक तलाव-के किनारै रतो। एक दिन एक कंगाल साहूकार-के दूतै माँगबे-कौं आओ। साहूकार बोलो कि जो तलाव-मैं सब रात ठाड़ो-रहै बाए मैं बीस रुपैया देंव। कंगाल बोलो मैं ठाड़ो रऔंगो और साहूकार-सैं तीन बेर कुवा-कैं रुपैयन-की पक्की कर लई। और कंगाल तलाव-मैं रात-के समैयाँ जाय-कैं ठाड़ो भओ। और हुन-बीचाँ बाए कोऊ ना दिखाबै अकेलैं एक दिया दूर गाँव-के दिबाले-मैं उजरत दिखाबै। सो बाए अपनी नजर-सैं लखैं रतो। सकारैं तलाव-मैं-सैं कढ़-कैं साहूकार-के ढिकाँ गओ और साहूकार-सैं बोलो कि रुपैया देव। साहूकार बोलो जा तौ बता रात भर तो-कौं काऊ-कौ आसरौ तौ नाईं रओ। कंगाल बोलो मोए काऊ-कौ आसरौ नाईं रओ। अकेलैं दिबाले-मैं एक दिया उजरत दिखात-रओ। साहूकार-नैं कही कि तैं-नैं सब रात दिया-सैं तापो और बाए कछू ना दओ।

बौ हाड़-पिंगला करत चलो गओ। गैल-मैं बाए एक लिंरैया मिलो और पूँछी कि हाड़-पिंगला कैसौ करत-जात-है। बा-नैं सब हाल कहि सुनाओ। लिंरैया बोलो कि मैं रुपैया तोए दिबा देहौं। अकेलैं तैं मोए कोल-कदैयाँ धर लै-चल और दूत-ई-कौ-दूत-ई उतार जाइये। और पैलाँ गाँव-मैं कै आ कि बन-कौ राजा आउत-है सो अपनै अपनै कुत्ता बाँध लेव। कंगाल गाँव-मैं कै आओ और लिंरैया-कौं लिवा-गओ। लिंरैया-नैं जा-कैं पँचाइत जोरी और कही कि दो खम्म गार-देव जा-सैं सींका बाँध-देव और जा-मैं चावरन-की हंडी धर-देव और तरैं आग बार-देव कि चावर चुर-जावैं। पंच बोले कैं हंडी दूर टंगी-है। आँच ना लगहै। चावर कैसैं चुरहैं। लिंरैया बोलो कि दिया-सैं तापत कैसैं हैं। ऐसैं चावर चुरहैं।

पंच कछू ना बोले । लिँरैया बोलो कि ना दिया-सैँ कंगाल-नैँ तापो-है ना चावर चुरहैँ । बाए रुपैया गिन-देव । और साहूकार-सैँ बाए रुपैया गिना-दए । कंगाल-नैँ रुपैया लै-कैँ लिँरैया-कौँ कोल-कदैयाँ धरो और वन-मैँ बाए उतार-आओ और फिर अपनै घरे गओ ॥

[No. 15.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ (PĀWĀRĪ). (STATE, DATIA.)

(Rai Sahib Kashi Pershad.)

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ēk sāhūkār ēk talāw-kē kinārai ratō. Ēk din ēk
One merchant one tank-of on-bank living-was. One day one kaṅgāl sāhūkār-kē itai mā̃gᵃbē-kaũ āō. Sāhūkār bōlō ki, poor-man the-merchant-of near begging-for came. The-merchant said that,
'jō talāw-maī sab rāt ṭhāṛō-rahai bāē maī bīs rupaiyā
'who the-tank-in all night standing-may-remain to-him I twenty rupees dē̃w.' Kaṅgāl bōlō, 'maī ṭhāṛō raaũgau,' aur may-give.' The-poor-man said, 'I standing-up will-remain,' and sāhūkār-saī tīn bēr kuwā-kaī rupaiyan kī pakkī
the-merchant-from three times caused-to-say-having rupees of assurance kar laī. Aur kaṅgāl talāw-maī rāt-kē samaiyā̃ having-made was-taken. And the-poor-man the-tank-in night-of at-time jāy-kaī ṭhāṛō bhaō. Aur hun-bīchā̃ bāē kōū nā gone-having standing-up became. And there to-him anyone not dikhābai, akēlaī ēk diyā dūr gā̃w-kē dibālē-maī ujᵃrat dikhābai.
is-visible, but one light distant village-of temple-in shining is-visible.
Sō bāē apᵃnī najar-saī lakhaī ratō. Sakāraī
Therefore to-it his-own gaze-with looking-at (he-)remaining-was. At-dawn talāw-maī-saī kaṛh-kaī sāhūkār-kē ḍhikā̃ gaō aur tank-in-from come-out-having the-merchant-of near (he-)went and sāhūkār-saī bōlō ki, 'rupaiyā dēw.' Sāhūkār bōlō, 'jā tau the-merchant-to said that, 'rupees give.' The-merchant said, 'this indeed batā, rāt bhar tō-kaũ kāũ-kau āsᵃrau tau nāī raō.' Kaṅgāl tell, night whole thee-to anyone-of help verily not was.' The-poor-man bōlō, 'mōē kāũ-kau āsᵃrau nāī raō. Akēlaī dibālē-maī ēk diyā said, 'to-me anyone-of help not was. But the-temple-in a light ujᵃrat dikhāt-raō.' Sāhūkār-naī kahī ki, 'taī-naī sab shining being-visible-was.' The-rich-man-by it-was-said that, 'thee-by all rāt diyā-saī tāpō,' aur bāē kachhū nā daō.
night lamp-from warming-was-done,' and to-him anything not was-given.

Bau hāi-pĩgªlā karat chalō-gaō. Gail-maĩ bāē ēk lĩraiyā
He lamentation making departed. The-road-in to-him a fox milō, aur pũchhī ki, 'hāi-pĩgªlā kaisau karat-jāt-hai?'
was-met, and it-was-asked that, 'lamentation why making-going-thou-art?'
Bā-naĩ sab hāl kahi sunāō. Lĩraiyā bōlō ki,
Him-by all affair having-told was-caused-to-be-heard. The-fox said that,
'maĩ rupaiyā tōē dibā dēhaũ. Akēlaĩ taĩ mōē
'I rupees to-thee having-caused-to-give will-give. But thou me kōl-kadaiyã̄ dhar lai-chal, aur ita-ī-kau-ita-ī utār on-shoulders having-placed take-away, and here-even-of-here-even having-deposited jāiyē; aur pailã̄ gã̄w-maĩ kai ā ki, "ban-kau rājā go; and first the-village-in having-said come that, "the-forest-of the-king
āut-hai, sō apªnai apªnai kuttā bã̄dh-lēw." ' Kaṅgāl coming-is, therefore your-own your-own dogs tie-up." ' The-poor-man gã̄w-maĩ kai āō aur lĩraiyā-kaũ liwā-gaō. Lĩraiyā-naĩ the-village-in having-said came and the-fox took-away. The-fox-by jā-kaĩ pãchāit jōrī aur kahī ki, gone-having an-assembly-of-arbitrators was-brought-together and it-was-said that,
'dō khamm gār-dēw; jā-saĩ sĩkā bã̄dh-dēw; aur jā-maĩ
'two poles bury; these-from a-swinging-frame tie; and this-in chāwªran-kī haṇḍī dhar-dēw; aur taraĩ āg bār-dēw ki chāwar rice-of cooking-pot place; and below fire alight-set that the-rice chur-jāwaĩ.' Pañch bōlē kaĩ, 'haṇḍī dūr ṭaṅgī-hai;
may-be-cooked.' The-arbitrators said that, 'cooking-pot distant hung-is;
ãch nā lagªhai; chāwar kaisaĩ churªhaĩ?' Lĩraiyā bōlō ki, heat not will-reach; rice how will-be-cooked?' The-fox said that,
'diyā-saĩ tāpat kaisaĩ haĩ? Aisaĩ chāwar churªhaĩ.'
'lamp-from warm-making how is? So the-rice will-be-cooked.'
Pañch kachhū nā bōlē. Lĩraiyā bōlō ki, 'nā diyā-saĩ
The-arbitrators anything not said. The-fox said that, 'not lamp-from kaṅgāl-naĩ tāpō-hai, nā chāwar churªhaĩ. Bāē
the-poor-man-by warming-been-done-has, not rice will-be-cooked. To-him rupaiyā gin-dēw.' Aur sāhūkār-saĩ bāē rupaiyā
the-rupees count-and-give.' And the-merchant-from to-him rupees ginā-daē. Kaṅgāl-naĩ rupaiyā lai-kaĩ were-caused-to-be-counted-over-and-given. The-poor-man-by the-rupees taken-having lĩraiyā-kaũ kōl-kadaiyã̄ dharō aur ban-maĩ bāē utār-āō, the-fox on-his-shoulders was-placed and the-forest-in him he-deposited,
aur phir apªnai gharē gaō.
and again his-own in-the-house (he-)went.

[No. 15.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ (PĀWĀRĪ). (STATE, DATIA.)

(Rai Sahib Kashi Pershad.)

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ēk sāhūkār ēk talāw-kē kinārai ratō. Ēk din ēk
One merchant one tank-of on-bank living-was. One day one kaṅgāl sāhūkār-kē itai mā̃gᵃbē-kaũ āō. Sāhūkār bōlō ki, poor-man the-merchant-of near begging-for came. The-merchant said that,
'jō talāw-maī sab rāt ṭhāṛō-rahai bāē maī bīs rupaiyā
'who the-tank-in all night standing-may-remain to-him I twenty rupees
dē̃w.' Kaṅgāl bōlō, 'maī ṭhāṛō raaũgau,' aur may-give.' The-poor-man said, 'I standing-up will-remain,' and sāhūkār-saī tīn bēr kuwā-kaī rupaiyan kī pakkī
the-merchant-from three times caused-to-say-having rupees of assurance kar laī. Aur kaṅgāl talāw-maī rāt-kē samaiyā̃ having-made was-taken. And the-poor-man the-tank-in night-of at-time jāy-kaī ṭhāṛō bhaō. Aur hun-bīchā̃ bāē kōū nā gone-having standing-up became. And there to-him anyone not dikhābai, akēlaī ēk diyā dūr gā̃w-kē dibālē-maī ujᵃrat dikhābai.
is-visible, but one light distant village-of temple-in shining is-visible.
Sō bāē apᵃnī najar-saī lakhaī ratō. Sakāraī
Therefore to-it his-own gaze-with looking-at (he-)remaining-was. At-dawn
talāw-maī-saī kaṛh-kaī sāhūkār-kē ḍhikā̃ gaō aur tank-in-from come-out-having the-merchant-of near (he-)went and sāhūkār-saī bōlō ki, 'rupaiyā dēw.' Sāhūkār bōlō, 'jā tau the-merchant-to said that, 'rupees give.' The-merchant said, 'this indeed batā, rāt bhar tō-kaũ kāū-kau āsᵃrau tau nāī raō.' Kaṅgāl tell, night whole thee-to anyone-of help verily not was.' The-poor-man bōlō, 'mōē kāū-kau āsᵃrau nāī raō. Akēlaī dibālē-maī ēk diyā said, 'to-me anyone-of help not was. But the-temple-in a light ujᵃrat dikhāt-raō.' Sāhūkār-naī kahī ki, 'taī-naī sab shining being-visible-was.' The-rich-man-by it-was-said that, 'thee-by all rāt diyā-saī tāpō,' aur bāē kachhū nā daō.
night lamp-from warming-was-done,' and to-him anything not was-given.

Bau hāi-pĩgªlā karat chalō-gaō. Gail-maĩ bāē ēk lĩraiyā
He lamentation making departed. The-road-in to-him a fox
milō, aur pũchhī ki, 'hāi-pĩgªlā kaisau karat-jāt-hai?'
was-met, and it-was-asked that, 'lamentation why making-going-thou-art?'
Bā-naĩ sab hāl kahi sunāō. Lĩraiyā bōlō ki,
Him-by all affair having-told was-caused-to-be-heard. The-fox said that,
'maĩ rupaiyā tōē dibā dēhaũ. Akēlaĩ taĩ mōē
'I rupees to-thee having-caused-to-give will-give. But thou me
kōl-kadaiyã̄ dhar lai-chal, aur ita-ī-kau-ita-ī utār on-shoulders having-placed take-away, and here-even-of-here-even having-deposited jāiyē; aur pailã̄ gã̄w-maĩ kai ā ki, "ban-kau rājā go; and first the-village-in having-said come that, "the-forest-of the-king
āut-hai, sō apªnai apªnai kuttā bã̄dh-lēw." ' Kaṅgāl coming-is, therefore your-own your-own dogs tie-up."' The-poor-man
gã̄w-maĩ kai āō aur lĩraiyā-kaũ liwā-gaō. Lĩraiyā-naĩ
the-village-in having-said came and the-fox took-away. The-fox-by jā-kaĩ pãchāit jōrī aur kahī ki,
gone-having an-assembly-of-arbitrators was-brought-together and it-was-said that,
'dō khamm gār-dēw; jā-saĩ sĩkā bã̄dh-dēw; aur jā-maĩ
'two poles bury; these-from a-swinging-frame tie; and this-in chāwªran-kī haṇḍī dhar-dēw; aur taraĩ āg bār-dēw ki chāwar
rice-of cooking-pot place; and below fire alight-set that the-rice chur-jāwaĩ.' Pañch bōlē kaĩ, 'haṇḍī dūr ṭaṅgī-hai;
may-be-cooked.' The-arbitrators said that, 'cooking-pot distant hung-is;
ãch nā lagªhai; chāwar kaisaĩ churªhaĩ?' Lĩraiyā bōlō ki, heat not will-reach; rice how will-be-cooked?' The-fox said that,
'diyā-saĩ tāpat kaisaĩ haĩ? Aisaĩ chāwar churªhaĩ.'
'lamp-from warm-making how is? So the-rice will-be-cooked.'
Pañch kachhū nā bōlē. Lĩraiyā bōlō ki, 'nā diyā-saĩ
The-arbitrators anything not said. The-fox said that, 'not lamp-from kaṅgāl-naĩ tāpō-hai, nā chāwar churªhaĩ. Bāē
the-poor-man-by warming-been-done-has, not rice will-be-cooked. To-him rupaiyā gin-dēw.' Aur sāhūkār-saĩ bāē rupaiyā
the-rupees count-and-give.' And the-merchant-from to-him rupees ginā-daē. Kaṅgāl-naĩ rupaiyā lai-kaĩ were-caused-to-be-counted-over-and-given. The-poor-man-by the-rupees taken-having lĩraiyā-kaũ kōl-kadaiyã̄ dharō aur ban-maĩ bāē utār-āō, the-fox on-his-shoulders was-placed and the-forest-in him he-deposited,
aur phir apªnai gharē gaō.
and again his-own in-the-house (he-)went.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

A certain merchant used to dwell on the banks of a tank. One day a poor man came to him to beg. The merchant said, 'I will give twenty rupees to whoever will stand in the tank all night.' The poor man said he would do so, and made the merchant promise to keep his words by a threefold promise. At night the poor man went to the tank and stood up in it. While he was there no one was seen by him. The only thing that was visible was a lamp shining in a temple of a village far away, and on it he kept gazing. At dawn he got out of the tank and went to the merchant and asked for his money. 'During the whole night,' said the merchant, 'did anyone give you any help?' 'No one,' replied the beggar, 'the only thing I saw was the lamp shining in the temple.' 'O then,' said the merchant, 'you were warming yourself at that lamp, were you?' and he refused to give him anything.

The beggar went away lamenting. On the road he met a fox, who asked him why he did so. He told the fox the whole affair, and the latter said, 'never mind, I'll get you your money; but after I have done so, you must lift me on to your shoulders and bring me back, and set me down in this very place. But first go and tell the villagers that the King of the Woods is coming, and that they must tie up all their dogs.' The beggar took the message, and then conducted his friend to the village. The fox called a meeting of the village arbitrators, and told them to set up two high poles, and between the two to hang high up a swinging tray,[1] and to set a cooking pot in the tray, and to light a fire on the ground below, so that some rice might be cooked in the pot. The arbitrators said, 'the cooking-pot is hung too high up. The flames won't reach it, and how on earth will the rice be cooked?' Replied the fox, 'it will be cooked, just as a person can warm himself from a distant lamp.' When they heard this the arbitrators had nothing to say, and the fox went on, 'neither could this poor man have warmed himself at that lamp, nor can the rice be cooked. Pay him the rupees he has earned.' So they made the merchant count out and give his twenty rupees to the poor man, who, as soon as he had got them, took the fox on his shoulder, and carried him to the forest, where he deposited him in the place where he had found him, and went home rejoicing.

---

[1] A sīkā is a hanging frame on which pots and the like are placed for cooking, or to be out of the way.

THE MIXED DIALECTS OF THE NORTH.

To the north, Bundēlī has on its west the closely related Braj Bhākhā dialect of Western Hindī and on its east the Baghēlī dialect of Eastern Hindī. In the District of Hamirpur it extends nearly up to the Jamna, being separated from it only by a narrow strip of land, in which Tirhārī is spoken, along the south bank of that river. As already shown good Bundēlī is spoken over nearly the whole of Hamirpur. To the east of that district lies the district of Banda.

Tirhārī and the dialects of Banda have been dealt with under the head of Eastern Hindī (Vol. VI, pp. 132 ff.). These are all mixtures of Baghēlī and Bundēlī, and as the former language is the most prominent element in all of them they have been described under it. So also has the language spoken by some 8,000 Banāpharś (Banāpharī) in Hamirpur, although Banāpharī elsewhere is distinctly a form of Bundēlī.

Between Hamirpur and Banda (on both sides of the river Ken, which forms the boundary between the two districts) is a dialect called Kuṇḍrī. The Kuṇḍrī on the Banda side is a form of Jūṛar-Baghēlī and has been described under that head (Vol. VI, pp. 152 ff.). That on the Hamirpur side of the stream is also a mixed language, but is mostly Bundēlī and is described on p. 527.

South-east of Hamirpur, i.e. in the north-east of the Bundelkhand Agency of Central India and the neighbouring portions of the Baghelkhand Agency, the true Banāpharī is spoken. It also is a mixed dialect, but here, although containing many peculiarities which are distinctively those of Eastern Hindī, it is in the main Bundēlī.

Finally, so far as these mixtures with Eastern Hindī are concerned, we have seen that Tirhārī (which we have classed as a form of Baghēlī) runs along the south bank of the Jamna in the Hamirpur district. At the border of the district immediately to the north-west of Hamirpur, i.e. Jalaun, it stops; but here we find, in Jalaun, a small tract in which Tirhārī is fading off into the general Bundēlī of that district. This form of speech is called Nibhaṭṭā (p. 529). It is based on Bundēlī, but has many of the peculiarities of Eastern Hindī. Elsewhere in Jalaun the language is good Bundēlī.

On the north-west, Bundēlī shades off into Braj Bhākhā through what is known as Bhadaurī (p. 531), which is spoken along the river Chambal in the districts of Agra, Mainpuri and Etawah, and also over nearly the whole of the home districts of the Gwalior State.

The following are the estimated numbers of people who speak these mixed dialects :—

Name of Dialect.	Where spoken.	Number of speakers.
Banāpharī	Bundelkhand	245,400
	Baghelkhand	90,000	335,400
Kuṇḍrī	Hamirpur	.....	11,000
Nibhaṭṭā	Jalaun	.....	10,200
Bhadaurī	Gwalior	1,000,000
	Agra	250,000
	Mainpuri	8,000
	Etawah	55,000	1,313,000
	TOTAL		1,669,600

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

A certain merchant used to dwell on the banks of a tank. One day a poor man came to him to beg. The merchant said, 'I will give twenty rupees to whoever will stand in the tank all night.' The poor man said he would do so, and made the merchant promise to keep his words by a threefold promise. At night the poor man went to the tank and stood up in it. While he was there no one was seen by him. The only thing that was visible was a lamp shining in a temple of a village far away, and on it he kept gazing. At dawn he got out of the tank and went to the merchant and asked for his money. 'During the whole night,' said the merchant, 'did anyone give you any help?' 'No one,' replied the beggar, 'the only thing I saw was the lamp shining in the temple.' 'O then,' said the merchant, 'you were warming yourself at that lamp, were you?' and he refused to give him anything.

The beggar went away lamenting. On the road he met a fox, who asked him why he did so. He told the fox the whole affair, and the latter said, 'never mind, I'll get you your money; but after I have done so, you must lift me on to your shoulders and bring me back, and set me down in this very place. But first go and tell the villagers that the King of the Woods is coming, and that they must tie up all their dogs.' The beggar took the message, and then conducted his friend to the village. The fox called a meeting of the village arbitrators, and told them to set up two high poles, and between the two to hang high up a swinging tray,[1] and to set a cooking pot in the tray, and to light a fire on the ground below, so that some rice might be cooked in the pot. The arbitrators said, 'the cooking-pot is hung too high up. The flames won't reach it, and how on earth will the rice be cooked?' Replied the fox, 'it will be cooked, just as a person can warm himself from a distant lamp.' When they heard this the arbitrators had nothing to say, and the fox went on, 'neither could this poor man have warmed himself at that lamp, nor can the rice be cooked. Pay him the rupees he has earned.' So they made the merchant count out and give his twenty rupees to the poor man, who, as soon as he had got them, took the fox on his shoulder, and carried him to the forest, where he deposited him in the place where he had found him, and went home rejoicing.

---

[1] A sĩkā is a hanging frame on which pots and the like are placed for cooking, or to be out of the way.

THE MIXED DIALECTS OF THE NORTH.

To the north, Bundēlī has on its west the closely related Braj Bhākhā dialect of Western Hindī and on its east the Baghēlī dialect of Eastern Hindī. In the District of Hamirpur it extends nearly up to the Jamna, being separated from it only by a narrow strip of land, in which Tirhārī is spoken, along the south bank of that river. As already shown good Bundēlī is spoken over nearly the whole of Hamirpur. To the east of that district lies the district of Banda.

Tirhārī and the dialects of Banda have been dealt with under the head of Eastern Hindī (Vol. VI, pp. 132 ff.). These are all mixtures of Baghēlī and Bundēlī, and as the former language is the most prominent element in all of them they have been described under it. So also has the language spoken by some 8,000 Banāpharś (Banāpharī) in Hamirpur, although Banāpharī elsewhere is distinctly a form of Bundēlī.

Between Hamirpur and Banda (on both sides of the river Ken, which forms the boundary between the two districts) is a dialect called Kuṇḍrī. The Kuṇḍrī on the Banda side is a form of Jūṛar-Baghēlī and has been described under that head (Vol. VI, pp. 152 ff.). That on the Hamirpur side of the stream is also a mixed language, but is mostly Bundēlī and is described on p. 527.

South-east of Hamirpur, i.e. in the north-east of the Bundelkhand Agency of Central India and the neighbouring portions of the Baghelkhand Agency, the true Banāpharī is spoken. It also is a mixed dialect, but here, although containing many peculiarities which are distinctively those of Eastern Hindī, it is in the main Bundēlī.

Finally, so far as these mixtures with Eastern Hindī are concerned, we have seen that Tirhārī (which we have classed as a form of Baghēlī) runs along the south bank of the Jamna in the Hamirpur district. At the border of the district immediately to the north-west of Hamirpur, i.e. Jalaun, it stops; but here we find, in Jalaun, a small tract in which Tirhārī is fading off into the general Bundēlī of that district. This form of speech is called Nibhaṭṭā (p. 529). It is based on Bundēlī, but has many of the peculiarities of Eastern Hindī. Elsewhere in Jalaun the language is good Bundēlī.

On the north-west, Bundēlī shades off into Braj Bhākhā through what is known as Bhadaurī (p. 531), which is spoken along the river Chambal in the districts of Agra, Mainpuri and Etawah, and also over nearly the whole of the home districts of the Gwalior State.

The following are the estimated numbers of people who speak these mixed dialects :—

Name of Dialect.	Where spoken.	Number of speakers.
Banāpharī	Bundelkhand	245,400
	Baghelkhand	90,000	335,400
Kuṇḍrī	Hamirpur	.....	11,000
Nibhaṭṭā	Jalaun	.....	10,200
Bhadaurī	Gwalior	1,000,000
	Agra	250,000
	Mainpuri	8,000
	Etawah	55,000	1,313,000
		TOTAL	1,669,600

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

A certain merchant used to dwell on the banks of a tank. One day a poor man came to him to beg. The merchant said, 'I will give twenty rupees to whoever will stand in the tank all night.' The poor man said he would do so, and made the merchant promise to keep his words by a threefold promise. At night the poor man went to the tank and stood up in it. While he was there no one was seen by him. The only thing that was visible was a lamp shining in a temple of a village far away, and on it he kept gazing. At dawn he got out of the tank and went to the merchant and asked for his money. 'During the whole night,' said the merchant, 'did anyone give you any help?' 'No one,' replied the beggar, 'the only thing I saw was the lamp shining in the temple.' 'O then,' said the merchant, 'you were warming yourself at that lamp, were you?' and he refused to give him anything.

The beggar went away lamenting. On the road he met a fox, who asked him why he did so. He told the fox the whole affair, and the latter said, 'never mind, I'll get you your money; but after I have done so, you must lift me on to your shoulders and bring me back, and set me down in this very place. But first go and tell the villagers that the King of the Woods is coming, and that they must tie up all their dogs.' The beggar took the message, and then conducted his friend to the village. The fox called a meeting of the village arbitrators, and told them to set up two high poles, and between the two to hang high up a swinging tray,[1] and to set a cooking pot in the tray, and to light a fire on the ground below, so that some rice might be cooked in the pot. The arbitrators said, 'the cooking-pot is hung too high up. The flames won't reach it, and how on earth will the rice be cooked?' Replied the fox, 'it will be cooked, just as a person can warm himself from a distant lamp.' When they heard this the arbitrators had nothing to say, and the fox went on, 'neither could this poor man have warmed himself at that lamp, nor can the rice be cooked. Pay him the rupees he has earned.' So they made the merchant count out and give his twenty rupees to the poor man, who, as soon as he had got them, took the fox on his shoulder, and carried him to the forest, where he deposited him in the place where he had found him, and went home rejoicing.

---

[1] A sîkā is a hanging frame on which pots and the like are placed for cooking, or to be out of the way.

THE MIXED DIALECTS OF THE NORTH.

To the north, Bundēlī has on its west the closely related Braj Bhākhā dialect of Western Hindī and on its east the Baghēlī dialect of Eastern Hindī. In the District of Hamirpur it extends nearly up to the Jamna, being separated from it only by a narrow strip of land, in which Tirhārī is spoken, along the south bank of that river. As already shown good Bundēlī is spoken over nearly the whole of Hamirpur. To the east of that district lies the district of Banda.

Tirhārī and the dialects of Banda have been dealt with under the head of Eastern Hindī (Vol. VI, pp. 132 ff.). These are all mixtures of Baghēlī and Bundēlī, and as the former language is the most prominent element in all of them they have been described under it. So also has the language spoken by some 8,000 Banāpharś (Banāpharī) in Hamirpur, although Banāpharī elsewhere is distinctly a form of Bundēlī.

Between Hamirpur and Banda (on both sides of the river Ken, which forms the boundary between the two districts) is a dialect called Kuṇḍrī. The Kuṇḍrī on the Banda side is a form of Jūṛar-Baghēlī and has been described under that head (Vol. VI, pp. 152 ff.). That on the Hamirpur side of the stream is also a mixed language, but is mostly Bundēlī and is described on p. 527.

South-east of Hamirpur, i.e. in the north-east of the Bundelkhand Agency of Central India and the neighbouring portions of the Baghelkhand Agency, the true Banāpharī is spoken. It also is a mixed dialect, but here, although containing many peculiarities which are distinctively those of Eastern Hindī, it is in the main Bundēlī.

Finally, so far as these mixtures with Eastern Hindī are concerned, we have seen that Tirhārī (which we have classed as a form of Baghēlī) runs along the south bank of the Jamna in the Hamirpur district. At the border of the district immediately to the north-west of Hamirpur, i.e. Jalaun, it stops; but here we find, in Jalaun, a small tract in which Tirhārī is fading off into the general Bundēlī of that district. This form of speech is called Nibhaṭṭā (p. 529). It is based on Bundēlī, but has many of the peculiarities of Eastern Hindī. Elsewhere in Jalaun the language is good Bundēlī.

On the north-west, Bundēlī shades off into Braj Bhākhā through what is known as Bhadaurī (p. 531), which is spoken along the river Chambal in the districts of Agra, Mainpuri and Etawah, and also over nearly the whole of the home districts of the Gwalior State.

The following are the estimated numbers of people who speak these mixed dialects :—

Name of Dialect.	Where spoken.	Number of speakers.
Banāpharī	Bundelkhand	245,400
	Baghelkhand	90,000	335,400
Kuṇḍrī	Hamirpur	.....	11,000
Nibhaṭṭā	Jalaun	.....	10,200
Bhadaurī	Gwalior	1,000,000
	Agra	250,000
	Mainpuri	8,000
	Etawah	55,000	1,313,000
	TOTAL		1,669,600

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

A certain merchant used to dwell on the banks of a tank. One day a poor man came to him to beg. The merchant said, 'I will give twenty rupees to whoever will stand in the tank all night.' The poor man said he would do so, and made the merchant promise to keep his words by a threefold promise. At night the poor man went to the tank and stood up in it. While he was there no one was seen by him. The only thing that was visible was a lamp shining in a temple of a village far away, and on it he kept gazing. At dawn he got out of the tank and went to the merchant and asked for his money. 'During the whole night,' said the merchant, 'did anyone give you any help?' 'No one,' replied the beggar, 'the only thing I saw was the lamp shining in the temple.' 'O then,' said the merchant, 'you were warming yourself at that lamp, were you?' and he refused to give him anything.

The beggar went away lamenting. On the road he met a fox, who asked him why he did so. He told the fox the whole affair, and the latter said, 'never mind, I'll get you your money; but after I have done so, you must lift me on to your shoulders and bring me back, and set me down in this very place. But first go and tell the villagers that the King of the Woods is coming, and that they must tie up all their dogs.' The beggar took the message, and then conducted his friend to the village. The fox called a meeting of the village arbitrators, and told them to set up two high poles, and between the two to hang high up a swinging tray,[1] and to set a cooking pot in the tray, and to light a fire on the ground below, so that some rice might be cooked in the pot. The arbitrators said, 'the cooking-pot is hung too high up. The flames won't reach it, and how on earth will the rice be cooked?' Replied the fox, 'it will be cooked, just as a person can warm himself from a distant lamp.' When they heard this the arbitrators had nothing to say, and the fox went on, 'neither could this poor man have warmed himself at that lamp, nor can the rice be cooked. Pay him the rupees he has earned.' So they made the merchant count out and give his twenty rupees to the poor man, who, as soon as he had got them, took the fox on his shoulder, and carried him to the forest, where he deposited him in the place where he had found him, and went home rejoicing.

---

[1] A sīkā is a hanging frame on which pots and the like are placed for cooking or to be out of the way.

THE MIXED DIALECTS OF THE NORTH.

To the north, Bundēlī has on its west the closely related Braj Bhākhā dialect of Western Hindī and on its east the Baghēlī dialect of Eastern Hindī. In the District of Hamirpur it extends nearly up to the Jamna, being separated from it only by a narrow strip of land, in which Tirhārī is spoken, along the south bank of that river. As already shown good Bundēlī is spoken over nearly the whole of Hamirpur. To the east of that district lies the district of Banda.

Tirhārī and the dialects of Banda have been dealt with under the head of Eastern Hindī (Vol. VI, pp. 132 ff.). These are all mixtures of Baghēlī and Bundēlī, and as the former language is the most prominent element in all of them they have been described under it. So also has the language spoken by some 8,000 Banāpharś (Banāpharī) in Hamirpur, although Banāpharī elsewhere is distinctly a form of Bundēlī.

Between Hamirpur and Banda (on both sides of the river Ken, which forms the boundary between the two districts) is a dialect called Kuṇḍrī. The Kuṇḍrī on the Banda side is a form of Jūṛar-Baghēlī and has been described under that head (Vol. VI, pp. 152 ff.). That on the Hamirpur side of the stream is also a mixed language, but is mostly Bundēlī and is described on p. 527.

South-east of Hamirpur, i.e. in the north-east of the Bundelkhand Agency of Central India and the neighbouring portions of the Baghelkhand Agency, the true Banāpharī is spoken. It also is a mixed dialect, but here, although containing many peculiarities which are distinctively those of Eastern Hindī, it is in the main Bundēlī.

Finally, so far as these mixtures with Eastern Hindī are concerned, we have seen that Tirhārī (which we have classed as a form of Baghēlī) runs along the south bank of the Jamna in the Hamirpur district. At the border of the district immediately to the north-west of Hamirpur, i.e. Jalaun, it stops; but here we find, in Jalaun, a small tract in which Tirhārī is fading off into the general Bundēlī of that district. This form of speech is called Nibhaṭṭā (p. 529). It is based on Bundēlī, but has many of the peculiarities of Eastern Hindī. Elsewhere in Jalaun the language is good Bundēlī.

On the north-west, Bundēlī shades off into Braj Bhākhā through what is known as Bhadaurī (p. 531), which is spoken along the river Chambal in the districts of Agra, Mainpuri and Etawah, and also over nearly the whole of the home districts of the Gwalior State.

The following are the estimated numbers of people who speak these mixed dialects :—

Name of Dialect.	Where spoken.	Number of speakers.
Banāpharī	Bundelkhand	245,400
	Baghelkhand	90,000	335,400
Kuṇḍrī	Hamirpur	.....	11,000
Nibhaṭṭā	Jalaun	.....	10,200
Bhadaurī	Gwalior	1,000,000
	Agra	250,000
	Mainpuri	8,000
	Etawah	55,000	1,313,000
	TOTAL		1,669,600

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

A certain merchant used to dwell on the banks of a tank. One day a poor man came to him to beg. The merchant said, 'I will give twenty rupees to whoever will stand in the tank all night.' The poor man said he would do so, and made the merchant promise to keep his words by a threefold promise. At night the poor man went to the tank and stood up in it. While he was there no one was seen by him. The only thing that was visible was a lamp shining in a temple of a village far away, and on it he kept gazing. At dawn he got out of the tank and went to the merchant and asked for his money. 'During the whole night,' said the merchant, 'did anyone give you any help?' 'No one,' replied the beggar, 'the only thing I saw was the lamp shining in the temple.' 'O then,' said the merchant, 'you were warming yourself at that lamp, were you?' and he refused to give him anything.

The beggar went away lamenting. On the road he met a fox, who asked him why he did so. He told the fox the whole affair, and the latter said, 'never mind, I'll get you your money; but after I have done so, you must lift me on to your shoulders and bring me back, and set me down in this very place. But first go and tell the villagers that the King of the Woods is coming, and that they must tie up all their dogs.' The beggar took the message, and then conducted his friend to the village. The fox called a meeting of the village arbitrators, and told them to set up two high poles, and between the two to hang high up a swinging tray,[1] and to set a cooking pot in the tray, and to light a fire on the ground below, so that some rice might be cooked in the pot. The arbitrators said, 'the cooking-pot is hung too high up. The flames won't reach it, and how on earth will the rice be cooked?' Replied the fox, 'it will be cooked, just as a person can warm himself from a distant lamp.' When they heard this the arbitrators had nothing to say, and the fox went on, 'neither could this poor man have warmed himself at that lamp, nor can the rice be cooked. Pay him the rupees he has earned.' So they made the merchant count out and give his twenty rupees to the poor man, who, as soon as he had got them, took the fox on his shoulder, and carried him to the forest, where he deposited him in the place where he had found him, and went home rejoicing.

---

[1] A sīkā is a hanging frame on which pots and the like are placed for cooking, or to be out of the way.

THE MIXED DIALECTS OF THE NORTH.

To the north, Bundēlī has on its west the closely related Braj Bhākhā dialect of Western Hindī and on its east the Baghēlī dialect of Eastern Hindī. In the District of Hamirpur it extends nearly up to the Jamna, being separated from it only by a narrow strip of land, in which Tirhārī is spoken, along the south bank of that river. As already shown good Bundēlī is spoken over nearly the whole of Hamirpur. To the east of that district lies the district of Banda.

Tirhārī and the dialects of Banda have been dealt with under the head of Eastern Hindī (Vol. VI, pp. 132 ff.). These are all mixtures of Baghēlī and Bundēlī, and as the former language is the most prominent element in all of them they have been described under it. So also has the language spoken by some 8,000 Banāpharś (Banāpharī) in Hamirpur, although Banāpharī elsewhere is distinctly a form of Bundēlī.

Between Hamirpur and Banda (on both sides of the river Ken, which forms the boundary between the two districts) is a dialect called Kuṇḍrī. The Kuṇḍrī on the Banda side is a form of Jūṛar-Baghēlī and has been described under that head (Vol. VI, pp. 152 ff.). That on the Hamirpur side of the stream is also a mixed language, but is mostly Bundēlī and is described on p. 527.

South-east of Hamirpur, i.e. in the north-east of the Bundelkhand Agency of Central India and the neighbouring portions of the Baghelkhand Agency, the true Banāpharī is spoken. It also is a mixed dialect, but here, although containing many peculiarities which are distinctively those of Eastern Hindī, it is in the main Bundēlī.

Finally, so far as these mixtures with Eastern Hindī are concerned, we have seen that Tirhārī (which we have classed as a form of Baghēlī) runs along the south bank of the Jamna in the Hamirpur district. At the border of the district immediately to the north-west of Hamirpur, i.e. Jalaun, it stops; but here we find, in Jalaun, a small tract in which Tirhārī is fading off into the general Bundēlī of that district. This form of speech is called Nibhaṭṭā (p. 529). It is based on Bundēlī, but has many of the peculiarities of Eastern Hindī. Elsewhere in Jalaun the language is good Bundēlī.

On the north-west, Bundēlī shades off into Braj Bhākhā through what is known as Bhadaurī (p. 531), which is spoken along the river Chambal in the districts of Agra, Mainpuri and Etawah, and also over nearly the whole of the home districts of the Gwalior State.

The following are the estimated numbers of people who speak these mixed dialects :—

Name of Dialect.	Where spoken.	Number of speakers.
Banāpharī	Bundelkhand	245,400
	Baghelkhand	90,000	335,400
Kuṇḍrī	Hamirpur	.....	11,000
Nibhaṭṭā	Jalaun	.....	10,200
Bhadaurī	Gwalior	1,000,000
	Agra	250,000
	Mainpuri	8,000
	Etawah	55,000	1,313,000
	TOTAL		1,669,600

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

A certain merchant used to dwell on the banks of a tank. One day a poor man came to him to beg. The merchant said, 'I will give twenty rupees to whoever will stand in the tank all night.' The poor man said he would do so, and made the merchant promise to keep his words by a threefold promise. At night the poor man went to the tank and stood up in it. While he was there no one was seen by him. The only thing that was visible was a lamp shining in a temple of a village far away, and on it he kept gazing. At dawn he got out of the tank and went to the merchant and asked for his money. 'During the whole night,' said the merchant, 'did anyone give you any help?' 'No one,' replied the beggar, 'the only thing I saw was the lamp shining in the temple.' 'O then,' said the merchant, 'you were warming yourself at that lamp, were you?' and he refused to give him anything.

The beggar went away lamenting. On the road he met a fox, who asked him why he did so. He told the fox the whole affair, and the latter said, 'never mind, I'll get you your money; but after I have done so, you must lift me on to your shoulders and bring me back, and set me down in this very place. But first go and tell the villagers that the King of the Woods is coming, and that they must tie up all their dogs.' The beggar took the message, and then conducted his friend to the village. The fox called a meeting of the village arbitrators, and told them to set up two high poles, and between the two to hang high up a swinging tray,[1] and to set a cooking pot in the tray, and to light a fire on the ground below, so that some rice might be cooked in the pot. The arbitrators said, 'the cooking-pot is hung too high up. The flames won't reach it, and how on earth will the rice be cooked?' Replied the fox, 'it will be cooked, just as a person can warm himself from a distant lamp.' When they heard this the arbitrators had nothing to say, and the fox went on, 'neither could this poor man have warmed himself at that lamp, nor can the rice be cooked. Pay him the rupees he has earned.' So they made the merchant count out and give his twenty rupees to the poor man, who, as soon as he had got them, took the fox on his shoulder, and carried him to the forest, where he deposited him in the place where he had found him, and went home rejoicing.

---

[1] A sīkā is a hanging frame on which pots and the like are placed for cooking or to be out of the way.

THE MIXED DIALECTS OF THE NORTH.

To the north, Bundēlī has on its west the closely related Braj Bhākhā dialect of Western Hindī and on its east the Baghēlī dialect of Eastern Hindī. In the District of Hamirpur it extends nearly up to the Jamna, being separated from it only by a narrow strip of land, in which Tirhārī is spoken, along the south bank of that river. As already shown good Bundēlī is spoken over nearly the whole of Hamirpur. To the east of that district lies the district of Banda.

Tirhārī and the dialects of Banda have been dealt with under the head of Eastern Hindī (Vol. VI, pp. 132 ff.). These are all mixtures of Baghēlī and Bundēlī, and as the former language is the most prominent element in all of them they have been described under it. So also has the language spoken by some 8,000 Banāpharś (Banāpharī) in Hamirpur, although Banāpharī elsewhere is distinctly a form of Bundēlī.

Between Hamirpur and Banda (on both sides of the river Ken, which forms the boundary between the two districts) is a dialect called Kuṇḍrī. The Kuṇḍrī on the Banda side is a form of Jūṛar-Baghēlī and has been described under that head (Vol. VI, pp. 152 ff.). That on the Hamirpur side of the stream is also a mixed language, but is mostly Bundēlī and is described on p. 527.

South-east of Hamirpur, i.e. in the north-east of the Bundelkhand Agency of Central India and the neighbouring portions of the Baghelkhand Agency, the true Banāpharī is spoken. It also is a mixed dialect, but here, although containing many peculiarities which are distinctively those of Eastern Hindī, it is in the main Bundēlī.

Finally, so far as these mixtures with Eastern Hindī are concerned, we have seen that Tirhārī (which we have classed as a form of Baghēlī) runs along the south bank of the Jamna in the Hamirpur district. At the border of the district immediately to the north-west of Hamirpur, i.e. Jalaun, it stops; but here we find, in Jalaun, a small tract in which Tirhārī is fading off into the general Bundēlī of that district. This form of speech is called Nibhaṭṭā (p. 529). It is based on Bundēlī, but has many of the peculiarities of Eastern Hindī. Elsewhere in Jalaun the language is good Bundēlī.

On the north-west, Bundēlī shades off into Braj Bhākhā through what is known as Bhadaurī (p. 531), which is spoken along the river Chambal in the districts of Agra, Mainpuri and Etawah, and also over nearly the whole of the home districts of the Gwalior State.

The following are the estimated numbers of people who speak these mixed dialects :—

Name of Dialect.	Where spoken.	Number of speakers.
Banāpharī	Bundelkhand	245,400
	Baghelkhand	90,000	335,400
Kuṇḍrī	Hamirpur	.....	11,000
Nibhaṭṭā	Jalaun	.....	10,200
Bhadaurī	Gwalior	1,000,000
	Agra	250,000
	Mainpuri	8,000
	Etawah	55,000
			1,313,000
	TOTAL . .	.....	1,669,600

It must be remembered that, besides these, 5,000 speakers of Banāpharī in Hamirpur, and a few speakers of Kuṇḍrī in Banda have been classed under Baghēlī.

Of these dialects Banāpharī is by far the most important on account of its possessing a literature. Bhadaurī, on account of the number of its speakers, comes next.

BANĀPHARĪ.

Banāpharī is the form of Bundēlī spoken by members of the Banāphar tribe of Rājpūts, and in the country inhabited by them. This tract consists mainly of the north-centre and east of the Bundelkhand Agency of Central India, i.e. the Chandla Pargana of the State of Charkhari, the Lauri Pargana of Chhatarpur, the Dharampur Pargana of Panna, the Jāgīrs of Naigawan Rebai, Gaurihar, and Beri, and the States of Ajaigarh and Baoni. It also extends into the south-east corner of the District of Hamirpur, and (to the east) into the western parts of the Nagode and Maihar States of the Baghelkhand Agency. Although a mixed dialect, Banāpharī is one of the most important forms of Bundēlī, as in it are preserved the many bardic songs regarding the famous heroes Ālhā and Ūdal, which together form a large cycle of epic poetry. This feature of the dialect will be illustrated at length in the following pages.

The number of speakers of Banāpharī is estimated as follows:—

Bundelkhand Agency	245,400
Hamirpur	5,000
Baghelkhand Agency	90,000
TOTAL	340,400

Leech in his account of the language quoted in the list of authorities of Bundēlī remarks that Banāpharī differs from Standard Bundēlī in having a larger mixture of Urdū. He probably means by this that its vocabulary contains more Arabic and Persian words than are usually found in dialects of this part of India, and in this he is perfectly right. A perusal of the specimens, especially of those belonging to the Ālhā-Ūdal cycle, will show that quite a large number of these foreign words have been adopted. Indeed such complete citizenship have some of them obtained, that they are even treated as verbal roots, and conjugated as if they were genuine Indian words. This method of dealing with foreign words is very rare in all Indian languages. Such borrowed terms are generally employed without any change of form, and, if used as verbs, it must be done by means of a periphrasis. Yet here we have words like najarat a present participle, meaning 'looking at,' which in Hindī would be najar kar"tā, from the Arabic nazar; and tajawījai, he intends, from the Arabic tajwīz. Leech further describes Banāpharī as a 'kind of slurred and slovenly Urdū.' This account cannot be called accurate, for the foreign element found in its grammar is Baghēlī, not Urdū. Banāpharī is a mixture of Bundēlī and Baghēlī in proportions varying according to locality and to the personality or caste of the speakers. In the version of the Parable received from Hamirpur the Baghēlī influence predominates and I have given it in the volume dealing with Eastern Hindī (Vol. VI, pp. 155 and ff.). Further south, in Bundelkhand proper, the Bundēlī element certainly predominates everywhere, as will be evident from the specimens received from the State of Charkhari. These are (1) the first few sentences of the Parable of the Prodigal Son, and (2) a folktale (both prepared by Rai Sahib Kashi Pershad of Charkhari). After these I give, with a special introduction, two more specimens from Eastern Hamirpur. These are parts of the cycle of poems about Ālhā and Ūdal. It will be seen that the version of the Parable agrees with

It must be remembered that, besides these, 5,000 speakers of Banāpharī in Hamirpur, and a few speakers of Kuṇḍrī in Banda have been classed under Baghēlī.

Of these dialects Banāpharī is by far the most important on account of its possessing a literature. Bhadaurī, on account of the number of its speakers, comes next.

BANĀPHARĪ.

Banāpharī is the form of Bundēlī spoken by members of the Banāphar tribe of Rājpūts, and in the country inhabited by them. This tract consists mainly of the north-centre and east of the Bundelkhand Agency of Central India, i.e. the Chandla Pargana of the State of Charkhari, the Lauri Pargana of Chhatarpur, the Dharampur Pargana of Panna, the Jāgīrs of Naigawan Rebai, Gaurihar, and Beri, and the States of Ajaigarh and Baoni. It also extends into the south-east corner of the District of Hamirpur, and (to the east) into the western parts of the Nagode and Maihar States of the Baghelkhand Agency. Although a mixed dialect, Banāpharī is one of the most important forms of Bundēlī, as in it are preserved the many bardic songs regarding the famous heroes Ālhā and Ūdal, which together form a large cycle of epic poetry. This feature of the dialect will be illustrated at length in the following pages.

The number of speakers of Banāpharī is estimated as follows:—

Bundelkhand Agency	245,400
Hamirpur	5,000
Baghelkhand Agency	90,000
TOTAL	340,400

Leech in his account of the language quoted in the list of authorities of Bundēlī remarks that Banāpharī differs from Standard Bundēlī in having a larger mixture of Urdū. He probably means by this that its vocabulary contains more Arabic and Persian words than are usually found in dialects of this part of India, and in this he is perfectly right. A perusal of the specimens, especially of those belonging to the Ālhā-Ūdal cycle, will show that quite a large number of these foreign words have been adopted. Indeed such complete citizenship have some of them obtained, that they are even treated as verbal roots, and conjugated as if they were genuine Indian words. This method of dealing with foreign words is very rare in all Indian languages. Such borrowed terms are generally employed without any change of form, and, if used as verbs, it must be done by means of a periphrasis. Yet here we have words like najarat a present participle, meaning 'looking at,' which in Hindī would be najar kar^{a}tā, from the Arabic nazar; and tajawījai, he intends, from the Arabic tajwīz. Leech further describes Banāpharī as a 'kind of slurred and slovenly Urdū.' This account cannot be called accurate, for the foreign element found in its grammar is Baghēlī, not Urdū. Banāpharī is a mixture of Bundēlī and Baghēlī in proportions varying according to locality and to the personality or caste of the speakers. In the version of the Parable received from Hamirpur the Baghēlī influence predominates and I have given it in the volume dealing with Eastern Hindī (Vol. VI, pp. 155 and ff.). Further south, in Bundelkhand proper, the Bundēlī element certainly predominates everywhere, as will be evident from the specimens received from the State of Charkhari. These are (1) the first few sentences of the Parable of the Prodigal Son, and (2) a folktale (both prepared by Rai Sahib Kashi Pershad of Charkhari). After these I give, with a special introduction, two more specimens from Eastern Hamirpur. These are parts of the cycle of poems about Ālhā and Ūdal. It will be seen that the version of the Parable agrees with Standard Bundēlī in nearly all particulars, but that the other three specimens show numerous examples of the influence of Eastern Hindī.

The following account of the main peculiarities of Banāpharī is based on the specimens and on Mr. Vincent Smith's notes.

PRONUNCIATION.—This closely follows ordinary Bundēlī. The diphthongs ai and au are commonly used for ē and ō respectively. Thus sai instead of sē, from. Far more common is the change of ō to wā and of ē to yā. This is quite optional, so much so that we often find the same word spelt in both ways. Thus, we have yāṛ for ēṛ, a support; both khēt and khyāt, a field; kēr and kyār, of; ghōṛ and ghwāṛ, a horse.

As regards consonants, n often becomes l; thus, jalam, for janam, birth; jalanī, for jananī, a mother. L, on the other hand, often becomes r, as in tar^{a}wār or tal^{a}wār, a sword. The letter ph regularly becomes p in the word banāpar. We often find the letter r where we should not expect it; thus, sar^{a}mān, for sanmān, respect; sar^{a}mūch, for samūch, entire; and asarār, ? for bē-shumār, countless.

A long vowel is regularly shortened in the antepenultimate; thus, the root mān, heed, makes its first person singular future manihaũ, and khēl, sport, makes its respectful imperative khiliyaĩ. We occasionally meet short e and short o, in words like mohi, me (but mō-hī, even I), and jeh, whom.

DECLENSION.—Many feminine nouns end in the termination aĩ (corresponding to Hindōstānī ī), which is not changed in the oblique case. Thus, ēk juhāraĩ, one salute; śikāraĩ, hunting; khabaraĩ, news, used both as a singular and as a plural; salāmaĩ, respects, used as a plural in III, 58. Strong Tadbhava nouns usually end in ō, as in Bundēlī, but sometimes the Eastern Hindī form in ā is employed. These nouns form their oblique bases in ē. Thus, ghōṛō, or ghōṛā, a horse, oblique form, ghōṛē. Sometimes we have, as in bhaũrā, a bee (IV, 1), the oblique form ending in ā, which is probably an instance of borrowing from Rājasthānī; similarly chēlā-nai kahus, the disciple said.

A very common oblique form both in the singular and in the plural ends in an or en. Thus, khētan-mā, in the field (III, 77; cf. 78, and IV, 193); chaukan-kā, to the palace square; āhữ saudāgar maĩ ghōṛen-kā, ghōṛan-kā bēchaĩ jãw, I am a merchant of horses, I am going to sell the horses (IV, 122).

The use of the case of the Agent is rather capricious, as the termination nē or nai is often omitted. The case is used before all forms of the past tenses of transitive verbs, whether the simple past participle is used, as in Western Hindī, or whether a conjugated form of the tense is used, as in Eastern Hindī. Hence, even in the latter case, the verb agrees in gender with the object. Thus we have bãnī-nai lāg taul-daī, the shopman weighed out the ration; yā bāt brāhman sunī, the Brāhman heard this thing; bābā pūchhis, the recluse asked; chēlā-nai kahus, the disciple said; nā sīkhyữ (fem.) barāraĩ sãg, I have not learnt the warding off of arrows (IV, 183). In the last example, sīkhyữ is in the feminine to agree with barāraĩ. The masculine would be sīkhõy.

The following are the usual forms which the case terminations take :—

Agent, nē, nai.

Accusative-Dative, khã̄ (not khõ), kã̄, kā, kaũ, kai.

Dative, lānē, khitir, kājē, for.

Instrumental-Ablative, sai, saĩ, khaĩ, tai, saũ, sō, san, pai.
Genitive, kēr, kyār. Common gender, direct and oblique.
kērau, kyārau, kau, kā. Masculine, direct.
kērē, kyārē, kē. Masculine, oblique.
kērī, kyārī, kai, kī. Feminine, direct and oblique.
Locative, mai, mãĩ, mā, māhĩ, mahanī.

The Personal Pronouns are mai, maĩ, I; ma-hũ, I also; ma-hĩ, even I; obl. form, mohi, moh, mwah, mō; mōhĩ, to me; mōr, mōrau, mwār, mwārau, my; ham, we; ham-hũ, we also; ham-hĩ, even we; obl. form, ham; hamaĩ, to us; hamār, hamārau, hamᵃrau, our.

tuĩ, taĩ, tai, thou; ta-hũ, tō-hũ, thou also; ta-hĩ, tō-hĩ, even thou; obl. form, tohi, toh, twah, tō; tōhĩ, to thee; tōr, tōrau, twār, twārau, thy; tum, you; tum-hũ, you also; tum-hĩ, even you; obl. form, tum; tumaĩ, to you; tumār, tumārau, tumᵃrau, your.

ū, wā, he, that; wa-hũ, he also; wa-hai, even he; obl. form, wah, wā; wahĩ, to him; ũy, ũy, they; wō-ū, wa-ū, they also; obl. form, un; unᵃhaĩ, to them; unᵃhun, them also; unᵃhin, even them.

Similarly ī, yā, this; obl. form, eh, yā; Plur. ĩ; obl. in, etc.

The Relative Pronoun is jē or jyā; obl. jeh, jē, jyā.

In all the above, the plural is frequently used instead of the singular.

Kāhū or kōū is 'anyone,' obl. kāhū. Kō or kaun (obl. kyā) is 'who?'; kā (obl. kāhē), what?

CONJUGATION.—The important point to note is that in all the tenses formed from participles without auxiliary verbs there are two forms, one, the participle alone as in Western Hindī, and the other, the participle with suffixes indicating the number and person, as in Eastern Hindī. It is also to be noted that in the latter case, the suffixes are added to the strong form of the participle in ō, and not to the simple base. Thus mārō-s, not māra-s, he struck.

The Verb Substantive is —

Present, I am, etc.

	Sing.	Plur.
1	āhũ, haũ.	āhaĩ, āhen, āhyan, han.
2	āhī, hī.	āhū, āhā, hā.
3	āhī, āhai, hai, āi.	āhaĩ, āhĩ, haĩ, ãi.

Hawaũ may be substituted for haũ, and so throughout.

Past, I was, etc.

Sing.		Plur.
Masc.	Fem.	Masc.	Fem.
hatō or tō.	hatī or tī.	hatē or tē.	hatĩ or tĩ.

For all persons, exactly like the Hindōstānī thā. Or,—

Standard Bundēlī in nearly all particulars, but that the other three specimens show numerous examples of the influence of Eastern Hindī.

The following account of the main peculiarities of Banāpharī is based on the specimens and on Mr. Vincent Smith's notes.

PRONUNCIATION.—This closely follows ordinary Bundēlī. The diphthongs ai and au are commonly used for ē and ō respectively. Thus sai instead of sē, from. Far more common is the change of ō to wā and of ē to yā. This is quite optional, so much so that we often find the same word spelt in both ways. Thus, we have yāṛ for ēṛ, a support; both khēt and khyāt, a field; kēr and kyār, of; ghōṛ and ghwāṛ, a horse.

As regards consonants, n often becomes l; thus, jalam, for janam, birth; jalanī, for jananī, a mother. L, on the other hand, often becomes r, as in tar^{a}wār or tal^{a}wār, a sword. The letter ph regularly becomes p in the word banāpar. We often find the letter r where we should not expect it; thus, sar^{a}mān, for sanmān, respect; sar^{a}mūch, for samūch, entire; and asarār, ? for bē-shumār, countless.

A long vowel is regularly shortened in the antepenultimate; thus, the root mān, heed, makes its first person singular future manihaũ, and khēl, sport, makes its respectful imperative khiliyaĩ. We occasionally meet short e and short o, in words like mohi, me (but mō-hī, even I), and jeh, whom.

DECLENSION.—Many feminine nouns end in the termination aĩ (corresponding to Hindōstānī ī), which is not changed in the oblique case. Thus, ēk juhāraĩ, one salute; śikāraĩ, hunting; khabaraĩ, news, used both as a singular and as a plural; salāmaĩ, respects, used as a plural in III, 58. Strong Tadbhava nouns usually end in ō, as in Bundēlī, but sometimes the Eastern Hindī form in ā is employed. These nouns form their oblique bases in ē. Thus, ghōṛō, or ghōṛā, a horse, oblique form, ghōṛē. Sometimes we have, as in bhaũrā, a bee (IV, 1), the oblique form ending in ā, which is probably an instance of borrowing from Rājasthānī; similarly chēlā-nai kahus, the disciple said.

A very common oblique form both in the singular and in the plural ends in an or en. Thus, khētan-mā, in the field (III, 77; cf. 78, and IV, 193); chaukan-kā, to the palace square; āhũ̃ saudāgar maĩ ghōṛen-kā, ghōṛan-kā bēchaĩ jãw, I am a merchant of horses, I am going to sell the horses (IV, 122).

The use of the case of the Agent is rather capricious, as the termination nē or nai is often omitted. The case is used before all forms of the past tenses of transitive verbs, whether the simple past participle is used, as in Western Hindī, or whether a conjugated form of the tense is used, as in Eastern Hindī. Hence, even in the latter case, the verb agrees in gender with the object. Thus we have bãnī-nai lāg taul-daī, the shopman weighed out the ration; yā bāt brāhman sunī, the Brāhman heard this thing; bābā pūchhis, the recluse asked; chēlā-nai kahus, the disciple said; nā sīkhyũ̃ (fem.) barāraĩ sãg, I have not learnt the warding off of arrows (IV, 183). In the last example, sīkhyũ̃ is in the feminine to agree with barāraĩ. The masculine would be sīkhõy.

The following are the usual forms which the case terminations take :—

Agent, nē, nai.

Accusative-Dative, khã̃ (not khõ̃), kã̃, kā, kaũ, kai.

Dative, lānē, khitir, kājē, for.

Instrumental-Ablative, sai, saĩ, khaĩ, tai, saũ, sō, san, pai.

Genitive, kēr, kyār. Common gender, direct and oblique.
kērau, kyārau, kau, kā. Masculine, direct.
kērē, kyārē, kē. Masculine, oblique.
kērī, kyārī, kai, kī. Feminine, direct and oblique.

Locative, mai, mãĩ, mā, māhĩ, mahanī.

The Personal Pronouns are mai, maĩ, I; ma-hũ̃, I also; ma-hĩ̃, even I; obl. form, mohi, moh, mwah, mō; mōhĩ̃, to me; mōr, mōrau, mwār, mwārau, my; ham, we; ham-hũ̃, we also; ham-hĩ̃, even we; obl. form, ham; hamaĩ, to us; hamār, hamārau, hamᵃrau, our.

tuĩ, taĩ, tai, thou; ta-hũ̃, tō-hũ̃, thou also; ta-hĩ̃, tō-hĩ̃, even thou; obl. form, tohi, toh, twah, tō; tōhĩ̃, to thee; tōr, tōrau, twār, twārau, thy; tum, you; tum-hũ̃, you also; tum-hĩ̃, even you; obl. form, tum; tumaĩ, to you; tumār, tumārau, tumᵃrau, your.

ū, wā, he, that; wa-hũ̃, he also; wa-hai, even he; obl. form, wah, wā; wahĩ̃, to him; ũy, ũ̃y, they; wō-ū, wa-ū, they also; obl. form, un; unᵃhaĩ, to them; unᵃhun, them also; unᵃhin, even them.

Similarly ī, yā, this; obl. form, eh, yā; Plur. ĩ̃; obl. in, etc.

The Relative Pronoun is jē or jyā; obl. jeh, jē, jyā.

In all the above, the plural is frequently used instead of the singular.

Kāhū or kōū is 'anyone,' obl. kāhū. Kō or kaun (obl. kyā) is 'who?'; kā (obl. kāhē), what?

CONJUGATION.—The important point to note is that in all the tenses formed from participles without auxiliary verbs there are two forms, one, the participle alone as in Western Hindī, and the other, the participle with suffixes indicating the number and person, as in Eastern Hindī. It is also to be noted that in the latter case, the suffixes are added to the strong form of the participle in ō, and not to the simple base. Thus mārō-s, not māra-s, he struck.

The Verb Substantive is —

Present, I am, etc.

	Sing.	Plur.
1	āhũ̃, haũ̃.	āhaĩ, āhen, āhyan, han.
2	āhī, hī.	āhū, āhā, hā.
3	āhī, āhai, hai, āi.	āhaĩ, āhĩ̃, haĩ, ãĩ.

Hawaũ̃ may be substituted for haũ̃, and so throughout.

Past, I was, etc.

Sing.		Plur.
Masc.	Fem.	Masc.	Fem.
hatō or tō.	hatī or tī.	hatē or tē.	hatĩ̃ or tĩ̃.

For all persons, exactly like the Hindōstānī thā. Or,—

	Sing.		Plur.
	Masc.	Fem.	Masc.	Fem.
1	hatõ̃y or tõ̃y.	hatyũ̃ or tyũ̃.	hatyan or tyan.	hatin or tin.
2	hatōy or tōy.	hatī or tī.	hatyō or tyō.	hatyū or tyū.
3	hatō or tō.	hatī or tī.	hatē or tē.	hatī̃ or tī̃.

Or else,—

	Sing. (com. gen.).	Plur. (com. gen.).
1	rahaũ̃.	rahan, rahaĩ̃.
2	rahas.	rahā̃.
3	rahai.	rahaĩ̃.

The Negative Verb Substantive, 'I am not,' is thus conjugated :—

	Sing.	Plur.
1	niyāhũ̃.	niyāhan.
2	niyāhī.	niyāhā̃.
3	nihāi	nihā̃i.

The Active Verb is thus conjugated in its principal parts :—

Present Conjunctive, (If) I strike, etc.—

	Sing.	Plur.
1	māraũ̃.	māran.
2	māras.	mārā̃.
3	mārai.	māraĩ̃.

As usual this is often employed in the sense of the Simple Present. As examples of the tense we may quote mānas, if you do not heed (IV, 29) ; bwālas, thou speakest (IV, 42) ; mā̃gas, (what) thou mayest ask for (IV, 101) ; jās, thou art going (IV, 119) ; khā̃y, they eat (III, 44).

The following are examples of the Imperative :—Mār, strike thou ; mārā, strike ; pukārā, summon ; kāṭau, cut ; karāyas, cause thou to make ; khiliyaĩ̃, be good enough to play.

Future.—I shall strike, etc. This has two forms, viz.—1. Mārab, used for all genders, numbers, and persons, as in old Eastern Hindī;—2.

	Sing.	Plur.
1	marihaũ or marᵃhaũ.	marᵃbẽ, marihẽ or marᵃhẽ.
2	marihaĩ or marᵃhaĩ.	marihā, marihau, marᵃhā, or marᵃhau.
3	mārī.	marihaĩ̃ or marᵃhaĩ̃.

Note that when the first syllable is long, and falls in the antepenultimate, it is shortened. So we have manihaũ, I will heed, in IV, 133. Kaihai (IV, 133), thou wilt say, is slightly irregular as in Bundēlī.

Tenses formed from the Present Participle.

The Present Participle is mārat (com. gen.); or marᵃtō (masc.), marᵃtī (fem.). From it are formed the usual tenses. Thus,—

Present.—Mārat-haũ (often written mārathaũ), I am striking. Any other form of the Auxiliary may be used.

Imperfect.—Mārat-hatõy, I was striking. Any other form of the Auxiliary may be used. As an isolated form, I may quote karai rahai, he was doing.

Past Conditional.—This may be formed in two ways. Either the present participle alone is used (exactly as in Hindōstānī), or else we have a tense conjugated on the model of Eastern Hindī. For the first form we have marᵃtō (masc.), marᵃtī (fem.), (if) I, thou, he, or she had struck; marᵃtē (masc.), marᵃtī̃ (fem.), (if) we, you, or they had struck. For the second form we have the following:—

	Sing.		Plur.
	Masc.	Fem.	Masc.	Fem.
1	marᵃtõ̃y.	marᵃtyũ̃.	marᵃtyan.	marᵃtin.
2	marᵃtōy.	marᵃtī.	marᵃtyō.	marᵃtyū.
3	marᵃtō.	marᵃtī.	marᵃtē.	marᵃtī̃.

Tenses formed from the Past Participle.

The Past Participle is mār (com. gen.); or mārō (masc.), mārī (fem.). From it are formed the usual tenses. Thus—

Past.—Like the Past Conditional, this may be formed in two ways. Either the Past Participle alone is used (exactly as in Hindōstānī), or else we have a tense

	Sing.		Plur.
	Masc.	Fem.	Masc.	Fem.
1	hatõ̃y or tõ̃y.	hatyũ̃ or tyũ̃.	hatyan or tyan.	hatin or tin.
2	hatōy or tōy.	hatī or tī.	hatyō or tyō.	hatyū or tyū.
3	hatō or tō.	hatī or tī.	hatẽ or tẽ.	hatī̃ or tī̃.

Or else,—

	Sing. (com. gen.).	Plur. (com. gen.).
1	rahaũ̃.	rahan, rahaĩ̃.
2	rahas.	rahā̃.
3	rahai.	rahaĩ̃.

The Negative Verb Substantive, 'I am not,' is thus conjugated :—

	Sing.	Plur.
1	niyāhũ̃.	niyāhan.
2	niyāhī.	niyāhā.
3	nihāi	nihā̃i.

The Active Verb is thus conjugated in its principal parts :—

Present Conjunctive, (If) I strike, etc.—

	Sing.	Plur.
1	māraũ̃.	māran.
2	māras.	mārā.
3	mārai.	maraĩ̃.

As usual this is often employed in the sense of the Simple Present. As examples of the tense we may quote mānas, if you do not heed (IV, 29) ; bwālas, thou speakest (IV, 42) ; mā̃gas, (what) thou mayest ask for (IV, 101) ; jās, thou art going (IV, 119) ; khā̃y, they eat (III, 44).

The following are examples of the Imperative:—Mār, strike thou ; mārā, strike ; pukārā, summon ; kāṭau, cut ; karāyas, cause thou to make ; khiliyaĩ̃, be good enough to play.

Future.—I shall strike, etc. This has two forms, viz.—1. Mārab, used for all genders, numbers, and persons, as in old Eastern Hindī;—2.

	Sing.	Plur.
1	marihaũ or marᵃhaũ.	marᵃbē, marihē or marᵃhē.
2	marihai or marᵃhai.	marihā, marihau, marᵃhā, or marᵃhau.
3	mārī.	marihaĩ or marᵃhaĩ.

Note that when the first syllable is long, and falls in the antepenultimate, it is shortened. So we have manihaũ, I will heed, in IV, 133. Kaihai (IV, 133), thou wilt say, is slightly irregular as in Bundēlī.

Tenses formed from the Present Participle.

The Present Participle is mārat (com. gen.); or marᵃtō (masc.), marᵃtī (fem.). From it are formed the usual tenses. Thus,—

Present.—Mārat-haũ (often written māratha ũ), I am striking. Any other form of the Auxiliary may be used.

Imperfect.—Mārat-hatõy, I was striking. Any other form of the Auxiliary may be used. As an isolated form, I may quote karai rahai, he was doing.

Past Conditional.—This may be formed in two ways. Either the present participle alone is used (exactly as in Hindōstānī), or else we have a tense conjugated on the model of Eastern Hindī. For the first form we have marᵃtō (masc.), marᵃtī (fem.), (if) I, thou, he, or she had struck; marᵃtē (masc.), marᵃtĩ̃ (fem.), (if) we, you, or they had struck. For the second form we have the following:—

	Sing.		Plur.
	Masc.	Fem.	Masc.	Fem.
1	marᵃtõ̃y.	marᵃtyũ̃.	marᵃtyan.	marᵃtin.
2	marᵃtōy.	marᵃtī.	marᵃtyō.	marᵃtyū.
3	marᵃtō.	marᵃtī.	marᵃtē.	marᵃtĩ̃.

Tenses formed from the Past Participle.

The Past Participle is mār (com. gen.); or mārō (masc.), mārī (fem.). From it are formed the usual tenses. Thus—

Past.—Like the Past Conditional, this may be formed in two ways. Either the Past Participle alone is used (exactly as in Hindōstānī), or else we have a tense conjugated on the model of Eastern Hindī. In both cases, if the verb is a transitive one, the construction is passive. The subject is put into the Agent case, and the verb agrees in gender with the object. In the second conjugated form, it agrees with the subject in person. Thus, maĩ-nai mārõy means 'I struck something masculine,' but maĩ-nai māryũ means 'I struck something feminine.' The following is the ordinary method of conjugating the past tense of a transitive verb. The conjugation of an intransitive verb differs in the third person.

	Sing.		Plur.
	Masc.	Fem.	Masc.	Fem.
1	mārõy.	māryũ.	māryan.	mārin.
2	mārōy.	mārī.	māryō.	māryū.
3	mārōs.	māris.	mārōn.	Not given.

These may be taken as the standard forms, but other forms for the third person singular are met. These are māras, māris, and mārus.

In the case of an intransitive verb, the third person singular, as noted above, is not used. Only the past participle alone is employed. Thus, baiṭh or baiṭhō, he sat down; baiṭh or baiṭhī, she sat down; baiṭh or baiṭhē, they (masc.) sat down; baiṭh or baiṭhĩ, they (fem.) sat down.

Perfect.—Mār-haũ or mārō-haũ, I have struck. Any other form of the Auxiliary can be used.

Pluperfect.—Mār-hatõy or mārō-hatõy, I had struck. Any other form of the Auxiliary can be used. In both tenses the construction is that of ordinary Hindōstānī.

The Infinitive is māran, māraĩ, mārab, or mar^{a}bō. Māraĩ is feminine in gender when used as a verbal noun. The others are masculine. The oblique form of the first three is the same as the nominative. That of mar^{a}bō is mar^{a}bē.

Irregular Verbs.—

The following irregular past participles have been noted:—

Infinitive.	Past Participle.
āwb, āwab, or aibō, to come	āwō, fem. āī.
jāib, to go	gawō, gā, or gau; fem. gai or gaī.
dēb, to give	dawō, dau, dīnh, or dīn; fem. of dawō or dau, dī. From dīnh, we have dīnhō, fem. dīnhī.
lēb, to take	The same as for dēb, substituting l for d.
karab, to do	kar, karō, or kīnh, kīnhō.

The verbs āub, and jāib, are quite irregular in the past tense. That of āub is conjugated as follows :—

	Sing.		Plur.
	Masc.	Fem.	Masc.	Fem.
1	āwaĩ.	āyũ̃.	āyan.	āin.
2	āwai.	āyī.	āyō.	āyū.
3	āwō.	āī.	āyē.	āĩ̃.

Any other form of the past participle may be used for the third person. The past tense of jāib is similar. Thus, gawaĩ, I went, and so on.

The future of āub is aihaũ, I shall come; aibē, etc., we shall come; aī, he shall come. Similarly, jaihaũ, I shall go.

conjugated on the model of Eastern Hindī. In both cases, if the verb is a transitive one, the construction is passive. The subject is put into the Agent case, and the verb agrees in gender with the object. In the second conjugated form, it agrees with the subject in person. Thus, maĩ-nai mārõy means 'I struck something masculine,' but maĩ-nai māryũ means 'I struck something feminine.' The following is the ordinary method of conjugating the past tense of a transitive verb. The conjugation of an intransitive verb differs in the third person.

	Sing.		Plur.
	Masc.	Fem.	Masc.	Fem.
1	mārõy.	māryũ.	māryan.	mārin.
2	mārōy.	mārī.	māryō.	māryū.
3	mārōs.	māris.	mārōn.	Not given.

These may be taken as the standard forms, but other forms for the third person singular are met. These are māras, māris, and mārus.

In the case of an intransitive verb, the third person singular, as noted above, is not used. Only the past participle alone is employed. Thus, baiṭh or baiṭhō, he sat down; baiṭh or baiṭhī, she sat down; baiṭh or baiṭhē, they (masc.) sat down; baiṭh or baiṭhĩ, they (fem.) sat down.

Perfect.—Mār-haũ or mārō-haũ, I have struck. Any other form of the Auxiliary can be used.

Pluperfect.—Mār-hatõy or mārō-hatõy, I had struck. Any other form of the Auxiliary can be used. In both tenses the construction is that of ordinary Hindōstānī.

The Infinitive is māran, māraĩ, mārab, or mar^{a}bō. Māraĩ is feminine in gender when used as a verbal noun. The others are masculine. The oblique form of the first three is the same as the nominative. That of mar^{a}bō is mar^{a}bē.

Irregular Verbs.—

The following irregular past participles have been noted:—

Infinitive.	Past Participle.
āub, āwab, or aibō, to come	āwō, fem. āī.
jāib, to go	gawō, gā, or gau; fem. gai or gaī.
dēb, to give	dawō, dau, dīnh, or dīn; fem. of dawō or dau, dī. From dīnh, we have dīnhō, fem. dīnhī.
lēb, to take	The same as for dēb, substituting l for d.
karab, to do	kar, karō, or kīnh, kīnhō.

The verbs āub, and jāib, are quite irregular in the past tense. That of āub is conjugated as follows :—

	Sing.		Plur.
	Masc.	Fem.	Masc.	Fem.
1	āwaĩ.	āyũ̃.	āyan.	āin.
2	āwai.	āyī.	āyō.	āyū.
3	āwō.	āī.	āyē.	āĩ̃.

Any other form of the past participle may be used for the third person. The past tense of jāib is similar. Thus, gawaĩ, I went, and so on.

The future of āub is aihaũ, I shall come ; aibē, etc., we shall come ; aī, he shall come. Similarly, jaihaũ, I shall go.

[No. 16.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ (BANĀPHARĪ) DIALECT. (STATE, CHARKHARI.)

SPECIMEN I.

(Rai Sahib Kashi Pershad.)

काहू-कै दुइ लरका हते । लहुरे लरका अपनै बाप-सै कहो कै बाप मोर हौंसा बाँट द्या । और वह-नै सब ड्यारा बाँट दओ । और वह-नै सब थोरे दिनन-मै इकट्ठा कर लओ और बहुत दूरी देस-खाँ चलो गओ और वहाँ आपन सब ड्यारा वाहीयाद-मै बहाइ दओ ॥

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Kāhū-kai dui larᵃkā hatai. Lahurē larᵃkā apᵃnaï
A-certain-one-to two sons were. (By-)the-younger son his-own bāp-sai kahō kai, 'bāp, mōr hĩsā bā̃ṭ dyā.' Aur father-to it-was-said that, 'father, my share having-divided give.' And wah-nai sab ḍyārā bā̃ṭ daō. Aur wah-nai sab him-by all property having-divided was-given. And him-by everything thōrē dinan-mai ikaṭṭhā kar-laō, aur bahut dūrī dēs-khā̃ chalōa-few days-in collected was-made, and very far country-to he-wentgaō, aur wahā̃ āpan sab ḍyārā wāhīyād-mai bahāi-daō.

away, and there his-own all property absurdities-in was-caused-to-flow-away.

[No. 17.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ (BANĀPHARĪ) DIALECT. (STATE, CHARKHARI.)

SPECIMEN II.

(Rai Sahib Kashi Pershad.)

एक ब्राह्मन वा एक ब्राह्मनी रहै। दोऊ मिहरिया मुँसवा आँइ। कुछ दिन बीतै धुबक परो। तब ब्राह्मन आपन मिहरिया छोड़ दखिन भाग गा। और एक साहूकार-कै चाकर रहो। पाँच सौ रुपैया कमाइस। जब दो बरसै हो चुकी तब ब्राह्मनी-की खबर आई। और साहूकार-सै बिदा माँग-कर आपन घर-कौ रैंगो। जब कुछ दूर घर रह-गा तब मन-मै सोधिस कै ब्राह्मनी करजदार हुइ गई हूहै सो मै काऊ बड़े आदमी-के इहाँ रुपैया धर दैंव। गाँउ-मै एक बाँनी रहै। तिया-सन कहुस कै भाई मोर रुपैया धरोहर धर राख। इतनै बीच-मै एक बैरागी-का चेला लाग लैन आयो। बाँनी-नै जल्दी-मै चेला-कौ लाग तौल दई और चेला लाग लै-गा। बाबा पूछिस आज लाग सिवाइ काहे है। चेला-नै कहुस कै एक राहगीर बाँनी-कै इहाँ पाँच सौ रुपैया-की धरोहर-की बात-चीत करै रहै। सो मो-खाँ लाग जल्दी-मै तौल दिहस-है। बाबा मन-मै सोधो कै वा राहगीर-कौ कौनउ जुगत-सै बुलाव। सो अधकारी कनक वा घी ऐचस वा चेला-सै कहिस कै या जिंस फेराव और बाँनी-सै कहब कै हमार बाबा काहू-का हराम नहीं खात आँइ। चेला गा और जिंस फेर दिहस। या बात जब वा ब्राह्मन सुनी तब कहिस कै या बाबा ईमान्दार है। यह-कै इहाँ रुपैया मै धरब। ब्राह्मन बाबा ढिंग गा वा कहस कै महाराज मोर रुपैया धर राखौ। बाबा-नै रुपैया लै-कर एक कोठा-मै ब्राह्मन-कै साम्हनै गाड़ दिहस और ब्राह्मन आपन घर चलो गा। अपनी ब्राह्मनी सै पूछिस कि काहू-की करजदार तौ नाही हा। ब्राह्मनी कहुस कि नियाहूँ। तब कुछ दिन बीतै ब्राह्मन आपन रुपैया लैन बाबा ढिंग गा। बाबा कहिस हमार ढिंग कब धर गा। ब्राह्मन मन-माँ गिल्याँद मानी और एक जिमीदार-सै आपन सब हाल जा कहिस। जिमीदार

[No. 16.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ (BANĀPHARĪ) DIALECT. (STATE, CHARKHARI.)

SPECIMEN I.

(Rai Sahib Kashi Pershad.)

काहू-कै दुइ लरका हते । लहुरे लरका अपनै बाप-सै कहो कै बाप मोर हौंसा बाँट द्या । और वह-नै सब ड्यारा बाँट दओ । और वह-नै सब थोरे दिनन-मै इकट्ठा कर लओ और बहुत दूरी देस-खाँ चलो गओ और वहाँ आपन सब ड्यारा वाहौयाद-मै बहाइ दओ ॥

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Kāhū-kai dui larᵃkā hatai. Lahurē larᵃkā apᵃnaï
A-certain-one-to two sons were. (By-)the-younger son his-own

bāp-sai kahō kai, 'bāp, mōr hĩsā bãṭ dyā.' Aur father-to it-was-said that, 'father, my share having-divided give.' And wah-nai sab ḍyārā bãṭ daō. Aur wah-nai sab him-by all property having-divided was-given. And him-by everything thōrē dinan-mai ikaṭṭhā kar-laō, aur bahut dūrī dēs-khã chalō-

a-few days-in collected was-made, and very far country-to he-wentgaō, aur wahã āpan sab ḍyārā wāhīyād-mai bahāi-daō.

away, and there his-own all property absurdities-in was-caused-to-flow-away.

[No. 17.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ (BANĀPHARĪ) DIALECT. (STATE, CHARKHARI.)

SPECIMEN II.

(Rai Sahib Kashi Pershad.)

एक ब्राह्मन वा एक ब्राह्मनी रहै। दोऊ मिहरिया मुँसवा आँइ। कुछ दिन बीते धुवक परो। तब ब्राह्मन आपन मिहरिया छोड़ दखिन भाग गा। और एक साहूकार-कै चाकर रहो। पाँच सौ रुपैया कमाइस। जब दो बरसै हो चुकी तब ब्राह्मनी-की खबर आई। और साहूकार-सै विदा माँग-कर आपन घर-कौ रैंगो। जब कुछ दूर घर रह-गा तब मन-मै सोधिस कै ब्राह्मनी करजदार हुइ गई हूहै सो मै काऊ बड़े आदमी-के इहाँ रुपैया धर दैंव। गाँउ-मै एक बाँनी रहै। तिया-सन कहुस कै भाई मोर रुपैया धरोहर धर राख। इतनै बीच-मै एक बैरागी-का चेला लाग लैन आयो। बाँनी-नै जल्दी-मै चेला-कौ लाग तौल दई और चेला लाग लै-गा। बाबा पूछिस आज लाग सिवाइ काहे है। चेला-नै कहुस कै एक राहगीर बाँनी-के इहाँ पाँच सौ रुपैया-की धरोहर-की बात-चीत करै रहै। सो मो-खाँ लाग जल्दी-मै तौल दिहस-है। बाबा मन-मै सोधो कै वा राहगीर-कौ कौनउ जुगत-सै बुलाव। सो अधकारी कनक वा घी ऐचस वा चेला-सै कहिस कै या जिंस फेराव और बाँनी-सै कहब कै हमार बाबा काहू-का हराम नहीं खात आँइ। चेला गा और जिंस फेर दिहस। या बात जब वा ब्राह्मन सुनी तब कहिस कै या बाबा ईमान्दार है। यह-के इहाँ रुपैया मै धरब। ब्राह्मन बाबा ढिंग गा वा कहस कै महाराज मोर रुपैया धर राखौ। बाबा-नै रुपैया लै-कर एक कोठा-मै ब्राह्मन-के साम्हनै गाड़ दिहस और ब्राह्मन आपन घर चलो गा। अपनी ब्राह्मनी सै पूछिस कि काहू-की करजदार तौ नाही हा। ब्राह्मनी कहुस कि नियाहूँ। तब कुछ दिन बीते ब्राह्मन आपन रुपैया लैन बाबा ढिंग गा। बाबा कहिस हमार ढिंग कब धर गा। ब्राह्मन मन-माँ गिल्याँद मानी और एक जिमीदार-सै आपन सब हाल जा कहिस। जिमीदार

[No. 16.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ (BANĀPHARĪ) DIALECT. (STATE, CHARKHARI.)

SPECIMEN I.

(Rai Sahib Kashi Pershad.)

काहू-कै दुइ लरका हते । लहुरे लरका अपने बाप-से कहो कै बाप मोर हौंसा बाँट द्या । और वह-ने सब ड्यारा बाँट दओ । और वह-ने सब थोरे दिनन-मै इकट्ठा कर लओ और बहुत दूरी देस-खाँ चलो गओ और वहाँ आपन सब ड्यारा वाहीयाद-मै बहाइ दओ ॥

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Kāhū-kai dui larᵃkā hatai. Lahurē larᵃkā apᵃnai
A-certain-one-to two sons were. (By-)the-younger son his-own

bāp-sai kahō kai, 'bāp, mōr hĩsā bãṭ dyā.' Aur father-to it-was-said that, 'father, my share having-divided give.' And wah-nai sab ḍyārā bãṭ daō. Aur wah-nai sab him-by all property having-divided was-given. And him-by everything

thōrē dinan-mai ikaṭṭhā kar-laō, aur bahut dūrī dēs-khã chalō-
a-few days-in collected was-made, and very far country-to he-went-

gaō, aur wahã āpan sab ḍyārā wāhīyād-mai bahāi-daō.
away, and there his-own all property absurdities-in was-caused-to-flow-away.

[No. 17.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ (BANĀPHARĪ) DIALECT. (STATE, CHARKHARI.)

SPECIMEN II.

(Rai Sahib Kashi Pershad.)

एक ब्राह्मन वा एक ब्राह्मनी रहै। दोऊ मिहरिया मुँसवा आँइ। कुछ दिन बीतै धुवक परो। तव ब्राह्मन आपन मिहरिया छोड़ दखिन भाग गा। और एक साहूकार-कै चाकर रहो। पाँच सौ रुपैया कमाइस। जव दो बरसै हो चुकी तब ब्राह्मनी-की खवर आई। और साहूकार-सै विदा माँग-कर आपन घर-कौ रैंगो। जब कुछ दूर घर रह-गा तव मन-मै सोधिस कै ब्राह्मनी करजदार हुइ गई हूहै सो मै काऊ वड़े आदमी-के इहाँ रुपैया धर दैंव। गाँउ-मै एक बाँनी रहै। तिया-सन कहुस कै भाई मोर रुपैया धरोहर धर राख। इतनै बीच-मै एक बैरागी-का चेला लाग लैन आयो। बाँनी-नै जल्दी-मै चेला-कौ लाग तौल दई और चेला लाग लै-गा। बाबा पूछिस आज लाग सिवाइ काहे है। चेला-नै कहुस कै एक राहगीर बाँनी-के इहाँ पाँच सौ रुपैया-की धरोहर-की बात-चीत करै रहै। सो मो-खाँ लाग जल्दी-मै तौल दिहस-है। बाबा मन-मै सोधो कै वा राहगीर-कौ कौनउ जुगत-सै बुलाव। सो अधकारी कनक वा घी ऐचस वा चेला-सै कहिस कै या जिंस फेराव और बाँनी-सै कहव कै हमार बाबा काहू-का हराम नहीं खात आँइ। चेला गा और जिंस फेर दिहस। या बात जब वा ब्राह्मन सुनी तब कहिस कै या बाबा ईमान्दार है। यह-के इहाँ रुपैया मै धरव। ब्राह्मन बाबा ढिंग गा वा कहस कै महाराज मोर रुपैया धर राखौ। बाबा-नै रुपैया लै-कर एक कोठा-मै ब्राह्मन-के साम्हनै गाड़ दिहस और ब्राह्मन आपन घर चलो गा। अपनी ब्राह्मनी सै पूछिस कि काहू-की करजदार तौ नाही हा। ब्राह्मनी कहुस कि नियाहूँ। तब कुछ दिन बीतै ब्राह्मन आपन रुपैया लैन बाबा ढिंग गा। बाबा कहिस हमार ढिंग कब धर गा। ब्राह्मन मन-माँ गिल्याँद मानी और एक जिमीदार-सै आपन सब हाल जा कहिस। जिमीदार

कहुस कै हमार जोर निहाँइ । तुम फलानै मौजा-की बीबी-कौ सुनाव । ब्राह्मन बीबी-कै गा और आपन हाल कहुस । बीबी कहो कै मै फलानै दिन बाबा-के ढिंग जाब सो तुहीं आइ-जाइस । बीबी सब आपन जमाँ लै-कर बाबा ढिंग गई और कहिस कै मोर मियाँ साहब मदारन गे ते सो नहीं आये आँइ । मै उन-के टूड़ै-ख जात-हौं । मोर धरोहर धर राखौ । इतनै बीच-मै ब्राह्मन आइ-गा वा कहुस कै बाबा मोर रुपैया दै राख । बाबा-नै रुपैया उखार-कर-कै दे दीन । या सोच-कर-कै कै जो मै या-सै झगड़हौं तौ बीबी आपन रुपैया ना धरहै । बीबी देखिस कै ब्राह्मन आपन रुपैया पाइ-गा । तब बाबा-सै कहिस कै मोर भाई कहत आवा-है कै मियाँ साहब मदारन-सै आइ-गे सो अब मै धरोहर ना धरहौं । और फिर बीबी हसन लाग वा ब्राह्मन हसन लाग और बाबऊ हसै लाग ॥

॥ कहावत ॥

बीबी हसी मियाँ घर आये । हसे मुसाफर गठरी पाये ॥
तुम का हसे मियाँ भीखि । एक तमासा ये भी सीखे ॥

[No. 17.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ (BANĀPHARĪ) DIALECT. (STATE, CHARKHARI.)

SPECIMEN II.

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ēk brāhman wā ēk brāhmanī rahai. Dōū mihariyā mũsᵃwā
One brāhman and one brāhman's-wife were. Both wife husband ãi. Kuchh din bītai dhubak parō. Tab brāhman are (i.e. were). Some days passed famine fell. Then the-brāhman āpan mihariyā chhōṛ dakhin bhāg-gā. Aur ēk sāhūkār-kai chākar his-own wife leaving south ran-away. And one banker-to servant rahō. Pãch sau rupaiyā kamāis. Jab dō barᵃsai remained. Five hundred rupees he-earned. When two years hō-chukī tab brāhmanī-kī khabar āī. Aur sāhūkārhad-passed then the-brāhman's-wife-of remembrance came. And the-bankersai bidā mãg-kar āpan ghar-kau raĩgō. Jab kuchh from leave begged-having his-own house-to he-started. When some dūr ghar rah-gā tab man-mai sōdhis kai, brāhmanī distance house remained then mind-in he-thought that, brāhman's-wife karaj-dār hui-gaī hūhai sō mai kāū baṛē ādᵃmī-kē ihã rupaiyā indebted become will-be therefore I some great man-of near rupees dhar-daĩw. Gãu-mai ēk bãnī rahai. Tiyā-san kahus kai, deposit-may. The-village-in one shopman was. Him-to he-said that,
'bhāī, mōr rupaiyā dharōhar dhar-rākh.' Itᵃnai-bīch-mai ēk
'brother, my rupees deposit keep.' The-meantime-in one bairāgī-kā chēlā lāg lain āyō. Bãnī-nai jaldī-mai religious-mendicant's disciple rations to-take came. The-shopman haste-in chēlā-kau lāg taul-dāi, aur chēlā lāg lai-gā.
disciple-to rations weighed-out, and the-disciple rations took-away.
Bābā pūchhis, 'āj lāg siwāi kāhē-hai?' Chēlā-nai
The-recluse asked, 'today rations much why-is?' The-disciple-by kahus kai, 'ēk rāh-gīr bãnī-kē ihã pãch sau it-was-said-by-him that, 'one way-farer the-shopman-of near five hundred rupaiyā-kī dharōhar-kī bāt-chīt karai-rahai, sō mō-khã lāg rupees-of deposit-of conversation doing-was, therefore me-to rations jaldī-mai taul-dihas-hai.' Bābā man-mai sōdhō kai wā rāh-gīr-kau haste-in weighed-has.' The-recluse mind-in thought that that way-farer-to kaunaü jugat-sai bulāw. Sō adh[a]kārī kanak wā ghī some means-by call. So superfluous wheat-flour and clarified-butter aichas, wā chēlā-sai kahis kai, 'yā jins pherāw, aur he-drew-forth, and disciple-to he-said that, 'this stuff return, and bā̃nī-sai kahab kai, "hamār bābā kāhū-kā harām the-shopman-to you-will-say that, "my recluse anybody-of ill-gotten(-things) nahī̃ khāt-ā̃i."' Chēlā gā aur jins phēr-dihas. Yā bāt not eats."' The-disciple went and the-stuff returned. This thing jab wā brāhman sunī tab kahis kai, 'yā bābā imāndār when by-that brāhman was-heard then he-said that, 'this recluse honest hai. Yah-kē ihā̃ rupaiyā mai dharab.' Brāhman bābā is. This-one-of near money I shall-deposit.' The-brāhman the-recluse ḍhiṅg gā, wā kahas kai, 'Mahārāj, mōr rupaiyā dhar-rākhau.'

near went, and said that, 'Sir, my rupees keep-in-deposit.'
Bābā-nai rupaiyā lai-kar ēk kōṭhā-mai brāhman-kē sāmh[a]nai
The-recluse-by money taken-having one room-in brāhman-of before gāṛ-dihas, aur brāhman āpan ghar chalō-gā. Ap[a]nī was-buried-by-him, and the-brāhman his-own house went-away. His-own brāh[a]manī-sai pūchhis kai, 'kāhū-kī karaj-dār tau nāhī brāhman's-wife-from he-asked that, 'any-body-of debtor indeed not hā ?' Brāhmanī kahus, 'niyāhū̃.' Tab kuchh din bītai thou-art ?' The-brāhman's-wife said, 'I-am-not.' Then some days passed brāhman āpan rupaiyā lain bābā ḍhiṅg gā. Bābā the-brāhman his-own money to-take the-recluse near went. The-recluse kahis, 'hamār dhiṅg kab dhar-gā ?' Brāhman man-mā̃ gilyā̃d said, 'me-of near when did-you-keep ?' (By-)the-brāhman mind-in shame mānī aur ēk jimīdār-sai āpan sab hāl jā kahis.
was-felt and one landholder-to his-own all account going said.
Jimidār kahus kai, 'hamār jōr nihā̃i. Tum phalānai
The-landholder said that, 'my power is-not. You such-and-such maujā-kī bībī-kau sunāw.' Brāhman bībī-kai gā aur a-village-of dancing-girl-to relate.' The-brāhman the-dancing-girl-to went and āpan hāl kahus. Bībī kahō kai, 'mai his-own account said. (By-)the-dancing-girl it-was-said that, 'I phalānai din bābā-kē ḍhiṅg jāb, sō tuhī̃ āi-jāis.'
such-and-such a-day the-recluse-of near will-go, therefore you-also come.'
Bībī sab āpan jamā̃ lai-kar bābā ḍhiṅg gaī
The-dancing-girl all her-own substance taking the-recluse near went aur kahis kai, 'mōr miyā̃-sāhab Madāran gē-tē, sō nahĩ̃ āyē-ā̃i.

and said that, 'my master Madāran gone-was, but not returned-is.
Mai un-kē ḍhūṛai-khā̃ jāt-haũ. Mōr dharōhar dhar-rākhō.' Itª nai-bīch-mai
I him to-look-for am-going. My deposit keep.' The-mean-time-in brāhman āi-gā, wā kahus kai, 'bābā, mōr rupaiyā dai-rākh.'
the-brāhman arrived, and said that, 'father, my money give-up.'
Bābā-nai rupaiyā ukhār-kar-kai dē-dīn. Yā sōch-kar-kai kai,
The-recluse-by money taking-out was-given-up. This thinking that,
'jō mai yā-sai jhagaṛªhaũ tau bībī āpan rupaiyā nā
'if I this-one-with shall-quarrel then the-dancing-girl her-own money not dharªhai.' Bībī dēkhis kai brāhman āpan rupaiyā will-deposit.' The-dancing-girl saw that the-brāhman his-own money pāi-gā, tab bābā-sai kahis kai, 'mōr bhāī kahat āwā-hai got, then the-recluse-to she-said that, 'my brother saying come-is kai, "miyā̃-sāhab Madāran-sai āi-gē." Sō ab mai dharōhar that, "the-master Madāran-from arrived." Therefore now I deposit nā dharªhaũ.' Aur phir bībī hasan lāg, wā brāhman not will-place.' And again the-dancing-girl to-laugh began, and brāhman hasan lāg aur bāba-ū hasai lāg.
to-laugh began and the-recluse-also to-laugh began.

Kahāwat,—
(Hence-the-)saying,—

Bībī hasī miyā̃ ghara āyē; hasē musāphara gaṭharī
The-dancer laughed her-master home came; laughed the-traveller purse pāyē.
he-got.

Tuma kā hasē, miyā̃ bhīkhē? Ēka tamāsā yē bhī sīkhē.
You why laughed, master mendicant? A trick this-one also learnt.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

Once upon a time there were a Brahman and his wife. A famine occurred, so the Brahman deserted his wife, and ran away to the Deccan, where he took service with a banker, and earned five hundred rupees. When two years had passed, he remembered his wife, and, taking leave of the banker, set out for his home. While he was on the way, it struck him that his wife would probably be in debt, so he decided to deposit his savings with some well-to-do person to protect them from her creditors. He accordingly went to a shopkeeper in his village, and asked him to take the money on deposit.

While he was speaking to him the disciple of a certain mendicant devotee came up to beg from the shopman, and the latter, being busy with the Brahman, weighed out the alms in a hurry. The disciple brought what he had got to his master the recluse, who asked him why he had brought more than usual that day. Replied the disciple, 'there was a traveller talking to the shopkeeper about depositing five hundred rupees, and owing to his being busy with him, he weighed out my alms in a hurry.' The recluse thought to himself that he must get hold of that traveller some way or other, so he gave the flour and clarified butter which was over and above the regular amount to the disciple, and told him to take it to the shopkeeper with this message, 'my master will not eat anything wrongly taken from anybody.' The disciple did what he was told, and when the Brahman heard what he said, he thought to himself, 'this recluse must be a very honest man. I will deposit my money with him.' So he went off to the recluse and addressed him as follows,—'Holy Sir, will you deign to keep my money in deposit?' The recluse took the money into an inner room, and there buried it in the presence of its owner, who then went on in happiness to his home. When he got there he asked his wife if she owed any debts, and she replied that she did not. After a few days the Brahman returned to the recluse and asked for his money, but the latter said, 'when did you ever leave any money with me?' Filled with shame at the recluse's duplicity, the Brahman went off to his landlord and complained of how he had been treated. Said the landlord, 'it is beyond my power to help you; but go and tell your story to the dancing girl of such and such a village.' He did so, and she told him to meet her on such and such a day at the recluse's. On the day fixed the dancing girl brought her savings to the recluse, and said to him, 'my master went some time ago to the fair of Madāran[1] and has not come back. I am going to look for him, and want you to keep my money in deposit for me while I am away.' Just then the Brahman entered and again asked for his deposit. The recluse at once gave it to him, for he thought that if this fellow quarrelled with him the dancing girl would not trust him with her money. As soon, however, as she saw that the Brahman had safely got his rupees, she said to the recluse, 'my brother has just come, and he says that my master has returned from the Madāran, so now I won't have to trouble you with the deposit.' Then the dancing girl began to laugh, and so did the Brahman, and so did the recluse. As the saying goes:—

The dancer laughed, for her master had come;
The traveller laughed, for he got his purse.
Master mendicant, why did you laugh?
'Because I have learnt this new trick.'

---

[1] This is the fair held at Makanpur in Kanauj in honour of the famous saint Shāh Madār, who is buried there.

THE SONGS OF ĀLHĀ AND ŪDAL.

I do not suppose that any epic poem is at the present day so popular as that of Ālhā and Ūdal, which is sung by itinerant bards all over northern India. The entire cycle has never been collected, but portions of it and even translations of portions have often been published. The earliest version of the epic with which we are acquainted is contained in the Mahōbā Khaṇḍ of the Prithīrāj Rāsau, attributed to Chand Bardāi (Fl. 1190 A.D.). Chand Bardāi was the court bard of Prithīrāj Chauhān, King of Delhi. The Mahōbā Khaṇḍ deals mainly with the war between that Monarch and Parmāl, the Chandēl of Mahōbā, and according to another, and more probable, tradition was the work of Jagnāik, the bard of Parmāl. A translation of a part of it will be found in Tod's Rajasthan, i. 614 and ff. There are two or three native editions of the modern cycle, none of which is complete. Portions of one of them were translated by Mr. Waterfield into vigorous English ballad metre, and appeared in vols. lxi, lxii, and lxiii of the Calcutta Review, under the title of the 'Nine-Lākh Chain, or the Mārō feud.' A full account of the contents of these editions, from the pen of the present writer, will be found in vol. xiv of the Indian Antiquary, pp. 255 and ff. An edition of the text and a translation of the chapter relating to Ālhā's marriage, as current in Bihār, also by the present writer, will be found on pp. 209 and ff. of the same volume.

Some years ago Mr. Vincent Smith was kind enough to present me with a collection of notes on the Bundēlī dialect of Hamirpur, which he had made when he was employed in the settlement of that district. These contained the following two extracts from the cycle, which are given just as they were taken down under his supervision from the lips of rustic singers. Both are fragments, but they are valuable not only as specimens of the Banāpharī sub-dialect of Bundēlī, but also as being genuine specimens of a class of poetry which is very popular over a large part of our Indian possessions. In Hamirpur the whole series of songs dealing with Ālhā and Ūdal is known as the 'Sairā' or 'Ālhā.' Separate fragments which are recited at one time are called 'Pāwārā,' 'Samay' or 'Mār.'

The text given below is that of Mr. Vincent Smith, unaltered. The translation is also based on a rough version prepared by him to accompany the texts. I am responsible for the notes.

It is unnecessary to give here a full account of the contents of the Ālhā cycle. Those interested in the subject will find what they require (so far as is known) in the article in the Indian Antiquary quoted above. I propose to give here so much of the legend as is necessary for understanding the specimens now printed. It is to be understood that what is narrated is legend (and not the only legend,—they are often contradictory) and not history. The main characters are historical, but their adventures, as here recorded, are not.

The three royal personages dealt with are—(1) Prithīrāj or Pithaurā, the Chauhān King of Delhi; (2) Jaichand, the Rāṭhōr King of Kanauj; and (3) Parmāl or Paramardī, the Chandēl King of Mahōbā in Bundelkhand.[1] The two first were cousins.

[1] Once for all, I warn the reader that I do not transcribe these and other names in the cycle with absolute accuracy. I only give the popular spelling. For instance 'Parmāl' should properly be 'Par*māl.'

Both were grand-nephews of Anang Pāl Tōmar of Delhi, and, when he died, Prithīrāj, although the younger, was proclaimed King to the exclusion of Jaichand. The result was a lifelong enmity between the two princes, which eventually facilitated the conquering of India by the Tartar hordes of Central Asia. Prithīrāj and his bard Chand were killed in battle fighting against the Muhammadans in the year 1193 A.D. Kanauj was overwhelmed, and Jaichand slain in the following year by Shihābu'd-dīn, the 'Meteor of the Faith,' and his son fled to Marwar, where he established the principality now known as Jodhpur. Parmāl reigned from about 1165 to 1202 A.D. He was defeated and expelled from Mahōbā by Prithīrāj in the year 1182. Here legend departs from history. According to the former Parmāl was so crushed with this defeat that he abandoned his kingdom and fled to Gayā where he ultimately died, being the last of the Chandēl Kings of Mahōbā. As a matter of history twenty years later we still find him fighting bravely against the Musalmān Kutbu'd-dīn at Kālinjar. He was not the last of his race, but had several obscure successors on the throne.

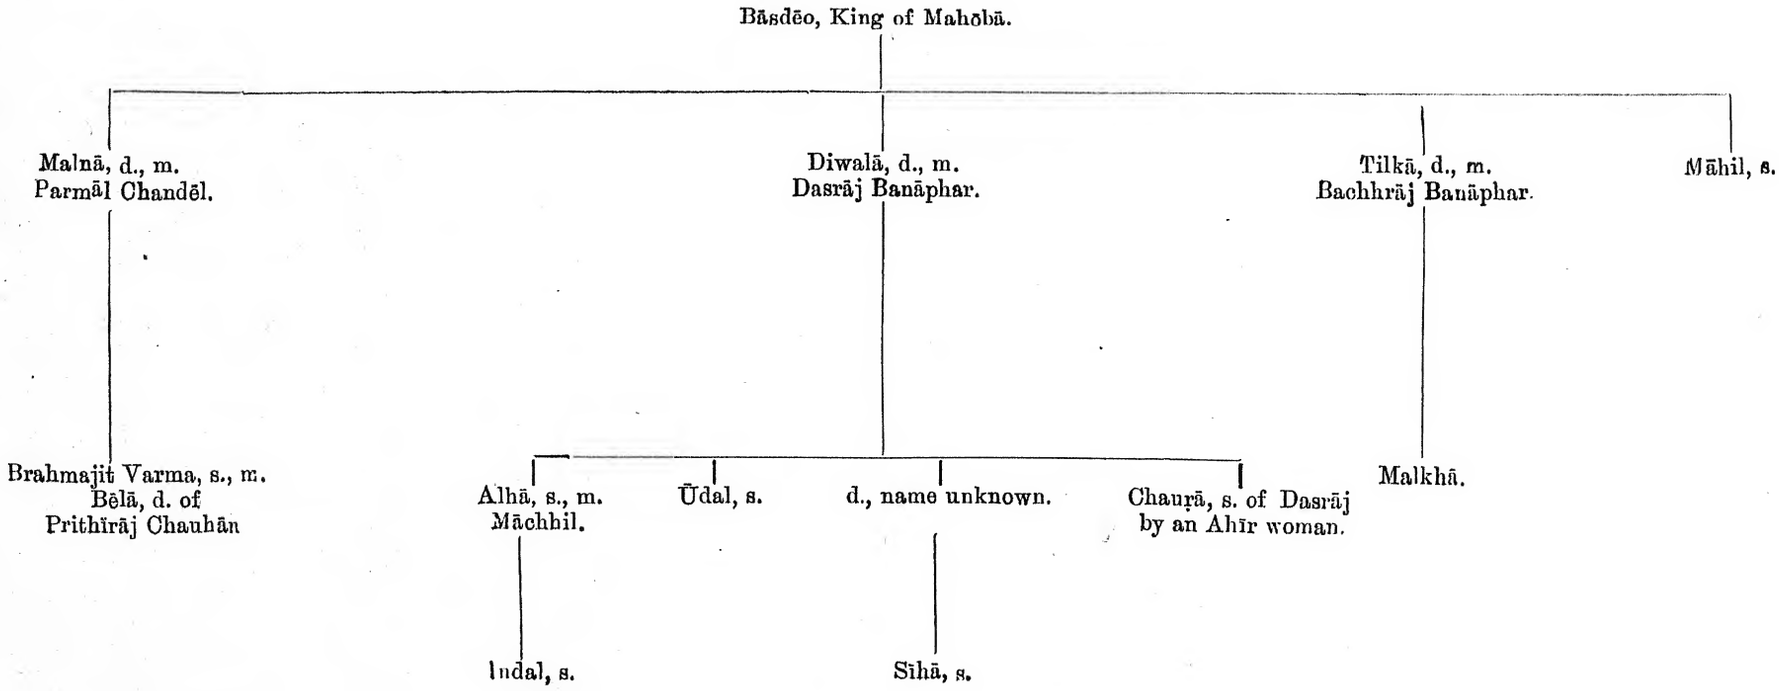
The historical Parmāl was probably the son of his predecessor Madana-Varmā Chandēl, but the legendary account is quite different. It runs as follows :—

Parmāl conquered the whole of India. The first city he conquered was Mahōbā in Bundelkhand, of which Bāsdēo Parihār was the prince. Bāsdēo had one son Māhil and three daughters, Malnā (also called Padminī), Diwalā, and Tilkā. Parmāl married Malnā and treated Māhil with consideration, but the latter never forgave his father's conqueror and was the cause of his ultimate downfall. He is throughout the villain of the cycle.

Parmāl, according to Chandēl custom, had two faithful attendants belonging to the Banāphar tribe of Rājpūts. They were named Dasrāj and Bachhrāj. To Dasrāj he gave his sister-in-law Diwalā in marriage, and to Bachhrāj, Tilkā. By these marriages, Dasrāj had two sons Ālhā and (much younger) Ūdal, and Bachhrāj had one, Malkhā. Dasrāj had another son by an Ahīr woman, who was named Chauṛā or Chaũṛā.[1] On his birth he was exposed in the river, and was picked up and taken to Prithīrāj Chauhān of Delhi, who adopted him as a son, and when he grew up, appointed him to a command in his army. We thus find him, in the final catastrophe, fighting against his half-brothers Ālhā and Ūdal. Dasrāj also had a daughter, who bore a son called Sīhā.

Finally, Parmāl had a son by Malnā, named Brahmajit Varmā. Much against his father's will he married Bēlā, the daughter of Prithīrāj, but was killed while yet a boy on the fatal field of Uraī. He never brought his bride home, and, in the specimens now given, we find Bēlā still in her father's house, but, like a true Rājpūt wife, a strong partisan on her husband's side of the quarrel. We thus get the following legendary genealogical table :—

[1] Some versions call him Dhāndō.



Bāsdēo, King of Mahōbā.
Malnā, d., m. Parmāl Chandēl.
Diwalā, d., m. Dasrāj Banāphar.
Tilkā, d., m. Bachhrāj Banāphar.
Māhil, s.
Brahmajit Varma, s., m. Bēlā, d. of Prithīrāj Chauhān Ālhā, s., m. Māchhil.
Ūdal, s.
d., name unknown.
Chauṛā, s. of Dasrāj by an Ahīr woman.
Malkhā.
Indal, s.
Sīhā, s.

Both were grand-nephews of Anang Pāl Tōmar of Delhi, and, when he died, Prithīrāj, although the younger, was proclaimed King to the exclusion of Jaichand. The result was a lifelong enmity between the two princes, which eventually facilitated the conquering of India by the Tartar hordes of Central Asia. Prithīrāj and his bard Chand were killed in battle fighting against the Muhammadans in the year 1193 A.D. Kanauj was overwhelmed, and Jaichand slain in the following year by Shihābu'd-dīn, the 'Meteor of the Faith,' and his son fled to Marwar, where he established the principality now known as Jodhpur. Parmāl reigned from about 1165 to 1202 A.D. He was defeated and expelled from Mahōbā by Prithīrāj in the year 1182. Here legend departs from history. According to the former Parmāl was so crushed with this defeat that he abandoned his kingdom and fled to Gayā where he ultimately died, being the last of the Chandēl Kings of Mahōbā. As a matter of history twenty years later we still find him fighting bravely against the Musalmān Kutbu'd-dīn at Kālinjar. He was not the last of his race, but had several obscure successors on the throne.

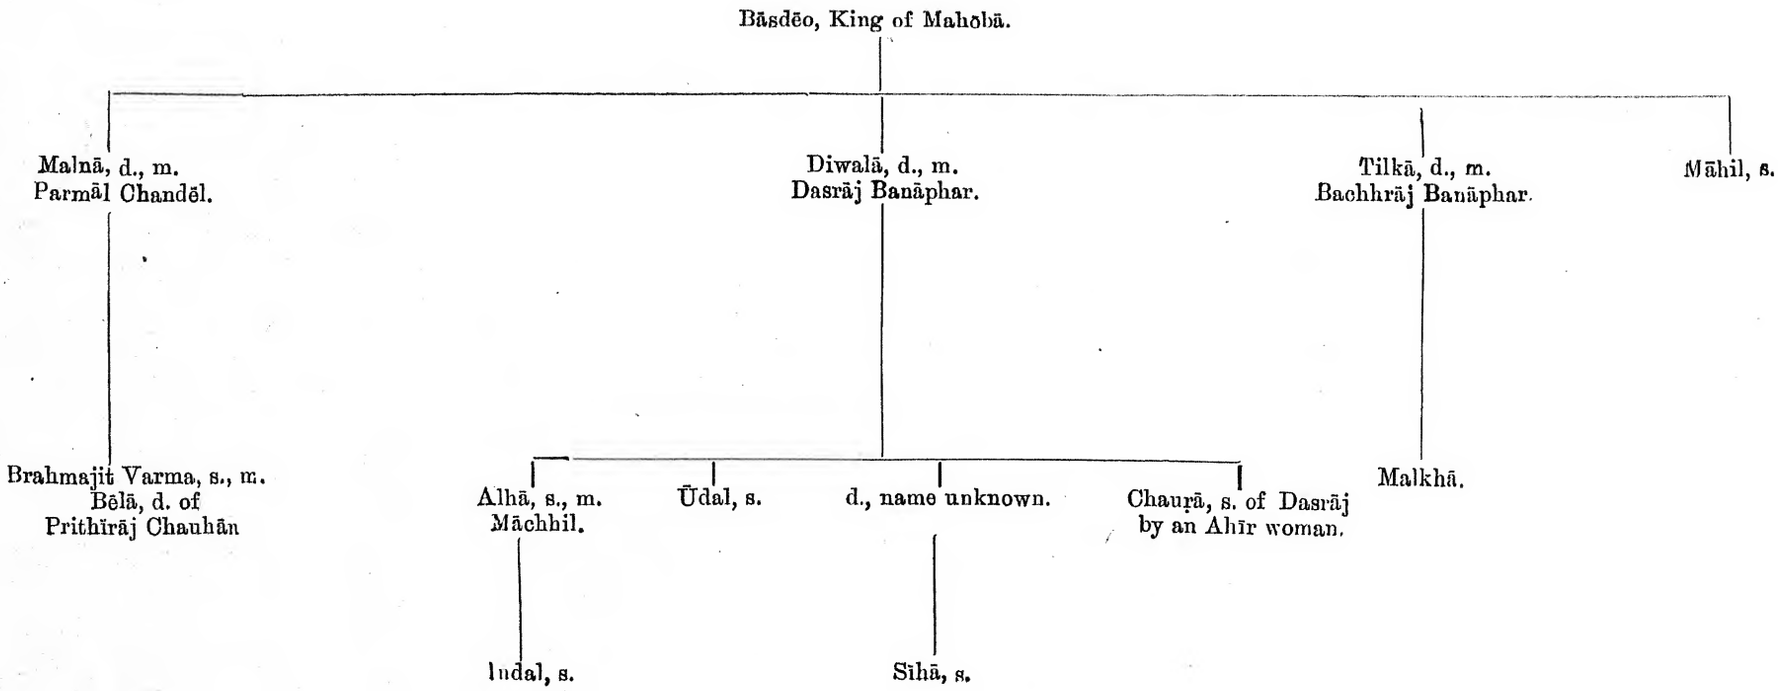
The historical Parmāl was probably the son of his predecessor Madana-Varmā Chandēl, but the legendary account is quite different. It runs as follows :—

Parmāl conquered the whole of India. The first city he conquered was Mahōbā in Bundelkhand, of which Bāsdēo Parihār was the prince. Bāsdēo had one son Māhil and three daughters, Malnā (also called Padminī), Diwalā, and Tilkā. Parmāl married Malnā and treated Māhil with consideration, but the latter never forgave his father's conqueror and was the cause of his ultimate downfall. He is throughout the villain of the cycle.

Parmāl, according to Chandēl custom, had two faithful attendants belonging to the Banāphar tribe of Rājpūts. They were named Dasrāj and Bachhrāj. To Dasrāj he gave his sister-in-law Diwalā in marriage, and to Bachhrāj, Tilkā. By these marriages, Dasrāj had two sons Ālhā and (much younger) Ūdal, and Bachhrāj had one, Malkhā. Dasrāj had another son by an Ahīr woman, who was named Chauṛā or Chaũṛā.[1] On his birth he was exposed in the river, and was picked up and taken to Prithīrāj Chauhān of Delhi, who adopted him as a son, and when he grew up, appointed him to a command in his army. We thus find him, in the final catastrophe, fighting against his half-brothers Ālhā and Ūdal. Dasrāj also had a daughter, who bore a son called Sīhā.

Finally, Parmāl had a son by Malnā, named Brahmajit Varmā. Much against his father's will he married Bēlā, the daughter of Prithīrāj, but was killed while yet a boy on the fatal field of Uraī. He never brought his bride home, and, in the specimens now given, we find Bēlā still in her father's house, but, like a true Rājpūt wife, a strong partisan on her husband's side of the quarrel. We thus get the following legendary genealogical table :—

[1] Some versions call him Dhāndō.



Bāsdēo, King of Mahōbā.
Malnā, d., m. Parmāl Chandēl.
Diwalā, d., m. Dasrāj Banāphar.
Tilkā, d., m. Bachhrāj Banāphar.
Māhil, s.
Brahmajit Varma, s., m. Bēlā, d. of Prithīrāj Chauhān Ālhā, s., m. Māchhil.
Ūdal, s.
d., name unknown.
Chauṛā, s. of Dasrāj by an Ahīr woman.
Malkhā.
Indal, s.
Sīhā, s.

The other prominent figures in the poem (besides Prithīrāj and Jaichand) are :—

Jagnāik, bard of Parmāl.
Lākhan, nephew of Jaichand.
Rāypāl, elder son of Jaichand.
Gulālan, younger son of Jaichand.
Rāybhān, Rājā of Kurhaṭ, a fief of Kanauj, under Jaichand.
Miyān Tālhan of Benares (see below).
Alī Alāwar, Kālē Khān, Jaṛī Bēg, Sultān, Bahubalī } Sons of Tālhan.
Hīrsing Dēo, Bīrsing Dēo, Pūran Dēo } Chiefs of Gānjar. Conquered by Ālhā, but subsequently his allies.
Matauwā Ahīr, in the service of Brahmajit.
Ḍiriyā, Ūdal's henchman. He was groom of the horse Bendulā.
Rāmāpati of Gwalior, one of Prithīrāj's commanders.
Ranjit, another son of Parmāl.
Alkhā, another son of Bachhrāj.
Kariliyā, the name of Ālhā's horse, Bendulā or Benduliyā, Ūdal's horse } These were magic horses and could fly.
Siṅghin, Miyān Tālhan's horse.
Manōrath, Jaichand's horse.

Of the above Miyān (or Mīrā) Tālhan is the most important figure. He was a Musalmān of Benares, who took service under Parmāl. He and Dasṛāj (Ālhā and Ūdal's father) were intimate friends, and had exchanged turbans. After the latter's death he attached himself to Ālhā and Ūdal, and followed their fortunes to Kanauj. Ālhā looked upon him as his father, and he appears throughout as the Nestor of the story. He was killed in the final struggle at Uraī and was buried at Mahōbā, where his tomb near the Kīrat Sāgar is still shown. He rode a horse called 'the lioness' (Siṅghin) and had nine sons and eighteen grandsons.

Parmāl gave Ālhā the district of Kālinjar, to the south-east of Mahōbā (in the present district of Banda) as his fief. To Malkhā he gave the fief of Sirsā.[1] We pass over the many and glorious exploits of Ālhā, Ūdal, and Malkhā in their early years and hasten to the final catastrophe. Māhil, Parmāl's brother-in-law and evil counsellor, saw that there was no hope of compassing the latter's ruin so long as he was protected by these valiant champions. He persuaded Parmāl to demand from Ālhā his famous mare, Kariliyā, and, on the request being refused, so far to forget their services as to expel the brothers ignominiously from his territory. With their mother and families, and accompanied by Tālhan of Benares, they repaired to Kanauj, where Jaichand received them, but, being himself in dread of Ālhā, despatched him on an expedition against the rebellious chiefs of Gānjar (traditionally identified with Gujerat), who had hitherto successfully defied all the forces sent against them. Accompanied by Lākhan, the nephew of Jaichand, Ālhā and Ūdal successfully accomplished their task, and were received into great favour, Ālhā having the fief of Rāykōṭ (near Kanauj) assigned to him.

[1] Sirsā is in the present Gwalior State, on the river Pating, not far from Amāhā. See Gwalior Gazetteer (1908), Vol. I, p. 194.

In the meantime a quarrel had arisen between Prithīrāj Chauhān of Delhi and Parmāl regarding some troops of the former who had been cut up while passing through the latter's territory. Māhil diligently fanned the flame, and persuaded Prithīrāj to bide his time for vengeance. After the lapse of eight years Māhil contrived in his capacity as minister to send Parmāl's army to the south, and then sent word to Prithīrāj that the way was now open to Mahōbā. Prithīrāj at once advanced and attacked Sirsā, where Malkhā was governor. The latter sent pressing appeals for help to Parmāl, who, under the traitorous persuasion of Māhil, replied that it was Malkhā's business to drive out Prithīrāj. Deeply hurt at this supercilious reply, Malkhā nevertheless made a brave resistance, but was in the end overwhelmed by superior numbers, and himself met a glorious death in the midst of his foes.

Parmāl, now seriously alarmed for the safety of his kingdom, called a council, and on the advice of Malnā, his queen, demanded a truce from his adversary on the plea of the absence of his champions Ālhā and Ūdal. Prithīrāj, with Rājpūt chivalry, granted the request, on condition that, at the end of a year, during which each party was to prepare for the final battle, it should be fought on open ground, which should give no advantage to either party, and the vast plain round Uraī (in the present district of Jalaun) was fixed upon as the deciding scene of the contest.

Parmāl then despatched his bard Jagnāik to Kanauj to recall Ālhā and Ūdal. On the way Jagnāik halted at Kurhaṭ on the bank of the Jamna, where the local Rājā, Rāybhān, hospitably entertained him, but in the morning refused to return to his guest the splendid armour with which his horse was decked. Jagnāik accordingly went on to Kanauj vowing vengeance against Rāybhān.

He was cordially received by Ālhā who, however, refused to assist Parmāl till his mother Diwalā pressed upon him his duty as a Rājpūt. 'Let us fly to Mahōbā,' exclaimed Diwalā.[1] But Ālhā was silent, while Ūdal said aloud, 'May evil spirits seize Mahōbā! Can we forget the day when, in distress, he drove us forth. Return to Mahōbā—let it stand or fall, it is the same to me; Kanauj is henceforth my home.'

'Would that the Gods had made me barren,' said Diwalā, 'that I had never borne sons, who thus abandon the paths of the Rājpūts, and refuse to succour their prince in danger!' Her heart bursting with grief, and her eyes raised to heaven, she continued; 'Was it for this, O Universal Lord, thou mad'st me feel a mother's pangs for these destroyers of Banāphar's fame? Unworthy offspring! the heart of the true Rājpūt dances with joy at the mere name of strife—but ye, degenerate, cannot be the sons of Dasrāj—some carl must have stolen to my embrace, and from such ye must be sprung.' The young chiefs arose, their faces withered in sadness. 'When we perish in defence of Mahōbā, and, covered with wounds, perform deeds that will leave a deathless name; when our heads roll in the field—when we embrace the valiant in fight, and, treading in the footsteps of the brave, make resplendent the blood of both lines, even in the presence of the heroes of the Chauhān, then will our mother rejoice.'

[1] This extract from the poem is taken from Tod.

At length roused to indignation Ālhā rushed impetuously to Jaichand, and demanded leave to depart. This was at first refused, but ultimately granted after an angry scene; and the king of Kanauj not only gave the required permission, but sent a powerful army, headed by his own sons Rāypāl and Gulālan, and his nephew Lākhan, with Ālhā to assist the Chandēl against the Chauhān of Delhi.

The army marched. On the way they passed Kurhaṭ where Jagnāik demanded vengeance for his stolen horse-armour. A battle ensued in which Rāybhān was defeated and compelled to restore his booty. In admiration of the Banāphars' valour, he, too, joined the advancing host. As the troops went on, the worst omens appeared on all sides. The countenance of Lākhan fell; these portents filled his soul with dismay; but Ālhā said, 'though these omens bode death, yet death to the valiant, to the pure in faith, is an object of desire, not of sorrow. The path of the Rājpūt is beset with difficulties, rugged, and filled with thorns; but he regards it not, so it but conducts to battle.' To carry joy to Parmāl alone occupied their thoughts; the steeds bounded over the plain like the swift-footed deer.

On the way, in spite of the truce, they were suddenly and unexpectedly attacked at a river crossing by the Chauhān army, led by Chauṛā. All but Lākhan fled. He made a gallant stand with his handful of troops, but was nearly overpowered. Diwalā, after vainly trying to stop Ālhā and Ūdal in their flight, ordered her dooly to be set down, and getting out desired Ūdal to enter it and give her his sword and shield; for though he fled, she disdained to fly. Her reproaches, as contained in Chand's verses, form one of the most famous passages in the whole cycle. They will be found in verses 98 and following of the first of the following extracts. Stung by her reproaches Ālhā and Ūdal returned and repulsed Chauṛā.

The brothers, ere they reached Mahōbā, halted to put on the saffron robe, the sign of 'no quarter' to the Rājpūt warrior. The intelligence of their approach filled the Chandēl prince with joy, who advanced to embrace his defenders, and conduct them into the city; while the queen Mālnā came to greet Diwalā, who with the herald bard paid homage and returned with the queen into the palace.

On the arrival of the brothers in the citadel, a council of war was held. Parmāl, always a coward,[1] at first resolved to abandon Mahōbā, but, urged by the Banāphars and their mother, he at length consented to march his host towards Uraī. In the preliminary fights, which lasted several days, the boy Brahmajit Varmā, his son, died gallantly fighting against superior numbers, and Chauṛā hastened to convey the news to Delhi, where the youthful hero's wedded, but yet unmated, bride Bēlā was still dwelling in the citadel of her father Prithīrāj. Overjoyed at the terrible blow with which his foe was smitten the Chauhān ordered his commander to complete the victory by carrying off from Mahōbā Parmāl's queen, the lovely Padminī or Malnā, and conveying her to the royal seraglio at Delhi; but Chauṛā himself had a fair young wife, and stayed to dally with her, while he despatched his lieutenant, Rāmāpati of Gwalior, to carry out his lord's behest. The widowed Bēlā, true to the fortunes of the house into which she had been married, sent private word of this design to Ūdal, who intercepted Rāmāpati at Kālpi and there, after a fierce conflict, slew him.

[1] This is his legendary character, but it is not borne out by history.

At length the fatal day arrived, and the camps of the two kings stood face to face on the plain of Uraī. Parmāl, on seeing the enemy's preparations, feared, like the poltroon he was, for his own safety. He determined to abandon his army, and, notwithstanding all Ālhā's and the other chief's entreaties to remain and animate his troops, he not only refused to stay, but insisted on Ālhā himself escorting him to Kālinjar. Before Ālhā could return to command his forces, the battle had been fought, and Parmāl's troops had been annihilated. Ālhā's son Indal, Ūdal, and the faithful Tālhan had all been slain. Seeing this, furious with rage, Ālhā drew his magic sword to destroy Prithīrāj's army; but his arm was arrested by the goddess Dēvī Śāradā,[1] and at her entreaty he consented to sheathe his sword, if Prithīrāj would turn and fly seven paces. Prithīrāj did so, and, satisfied by this concession to his invincibleness, Ālhā disappeared from mortal view, and now dwells in that mysterious land of darkness, the Kajrī-ban, which is so famed in all the legends of the east. On the last day of each moon he visits Dēvī Śāradā's temple on the hill at Mahiyār and adorns her image with fresh flowers. He has repeatedly been seen, but, each time at a stern command to desist from following him, no one has ever ventured to advance, and he has disappeared.

After the defeat at Uraī, according to the legend,[2] Parmāl fled to Gayā, where he died.

So ends this tale of Rājpūt chivalry. If I have drawn sufficient attention to it to induce some resident in Bundelkhand to collect its scattered remnants from the only books in which it is preserved,—the mouths of the bardic reciters,—I shall be amply satisfied. It is a noble story, replete with incident, and with characters well contrasted. It appeals far more closely to English sympathies than do the comparatively artificial epics of Sanskrit literature.

Of the following two extracts, the first (marked Specimen III) is a fragment. It describes the summons of Ālhā and Ūdal from Kanauj to Mahōbā, the march from Kanauj and the fight with the Chauhān forces on the way. It breaks off abruptly in the middle of the combat. The second (marked Specimen IV) commences in Delhi, where Chauṛā brings the news of the death of Brahmajit at Uraī. It then describes Rāmāpati's mission to abduct Malnā, and how he was defeated on the way by Ūdal, who had been forewarned by Bēlā.

---

[1] Now worshipped at Mahiyār on the Tons.

[2] But not according to history. Most of the foregoing narrative is based on Tōd, with additions from the seventh volume of the reports of the Archæological Survey of India.

[No. 18.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ (BANĀPHARĪ) DIALECT. (DISTRICT, HAMIRPUR.)

SPECIMEN III.

प्रश्न जयचंद का।

की कुछ गिर गा जमुना मा की दह मा कगार।
मैं तो से पूछौं लाखन राने काहे मा उठै झनकार॥

उत्तर लाखन का।

ना कुछ गिर गा जमुना मा ना दह मा गिरी कगार।
सूर महोबे का आवत है जेह के लोहे उठै झनकार॥

जयचंद ने कहा।

जँघिया डुलैं औ धर काँपै हिलैं बत्तीसौ दाँत। ५।
गरभै आय जाय जो महुबे का कनउज देइ मोर उजार॥

लाखन ने कहा।

ऐसी न कहिये महराजा झूँठी ना मोहीं सुहाय।
जैसे थापे है चन्देलै पहिले तोही थापे समान॥

जयचंद के दरबार की तारीफ़।

गज-कोस लौ जाजम पर गईं तकिया कोई डेढ़ हजार।
पलथी से पलथी जहाँ अरझी तौ भालन भुँइं हरियाय। १०। किररा माचो तो लोहे का अरझो तो खेरो सार। कुरी निवारा जहाँ बैठे ते रजपूत टिकौना लाग॥
खाये अफीमन के सनका ते बिन मारे न बदलैं बात।
देवी भगवती धरी पलथी पै जैसे ल्वाटै कालिया नाग॥

आल्हा का हरकारा जयचंद के पास गया।

गिरो साँड़िया जाय दरबार मा राजा सुन बात हमार। १५।
सूर महोबे का आवत है राजा खबरदार हुइ जाँव॥

जयचंद के दरबार में आल्हा का पहुँचना।

आवत देखो आल्हा का सभा उठी भहराय। भइँ सलामैं गन डीलन औ बड़े भये सरमान।
दहिनी बाजू आल्हा का खाली कर दी तंबू माँझ॥

जयचंद ने आल्हा से कहा।

एक जुहारैं तोरी सकरहियाँ एक तौ साँझी बार। २०।
कौन साँकरो तोही पर गौ जो तैं आवै दुपहरी माँझ॥

आल्हा ने जयचंद को जवाब दिया।

एक जुहारैं मोरी सकरैयाँ एक तौ साँझी बार।
आये मनौवा हैं महुबे से सो राजा तोह को करौं सलाम॥

जयचंद ने कहा।

टूटी घुड़ा-घर से तैं आवै घोड़ा तैं चलोय मताय।
जब मैं चाहौं तोही जूझैं का सौंरोय नगर महोब। २५।
हँस कै राजा बोलन लागो आल्हा सुन बात हमार।
एक एक गोहूँ के दुइ दुइ लैहौं घी के काटौं चौगुने दाम। दूध के मोलन पानी कटिहौं आल्हा सुन बात हमार।
खाय मतानोय तैं गाँजर मा मोहरा मा दैहौं झुकाय।
मार निकारो तोही चंदेले ने घर डोम के छोलन डार। ३०।
याद बिसर गै तोही वा दिन के जब आवै दुपहरी माँझ॥

ऊदल ने जयचंद को जवाब दिया।

हँस कै ऊदल बोलन लागो राजा सुन बात हमार।
को है निकरैया मोही दुनिया मा केह के मुँह मा दाँत।
जेह के कारन मैं भागो तोंय सो गाँजर मा दीन्ह गँवाँय।
बाप न पाई तोरे गढ़ गाँजर बंगाला दीन्होंय दिवाय। ३५।
बेरी मारिंव तोरी छेरी अस कान धरे मिमियाय।
मारोंय बिजहटा दिन दुपहर बंगाले आगी लगाय।
नौ दा भगाय दी जे ने लाखन का बाप मारो कनौजो क्यार।
तौन दिवाय दी तोही राजा मैं सुख सोवो कनौजा माँझ।
बारा बजारैं तोरी लुटवाय लइँ सब हाथी डाखौं बढ़वाय। ४०।
ऐसा दु-बहियाँ तैं राजा तोय मोहीं तुरतैं देतोय लौंटाय॥

जयचंद ने ऊदल से फिर कहा।

हँसी मसकरी बेटा तो से कीन्ही औ तैं तौ गवे खसियाय ॥

ऊदल ने जयचंद को जवाब दिया।

हँस कै ऊदल बोलन लागो राजा सुन बात हमार।
हँसी मसकरी कर बिसुवन से जे दीन्ह तुम्हारो खाँय।
हँसी मसकरी हम से का कीन्ही दाँतन से लोह चबाँय ॥ ४५ ॥

राजा जयचंद ने गुस्सा होकर कहा।

कतिकी नहाँय गवैं मैं कालिंजर लौटत दा मारो महोब।
तबै मनसवा कहाँ ऊदल तोय जब मैं लूटे ते बारा बजार ॥

आल्हा ने राजा को जवाब दिया।

ठीकौं अँधाँय गवे तैं कतिकी लौटत दा मारो महोब।
खेलत शिकारैं तोंय रमना मा खबरैं दीन्हौं डाँक-बरदार। जब मैं आवैं महुबे का तब छूटा घली तलवार। ५०।
जब तैं भागोय खेतन से तब मैं ने ईंचो मनोरथ घार।
ना पत आवे जो राजा तोही ता मैं अबै मँगाय लेंव घार ॥

राजा जयचंद आल्हा से बोला।

तुम तौ जैयो महुबे को मुँह-माँगे देंव तुम्हैं आज ॥

आल्हा ने राजा से यह माँगा।

माया तुम्हारी राजा चाहौं ना चाहौं ना अर्थ भँडार।
लाखन राना मोह का मिलै जो नदिया में करै सहाय ॥ ५५ ॥

राजा ने आल्हा का इसकंदर मदद दी।

लाख बछेरे से दीन्ह लाखन सवा लाख रायपाल।
बेटा गुलालन को जब दीन्हो तब घोड़ा दीन्ह बावन हजार ॥

आल्हा ने राजा से इजाजत लेकर महोबे का कूच किया।

कीन्हौं सलामैं आल्हा ने जब फौजैं करौं तयार। कूच कराय दवो कन्नौज से फौजैं चलीं गाँयगुँवार ॥

आल्हा ने कुरहट में मकाम किया और जगनायक ने जीन की बाबत अर्ज किया।

डेरा पर गये जाय कुरहट मा जगनायक जोरे हाथ। ६०।
पाखर ऐंच लई मेरे घोड़े को सो मँगवाय दे बनापर आल्ह ॥

आल्हा की चिट्ठी जो कुरहट के राजा को लिखी।

लिखे परवाना तब आल्हा ने कलम-दान ले हाथ।
राम रमौवल सबही का राजा का बड़ी सलाम।
जैसे नतद्दत तुम लाखन के वैसे आहू हमार।
पाखर भेज देव घोड़े की तौ काहे का माचै रार ॥ ६५ ॥

जवाब कुरहट के राजा का।

तोही चुनौटी तोरे दादे का चंदेल का बड़ी तलाक।
पाखर न दैहौं घोड़े की चाहै दिन रात चलै तलवार ॥

ऊदल ने फिर राजा को चिट्ठी लिखी।

राम रमौवल सबही का राजा का बड़ी परनाम। पाखर दै देव घोड़े की या पाखर चंदेले केर। ऐसी पाखर ना काहू के साढ़े तीन लाख का मोल। ७०।
जलदी पाखर जो भेजौ ना तौ कढ़ि आओ मलै मैदान ॥

राजा लड़ने को तय्यार हुआ

बजे नगाड़ा राजा के डंकन में परी धुकार।
तोपैं जुताईं आगे का पीछे सिंदुरिया बान।
जितनी फौजैं राजा की कढ़ि गौ मले मैदान।
परी लड़ाई ऊदल से खूब घलो हथियार। ७५।
ज्वान हजारौं गिर गे घोड़ा गिरे असरार।
हाथी गिर गये खेतन मा बही खून की धार।

राजा भागा और ऊदल ने बाँध कर आल्हा के आगे खड़ा किया।

राजा भागो खेतन से ऊदल मुसुक लीन्ह बँधवाय। जब लै पहुँचे राजा का आल्हा केरे पास।
जोरी हथुलियाँ आल्हा से बेटा चलौं तुम्हारे साथ ॥ ८० ॥

कूच होना लश्कर का बेचवती नदी को।

कूच कराय दओ कुरहट से नही को परे सौंहाय।
कुछ दिन रँगे गैलन में नदी बेतवैं में पहुँचे जाय ॥

पृथोराज और आल्हा की लड़ाई नदी में।

खबरैं पाईं पृथोराज ने बाँधे बयालिस घाट।
परी लड़ाई पृथोराज से अला-धुंध चली तरवार॥
ज्वान हजारों गिर गे घोड़ा गिरे असरार। ८५।
हाथी गिर गये खेतन मा बही खून की धार।
बेटा जूझो मियाँ ताल्हन का जहाँ खूब चली तरवार॥

ऊदल ने पृथीराज के लड़के को मार कर ताल्हन के लड़के का इन्तिकाम लिया।

खबरैं पाईं ऊदल ने औ घोड़ा दओ उड़ाय।
जाय कै पहुँचो वा मुर्चा मा बदला लै लौ सय्यद क्यार। बेटा मारो पृथीराज का सब सूरन का सरदार। ९०।
कोन्हीं दावैं पृथीराज ने तब खूब चलो हथियार।

आल्हा की फौजों का भागना और लाखन की लड़ाई।

फौजैं बिचल गईं आल्हा की भगे सब सरदार।
फौजैं रोक लईं लाखन ने खूब चलो हथियार।
राना जूझो सात सौ करी दाब चौहान।
चौड़े पकरत कट गये चौदा सौ चौहान॥ ९५॥

आल्हा को जोरू ने ऊदल को ललकारा।

भागो फौजैं आल्हा की तब रानी मांछिल ने देखो आन।
तब फिर नोका आय ऊदल को देवर भगे कहाँ तुम जाव॥

चन्द्र कवि का बनाया हुआ कवित्त खास पुरानी हिन्दी भाषा में जो मछला ने ऊदल से कहा था।

मोहीं दे कमर-कटार ढाल तरवार कि बच्छो।
कच्छो के असवार जात लाखन में अच्छो॥ मरबे को डर करो बेख तिरियन को धरो। १००।
नैनन कज्जल देव माँग मोतिन से भरो॥
फिर फिर लड़ो देवर उदयराज नहीं अगऊँ संभर कटक॥
कटक गाँजर का बीर पायक ललकारै। कुरहट का रायभान घाव हाथिन से मारै॥ बच्छराज गुजरात गिद्ध गिद्धनी चराईं। १०५।
दमहर बागँ तोर रुधिर की नदी बहाईं॥
जगनिक आल्ह से यों कहै कि तेरे कुल भग्गिव कौन॥

जगनायक के कहने से आल्हा लड़ने को फिर लौटा।

सुन जगनिक के बोल गोल से कढ़ो बनापर ।
ज्यों काली कढ़त सेत से उठत फना फन । चली भीर सौंहाय जहाँ तो लाखन रानो । ११० ।
आवत देखो उइल को चौड़ा उलझारी मलखे की ढाल ॥

[No. 18.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ (BANĀPHARĪ) DIALECT. (DISTRICT, HAMIRPUR.)

SPECIMEN III.

TRANSLATION.

Jaichand.—What, has aught fallen into the Jamnā or has the high bank fallen into the pool? I ask of you, Prince Lākhan,[1] whence comes this clashing sound?

Lākhan.—Nought has fallen into the Jamnā, nor has the high bank fallen into the pool. The champion of Mahōbā is coming, whose weapons clash together.

Jaichand.—(5) My limbs tremble,[2] my body quakes, my thirty-two teeth shake; if he of Mahōbā come in his pride, he will bring my Kanauj to ruin.

Lākhan.—Say not so, Sire, for the false pleases me not; as once he served[3] the Chandēl, even so he serves you.

For the space of a mile[4] floor-clothes are spread; of pillows there were some fifteen hundred; (10) where the people sat cross-legged and touching each other, the javelins covered the earth as blades of grass.[5]

There was the clanging of iron, there weapons of the finest steel[6] clashed together, where the Rājpūts sat clan by clan, reclining on cushions.[7] They were bemused from the opium they had eaten, men who without blows would not change their purpose.[8] Each man with his sacred sword upon his thigh, like a black snake coiled.[9]

(15) The camel-courier alighted in the court and said, 'Rājā, hear my words;[10] the Hero of Mahōbā is coming; Rājā beware!' On seeing Ālhā approach, the assembly rose trembling.[11] Every man made obeisance; great respect was shown,[12] and on the right side in the middle of the tent a place was cleared for Ālhā.[13]

---

[1] Lākhan was nephew of Jaichand.

[2] Ḍwālai is for ḍōlai. Here, as elsewhere, wā is substituted for ō.

[3] The root thāp=serve.

[4] A gaū-kōs is an indefinite measure of distance; literally, the distance from which the low of a cow can be heard.

[5] Pal"thī is a method of sitting on the ground. The feet are crossed, with the knees wide apart. Arajhī tī=ul"jhī thī. The earth was green (hariyāy) with darts.

[6] Khērī is a kind of steel manufactured in the town in Oudh of that name. Sār, essence, is commonly used to signify excellence of quality.

[7] Kurī (=kulī)=a clan or subcaste. Nibārā=separate. A ṭikaunā or 'prop' is a pillow for leaning against when sitting cross-legged (pal"thī).

[8] Rājpūts are great opium-eaters. These ballads are full of allusions to the practice and dwell upon it with pride. The root sanak=to be tipsy.

[9] A Rājpūt's sword is looked upon as an incarnation of the Goddess Dēvī, and is frequently called by her name. Here pal"thī means 'thigh' or 'lap.'

[10] Sā̃r"nī or sāṛinī is a female camel.

[11] The root bhaharā=to tremble.

[12] Gan ḍīlan, literally 'counting bodies,' hence 'everyone.' Sar"mān is a corruption of sanmān.

[13] Bājū=arm, hence 'side.'

Jaichand.—(20) It is your wont to make obeisance once in the morning, and once again at evening ;[1] what calamity has befallen you that you come at midday ?[2]

Ālhā.—It is my wont to make obeisance once in the morning, and once again at evening ; now a summons has come from Mahōbā, and therefore, Rājā, I pay you my respects.[3]

Jaichand.—You have come out as an overfed horse breaks from his stable.[4] (25) When I will, I can slay you ; why think you of Mahōbā's town ?[5] Laughing the Rājā spoke,—Ālhā, hear my words. For each grain of wheat I shall take two, and the price of clarified butter I shall exact fourfold. Water shall I appraise at the price of milk.[6] Ālhā, hear my words. You have eaten and waxed furious in Gānjar ; in the forefront of the battle shall I strike you down.[7] (30) The Chandēlā drove you out, while the house sweepers pelted you with sugarcane refuse.[8] Have you lost remembrance of that day, that you come to me at noon ?

Laughing then Ūdal[9] spake,—Rājā, hear my words. Who is he that can drive me out ? Who in the world has teeth in his mouth ?[10] Those for whose sake I had fled were lost in Gānjar ; (35) Your father never gained even Gānjar fort, but I won and gave you Bengal : Bērī too I smote, so that it cried like a goat when held by the ear.[11] I smote Bijahṭā, and at midday I fired Bengal. He who had nine times routed Lākhan, and slain the father of the Kanauj prince,[12] him, O Rājā, I delivered to you ; then you slept at peace in the midst of Kanauj. (40) Twelve bazaars of yours I sacked, and drove from before me all the elephants. Had you been so strong[13] as you say, Rājā, quickly would you have turned me back.

Jaichand.—I but jested with you, my son, and you became vexed.

With a laugh Ūdal replied,—Rājā, hear my words. Jest and smile with your mistresses,[14] that eat from your hand. (45) Why jest and smile with me who can break iron with my teeth ?

Jaichand.—At the full moon of Kārtik I went to bathe at Kālinjar ; whilst returning I smote Mahōbā. Just then, my hero Ūdal, where were you, while it was I that was plundering twelve bazaars ?[15]

Ālhā.—Quite true. You had gone to bathe at the full moon of Kārtik, and whilst returning you smote Mahōbā.[16] I was hunting on the preserves when a courier brought

---

[1] Sakaraiyã̃ = sakālī.

[2] *Sã̃k*ʷ*rō* = saṅkaṭ.

[3] Manauwā, = invitation, summons.

[4] Matāy = intoxicated, hence, fed up, overfed ; ghuṛā-ghar = stable ; ṭūṭī = having broken.

[5] Lit. When I wish to slay you, you are remembering.

[6] These are figurative ways of threatening revenge. Each insult shall be avenged fourfold.

[7] Ālhā conquered Gānjar (said to be the same as Gujarat) for Jaichand. The latter now reproaches him with presuming on his deeds.

[8] Ālhā originally served Parmāl, the Chandēl, of Mahōbā. The latter expelled him at the instigation of Mahilā, and he took refuge with Jaichand.

[9] Ālhā's younger brother.

[10] Ūdal, owing to his fiery nature, was known as Bagh-ūdal, Tiger Ūdal. He challenges the world to a tiger fight of tooth and nail.

[11] Bērī lies in the Doab of the Betwā and the Jamnā, close to their confluence between the Districts of Jalaun and Hamirpur. Bijahṭā is in Hamirpur on the banks of the Betwā.

[12] Dā = time. So lauṭat dā (l. 46) at the time of returning.

[13] Literally, two-armed.

[14] Bisuwā = viśyā.

[15] Mansawā = a hero. Ālhā and Ūdal were at this time in the service of Parmāl of Mahōbā.

[16] Ādhã̃y = anhāy = nahāy.

me word. (50) When I returned to Mahōbā then busily was plied the naked steel. When you fled from the field then I captured the horse Manōrath; if you believe me not, Rājā, I can send now for the horse.

Jaichand.—You may go to Mahōbā. Ask what you will to-day, and I will grant it.

Ālhā.—Your goods, O Rājā, I desire not; nor do I desire store of wealth. (55) Let Prince Lākhan be given to me, that he may aid me at the river.

(The King gives help worthy of Alexander the Great to Ālhā.)

With 100,000 horse he gave Lākhan, with 125,000 Rāy-pāl; and when he gave his son Gulālan, with him he gave 52,000 horse.[1] Ālhā paid his respects; when the army was ready, he ordered the march from Kanauj, and a numberless[2] host went forth.

(60) The camp was pitched in Kurhaṭ; Jagnāik with clasped hands prayed;[3] 'they have robbed my horse's armour; Ālhā Banāphar, have it brought back.' Then Ālhā took in his hand his pen-box and wrote an order. 'All and every I salute; to the Rājā my best respects. As you are Lākhan's relative, even so be mine. (65) Send back the horse's armour; why stir up a quarrel?'

The Answer.—To thee and to thy grandfather defiance; I challenge the Chandēl to do his worst.[4] The horse's armour I will not return, though the fight should last day and night.

Ūdal sends a second letter.—All and each I salute, to the Rājā my best respects. Send back the horse armour, for this armour belongs to the Chandēl. (70) Such armour has no man, three lākhs and a half it is worth. If you do not send the armour quickly, come out and fight in the open.[5]

Then sounded the Rājā's battle drums and the rattle of his drums was heard. In front were yoked the guns, in the rear the rockets. All the forces of the Rājā advanced in the open field. (75) The attack was made on Ūdal: right well they plied the sword. Young men[6] fell in thousands, horses fell without number. Elephants fell in the field, and fine was the stream of gore that flowed. The Rājā fled from the field; Ūdal took him and pinioned him.[7] When they brought the Rājā before Ālhā, (80) he clasped the palms of his hands and begged of Ālhā, 'Son, let me go with you?'

Then they marched from Kurhaṭ, and came opposite the river (Jamnā). For some days they travelled along the roads, and then reached the river Betwā.[8] Prithīrāj heard the news and occupied forty-two landing places. The fight with Prithīrāj began; in blind fury they plied their arms.[9] (85) Young men fell in thousands, horses fell without number. Elephants fell in the field, and fine was the stream of gore that flowed.[10]

---

[1] Rāy-pāl and Gulālan were the elder and younger sons of Jaichand. Lākhan, we have seen, was his nephew.

[2] Gāy-gūwār is said to be an old word meaning 'without number.' Gāy-gowāl, the cowherd, is, however, one of the titles of Ālhā.

[3] Kurhaṭ was on the Kanauj, or northern, side of the Jamnā. When Jagnāik was on his way to Kanauj to summon Alhā he halted here. Its king, Rāy-bhān, entreated him hospitably, but kept the rich armour which adorned his horse.

[4] Chunauṭi and talāk, both mean 'defiance.'

[5] Malē maidān, literally, the plain of heroes (mall), is one of the stock phrases of the cycle for a battlefield.

[6] Here we have one of the stock descriptions of a battle, repeated over and over again in the cycle in identical words. It occurs again ten lines lower down. As'rār means countless = bēshumār.

[7] Musuk bāndh'nā, to tie the elbows behind the back.

[8] The river Betwa, for the greater part of its lower course, forms the boundary between the districts of Hamirpur and Jalaun. Urai, where the final struggle between the Chandēls, aided by Ālhā's forces, and Prithīrāj took place, is the Head-Quarters station of the latter district and is some eight or ten miles from the left bank of the Betwa.

[9] Alā = blind, unconscious, dhundh = mist before the eyes.

[10] See above, verse 76.

Slain was the son of Miyān Tālhan, where the sword was busily plied. Ūdal heard the news; he flew upwards with his horse[1] and so reached the thick of the fight,[2] and exacted vengeance for the Sayyid. (90) He slew the son of Prithīrāj, the leader of all the champions. Prithīrāj pressed hard; then busily were weapons plied. Ālhā's forces turned back, and all the champions fled; then Lākhan stayed their flight, and busily were weapons plied. The Prince slew seven hundred, the Chauhāns pressed hard (95); when Chauṛā sought to seize the prince, fourteen hundred Chauhāns were cut down.[3] Ālhā's force fled. Then the Princess Māchhil saw and came;[4] she mocked at Ūdal and said, 'Brother, whither are you fleeing?'

Māchhil.—Give me the dagger from your belt, your shield and sword or spear; a Cutch horse, pure in breed among a hundred thousand. (100) You fear to die,—then don the garb of women; paint your eyes with black powder and part your hair with pearls. Turn, Brother Uday-rāj,[5] turn and fight, or I must lead and rally the host.

The foremost warrior of Ganjār was cheering on his infantry;[6] Rāy-bhān of Kurhaṭ was dealing blows to the elephants; (105) Bachhrāj was giving Gujarāt to feed the vultures;[7] Dasahar on the banks of the Bāgain set flowing a river of blood;[8] and Jagnāik said to Ālhā, 'Of your house who ever fled?'[9]

On hearing the words of Jagnāik, the Banāphar came forth from the crowd, as the cobra comes forth from her hole with expanded hood.[10] The company moved forward to where Prince Lākhan lay, and, seeing Ūdal approach, Chauṛā brandished Malkhā's shield.[11]

---

[1] The horse had wings, like Ālhā's.

[2] Murcha or morcha, here=a place of contest, an arena. It usually means an entrenchment or picket. Compare specimen IV, verse 115.

[3] Chauṛā or Chaũṛā was the son of Dasrāj by an Ahīr woman, and consequently half-brother of Alhā and Ūdal: on his birth he was exposed in the river like Moses, and was picked up and brought to Prithīrāj Chauhān who reared the child, and when he grew up appointed him to a command in his army. He was hence fighting against his own kith and kin.

[4] Māchhil or Machhlavatī was the daughter of Rāghō Māchh of Hardwār, and the wife of Ālhā. According to another legend it was Diwalā, Alhā's mother, who uttered this remonstrance, the most celebrated passage in the whole cycle. The remaining lines are said to be taken from Chand's poem.

[5] i.e. Ūdal.

[6] The three chiefs of Gānjar, Hīrsingh Dēo, Bīrsingh Dēo, and Pūran Dēo, who had previously been conquered by Ālhā, accompanied him from Kanauj.

[7] Bachhrāj appears to be the uncle of Ālhā and Ūdal, and father of Malkhān who had been killed in fighting Prithīrāj at Sirsā; but according to the usual tradition he had died long before at the hands of Gaj, king of Gujarat.

[8] There is something wrong here. The Bagain is a river in Banda, a long way to the south-east, on the other side of Mahōbā. Dasahar possibly means (the descendants of) Dasrāj, i.e. Alhā and Ūdal.

[9] It was the duty of Jagnāik or Jagnik, the bard, to encourage the heroes in the battlefield.

[10] Sēt=a snake's hole.

[11] Malkhā had already been killed at Sirsā, so that this was a terrible defiance.

[No. 19.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ (BANĀPHARĪ) DIALECT. (DISTRICT, HAMIRPUR.)

SPECIMEN IV.

साखी।

जे सुर सारदा दये कोयल का भौंरा का दीन्ह गूंजार।
वे सुर सारदा मोह का दे नकशा कहौं बनापर क्यार॥

पँवाँरा।

देहली के कुवाँ में।

घन पनघटवा गढ़ सम्हर के सब सखियाँ भरतीं पान।
चीन्हा चीन्हा मोरी सखियो यह असवारी कहाँ कै आय।
कोई सखी चीन्हे अग्गिम की पश्चिम देस डहार। ५।
चौड़ा दुलहिया ती नगनाचन चौड़ा मरद की नारि।
देय जुवाबैं कुवना मा सखी तुम सुनियो बात हमार।
कंधा हमारे आवत हैं एक-दंता मा असवार।
सोने घैलना धर मूँड़े लये कुवना से चली भगाय।
चाल मधुरियन भागी ती जेह के जमीं न छू जाय पाँव। १०।
घरी मह्रत के अंतर मा फाटक तर पहुँची जाय।
ज्वारै गदुलियाँ चौड़ा से चवँर करै दोऊ हाथ।
भेद बताय दे उरई मा कैसी घली तरवार॥

चौड़ा का जवाब।

काह बताऊँ मैं हार मा कुछ मो से कहो ना जाय।
नाहर हुइ गा वर्म्मानन्द सब साँवँत धर धर खाय। १५।
बारा बेटा हन डारे तेरा हने दमाद।
उरई चौसठ के मरवा मा कर डारी देस कै राँड़।
हुकुम तौ दीन्हो बादशाह ने मैं ने मारे वर्म्म चंदेल॥

चौड़ा की जोरू बेला के पास चली।

इतनी बातैं सुनी औरत ने चौकन का चली भगाय।
ऊँच नागवर ती बेला की चढ़ गै ती लात लगाय ॥ २० ॥
सोवै कन्या बादशाह की चद्दर पकरी जाय।

चौड़ा की जोरू बेला से बोली।

सुरंग चुनरिया तुम छोर डारी कर चुरियाँ चटकाय।
कंथ जूझ गा उरई मा ननदी आवो रँड़ापाँ त्वार ॥

बेला बोली।

धर दुदकारो महलन मा कम-जातिन सुन बात हमार।
कन्य हमारे बारे हैं खेलत हूहैं सखन के साथ ॥ २५ ॥

चौड़ा की जोरू बोली।

लरका भरोसे तैं भूली हा ननदी सुन बात हमार।
बारा बीरन जिन हन मारे तेरा मार दमाद।
उरई चौसठ के मरवा मा कर डारी देस कै राँड़।
मोर न मानस जाय पूँछी ले आये हैं बीरन तुम्हार।
लागी कचहरी चौड़ा की अड़जंगी लगो दरबार ॥ ३० ॥

बेला बोली।

नगर महोबा मैं देखो ना देखो ना किरतुवा ताल।
रानी पद्मिनी का देखौंय ना पूज्यौं ना मनियाँ देव।
एड़ी महावर छूटो ना लागो ना चुनरिया दाग।
तोही न चहिये चौड़ामन कर डारी निरासिन राँड।
ले ले सरापैं चौड़ामन बर कै खाक हुइ जास ॥ ३५ ॥

चौड़ा बोला।

दीन्हौं जुवाबैं तब चौड़ा ने बेला सुन बात हमार।
कुसगुन ब्वालति हा ग्वाँड़ा मा कुछ मो से कहो न जाय।
फते गुसैयाँ ने मोरी कीन्ही तोही बुरा लाग कस आज।
स्याही सुपेती का मैं मालिक संभर मा हौसा तिहाव।
हुकुम दीन्ह है पृथीराज ने धर ल्याऊँ पद्मिनी नारि ॥ ४० ॥

[No. 19.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ (BANĀPHARĪ) DIALECT. (DISTRICT, HAMIRPUR.)

SPECIMEN IV.

साखी।

जे सुर सारदा दये कोयल का भौंरा का दीन्ह गूंजार।
वे सुर सारदा मोह का दे नकशा कहौं बनापर क्यार॥

पँवाँरा।

देहली के कुवाँ में।

घन पनघटवा गढ़ सम्हर के सब सखियाँ भरतीं पान।
चीन्हा चीन्हा मोरी सखियो यह असवारी कहाँ कै आय।
कोई सखी चीन्हे अग्गिम की पश्चिम देस डहार। ५।
चौड़ा दुलहिया ती नगनाचन चौड़ा मरद की नारि।
देय जुवाबैं कुवना मा सखी तुम सुनियो बात हमार।
कंथा हमारे आवत हैं एक-दंता मा असवार।
सोने घैलना धर मूँड़े लये कुवना से चली भगाय।
चाल मधुरियन भागी ती जेह के जमीं न छू जाय पाँव। १०।
घरी मह्रत के अंतर मा फाटक तर पहुँची जाय।
ज्वारै गदुलियाँ चौड़ा से चवँर करै दोऊ हाथ।
भेद बताय दे उरई मा कैसी घली तरवार॥

चौड़ा का जवाब।

काह बताऊँ मैं द्वार मा कुछ मो से कहो ना जाय।
नाहर हुइ गा वर्म्मानन्द सब साँवँत धर धर खाय। १५।
बारा बेटा हन डारे तेरा हने दमाद।
उरई चौसठ के मरवा मा कर डारी देस कै राँड़।
हुकुम तौ दीन्हो बादशाह ने मैं ने मारे वर्म्म चंदेल॥

चौड़ा की जोरू बेला के पास चली।

इतनी बातैं सुनी औरत ने चौकन का चली भगाय।
ऊँच नागवर ती बेला की चढ़ गै ती लात लगाय ॥ २० ॥
सोवै कन्या बादशाह की चद्दर पकरी जाय।

चौड़ा की जोरू बेला से बोली।

सुरंग चुनरिया तुम छोर डारी कर चुरियाँ चटकाय।
कंथ जूझ गा उरई मा ननदी आवो रँड़ापाँ त्वार ॥

बेला बोली।

धर दुदकारो महलन मा कम-जातिन सुन बात हमार।
कन्य हमारे बारे हैं खेलत हूहैं सखन के साथ ॥ २५ ॥

चौड़ा की जोरू बोली।

लरका भरोसे तैं भूली हा ननदी सुन बात हमार।
बारा बीरन जिन हन मारे तेरा मार दमाद।
उरई चौसठ के मरवा मा कर डारी देस कै राँड़।
मोर न मानस जाय पूँछी ले आये हैं बीरन तुम्हार।
लागी कचहरी चौड़ा की अड़जंगी लगो दरबार ॥ ३० ॥

बेला बोली।

नगर महोबा मैं देखो ना देखो ना किरतुवा ताल।
रानी पद्मिनी का देखोंय ना पूज्यौं ना मनियाँ देव।
एड़ी महावर छूटो ना लागो ना चुनरिया दाग।
तोही न चहिये चौड़ामन कर डारी निरासिन राँड।
लै ले सरापैं चौड़ामन बर कै खाक हुइ जास ॥ ३५ ॥

चौड़ा बोला।

दीन्हौं जुवाबैं तब चौड़ा ने बेला सुन बात हमार।
कुसगुन ब्वालति हा ग्वाँड़ा मा कुछ मो से कहो न जाय।
फते गुसैयाँ ने मोरी कीन्ही तोही बुरा लाग कस आज।
स्याही सुपेती का मैं मालिक संभर मा हौसा तिहाव।
हुकुम दीन्ह है पृथीराज ने धर ल्याऊँ पद्मिनी नारि ॥ ४० ॥

बेला बोली।

दीन्हौं जुवाबैं तब बेला ने चौड़ा सुन बात हमार।
एक लरकवा के मारे तैं ब्वालस बढ़ बढ़ बोल।
सास हमारी का धर पैहै जब डिल्ली दिया नष्ट ह्वो जाय॥

चौड़ा बोला।

दीन्हौं जुवाबैं तब चौड़ा ने बेला सुन बात हमार।
हुकुम तौ दीन्हो या ने रामा का काका सुन बात हमार। ४५।
जूझो ब्रह्मा है उरई मा सेवा करै बनापर आल्ह। म्याहर राजा है महुबे का धर ल्याव पद्मिनी नारि। यहै पिथौरा जानै ना जानै ना सती बल्लार।
घाट कालपी मे निकरी जा धर ल्याव पद्मिनी नारि॥

बेला बोली।

हँस कै बेला बोलन लागी काका सुन बात हमार। ५०।
नाहर पाले हैं परमाल ने राखै भुइँ-धरा माँझ।
अँगुरी उठाय देय परमाल तौ डारैं जान से मार॥

चौड़ा ने रामापति से कहा।

अच्छे अच्छे घोड़ा लै ले औ लै ले नीक सवार।
आधी रात के अमला मा निकर जा पल्ले पार॥

बेला ने चेरी से कहा।

इतनी बातैं सुनी बेला ने दीन्ह गुरू ललकार। ५५।
बाँदी बाँदी कहि गुहिरावे बाँदी सुन बात हमार।
जैयैं जैयैं महलन का बसता मोरो ल्याव उठाय। कलम दवाइत हाथे लई कागद लओ उठाय।
राम रमौवल सब सौंतन का ऊदल का लिखै परनाम।
घोड़ा बिंदुलिया की बुड्ढा भा की मर गा रजा परमाल। ६०।
मैं तो से पूछौं रे ऊदल तैं सुन ले बात हमार। तोरे नाहर के जीते जी महुबे होय हँसौवा ल्वार।
घाट कालपी मे आवत है रामापति ग्वालियर क्वार।
बाँचै न रामा रे घाटे मा चाहै सात धरै औतार॥

बेला ने हरकारे से कहा।

तब हरकारे को बुलवावै भारी बेल कुमारि । ६५ ।
काट जँगीरै देंव जलमौ भर अमलोकर देस डहार ।
यहँ तौ चौड़ा जानै ना ना जानै रामापति ग्वालियर क्यार।
खबर जनाय दे तैं ऊदल का रामा आवत है ग्वालियर क्यार ॥
ठाँक जहाज धरै सँड़िनी पर तुरत भवो असवार । याड़ा लगावै सँड़िनी के वैहर साथ उड़ाय । ७० ।
रातिन दौरै औ दिन धावै बीचौं ना करै मुकाम । कछू दिना केरे अंतर मा जाय उरईं मा गरद उड़ान ॥
लंबी सिराचन का तँबुवा लगो चँदवा आसमान मड़राय ।
घिरी दावनी तौ दक्खिन कै जहाँ चौ-मुक्ख की झालर लाम ।
गऊ कोस लौ जाजम पर गै गदिया कोऊ डेढ़ हजार । ७५ ।
पलथी से पलथी जहाँ अरझी तौ ढालन भुँइँ हरियाय ।
झार करचुली औ कछवाहे सेंगर धार पँवार । कुरी निबारा जहाँ बैठे ते रजपूत टिकौना लाग । खाये अफीमन के सनका रहैं बिन मारे न बदलैं बात ।
देवी भगवती धरी पलथी पै जैसे लाटै कालिया नाग ॥ ८० ॥
गिरो साँड़िया जाय बेला का तम्बू के मले मैदान ।
कूद साँड़िया से नीचे गिरो चरपेट ढाल तरवार ।
कीन्हौं सलामैं जाय गदिया का परवाना दीन्ह थमाय । खुलफे कागद जब टारत तो नजरत तो करिया आँक ।
बर कै ऊदल कुदुला हुइ गा गदिया मा काल-रूप हुइ जाय ॥ ८५ ॥
डिरिया डिरिया कहि ललकारै डिरिया सुन बात हमार ।
झपट पुकारा तुम आल्हा का जलदी द्या खबर जनाय ॥
चलियैं चलियैं तुम बजरंगी तुम्हैं बुलवावै लहुरवा भाय ॥
तुरतै नेगो तो बजरंगी तँबुवा का परो टुराय ।
घरी मछरत छिन बीती ना तंबू मा जुमुक गा जाय ॥ ९० ॥

जाय ललकारो तो ऊदल का ऊदल सुन बात हमार ।
डाँड़े डँड़ैया की तोही खटको या तोही दाब कीन्ह चौहान ।
मैं तो से पूँछौं ऊदल काहे बुलवावो दुपहरी माँझ ॥
घाट बिचारी चौड़ा ने रामा का कीन्ह तय्यार ।
घाट जालवन मे आवत है पकरैं का पद्मिनी नारि ॥ ९५ ॥

दीन्हौं जुवाबैं तब आल्हा ने ऊदल सुन बात हमार ।
अच्छे अच्छे तैं घोड़ा ले औ छड़े छड़े असवार । बाँचै न रामा गलियन मा सिर काटौ मूँड़ लुटाय ॥
जेही जेही माँगौं तंबू मा मुँह-माँगे दे मोही ज्वान ॥
दीन्हौं जुवाबैं तब आल्हा ने ऊदल सुन बात हमार । १०० ।

जो तैं माँगस तंबू मा तोरे बोल करौं परवान ॥
सीहा सिरौंजा का मोह का दे कनउज का लाखन रान ।
अली अलावर औ काले खाँ जड़ी बेग सुलतान ।
बेटा बहुबली सय्यद का जेह का घरियक आल्ह डराय । मन मन आटा जे खाते ते सरमुच बुकरा खाँय । १०५ ।

धरैं कल्यावा जेह पतरी मा वह पतरी घुन हुइ जाय ।
अहिर मतौवा दे बर्म्हा का इतने सब कर दे तय्यार ।
द्वारबौं हकीकत मैं रामा कै बाँची ना ग्वालियर क्वार ॥
हुकुम तौ दीन्हौं तो आल्हा ने ऊदल सुन बात हमार ।
जो जो माँगे तैं तँबुवा मा मैं सब बोल कीन्ह परवान । ११० ।

भाई सिरसवा का छोंड़े जा मियाँ ताल्हन बनारस क्वार ।
जैयैं जैयैं तुम बेटा ऊदल बाँचै ना ग्वालियर क्वार ॥ पर गे धावा एकै दा गैलन मा परे टुराय । कछू दिनन केरे अंतर मा नद्दी मा जुमुक गे आय ।
बाँध मोरचा खये ऊदल ने नदिया के मले मैदान । ११५ ।

आठ बजे केरे अमला मा रामापति पहुँचो आय ॥
जब ललकारो तो ऊदल ने मोरी सुन ले ज्वान तैं बात ।

कौने दिसंतर तोरे जलमौ भे कहाँ धरे औतार
मैं तो से पूँछौं अरे अलबेले तैं कौन देस कै जास ॥
छल तौ कीन्हो तो रामा ने बात कही बनावट केर । १२० ।

पच्छिम दिसा मा मोरे जलमौ भे हुइँ धरे औतार ।
आहूँ सौदागर मैं घोड़ेन का घोड़न का बेचैं जाँव ।
सुनो विक्करो मैं घोड़न को घोड़ा महुबे बेचन जाँव ॥
तब ललकारो ऊदल ने सौदागर सुन बात हमार ।
होत भुरहरे औ पहु-फाटत जब रथ निकरै सुरजन क्यार । १२५ ।

रस्ता कर देंव मैं गैलन मा फिर चले जैयो नगर महोब ॥
बातन रोसन हुइ बतरस गै बातन से बढ़ चली रार । भल समझावो ऊदल ने मानै ना ग्वालियर क्यार । चीन्हा-जानी भै दोनौं कै नदिया के मले मैदान ॥
हँस कै ऊदल बोलन लागो काका सुन बात हमार । १३० ।

एक लरकवा के मारे से ऐसी दगा बिचारा आन ॥
हँस कै रामा बोलन लागो ऊदल सुन बात हमार ।
कोटिन कैहै मैं मनिहौं ना धर ल्याऊँ पद्मिनी नारि ॥

इतनी बात सुनी ऊदल ने गादी डारी चबाय ।
तोही चुनौटी स्वामीसुर का जिनके आँय पिथौरा राय । १३५ ।

पूरब पच्छिम उत्तर दक्खिन हन डारे चारै द्यास ।
पूरब पच्छिम उत्तर दक्खिन टापू बाज बेंदुला केर ।
जगन्नाथ घुरमुहाँ लौ मारौंय मेला कीन्ह बटेसुर क्यार ।
सेतुबन्ध रामेसुर मारौंय लंका लग कीन्हौंय डाँड़ । धार नरबदा की बँधवाई जो उलट पछाहैं जाय । १४० ।

तेह की जलनी का अस ब्यालै तौ मोही जीवे को धिरकार ॥

बातन रोसन जादा भै बातन से बढ़ गै रार ।
कढ़ी भगवती नदिया मा औ रन उदूर धली तरवार । मारैसिरोहिन के बोजा परै तरवारन गरद उड़ाय ।
कट कट चिंता गिरैं धरती मा गिरैं घोड़न के सुम्मार । १४५ ।

बिन बिन बहियन के असवरवा बिन थुभरिन के घार ।
बिगिर भसूँड़र के मंगल भे दल होय कराह कराह ।
जे सिर बाँधत ते कुसमहनी लागत ते अतर फुलेल । उँय सिर लोटैं धरती मा मारी फिरैं ढाल तरवार ।
रात की मारन मा दिन निकरो औ दिन के हुइ गै साँझ । १५० ।
तिल तिल धरती धरै रामापति पै ह्याँ धरें छूट जाँय घाट ।
मार के मंगल का निकरि गा मोहरा के मले मैदान ।
सेर के चाकर का को मारै बिढ़वै का जलम के द्वाख ।
मोर बिराई होय महुबे मा कढ़ि आवै मले मैदान ॥
दाव बँदुला का मुहरै गा आल्हा का लहुरवा भाय । १५५ ।
मैं तौ टाँड़े का ईं नायक मैं ईं दल का सिरदार ।
तोर बिराई मैं महुबे मा सो कढ़ि आवैं मले मैदान ॥
एड़िन निरखै औ मूँड़े से बेटा सुन ले ऊदल बात ।
जेठे पठे दे मोहरा का जो अँगवै लोह हमार ॥
हँस कै ऊदल बोलन लागो काका सुन बात हमार । १६० ।
एक तौं जेठो है बजरंगी हाथे ना गहै तरवार ।
दूसर जेठो है सिरसा का तैं सिर काटो मूँड़ लुटाय ।
महीं सयानो मैं जेठो हौं अँगवैं का लोह तुम्हार ॥
दीन्हीं जुवाबैं जब रामा ने बेटा सुन ऊदल बात । घाल सवाही पहिले ले रहि जाय जियत की लाह ॥ १६५ ॥
दीन्हीं जुवाबैं तब ऊदल ने काका सुन बात हमार । तोरी साँगन से बचि जैहौं पाछे है बार हमार ॥
साँग शनीचर का उलझारै पटिया कै याड़ लगाय ।
उड़र कै मारै टीका मा बेला अनी देत बरकाय ।
माथ नवावैं का अगवन भा पाछे जाय गरद उड़ान । १७० ।
मुहियाँ सुखाय गई रामा कै मुख झाँवँर पर गे गाल ।

बार तौ सरई का चूकौंय ना नदिया हुचौंय साँग का वार ।
उदसा आय गई दिल्ली कै जो मोहौं दगा दीन्ह हथियार ॥
टूसर सावर या उलझारै दै कै बजुर कै भात ।
छाती मारैं का तजबीजै ऊदल खेलो नटन के साथ । १७५ ।
हन कै सावर मारत तो ऊदल लै गा ढाल से टार ॥

जब ललकारो फिर ऊदल ने काका सुन बात हमार ।
उसरी पाछे तैं दोहरी मारी तिसरे हैं बार हमार ।
ऐसे खिलियैं दल भीतर जैसे कुवाँ भरै पनिहार ।
दीन्हौं जुवावैं तब रामा ने ऊदल सुन बात हमार । १८० । की तैं करुवा पढ़ि आवै की सिखी बरारैं साँग ।
भल मैं मारो तोही नदिया मा तोरे अंग चढ़ो ना घाव ।

ना मैं करुवा पढ़ि आवैं ना सीख्यूँ बरारैं साँग ।
साँगैं तुम्हारी आहौं कच-लुहिया दीन्हें ना लुहारन दाम ।
वोछी माता के लड़का तुम बोदे हैं पिता तुम्हार । १८५ ।
घी लड़कैयाँ तुम पावो ना किहुँचा मा बलै निहाय ।
साँगैं हमारी अँगई लै जो बनवाईं रजा परमाल । साँगन मोरी से जो बँचिहा ता घर छठी करायस जाय ॥

लंबे लै गा या घोड़े का औ धरती का दै कै खभार ।
सकती देवता तैं मनिया देव राजा धर्म्म चंदेले क्यार । १९० ।
हुइ जा दाहिन तैं माई बेला राजा बरमजीत की नारि ॥
साँग छाँड़ दई याँ हाथे से छाती मा जाय ठठान ।
गिर गा रामा ह्वाँ खेतन मा जहना परी दुहेली मार ।
भौरैं भगानौं रनबन भई कोऊ छूटी न बाँधे पाग ॥

[No. 19.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ (BANĀPHARĪ) DIALECT. (DISTRICT, HAMIRPUR.)

SPECIMEN IV.

TRANSLATION.

Introductory Couplet.—As thou Sarasvatī granted to the cuckoo the power of song, and to the bee to hum melodiously; so, Sarasvatī, grant thou unto me such melody, that I may sing the story of the Banāphar.

The Narrative.—Scene.—A well at Delhi.—Crowded were the water-stairs of Samhar fort; all the fair friends were drawing water.[1] One cries, 'see, see, my friends, whence comes this array?' (5) Some think the traveller is from the south-east, some say he is from the west,[2] but Chauṛā's sprightly bride, lord Chauṛā's spouse,[3] at the well gave answer, 'hear my words, O my friends. My lord it is who comes, riding on a single-tusker.'[4] With her golden pitcher on her head from the well she darted forth; (10) with such dainty steps ran she, her foot touched not the earth, and in the space of a minute or two she arrived under the gate. With clasped palms she spake to Chauṛā, waving over him her two hands in welcome.[5] 'Tell me,' cried she, 'the secret, how was the sword wielded at Uraī?'[6]

Chauṛā.—How can I tell it at the door? Nothing can be said by me. (15) A very tiger was Varmānand, seizing and devouring all our champions.[7] Twelve sons (of the king) were slaughtered by him, thirteen sons-in-law were slain; on the broad plain of Uraī countless women were made widows.[8] Then the king gave me the order, and I smote Varmm Chandēl.

This much the woman heard, and ran full speed to the palace-square; (20) to Bēlā's high raised upper chamber she ascended with hasty steps.[9] The king's daughter was sleeping, and she plucked her sheet (to awaken her).

---

[1] Samhar here means Delhi.

[2] Aggim = agni-kōn. Ḍahār is a 'wayfarer.'

[3] Regarding Chauṛā see specimen III, verse 95, note. Nag-nāchan is 'clever,' 'lively,' 'troublesome' = chañchal.

[4] Kanthā = husband. The single-tusker was, of course, an elephant.

[5] Jwārai = jōrai: gaduliyā̃ = the palm of the hand: chāwar kar°nā is to wave (the hands) as a chowry is waved.

[6] As explained in the introduction, the final battle in which Prithīrāj Chauhān defeated Parmāl, the Chandēl, took place at Uraī. Chauṛā, although a Chandēl and the half-brother of Ālhā and Ūdal, was one of Prithīrāj's most trusted commanders. On the other hand, Bēlā, Prithīrāj's daughter, was married to the boy Brahmajit, Parmāl's son. She is still in her father's house, i.e. in the enemy's camp, although, like a good wife, she is an enthusiastic partisan of the Chandēls. This explains the savage glee with which Chauṛā's wife tells her of her widowhood, the greatest calamity that can befall an Indian woman, and specially so in the present instance. Bēlā on hearing the evil tidings acts like a true Rājpūt heroine.

[7] Brahmajit's full name was Brahmajit Varmā. Here he is called Varmānand. In verse 18 he is called Varmm, in verse 45 Brahmā, and in verse 107 Barmhā. The title Varmā is, as often as not, itself pronounced 'Brahmā.'

[8] Literally, in the earth (mār or marawā = māṭī) of (the plain which was) sixty-four (kōs wide).

[9] Nāg°war = an upper room: lāt = foot.

Chauṛā's wife.—Your gay red robe you must now give up, your bangles you must break. Your husband has fallen in Uraī; sister, your widowhood has come.[1]

Bēlā.—Avaunt! Out with you into the palace! Mean wretch! Hear my words.[2] (25) My husband is still a youth, and will be sporting with his comrades.

Chauṛā's wife.—With hopes of his youth are you deluded. Sister, hear my words. For he it was who slew twelve grown up heroes,[3] and smote down thirteen of the king's sons-in-law; and in the broad plain of Uraī he made countless women widows.[4] If you still believe me not, go and ask, for your hero (brother) has arrived. (30) Chauṛā now gives audience, and splendid is the courtly throng.[5]

Bēlā.—The city of Mahōbā I saw not, I saw not Kīrat's lake; Queen Padminī have I never seen, I have not worshipped Maniyā Dēo.[6] From my feet the crimson stain[7] has not departed, nor is my bridal garment soiled: it was not meet that you, Chauṛā-man, should make me a helpless widow. (35) My curse upon you, Chauṛā-man, may you be burnt to ashes.

Then Chauṛā gave answer and said, 'Bēlā, hear my words. Words of ill-omen are you speaking in public, but I can say nothing.[8] God made the victory mine, how then do you this day take it ill. I can make black white, and white black; in Samhar a third share is mine. (40) Prithīrāj has given me the order,—I will seize and bring the Lady Padminī.'[9]

Then Bēlā gave answer, 'Chauṛā, hear my voice. Because of smiting a boy you speak big swelling words; but my husband's mother you shall never seize, till Delhi's every lamp be quenched.'

Then Chauṛā gave answer, 'Bēlā, hear my words. (45) I gave orders to Rāmā saying, "Friend, hear my words.[10] Brahmā has fallen in Uraī, the Banāphar Ālhā attends him; Mahōbā's Rājā is woman-hearted,[11] go, seize and bring the Lady Padminī. Let not Pithaurā know of this,[12] nor the pure Ballār. By Kālpī's ghaut go forth, seize and bring the Lady Padminī."'

(50) With a mocking laugh quoth Bēlā, 'Friend, hear my words. Tigers Parmāl has nurtured, underground he keeps them. Parmāl at any time has but to raise his finger, and they will rend and slay.'

---

[1] She calls Bēlā her husband's sister (nanad). Chauṛā having been adopted by Prithīrāj, Bēlā is looked upon as his sister.

[2] Dhar is what one says in driving away a dog. Dud-kārō is an interjection meaning 'out of this.' Compare Hindī dutānā, to rebuke. Kam-jātin = of low caste (fem.).

[3] I.e. He is no longer a boy, as you fancy, for he has been able to slay all these full-grown men.

[4] Dēs kai, literally, (widows) of the land. Kai is feminine.

[5] Arᵉjaṅgī = large, great, hence, magnificent.

[6] Brahmajit being but a youth, he had not yet taken his bride to his own home. The Kīrat Sāgar is still a clear, deep, and spacious sheet of water at Mahōbā. It was dug by Kīrtti Varman (1065-1085 A.D.). Padminī was one of the titles of Malnā Dēvī, Parmāl's Queen. The temple of Maniyā Dēo was one of the glories of Mahōbā. It exists to the present day, but has been partially renovated.

[7] Which was applied at the time of her wedding.

[8] Bwālati, here and elsewhere for bōlᵉtī.
Gwā̃ṛā or gō̃ṛā = the Hindī aṭhā̃ī, an assembly room.

[9] Parmāl's Queen.

[10] Yā means 'this person,' that is, the speaker.
Rāmā is Rāmāpati of Gwalior. Kākā, uncle, is here merely a term of friendly address.

[11] Myāhar = mēharā.

[12] For Chauṛā should have gone himself. Pithaurā is Prithīrāj. Ballār is a name of Ālhā. Kālpī is north-east of Uraī, on the bank of the Jamnā.

Chauṛā orders Rāmāpati.—The best of horses take, and take picked riders, and at the hour of midnight pass over to the further bank.

Having heard this much Bēlā uttered a loud scream, 'Handmaid, handmaid,' she cried, 'handmaid, hear my words. Go straightway to the palace, and bring me my writing bundle.'[1] The pen and inkstand she took in her hand, and took up the paper.[2] She gave salutation[3] to all the warriors, and to Ūdal reverent greeting. (60) 'Has the horse Benduliyā[4] grown old? Or has Rājā Parmāl died? I ask of thee, O Ūdal, heed thou well my words. Whilst thou, O tiger, livest, wilt thou become a laughing stock in Mahōbā? Passing by Kālpī ghaut Rāmāpati of Gwalior is coming. See that at the ghaut Rāmā escape not, though he should assume seven forms.'

(65) Then stout Princess Bēlā called a runner and said, 'I shall set apart and grant you lands[5] to enjoy unhindered all your life; but let not Chauṛā know of this, nor let Rāmāpati of Gwalior know. Only tell the news to Ūdal that Rāmā of Gwalior is coming.'

He cleans his saddle and binds it on the camel, and quickly mounts.[6] (70) With his heel he urges her on, flying like the wind.[7] By night running and by day speeding, midway he makes no halt. Thus in a few days' space, with a cloud of dust flying, he reaches Uraī. A tent with long walls was pitched, the summit of which soared to heaven.[8] An enclosure surrounded a pavilion of Deccan work, with fringes attached to its four sides.[9] (75) For the space of a mile floor-clothes are spread, of cushions there were some fifteen hundred, where the people sat cross-legged and touching each other, the shields covered the earth as blades of grass. Apart sat Karchulī and Kachhwāhā, Sēngar and Dhār Pãwār.[10] There sat the Rājpūts clan by clan reclining on cushions. Bemused were they from the opium they had eaten, men who without blows would not change their purpose. (80) Each man with his sacred sword upon his thigh, like a black snake coiled.

Bēlā's camel-courier alighted on the tented field. Jumping down from the camel he alighted, adjusting his shield and sword,[11] paid his respects before the seat of the chief, and presented his orders. While opening the folded letter and looking at the black characters,[12] (85) Ūdal burned as a coal and became like dark death upon his throne.

'Ḍiriyā, Ḍiriyā,' he shouted, 'Ḍiriyā, hear my words. Instantly call for Ālhā, quickly give him notice.'[13]

---

[1] A basta is any wrapper, and, especially, the bundle of writing materials, which are kept tied up in a cloth.

[2] A dawāt is a portable case containing reed, pens, and rags sodden in ink. The paper is held in the left hand while writing.

[3] Literally, headed the letter with 'Rām, Rām.' Saût = Sãwant.

[4] The name of Ūdal's horse.

[5] Jãgīrai = jāgīr.

[6] Ṭhõk means 'to beat,' 'dust,' 'clean.' Jahāj is a camel saddle-pad; sãṛ^{a}nī or sãṛinī = a she-camel.

[7] Yāṛā = a dig of the heel; waihar = the wind.

[8] A sirāchā is the canvas side, or qanāt, of a tent; the chãd^{a}wā is the ornamental top of a tent pole. In Hindī sirācha is a single-pole tent.

[9] A dāu^{a}nī is a canopy-tent, or shāmiyāna. Here commences one of the stock descriptions. Compare specimen III, v. 9.

[10] These are all names of Rājpūt tribes. Each tribe sat apart from the others in order of precedence.

[11] Char^{a}pēṭ—to adjust, put to rights.

[12] Kul^{a}phē is a corruption of quſl, a lock. Ṭār is to open a letter. In naj^{a}rat, we have one of the rare instances of a foreign (Arabic) word treated as a verb and conjugated.

[13] Ḍiriyā was the groom of Ūdal's horse Benduliyā.

Ḍiriyā calls Ālhā.—'Come on, come on, O thunderbolt of war, your younger brother calls you.'[1] Straightway came forth (Ālhā) the thunderbolt and rushed into the tent.[2] (90) Not a minute, not a second, passed, before he arrived in the tent. He then called out to Ūdal, 'Ūdal, hear my words. Are you troubled with your neighbour on the border,[3] or has the Chauhān pressed you hard? I ask of you, O Ūdal, why have you sent for me at the point of noon?'

Ūdal.—A stratagem has Chauṛā planned; Rāmā he has made ready, (95) who is coming by the pass of Jalaun to seize the Lady Padminī.

Then gave answer Ālhā, 'Ūdal, hear my words. The best of horses take, and well-chosen horsemen.[4] Let not Rāmā escape on the roads; cut off his head and bring away the trophy.'

Ūdal.—Whomsoever of the young men I may ask for in this tent, give me as I ask.

(100) Then gave answer Ālhā, 'Ūdal, hear my words. Whatsoever you ask for in this tent, I shall grant your prayer.'

Ūdal.—Sīhā of Siraunjā give me, Prince Lākhan of Kanauj, Alī Alāwar and Kālē Khān, with Jaṛī Bēg and Sultān, and Bahubalī, the son of the Sayyid, whom Ālhā himself for a moment fears.[5] (105) (Men these were who could eat a maund of flour each, and would each eat an entire goat.[6] And the leaf dish on which their morning snack was placed would crumble to dust.) Give me Varmā's Ahīr Matauwā,—All these make ready for me, and I shall learn the truth about Rāmā; he of Gwalior shall not escape.[7]

Then Ālhā gave order saying: 'Ūdal, hear my words. (110) Whomsoever you asked for in the tent, all have I granted to you. Only leave behind my brother of Sirsā, and Miyān Tālhan of Benares.[8] Go on your way, Ūdal, my son, he of Gwalior must not escape.'

Together the men rushed forth and dashed along the roads, and in a few days' space arrived at the river. (115) Ūdal threw out his pickets in the battlefield by the river[9] and at the hour of eight o'clock Rāmāpati arrived. When Ūdal cried aloud and said: 'Young man, hear my words. In what region did your birth occur? Where did you assume mortal form?[10] I ask of you, my fine fellow, to what country are you going?'

(120) Then Rāmā planned a stratagem, and spake words of guile. 'In the west country was I born, and there I assumed mortal form. A horse merchant I am, to sell horses am I going. I have heard of a market for horses, to sell a horse am I going to Mahōbā.'

Then Ūdal cried aloud, 'Merchant, hear my words. (125) At dawn, even at break of day, when the chariot of the sun comes forth, I shall make way for you; after that, if you please, go on to Mahōbā.'

---

[1] Baj^{a}raṅgī means literally 'thou whose body is the thunderbolt.' Compare Virgil's duo fulmina belli Scipiades.

[2] Ṭurāy, broke into the tent.

[3] Ḍāṛā—the frontier country. Ḍāṛaiyā is an inhabitant of the same.

[4] Chhaṛē—picked, selected.

[5] Sīhā was the son of Ālhā's sister; Lākhan was nephew of Jaichand, King of Kanauj. The others were all sons of Sayyid Tālhan Miyān of Benares.

[6] Sar^{a}much = samūchā.

[7] The root dēr or dyār is explained as meaning 'to learn.'

[8] Malkhān was the first cousin of Ālhā and Ūdal. His fief was at Sirsā, east of the Dhasān. He bore the brunt of the Chauhān's first attack and was then killed. His death is referred to in verse 162, below, so that Ālhā cannot properly refer to him here as his brother. Who else can be referred to, I do not know.

[9] Mōrcha, usually entrenchments, here means outposts or pickets. Compare specimen III, verse 89.

[10] Disantar = dēśāntar: jal^{a}mau = janma.

Ḍiriyā calls Ālhā.—'Come on, come on, O thunderbolt of war, your younger brother calls you.'[1] Straightway came forth (Ālhā) the thunderbolt and rushed into the tent.[2] (90) Not a minute, not a second, passed, before he arrived in the tent. He then called out to Ūdal, 'Ūdal, hear my words. Are you troubled with your neighbour on the border,[3] or has the Chauhān pressed you hard? I ask of you, O Ūdal, why have you sent for me at the point of noon?'

Ūdal.—A stratagem has Chauṛā planned; Rāmā he has made ready, (95) who is coming by the pass of Jalaun to seize the Lady Padminī.

Then gave answer Ālhā, 'Ūdal, hear my words. The best of horses take, and well-chosen horsemen.[4] Let not Rāmā escape on the roads; cut off his head and bring away the trophy.'

Ūdal.—Whomsoever of the young men I may ask for in this tent, give me as I ask.

(100) Then gave answer Ālhā, 'Ūdal, hear my words. Whatsoever you ask for in this tent, I shall grant your prayer.'

Ūdal.—Sīhā of Siraunjā give me, Prince Lākhan of Kanauj, Alī Alāwar and Kālē Khān, with Jaṛī Bēg and Sultān, and Bahubalī, the son of the Sayyid, whom Ālhā himself for a moment fears.[5] (105) (Men these were who could eat a maund of flour each, and would each eat an entire goat.[6] And the leaf dish on which their morning snack was placed would crumble to dust.) Give me Varmā's Ahīr Matauwā,—All these make ready for me, and I shall learn the truth about Rāmā; he of Gwalior shall not escape.[7]

Then Ālhā gave order saying: 'Ūdal, hear my words. (110) Whomsoever you asked for in the tent, all have I granted to you. Only leave behind my brother of Sirsā, and Miyān Tālhan of Benares.[8] Go on your way, Ūdal, my son, he of Gwalior must not escape.'

Together the men rushed forth and dashed along the roads, and in a few days' space arrived at the river. (115) Ūdal threw out his pickets in the battlefield by the river[9] and at the hour of eight o'clock Rāmāpati arrived. When Ūdal cried aloud and said: 'Young man, hear my words. In what region did your birth occur? Where did you assume mortal form?[10] I ask of you, my fine fellow, to what country are you going?'

(120) Then Rāmā planned a stratagem, and spake words of guile. 'In the west country was I born, and there I assumed mortal form. A horse merchant I am, to sell horses am I going. I have heard of a market for horses, to sell a horse am I going to Mahōbā.'

Then Ūdal cried aloud, 'Merchant, hear my words. (125) At dawn, even at break of day, when the chariot of the sun comes forth, I shall make way for you; after that, if you please, go on to Mahōbā.'

---

[1] Baj^{a}raṅgī means literally 'thou whose body is the thunderbolt.' Compare Virgil's duo fulmina belli Scipiades.

[2] Ṭurāy, broke into the tent.

[3] Ḍāṛā—the frontier country. Ḍāṛaiyā is an inhabitant of the same.

[4] Chhaṛē—picked, selected.

[5] Sīhā was the son of Ālhā's sister; Lākhan was nephew of Jaichand, King of Kanauj. The others were all sons of Sayyid Tālhan Miyān of Benares.

[6] Sar^{a}much = samūchā.

[7] The root dēr or dyār is explained as meaning 'to learn.'

[8] Malkhān was the first cousin of Ālhā and Ūdal. His fief was at Sirsā, east of the Dhasān. He bore the brunt of the Chauhān's first attack and was then killed. His death is referred to in verse 162, below, so that Ālhā cannot properly refer to him here as his brother. Who else can be referred to, I do not know.

[9] Mōrcha, usually entrenchments, here means outposts or pickets. Compare specimen III, verse 89.

[10] Disantar = dēśāntar: jal^{a}mau = janma.

With angry talk they wrangled, and fierce waxed the war of words. Right well did Ūdal admonish, but he of Gwalior heeded not. Each learned to know the other in the battlefield by the river.

(130) With a mocking laugh spake Ūdal, 'Uncle, hear my words. Because of smiting one boy, you have come and planned such a scheme.'

With a mocking laugh spake Rāmā, 'Ūdal, hear my words. You may speak a million times, but I shall not heed, and will seize and bring away the Lady Padminī.'

On hearing these words, Ūdal gnawed his palm (in rage and cried),[1] (135) 'To the defiance, and to Swāmīsur, from whom sprung Pithaurā Rāy.[2] East and west, and north and south, were ravaged the four regions; east and west, and north and south, was heard the tramp of Bendulā's hoofs. As far as Jagannāth and Ghurmuhã did I smite; I held the fair at Baṭēsar; Rāmēsar of Sētubandh I smote, even unto Laṅkā did I take tribute.[3] (140) The stream of the Narbada I banked up, so that it turned and flowed westwards.[4] If to such a man's mother[5] you should speak as you have done, then were it a shame for me to live.'

The angry talk increased, and fierce waxed the war of words. The sacred blade was drawn at the river side, in a torrent of battle was plied the sword.[6] Under the scimitar-blows gushed out jets of blood, the swords raised the dust.[7]

(145) Fighting elephants as they were cut down fell to the earth; troops of horses fell;[8] there were riders without arms, and horses without noses;[9] elephants lost their trunks, the host yelled in agony.[10] The heads which were wont to be tied with saffron turbans, and to be dressed with attar and sweet oil,[11] those very heads were rolling on the earth, while shield and sword clashed all around. (150) During the slaughter of the night day appeared, and during the day's fighting evening came on.

Rāmāpati held to every inch of ground, but his pickets that were stationed there gave way.[12] Urging on his elephant he came out into the forefront of the battlefield.

Rāmāpati.—A trumpery servant who would slay, and so bring together the sins of a lifetime?[13] If there be my match in the ranks of Mahōbā, let him come forward in the battlefield.[14] (155) Urging on Bendulā, Ālhā's younger brother came to the front.

---

[1] Gādī = gaduliyā, the palm of the hand.

[2] Sōmēśvara was the name of Prithīrāj's (Pithaurā's) father. He ruled at Ajmer.

[3] Jagannāth is the temple of Purī in Orissa. Ghurmuhã is said to be a fabulous country where the people have horse's faces. Baṭēsar is the well-known town in Agra district, famous for its horse-fair. Sētubandh is the line of reefs joining Cape Comorin to Ceylon. At Cape Comorin there is a temple of Śiva Mahēśvara. Laṅkā is Ceylon.

[4] I do not know to what legend this refers.

[5] I.e. Padminī. She was really his maternal aunt. Jalanī for jananī.

[6] Regarding the use of the name Bhagavatī for a sword, see note to specimen III, verse 14. Uīr is a torrent, a stream. Compare verse 169.

[7] Sirōhī is a kind of two-edged sword, said to be named after the place of its manufacture. Bōjā means a bubbling torrent.

[8] Chintā is a kind of fighting elephant. Summār = companies, rows.

[9] Thubharī = a snout, a face.

[10] Maṅgal is explained as a kind of elephant, and bhasũṛar as his trunk. Karāh is a cry of pain.

[11] Kusamahanī is a turban dyed red with saffron (kusum).

[12] Here ghāṭ = morcha.

[13] 'A trumpery servant' is literally 'a servant of a seer', i.e. one whose wages is only a seer of food a day. Biṛhawai = collects; dwākh = dōsh.

[14] Birāī = match, equal.

Ūdal.—Here am I, the leader of this camp, and of this host the chief.[1] I am your match in the ranks of Mahōbā, therefore am I come forward in the battlefield.

Looking at him from heel to head, (Rāma said) 'Son Ūdal, hear my words. Send your elder brother to the front, who may be able to withstand my steel.'

(160) With a mocking laugh spake Ūdal, 'Uncle, hear my words. One elder brother is the Thunderbolt of War, who takes not his sword in his hand.[2] The second elder brother of mine was he of Sirsā, whose head you cut off and carried away.[3] Now I am fully-grown, I am the eldest, able to withstand your steel.'

When Rāmā gave answer unto him, 'Son Ūdal, hear my words. (165) Take the first cast of the javelin, if so be that you have any desire for life left in you.'[4]

Then gave answer Ūdal, 'Uncle, hear my words. From your darts I shall escape. My turn comes after yours.'

Brandishing the javelin Sanīchar, and resting on the front of the howdah,[5] Rāmā poured blows on his forehead, but Bēlā ever turned the point.[6] (170) Ūdal advanced to make his salute, with a cloud of dust flying behind him.[7] The countenance of Rāmā withered, his face became dim, his jaws fell.[8]

Rāmāpati.—As a boy, I never missed my cast with a straw arrow, but now at the river side I have missed my cast with the javelin.[9] An evil day has come for Delhi, when my weapon has played me false.[10] A second bar of iron he brandished, a hard nut for an enemy to crack;[11] (175) he intended to strike on the chest, but Ūdal had learned from jugglers the art of fence.[12] Forcibly he smote with the bar; but Ūdal warded it off with his shield.

When again Ūdal cried, 'Uncle, hear my words. After your turn was over, you gave a second blow, the third turn is mine.[13] Let us fence before the host (each in his turn) as a well is worked by the seekers for water.'[14] (180) Then gave Rāmā answer, 'Ūdal, hear my words. What, have you conned a potent charm, or learned how to avert a dart?[15] Right well I smote you at the river side, yet not a wound appeared on your body.'

Ūdal.—I have not conned a potent charm, nor have I learned to avert a dart. Your darts are of raw iron, and you have not paid the smith his price. (185) The son of a low-

---

[1] Ī dal, this host, is also a play on the name of Alhā's son, Īdal or Indal.

[2] This is Ālhā. He had a magic sword which none could withstand, and which, in the Rājpūt sense of fair play, he only used on extreme occasions.

[3] This is Malkhān. See note to verse 111 above.

[4] Sawāhī is an iron dart or javelin. In these poems, it is a pundonor with each champion to offer the first blow to his opponent. It usually happens that, as here, the villain is allowed two or three free shots, and then the hero walks in and wins. Lāh = desire, hope.

[5] Sanīchar, or Saturn, was the name of his javelin. Rāmā, of course, was on an elephant. Paṭiyā is the front of the howdah. Yāṛ = ēṛ, a rest, a support.

[6] Bēlā was said to possess the powers of a witch. Barakāy = warding off.

[7] Agaban = aguman, in front.

[8] Jhāwār = dimmed.

[9] Bār = a boy, a child. Saraī is a toy arrow made of sarpat, a kind of reed-grass. Huchōy = I missed.

[10] Ūdasā = an unlucky or evil day.

[11] Sābar = a crowbar, a bar of iron. The second half of the line is literally, 'having given the boiled rice of adamant.' The idea is that the bar was so hard that adamant was soft as boiled rice in comparison with it.

[12] Here again we have a foreign word tajwīz treated as a verb.

[13] Usarī, lit. 'completed.'

[14] Khiliyaī is from the root khēl, with the ē shortened to i as it is in the antepenultimate.

[15] Karuwā is the name of a charm: the root barār = to ward off (by magical means or otherwise).

With angry talk they wrangled, and fierce waxed the war of words. Right well did Ūdal admonish, but he of Gwalior heeded not. Each learned to know the other in the battlefield by the river.

(130) With a mocking laugh spake Ūdal, 'Uncle, hear my words. Because of smiting one boy, you have come and planned such a scheme.'

With a mocking laugh spake Rāmā, 'Ūdal, hear my words. You may speak a million times, but I shall not heed, and will seize and bring away the Lady Padminī.'

On hearing these words, Ūdal gnawed his palm (in rage and cried),[1] (135) 'To the defiance, and to Swāmīsur, from whom sprung Pithaurā Rāy.[2] East and west, and north and south, were ravaged the four regions; east and west, and north and south, was heard the tramp of Bendulā's hoofs. As far as Jagannāth and Ghurmuhã did I smite; I held the fair at Baṭēsar; Rāmēsar of Sētubandh I smote, even unto Laṅkā did I take tribute.[3] (140) The stream of the Narbada I banked up, so that it turned and flowed westwards.[4] If to such a man's mother[5] you should speak as you have done, then were it a shame for me to live.'

The angry talk increased, and fierce waxed the war of words. The sacred blade was drawn at the river side, in a torrent of battle was plied the sword.[6] Under the scimitar-blows gushed out jets of blood, the swords raised the dust.[7]

(145) Fighting elephants as they were cut down fell to the earth; troops of horses fell;[8] there were riders without arms, and horses without noses;[9] elephants lost their trunks, the host yelled in agony.[10] The heads which were wont to be tied with saffron turbans, and to be dressed with attar and sweet oil,[11] those very heads were rolling on the earth, while shield and sword clashed all around. (150) During the slaughter of the night day appeared, and during the day's fighting evening came on.

Rāmāpati held to every inch of ground, but his pickets that were stationed there gave way.[12] Urging on his elephant he came out into the forefront of the battlefield.

Rāmāpati.—A trumpery servant who would slay, and so bring together the sins of a lifetime?[13] If there be my match in the ranks of Mahōbā, let him come forward in the battlefield.[14] (155) Urging on Bendulā, Ālhā's younger brother came to the front.

---

[1] Gādī = gaduliyā, the palm of the hand.

[2] Sōmēśvara was the name of Prithīrāj's (Pithaurā's) father. He ruled at Ajmer.

[3] Jagannāth is the temple of Purī in Orissa. Ghurmuhã is said to be a fabulous country where the people have horse's faces. Baṭēsar is the well-known town in Agra district, famous for its horse-fair. Sētubandh is the line of reefs joining Cape Comorin to Ceylon. At Cape Comorin there is a temple of Śiva Mahēśvara. Laṅkā is Ceylon.

[4] I do not know to what legend this refers.

[5] I.e. Padminī. She was really his maternal aunt. Jalanī for jananī.

[6] Regarding the use of the name Bhagavatī for a sword, see note to specimen III, verse 14. Uir is a torrent, a stream. Compare verse 169.

[7] Sirōhī is a kind of two-edged sword, said to be named after the place of its manufacture. Bōjā means a bubbling torrent.

[8] Chintā is a kind of fighting elephant. Summār = companies, rows.

[9] Thubharī = a snout, a face.

[10] Maṅgal is explained as a kind of elephant, and bhasũṛar as his trunk. Karāh is a cry of pain.

[11] Kusamahanī is a turban dyed red with saffron (kusum).

[12] Here ghāṭ = morcha.

[13] 'A trumpery servant' is literally 'a servant of a seer', i.e. one whose wages is only a seer of food a day. Biṛhawai = collects; dwākh = dōsh.

[14] Birāī = match, equal.

Ūdal.—Here am I, the leader of this camp, and of this host the chief.[1] I am your match in the ranks of Mahōbā, therefore am I come forward in the battlefield.

Looking at him from heel to head, (Rāma said) 'Son Ūdal, hear my words. Send your elder brother to the front, who may be able to withstand my steel.'

(160) With a mocking laugh spake Ūdal, 'Uncle, hear my words. One elder brother is the Thunderbolt of War, who takes not his sword in his hand.[2] The second elder brother of mine was he of Sirsā, whose head you cut off and carried away.[3] Now I am fully-grown, I am the eldest, able to withstand your steel.'

When Rāmā gave answer unto him, 'Son Ūdal, hear my words. (165) Take the first cast of the javelin, if so be that you have any desire for life left in you.'[4]

Then gave answer Ūdal, 'Uncle, hear my words. From your darts I shall escape. My turn comes after yours.'

Brandishing the javelin Sanīchar, and resting on the front of the howdah,[5] Rāmā poured blows on his forehead, but Bēlā ever turned the point.[6] (170) Ūdal advanced to make his salute, with a cloud of dust flying behind him.[7] The countenance of Rāmā withered, his face became dim, his jaws fell.[8]

Rāmāpati.—As a boy, I never missed my cast with a straw arrow, but now at the river side I have missed my cast with the javelin.[9] An evil day has come for Delhi, when my weapon has played me false.[10] A second bar of iron he brandished, a hard nut for an enemy to crack;[11] (175) he intended to strike on the chest, but Ūdal had learned from jugglers the art of fence.[12] Forcibly he smote with the bar; but Ūdal warded it off with his shield.

When again Ūdal cried, 'Uncle, hear my words. After your turn was over, you gave a second blow, the third turn is mine.[13] Let us fence before the host (each in his turn) as a well is worked by the seekers for water.'[14] (180) Then gave Rāmā answer, 'Ūdal, hear my words. What, have you conned a potent charm, or learned how to avert a dart?[15] Right well I smote you at the river side, yet not a wound appeared on your body.'

Ūdal.—I have not conned a potent charm, nor have I learned to avert a dart. Your darts are of raw iron, and you have not paid the smith his price. (185) The son of a low-

---

[1] Ī dal, this host, is also a play on the name of Alhā's son, Īdal or Indal.

[2] This is Ālhā. He had a magic sword which none could withstand, and which, in the Rājpūt sense of fair play, he only used on extreme occasions.

[3] This is Malkhān. See note to verse 111 above.

[4] Sawāhī is an iron dart or javelin. In these poems, it is a pundonor with each champion to offer the first blow to his opponent. It usually happens that, as here, the villain is allowed two or three free shots, and then the hero walks in and wins. Lāh = desire, hope.

[5] Sanīchar, or Saturn, was the name of his javelin. Rāmā, of course, was on an elephant. Paṭiyā is the front of the howdah. Yāṛ = ēṛ, a rest, a support.

[6] Bēlā was said to possess the powers of a witch. Barakāy = warding off.

[7] Agaban = aguman, in front.

[8] Jhāwār = dimmed.

[9] Bār = a boy, a child. Saraī is a toy arrow made of sarpat, a kind of reed-grass. Huchōy = I missed.

[10] Udasā = an unlucky or evil day.

[11] Sābar = a crowbar, a bar of iron. The second half of the line is literally, 'having given the boiled rice of adamant.' The idea is that the bar was so hard that adamant was soft as boiled rice in comparison with it.

[12] Here again we have a foreign word tajwīz treated as a verb.

[13] Usarī, lit. 'completed.'

[14] Khiliyaī is from the root khēl, with the ē shortened to i as it is in the antepenultimate.

[15] Kuruwā is the name of a charm: the root barār = to ward off (by magical means or otherwise).

born mother are you, a good-for-nothing was your father.[1] In your childhood you got no butter to eat, in your wrist there is no strength.[2] Withstand my darts, which were made by order of Rājā Parmāl; if from my darts you do escape, then you may go home and anew celebrate your birth.[3]

Ūdal then brought his horse to a distance, and laying on Mother Earth the burden of his task (exclaimed),[4] (190) 'O Mighty God, Maniyā Dēo, O Honour of the Chandēlā Rājā. O Mother Bēlā, at my right hand be thou, the spouse of Prince Brahmajit.'

He on the one side from his hand discharged the dart, and it lodged in his rival's chest.[5] On the other side fell Rāmā on the field, where the double blow had lighted.[6] The enemy fled, a disordered rabble, none stopped to tie his loosened turban.[7]

---

[1] Wōchhā = ōchhā, low, despicable: lōdā = low, mean, insignificant, feeble.

[2] Kihũchā = pahũchā. Nihāy is the negative verb substantive.

[3] The chhaṭhī is the feast held on the sixth day after the birth of a child. The meaning is that if Rāmāpati does escape, he may consider that he has passed through death and been born again.

[4] Khabhār, burden. What is meant is that he invoked Mother Earth. It is noteworthy that the employment of kha as a meaningless prefix is common in the dialects of the wandering tribes, often called 'Gipsies,' of India. See Vol. XI.

[5] Yã = here, opposed to hwã, there. Ṭhaṭhān, to beat, smite.

[6] Duhēlā = double. The blow was double, as it was both natural and supernatural.

[7] Ran-ban = confused, disordered.

KUṆḌRĪ OF HAMIRPUR.

Kuṇḍrī is spoken in the extreme north-east of the Hamirpur district, on the left bank of the river Ken, by some 11,000 people. It is also spoken on the right bank of the same river, in the Banda district. Immediately to its north lies the Tirhārī of the southern bank of the Jumna, which is a mixture of Baghēlī and Bundēlī, and which has been described under the head of Eastern Hindī (Vol. VI, pp. 132 ff.). Kuṇḍrī is a similar mixture, but it differs on the two sides of the Ken. On the right, or east, side like the other dialects used in Banda, it is based on Baghēlī and is mixed with Bundēlī. An account of this form of Kuṇḍrī will be found in Vol. VI, pp. 152 ff. On the left, or west, bank of the Ken, it is much more influenced by the Bundēlī spoken in the rest of Hamirpur, and is based on that dialect, with a mixture of Baghēlī. As a whole, Kuṇḍrī may be considered to be an extension of Tirhārī towards the south up the lower course of the Ken.

The nature of this broken dialect will be evident from the first few sentences of the Parable of the Prodigal Son given below. It will be seen that the verbs follow Bundēlī in the formation and use of the past tense, except in the case of rahaĩ, were, which is Baghēlī. On the other hand the postpositions, mã̃, in, and kā, to, are Baghēlī, and so is the form mwārō, mine, although the termination ō is Bundēlī. The general structure of the sentences is throughout pure Bundēlī, with the typical use of the agent case before the past tenses of transitive verbs, which is unknown to Baghēlī. The word lām^{a}ṛō for 'son' may be noted.

[No. 20.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ (KUṆḌRĪ) DIALECT. (DISTRICT, HAMIRPUR.)

ई मनई-के द्वी लामड़ा रहैं । उह-माँ-से हलके-ने बाप-से कहो ओ रे बाप धन-माँ-से जो म्वारो हीसा होय सो मोहैं दै राख । तब उह-ने उह-का अपनो धन बाँट दओ । बहुत दिन न भये कि हलके लामड़ा-ने बहुत जोर-कै मुलक-माँ चला गओ । हुआँ सुहदपन-में रह-के अपनो पैसा खो दओ ॥

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ī manaī-kē dwī lām^{a}ṛā rahaĩ. Uh-mã̄-sē hal^{a}kē-nē bāp-sē One man-of two sons were. Them-in-from the-younger-by father-to kahō, 'ō-rē bāp, dhan-mã̄-sē jō mwārō hīsā hōy sō it-was-said, 'O father, wealth-in-from what my share may-be that mōhaĩ dai-rākh.' Tab uh-nē uh-kā ap^{a}nō dhan bā̄ṭ to-me give-away.' Then him-by him-to his-own wealth having-divided ḍaō. Bahut din na bhayē ki hal^{a}kē lām^{a}ṛā-nē bahut was-given. Many days not were that the-younger son-by much jōr-kai mulak-mã̄ chalā-gaō. Huã̄ suhad^{a}pan-mẽ collected-having a(-foreign)-country-in went-away. There licentiousness-in rah-kē ap^{a}nō paisā khō-daō.
remained-having his-own pice was-squandered.

NIBHAṬṬĀ OF JALAUN.

Although the main language of Jalaun is good Bundēlī in the east corner of that district, on the south bank of the Jamna, we find a dialect locally known as Nibhaṭṭā, which is a continuation of the Tirhārī of Hamirpur, found along the banks of the same river. It is spoken by about 10,200 people.

Like Tirhārī this riverain dialect is a mixture of Baghēlī and Bundēlī. Tirhārī is certainly based on the former of these tongues, but Nibhaṭṭā, which, being further west, is more in the Bundēlī country, might fairly be classed with either. A few lines of a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son will be a sufficient example. Note how the language struggles between two idioms. There are Baghēlī past tenses like kahasi, he said, dihis, he gave, which require the subject in the nominative case, and yet here it is (as in Bundēlī) in the case of the Agent. Alongside of these Baghēlī forms note the pure Bundēlī hatē, they were.

Nibhaṭṭā is the last of these broken dialects which we meet as we go west.

Besides this Baghēlī infection, traces are also to be seen of the Kanaujī, spoken in Cawnpore on the other side of the river. Such is wā-nē, by him.

[No. 21.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ (NIBHAṬṬĀ) DIALECT. (DISTRICT, JALAUN.)

किसी आदमी-के दो लड़का हते। उन-में-से छोटे-ने बापू-से कहसि कि हे बापू धन-में-से जो मोर हिस्सा होय सो हमिन देओ। तब वा-ने उन-को धन बाँट दिहस। बहुत दिन नहीं बीते कि छोटा लड़का सब कुछ जमा कर-के दूर देस चला गहिस। वहाँ बदमाशी-में दिन खोइस अपना धन उड़ा दिहिस॥

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Kisī ādᵃmī-kē dō laṛᵃkā hatē. Un-mẽ-sē chhōṭē-nē
A-certain man-of two sons were. Them-in-from the-younger-by

bāpū-sē kahasi ki, 'he bāpū, dhan-mẽ-sē jō mōr hissā hōy
the-father-to he-said that, 'O father, wealth-in-from what my share may-be sō hamin dēo.' Tab wā-nē un-kō dhan bãṭ dihis.

that to-me give.' Then him-by them-to wealth having-divided he-gave.

Bahut din nahĩ bītē ki chhōṭā laṛᵃkā sab kuchh jamā
Many days not passed that the-younger son all anything collected

kar-kē dūr dēs chalā-gahis. Wahã bad-māśī-mẽ din khōis, made-having a-far country went-away. There licentiousness-in days he-lost, apᵃnā dhan uṛā-dehis.

his-own wealth he-squandered.

BHADAURĪ OR TÕWARGAṚHĪ.

The head-quarters of the Bhadāwar Rajputs consist of the country on both sides of the river Chambal, where it forms the northern boundary of the State of Gwalior. Here also, in the Tõwargarh District of Gwalior, are the head-quarters of the Tōmar Rajputs. The language spoken in this tract is known as Bhadaurī or (in Tõwargarh) Tõwargaṛhī. Under whichever name it is known it is the same,—viz. a form of Bundēlī which is considerably mixed with the Braj Bhākhā spoken in Agra. It varies slightly from place to place, being naturally more and more infected with Braj as we go north.

The country in which Bhadaurī is spoken may be described as follows. It is spoken over nearly the whole of the main portion of the Gwalior State. It thus extends over a much larger tract than the Bhadāwar country proper. It runs down the centre of the State from the Chambal to the border of the old Guna Agency, having Braj Bhākhā and Harauṭī to its west, and Pãwārī Bundēlī to its east. To the south it merges into Mālwī. In Agra it is spoken in the south of the district in the tract bordering on the Chambal. In Mainpurī it has a few speakers in the Kharka tract on the banks of the Jamna to the south-west of the District. In Etawah it is spoken in the tract between the Jamna and the Chambal, and across the latter river. The number of speakers is roughly estimated as follows :—

Gwalior	1,000,000
Agra	250,000
Mainpuri	8,000
Etawah	55,000
TOTAL	1,313,000

It will be sufficient to give specimens from Gwalior and Agra. The Bhadaurī of the other two districts does not differ. It may be mentioned that Bhadaurī is not spoken in Jalaun, although the dialect was wrongly entered in the Rough List of Languages spoken in that district. The so-called Bhadaurī of Jalaun is ordinary Bundēlī.

The following account of the dialect is based on the specimens.

The system of pronunciation fluctuates. Au occurs as often as ō, and ai, as ē. In the same sentence we often find the same word spelt both ways, e.g. mārō and mārau. As in the Bundēlī of Jalaun we meet curious changes of other vowels, e.g. bauhat, many, for bahut (cf. Jalaun buhat) ; rehat for rahat, remaining ; kēh for kahi, having said.

In the case of consonants, there is a strong tendency to contraction, as in jāntu, knowing, for jān^{a}tu. This is specially noticeable in the case of the letter r. For instance—

Instead of	we have
chākaran, servants	chākann.
par^{a}dēs, a far country	paddēs.
barisan, years	bassan.
suratī, memory	suttī.
mār^{a}nau, to strike	mānnau.
mār^{a}tu, striking	māttu.
kar^{a}tu, doing	kattu.

[No. 21.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ (NIBHAṬṬĀ) DIALECT. (DISTRICT, JALAUN.)

किसी आदमी-के दो लड़का हते । उन-मँ-से छोटे-ने बापू-से कहसि कि हे बापू धन-मँ-से जो मोर हिस्सा होय सो हमिन देओ । तब वा-ने उन-को धन बाँट दिहस । बहुत दिन नहीँ बीते कि छोटा लड़का सब कुछ जमा कर-के दूर देस चला गहिस । वहाँ बदमाशी-मँ दिन खोइस अपना धन उड़ा दिहिस ॥

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Kisī ādᵃmī-kē dō laṛᵃkā hatē. Un-mẽ-sē chhōṭē-nē
A-certain man-of two sons were. Them-in-from the-younger-by

bāpū-sē kahasi ki, 'he bāpū, dhan-mẽ-sē jō mōr hissā hōy
the-father-to he-said that, 'O father, wealth-in-from what my share may-be sō hamin dēo.' Tab wā-nē un-kō dhan bāṭ dihis.

that to-me give.' Then him-by them-to wealth having-divided he-gave.

Bahut din nahĩ bītē ki chhōṭā laṛᵃkā sab kuchh jamā
Many days not passed that the-younger son all anything collected

kar-kē dūr dēs chalā-gahis. Wahã bad-māśī-mẽ din khōis, made-having a-far country went-away. There licentiousness-in days he-lost,

apᵃnā dhan uṛā-dehis.
his-own wealth he-squandered.

BHADAURĪ OR TÕWARGAṚHĪ.

The head-quarters of the Bhadāwar Rajputs consist of the country on both sides of the river Chambal, where it forms the northern boundary of the State of Gwalior. Here also, in the Tõwargarh District of Gwalior, are the head-quarters of the Tōmar Rajputs. The language spoken in this tract is known as Bhadaurī or (in Tõwargarh) Tõwargaṛhī. Under whichever name it is known it is the same,—viz. a form of Bundēlī which is considerably mixed with the Braj Bhākhā spoken in Agra. It varies slightly from place to place, being naturally more and more infected with Braj as we go north.

The country in which Bhadaurī is spoken may be described as follows. It is spoken over nearly the whole of the main portion of the Gwalior State. It thus extends over a much larger tract than the Bhadāwar country proper. It runs down the centre of the State from the Chambal to the border of the old Guna Agency, having Braj Bhākhā and Harauṭī to its west, and Pãwārī Bundēlī to its east. To the south it merges into Mālwī. In Agra it is spoken in the south of the district in the tract bordering on the Chambal. In Mainpurī it has a few speakers in the Kharka tract on the banks of the Jamna to the south-west of the District. In Etawah it is spoken in the tract between the Jamna and the Chambal, and across the latter river. The number of speakers is roughly estimated as follows :—

Gwalior	1,000,000
Agra	250,000
Mainpuri	8,000
Etawah	55,000
TOTAL	1,313,000

It will be sufficient to give specimens from Gwalior and Agra. The Bhadaurī of the other two districts does not differ. It may be mentioned that Bhadaurī is not spoken in Jalaun, although the dialect was wrongly entered in the Rough List of Languages spoken in that district. The so-called Bhadaurī of Jalaun is ordinary Bundēlī.

The following account of the dialect is based on the specimens.

The system of pronunciation fluctuates. Au occurs as often as ō, and ai, as ē. In the same sentence we often find the same word spelt both ways, e.g. mārō and mārau. As in the Bundēlī of Jalaun we meet curious changes of other vowels, e.g. bauhat, many, for bahut (cf. Jalaun buhat) ; rehat for rahat, remaining ; kēh for kahi, having said.

In the case of consonants, there is a strong tendency to contraction, as in jāntu, knowing, for jān^{a}tu. This is specially noticeable in the case of the letter r. For instance—

Instead of	we have
chākaran, servants	chākann.
par^{a}dēs, a far country	paddēs.
barisan, years	bassan.
suratī, memory	suttī.
mār^{a}nau, to strike	mānnau.
mār^{a}tu, striking	māttu.
kar^{a}tu, doing	kattu.

In the case of nouns strong forms usually end in au or ō, e.g. sahārau, help. The oblique form as usual ends in ē. As elsewhere in Bundēlī, strong nouns of relationship and some others end in ā, which is not changed in the oblique singular or nominative plural. Thus we have—

Nom. Sing.	Obl. Sing.	Nom. Plur.	Obl. Plur.
lar^{a}kā, a son	lar^{a}kā	lar^{a}kā	lar^{a}kan.
ghōrā, a horse	ghōra	ghōrā	ghōran.

In one instance the oblique form in ē has a plural in ẽ. It is hamārẽ (not hamārē) dō bachchā haĩ, we have two cubs.

The influence of Braj (or perhaps Kanaujī) is noticeable in the optional employment of a weak termination, u, of nouns. Thus jwābu, an answer; māttu or mātta, striking; mattu, dying; kattu, doing; jāntu, knowing.

There is the usual instrumental singular in an, as in bhūkhan, by hunger. The postposition of the accusative-dative is kẽ or kõ. In other respects the declension follows standard Bundēlī, due allowance being made for pronunciation.

In the pronouns, the influence of Braj has brought into use the form hõ or haũ for 'I,' as well as mẽ or maĩ. So also, besides the usual Bundēlī forms (tumārō and tumāō), we have tihārō, meaning 'thy' or 'your.' 'Me' is mōi, corresponding to standard Bundēlī mōē. As in Jalaun, 'he' and 'she' are ba, obl. bā or bã, plural bē, obl. bin. 'This' is ja, ji or jē. Apayē is an oblique plural meaning 'own.'

The word for 'what' is the Braj kahā, obl. kāhē.

In verbs, we have the Braj haũ, I am, and (very common) hō, was. The initial h of the auxiliary verb is often dropped, so that we have forms like khāt-aĩ, they eat; khāti-au, you (fem.) eat; nā-ō, he was not; rēhat-ē, they were living; and dēt-yē (for dēt-ē), they were giving.

There is an interesting survival of an old neuter form in chāhaũ, instead of chāhau, it was wished (by him), i.e. he wished. In other respects the conjugation of the verb shows no divergencies from standard Bundēlī, unless we consider as such manāmẽ for manāwẽ, 'let us celebrate.'

The only other point to note is that ji is often used for the conjunction 'that' after verbs of saying, instead of ki, kē or kaĩ.

[No. 22.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ (BHADAURĪ). (STATE, GWALIOR.)

SPECIMEN I.

काऊ आदमी-कें दै लरका हे । लुहरे लरका-ने अपने बाप-सौं कही दद्दा हमारो हिसा देउ। दोऊ लरकन-कौं हिसा कद-दओ बा-के बाप-ने । फिर लुहरौ लरका अपनो माल ले-गओ और पद्देस चलो-गओ और अन्याउ-में अपनी सिग जमा बहाइ दई । बा-के पास कछू न रहो । वाँ बड़ो अकाल परो और बड़ो तंग-दुखी होन लगो । ठाकुर-कें रहुआ रहन लगो । बा-ने सुअरा खेतन-में चराउन-कौं भेजो । तब बाँ-ने चाहौं कि पेट भरि लेउँ भुस खाइ-कें । काऊ आदमी-ने बा-कौं सहारो नइँ दओ । वाँ-ने सोचो और कही, मेरे बाप-के हिआँ गल्ले आदमी हैं, और सिव कछू खात-पिअत-हैं और कोऊ सूधें अन्न नाहिं खात । हौं भूखन मत्तु हौं । हौं अपने बाप-के हिआँ चलौं और कहौं, हौं तिहारो और पनमेसुर-को बड़ो पापी जनमो हौं । हौं तिहारो लरका कहिबे जोगि नाहिं । मोइ अपनो चाकर राखि लेउ । महाँ-सें चलि-कें ब लरका अपने बाप-के हिआँ आइ-गओ । जब बाप-ने लरका देखो टूरई-तें तब बाप भजो, और लरका ले-कें छाती-सौं लगाइ लओ और पुचकारो । तब लरका-ने कही कक्का हौं तिहारो और पनमेसुर-को बड़ो पापी हौं और तिहारे चाल-चलन-को मो-में कोऊ बात नाइँ । हालइँ बाप-ने अपने चाकन्न-सौं कही जा-कौं घर-तें पोसाकें ल्याओ और हाथ-में मुदरिया और पाँव-में जूती पहराओ । हम तुम सिबरे खाँय और खुसी मनामें । जा लरका-को फिर-कें जनम भओ-है । और खोओ फिर-कें मिलो-है । और सिबन-नें घरकिन-नें बड़ी खुसी मानी ॥

बा खन बा-को बड़ो भैया हार-में हो । जब ब अपने घर-के ढिगाँ पौंहँचि गओ तब अपने आदमी-सौं बुलाइ-कें पूछी जि कहा चौहल-पौहल हुइ-रही-है । बा-ने कही कि तिहारे कका और लुहरे भैया-ने आइ-गये-की खुसी मानी-है । काहे-तें बाप-नें फिर-कें जे लरका आँखिन देखी । जा-पै

कछू दुखिआय-कैं व अपने घर-मैं न गओ। तब बाप-ने आइ-कैं बा-कौं समझाओ। तब जेठे लरका-ने बाप-सौं ज्वाबु दओ। देखौ मुद्दत-तैं तिहारी सेवा हौं करतु-हौं। और कब-हूँ तिहारी बात न डारी। तुम-ने छदाम की कौड़ौं खेलिबे-कौं न दई और चली कहा है जा-सौं हम अपयें संगकिन देते और खुसी मनाउते। जा-ने यौं-हीं धन सिगरौ बरबाद कर-दओ सो लरका तुम-कौं प्यारौ लगौ बाइ लिबाइ लाये और सिबरी सिमार-कौं भेपाचारी-कौं जिमाओ। बाप-नैं जेठे लरका-सौं कही हम तूँ संग रहे-हैं। और जो कछू घर-मैं है धनु सो सिब तेरौ है। और ज लोकचारज मेरौ एसिय राह चली आई-है जी तेरे लुहरे भैया-कौ फिरि-कैं जनम भओ है। खोओ भओ फिरि-कैं आओ-है। जाइ को जान्तु-हो कि आवेगो ॥

[No. 22.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ (BHADAURĪ). (STATE, GWALIOR.)

SPECIMEN I.

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Kāū ādᵃmī-kẽ̃ dwai larᵃkā hē. Luhᵃrē larᵃkā-nē apᵃnē
A-certain man-of two sons were. The-younger son-by his-own bāp-sõ̃ kahī, 'dadā, hamarō hisā dēu.' Dōū larᵃkan-kõ̃ hisā father-to it-was-said, 'father, my share give.' Both the-sons-to shares kad-daau bā-kē bāp-nē. Phir luhᵃrau larᵃkā apᵃnō having-made-were-given their father-by. Then the-younger son his-own māl lē-gaō, aur paddēs chalō-gaō, aur anyāu-mẽ̃ apᵃnī property took, and foreign-country went-away, and bad-living-in his-own sig jamā bahāi-daī. Bā-kē pās kachhū na rahau. Bã̃ all property squandered. Him-of near anything not remained. There baṛau akāl parau, aur baṛau taṅg-dukhī hōn lagau. Ṭhākur-kẽ̃ great famine fell, and very distressed to-be he-began. A-rich-man-to rahuā rahan lagau. Bā-nē suarā khētan-mẽ̃ charāun-kõ̃ bhējau.
a-slave to-live he-began. Him-by swine field-in to-graze he-was-sent.
Tab bã̃-nē chāhaũ ki 'pēṭ bhari-lēũ bhus khāi-kẽ̃.'
Then him-by it-was-desired that 'belly I-may-fill husks having-eaten.'
Kāū ādᵃmī-nē bā-kõ̃ sahārau naĩ daau. Bã̃-nē sōchau aur Any man-by him-to help not was-given. Him-by it-was-thought and kahau, 'mērē bāp-kē hĩ̃ã̄ gallē ādᵃmī haĩ, aur sib kachhū it-was-said, 'my father-of here many men are, and all something khāt piat-haĩ, aur kōū sūdhẽ̃ ann nāhĩ khāt. Haũ bhūkhan eating drinking-are, and some moreover food not eat. I by-hunger mattu haũ. Hõ̃ apᵃnē bāp-kē hĩ̃ã̄ chalaũ aur kahaũ, "hõ̃ perishing am. I my-own father-of here go and say, "I tihārō aur Panᵃmēsur-kau baṛau pāpī janᵃmō haũ; hõ̃ tihārō larᵃkā of-thee and God-of great sinner born am; I thy son kahibē jōgi nāhĩ; mōi apᵃnō chākar rākhi-lēu."' Mahã̃-sẽ̃ to-be-called fit am-not; me thy-own servant keep."' Thence chali-kẽ̃ ba larᵃkā apᵃnē bāp-kē hĩ̃ã̄ āi-gaau. Jab bāp-nē started-having that boy his-own father-of here arrived. When the-father-by lar^{a}kā dēkhau dūraī-tẽ̃, tab bāp bhajau, aur lar^{a}kā lē-kẽ̃ son was-seen distance-from, then the-father ran, and son taken-having chhātī-sõ̃ lagāi-laō, aur puch^{a}kārō. Tab lar^{a}kā-nē kahī, the-breast-to he-applied, and he-was-kissed. Then the-son-by it-was-said,

'kakkā, hõ̃ tihārō aur Pan^{a}mēsur-kau baṛau pāpī haũ; aur tihārē
'father, I of-thee and God-of great sinner am; and thy chāl-chalan-kau mō-mẽ̃ kōū bāt nāĩ.' Hālaĩ conduct-of me-in any thing (in-any-respect) is-not.' Thereupon bāp-nē ap^{a}nē chākann-saũ kahī, 'jā-kaũ ghar-tẽ̃ the-father-by his-own servants-to it-was-said, 'this(-person)-for the-house-from pōsākaĩ lyāō, aur hāth-mẽ̃ mudariyā aur pā̃w-mẽ̃ jūtī paharāau; clothes bring, and hand-in a-ring and feet-in shoes put;
ham tum sib^{a}rē khā̃y aur khusī manāmẽ̃. Jā lar^{a}kā-kau we (and-)you all-together eat and merriment let-make. This son-of phir-kẽ̃ janam bhaau-hai; aur khōau, phir-kẽ̃ milau-hai.' Aur siban-nẽ̃ again birth become-has; and was-lost, again obtained-is.' And all-by ghar^{a}kin-nẽ̃ baṛī khusī mānī.
the-members-of-the-family-by great pleasure was-enjoyed.

Bā-khan bā-kau baṛau bhaiyā hār-mẽ̃ hō. Jab ba ap^{a}nē
At-that-time his elder brother field-in was. When he his-own ghar-kē ḍhigã̃ põhãchi gaau, tab ap^{a}nē ād^{a}mī-sõ̃ bulāi-kẽ̃ house-of near arrived-having went, then his-own man-from called-having pūchhī ji, 'kahā chauhal-bauhal hui-rahī-hai?' Bā-nē kahī it-was-asked that, 'what merry-making is-going-on?' Him-by it-was-said ki, 'tihārē kakā aur luh^{a}rē bhaiyā-nē āi-gayē-kī khusī mānī-hai.
that, 'thy father and younger brother-by arrival-of pleasure is-being-enjoyed.
Kāhē-tẽ̃ bāp-nẽ̃ phir-kẽ̃ jē lar^{a}kā ã̃khin dēkhau.' Jā-pai kachhū Because father-by again this son eyes-with was-seen.' This-on somewhat dukhiāy-kẽ̃ ba ap^{a}nē ghar-mẽ̃ na gaau. Tab bāp-nẽ̃ āi-kẽ̃ sorry-being he his-own house-in not went. Then the-father-by come-having bā-kaũ sam^{a}jhāau. Tab jēṭhē lar^{a}kā-nẽ̃ bāp-saũ jwābu daau, him-to it-was-remonstrated. Then the-elder son-by father-to reply was-given,
'dēkhau, muddat-tẽ̃ tihārī sēwā haũ kattu-haũ, aur kab^{a}-hũ̃ tihārī bāt
'see, long-since thy service I doing-am, and ever-even thy word na ḍārī. Tum-nẽ̃ chhadām-kī kauṛī khēlibē-kõ̃ na daĩ, aur not avoided. Thee-by a-chhadām[1]-of cowries sporting-for not were-given, and chalī kahā-hai, jā-sõ̃ ham ap^{a}yẽ̃ saṅg^{a}kin dētē aur
(?) it-has-been-said,[2] which-with I my-own to-friends I-might-have-given and

[1] A chhadām is a denomination of money,=six dāms or six twenty-fifths of a pice=about sixteen cowries or a quarter of a farthing.

[2] I am unable to interpret chalī kahā-hai. Kahā may mean either 'what' or 'said.' Instead of chalī, we should expect some word like chhērī, a goat.

khusī manāutē. Jā-nē yõ-hĩ dhan sigªrau barªbād pleasure might-have-enjoyed. Whom-by thus-even wealth all squandered kar-daau, sō larªkā tum-kõ pyārau lagau, bāi libāi-lāyē, aur has-been-made, that son thee-to beloved became, him (you-)brought, and sibªrī simār-kaũ bhēpāchārī-kaũ jimāau.' Bāp-nẽ the-entire collection-for brotherhood-for a-feast-has-been-made.' The-father-by jēṭhē larªkā-sõ kahī, 'ham tũ-saṅg rahē-haĩ; aur jō-kachhū the-elder son-to it-was-said, 'I thee-with living-am; and whatever ghar-mẽ hai dhanu sō sib tērau hai; aur ja lōk-chāraj mērau house-in is wealth that all thine is; and this practice mine ēsiya rāh chalī-āī-hai, jē tērē luhªrē bhaiyā-kau phiri-kaĩ (in-)this-kind-of path going-on-is, that thy younger brother-of again janam bhaau-hai; khōau-bhaau, phiri-kẽ āau-hai; jāi kō jāntubirth become-has; lost-became, again come-has; come-along, who knowing hō ki āwēgō?'
was that he-would-come?'

[No. 23.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ (BHADAURĪ). (STATE, GWALIOR.)

SPECIMEN II.

कहूँ एक गौहदुआ और गौहदुनियाँ रेहत-ए । एक दिना बिन दोउन-कौं खूब पिआस लगी । तब गौहदुनियाँ-ने गौहदुआ-सौं कही चलो हम तुम पानी पियें । तुम कोऊ कहानी केह जान्त-हो के नाहीं । बहाँ एक चीते-की भटार है । जो तुम कहानी कहि जान्त-हौ तौ चीते-की भटार-पै पानी मिलेगौ । बौहत पिआस लग-रही-है । बिन दोउन-ने हालइँ चल-दओ और पानी-के ठौर पौंहचे । तब गौहदुनियाँ बोली तुम कहानी जान्त-हो कि नाहीं । और चीते-ने उन दोउन-कौं देखि लओ । तब गौहदुआ-ने कही कि मोहि देह-की सुत्ति कछू नाइँ रही । गौहदुनियाँ-ने कही कि तौ हिंआँ काहे-कौं ठाढ़े-हौ पानी पी-लेउ और अपने पुरखा काका-सौं राम राम करो । गौहदुआ पानी पिअन लग-गओ । जब पानी पी-कें सुत्तो हो-गओ तब कलानो कका राम राम । फिर गौहदुनियाँ-तें लौट-कें कही कि तू-ऊँ पानी पी-लै और तू-ऊँ राम राम कर-लै । पानी पी-कैं ब-ऊ सुत्ती हो-गई । तब पुरखा-सौं कही मेरे घर चलौ । हमारें दो बच्चा हैं । जे गौहदुआ कहत-है बच्चा मेरे हैं । बे बच्चा हौं कहति-हौं कि मेरे हैं । सो तुम चलौ और सुझाइ देउ । तब चीते-ने अपने मन-में जान-लई कि मेरौ काम बन गओ । चारौं खाइ लैहौं । मेरौ काम बन-जैहै । बहाँ-सें चले अपने ठौर-पै आये बे सिगरे । तब गौहदुनियाँ गौहदुआ-सें बोली लरकन-कौं काका-के ढिगाँ लिबाय-लाउ । सो बे समझ-कें तैसो कर-दें । गौहदुआ डरपन-के मारें भीतर-से बाहर-कौं मौंह न दिखाओ । तब गौहदुनियाँ-ने कही कि बच्चन-कौं हौं ल्याउति-हौं । फिर ब-ऊ भटार-में गुलि गई । चीतो अकेलौ बाहर ठाढ़ो रहि गओ । गौहदुनियाँ-ने मसक-कें उभक-कें कही पुरखा हम दोऊ जने आपुस-में राजी हुइ गये । एक बा-ने ले-लओ । एक मैं-ने ले-लओ । चीतो लौटो । अपनी भटार-कौं चलौ गओ । बे दोऊ अपने बच गये । चीते-सौं कहि सुनि-कें पानी पी आये ॥

[No. 23.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ (BHADAURĪ). (STATE, GWALIOR.)

SPECIMEN II.

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Kahũ ēk gauh^{a}duā aur gauh^{a}duniyã rēhat-ē. Ēk dinā bin Certain one jackal and a-she-jackal living-were. One day those dōun-kõ khūb piās lagī. Tab gauh^{a}duniyã-nē gauh^{a}duā-sõ two-to very-great thirst was-felt. Then the-she-jackal-by the-jackal-to kahī, 'chalō, ham tum pānī piyẽ; tum kōū kahānī kēh it-was-said, 'come, I (and-)you water let-drink; you any story to-tell jānt-hō kē nāhĩ? Bahã ēk chītē-kī bhaṭār hai. Jō tum kahānī know or not? There one leopard-of den is. If thou a-story kahi jānt-hau, tau chītē-kī bhaṭār-pai pānī milēgau; bauhat to-tell dost-know, then the-leopard-of den-near water will-be-got; very-great piās lag-rahī-hai.' Bin dōun-nē hālaĩ chal-daau, aur pānī-kē thirst is-being-felt.' Those two-by thereupon it-was-gone, and water-of ṭhaur pauh^{a}chē. Tab gauh^{a}duniyã bōlī, 'tum kahānī jānt-hō ki place they-arrived-at. Then the-she-jackal said, 'you a-story knowing-are or nāhĩ?' Aur chītē-nē un dōun-kaũ dēkhi-laau. Tab gauh^{a}duā-nē not?' And the-leopard-by those two-to it-was-seen. Then the-jackal-by kahī ki, 'mōhi dēh-kī sutti kachhū nāĩ rahī.'
it-was-said that, 'my body-of sense any not (has-)remained.'
Gauh^{a}duniyã-nē kahī ki, 'tau hĩã kāhē-kaũ ṭhāṛhē-hau? Pānī
The-she-jackal-by it-was-said that, 'you here why-for standing-are? Water pī-lēu, aur ap^{a}nē pur^{a}khā kākā-sõ rām-rām karō.'
drink, and your-own venerable uncle-to Rām-Rām(=obeisance) do.'
Gauh^{a}duā pānī pian lag-gaau. Jab pānī pī-kẽ suttō
The-jackal water to-drink began. When water having-drunk refreshed hau-gaau, tab kalānō, 'kakā, rām-rām.' Phir gauh^{a}duniyã-tẽ became, then prosperity-was-wished, 'uncle, Rām-Rām.' Then the-she-jackal-to lauṭ-kẽ kahī ki, 'tū-ũ pānī pī-lai, aur tū-ũ having-returned it-was-said that, 'you-also water drink, and you-also Rām-Rām kar-lai.' Pānī pī-kaĩ ba-ū suttī hō-gaī. Tab obeisance make.' Water having-drunk she-also refreshed became. Then pur^{a}khā-sõ̃ kahī, 'mērē ghar chalau. Hamārẽ̃ dō bachchā the-venerable-one-to it-was-said, 'my house-to come. Of-us two young-ones haĩ, jē gauh^{a}duā kahat-hai, "bachchā mērē haĩ;" bē bachchā, are, this jackal saying-is, "the-young-ones mine are;" those young-ones, hõ̃ kah^{a}tī-hõ̃ ki, "mērē haĩ." Sō tum chalau aur sujhāi-dēu.'

I saying-am that, "mine are." Therefore you come and settle(-the-dispute).'
Tab chītē-nē ap^{a}nē man-mẽ̃ jān-laī ki, 'mērau kām
Then the-leopard-by his-own mind-in it-was-conjectured that, 'my business ban-gaau, chārõ̃ khāi-laihõ̃; mērau kām ban-jaihai.' Bahã̃-sẽ̃ is-done, all-the-four I-shall-eat-up; my business will-be-done.' There-from chalē, ap^{a}nē ṭhaur-pai āyē bē sig^{a}rē. Tab gauh^{a}duniyã̃ they-started, their-own place-to came those all. Then the-she-jackal gauh^{a}duā-sẽ̃ bōlī, 'lar^{a}kan-kaũ kākā-kē ḍhigã̃ libāy-lāu, sō bē the-jackal-to said, 'the-young-ones uncle-of near bring, so he samajh-kẽ̃ taisō kar-dẽ̃.' Gauh^{a}duā ḍar-pan-kē mārẽ̃ understood-having like-that does.' The-jackal(-by) fear-of through bhītar-sē bāhar-kaũ mõ̃h na dikhāō. Tab gauh^{a}duniyã̃-nē kahī inside-from outside-to face not was-showed. Then the-she-jackal-by it-was-said ki, 'bachchan-kõ̃ hõ̃ lyāuti-hõ̃.' Phir ba-ū bhaṭār-mẽ̃ guli-gaī.
that, 'the-young-ones I fetching-am.' Then she den-in disappeared.
Chītō akēlau bahar ṭhāṛhō rahi-gaau. Gauh^{a}duniyã̃-nē masak-kẽ̃-ujhak-kẽ̃
The-leopard alone outside standing remained. The-she-jackal-by peeped-out-having kahī, 'pur^{a}khā, ham dōū-janē āpus-mẽ̃ rājī it-was-said, 'O-venerable-one, we two-individuals between-ourselves reconciled hui-gayē; ēk bā-nē lē-laau, ēk maĩ-nē lē-laau.' Chītō became; one him-by was-taken, one me-by was-taken.' The-leopard lauṭō, ap^{a}nī bhaṭār-kõ̃ chalau-gaau. Bē dōū ap^{a}nē bach-gayē.
returned, and-his-own den-to went-away. Those two themselves were-saved.
Chītē-sõ̃ kahi-suni-kẽ̃ pānī pī āyē.
The-leopard-with conversed-having water having-drunk came.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

Once upon a time there was a jackal and his mate. One day they felt thirsty, and the she-jackal said to the jackal, 'come, let us drink water. Do you know any stories or not? There is a leopard's den, and if you know any stories, we will drink there. I am dying of thirst.' So they went on to the watering-place, and when they got there the she-jackal said, 'do you know any stories or not?' As she said this the leopard caught sight of both of them. Then said the jackal, 'I have forgotten everything.' Then said the she-jackal, 'why are you standing there? Take a drink and then make obeisance to our worthy uncle.' So the jackal drank, and when he was refreshed he turned to the leopard and politely wished him good morning. Then he turned to the she-jackal and said, 'you too take a drink, and then do you too make obeisance to him.' As soon as she was refreshed she said to the leopard, 'worthy uncle, come to our house. We have two cubs. This jackal says they are his, and I say they are mine. So come along and settle the dispute.' The leopard said to himself, 'here are two, and there are two cubs more. I shall eat them all up at once. This is just the thing that suits me.' So the three made off for the jackal's home. When they got there, the she-jackal said to the jackal, 'go inside and drag them out before the worthy uncle.' The jackal understood what her device was and went in, but out of fear of the leopard did not come out again. Then said the she-jackal, 'I'll go and bring the cubs myself,' and she also slipped inside, leaving the leopard standing alone by the entrance. When they were both safe at home, the she-jackal peeped out of her hole and said, 'worthy uncle, we have made up our dispute. He has taken one and I have taken the other.' So the leopard could only go back to his own den; while the jackals were safe and sound, having successfully got their drink by engaging the leopard in talk.

The following short folk-tale is in the Bhadaurī of the District of Agra. It is almost the same as that of Gwalior. The Braj termination u is more common. Note the frequency with which contraction occurs. We have pajjā for par^{a}jā or prajā, subjects; khachchu for kharch, expenditure; pattu for par^{a}tu, falling; and jātō for jāt-tō, was going. Note also the Braj kũ, the termination of the accusative-dative, and the Kanauji form thō, was.

[No. 24.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ (BHADAURĪ). (DISTRICT, AGRA.)

एक सूर्ज नारायनु-कौ महतारी और घरबारी रहें। वे आधौ पज्जा और आधौ घर-कौ खच्चु देत-ये। सो बहू और महतारी-कौ खच्चु-तें पूरौ ना-ओ पत्तु और पज्जा-कौ खच्चु-तें पूरौ परौ-जातो। तब सूर्ज नारायनु-की घरबारी-ने सासु-सौं कही कै तुम सूर्ज नारायनु-पै जाऊ सो तुम सूर्ज नारायनु अपने बेटा-तें कहो इतनौ हम-कूँ देऊ ता-सौं हमारौ उदर भरे। तब सूर्ज नारायनु-ने अपनी महतारी-तें पूछी कै तुम कैसें करि-कें खाति-औ। तब उन-ने कही कै सासु बहू-की चोरी और बहू सासु-की चोरी ऐसें करि-कें खात-ऐं। तब उनि-की बहू चली गई सासु-के पीछें कौरे-सौं जाइ ठाड़ी भई। महतारी ढोटा बतराने फिरि सुनि-कें चली-आई। बिन-ने घरु आइ-कें लीपो पोतो रोटी बनाई। खूबु झक्क दोनौं सासु बहू-ने एक ठौर बैठि-कें एक थार-में जेंइँ रोटी खूबु नीकी तरियाँ-तें। सूर्ज नारायनु-कें खूबु बरकति भई।

सूर्ज नारायनु अपनी अस्त्री-पास आये सूर्ज नारायनु चोरी-चोरा काऊ पज्जा-ने जानी नाहीं। फिरी सूर्ज नारायनु-की अस्त्री-कौं अधानु रहि-गयो। तब उन-के पैदा भयौ पुत्र नवैं महीना। पज्जा-में चबाउ भ्रौ। फिरि सूर्ज नारायनु अपने देस-कौं नीकी तरियाँ-सौं आये। लाऊ लसकर लै-कें आये। तब उन-कौ रथु गैल-में अटकि गयौ। तब हम-ने कही कै सूर्ज नारायनु-कौ जाईदा पुत्र होयगौ तो बा-के कूएँ तें रथु चलि-होय। तब

हमारे तुमारे जानें तो सूर्ज नारायनु-कौ नाहीं थो। सूर्ज नारायनु अपने मन-में जानत-ए कै हमारौ बेटा-है। तब बेटा घर-तें आऔ। रथु पाँय-के अगूठा-तें छूइ दऔ। रथु चलि-उठौ। अपने घर-कौं चलौ-आऔ। तब अपने घर आइ पोहौंचौ। खूबु नीकौ तरियाँ-तें आनंदु भऔ। खूबु भजनु भऔ॥

[No. 24.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ (BHADAURĪ). (DISTRICT, AGRA.)

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ēk Sūrj-Nārāyanu-kī mahªtārī aur ghar-bārī rahẽ.
One Sūrj-Nārāyan-(the-Sun-God)-of mother and wife were.

Bē ādhau pajjā auru ādhau ghar-kau khachchu dēt-yē.
They (he) half the-subjects and half house-of expenditure giving-was.

Sō bahū aura mahªtārī-kau khachchu-tẽ pūrau nā-
But the-daughter-in-law and the-mother-of expenditure-from sufficiency notō pattu, aur pajjā-kau khachchu-tẽ pūrau parau-jātō.

was falling, and subjects-of expenditure-from sufficiency fallen-going-was.

Tab Sūrj-Nārāyanu-kī ghar-bārī-nē sāsu-sõ kahī kai, 'tum
Then the-Sun-God-of the-wife-by mother-in-law-to it-was-said that, 'you

Sūrj-Nārāyanu-pai jāū, sō tum Sūrj-Nārāyanu apªnē bēṭā-tẽ kahō, the-Sun-God-to go, then you the-Sun-God your-own son-to say,

"itªnau ham-kũ dēu, tā-sõ hamārau udar bharē."' Tab
"so-much us-to give, that-from our bellies may-be-filled."' Then

Sūrj-Nārāyanu-nē apªnī mahªtārī-tẽ pūchhī kai, 'tum kaisẽ karithe-Sun-God-by his-own mother-from it-was-asked that, 'you how donekẽ khāti-au?' Tab un-nē kahī kai, 'sāsu having eating-are?' Then her-by it-was-said that, 'the mother-in-law bahū-kī chōrī, aur bahū sāsu-kī chōrī, the-daughter-in-law-of theft, and the-daughter-in-law the-mother-in-law-of theft, aisẽ kari-kẽ khāt-aĩ.' Tab uni-kī bahū chalī-gaī.

so done-having eating-we-are.' Then her daughter-in-law went-away.

Sāsu-kē pīchhẽ kaurē-saũ jāi ṭhāṛī-bhaī. Mahªtārī
The-mother-in-law-of behind a-corner-by going standing-became. The-mother ḍhōṭā batªrānē. Phiri suni-kẽ chalī-āī. Bin-nē gharu the-son talked-together. Then heard-having she-came-away. Them-by house āi-kẽ līpō-pōtō, rōṭī banāī. Khūbu jhakk come-having plastering-etcetera-was-done, bread was-prepared. Very shining dōnõ sāsu bahū-nē ēk ṭhaur baiṭhi-kẽ both the-mother-in-law the-daughter-in-law-by one place-in sat-having ēk thār-mẽ jẽĩ rōṭī khūbu nīkī tariyã̄-tẽ. Sūrj-Nārāyanu-kẽ̃ one dish-in was-eaten the-bread very good way-in. The-Sun-God-to khūbu bar^{a}kati bhaī.

much blessing became.

Sūrj-Nārāyanu ap^{a}nī astrī pās āyē. Sūrj-Nārāyanu chōrī-chōrā
The-Sun-God his-own wife-of near came. The-Sun-God secretly kāū pajjā-nē jānī nāhĩ. Phiri Sūrj-Nārāyanu-kī astrī-kõ ādhānu any subject-by it-was-known not. Then the-Sun-God-of wife-to pregnancy rahi-gayō. Tab un-kē paidā bhayau putra nabaĩ mahīnā. Pajjā-occurred. Then her-of born became son (in-)ninth month. The-subjects-mẽ chabāu bhaau. Phiri Sūrj-Nārāyanu ap^{a}nē dēs-kaŭ nīkī among scandal occurred. Then the-Sun-God his-own country-to good tariyã̄-sõ āyē. Lāu las^{a}kar lai-kẽ̃ āyē. Tab un-kau rathu way-in came. Banner army taken-having he-came. Then his chariot gail-mẽ aṭaki-gaau. Tab ham-nē kahī kai, 'Sūrj-Nārāyanu-kau way-in stuck-went. Then us-by it-was-said that, 'the-Sun-God-of jāīdā putra hōy^{a}gau, tau bā-kē chhuaĩ-tẽ̃ rathu chali-hōy.'
begotten son he-will-be, then his touching-by the-chariot will-go.'
Tab hamārē-tumārē jānẽ̃ tō Sūrj-Nārāyanu-kau nāhĩ thō.
Then our-your-in knowledge to-be-sure the-Sun-God-of not he-was.
Sūrj-Nārāyanu ap^{a}nē man-mẽ jānat-ē kai, 'hamārau bēṭā hai.'
The-Sun-God his-own mind-in knowing-was that, 'my son he-is.'
Tab bēṭā ghar-tẽ̃ āau; rathu pãy-kē ãgūṭhā-tẽ̃ chhūi-daau.
Then the-son house-from came; the-chariot foot-of finger-with was-touched.
Rathu chali-uṭhau. Ap^{a}nē ghar-kaũ chalaŭ-āau. Tab ap^{a}ne
The-chariot began-to-move. His-own house-to he-came-away. Then his-own ghar āi-pohõchau. Khūbu nīkī tariyã̄-tẽ̃ ānandu bhaau. Khūbu house he-arrived. Very good way-in rejoicings took-place. Well bhajanu bhaau.
hymn-singing took-place.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

Sūraj Nārāyan, the Sun-God, had a mother and a wife. He used to give half his money to his subjects and half for his household expenditure. What he gave was not enough for the expenses of his mother and her daughter-in-law, but was enough for the expenses of his subjects. So the wife said to the mother, 'go to your son, the Sun-God, and say, "give us enough to fill our bellies."' Then the Sun-God asked his mother, 'how do you eat?' She replied, 'the mother-in-law has to steal from the daughter-in-law, and the daughter-in-law has to steal from the mother-in-law. That is the way we eat.' The wife had followed her mother-in-law, and stood in a corner behind her while she and her son talked together. When she had heard what they said she went away. Then the two went home. They plastered the fireplace in order to cook, baked some bread, and, to their hearts' content, sat together, and ate bread out of the same dish till they were satisfied. Then they blessed the Sun-God.[1]

The Sun-God visited his wife. He did it quite secretly. None of his subjects knew about it. Then his wife became pregnant, and in the ninth month a son was born. There was a scandal about this amongst his subjects. Then the Sun-God came home with great pomp. He came with a fully equipped army. His chariot stuck in the way. Then we all said, 'if this son has been begotten by the Sun-God, the chariot will move when he touches it.' In your and my opinion he was not the Sun-God's child. But the Sun-God knew in his heart that the boy was his son. The son came out of the house. He touched the chariot with his toe and it began to move. Then the Sun-God arrived at his own house. Great rejoicings took place, and loudly were hymns sung.

---

[1] Apparently the deity had increased the house-keeping allowance, but the story does not say so in so many words.

THE BROKEN DIALECTS OF THE SOUTH.

We have seen that Standard Bundēlī is spoken in the districts of Saugor and Damoh of the Central Provinces, which lie on the Vindhyan table-land. South of them lies the Narbada Valley with its offshoots, including the districts of Mandla, Jabalpur, Narsinghpur, Hoshangabad and a part of Nimar. Mandla speaks Eastern Hindī, and so does Jabalpur, although the language of the latter district gradually merges into Bundēlī as we go westwards. Narsinghpur and the greater part of Hoshangabad speak standard Bundēlī, but the rest of Hoshangabad speaks Malvī and the part of Nimar, Nimāḍi. South of the Narbada Valley lies the Satpura table-land, including the districts (going from east to west) of Balaghat, Seoni, Chhindwara, and Betul. Balaghat speaks, in the main, a form of Marāṭhī and a number of broken dialects described under the head of Eastern Hindī (Vol. VI, pp. 174 ff.) which are mixtures of Baghēlī and the former language. The members of the Lōdhī tribe in that district, however, speak a mixture of Bundēlī and Marāṭhī, which is dealt with here. Seoni, like Narsinghpur to its north-west, speaks standard Bundēlī. Chhindwara, which is linguistically separated from the Bundēlī of Hoshangabad by the Satpura range in which the languages are Gōṇḍī and Kūrkū, has a broken form of Bundēlī in the centre of the district, and Marāṭhī in the south. There is no one standard dialect for the whole of central Chhindwara; each tribe seems to have a slightly varying form of speech, but they all closely resemble each other. Besides possessing a few local peculiarities, the Bundēlī patois of Chhindwara is mainly remarkable for the large quantity of Hindōstānī words and idioms with which it is interlarded. West of Chhindwara lies Betul, of which the main dialects are a corrupt Mālwī and Marāṭhī.

South of the Satpura table-land lies the great Nagpur plain, of which the language is Marāṭhī. In the district of Nagpur, however, a number of tribes scattered over the whole area use a language which is locally known as 'Hindī.' An examination of the specimens which I have received shows that it is a broken mixture of Bundēlī and Marāṭhī.

Finally, some members of the Kōshṭī tribe in Chhindwara, Chanda, Bhandara, and Berar and of the Kumbhār tribe in Chhindwara and Buldana, speak a dialect very similar to Nagpur 'Hindī.'

We thus get the following list of broken dialects of the south:—

Lōdhī (Balaghat)		18,600
Chindwara, Bundēlī	145,500
„ Kōshṭī	3,242
„ Kumbhārī	4,400
		153,142
'Hindī' of Nagpur		105,900
Other Kōshṭī Dialects of the Central Provinces		8,800
Kōshṭī of Berar		2,650
Kumbhārī of Buldana		480
TOTAL		289,572

THE BROKEN DIALECT OF THE BALAGHAT LŌDHĪS.

I have said above that Seoni is the south-eastern limit of Bundēlī. This must be taken with the reservation that a broken patois of Bundēlī is found in Balaghat, a district still further to the south-east.

In Balaghat there are three broken dialects spoken by cultivators who have immigrated into the district during the past few decades. These are Marārī, Põwārī, and Lōdhī. The first two have already been dealt with under the head of Eastern Hindī (Vol. VI, pp. 174 ff.). The Lōdhī dialect is spoken by about 18,600 people of that caste scattered over the west and centre of the district who have come originally from the country to the north. They speak a broken jargon which is a mixture of Hindōstānī, Dakhinī Hindōstānī, Marāṭhī, Baghēlī, and Bundēlī. Judging from the specimens which I have seen, Lōdhī is mainly based on the last mentioned dialect. I therefore class it here.

It would be a waste of time and paper to give complete specimens of this mixed jargon. The first few lines of the Parable of the Prodigal Son will suffice. We have fragments of all the dialects mentioned above in this short passage. For instance, thē and mērā are Hindōstānī, mērē-kō is Dakhinī, apᵉlī, own, is Marāṭhī, ō, 'that,' is Baghēlī, and chukō, paṛyō, gayō are Bundēlī.

[No. 25.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ (LŌDHĪ BROKEN DIALECT). (DISTRICT, BALAGHAT.)

एक आदमी-ख दो लड़का थे । ओ-मैं-से छोटा-ने बाप-से कहा हे बाप सम्पत-मैं जो मेरा हिस्सा हो सो मेरे-को दे-देव । तब ओ-ने अपली सम्पत बाँट दीन्ही । भवत दीन नहीं बीते छोटा लड़का सब एकुट्ठा कर-खु दूर देस चलि गयो और वाहाँ लुचपन-माँ दीन गुमाते हुए अपली सम्पत उड़ाय दीन्ही । जब वह सब उड़ाय चुको तब वो देस-मैं बड़ो अङ्काल पड्यो और ओ देस-माँ जा-कु कङ्गाल भय गयो ॥

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ēk ādᵃmī-kha dō laṛᵃkā thē. Ō-mẽ̃-sē chhōṭā-nē
One man-of two sons were. Them-in-from the-younger-by bāp-sē kahā, 'hē bāp, sampat-mẽ̃ jō mērā hissā hō the-father-to it-was-said, 'O father, property-in what my share may-be sō mērē-kō dē-dēw.' Tab ō-nē apᵃlī sampat bãṭ-dīnhī.

that me-to give-away.' Then him-by his-own fortune was-divided.

Bhawat din nahĩ bītē chhōṭā laṛᵃkā sab ekuṭṭhā kar-khu
Many days not passed the-younger son all together made-having dūr dēs chali-gayō, aur wāhã̃ luchᵃpan-mã̃ dīn gumātē-huē distant country(-to) went-away, and there riotous-living-in days wasting apᵃlī sampat uṛāy-dīnhī. Jab wah sab uṛāy-chukō, tab his-own fortune was-wasted-away. When he all spending-finished, then bō dēs-mẽ̃ baṛō aṅkāl paṛyō aur ō dēs-mẽ̃ jā-ku kaṅgāl that country-in great famine fell and that country-in going indigent bhay-gayō.

he-became.

DIALECTS OF CENTRAL CHHINDWARA.

To the west of Seoni lies Chhindwara. This District consists of two portions, a northern and a southern. The northern, or Bālāghāṭ tract (distinct from the Balaghat district), consists of the hill country above the slopes of the Satpura Mountains, and the southern, or Zērghāṭ of the tract of lowland beneath them. The language of the Zērghāṭ is Marāṭhī. The Bālāghāṭ is a series of high table-lands, rising as we go north to the Mahadeo Hills. The languages spoken in these Hills do not concern us at present. They are spoken by Gōṇḍs and Kūrkūs. Between them and the Zērghāṭ, i.e. in the central part of the district, the language is a corrupt Bundēlī.

At least eight different dialects, called respectively Baghēlī, Bundēlī, Kumbhārī, Gāolī, Rāghōbansī, Kirārī, Kōshṭī, and Pōwārī, were originally returned as spoken in Central Chhindwara. A reference to the specimens of what is called 'Baghēlī' shows that it is not Baghēlī at all, and that it scarcely differs from what is reported as Bundēlī. There are only a few very minor variations. As for Kumbhārī, the Kumbhārs, or Potters, of Chhindwara are bilingual,—at least some of the specimens of their language are in the ordinary Bundēlī of the district, and others are in Marāṭhī. Another explanation may be that some of them speak one language and some the other. For want of better information, I have classed the Kumbhārī spoken in Chhindwara under Bundēlī. At the same time, a very similar form of Kumbhārī, also based on Bundēlī, is spoken in Buldana in Berar, and hence the Kumbhār dialects as a whole are considered together at the end of this group.

From the account originally given of Gāolī, Rāghōbansī, and Kirārī, it was at the time concluded that they were most probably forms of Mālwī. An examination of the specimens since obtained will show that they are all merely impure Bundēlī. Again, the 3,242 speakers of the Kōshṭī dialects, which are popularly believed to be a form of Marāṭhī, turn out to be speakers of mongrel mixtures of that language with Bundēlī, the latter being the basis. Finally, 3,000 Pōwārs were originally reported as speaking a special dialect in Chhindwara. Further enquiry shows that they have no special dialect, but that they speak the ordinary Bundēlī of the District.

We thus get the following figures for the Bundēlī spoken in Chhindwara :—

Ordinary Bundēlī of the District, viz. :—

'Baghēlī' (so-called)	35,000
Bundēlī	83,500
Pōwārī	3,000
	———	121,500
Gāolī, Rāghōbansī, Kirārī, say		24,000
Kōshṭī		3,242
Kumbhārī		4,400
	TOTAL	153,142

The last five will be dealt with subsequently. I now proceed to consider the first three together, as being really one dialect. It is spoken by 121,500 people.

The dialect spoken in central Chhindwara varies from place to place and according to the castes of the people who use it. Besides having peculiarities of its own, the dialect is everywhere freely mixed with ordinary Hindōstānī. This is no doubt due to the fact that a large portion of the Aryan population claims to have come from Northern India. The mixture is a purely mechanical one. In one sentence we will find a Hindōstānī expression, and, in the next, the same idea expressed by a Bundēlī one. For instance, the agent case of the third personal pronoun is sometimes the Hindōstānī us-nē, and sometimes the local Bundēlī ō-nē or wō-nē. On the other hand, we find the suffix kō sometimes used, as in Hindōstānī, for the accusative-dative (as in rahan-kō chalō-gaō, he went to live), and sometimes, as in Bundēlī, for the genitive (as in tērō aur Bhag^{a}wān-kō kasūrwār, a sinner of (i.e. before) thee and God). In the specimen which follows there are numerous instances of nouns declined after the Hindōstānī method, and further attention will not be drawn to them.

The following peculiarities which are not due to Hindōstānī occur in the various Chhindwārā dialects. They have been collected from a number of different sources, and most (but not all) of them will be found in the specimen given below.

Nouns.—For the sign of the accusative-dative (besides the Hindōstānī kō) khw̃, corresponding to the pure Bundēlī khõ, occurs; thus, mē-khw̃, to me. We also find kha and khē. For the ablative-instrumental both sē and sa occur.

In the pronouns, the oblique forms of maĩ, I; taĩ, thou; and jō, this or who, are mē (not mō); tē (not tō); and jē (not jā) respectively. Thus, mē-khw̃, to me; jē-khw̃, accusative, which.

The pronoun of the third person is ō or wō (not bō), and its oblique form (besides the Hindōstānī one) is not bā but ō, wō, or uwō. The last form is common amongst Kurmīs.

All these pronouns form a dative in hē; thus, mēhē, to me; tēhē, to thee; jēhē, to whom, to this; ōhē, to him, to that. Sometimes the final vowel is nasalized, as in mēhẽ. This form corresponds to the Bundēlī mōē, etc.

In verbs, the past tense of the verb substantive is usually hatō, but we also have hathō (especially among Kurmīs) (compare Dakhinī Hindōstānī athā) and thō (a Bundēlī or Kanaujī corruption of the Hindōstānī thā). We may note the usual Bundēlī fondness for contractions, as in kahw̃, for kah^{a}hw̃, I will say. The past tense of dēn, to give, is daō or dēō. So lēn, to take.

We may also note that the word for '(he or she) said' is kahō, not the feminine kahī, as in standard Bundēlī.

In other respects these dialects closely follow ordinary Bundēlī.

The following extract from a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son will illustrate most of these peculiarities. I am indebted for it to Mr. L. N. Chowdhri. It is in the dialect used by women, and is an excellent example of the general language of the whole of central Chhindwara.

DIALECTS OF CENTRAL CHHINDWARA.

To the west of Seoni lies Chhindwara. This District consists of two portions, a northern and a southern. The northern, or Bālāghāṭ tract (distinct from the Balaghat district), consists of the hill country above the slopes of the Satpura Mountains, and the southern, or Zērghāṭ of the tract of lowland beneath them. The language of the Zērghāṭ is Marāṭhī. The Bālāghāṭ is a series of high table-lands, rising as we go north to the Mahadeo Hills. The languages spoken in these Hills do not concern us at present. They are spoken by Gōṇḍs and Kūrkūs. Between them and the Zērghāṭ, i.e. in the central part of the district, the language is a corrupt Bundēlī.

At least eight different dialects, called respectively Baghēlī, Bundēlī, Kumbhārī, Gāolī, Rāghōbansī, Kirārī, Kōshṭī, and Pōwārī, were originally returned as spoken in Central Chhindwara. A reference to the specimens of what is called 'Baghēlī' shows that it is not Baghēlī at all, and that it scarcely differs from what is reported as Bundēlī. There are only a few very minor variations. As for Kumbhārī, the Kumbhārs, or Potters, of Chhindwara are bilingual,—at least some of the specimens of their language are in the ordinary Bundēlī of the district, and others are in Marāṭhī. Another explanation may be that some of them speak one language and some the other. For want of better information, I have classed the Kumbhārī spoken in Chhindwara under Bundēlī. At the same time, a very similar form of Kumbhārī, also based on Bundēlī, is spoken in Buldana in Berar, and hence the Kumbhār dialects as a whole are considered together at the end of this group.

From the account originally given of Gāolī, Rāghōbansī, and Kirārī, it was at the time concluded that they were most probably forms of Mālwī. An examination of the specimens since obtained will show that they are all merely impure Bundēlī. Again, the 3,242 speakers of the Kōshṭī dialects, which are popularly believed to be a form of Marāṭhī, turn out to be speakers of mongrel mixtures of that language with Bundēlī, the latter being the basis. Finally, 3,000 Pōwārs were originally reported as speaking a special dialect in Chhindwara. Further enquiry shows that they have no special dialect, but that they speak the ordinary Bundēlī of the District.

We thus get the following figures for the Bundēlī spoken in Chhindwara :—

Ordinary Bundēlī of the District, viz. :—

'Baghēlī' (so-called)	35,000
Bundēlī	83,500
Pōwārī	3,000
		121,500
Gāolī, Rāghōbansī, Kirārī, say		24,000
Kōshṭī		3,242
Kumbhārī		4,400
TOTAL		153,142

The last five will be dealt with subsequently. I now proceed to consider the first three together, as being really one dialect. It is spoken by 121,500 people.

The dialect spoken in central Chhindwara varies from place to place and according to the castes of the people who use it. Besides having peculiarities of its own, the dialect is everywhere freely mixed with ordinary Hindōstānī. This is no doubt due to the fact that a large portion of the Aryan population claims to have come from Northern India. The mixture is a purely mechanical one. In one sentence we will find a Hindōstānī expression, and, in the next, the same idea expressed by a Bundēlī one. For instance, the agent case of the third personal pronoun is sometimes the Hindōstānī us-nē, and sometimes the local Bundēlī ō-nē or wō-nē. On the other hand, we find the suffix kō sometimes used, as in Hindōstānī, for the accusative-dative (as in rahan-kō chalō-gaō, he went to live), and sometimes, as in Bundēlī, for the genitive (as in tērō aur Bhag^{a}wān-kō kasūrwār, a sinner of (i.e. before) thee and God). In the specimen which follows there are numerous instances of nouns declined after the Hindōstānī method, and further attention will not be drawn to them.

The following peculiarities which are not due to Hindōstānī occur in the various Chhindwārā dialects. They have been collected from a number of different sources, and most (but not all) of them will be found in the specimen given below.

Nouns.—For the sign of the accusative-dative (besides the Hindōstānī kō) khũ̃, corresponding to the pure Bundēlī khõ̃, occurs; thus, mē-khũ̃, to me. We also find kha and khē. For the ablative-instrumental both sē and sa occur.

In the pronouns, the oblique forms of maĩ̃, I; taĩ̃, thou; and jō, this or who, are mē (not mō); tē (not tō); and jē (not jā) respectively. Thus, mē-khũ̃, to me; jē-khũ̃, accusative, which.

The pronoun of the third person is ō or wō (not bō), and its oblique form (besides the Hindōstānī one) is not bā but ō, wō, or uwō. The last form is common amongst Kurmīs.

All these pronouns form a dative in hē; thus, mēhē, to me; tēhē, to thee; jēhē, to whom, to this; ōhē, to him, to that. Sometimes the final vowel is nasalized, as in mēhẽ̃. This form corresponds to the Bundēlī mōē, etc.

In verbs, the past tense of the verb substantive is usually hatō, but we also have hathō (especially among Kurmīs) (compare Dakhinī Hindōstānī athā) and thō (a Bundēlī or Kanaujī corruption of the Hindōstānī thā). We may note the usual Bundēlī fondness for contractions, as in kahũ̃, for kah^{a}hũ̃, I will say. The past tense of dēn, to give, is daō or dēō. So lēn, to take.

We may also note that the word for '(he or she) said' is kahō, not the feminine kahī, as in standard Bundēlī.

In other respects these dialects closely follow ordinary Bundēlī.

The following extract from a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son will illustrate most of these peculiarities. I am indebted for it to Mr. L. N. Chowdhri. It is in the dialect used by women, and is an excellent example of the general language of the whole of central Chhindwara.

[No. 26.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ (MIXED DIALECT). (DISTRICT, CHHINDWARA.)

(Assistant Surgeon L. N. Chowdhri, 1899.)

एक आदमी-के दो बेटे हते। उन-में-से छोटे-ने अपने बाप-से कहो दादा मेरो हिस्सा-को माल मे-खूँ दे-दो। इस-पर उस-ने अपनी घर जिन्दगी बाँट दओ। मुतके दिन बीतन न पाये कि छोटे बेटा सबरो माल-टाल इकठो कर-के दूर-के मुलक-में चलो गओ। और ओ-ने अपनी पूँजी बद-माँसी-में खरच कर-डारो। और जब ओ-ने सब खरच कर-डारो तब वो मुलक-में एक बड़ो भारी काल पड़ो और ओ-खूँ तंगी होन लगी। और वह उस मुलक-के एक भले आदमी-के जोरे रहन-को चलो-गओ। इस आदमी-ने ओ-खूँ अपने खेतों-में सुवरों-के चराउन-के लाने भेजो। वह खुसी-से अपनो पेट फल फूल-से भरत-थो जे-खूँ सुवर खात-थे और कोई आदमी ओ-खूँ कछू नहीं देत-थे। जब वह आप-ई आओ तब ओ-ने यह कहो। मेरे बाप-के कितने तन्‌खाहदार नौंकरों-को पूरी पूरी राटी खान-को और देन-को मिलत-है और मैं भूखों मरत-हूँ। मैं अब उठ-के अपने दादा-के जोरे जाहूँ और ओ-से यह कहूँ कि दादा मैं तेरो और भगवान-को कसूरवार हूँ और मैं तेरो बेटा कहन-के लायक नईं हूँ। मे-खूँ अपनो एक तन्‌खाहदार नौंकर कर-के राख-ले॥

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ēk ādᵃmī-kē dō bēṭē hatē. Un-mẽ-sē chhōṭē-nē apᵃnē
One man-of two sons were. Them-in-from the-younger-by his-own bāp-sē kahō, 'dādā, mērō hissā-kō māl mē-khũ dē-dō.'
father-to it-was-said, 'father, my share-of the-property me-to give-up.'
Is-par us-nē apᵃnī ghar-jindᵃgī bãṭ daō. Mutᵃkē Hereupon him-by his-own livelihood having-divided was-given. Many din bītan na pāyē, ki chhōṭē bēṭā sabᵇrō māl-ṭāl days to-pass not were-allowed, that by-the-younger son all property ikaṭhō kar-kē dūr-kē mulak-mẽ chalō-gaō, aur ō-nē apnī together made-having distant country-into it-was-gone-away, and him-by his-own pũjī badmãsī-mẽ kharach kar-ḍārō. Aur jab ō-nē sab fortune wickedness-in expenditure was-made. And when him-by all kharach kar-ḍārō tab wō mulak-mẽ ēk baṛō bhārī kāl paṛō, expenditure was-made then that country-in one very heavy famine fell, aur ō-khũ taṅgī hōn lagī. Aur wah us mulak-kē ēk bhalē and him-to poverty to-be began. And he that country-of one well-to-do ādmī-kē jōrē rahan-kō chalō-gaō. Is ādmī-nē ō-khũ apnē man-of near live-to went-away. This man-by him-to his-own khētõ-mẽ suwarõ-kē charāun-kē lānē bhējō. Wah khusī-sē fields-in swine feeding-of for it-was-sent. He pleasure-with apnō pēṭ phal phūl-sē bharat-thō jē-khũ suwar khāt-thē, his-own belly fruits flowers-with filling-was which swine eating-were, aur kōī ādmī ō-khũ kachhũ nahĩ dēt-thē. Jab wah āp-ī and any men him-to anything not giving-were. When he himself-to āō, tab ō-nē yah kahō, 'mērē bāp-kē kītnē tankhāh-dār came, then him-by this was-said, 'my father-of how-many hired nõkrõ-kō pūrī-pūrī rōṭī khān-kō aur dēn-kō milat-hai, aur maĩ servants-to full-full bread eating-for and giving-for being-got-is, and I bhūkhõ marat-hũ. Maĩ ab uṭh-kē apnē dādā-kē jōrē from-hunger dying-am. I now arisen-having my-own father-of near jāhũ aur ō-sē yah kahũ ki, "dādā, maĩ tērō aur Bhagwān-kō will-go and him-to this will-say that, "father, I of-thee and God-of kasūrwār hũ, aur maĩ tērō bēṭā kahan-kē lāyak naĩ hũ. Mē-khũ sinner am, and I thy son calling-of worthy not am. Me apnō ēk tankhāh-dār nõkar kar-kē rākh-lē."' thy-own one hired servant making keep."'

GĀOLĪ, RĀGHŌBANSĪ, AND KIRĀRĪ.

These are the dialects of the castes implied by their names. They are all reported from Chhindwara.

The number of speakers is estimated as follows :—

Gāolī	16,093
Rāghōbansī	3,114
Kirārī	4,750
TOTAL, SAY	24,000

The dialects spoken by them were originally classed in the Rough List of Languages spoken in Chhindwara District, as forms of Mālwī. As a matter of fact, they in no way differ from the ordinary broken Bundēlī of the district. This will be amply shown by a few lines of the version of the Parable in each. Of the three Rāghōbansī borrows most freely from Hindōstānī.

[No. 27.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ (GĀOLĪ). (DISTRICT, CHHINDWARA.)

कोई आदमी-को दो छोकरे हथे । वो-मेँ-से नान्हे छोकरा-ने बाप-से कहो कि दादा मेरो हिसा कर-दे । तो ओ-के दादा-ने हिसा बाटा कर-दओ। मुतके दिन नहीँ भये-हथे के नान्हे छोकरा-ने अपनो सब धन ले-के दूर मुलख-खे चलो गओ ॥

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Kōī ād^{a}mī-kō dō chhōk^{a}rē hathē. Wō-mẽ̃-sē nānhē
A-certain man-to two sons were. Them-in-from the-younger chhōk^{a}rā-nē bāp-sē kahō ki, 'dādā, mērō hisā kar-dē.'
son-by the-father-to it-was-said that, 'father, my share make.'
Tō ō-kē dādā-nē hisā bāṭā kar-daō. Mut^{a}kē din nahī̃ Then him-of the-father-by share divided was-made. Many days not bhayē-hathē kē nānhē chhōk^{a}rā-nē ap^{a}nō sab dhan lē-kē become-were that the-younger son-by his-own all wealth taken-having dūr mulakh-khē chalō-gaō.
a-far country-to it-was-gone-away.

In the above the only point to be noticed is the way in which the case of the agent in nē is used for the subject of an intransitive verb in a past tense,—chhōk^{a}rā-nē chalō-gaō, it was gone by the son, the verb being used impersonally, as in the Sanskrit putrēṇa gatam.

[No. 28.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ (RĀGHŌBANSĪ). (DISTRICT, CHHINDWARA.)

कोई आदमी-के दो लड़के थे । वो-मेँ-से छोटे-ने अपने दादा-से कहा के दादा धन-मेँ-से जो मेरो हिस्सा बैठे सो मेहे देव । तब उन-के बाप-ने अपना सब धन बाट दओ । बहोत दिन नहीँ बीते कि छोटे लड़के-ने अपनो सब धन जमा कर-के दूर देस-को निकल-गओ ॥

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Kōī ādᵃmī-kē dō laṛᵃkē thē. Wō-mẽ̃-sē chhōṭē-nē
A-certain man-of two sons were. Them-in-from the-younger-by apᵃnē dādā-sē kahā kē, 'dādā, dhan-mẽ̃-sē jō mērō hissā his-own father-to it-was-said that, 'father, wealth-in-from what my share baiṭhē sō mēhē dēw.' Tab un-kē bāp-nē may-sit (i.e. may-be-calculated) that to-me give.' Then them-of the-father-by apᵃnā sab dhan bāṭ daō. Bahōt din nahī̃ bītē his-own all wealth having-divided was-given. Many days not passed ki chhōṭē laṛᵃkē-nē apᵃnō sab dhan jamā kar-kē dūr that the-younger son-by his-own all wealth collected made-having a-far dēs-kō nikal-gaō.
country-to it-was-gone-out.

Here again we have an intransitive verb used impersonally with the subject in the case of the agent.

[No. 29.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ (KIRĀRĪ). (DISTRICT, CHHINDWARA.)

कोइँ आदमी-के दो छोकरा हते। वो-मेँ-से नाँने छोकरा-ने अपने बाप-से कहो दादा धन-को जो हिस्सा मेरा है सो मेहे दे-दे। तो ओ-के दादा-ने हिस्सा बाँटा कर-दौ। सुतके दिन नहीँ भये-हते के छोटे छोकरा-ने अपने हिस्सा-को सबरो धन जमा कर-के दूर देस-को चलो-गओ॥

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Kōī ādᵃmī-kē dō chhōkᵃrā hatē. Wō-mẽ̃-sē nā̃nē
A-certain man-of two sons were. Them-in-from the-younger chhōkᵃrā-nē apᵃnē bāp-sē kahō, 'dādā, dhan-kō jō hissā mērā son-by his-own father-to it-was-said, 'father, wealth-of what share mine hai sō mēhē dē-dē.' Tō ō-kē dādā-nē hissā bā̃ṭā is that to-me give-away.' Then him-of the-father-by the-share divided kar-dau. Mutᵃkē din nahĩ̃ bhayē-hatē kē chhōṭē chhōkᵃrā-nē was-made. Many days not become-were that the-younger son-by apᵃnē hissā-kō sabᵃrō dhan jamā kar-kē dūr dēs-kō his-own share-of all wealth collected made-having a-far country-to chalō-gaō.
it-was-gone-away.

Here again we have the same idiom with an intransitive verb.

'HINDĪ' OF NAGPUR.

From the district of Nagpur, which lies immediately to the south of Chhindwara, and of which the main Aryan language is Marāṭhī, 105,900 people were returned as speaking 'Hindī.' These people are not confined to any particular locality but are scattered all over the district. They, or their ancestors, hailed originally from the north. This 'Hindī' was provisionally classed as a form of Mālwī. On further enquiry it appears that it is not a sufficiently distinct speech to be called a dialect in its proper sense. The specimens show that it is a broken form of Bundēlī, like that of Chhindwara, but with a greater admixture of Marāṭhī. Indeed, owing to the influence of the schools of the district, which are, as a rule, Marāṭhī, that language is every day acquiring more and more influence, and will some day, no doubt, supersede the Bundēlī element altogether.

The following specimen, consisting of a few lines of the Parable of the Prodigal Son, will illustrate the above remarks.

[No. 30.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ ('HINDĪ' OF NAGPUR). (DISTRICT, NAGPUR.)

एक आदमी-खे दो पोख्या हते । ओ-मेँ-को नन्हो लरका बाप-खे किहे दादा मोरे हिस्सा-को माल मो-खे दे-दे । फेर ओ-ने अपनी जिनगी-की दोई पोख्न-खे बाटनी कर-दई । आगे थोड़ेच दिन-मेँ नन्हे पोख्या-ने अपनी सब धन सावडी । फेर ऊ टूसरे मुलक-मेँ फिरन-खे गओ । वहाँ अपनो सब पैसा ओ-ने चहुल-बाजी-मेँ उड़ा-दओ ॥

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ēk ādᵃmī-khē dō pōryā hatē. Ō-mē̃-kō nanhō larᵃkā
One man-of two sons were. Them-in-of the-younger son(-by) bāp-khē kihē, 'dādā, mōrē hissā-kō māl mō-khē dē-dē.'
the-father-to it-was-said, 'father, my share-of property me-to give-away.'
Phēr ō-nē apᵃnī jinᵃgī-kī dōī pōryan-khē bāṭᵃnī kar-daī. Āgē
Then him-by his-own property-of both sons-for share was-made. Afterwards thōṛ-ēch din-mē̃ nanhē pōryā-nē apᵃnī sab dhan sāwᵃḍī.
a-few days-in the-younger son-by his-own all fortune was-collected.
Phēr ū dūsᵃrē mulak-mē̃ phiran-khē gaō. Wahā̃ apᵃnō sab paisā
Then he another country-into wander-to went. There his-own all money ō-nē chahul-bājī-mē̃ uṛā-daō.
him-by profligacy-in was-wasted.

THE KOSHṬĪ DIALECTS.

The Kōshṭīs or silk weavers of the Central Provinces numbered 137,891 in the Census of 1891. Of these some 12,000 were returned for this Survey as speaking special dialects. They were distributed as follows :—

Chhindwara—
Marāṭhī Kōshṭī	2,638
Hindī Kōshṭī	604
		3,242
Chanda		8,000
Bhandara		800
TOTAL		12,042

The rest of the Kōshṭīs were reported to speak ordinary Marāṭhī. With the exception of 604 in Chhindwara, all these 12,042 were said to speak a special dialect of that language. To them may be added 2,650 Kōshṭīs of Berar, making a total of 14,692, who will be dealt with later on, together with Kumbhārī.

An examination of the specimens received from these localities shows that there is really no such thing as a special Kōshṭī dialect. What is meant is that these Kōshṭīs speak a corrupt mixture of Bundēlī, Chhattīsgaṛhī, and Marāṭhī, of which the relative proportions of the constituents vary according to locality.

We have seen that the district of Chhindwara falls into two main tracts, the Bālāghāṭ or Up-land, in the north, of which the language is corrupt Bundēlī, and the Zērghāṭ or Low-land, to the south, which forms in reality a portion of the Nagpur and Berar Plain. The Kōshṭī dialect of the Bālāghāṭ is known as 'Hindī Kōshṭī' because it is more infected with Bundēlī (as might be expected), than the Kōshṭī dialect of the Zērghāṭ.

It would be a waste of space to treat this jargon seriously. I shall give only a few lines of a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son in the 'Hindī Kōshṭī' of Chhindwara, and a short tale from Chanda, where the Marāṭhī element predominates.

[No. 31.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ (MIXED 'HINDĪ' KŌSHṬĪ). (DISTRICT, CHHINDWARA.)

कोई मनुष्य-का दो पुत्र हताँ । ऊन-मेँ-से छोटे-ने पिता-से कहो दादा संपत्तौ-मेँ-से जो मोरो हिस्सा होय सो मो-खे दे दे । ऊ-ने उन-खे अपनो धन बाँट दई । बहुत दिन नहीँ भया-हताँ कि छोटे लड़का सब कछु इकट्ठो कर-के दूर देश-खे चलियो गये ॥

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Kōī manushya-kā dō putra hatã̄. Ūn-mẽ̄-sē chhōṭē-nē Any man-of two sons were. Them-in-from the-younger-by pitā-sē kahī, 'dādā, sampattī-mẽ̄-sē jō mōrō hissā hōy the-father-to it-was-said, 'father, fortune-in-from which my share may-be sō mō-khē dē-dē.' Ū-nē un-khē apᵃnō dhan bā̃ṭ that me-to give-away.' Him-by them-to his-own fortune having-been-divided daī. Bahut din nahī̃ bhayā-hatã̄ ki chhōṭē laṛᵃkā sab was-given. Many days not become-were that the-younger son all kachhu ikaṭṭhō-kar-kē dūr dēś-khē chaliyō-gayē.
things collecting a-distant country-to went-away.

The Kōshṭī of Chanda is much more mixed with Marāṭhī. We may also note a sign of the dative (na) which appears to be borrowed from some dialect of Gujarātī. It may be mentioned that many of the silk weavers of the Central Provinces originally came from Gujarat.

[No. 32.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ (MIXED KŌSHṬĪ DIALECT). (DISTRICT, CHANDA.)

एक मानुस-ला दुय लहान पोर्‍या होता । एक पोर्‍या आनि एक पोरगी । पोर्‍या होतो वो रूपन फार साजरो होतो । पोरगी साधारन होती । एक दिवस वँय दुय पोर्‍या आरसा जवर खेलता खेलता पोर्‍या पोरगी-ला बलत बाई येन आरसा-मा आमी देखबन कोन साजरो दिसत । पोरगी ला वो बेस नही वाटे । वला समजे की यो मला हिनाबसाठी बलत । मंग वा आपलो बाप जवर जाऊन भाई-को गर्‍हाना सांगीस । वा बलीस बाबा आरसा-मा रूप देखून समाधान पावनु यो बायको-को काम । वा-मा मानुसन मन दिनु नही । बाप दुय झन-ला पोट संग धरून उन-की सामाधानी करीस । वो बलीस पोर्‍या हो तुम्ही झगडो नको । आज पासल तुम्ही दुय जन-ही दर-रोज आरसा-मा देखत जा ॥

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ēk mānus-lā duy lahān pōryā hōtā. Ēk pōryā āni ēk pōrᵃgī.
One man-to two small children were. One boy and one girl.

Pōryā hōtō wō rūp-na phār sājᵃrō hōtō. Pōrᵃgī sādhāran
The-boy was he appearance-by very beautiful was. The-girl common hōtī. Ēk diwas wãy duy pōryā ārᵃsā jawar khēlᵃtā khēlᵃtā was. One day those two children mirror near playing playing pōryā pōrᵃgī-lā balat, 'bāī, yē-na ārᵃsā-mā āmī dekhᵃban kōn sājᵃrō the-boy the-girl-to says, 'sister, this mirror-in we will-see who beautiful disat.' Pōrᵃgī-lā wō bēs nahī wāṭē. Wa-lā samᵃjē appears.' The-girl-to that well not was-felt. Her-to it-was-thought kī, 'yō ma-lā hinābᵃsāṭhī balat.' Maṅg wā āpᵃlō bāp that, 'this (person) me-to lowering-for says.' Then she her-own father jawar jāūn bhāī-kō garhānā sãgīs. Wā balīs, 'bābā, near having-gone the-brother-of complaint told. She said, 'father, ārˢsā-mā rūp dēkhūn samādhān pāwˢnu yō bāẏˢkō-kō kām.

mirror-in appearance having-seen satisfaction to-get this woman-of business.
Wā-mā mānus-na man dinu nahī.' Bāp duẏ jhan-lā
It-in man-to mind to-put is-not(-proper).' The-father the-two persons-to pōṭ saṅg dharūn un-kī sāmādhānī karīs. Wō balīs, 'pōrẏā breast near having-held them-of satisfaction made. He said, 'children hō, tumhī jhagˢḍō nakō. Āj pāsal tumhī duẏ jan-hī dar-rōj O, you quarrel do-not. Today from you two persons-even every-day ārˢsā-mā dēkhat-jā.'
mirror-in continue-to-look.'

KŌSHṬĪ AND KUMBHĀRĪ OF BERAR.

The Kōshṭīs and Kumbhārs of Berar speak also a corrupt form of Bundēlī. The following is the number of speakers reported of each :—

Kōshṭī—
Akola	300
Ellichpur	250
Buldana	2,100
		2,650
Kumbhārī—
Buldana		580
TOTAL		3,230

I give a specimen of Kumbhārī which comes from Buldana. The Kōshṭī dialect is the same, and no specimen is required. Before doing so, I give a note on the Kumbhārī dialects generally.

THE KUMBHĀR DIALECTS.

It has been reported that the Kumbhārs of the Central Provinces and of Berar have a dialect of their own, which is called Kumbhārī. The specimens received do not bear this out. All that is shown is that some of the Kumbhārs of these provinces speak corrupt forms of the various local dialects of the localities which they inhabit. At the Census of 1891 the number of Kumbhārs reported as existing in the Central Provinces and Berar was as follows:—

Central Provinces	102,682
Berar	22,465
TOTAL	125,147

For the Survey, the number of speakers of 'Kumbhārī' is as follows:—

Central Provinces—
Bhandara	30
Chhindwara	4,400
Chanda	1,000
		5,430
Berar—
Akola	4,500
Buldana	580
		5,080
TOTAL		10,510

Of these, the Bhandara Kumbhārī is a corrupt Baghēlī, and has been dealt with under that dialect of Eastern Hindī (Vol. VI, pp. 180 ff.). The Kumbhārī of Chanda is a corrupt Telugu, and cannot be considered here. The Kumbhārs of Akola have, it turns out, no special dialect. They speak the ordinary Warhāḍī of the district. There remain:—

Kumbhārī of Chhindwara	4,400
„ Buldana	580
TOTAL	4,980

Of the 4,400 Chhindwara Kumbhārs, some speak a corrupt Bundēlī, and others a corrupt Marāṭhī. It is impossible to say how many speak each, and hence I perforce put the whole number under Bundēlī. The Marāṭhī form of their dialect has been dealt with under the Marāṭhī of the Central Provinces (Vol. VII, p. 295).

The Bundēlī form of the Chhindwara Kumbhārī is simply the broken Bundēlī of the district, and needs no exemplification.

The Kumbhārī of Buldana is a corrupt mixture of Bundēlī with Marāṭhī and traces of Gujarātī or Rājasthānī. As a specimen I give a portion of a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son. It will also suffice as a specimen of Berar Kōshṭī.

KŌSHṬĪ AND KUMBHĀRĪ OF BERAR.

The Kōshṭīs and Kumbhārs of Berar speak also a corrupt form of Bundēlī. The following is the number of speakers reported of each :—

Kōshṭī—
Akola	300
Ellichpur	250
Buldana	2,100
		2,650
Kumbhārī—
Buldana		580
TOTAL		3,230

I give a specimen of Kumbhārī which comes from Buldana. The Kōshṭī dialect is the same, and no specimen is required. Before doing so, I give a note on the Kumbhārī dialects generally.

THE KUMBHĀR DIALECTS.

It has been reported that the Kumbhārs of the Central Provinces and of Berar have a dialect of their own, which is called Kumbhārī. The specimens received do not bear this out. All that is shown is that some of the Kumbhārs of these provinces speak corrupt forms of the various local dialects of the localities which they inhabit. At the Census of 1891 the number of Kumbhārs reported as existing in the Central Provinces and Berar was as follows:—

Central Provinces	102,682
Berar	22,465
TOTAL	125,147

For the Survey, the number of speakers of 'Kumbhārī' is as follows:—

Central Provinces—
Bhandara	30
Chhindwara	4,400
Chanda	1,000
		5,430
Berar—
Akola	4,500
Buldana	580
		5,080
TOTAL		10,510

Of these, the Bhandara Kumbhārī is a corrupt Baghēlī, and has been dealt with under that dialect of Eastern Hindī (Vol. VI, pp. 180 ff.). The Kumbhārī of Chanda is a corrupt Telugu, and cannot be considered here. The Kumbhārs of Akola have, it turns out, no special dialect. They speak the ordinary Warhāḍī of the district. There remain:—

Kumbhārī of Chhindwara	4,400
„ Buldana	580
TOTAL	4,980

Of the 4,400 Chhindwara Kumbhārs, some speak a corrupt Bundēlī, and others a corrupt Marāṭhī. It is impossible to say how many speak each, and hence I perforce put the whole number under Bundēlī. The Marāṭhī form of their dialect has been dealt with under the Marāṭhī of the Central Provinces (Vol. VII, p. 295).

The Bundēlī form of the Chhindwara Kumbhārī is simply the broken Bundēlī of the district, and needs no exemplification.

The Kumbhārī of Buldana is a corrupt mixture of Bundēlī with Marāṭhī and traces of Gujarātī or Rājasthānī. As a specimen I give a portion of a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son. It will also suffice as a specimen of Berar Kōshṭī.

[No. 33.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

WESTERN HINDĪ.

BUNDĒLĪ (BROKEN DIALECT OF KUMBHĀRS). (DISTRICT, BULDANA.)

एक अदमी-को दो लडका थे । नन्हो बाप-को कव्हानो लागो बा मोरे हिस्सा-की जीनगी मो-का दे । बाप-ने आपनी जीनगी दोनो-मो वाट दई । थोडे दीन-से नन्हो लडको आपनी जीनगी ले-के देस-को उपर गवो । व्हाँ चैनबाजी-से आपनी जीनगी सब उडा दीई । ए-का सब पैसा खर्च हो-के वी देस-मो बडो काल पडो । ओ-के वास्ते बडी आडंचण पडी । फेर ओ एक आदमी-के तरफ जा रहा-है । उइ अदमी-ने अपने खेत-मे डुक्कर राखवे-का धरे । व्हाँ ए अदमी-न डुक्कानी खा डारे-को कोंडा-पर खुषी-से आपन पेट भरे हाते । परंतु ओ-को कि-ने ओ-बी दय नही । ए-के वास्ते इ-की आखी उघडी । जब तो आपुन-सो कव्हा लागो मोरे बाप-के कितनेक नौकर-पास सुद्धो पुरको बचे ऐसे है । पण हम ह्याँ भुके मरते । फेर मै अब बाप-के तरफ जान हुँ ओ-का कहुँ कीँ बा मै देव-को व तोरू भौत अपराधी हुँ। मै तारो लडका कहने माफक नहीँ । मो-का इ उपराध मोलकरी सरीखो लगाव ॥

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ēk adᵃmī-kō dō laḍᵃkā thē. Nanhō bāp-kō kawhānō lāgō,
One man-to two sons were. The-younger father-to to-say began,

'bā, mōrē hissā-kī jīnᵃgī mō-kā dē.' Bāp-nē āpᵃnī
'father, my share-of property me-to give.' The-father-by his-own jīnᵃgī dōnō-mō wāṭ daī. Thōḍē dīn-sē nanhō property the-two-amongst dividing was-given. A-few days-after the-younger laḍᵃkō āpᵃnī jīnᵃgī lē-kē dēs-kō upar gawō. Whā̃ son his-own property taken-having country-to over went. There chain-bājī-sē āpᵃnī jīnᵃgī sab uḍā-dīī. Ē-kā sab paisā merry-making-with his-own property all was-squandered. His all money kharch-hō-kē vī dēs-mō baḍō kāl paḍō; ō-kē-wāstē baḍī having-been-spent that country-in a-great famine fell; that-of-for great āḍᵃchaṇ paḍī. Phēr ō ēk ādᵃmī-kē taraph jā rahā-hai. Ui difficulty fell. Then he one man-of towards going remained. That adᵃmī-nē apᵃnē khēt-mē ḍukkar rākhᵃbē-kā dharē. Whã̄ ē man-by his-own field-in swine feeding-for he-was-put. There this adᵃmī-na ḍukkā-nī khā-ḍārē-kō kȭḍā-par khushī-sē āpᵃna pēṭ man-by swine-by eaten-thrown-of husks-upon gladness-with his-own belly bharē-hātē; parantu ō-kō ki-nē ō bī day nahī.

would-have-been-filled; but him-to anyone-by that even was-given not.
E-kē-wāstē i-kī ākhī ughᵃḍī. Jab tō āpun-sō kavhā lāgō, 'mārē This-for his eyes opened. Then he himself-to to-say began, 'my bāp-kē kitᵃnēk naukar pās suddhō pur-kō bachē aisē hai; father-of how-many servants near even filled-of to-spare such is;
paṇ ham hyã̄ bhukē marᵃtē. Phēr mai ab bāp-kē taraph but I here of-hunger am-dying. Then I now father-of towards jāna hũ̄ ō-kā kahũ̄ kī̃, "bā, mai dēv-kō wa tōrū bhaut going I him-to say that, "father, I God-of and of-thee-also great aparādhī hũ̄; mai tārō laḍᵃkā kahanē māphak nahī̃; mō-kā sinner am; I thy son to-be-called worthy am-not; me-to i-upᵃrādh mōlᵃkarī sarīkhō lagāwa."' hence-forward a-labourer like treat."'

STANDARD LIST OF WORDS AND SENTENCES IN WESTERN HINDÎ.

STANDARD LIST OF WORDS AND

English.	Hindôstānī (Delhi).	Dakhinī of Bombay.	Vernacular Hindôstānī (Upper Doab).
1. One	Ēk	Ēk	Ēk
2. Two	Dō	Dō	Dō
3. Three	Tīn	Tīn	Tīn
4. Four	Chār	Chār	Chār
5. Five	Pā̃ch	Pā̃ch	Pā̃ch
6. Six	Chha	Chhē	Chha
7. Seven	Sāt	Sāt	Sāt
8. Eight	Āṭh	Aṭh	Aṭh
9. Nine	Nau	Nav	Nō
10. Ten	Das	Das	Das
11. Twenty	Bīs	Bīs	Bīs
12. Fifty	Pachās	Pachās	Pā̃chchās
13. Hundred	Sau	Saw	Sō
14. I	Maĩ	Maĩ	Mẽ
15. Of me	Mērā	Mērā	Mērā
16. Mine	Mērā	Mērā	Mērā
17. We	Ham	Ham	Ham
18. Of us	Hamārā	Hamārā, apnā	Mhārā
19. Our	Hamārā	Hamārā, apnā	Mhārā
20. Thou	Tū	Tū	Tū
21. Of thee	Tērā	Tērā	Tērā
22. Thine	Tērā	Tērā	Tērā
23. You	Tum	Tum	Tam
24. Of you	Tumhārā	Tumārā	Thārā
25. Your	Tumhārā	Tumārā	Thārā

SENTENCES IN WESTERN HINDĪ

Bāngarū.	Braj Bhākhā.	English.
Ēk	Ēk, ēku	ne.
Dō	Dwai	wo.
Tīn	Tīni, tin	hree.
Chār	Chāri, chār . . .	our.
Pā̃ch	Pā̃ch	ive.
Chhi	Chhai	ix.
Satt	Sāt	even.
Aṭṭh	Âṭh	ight.
Nū̃	Nau	ine.
Das	Das	en.
Bis	Bīs	wenty.
Pẵchās . . .	Pachās	ifty.
Sau	Sau	undred.
Maĩ	Hū̃, maĩ	.
Mērā	Mērau, mēryau . .	f me.
Mērā	Mērau, mēryau . .	ine.
Ham, hamē̃ . . .	Ham	7e.
Mhārā	Hamārau, hamāryau .	f us.
Mhārā	Hamārau, hamāryau .	ur.
Thū̃, tū̃, taū̃ . . .	Tū	hou.
Tērā	Tērau, tēryau . . .	f thee.
Tērā	Tērau, tēryau . . .	hine.
Tham, tamhē̃ . . .	Tum	ou.
Thārā	Tumhārau, tumhāryau, tihārau, tihāryau.	f you.
Thārā	Tumhārau, tumhāryau, tihārau, tihāryau.	our.

STANDARI ... NOUNS AND

English.	Hindōstānī (Delhi).	Dakhinī of Bo	... (Cawnpore).	Bundēlī.
1. One	Ēk	Ēk		Aik, ēk
2. Two	Dō	Dō		Dō
3. Three	Tīn	Tīn		Tīn
4. Four	Chār	Chār		Chār
5. Five	Pãch	Pãch		Pãch
6. Six	Chha	Chhē		Chhai
7. Seven	Sāt	Sāt		Sāt
8. Eight	Āṭh	Aṭh		Āṭh
9. Nine	Nau	Nav		Nõ, nau
10. Ten	Das	Das		Das
11. Twenty	Bīs	Bīs		Bīs
12. Fifty	Pachās	Pachās		Pachās
13. Hundred	Sau	Saw		Sau
14. I	Maĩ	Maĩ		Mē, maĩ
15. Of me	Mērā	Mērā		Mō-kō, mērō
16. Mine	Mērā	Mērā		Mērō
17. We	Ham	Ham	... hamē, ham	Ham
18. Of us	Hamārā	Hamārā, apnā	...	Ham-kō, hamārō, hamāō
19. Our	Hamārā	Hamārā, apnā	...	Hamārō
20. Thou	Tū	Tū		Taĩ, tũ
21. Of thee	Tērā	Tērā		Tō-kō; tērō
22. Thine	Tērā	Tērā		Tērō
23. You	Tum	Tum		Tum
24. Of you	Tumhārā	Tumārā	... tumh	Tum-kō, tumārō, tumāō
25. Your	Tumhārā	Tumārā	Tumhārē	Tumārō
			Tumhārē

SENTENCES IN WESTERN HINDĪ.

Bundēlī (Banāpharī).	Bundēlī (Bhadaurī of Gwalior).	English.
Yĕk	Ēk	1. One.
Duy	Dwai	2. Two.
Tīn	Tīn	3. Three.
Chār	Chār	4. Four.
Pãch	Pãch	5. Five.
Chhai	Chhai	6. Six.
Sāt	Sāt	7. Seven.
Āṭh	Āṭh	8. Eight.
Nau	Nau	9. Nine.
Das	Das	10. Ten.
Bīs	Bīs	11. Twenty.
Pachās	Pachās	12. Fifty.
Sau	Sau	13. Hundred.
Mai, maĭ . . .	Hõ, haũ, maĭ, maĭ-ũ . .	14. I.
Mōr, mōrau, mwār, mwārau	Mērau	15. Of me.
Mōr, mōrau, mwār, mwārau	Mērau	16. Mine.
Ham	Ham, ham-ũ . . .	17. We.
Hamār, hamārau, hamᵃrau	Hamārau . . .	18. Of us.
Hamār, hamārau, hamᵃrau	Hamārau . . .	19. Our.
Tuĭ, tai, taĭ . . .	Tẽ, tẽ-ũ	20. Thou.
Tōr, tōrau, twār, twārau .	Tihārau	21. Of thee.
Tōr, tōrau, twār, twārau .	Tihārau . . .	22. Thine.
Tum	Tum, tum-ũ . . .	23. You.
Tumār, tumārau, tumᵃrau .	Tumhāau . . .	24. Of you.
Tumār, tumārau, tumᵃrau .	Tumhāau . . .	25. Your.

English.	Hindōstānī (Delhi).	Dakhinī of Bombay.	Vernacular Hindōstānī (Upper Doab).
26. He	Woh	Wō, woh	Ō, oh
27. Of him	Us-kā	Us-kā	Us-kā
28. His	Us-kā	Us-kā	Us-kā
29. They	Wē	Wē, ō	Wẽ
30. Of them	Un-kā	Un-kā	Un-kā
31. Their	Un-kā	Un-kā	Un-kā
32. Hand	Hāth	Hāth	Hāt
33. Foot	Pā̃w	Pā̃w	Pā̃
34. Nose	Nāk	Nā̃k	Nāk
35. Eye	Ā̃kh	Ā̃kh	Ā̃kh
36. Mouth	Mũh	Mũ	Mũh
37. Tooth	Dā̃t	Dāt	Dā̃t
38. Ear	Kān	Kān	Kān
39. Hair	Bāl	Bāl	Bāḷ
40. Head	Sir	Sir	Sir
41. Tongue	Zabān	Jībh	Jīb
42. Belly	Pēṭ	Pēṭ	Pēṭ
43. Back	Piṭh	Piṭh	Piṭh
44. Iron	Lōhā	Lauwā	Lōhā
45. Gold	Sōnā	Sunnā	Sonnā
46. Silver	Chā̃dī	Chādī	Chā̃dī
47. Father	Bāp	Bāp	Bāppū
48. Mother	Mā	Mā	Mā̃
49. Brother	Bhāī	Bhāī	Bhāī
50. Sister	Bahin	Bhain	Bāhaṇ, bobbō
51. Man	Ādmī	Ādmī, marad	Yādᵃmī, māṇas

Bāngarū.	Braj Bhākhā.	English.
Oh	Wah, buh, gu, gwa . .	He.
Us-kā	Wā-kau, bā-kau, gwā-kau .	Of him.
Us-kā	Wā-kau, bā-kau, gwā-kau .	His.
Waĭ, oh	Wē, bē, gwē . . .	They.
Un-kā	Wini-kau, bini-kau, guni-kau.	Of them.
Un-kā	Wini-kau, bini-kau, guni-kau.	Their.
Hāth	Hāthu, hātu . . .	Hand.
Pair	Pā̃ũ	Foot.
Nakk	Nāk, nā̃k . . .	Nose.
Akh	Ā̃khi	Eye.
Mũh	Maũh, mũhᵃṛau . .	Mouth.
Dand	Dā̃tu	Tooth.
Kēn	Kānu	Ear.
Bāl	Bāru	Hair.
Sir	Mũṛu	Head.
Jīb	Jībh	Tongue.
Pēṭ	Pēṭu	Belly.
Ḍhūī	Pī̃ṭhi	Back.
Lōyā	Lōhau	Iron.
Siōnā	Saunaũ	Gold.
Chā̃dī	Chā̃dī	Silver.
Bābbū	Kakkū, dāū . . .	Father.
Mā̃	Ammā, maiyō . . .	Mother.
Bhāī	Bhaiyā, bhaĭkᵃrau, bīrau .	Brother.
Bībī	Bhaĭnī	Sister.
Māṇas	Lōgu, maddu, mā̃su . .	Man.
		Woman.

English.	Hindōstānī (Delhi).	Kanaujī (Cawnpore).	Bundēlī.
26. He	Woh	Wuh, wahu	Bō, ū
27. Of him	Us-kā	Wuhi-kō, wuhi-kyār, wuhi-kērō.	Ū-kō, ū-khō̃
28. His	Us-kā	Wuhi-kō	Ū-kō, ū-khō̃
29. They	Wē	Ui, wē	Bē
30. Of them	Un-kā	Un-kō	Un-kō, un-khō̃
31. Their	Un-kā	Un-kō	Un-kō, un-khō̃
32. Hand	Hāth	Hā̃t	Hāt
33. Foot	Pā̃w	Pāū	Pāu
34. Nose	Nāk	Nāki	Nāk
35. Eye	Ā̃kh	Ā̃khī	Ā̃kh
36. Mouth	Mū̃h	Mū̃hu	Maū̃
37. Tooth	Dā̃t	Datiyā̃	Dā̃t
38. Ear	Kān	Kānu	Kān
39. Hair	Bāl	Bāru	Bār
40. Head	Sir	Mūṛu	Mū̃ṛ, mū̃ṛī
41. Tongue	Zabān	Jibhiyā	Jībh, jīb
42. Belly	Pēṭ	Pēṭu	Pēṭ
43. Back	Pīṭh	Pīṭhī	Pīṭh
44. Iron	Lōhā	Lōhu	Lōhō, lōu
45. Gold	Sōnā	Sōnu	Sōnō̃
46. Silver	Chā̃dī	Chā̃dī	Chā̃dī
47. Father	Bāp	Bāpu	Bāp
48. Mother	Mā	Maiyā	Matāī, matārī
49. Brother	Bhāī	Bhaiā	Bhaiyā
50. Sister	Bahin	Bahinī	Bain, behan
51. Man	Ādmī	Maradu	Ād*mī, lōg

Bundēlī (Banāpharī).	Bundēlī (Bhadaurī of Gwalior).	English.
Ū, wā	Ba, ba-ũ . . .	26. He.
Wā-kau, wā-kērau, etc. .	Bā-kau	27. Of him.
Wā-kau, etc. . . .	Bā-kau	28. His.
Ũy, wē	Bē, bē-ũ	29. They.
Un-kau, etc. . . .	Bin-kau	30. Of them.
Un-kau, etc. . . .	Bin-kau	31. Their.
Hãth	Hāth	32. Hand.
Gwāṛau	Pãw	33. Foot.
Nãk	Nāk	34. Nose.
Ãkh	Ãkhi	35. Eye.
Muh, moh^{a}ṛō . . .	Mõh	36. Mouth.
Dãt . . .	Dãt	37. Tooth.
Kān	Kān	38. Ear.
Bār	Bār	39. Hair.
Mũṛ	Mũṛ	40. Head.
Jībh	Jubān	41. Tongue.
Pēṭ	Pēṭu	42. Belly.
Pīṭh	Pīṭh	43. Back.
Lwāhō	Lōh	44. Iron.
Swānō	Sōnō	45. Gold.
Chãdī	Chãdī	46. Silver.
Bāp	Kakā	47. Father.
Mah^{a}tārī	Mhatārī	48. Mother.
Bhāī	Bhaiyā	49. Brother.
Bahinī	Baihin	50. Sister.
Ād^{a}mī	Māns	51. Man.

English.	Hindōstānī (Delhi).	Dakhinī of Bombay.	Vernacular Hindōstānī (Upper Doab).
53. Wife	Bīwī	Aurat	Lugāī, ghar-wālī
54. Child	Bachchā	Bachchā	Ulād, jātag-bālē
55. Son	Bēṭā, laṛ[a]kā	Bēṭā	Beṭṭā
56. Daughter	Bēṭī, laṛ[a]kī	Bēṭī	Beṭṭī, dhī
57. Slave	Ghulām	Gulām	Gulām
58. Cultivator	Kāshtkār	Khēṛūt	Jottā, bōwā, kisān
59. Shepherd	Gaḍaryā	Ḍhāngar	Gadar[a]yā
60. God	Khudā	Khudā, Allāh	Bhag[a]wān, Rām-jī
61. Devil	Shaitān	Saitān	Dānā
62. Sun	Sūraj	Sūrij	Suraj
63. Moon	Chãd	Chãd	Chãd
64. Star	Sitārā	Tārā	Tārā
65. Fire	Āg	Āg	Āg
66. Water	Pānī	Pānī	Pāṇī
67. House	Makān	Ghar	Ghar
68. Horse	Ghōṛā	Ghōṛā	Ghōṛā
69. Cow	Gaū, gāy	Gāī	Gã
70. Dog	Kuttā	Kuttā	Kuttā
71. Cat	Billī	Billī	Billī
72. Cock	Murgh	Mūrgā	Mur[a]gā
73. Duck	Battakh	Badakh	Battak
74. Ass	Gadhā	Gaddhā	Gadhā
75. Camel	Ũṭ	Ũṭ	Ũṭ
76. Bird	Paranda	Pakhērū, pankhī	Chir[a]yā
77. Go	Jā	Jā	Jā
78. Eat	Khā	Khā	Khā

Bāngarū.	Braj Bhākhā.	English.
Lugāī	Ghar-bārī, bahū . .	3. Wife.
Chhūraṭ	Bālaku, chhauṭṭā, chhauṛā	4. Child.
Bēṭā	Bēṭā, pūtu . . .	5. Son.
Chhōrī . . .	Biṭiyā, bēṭī, dhī . .	6. Daughter.
Naukar	Gulāmu, ṭahªluā . .	7. Slave.
Karsiyā̃	Kisānu	8. Cultivator.
Pālī	Gaṛariyā . . .	9. Shepherd.
Rām	Panªmēsuru, Bhagªmānu .	10. God.
Shitān	Saitānu	11. Devil.
Sūraj	Sūrju, sujjū . . .	12. Sun.
Chand	Chandā	13. Moon.
Tārah	Taraiyā	14. Star.
Āg	Āgi	15. Fire.
Pānī	Pānī	16. Water.
Ḍhūṇḍ	Bākharī	17. House.
Ghōṛā	Ghōṛā	18. Horse.
Ḍhāṇḍī	Gaiyā	19. Cow.
Kuttā	Kuttā	20. Dog.
Billī	Bilaiyā	21. Cat.
Kukkar	Murgā	22. Cock.
Battak	Batak	23. Duck.
Khottā	Gadªhā, gadhā . .	24. Ass.
Uṭh . . .	Ũṭu	25. Camel.
Chiṛī	Chiraiyā . . .	26. Bird.
Tur	Jāu, jā . . .	27. Go.
Jīm	Khāu. jaĭ-lāu . . .	28. Eat.

English.	Hindōstānī (Delhi).	Kanaujī (Cawnpore).	Bundēlī.
53. Wife	Biwī	Meh^{a}rārū	Janī, baiyar, bauriyā
54. Child	Bachchā	Bach^{a}wā	Bālak, mōṛ^{a}lā
55. Son	Bēṭā, laṛ^{a}kā	Beṭ^{a}wā	Lar^{a}kā, bēṭā
56. Daughter	Bēṭī, laṛ^{a}kī	Chhokariyā	Biṭiyā, mōṛī
57. Slave	Ghulām	Gulāmu	Lai-pālak
58. Cultivator	Kāshtkār	Kisānu	Kisān
59. Shepherd	Gaḍaryā	Char^{a}wāhu	Gaṛariyā
60. God	Khudā	Daïu	Par^{a}mēsur, Īsur, Bhag^{a}wān
61. Devil	Shaitān	Parēt	Bhūt, pirīt
62. Sun	Sūraj	Suriju	Sūraj
63. Moon	Chãd	Jũdhaiā	Chandā, junaiā
64. Star	Sitārā	Nakhat	Tārē, taraiyã
65. Fire	Āg	Āgi	Āgi
66. Water	Pānī	Pānī	Pānī
67. House	Makān	Ob^{a}rī	Ghar, bakh^{a}rī
68. Horse	Ghōṛā	Ṭaṭuā	Ghur^{a}wā
69. Cow	Gaū, gāy	Gāī	Gaū, gaïyā
70. Dog	Kuttā	Kūkuru	Kuttā
71. Cat	Billī	Bilāri	Bilaïyā
72. Cock	Murgh	Murugu	Mur^{a}gī
73. Duck	Battakh	Battak	Badak
74. Ass	Gadhā	Gad^{a}hā	Gadhā
75. Camel	Ũṭ	Ũṭu	Ũṭ
76. Bird	Paranda	Chiriyã	Chiraïyā, pakhērā
77. Go	Jā	Jāu	Jā
78. Eat	Khā	Khāu	Khā

Bundēlī (Banāpharī).	Bundēlī (Bhadaurī of Gwalior).	English.
Mihariyā . . .	Lugāī, ghar-bālī . .	53. Wife.
(No word of common gender)	Lauā	54. Child.
Lar^{a}kā	Lalā	55. Son.
Biṭiyā	Biṭiyā	56. Daughter.
Ruṭ^{a}yā	Chākar	57. Slave.
Kisān	Kisān	58. Cultivator.
Gaṛariyā . . .	Pohiyā	59. Shepherd.
Pan^{a}mēsur . . .	Pan^{a}mẽsur . . .	60. God.
Bhūt	Masān	61. Devil.
Sūraj	Sūrj	62. Sun.
Chandarmā . . .	Chandramā . . .	63. Moon.
Tārāgan	Taraĭyā̃	64. Star.
Āgi	Āgi	65. Fire.
Pānī	Pānī	66. Water.
Ghar	Ghar, bhākhar . .	67. House.
Ghwārau . . .	Ghōrā	68. Horse.
Gāi	Gaiyā	69. Cow.
Kuttā	Kuttā	70. Dog.
Bilaĭyā	Bilaiyā	71. Cat.
Mur^{a}gā	Mur^{a}gā	72. Cock.
Badak	Badak	73. Duck.
Gadhā	Gad^{a}hā	74. Ass.
Ūṭ	Uṭ	75. Camel.
Chiraĭyā	Pakhairu . . .	76. Bird.
Jā	Jā	77. Go.
Khā	Jẽ	78. Eat.

Bundēlī (Banāpharī).	Bundēlī (Bhadaurī of Gwalior).	English.
Mihariyā . . .	Lugāī, ghar-bālī . .	53. Wife.
(No word of common gender)	Lauā	54. Child.
Larᵃkā	Lalā	55. Son.
Biṭiyā	Biṭiyā	56. Daughter.
Ruṭᵃyā	Chākar	57. Slave.
Kisān	Kisān	58. Cultivator.
Gaṛariyā . . .	Pohiyā	59. Shepherd.
Panᵃmēsur . . .	Panᵃmẽsur . . .	60. God.
Bhūt	Masān	61. Devil.
Sūraj	Sūrj	62. Sun.
Chandarmā . . .	Chandramā . . .	63. Moon.
Tārāgan	Taraĭyã	64. Star.
Āgi	Āgi	65. Fire.
Pānī	Pānī	66. Water.
Ghar	Ghar, bhākhar . .	67. House.
Ghwārau . . .	Ghōrā	68. Horse.
Gāi	Gaiyā	69. Cow.
Kuttā	Kuttā	70. Dog.
Bilaĭyā	Bilaiyā	71. Cat.
Murᵃgā	Murᵃgā	72. Cock.
Badak	Badak	73. Duck.
Gadhā	Gadᵃhā	74. Ass.
Ūṭ	Uṭ	75. Camel.
Chiraĭyā	Pakhairu . . .	76. Bird.
Jā	Jā	77. Go.
Khā	Jẽ	78. Eat.

English.	Hindōstānī (Delhi).	Kanaujī (Cawnpore).	Bundēlī.
53. Wife	Bīwī	Meh^{a}rārū	Janī, baiyar, bauriyā
54. Child	Bachchā	Bach^{a}wā	Bālak, mōṛ^{a}lā
55. Son	Bēṭā, laṛ^{a}kā	Beṭ^{a}wā	Lar^{a}kā, bēṭā
56. Daughter	Bēṭī, laṛ^{a}kī	Chhokariyā	Biṭiyā, mōṛī
57. Slave	Ghulām	Gulāmu	Lai-pālak
58. Cultivator	Kāshtkār	Kisānu	Kisān
59. Shepherd	Gaḍaryā	Char^{a}wāhu	Gaṛariyā
60. God	Khudā	Daïu	Par^{a}mēsur, Īsur, Bhag^{a}wān
61. Devil	Shaitān	Parēt	Bhūt, pirīt
62. Sun	Sūraj	Suriju	Sūraj
63. Moon	Chãd	Jũdhaiā	Chandā, junaiā
64. Star	Sitārā	Nakhat	Tārē, taraiyã
65. Fire	Āg	Āgi	Āgi
66. Water	Pānī	Pānī	Pānī
67. House	Makān	Ob^{a}rī	Ghar, bakh^{a}rī
68. Horse	Ghōṛā	Ṭaṭuā	Ghur^{a}wā
69. Cow	Gaū, gāy	Gāī	Gaū, gaïyā
70. Dog	Kuttā	Kūkuru	Kuttā
71. Cat	Billī	Bilāri	Bilaïyā
72. Cock	Murgh	Murugu	Mur^{a}gī
73. Duck	Battakh	Battak	Badak
74. Ass	Gadhā	Gad^{a}hā	Gadhā
75. Camel	Ũṭ	Ũṭu	Ũṭ
76. Bird	Paranda	Chiriyã	Chiraïyā, pakhērā
77. Go	Jā	Jāu	Jā
78. Eat	Khā	Khāu	Khā

Bundēlī (Banāpharī).	Bundēlī (Bhadaurī of Gwalior).	English.
Mihariyā . . .	Lugāī, ghar-bālī . .	53. Wife.
(No word of common gender)	Lauā	54. Child.
Larᵃkā	Lalā	55. Son.
Biṭiyā	Biṭiyā	56. Daughter.
Ruṭᵃyā	Chākar	57. Slave.
Kisān	Kisān	58. Cultivator.
Gaṛariyā . . .	Pohiyā	59. Shepherd.
Panᵃmēsur . . .	Panᵃmēsur . . .	60. God.
Bhūt	Masān	61. Devil.
Sūraj	Sūrj	62. Sun.
Chandarmā . . .	Chandramā . . .	63. Moon.
Tārāgan	Taraĭyā̃	64. Star.
Āgi	Āgi	65. Fire.
Pānī	Pānī	66. Water.
Ghar	Ghar, bhākhar . .	67. House.
Ghwārau . . .	Ghōrā	68. Horse.
Gāi	Gaiyā	69. Cow.
Kuttā	Kuttā	70. Dog.
Bilaĭyā	Bilaiyā	71. Cat.
Murᵃgā	Murᵃgā	72. Cock.
Badak	Badak	73. Duck.
Gadhā	Gadᵃhā	74. Ass.
Ūṭ	Uṭ	75. Camel.
Chiraĭyā	Pakhairu . . .	76. Bird.
Jā	Jā	77. Go.
Khā	Jẽ	78. Eat.

English.	Hindōstānī (Delhi).	Kanaujī (Cawnpore).	Bundēlī.
53. Wife	Bīwī	Meh^{a}rārū	Janī, baiyar, bauriyā
54. Child	Bachchā	Bach^{a}wā	Bālak, mōṛ^{a}lā
55. Son	Bēṭā, laṛ^{a}kā	Beṭ^{a}wā	Lar^{a}kā, bēṭā
56. Daughter	Bēṭī, laṛ^{a}kī	Chhokariyā	Biṭiyā, mōṛī
57. Slave	Ghulām	Gulāmu	Lai-pālak
58. Cultivator	Kāshtkār	Kisānu	Kisān
59. Shepherd	Gaḍaryā	Char^{a}wāhu	Gaṛariyā
60. God	Khudā	Daïu	Par^{a}mēsur, Īsur, Bhag^{a}wān
61. Devil	Shaitān	Parēt	Bhūt, pirīt
62. Sun	Sūraj	Suriju	Sūraj
63. Moon	Chā̃d	Jũdhaiā	Chandā, junaiā
64. Star	Sitārā	Nakhat	Tārē, taraiyā
65. Fire	Āg	Āgi	Āgi
66. Water	Pānī	Pānī	Pānī
67. House	Makān	Ob^{a}rī	Ghar, bakh^{a}rī
68. Horse	Ghōṛā	Ṭaṭuā	Ghur^{a}wā
69. Cow	Gaū, gāy	Gāī	Gaū, gaïyā
70. Dog	Kuttā	Kūkuru	Kuttā
71. Cat	Billī	Bilāri	Bilaïyā
72. Cock	Murgh	Murugu	Mur^{a}gī
73. Duck	Battakh	Battak	Badak
74. Ass	Gadhā	Gad^{a}hā	Gadhā
75. Camel	Ū̃ṭ	Ū̃ṭu	Ū̃ṭ
76. Bird	Paranda	Chiriyā̃	Chiraïyā, pakhērā
77. Go	Jā	Jāu	Jā
78. Eat	Khā	Khāu	Khā

Bundēlī (Banāpharī).	Bundēlī (Bhadaurī of Gwalior).	English.
Mihariyā . . .	Lugāī, ghar-bālī . .	53. Wife.
(No word of common gender)	Lauā	54. Child.
Lar^{a}kā	Lalā	55. Son.
Biṭiyā	Biṭiyā	56. Daughter.
Ruṭ^{a}yā	Chākar	57. Slave.
Kisān	Kisān	58. Cultivator.
Gaṛariyā . . .	Pohiyā	59. Shepherd.
Pan^{a}mēsur . . .	Pan^{a}mẽsur . . .	60. God.
Bhūt	Masān	61. Devil.
Sūraj	Sūrj	62. Sun.
Chandarmā . . .	Chandramā . . .	63. Moon.
Tārāgan	Taraĭyā̃	64. Star.
Āgi	Āgi	65. Fire.
Pānī	Pānī	66. Water.
Ghar	Ghar, bhākhar . .	67. House.
Ghwārau . . .	Ghōrā	68. Horse.
Gāi	Gaiyā	69. Cow.
Kuttā	Kuttā	70. Dog.
Bilaĭyā	Bilaiyā	71. Cat.
Mur^{a}gā	Mur^{a}gā	72. Cock.
Badak	Badak	73. Duck.
Gadhā	Gad^{a}hā	74. Ass.
Ūṭ	Uṭ	75. Camel.
Chiraĭyā	Pakhairu . . .	76. Bird.
Jā	Jā	77. Go.
Khā	Jẽ	78. Eat.

English.	Hindōstānī (Delhi).	Dakhinī of Bombay.	Vernacular Hindōstānī (Upper Doab).
80. Come	Ā	Ā	Āw
81. Beat	Mār	Mār	Mār
82. Stand	Khaṛā hō	Khaṛē (sic) hō	Khaṛā hō
83. Die	Mar	Mar	Mar
84. Give	Dē	Dē	Dē
85. Run	Bhāg	Bhāg	Bhāg, dōṛ
86. Up	Upar	Ūpar	Uppar
87. Near	Nazdīk	Najīk, pās	Nēṛē
88. Down	Nīchē	Nīchē, talē	Tāḷē
89. Far	Dūr	Dūr	Dūr
90. Before	Pēshtar, pahᵃlē	Sāmnē	Pahᵃlē, sāhᵃmī
91. Behind	Pichhē	Pīchhē	Pichchē
92. Who?	Kaun	Kaun	Kōṇ
93. What?	Kyā	Kyā	Kē
94. Why?	Kyũ	Kyũ	Kyũ
95. And	Aur	Nē, anē, hōr, aur	Ar, har, ōr, aur
96. But	Lēkin	Pan, lēkin, magar	Par, akai
97. If	Agar	Agar, jō	Ajyā, jō
98. Yes	Hã̃	Hã̃, hōy	Hã̃
99. No	Nahĩ	Naĩ	Nĩ, nã̃
100. Alas	Afsōs	Arē, rē, tōbā	Wāh
101. A father	Bāp	Bāp	Bāppū
102. Of a father	Bāp-kā	Bāp-kā	Bāppū-kā
103. To a father	Bāp-kō	Bāp-kō, -kū	Bāppū-kũ̃, -nũ̃, -nō
104. From a father	Bāp-sē	Bāp-sē	Bāppū-tẽ̃, -tē
105. Two fathers	Dō bāp	Dō bāp	Dō bāppū

Bāngarū.	Braj Bhākhā.	English.
Ā	Ā	80. Come.
Mār	Mār, pīṭ	81. Beat.
Khaṛ	Ṭhāṛē hōu . . .	82. Stand.
Mar	Mar, majjāu . . .	83. Die.
Dē	Dēu	84. Give.
Bhāj	Bhaji jāu, bhagi jāu . .	85. Run.
Ūpar	Ūpar	86. Up.
Nēṛē	Jauraĩ, ḍhiṅg . .	87. Near.
Hēṭh	Nīchaĩ	88. Down.
Parē	Dūri	89. Far.
Sām^{a}nē	Ãgaĩ, samũhī . .	90. Before.
Pachhē	Pīchhaĩ, pāchhaĩ . .	91. Behind.
Kauṇ	Kō	92. Who?
Kē, kai	Kā, kahā . . .	93. What?
Kyũ	Kāē-kũ, kāhē-kũ . .	94. Why?
Hōr	Auru	95. And.
Par	Pari	96. But.
Jē	Jau	97. If.
Hã	Ãhã, hãhã . . .	98. Yes.
Nahĩ	Nãĩ, nãhi . . .	99. No.
Sōch	Hāi hāi, arē]rē . .	00. Alas.
Bābbū	Dāū	01. A father.
Bābbū-kā . . .	Dāū-kau	02. Of a father.
Bābbū-tī, -tē . . .	Dāū-kũ, -kaũ, -kaĩ . .	03. To a father.
Bābbū-kā-nī-tī, -tē .	Dāū-sũ	04. From a father.
Dō bābbū . . .	Dwai dāū . . .	05. Two fathers.

English.	Hindōstānī (Delhi).	Kanaujī (Cawnpore).	Bundēlī.
80. Come	Ā	Āu	Ā
81. Beat	Mār	Kūṭ	Mār, pīṭ, kūṭ
82. Stand	Khaṛā hō	Ṭhāṛhā hō	Ṭhāṛhā rē
83. Die	Mar	Maru	Mar
84. Give	Dē	Dēu	Dē
85. Run	Bhāg	Bhāgu	Dōr, bhāg
86. Up	Upar	Ũchē	Ūpar
87. Near	Nazdīk	Nagīch	Pās, nagīch
88. Down	Nīchē	Tar-khalē	Nīchē, tarē
89. Far	Dūr	Phāsilē	Dūr, alag
90. Before	Pēshtar, pahᵃlē	Pahᵃlē	Ãgẽ, sāmᵃnē
91. Behind	Pichhē	Pāchhē	Pichhẽ, pachhaĩ
92. Who?	Kaun	Kaunu	Kō
93. What?	Kyā	Kāhā	Kā, kāhē
94. Why?	Kyũ	Kyaũ	Kāhē, kāyē, kyõ
95. And	Aur	Auru	Ōr
96. But	Lēkin	Lēkin, par, pē	Par, parant, phir
97. If	Agar	Jau	Jō
98. Yes	Hã̃	Hā, achchhō	Haō, hã̃
99. No	Nahĩ	Nahĩ	Naïyã̃; naĩ
100. Alas	Afsōs	Sōchu	Pachhᵃtāw, arē
101. A father	Bāp	Bāpu	Bāp
102. Of a father	Bāp-kā	Bāpu-kō	Bāp-kō
103. To a father	Bāp-kō	Bāpu-kō	Bāp-khõ
104. From a father	Bāp-sē	Bāpu-sē	Bāp-sẽ
105. Two fathers	Dō bāp	Dui bāpu	Dō-bāp

Bundēlī (Banāpharī).	Bundēlī (Bhadaurī of Gwalior).	English.
Áw	Ā	80. Come.
Mār	Mār	81. Beat.
Ṭhāṛ hō	Ṭhāṛē hō . . .	82. Stand.
Mar	Mar	83. Die.
Dē	Dē	84. Give.
Dhaur	Dōr	85. Run.
Ūpar	Ūpar	86. Up.
Ẽgar	Ḍhiṅg, lag-tē . . .	87. Near.
Khālī	Nīchē	88. Down.
Dūr	Dūr	89. Far.
Pēstar	Ãgē	90. Before.
Pāchhaĩ	Pīchhē	91. Behind.
Kaun, kō . . .	Kō	92. Who?
Kā	Kahā	93. What?
Kāhē	Kāyē-kõ . . .	94. Why?
Aur	Aur	95. And.
Ākēl	Par, phir . . .	96. But.
Jō	Jō	97. If.
Hã	Haō	98. Yes.
Nahĩ	Nāhĩ	99. No.
Hāy hāy	Sōch	100. Alas.
Bāp	Kakā	101. A father.
Bāp-kau, -kērau, etc. .	Kakā-kau . . .	102. Of a father.
Bāp-kaũ, etc. . . .	Kakā-kõ . . .	103. To a father.
Bāp-saũ, etc. . . .	Kakā-sõ . . .	104. From a father.
Duy bāp . . .	Dwai kakā . . .	105. Two fathers.

English.	Hindōstānī (Delhi).	Dakhinī of Bombay.	Vernacular Hindōstānī (Upper Doab).
107. Of fathers	Bāpõ-kā	Bāpã-kā	Bāppū-kā
108. To fathers	Bāpõ-kō	Bāpã-kō, -kū	Bāppū-kũ, -nũ, -nē
109. From fathers	Bāpõ-sē	Bāpã-sē	Bāppū-tẽ, -tē
110. A daughter	Laṛ^{a}kī	Bēṭī	Beṭṭī
111. Of a daughter	Laṛ^{a}kī-kā	Bēṭī-kā	Beṭṭī
112. To a daughter	Laṛ^{a}kī-kō	Bēṭī-kū	Beṭṭī
113. From a daughter	Lar^{a}kī-sē	Bēṭī-sē	Beṭṭī
114. Two daughters	Dō lāṛ^{a}kiyã	Dō bēṭiyã	Dō beṭṭī
115. Daughters	Laṛ^{a}kiyã	Bēṭiyã	Beṭṭĩ
116. Of daughters	Laṛ^{a}kiyõ-kā	Bēṭiyã-kā	Beṭyũ-kā
117. To daughters	Laṛ^{a}kiyõ-kō	Bēṭiyã-kū	Beṭyũ-kũ, -nũ, -nē
118. From daughters	Laṛ^{a}kiyõ-sē	Bētiyã-sē	Betyũ-tẽ, -tē
119. A good man	Ēk nēk ādmī	Ēk achchhā ādmī	Chokkhā yād^{a}mī
120. Of a good man	Ēk nēk ādmī-kā	Ēk achchhē ādmī-kā	Chokkhē yād^{a}mī-kā
121. To a good man	Ēk nēk ādmī-kō	Ēk achchhē ādmī-kū	Chokkhē yād^{a}mī-kũ, -nũ, -nē
122. From a good man	Ēk nēk ādmī-sē	Ēk achchhē ādmī-sē	Chokkhē yād^{a}mī-tẽ, -tē
123. Two good men	Dō nēk ādmī	Dō achchhē ādmī	Dō chokkhē yād^{a}mī
124. Good men	Nēk ādmī	Achchhē ādmī	Chokkhē yād^{a}mī
125. Of good men	Nēk ādmiyõ-kā	Achchhē ādmī-kā	Chokkhē yād^{a}myũ-kā
126. To good men	Nēk ādmiyõ-kō	Achchhē ādmī-kū	Chokkhē yād^{a}myũ-kũ, -nũ, -nē.
127. From good men	Nēk ādmiyõ-sē	Achchhē ādmī-sē	Chokkhē yād^{a}myũ-tẽ, -tē
128. A good woman	Ēk nēk ‘aurat	Ēk achchhī aurat	Chokkhē bīr-bānnī
129. A bad boy	Ēk kharāb laṛ^{a}kā	Ēk kharāb chhōrā	Bhunḍā lōnḍā
130. Good women	Nēk ‘auratẽ	Achchhī auratã	Chokkhī bīr-bānnĩ
131. A bad girl	Ēk kharāb laṛ^{a}kī	Ēk kharāb chhōkrī	Bhunḍī lōnḍī
132. Good	Nēk, achchhā	Achchhā	Chokkhā

Bāngarū.	Braj Bhākhā.	English.
Bābbuā̃-kā . . .	Dāuni-kau . . .	107. Of fathers.
Bābbuā̃-tī . . .	Dāuni-kũ, kaũ, -kaĩ . .	108. To fathers.
Bābbuā̃-kā-nī-tī . .	Dāuni-sũ . . .	109. From fathers.
Chhōrī	Biṭiyā	110. A daughter.
Chhōrī-kā . . .	Biṭiyā-kau . . .	111. Of a daughter.
Chhōrī-tī . . .	Biṭiyā-kũ, -kaũ, -kaĩ .	112. To a daughter.
Chhōrī-kā-nī-tī . .	Biṭiyā-sũ . . .	113. From a daughter.
Dō chhōryā̃ . . .	Dwai biṭiyā̃ . . .	114. Two daughters.
Chhōryā̃ . . .	Biṭiyā̃	115. Daughters.
Chhōryā̃-kā, chhōryā̃-kā .	Biṭiyani-kau . . .	116. Of daughters.
Chhōryā̃-tī . . .	Biṭiyani-kũ, -kaũ, -kaĩ .	117. To daughters.
Chhōryā̃-kā-nī-tī . .	Biṭiyani-sũ . . .	118. From daughters.
Ēk chhēl māṇas . .	Ēk bhalau maddu . .	119. A good man.
Ēk chhēl māṇas-kā . .	Ēk bhalē madd-kau . .	120. Of a good man.
Ēk chhēl māṇas-tī . .	Ēk bhalē madd-kũ, -kaũ, -kaĩ.	121. To a good man.
Ēk chhēl māṇas-kā-nī-tī .	Ēk bhalē madd-sũ . .	122. From a good man.
Dō chhēl māṇas . .	Dwai bhalē madd . .	123. Two good men.
Chhēl māṇas . . .	Bhalē madd . . .	124. Good men.
Chhēl māṇ^{s}sā̃-kā . .	Bhalē maddani-kau . .	125. Of good men.
Chēl māṇ^{s}sā̃-tī . .	Bhalē maddani-kũ, -kaũ, -kaĩ.	126. To good men.
Chhēl māṇ^{s}sā̃-kā-nī-tī .	Bhalē maddani-sũ . .	127. From good men.
Ek chhēl bayyar . .	Ēk bhalī baiyari . .	128. A good woman.
Ēk bhūṇḍā chhūraṭ . .	Ēk bhaũṛau chhauṛā .	129. A bad boy.
Chhēl bayyarā̃ . .	Bhalī baiyari . . .	130. Good women.
Ēk bhūṇḍī chhōrī . .	Ēk bhaũṛī chhauṛī . .	131. A bad girl.
Chhēl, chhail . . .	Bhalau	132. Good.
		133. Better.

English.	Hindōstānī (Delhi).	Kanaujī (Cawnpore).	Bundēlī.
107. Of fathers	Bāpõ̃-kā	Bāpun-kō	Bāpan-kō
108. To fathers	Bāpõ̃-kō	Bāpun-kō	Bāpan-khõ̃
109. From fathers	Bāpõ̃-sē	Bāpun-sē	Bāpan-sẽ̃
110. A daughter	Laṛ^{a}kī	Chhokariyā	Biṭiyā
111. Of a daughter	Laṛ^{a}kī-kā	Chhokariyā-kō	Biṭiyā-kō
112. To a daughter	Laṛ^{a}kī-kō	Chhokariyā-kō	Biṭiyā-khõ̃
113. From a daughter	Lar^{a}kī-sē	Chhokariyā-sē	Biṭiyā-sē
114. Two daughters	Dō lāṛ^{a}kiyã̃	Dui chhokariyã̃	Dō biṭiyã̃
115. Daughters	Laṛ^{a}kiyã̃	Chhokariyã̃	Biṭiyã̃, mōṛian
116. Of daughters	Laṛ^{a}kiyõ̃-kā	Chhokariyan-ko	Biṭiyan-kō
117. To daughters	Laṛ^{a}kiyõ̃-kō	Chhokariyan-kō	Biṭiyan-khõ̃
118. From daughters	Laṛ^{a}kiyõ̃-sē	Chhokariyan-sē	Biṭiyan-sẽ̃
119. A good man	Ēk nēk ādmī	Nīkō maradu	Ēk nōnõ̃ mānas, ēk bhal mānas.
120. Of a good man	Ēk nēk ādmī-kā	Nīkē janē-kō	Ēk bhalē mānas-kō
121. To a good man	Ēk nēk ādmī-kō	Nīkē janē-kō	Ēk bhalē mānas-khõ̃
122. From a good man	Ēk nēk ādmī-sē	Nīkē janē-sē	Ēk bhalē mānas-sẽ̃
123. Two good men	Dō nēk ādmī	Dui nīkē janē	Dō bhalē mānas
124. Good men	Nēk ādmī	Nīkē janen	Bhalē (nōnẽ̃) mānas
125. Of good men	Nēk ādmiyõ̃-kā	Nīkē janen-kō	Bhalē mān^{a}san-kō
126. To good men	Nēk ādmiyõ̃-kō	Nīkē janen-kō	Bhalē mān^{a}san-khõ̃
127. From good men	Nēk ādmiyõ̃-sē	Nīkē janen-sē	Bhalē mān^{a}san-sẽ̃
128. A good woman	Ēk nēk ‘aurat	Nīkī logāī	Ēk naunī lugāī
129. A bad boy	Ēk kharāb laṛ^{a}kā	Nāgā larikā	Ēk buraō lar^{a}kā
130. Good women	Nēk ‘auratẽ̃	Nīkī logāī	Achchhī janĩ̃
131. A bad girl	Ēk kharāb laṛ^{a}kī	Nāgā chhokariyā	Buraī biṭiyā
132. Good	Nēk, achchhā	Nīku, nīkō	Achchhō, nōnõ̃

Bundēlī (Banāpharī).	Bundēlī (Bhadaurī of Gwalior).	English.
Bāpan-kau . . .	Gallē kakā-kau . .	107. Of fathers.
Bāpan-kaũ . . .	Gallē kakā-kõ . .	108. To fathers.
Bāpan-saũ . . .	Gallē kakā-sõ . .	109. From fathers.
Biṭiyā	Biṭiyā	110. A daughter.
Biṭiyā-kau . . .	Biṭiyā-kau . . .	111. Of a daughter.
Biṭiyā-kaũ . . .	Biṭiyā-kõ . . .	112. To a daughter.
Biṭiyā-saũ . . .	Biṭiya-sõ . . .	113. From a daughter.
Duy biṭiyā . . .	Dwai bitiyã . . .	114. Two daughters.
Biṭiyã	Gallē biṭiyã . . .	115. Daughters.
Biṭiyan-kau . . .	Gallē biṭiyã-kau . .	116. Of daughters.
Biṭiyan-kaũ . . .	Gallē biṭiyã-kõ . .	117. To daughters.
Biṭiyan-saũ . . .	Gallē biṭiyã sõ . . .	118. From daughters.
Yēk achchhā ād^{a}mī . .	Ēk bhalāu māns . .	119. A good man.
Yēk achchhē ād^{a}mī-kau .	Ēk bhalē māns-kau . .	120. Of a good man.
Yēk achchhē ād^{a}mī-kaũ .	Ēk bhalē māns-kõ . .	121. To a good man.
Yēk achchhē ād^{a}mī-saũ .	Ēk bhalē māns-sõ . .	122. From a good man.
Duy achchhē ād^{a}mī . .	Dwai bhalē māns . .	123. Two good men.
Achchhē ād^{a}mī . .	Gallē bhalē māns . .	124. Good men.
Achchhē ād^{a}min-kau .	Gallē bhalē māns-kau .	125. Of good men.
Achchhē ād^{a}min-kaũ .	Gallē bhalē māns-kõ . .	126. To good men.
Achchhē ād^{a}min-saũ . .	Gallē bhalē māns-sõ . .	127. From good men.
Yēk achchhī mihariyā .	Ēk bhalī janī . . .	128. A good woman.
Yēk laṭau lar^{a}kā . .	Ēk burau larkā . .	129. A bad boy.
Achchhĩ mihariyã . .	Gallē bhalī janĩ . .	130. Good women.
Yēk laṭī biṭiyā . .	Ēk burī biṭiyā . .	131. A bad girl.
Achchhā . . .	Nĩkō, áchchhō . . .	132. Good.

English.	Hindōstānī (Delhi).	Dakhinī of Bombay.	Vernacular Hindōstānī (Upper Doab).
134. Best	Sab-sē achchhā, nihāyat 'umda.	Sab-sē achchhā	Sab-tẽ ghaṇā chokkhā
135. High	Ũchā	Ũchā	Unchchā
136. Higher	Ziyāda ũchā	Us-sē ũchā	Ghaṇā unchchā
137. Highest	Sab-sē ũchā	Sab-sē ũchā	Sab-tẽ ghaṇā unchchā
138. A horse	Ghōṛā	Ghōṛā	Ghōṛā
139. A mare	Ghōṛī	Ghōṛī	Ghōṛī
140. Horses	Ghōṛē	Ghōṛē	Ghōṛē
141. Mares	Ghōṛiyã	Ghōṛyã	Ghōṛĩ
142. A bull	Sãḍ	Ēk bail	Bijār, goh^{a}rā
143. A cow	Gāy	Ēk gāī	Gã
144. Bulls	Sãḍ	Bailã	Bijār, goh^{a}rē
145. Cows	Gāyẽ	Gāyã	Gã
146. A dog	Kuttā	Kuttā	Kuttā
147. A bitch	Kutyā	Kuttī	Kut^{a}yā
148. Dogs	Kuttē	Kuttē	Kuttē
149. Bitches	Kutyã	Kuttyã	Kut^{a}yã
150. A he-goat	Bak^{a}rā	Bōkaṛ	Bak^{a}rā
151. A female goat	Bak^{a}rī	Bak^{a}ṛī	Bak^{a}rī
152. Goats	Bak^{a}rē	Bōk^{a}ṛē	Bak^{a}rē
153. A male deer	Hiran	Nar har^{a}nā	Hiraṇ
154. A female deer	Hir^{a}nī	Har^{a}nī	Hir^{a}ṇī
155. Deer	Hiran	Haran	Hiraṇ
156. I am	Maĩ hũ	Maĩ hũ	Mẽ hũ
157. Thou art	Tū hai	Tū hai	Tū hẽ
158. He is	Woh hai	Wō hai	Ō hẽ
159. We are	Ham haĩ	Ham hai	Ham hẽ

Bāngarū.	Braj Bhākhā.	English.
Ghaṇē-tē ghaṇā chhēl	Sab-sū bhalau	1. Best.
Ũchā	Ũchau	2. High.
Aur ũchā	Naĩk ũchau	3. Higher.
Ghanē-tē ghanā ũchā	Sab-sū ũchau	4. Highest.
Ghōṛā	Ēk ghōṛā	5. A horse.
Ghōṛ[a]tī	Ēk ghuṛiyā	6. A mare.
Ghōṛē	Ghōṛā	7. Horses.
Ghōr[a]tyã̃	Ghuṛiyã̃	8. Mares.
Khāgiṛ	Ēku sãṛu, ēku bijāru	9. A bull.
Ḍhāṇḍī	Ēk gaiyā	10. A cow.
Khāg[a]ṛē	Sãṛ	11. Bulls.
Ḍhāṇḍyã̃	Gaiyã̃	12. Cows.
Kuttā	Ēk kuttā	13. A dog.
Kuttī	Ēk kutiyā	14. A bitch.
Kuttē	Kuttā	15. Dogs.
Kuttyã̃	Kutiyã̃	16. Bitches.
Bak[a]rā	Ēk bōk[a]rā	17. A he-goat.
Bak[a]rī	Ēk bōk[a]rī	18. A female goat.
Bak[a]ryã̃	Bōk[a]rā	19. Goats.
Mirag	Ēku hinnu	20. A male deer.
Mirag[a]nī	Ēk hinnī	21. A female deer.
Mirag	Hinn	22. Deer.
Maĩ hũ̃, sũ̃, hã̃, sã̃	Mai hũ̃, maĩ ũ̃	23. I am.
Tũ̃ hai, sai, hē, sĕ	Tū hai, tū ai	24. Thou art.
Oh hai, sai, hē, sē	Wuh hai, gu ai	25. He is.
Ham haĩ, saĩ	Ham haĩ, ham aĩ	26. We are.
		27. You are.

English.	Hindōstānī (Delhi).	Kanaujī (Cawnpore).	Bundēlī.
134. Best	Sab-sē achchhā, nihāy 'umda.	Nikanu-mã̄ nīku	Bahut-hī nōnō (sājō or chōkhō).
135. High	Ũ̃chā	Ũ̃chō	Ũ̃chō
136. Higher	Ziyāda ũchā	Bahutu ũchō	Bhaut ũchō or baṛō ũchō
137. Highest	Sab-sē ũchā	Ũ̃chan-mã̄ ũch	Bhautaī ũchō
138. A horse	Ghōṛā	Ṭaṭuā	Ēk ghur^{a}wā
139. A mare	Ghōṛī	Ghoṛiyā	Ēk ghuriyā
140. Horses	Ghōṛē	Bahut ṭaṭuā	Ghōrē
141. Mares	Ghōṛiyã̄	Ghōṛiyã̄	Ghuriyã̄
142. A bull	Sã̄ḍ	Sã̄ṛā	Ēk sã̄ṛ
143. A cow	Gāy	Gāī	Ēk gaïyā
144. Bulls	Sã̄ḍ	Sã̄ṛā	Sã̄ṛan
145. Cows	Gāyē	Gaïyã̄	Gaïyã̄
146. A dog	Kuttā	Kūkuru	Ēk kuttā
147. A bitch	Kutyā	Kukariyā	Ēk kutiyā
148. Dogs	Kuttē	Kukar^{a}wan	Kuttan
149. Bitches	Kutyã̄	Kukariyã̄	Kutiyã̄
150. A he-goat	Bak^{a}rā	Bok^{a}rā	Ēk buk^{a}rā
151. A female goat	Bak^{a}rī	Bukariyã̄	Ēk chhiriyā
152. Goats	Bak^{a}rē	Bukarēwã̄	Chhiriyã̄, bukariyã̄
153. A male deer	Hiran	Hiranu	Ēk hinnā
154. A female deer	Hir^{a}nī	Hir^{a}nī	Ēk hinnī
155. Deer	Hiran	Hir^{a}nan	Hinnã̄
156. I am	Maĩ hũ̃	Maĩ haũ̃	Maĩ hõ, ãũ
157. Thou art	Tū hai	Tū hai	Taĩ hē, āy
158. He is	Woh hai	Wahu hai	Bō hē, āy
159. We are	Ham haĩ	Hamu hanu	Ham hẽ, ãy
160. You are

Bundēlī (Banāpharī).	Bundēlī (Bhadauri of Gwalior)	English.
Behad achchhā . .	Sab-tẽ nĩkō, sab-tẽ achchhō	134. Best.
Ũchā	Ũchō	135. High.
Bahut ũchā . . .	Bauhat ũchō . . .	136. Higher.
Behad ũchā . . .	Sab-tẽ ũchō . . .	137. Highest.
Yēk ghwārau . . .	Ēk ghōrā . . .	138. A horse.
Yēk ghōṛī . . .	Ēk ghuṛiyā . . .	139. A mare.
Ghwār	Gallē ghōrē . . .	140. Horses.
Ghōṛĩ	Gallē ghuṛiyã . . .	141. Mares.
Yēk bahurā . . .	Ēk sãṛ, ēk baddhā . .	142. A bull.
Yēk gāi	Ēk gaiyā . . .	143. A cow.
Bahurā	Gallē baddhā . . .	144. Bulls.
Gāi	Gaiyã	145. Cows.
Yēk kuttā . . .	Ēk kuttā . . .	146. A dog.
Yēk kuttī . . .	Ēk kutiyā . . .	147. A bitch.
Kuttā	Gallē kuttā . . .	148. Dogs.
Kuttĩ	Gallē kutiyã . . .	149. Bitches.
Yēk bukˢrā . . .	Ēk bukˢrā, ēk ṭaĩnā . .	150. A he-goat.
Yēk bukˢrī . . .	Ēk chhiriyā . . .	151. A female goat.
Bukˢrā	Gallē ṭaĩnā . . .	152. Goats.
Yēk mirˢgā . . .	Ēk hinnā . . .	153. A male deer.
Yēk chhigārī . . .	Ēk hinnī . . .	154. A female deer.
.....	Gallē hinnā-hiniyã . .	155. Deer.
Maĩ āhũ, haũ . . .	Maĩ haũ . . .	156. I am.
Taĩ āhī, hī . . .	Tẽ hai	157. Thou art.
Wā āhai, hai, āi . .	Ba hai	158. He is.
Ham āhaĩ, āhen, han .	Ham haĩ	159. We are.
Tum āhū, āhā, hā . .	Tum hō	160. You are.

English.	Hindōstānī (Delhi).	Dakhinī of Bombay.	Vernacular Hindōstānī (Upper Doab).
161. They are	Wē haĩ	Wō hai	Wẽ hẽ
162. I was	Maĩ thā	Maĩ thā, athā	Mẽ thā
163. Thou wast	Tū thā	Tū thā, athā	Tū thā
164. He was	Woh thā	Wō thā, athā	Ō thā
165. We were	Ham thē	Ham thē, athē	Ham thē
166. You were	Tum thē	Tum thē, athē	Tam thē
167. They were	Wē thē	Wō thē, athē	Wẽ thē
168. Be	Hō	Hō	Hō
169. To be	Hōnā	Hōnā	Hōṇā
170. Being	Hōtā	Hōtà	Hottā
171. Having been	Hō-kar	Hō-kō	Huā
172. I may be	Maĩ hōũ	Maĩ hōũ	Mẽ hũ
173. I shall be	Maĩ hōũgā	Maĩ hōũgā	Mẽ hũgā
174. I should be	Maĩ hōtā	Maĩ hōtā	Mẽ hottā
176. Beat	Mār	Mār	Mār
176. To beat	Mārªnā	Mārnā	Mārªṇā, māraṇ
177. Beating	Mārªtā	Mārtā	Mārªtā
178. Having beaten	Mār-kar	Mār-kō	Mār-kai
179. I beat	Maĩ mārªtā-hũ	Maĩ-nē mārtā-hũ	Mẽ mārũ
180. Thou beatest	Tu mārªtā-hai	Tū-nē mārtā-hai	Tū mārē
181. He beats	Woh mārªtā-hai	Wō mārtā-hai	Ō mārē
182. We beat	Ham mārªtē-haĩ	Ham mārtē-hai	Ham mārẽ
183. You beat	Tum mārªtē-hō	Tum mārtē-hō	Tam mārō
184. They beat	Wē mārªte-haĩ	Wō mārtē-hai	Wẽ mārē
185. I beat (Past Tense)	Maĩ-nē mārā	Maĩ-nē mārā	Mẽ mārā
186. Thou beatest (Past Tense).	Tū-nē mārā	Tū-nē mārā	Tẽ mārā
187. He beat (Past Tense)	Us-nē mārā	Us-nē mārā	Us-nē mārā

Bāngarū.	Braj Bhākhā.	English.
Oh haĭ, saĭ . . .	Wē haĭ, gwē aĭ . .	161. They are.
Maĭ thā	Maĭ hau (or au), hō (or ō).	162. I was.
Tũ thā	Tu hau, hō . . .	163. Thou wast.
Oh thā	Wah hau, gu hō . .	164. He was.
Ham thē . . .	Ham hai, hē . . .	165. We were.
Tham thē . . .	Tum hai, hē . . .	166. You were.
Oh thē	Wē hai, gwē hē . .	167. They were.
Hō	Hōu	168. Be.
Hōṇā	Haibau	169. To be.
Hŏdā	Hōtu	170. Being.
Hō-kar	Hwai-kai, hai-kē . .	171. Having been.
.....	Maĭ hōũ . . .	172. I may be.
Maĭ hũgā . . .	Maĭ hōũgau . . .	173. I shall be.
.....	.....	174. I should be.
Mār	Māri (sing.), mārau (pl.) .	175. Beat.
Mārᵃṇā	Māribau . . .	176. To beat.
Mārᵃdā	Māratu, māttu . .	177. Beating.
Mār-kar	Māri-kai, -kē . . .	178. Having beaten.
Maĭ mārũ-sũ . . .	Maĭ māratu(māttu)-hũ, maĭ māttũ.	179. I beat.
Tū mārē-sai . . .	Tū māratu(māttu)-hai, tū māttai.	180. Thou beatest.
Oh mārē-sai . . .	Wah māratu(māttu)-hai, gu māttai.	181. He beats.
Ham mārẽ-sai (not saĭ) .	Ham māratu(māttu)-haĭ, ham māttaĭ.	182. We beat.
Tamhẽ mārō-sō . .	Tum māratu(māttu)-hau, tum māttau.	183. You beat.
Waĭ mārẽ-sai (not saĭ) .	We māratu(māttu)-haĭ, gwē māttaĭ.	184. They beat.
Mai-nẽ māryā . . .	Maĭ-nẽ māryau . .	185. I beat (Past Tense).
Tai-nẽ māryā . . .	Taĭ-nẽ māryau . .	186. Thou beatest (Past Tense).
		187. He beat (Past Tense).

English.	Hindōstānī (Delhi).	Dakhinī	[illegible] (Cawnpore).	Bundēlī.
161. They are	Wē haĩ	Wō hai	[illegible]	Bē hẽ, ãy
162. I was	Maĩ thā	Maĩ thā, at	[illegible], thō, hatō	Maĩ hatō, tō
163. Thou wast	Tū thā	Tū thā, athā	[illegible], thō, hatō	Taĩ hatō, tō
164. He was	Woh thā	Wō thā, ath	[illegible], thō, hatō	Bō hatō, tō
165. We were	Ham thē	Ham thē, at	[illegible], thē, hatē	Ham hatē, tē
166. You were	Tum thē	Tum thē, at	[illegible], thē, hatē	Tum hatē, tē
167. They were	Wē thē	Wō thē, athē	[illegible], thē, hatē	Bē hatē, tē
168. Be	Hō	Hō	[illegible]	Hō
169. To be	Hōnā	Hōnā	[illegible]	Hōṇ
170. Being	Hōtā	Hōtā	[illegible]	Hōt
171. Having been	Hō-kar	Hō-kō	[illegible], thai-kai	Hō-kẽ
172. I may be	Maĩ hōũ	Maĩ hōũ	[illegible]	Maĩ hõũ
173. I shall be	Maĩ hōũgā	Maĩ hōũgā	[illegible]	Maĩ hõũgō
174. I should be	Maĩ hōtā	Maĩ hōtā	[illegible]	.....
176. Beat	Mār	Mār	[illegible]	Mār, piṭ, kūṭ
176. To beat	Mārªnā	Mārnā	[illegible]	Mārªbō, māran
177. Beating	Mārªtā	Mārtā	[illegible]	Mārat
178. Having beaten	Mār-kar	Mār-kō	[illegible]	Mār-kẽ
179. I beat	Maĩ mārªtā-hũ	Maĩ-nē mārtā	[illegible]	Maĩ mārũ, mārat-hõ
180. Thou beatest	Tu mārªtā-hai	Tū-nē mārtā-h	[illegible]	Tũ mārat-hai
181. He beats	Woh mārªtā-hai	Wō mārtā-hai	[illegible]	Bō mārat-hai
182. We beat	Ham mārªtē-haĩ	Ham mārtē-h	[illegible]	Ham mārat-haĩ
183. You beat	Tum mārªtē-hō	Tum mārtē-h	[illegible]	Tum mārat-hau
184. They beat	Wē mārªte-haĩ	Wō mārtē-hai	[illegible]	Be mārat-haĩ
185. I beat (Past Tense)	Maĩ-nē mārā	Maĩ-nē mārā	[illegible]	Maĩ-ne mārō
186. Thou beatest (Past Tense).	Tū-nē mārā	Tū-nē mārā	[illegible]	Tũ-nē, or taĩ-nē, mārō
187. He beat (Past Tense)	Un-nē mārā	Un-nē mārā	[illegible]

Bundēlī (Banāpharī).	Bundēlī (Bhadaurī of Gwalior).	English.
Ũy āhaĩ, āhĩ, haĩ, āi .	Bē haĩ	161. They are.
Maĩ hatō, tō, hatõy, tõy, rahaũ.	Maĩ hatō, hō . . .	162. I was.
Taĩ hatō, tō, hatōy, tõy, rahas.	Tẽ hatō, hō . . .	163. Thou wast.
Wā hatō, tō, rahai . .	Ba hatō, ho . . .	164. He was.
Ham hatē, tē, hatyan, tyan, rahan, rahaĩ.	Ham-ũ hatē, hē . .	165. We were.
Tum hatē, tē, hatyō, tyō, rahā.	Tum-ũ hatē, hē . .	166. You were.
Ũy hatē, tē, rahaĩ . .	Bē-ũ hatē, hē . . .	167. They were.
Hō	Hō	168. Be.
Hōn	Hōn	169. To be.
Hōt	Hōtu	170. Being.
Hō-kai	Hō-kẽ	171. Having been.
Maĩ hōaũ . . .	Maĩ-ũ hõ . . .	172. I may be.
Maĩ huihaũ, hūhaũ . .	Maĩ-ũ hōũgō . . .	173. I shall be.
... ...	.....	174. I should be.
Mār	Mārō	175. Beat.
Māran, māraĩ, mārab, mar^{a}bō.	Mār^{a}bau, mānnau . .	176. To beat.
Mārat	Mārat, māttu, mātta . .	177. Beating.
Mār-kai	Mār-kẽ	178. Having beaten.
Maĩ mārat-haũ . .	Hõ mātta-hõ . . .	179. I beat.
Taĩ mārat-hī . . .	Tẽ mātta-hai . . .	180. Thou beatest.
Wā mārat-hai . . .	Ba mātta-hai . . .	181. He beats.
Ham mārat-haĩ . .	Ham mātta-haĩ . .	182. We beat.
Tum mārat-hā . .	Tum mātta-hō . . .	183. You beat.
Ũy mārat-haĩ . . .	Bē mātta-haĩ . . .	184. They beat.
Maĩ-nai mārō, mārõy .	Maĩ-nẽ mārau . .	185. I beat (Past Tense).
Taĩ-nai mārō, mārōy . .	Tẽ-nẽ mārau . . .	186. Thou beatest (Past Tense).

English.	Hindōstānī (Delhi).	Dakhinī of Bombay.	Vernacular Hindōstānī (Upper Doab).
188. We beat (Past Tense)	Ham-nē mārā . . .	Ham-nē mārā . . .	Ham-nē mārā . . .
189. You beat (Past Tense)	Tum-nē mārā . . .	Tum-nē mārā . . .	Tam-nē mārā . . .
190. They beat (Past Tense)	Unhõ̃-nē mārā . .	Un-nē mārā, wō mārā .	Un-nē mārā . . .
191. I am beating . .	Maĩ mārªtā-hũ̃ . .	Maĩ mārtā-hũ̃ . . .	Mẽ mārũ̃-hũ̃ . . .
192. I was beating . .	Maĩ mārªtā-thā . .	Maĩ mārtā-thā . . .	Mẽ mārũ̃-thā, mẽ mārē-thā .
193. I had beaten . .	Maĩ-nē mārā-thā . .	Maĩ-nē mārā-thā . .	Mẽ mārā-thā . . .
194. I may beat . .	Maĩ mārũ̃ . . .	Maĩ mārũ̃ . . .	Mẽ mārũ̃ . . .
195. I shall beat . .	Maĩ mārũ̃gā . . .	Māĩ mārũ̃gā . . .	Mẽ mārũ̃gā . .
196. Thou wilt beat . .	Tū mārēgā . . .	Tū mārēgā . . .	Tū mārēgā . . .
197. He will beat . .	Woh mārēgā . . .	Wō mārēgā . . .	Õ mārēgā . .
198. We shall beat . .	Ham mārẽ̃gē . . .	Ham mārēgā . . .	Ham mārẽ̃gē . . .
199. You will beat . .	Tum mārōgē . . .	Tum mārēgā . . .	Tam mārōge . . .
200. They will beat . .	Wē mārẽ̃gē . . .	Wō mārēgā . . .	Wẽ mārẽ̃gē . . .
201. I should beat . .	Maĩ mārªtā . . .	Maĩ mārtā . . .	Mẽ mārªtā . . .
202. I am beaten . .	Maĩ mārā-jātā-hũ̃ . .	Maĩ mārā jātā-hũ̃ . .	Mẽ mārā jāũ̃-hũ̃ . .
203. I was beaten . .	Maĩ mārā-gayā . .	Maĩ mārā gayā . .	Mẽ mārā gayā . . .
204. I shall be beaten .	Maĩ mārā-jaũ̃gā . .	Maĩ mārā jāũ̃gā . .	Mẽ mārā jāũ̃gā . .
205. I go . . .	Maĩ jātā-hũ̃ . . .	Maĩ jāũ̃ or jātā-hũ̃ . .	Mẽ jãũ̃ . . . .
206. Thou goest . .	Tū jātā-hai . . .	Tū jātā-hai . . .	Tū jā . . .
207. He goes . . .	Woh jātā-hai . . .	Wō jātā-hai . . .	Õ jāē, jā . . .
208. We go . . .	Ham jātē-haĩ . . .	Ham jātē-hai . . .	Ham jāẽ, jã̃ . . .
209. You go . . .	Tum jātē-hō . . .	Tum jātē-hō . . .	Tam jāō . . .
210. They go . . .	Wē jātē-haĩ . . .	Wō jātē-hai . . .	Wẽ jāẽ, jã̃ . . .
211. I went . . .	Maĩ gayā . . .	Maĩ gayā . . .	Mẽ gayā, giyā . . .
212. Thou wentest . .	Tū gayā	Tū gayā	Tū gayā, giyā . . .
213. He went . . .	Woh gayā . . .	Wō gayā . . .	Õ gayā, giyā . . .

Bāngarū.	Braj Bhākhā.	English.
Mhā-nē māryā . .	Ham-nẽ māryau . .	3. We beat (Past Tense).
Thā-nē māryā . . .	Tum-nẽ māryau . .	9. You beat (Past Tense).
Un-nē māryā . . .	Win-nẽ (bin-nẽ, gun-nẽ) māryau.	0. They beat (Past Tense).
Maĩ mārũ-sũ . . .	Maĩ māttũ . . .	1. I am beating.
Maĩ mār riyā-thā . .	Maĩ mār-rahyau . .	2. I was beating.
Mai-nē māryā-thā . .	Maĩ-nē māryau-au . .	3. I had beaten.
.....	Maĩ mārũ . . .	4. I may beat.
Maĩ mārũgā . . .	Maĩ mārũgau . . .	5. I shall beat.
Tũ mārēgā . . .	Tū māraigau . . .	6. Thou wilt beat.
Oh mārēgā . . .	Wah māraigau . .	7. He will beat.
Ham mārẽgē . . .	Ham māraĩgē . . .	8. We shall beat.
Tham mārẽgē . . .	Tum māraugē . .	9. You will beat.
Oh mārẽgē . . .	Wē māraĩgē . . .	0. They will beat.
.....	.....	1. I should beat.
Maĩ māryā jāndā hã . .	Maĩ māryau jātũ . .	2. I am beaten.
Maĩ māryā gayā . .	Maĩ māryau jātu-au .	3. I was beaten.
Maĩ mārya jāũgā . .	Maĩ māryau jāũgau .	4. I shall be beaten.
Maĩ jāũ-sũ . . .	Maĩ jātũ . . .	5. I go.
Tũ jāwē-sai . . .	Tū jātu-ai . . .	6. Thou goest.
Oh jāwē-sai . . .	Wah jātu-ai . . .	7. He goes.
Ham jāẽ-saĩ . . .	Ham jātaĩ . . .	8. We go.
Tham jāō-sō . . .	Tum jātau . . .	9. You go.
Oh jāwẽ-saĩ . . .	Wē jātaĩ . . .	0. They go.
Maĩ gayā . . .	Maĩ gayau . . .	1. I went.
Tũ gayā	Tū gayau . . .	2. Thou wentest.
Oh gayā	Wah gayau . . .	3. He went.

English.	Hindōstānī (Delhi).	Kanaujī (Cawnpore).	Bundēlī.
188. We beat (Past Tense)	Ham-nē mārā	Ham-nē mārō	Ham-nē mārō
189. You beat (Past Tense)	Tum-nē mārā	Tum-nē mārō	Tum-nē mārō
190. They beat (Past Tense)	Unhõ̃-nē mārā	Unhan-nē mārō	Un-nē mārō
191. I am beating	Maĩ mārªtā-hũ̃	Maĩ mār rahō-haũ	Maĩ mārat-ãũ̃
192. I was beating	Maĩ mārªtā-thā	Maĩ mār rahō-thõ̃	Maĩ mārat-hatō
193. I had beaten	Maĩ-nē mārā-thā	Maĩ-nē mārō-thõ̃	Maĩ-nē mārō-tō
194. I may beat	Maĩ mārũ̃	Maĩ marihaũ	Maĩ mārõ̃
195. I shall beat	Maĩ mārũ̃gā	Maĩ marihaũ	Maĩ mārihõ̃, mārªhõ̃, or mārũ̃-gō.
196. Thou wilt beat	Tū mārēgā	Tū marihai	Taĩ mārihē, mārªhē, or mārē-go.
197. He will beat	Woh mārēgā	Wahu marihai	Bō mārihē, mārªhē, or mārē-gō.
198. We shall beat	Ham mārẽ̃gē	Ham marihanu, ham marihaĩ.	Ham mārihẽ̃, mārªhẽ̃, or mārẽ̃-gē.
199. You will beat	Tum mārōgē	Tum marihau	Tum mārihō, mārªhō, or mārō-gē.
200. They will beat	Wē mārẽ̃gē	Wē marihaĩ	Bē mārihẽ̃, mārªhẽ̃, or mārẽ̃-gē.
201. I should beat	Maĩ mārªtā	.....	.....
202. I am beaten	Maĩ mārā-jātā-hũ̃	Maĩ mārō jāt-haũ	Maĩ mārō jāt
203. I was beaten	Maĩ mārā-gayā	Maĩ mārō gaō-thõ̃	Maĩ mārō gaō
204. I shall be beaten	Maĩ mārā-jaũ̃gā	Maĩ mārō jaihaũ	Maĩ mārō jaihõ̃
205. I go	Maĩ jātā-hũ̃	Maĩ jāũ̃, jāt-haũ	Maĩ jāt
206. Thou goest	Tū jātā-hai	Tū jāē, jāt-hai	Taĩ jāt
207. He goes	Woh jātā-hai	Wahu jāē, jāt-hai	Bō jāt
208. We go	Ham jātē-haĩ	Ham jānu, jāt-hanu	Ham jāt
209. You go	Tum jātē-hō	Tum jāau, jāt-hau	Tum jāt
210. They go	Wē jātē-haĩ	Wē jāẽ̃, jat-haĩ	Bē jāt
211. I went	Maĩ gayā	Mai gaō-rahaũ	Maĩ gaō (fem. gayī)
212. Thou wentest	Tū gayā	Tū gaō-rahai	Tũ gaō
213. He went	Woh gayā	Wahu gaō-rahai	Bō gaō

Bundēlī (Banāpharī).	Bundēlī (Bhadaurī of Gwalior).	English.
Ham-nai mārō, māryan .	Ham-nē mārau . .	188. We beat (Past Tense).
Tum-nai mārō, māryō .	Tum-nē mārau . .	189. You beat (Past Tense).
Un-nai mārō, mārōn . .	Bin-nē mārau . . .	190. They beat (Past Tense).
Maĩ mārat-haũ . .	Maĩ mātta hõ . . .	191. I am beating.
Maĩ mārat-hatō, mārat hatõy.	Maĩ mātta hatō . .	192. I was beating.
Maĩ-nai marō-hatō, mārō-hatõy.	Maĩ-nē marau hatō . .	193. I had beaten.
Maĩ māraũ	Haũ māraũ	194. I may beat.
Maĩ marihaũ . . .	Haũ māraũgō	195. I shall beat.
Taĩ marihai . . .	Tẽ māraigō . . .	196. Thou wilt beat.
Wā mārī . . .	Ba mārᵃhai . . .	197. He will beat.
Ham marihē, marihaĩ .	Ham-ũ mārᵃhaĩ . .	198. We shall beat.
Tum marihā, marihau .	Tum-ũ mārᵃhau . .	199. You will beat.
Ũy marihaĩ . . .	Bē-ũ mārᵃhaĩ . . .	200. They will beat.
.....	.....	201. I should beat.
Maĩ mārō jāt-haũ . .	Maĩ mārau hõ . . .	202. I am beaten.
Maĩ mārō gaō . . .	Maĩ mārau hatō . .	203. I was beaten.
Maĩ mārō jaihaũ . . .	Maĩ mārau jāũgō . .	204. I shall be beaten.
Maĩ jāt-haũ . . .	Maĩ chalõ, maĩ jāt-hõ .	205. I go.
Taĩ jāt-hī . . .	Tẽ chalai, tẽ jāt-hai . .	206. Thou goest.
Wā jāt-hai . . .	Ba chalai, ba jāt-hai .	207. He goes.
Ham jāt-haĩ . . .	Ham-ũ jāt-haĩ . . .	208. We go.
Tum jāt-hā . . .	Tum-ũ jat-hō . . .	209. You go.
Ũy jāt-haĩ . . .	Bē-ũ jāt-haĩ . . .	210. They go.
Maĩ gaō, gā, gaõy . .	Maĩ gayau . . .	211. I went.
Taĩ gaō, gā, gaōy . .	Tẽ gayau . . .	212. Thou wentest.
Wā gaō, gā . . .	Ba gayau . . .	213. He went.

English.	Hindōstānī (Delhi).	Dakhinī of Bombay.	Vernacular Hindōstānī (Upper Doab).
215. You went	Tum gaē	Tum gaē	Tam gayē
216. They went	Wē gaē	Wo gaē	Wẽ gayē
217. Go	Jā	Jā	Jā
218. Going	Jātā	Jātā	Jāttā
219. Gone	Gayā	Gayā	Gayā, giyā
220. What is your name?	Tumhārā nām kyā hai?	Tumārā nām kyā hai?	Tērā kē nā hē?
221. How old is this horse?	Is ghoṛē-kī 'umr kyā hai?	Yē ghōṛē-kī umr kitnī hai?	Yū ghōṛā kai baras-kā?
222. How far is it from here to Kashmir?	Yahā̃-sē Kashmīr kitⁿnī dūr hai?	Hyā̃-sē Kāshmīr kitnē (sic) dūr hai?	Hīntar Kasmīr kitⁿnī dūr hē?
223. How many sons are there in your father's house?	Tumhārē bāp-kē ghar-mẽ kitⁿnē bēṭē haĩ?	Tumārē bāp-kē ghar-mẽ kitnē bēṭē hai?	Tērē bāppū-kē ghar-mẽ kai beṭṭē?
224. I have walked a long way to-day.	Maī āj bahut chalā-hū̃	Āj maĩ bahōt chalā	Āj mẽ bahōt dūr-lō pāhū̃ gayā.
225. The son of my uncle is married to his sister.	Mērē chachā-kē laṛⁿkē-kī us-kē bahin-sē shādī huī-hai.	Mērē chāchā-kē bēṭē-nē us-kī bhain-sē shādī kiyā (sic).	Mērē chāchchā-kē beṭṭē-kā byāh us-kī bāhaṇ-kī sāth huā.
226. In the house is the saddle of the white horse.	Ghar-mẽ safēd ghōṛē-kā zīn hai.	Ghar-mẽ sufēd ghōṛē-kā zīn hai.	Koṭṭhī-mẽ dhōḷē ghōṛē-kī kāṭṭhī hē.
227. Put the saddle upon his back.	Us-kī pīṭh-par zīn kasō	Us-kē pīṭh-par zīn rakh	Us-kē uppar kāṭṭhī bā̃dhō.
228. I have beaten his son with many stripes.	Maĩ-nē us-kē laṛⁿkē-kō bahut-sē tasmō̃-sē mārā-hai.	Maĩ-nē us-kē bēṭē-kū bahōt chhaṛyā̃ mārā.	Mẽ us-kē beṭṭē-kai bahōt bẽt mārē.
229. He is grazing cattle on the top of the hill.	Woh pahāṛ-kī chōṭī-par mawēshī charā-rahā-hai.	Wō ḍōgar-kē sir-par ḍhōr charātā-hai.	Ō tillē-pē ḍhā̃gar chugāwē.
230. He is sitting on a horse under that tree.	Woh us darakht-kē nīchē ghōṛē-par baiṭhā-hai.	Wō us jhāṛ-kē talē ghōṛē-par baiṭhā-hai.	Ō us rukh-kē taḷē ghōṛē-pē chaḍhā baṭṭha.
231. His brother is taller than his sister.	Us-kā bhāī us-kī bahin-sē ziyādā lambā hai.	Us-kā bhāī us-kē (sic) bhain-sē ū̃chā hai.	Us-kā bhāī us-kī bāhaṇ-tẽ ghaṇā unchchā.
232. The price of that is two rupees and a half.	Us-kī qīmat ḍhāī rupayē hai.	Us-kī kīmat aṛhāī rūpiyā hai.	Wā chīj ḍhāī rupaē-kī
233. My father lives in that small house.	Mērā bāp us chhōṭē ghar-mẽ rahⁿtā-hai.	Mērā bāp us chhōṭē ghar-mẽ rahtā-hai.	Mērā bāppū us chhoṭṭē ghar-mẽ rahē.
234. Give this rupee to him	Us-kō yeh rupayā dē-dō	Yē rūpiyā us-kū dēo	Yū rupēyā usē dē-dō
235. Take those rupees from him.	Us-sē woh rupayē lē-lō	Wō rūpiyā us-kē pās-sē lēo	Yē rupaē us-pa-tẽ lē-lō
236. Beat him well and bind him with ropes.	Us-kō khūb mārō aur rassiyō̃-sē bā̃dh-dō.	Us-kō khūb mārō aur rassī-sē bā̃dhō.	Usē ghaṇā mār-piṭ-kē jewaṛī-tē bā̃dhō.
237. Draw water from the well.	Kūē̃-sē pānī khī̃chō	Kūvē-sē pānī nikālō	Kuē-mẽ-tẽ pāṇī khanchchō.
238. Walk before me	Mērē sāmⁿnē chalō	Mērē āgē chalō	Mērē agē chal
239. Whose boy comes behind you?	Tumhārē pīchhē kis-kā laṛⁿkā-ātā-hai?	Kis-kā chhōkrā tērē pīchhē ātā-hai?	Tērē pichchhē kis-kā lōṇḍā āwē?
240. From whom did you buy that?	Tum-nē woh kis-sē kharīdā-hai?	Yē tū-nē kis-kō pās-sē bēchtē-liyā?	Tẽ yā chīj kis-kē-tẽ laī?

Bāngarū.	Braj Bhākhā.	English.
Tham gaē	Tum gaē	5. You went.
Oh gaē	Wē gaē	6. They went.
Jā	Jāu, jāau	17. Go.
Jāndā	Jātu	18. Going.
Gayā	Gayau	19. Gone.
Thārā kai nū sai ? . .	Tihārau nām kahā ai ? .	20. What is your name ?
Yoh ghōṛā kēḍ baṛā hai ? .	Ji ghōṛā-kaĩ bass kau ai ? .	21. How old is this horse ?
Aiṭhē-tē Kashmīr kitᵃnī bāṭ hai ?	Jhā̃-tē Kasmīri-kū̃ kitēk dūri ai ?	22. How far is it from here to Kashmir ?
Thārē bābbū-kē ghar kaē jaryaṭ haĩ ?	Tihāre dāū-kī bākhari-mē̃ kitēk pūt aĩ ?	23. How many sons are there in your father's house ?
Maĩ āj ghanē dūr chālyā .	Āju maĩ bhautu chalau-ū̃ .	24. I have walked a long way to-day.
Mērē kākē-kē chhōrē-kā byāh us-kī bībī-sētī hōyā-sē.	Mērē kākā-kau pūt wā-kī bhainī-kū̃ byāyau-ai.	25. The son of my uncle is married to his sister.
Ḍhūṇḍ-mē̃ dhaulē ghōṛē-kī kāṭhī sē.	Bākhari-mē̃ dhaurē ghōṛā-kī jīn ai.	26. In the house is the saddle of the white horse.
Us-kī kuṛ-par kāṭhī dhar diyō.	Wā-kī pīṭhi-pai jīn dhari dēu.	27. Put the saddle upon his back.
Mai-nē us-kē chhōrē-tī ghaṇē kōṛyā̃-sītē māryā-sē.	Maĩ-nē wā-kē pūt-kū̃ bhaut kurran-sū̃ mārau-ai.	28. I have beaten his son with many stripes.
Oh pahāṛ-kē sikhar ḍā̃gar charāwē-sai.	Wuh pahāṛī-kī ṭugᵃsī-pai ḍhōr charāmatu-ai.	29. He is grazing cattle on the top of the hill.
Oh ēk ghōṛē-par us rūkh-kē talē baiṭhā-sē.	Wuh ghōṛā-pai wā pēṛ-kē nīchaĩ baiṭhau-bhayau-ai.	30. He is sitting on a horse under that tree.
Us-kā bhāī us-kī bībī-tē ghanā ūchā sē.	Wā-kau bhaĩkᵃrau wā-kī bhaĩni-sū̃ lambau ai.	31. His brother is taller than his sister.
Us-kā mōl dhāī (sic) rōpaya saĩ.	Wā-kau mōlu aṛhāī rupaiyā ai.	32. The price of that is two rupees and a half.
Merā bābbū us chhōṭī ḍhūṇḍ-mē̃ rahᵃwē-sē.	Mērau dāū bā chhōṭī bākhari-mē̃ rahatu-ai.	33. My father lives in that small house.
Yoh rōpaya us-tī dē-dō .	Bā-kū̃ ji rupaiyā dai-dēu .	34. Give this rupee to him.
Un rōpaya-tī us-tī lē-lō .	Bā-pai-tē bē rupaiyā lai-lēu.	35. Take those rupees from him.
Us-tē zōr mārō ar jīwaryā̃-sītē bā̃dh-diyō.	Bā-kū̃ khūbu pīṭau auru bā-kū̃ rassini-tē bā̃dhau.	36. Beat him well and bind him with ropes.
Kūē̃-tē pānī kāh-diyō .	Kūā-mē̃-sū̃ pānī khaĩchau .	37. Draw water from the well.
Mērē āgē chālō . .	Mērē saũhī̃ chalau . .	38. Walk before me.
Kis-kā jaryaṭ thārē pāchhē āwē-sē ?	Tihārē pāchhaĩ ka̤un-kau chhauṛā āmatu-ai ?	39. Whose boy comes behind you ?
Oh thā-nē kis-tē mōl-liyā ?	Tum-nē̃ buh kaun-pai-sū̃ ōl liyau ?	40. From whom did you buy that ?
		41. From a shopkeeper of

English.	Hindōstānī (Delhi).	Dakhinī of Bombay.	Vernacular Hindōstānī (Upper Doab).
215. You went . .	Tum gaē	Tum gaē	Tam gayē . . . .
216. They went . .	Wē gaē	Wo gaē	Wē gayē . . . .
217. Go	Jā	Jā	Jā . . . . .
218. Going . . .	Jātā	Jātā	Jāttā . . . . .
219. Gone . . .	Gayā	Gayā	Gayā, giyā . . . .
220. What is your name ? .	Tumhārā nām kyā hai ? .	Tumārā nām kyā hai ? .	Tērā kē nā hē ? . .
221. How old is this horse ?	Is ghoṛē-kī 'umr kyā hai ?	Yē ghōṛē-kī umr kitnī hai ?	Yū ghōṛā kai baras-kā ? .
222. How far is it from here to Kashmir ?	Yahā̃-sē Kashmīr kitⁿī dūr hai ?	Hyā̃-sē Kāshmīr kitnē (sic) dūr hai ?	Hīntar Kasmīr kitⁿī dūr hē ?
223. How many sons are there in your father's house ?	Tumhārē bāp-kē ghar-mē̃ kitⁿē bēṭē haĩ ?	Tumārē bāp-kē ghar-mē̃ kitnē bēṭē hai ?	Tērē bāppū-kē ghar-mē̃ kai beṭṭē?
224. I have walked a long way to-day.	Maī āj bahut chalā-hū̃ .	Āj maĩ bahōt chalā . .	Āj mē̃ bahōt dūr-lō pāhū̃ gayā.
225. The son of my uncle is married to his sister.	Mērē chachā-kē laṛⁿkē-kī us-kē bahin-sē shādī huī-hai.	Mērē chāchā-kē bēṭē-nē us-kī bhain-sē śhādī kiyā (sic).	Mērē chāchchā-kē beṭṭē-kā byāh us-kī bāhaṇ-kī sāth huā.
226. In the house is the saddle of the white horse.	Ghar-mē̃ safēd ghōṛē-kā zīn hai.	Ghar-mē̃ sufēd ghōṛē-kā zīn hai.	Koṭṭhī-mē̃ dhōḷē ghōṛē-kī kāṭṭhī hē.
227. Put the saddle upon his back.	Us-kī pīṭh-par zīn kasō .	Us-kē pīṭh-par zīn rakh .	Us-kē uppar kāṭṭhī bā̃dhō.
228. I have beaten his son with many stripes.	Maĩ-nē us-kē laṛⁿkē-kō bahut-sē tasmō̃-sē mārā-hai.	Maĩ-nē us-kē bēṭē-kū bahōt chhaṛyā̃ mārā.	Mē̃ us-kē beṭṭē-kai bahōt bēt mārē.
229. He is grazing cattle on the top of the hill.	Woh pahāṛ-kī chōṭī-par mawēshī charā-rahā-hai.	Wō ḍōgar-kē sir-par ḍhōr charātā-hai.	Ō tillē-pē ḍhā̃gar chugāwē.
230. He is sitting on a horse under that tree.	Woh us darakht-kē nīchē ghōṛē-par baiṭhā-hai.	Wō us jhāṛ-kē talē ghōṛē-par baiṭhā-hai.	Ō us rukh-kē taḷē ghōṛē-pē chaḍhā baṭṭha.
231. His brother is taller than his sister.	Us-kā bhāī us-kī bahin-sē ziyādā lambā hai.	Us-kā bhāī us-kē (sic) bhain-sē ū̃chā hai.	Us-kā bhāī us-kī bāhaṇ-tē ghaṇā unchchā.
232. The price of that is two rupees and a half.	Us-kī qīmat ḍhāī rupayē hai.	Us-kī kīmat aṛhāī rūpiyā hai.	Wā chīj ḍhāī rupaē-kī .
233. My father lives in that small house.	Mērā bāp us chhōṭē ghar-mē̃ rahⁿtā-hai.	Mērā bāp us chhōṭē ghar-mē̃ rahtā-hai.	Mērā bāppū us chhoṭṭē ghar-mē̃ rahē.
234. Give this rupee to him	Us-kō yeh rupayā dē-dō .	Yē rūpiyā us-kū dēo . .	Yū rupēyā usē dē-dō . .
235. Take those rupees from him.	Us-sē woh rupayē lē-lō .	Wō rūpiyā us-kē pās-sē lēo	Yē rupaē us-pa-tē̃ lē-lō .
236. Beat him well and bind him with ropes.	Us-kō khūb mārō aur rassiyō̃-sē bā̃dh-dō.	Us-kō khūb mārō aur rassī-sē bā̃dhō.	Usē ghaṇā mār-pīṭ-kē jewaṛī-tē bā̃dhō.
237. Draw water from the well.	Kūē̃-sē pānī khīchō . .	Kūvē-sē pānī nikālō . .	Kuē-mē̃-tē̃ pāṇī khanchchō .
238. Walk before me .	Mērē sāmⁿnē chalō . .	Mērē āgē chalō . . .	Mērē agē chal . . .
239. Whose boy comes behind you ?	Tumhārē pīchhē kis-kā laṛⁿkā-ātā-hai ?	Kis-kā chhōkrā tērē pīchhē ātā-hai ?	Tērē pichchhē kis-kā lōṇḍā āwē ?
240. From whom did you buy that ?	Tum-nē woh kis-sē kharīdā-hai ?	Yē tū-nē kis-kē pās-sē bēchtē-liyā ?	Tē yā chīj kis-kē-tē̃ lai ? .

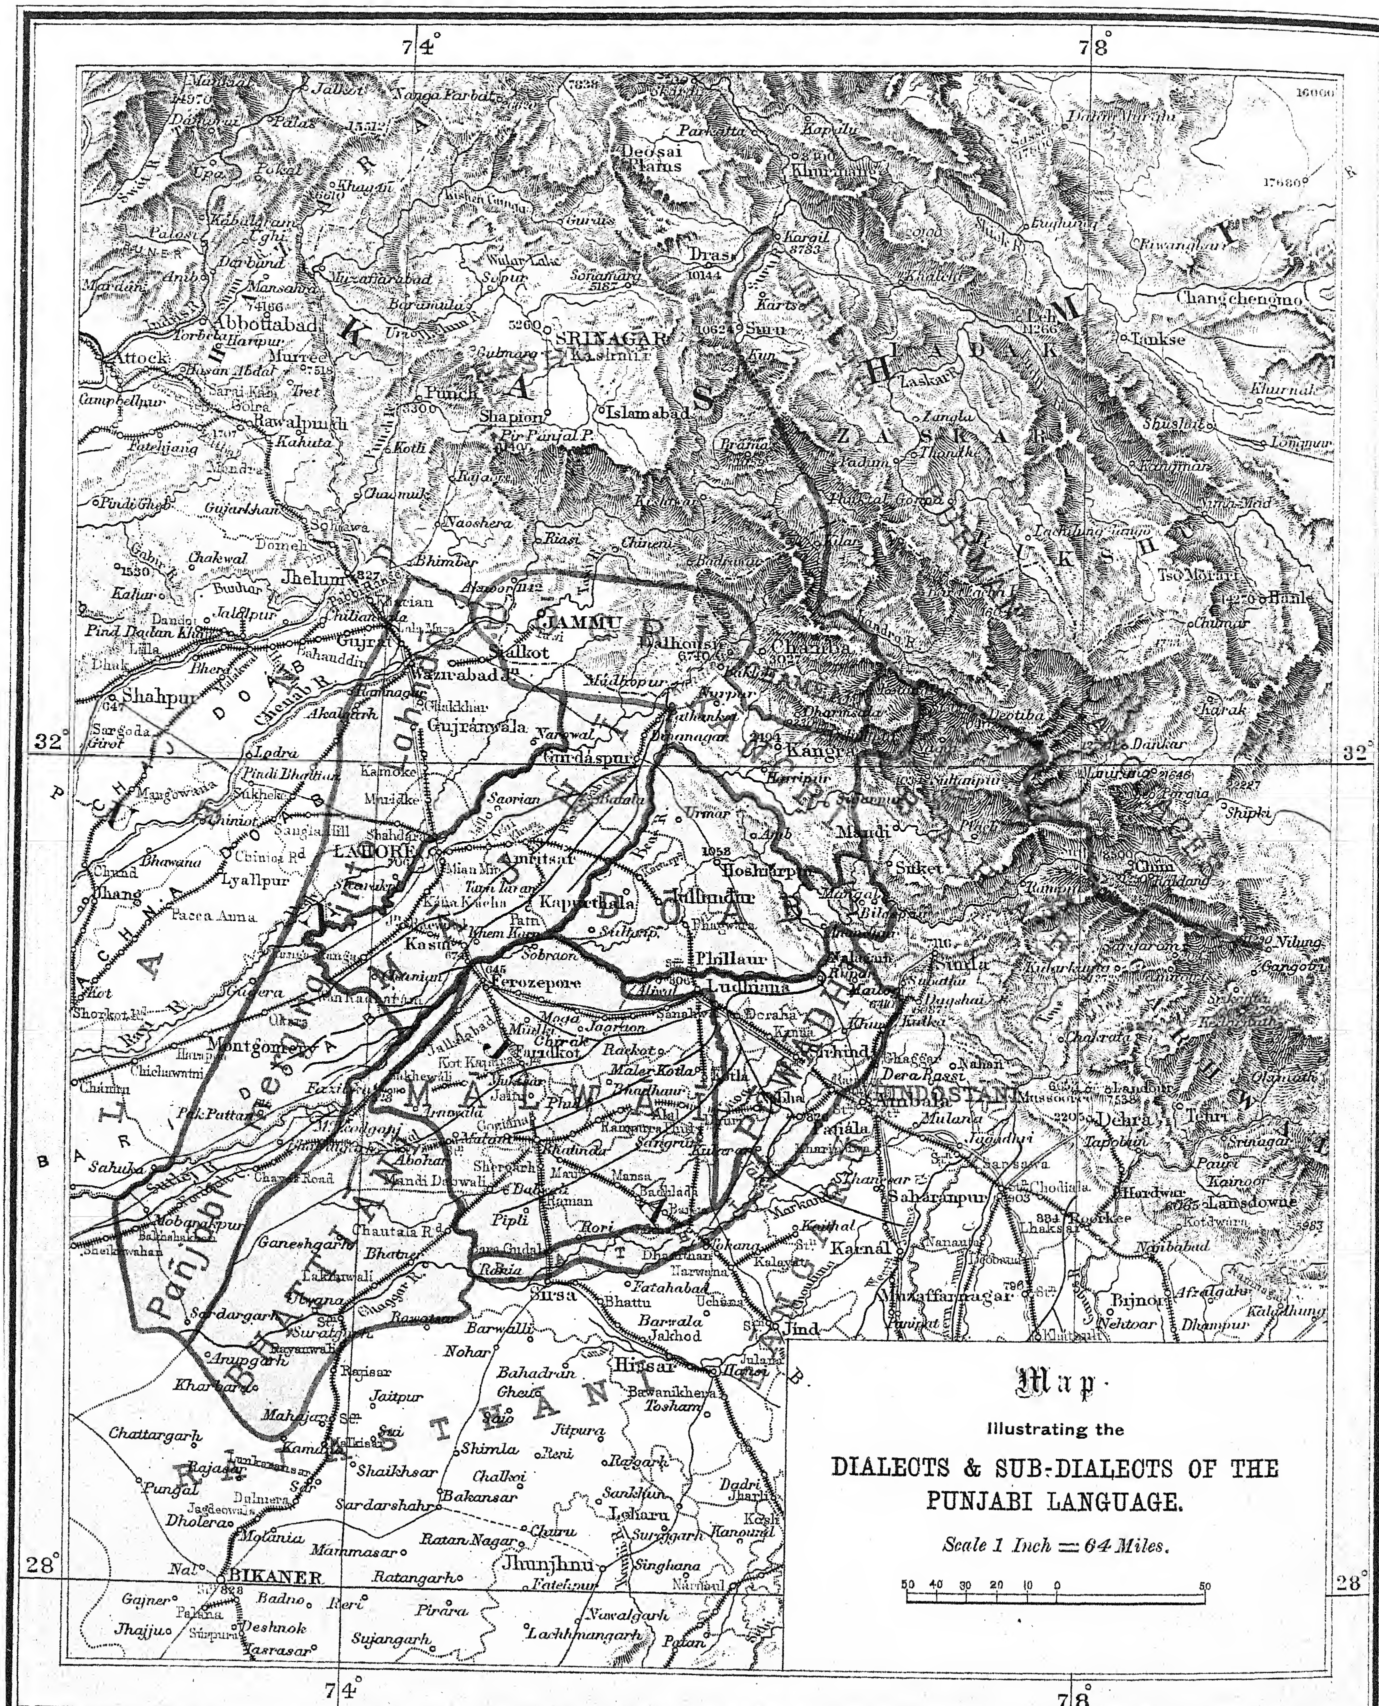
Bāngarū.	Braj Bhākhā.		English.
Tham gaē	Tum gaē		215. You went.
Oh gaē	Wē gaē	.	216. They went.
Jā	Jāu, jāau	.	217. Go.
Jāndā	Jātu	.	218. Going.
Gayā	Gayau	.	219. Gone.
Thārā kai nū sai ? . .	Tihārau nām kahā ai ? .	.	220. What is your name ?
Yoh ghōṛā kēḍ baṛā hai ? .	Ji ghōṛā-kaĭ bass kau ai ? .	ō	221. How old is this horse ?
Aiṭhē-tē Kashmīr kitᵃnī bāṭ hai ?	Jhā-tē Kasmīri-kŭ kitō dūri ai ?	r	222. How far is it from here to Kashmir ?
Thārē bābbū-kē ghar kaē jaryaṭ haĭ ?	Tihāre dāū-kī bakhari-mē kitēk pūt aĭ ?	ai	223. How many sons are there in your father's house ?
Maĭ āj ghanē dūr chālyā .	Āju maĭ bhautu chalau-ũ .	ō	224. I have walked a long way to-day.
Mērē kākē-kē chhōrē-kā byāh us-kī bībī-sētī hōyā-sē.	Mērō kākā-kau pūt wā-kī bhainī-kŭ byāyau-ai.	u ō-	225. The son of my uncle is married to his sister.
Ḍhūṇḍ-mē dhaulē ghōṛē-kī kāṭhī sē.	Bākhari-mē dhaurō ghōṛa-kī jīn ai.	ēd ō-	226. In the house is the saddle of the white horse.
Us-kī kuṛ-par kāṭhī dhar diyō.	Wā-kī pīṭhi-pai jīn dhari dēu.	ō .	227. Put the saddle upon his back.
Mai-nē us-kē chhōrē-tī ghaṇē kōṛyā̃-sītē māryā-sē.	Maĭ-nē wā-kē put-kŭ bhaut kurran-sŭ marau-ai.	at	228. I have beaten his son with many stripes.
Oh pahāṛ-kē sikhar ḍā̃gar charāwē-sai.	Wuh pahāṛi-kī ṭugᵃsi-pai ḍhōr charāmatu-ai.	hē	229. He is grazing cattle on the top of the hill.
Oh ēk ghōṛē-par us rūkh-kē talē baiṭhā-sē.	Wuh ghōṛā-pai wā pēṛ-kē nīchaĭ baiṭhau-bhayau-ai	aō-	230. He is sitting on a horse under that tree.
Us-kā bhāī us-kī bībī-tē ghanā ũchā sē.	Wā-kau bhaĭkᵃrau wa-kī bhaĭni-sŭ lambau ai.	in-	231. His brother is taller than his sister.
Us-kā mōl dhāī (sic) rōpaya saĭ.	Wā-kau mōlu aṛhāi rupaiya ai.	iyā	232. The price of that is two rupees and a half.
Merā bābbū us chhōṭī ḍhūṇḍ-mē rahᵃwē-sē.	Mērau dāū bā chhōṭi bākhari-mē rahatu-ai.	i-sī	233. My father lives in that small house.
Yoh rōpaya us-tī dē-dō .	Bā-kŭ ji rupaiyā dai-dēu	.	234. Give this rupee to him.
Un rōpaya-tī us-tī lē-lō .	Bā-pai-tō bō rupaiyā lai-lēu	.	235. Take those rupees from him.
Us-tē zōr mārō ar jīwaryā̃-sītē bā̃dh-diyō.	Bā-kŭ khūbu pītau auru ba-kŭ rassini-tō bā̃dhau.		236. Beat him well and bind him with ropes.
Kūē̃-tē pānī kāh-diyō .	Kūā-mē̃-sŭ pānī khaĭchau .	.	237. Draw water from the well.
Mērē āgē chālō . .	Mērē saũhĭ chalau . .	.	238. Walk before me.
Kis-kā jaryaṭ thārē pāchhē āwē-sē ?	Tihārē pāchhaĭ kaun-kau chhauṛā āmatu-ai ?	alau aō ?	239. Whose boy comes behind you ?
Oh thā-nē kis-tē mōl-liyā ?	Tum-nē buh kaun-pai-sŭ		240. From whom did you buy that ?

English.	Hindōstānī (Delhi).	Dakhinī of Bombay.	Vernacular Hindōstānī (Upper Doab).
215. You went	Tum gaē	Tum gaē	Tam gayē
216. They went	Wē gaē	Wo gaē	Wẽ gayē
217. Go	Jā	Jā	Jā
218. Going	Jātā	Jātā	Jāttā
219. Gone	Gayā	Gayā	Gayā, giyā
220. What is your name?	Tumhārā nām kyā hai?	Tumārā nām kyā hai?	Tērā kē nā hē?
221. How old is this horse?	Is ghoṛē-kī 'umr kyā hai?	Yē ghōṛē-kī umr kitnī hai?	Yū ghōṛā kai baras-kā?
222. How far is it from here to Kashmir?	Yahã̄-sē Kashmīr kit^{a}nī dūr hai?	Hyã̄-sē Kāshmīr kitnē (sic) dūr hai?	Hīntar Kasmīr kit^{a}nī dūr hē?
223. How many sons are there in your father's house?	Tumhārē bāp-kē ghar-mẽ kit^{a}nē bēṭē haĩ?	Tumārē bāp-kē ghar-mẽ kitnē bēṭē hai?	Tērē bāppū-kē ghar-mẽ kai beṭṭē?
224. I have walked a long way to-day.	Maī āj bahut chalā-hũ	Āj maĩ bahōt chalā	Āj mẽ bahōt dūr-lō pāhũ gayā.
225. The son of my uncle is married to his sister.	Mērē chachā-kē laṛ^{a}kē-kī us-kē bahin-sē shādi huī-hai.	Mērē chāchā-kē bēṭē-nē us-kī bhain-sē shādī kiyā (sic).	Mērē chāchchā-kē beṭṭē-kā byāh us-kī bāhaṇ-kī sāth huā.
226. In the house is the saddle of the white horse.	Ghar-mẽ safēd ghōṛē-kā zīn hai.	Ghar-mẽ sufēd ghōṛē-kā zīn hai.	Koṭṭhī-mẽ dhōḷē ghōṛē-kī kāṭṭhī hē.
227. Put the saddle upon his back.	Us-kī pīṭh-par zīn kasō	Us-kē pīṭh-par zīn rakh	Us-kē uppar kāṭṭhī bā̃dhō.
228. I have beaten his son with many stripes.	Maĩ-nē us-kē laṛ^{a}kē-kō bahut-sē tasmõ̃-sē mārā-hai.	Maĩ-nē us-kē bēṭē-kū bahōt chhaṛyã̄ mārā.	Mẽ us-kē beṭṭē-kai bahōt bẽt mārē.
229. He is grazing cattle on the top of the hill.	Woh pahāṛ-kī chōṭī-par mawēshī charā-rahā-hai.	Wō ḍōgar-kē sir-par ḍhōr charātā-hai.	Ō tillē-pē ḍhã̄gar chugāwē.
230. He is sitting on a horse under that tree.	Woh us darakht-kē nīchē ghōṛē-par baiṭhā-hai.	Wō us jhāṛ-kē talē ghōṛē-par baiṭhā-hai.	Ō us rukh-kē taḷē ghōṛē-pē chaḍhā baṭṭha.
231. His brother is taller than his sister.	Us-kā bhāī us-kī bahin-sē ziyādā lambā hai.	Us-kā bhāī us-kē (sic) bhain-sē ũchā hai.	Us-kā bhāī us-kī bāhaṇ-tẽ ghaṇā unchchā.
232. The price of that is two rupees and a half.	Us-kī qīmat ḍhāī rupayē hai.	Us-kī kīmat aṛhāī rūpiyā hai.	Wā chīj ḍhāī rupaē-kī
233. My father lives in that small house.	Mērā bāp us chhōṭē ghar-mẽ rah^{a}tā-hai.	Mērā bāp us chhōṭē ghar-mẽ rahtā-hai.	Mērā bāppū us chhoṭṭē ghar-mẽ rahē.
234. Give this rupee to him	Us-kō yeh rupayā dē-dō	Yē rūpiyā us-kū dēo	Yū rupēyā usē dē-dō
235. Take those rupees from him.	Us-sē woh rupayē lē-lō	Wō rūpiyā us-kē pās-sē lēo	Yē rupaē us-pa-tẽ lē-lō
236. Beat him well and bind him with ropes.	Us-kō khūb mārō aur rassiyõ̃-sē bā̃dh-dō.	Us-kō khūb mārō aur rassī-sē bā̃dhō.	Usē ghaṇā mār-pīṭ-kē jewaṛī-tē bā̃dhō.
237. Draw water from the well.	Kũẽ-sē pānī khĩchō	Kūvē-sē pānī nikālō	Kuē-mẽ-tẽ pāṇī khanchchō.
238. Walk before me	Mērē sām^{a}nē chalō	Mērē āgē chalō	Mērē agē chal
239. Whose boy comes behind you?	Tumhārē pīchhē kis-kā laṛ^{a}kā-ātā-hai?	Kis-kā chhōkrā tērē pīchhē ātā-hai?	Tērē pichchhē kis-kā lōṇḍā āwē?
240. From whom did you buy that?	Tum-nē woh kis-sē kharīdā-hai?	Yē tū-nē kis-kē pās-sē bēchtē-liyā?	Tẽ yā chīj kis-kē-tẽ laī?

Bāngarū.	Braj Bhākhā.	English.
Tham gaē	Tum gaē	5. You went.
Oh gaē	Wē gaē	6. They went.
Jā	Jāu, jāau	7. Go.
Jāndā	Jātu	18. Going.
Gayā	Gayau	19. Gone.
Thārā kai nū sai ? . .	Tihārau nām kahā ai ? .	20. What is your name ?
Yoh ghōṛā kēḍ baṛā hai ? .	Ji ghōṛā-kaĩ bass kau ai ? .	21. How old is this horse ?
Aiṭhē-tē Kashmīr kitªnī bāṭ hai ?	Jhā̃-tē Kasmīri-kū̃ kitēk dūri ai ?	22. How far is it from here to Kashmir ?
Thārē bābbū-kē ghar kaē jaryaṭ haĩ ?	Tihāre dāū-kī bākhari-mē̃ kitēk pūt aĩ ?	23. How many sons are there in your father's house ?
Maĩ āj ghanē dūr chālyā .	Āju maĩ bhautu chalau-ū̃ .	24. I have walked a long way to-day.
Mērē kākē-kē chhōrē-kā byāh us-kī bībī-sētī hōyā-sē.	Mērē kākā-kau pūt wā-kī bhainī-kū̃ byāyau-ai.	25. The son of my uncle is married to his sister.
Ḍhūṇḍ-mē̃ dhaulē ghōṛē-kī kāṭhī sē.	Bākhari-mē̃ dhaurē ghōṛā-kī jīn ai.	26. In the house is the saddle of the white horse.
Us-kī kuṛ-par kāṭhī dhar diyō.	Wā-kī pīṭhi-pai jīn dhari dēu.	27. Put the saddle upon his back.
Mai-nē us-kē chhōrē-tī ghaṇē kōṛyā̃-sītē māryasē.	Maĩ-nē wā-kē pūt-kū̃ bhaut kurran-sū̃ mārau-ai.	28. I have beaten his son with many stripes.
Oh pahāṛ-kē sikhar ḍā̃gar charāwē-sai.	Wuh pahāṛī-kī ṭugªsī-pai ḍhōr charāmatu-ai.	29. He is grazing cattle on the top of the hill.
Oh ēk ghōṛē-par us rūkh-kē talē baiṭhā-sē.	Wuh ghōṛā-pai wā pēṛ-kē nīchaĩ baiṭhau-bhayau-ai.	30. He is sitting on a horse under that tree.
Us-kā bhāī us-kī bībī-tē ghanā ūchā sē.	Wā-kau bhaĩkªrau wā-kī bhaĩni-sū̃ lambau ai.	31. His brother is taller than his sister.
Us-kā mōl dhāī (sic) rōpaya saĩ.	Wā-kau mōlu aṛhāī rupaiyā ai.	32. The price of that is two rupees and a half.
Merā bābbū us chhōṭī ḍhūṇḍ-mē̃ rahªwē-sē.	Mērau dāū bā chhōṭī bākhari-mē̃ rahatu-ai.	33. My father lives in that small house.
Yoh rōpaya us-tī dē-dō .	Bā-kū̃ ji rupaiyā dai-dēu .	34. Give this rupee to him.
Un rōpaya-tī us-tī lē-lō .	Bā-pai-tē bē rupaiyā lai-lēu.	35. Take those rupees from him.
Us-tē zōr mārō ar jīwaryā̃-sītē bā̃dh-diyō.	Bā-kū̃ khūbu pīṭáu auru bā-kū̃ rassini-tē bā̃dhau.	36. Beat him well and bind him with ropes.
Kūē̃-tē pānī kāh-diyō .	Kūā-mē̃-sū̃ pānī khaĩchau .	37. Draw water from the well.
Mērē āgē chālō . .	Mērē saū̃hī̃ chalau . .	38. Walk before me.
Kis-kā jaryaṭ thārē pāchhē āwē-sē ?	Tihārē pāchhaĩ kaun-kau chhauṛā āmatu-ai ?	39. Whose boy comes behind you ?
Oh thā-nē kis-tē mōl-liyā ?	Tum-nē̃ buh kaun-pai-sū̃ mōl liyau ?	40. From whom did you buy that ?
		241. From a shopkeeper of

English.	Hindōstānī (Delhi).	Kanaujī (Cawnpore).	Bundēlī.
215. You went . .	Tum gaē . .	Tum gayē-rahō . .	Tum gayē . . . .
216. They went . .	Wē gaē . . .	Wē gayē-rahaĭ . .	Bē gayē . . . .
217. Go	Jā	Jāu	Jā . . . . .
218. Going . . .	Jātā	Jātu	Jāt . . . . .
219. Gone . . .	Gayā	Gaō	Gaō . . . . .
220. What is your name ? .	Tumhārā nām kyā hai ?	Tumhārō kaunu nāmu hai ?	Tumāō (tōrō) kā nāo hai ? .
221. How old is this horse ?	Is ghoṛē-kī 'umr kyā hai ?	Jau ṭaṭuā kittī umir-kō hai ?	Jō ghuraʷwā kai bars-kō hai ?
222. How far is it from here to Kashmir ?	Yahā̃-sē Kashmīr kitaʰnī dūr hai ?	Ihā̃-tē Kaśmīr kitaʰnī dūri hai ?	It-sē Kaśmīr kitek dūr hai ?
223. How many sons are there in your father's house ?	Tumhārē bāp-kē ghar-m kitaʰnē bēṭē haĭ ?	Tumhārē bāpu-kē ghar-mahā̃ kitaʰnē larikā haĭ?	Tumāyē bāp-kē ghar-mē̃ kai larʰkā hē ?
224. I have walked a long way to-day.	Maī āj bahut chalā-hū̃	Maĭ āju dūri chalō-rahō̃ .	Maĭ āj bilāt riṅgō phirō .
225. The son of my uncle is married to his sister.	Mērē chachā-kē laṛaʰkē kī us-kē bahin-sē shād huī-hai.	Hamārē chāchā-kō larikā bahi-kī bahinī-tē biyāhō hai.	Mērē kakkā-kō larʰkā ū-kī bain-kō biāhō hai ?
226. In the house is the saddle of the white horse.	Ghar-mē̃ safēd ghōṛē-k zīn hai.	Obʰarī-mē̃ sapēd ṭaṭuā-kō jīnu dharō-hai.	Sapēt ghuraʷwā-kō palaĭchā ū ghar-mē̃ dharō hai.
227. Put the saddle upon his back.	Us-kī pīṭh-par zīn kasō	Ṭaṭuā-kērī pīṭhī-par jīnu dhar-dēu.	Ū-kī pīṭh-pai palaĭchā dhar dō.
228. I have beaten his son with many stripes.	Maĭ-nē us-kē laṛaʰkē-k bahut-sē tasmō̃-sē mārā-hai.	Bahi-kē larikā-kā̃ maĭ-nē bahut bētan mārō-hai.	Maĭ-nē ū-kē larʰkā-khō̃ khūb kōran-sē mārō.
229. He is grazing cattle on the top of the hill.	Woh pahāṛ-kī chōṭī-pa mawēshī charā-rahā-hai.	Wahu goruan-kā̃ pahāṛ-kī chuṭaĭyā-par charāwat-hai.	Bō pahār-kī chuṭiā-pai ḍhōr charāut-āy.
230. He is sitting on a horse under that tree.	Woh us darakht-kē nīchē ghōṛē-par baiṭhā-hai.	Wahu ēk ṭaṭuā-par wā rūkh-kē tarē baiṭhō-hai.	Bō ū rūkh-kē naĭchē ghuraʷwā-pai baiṭhō hai.
231. His brother is taller than his sister.	Us-kā bhāī us-kī bahin-sē ziyādā lambā hai.	Bahi-kō bhāī bahi-kī bahin-sē ū̃chō hai.	Ū-kō bhaĭyā ū-kī bain-sē ū̃chō hai.
232. The price of that is two rupees and a half.	Us-kī qīmat ḍhāī rupayē hai.	Wā-kō dām aṛhāī rupʰyā haĭ.	Ū-kō dām aṛhāī rupaĭyā haĭ.
233. My father lives in that small house.	Mērā bāp us chhōṭē ghar-mē̃ rahʰtā-hai.	Hamār bāpu uhi chhōṭī obʰarī-mahā̃ basat-hai.	Mērē bāp ū halʰkē ghar-mē̃ rat-haĭ.
234. Give this rupee to him	Us-kō yeh rupayā dē-dō .	Jē rupʰyā bahi-kā dēu .	Jō rupaĭyā ū-khō̃ dēi rākhō.
235. Take those rupees from him.	Us-sē woh rupayē lē-lō .	Un rupʰyan-kā̃ un-sē lai-lēu	Bē rupaiyā ū-sē̃ lēi lō .
236. Beat him well and bind him with ropes.	Us-kō khūb mārō aur rassiyō̃-sē bā̃dh-dō.	Bahi-kā̃ bahut mārau auru bahi-kā̃ jaurī-sē bā̃dhi-dēu.	Ūē ain mār-kē jēorā-sē̃ bā̃dh dēō.
237. Draw water from the well.	Kūē̃-sē pānī khĭchō . .	Kuwā̃-tē pānī khaĭchi-lēu .	Kuā̃-sē pānī aĭchhō . .
238. Walk before me .	Mērē sāmʰnē chalō . .	Hamārē sāmʰnē chalō .	Mōrē āgē̃ riṅgō . .
239. Whose boy comes behind you ?	Tumhārē pīchhē kis-kā laṛaʰkā-ātā-hai ?	Tumhārē pāchhē kehi-kō larikā āwatu-hai ?	Kaun-kō mōṛā tumāyē pāchhē āut ?
240. From whom did you buy that ?	Tum-nē woh kis-sē kharīdā-hai ?	Bahi-kā̃ tum-nē kehi-sē laō-rahai ?	Bō tum-nē kaun-sē̃ laō-tō ?

Bundēlī (Banāpharī).	Bundēlī (Bhadaurī of Gwalior).	English.
Tum gaē, gē, gayō . .	Tūm-ũ gayē . . .	215. You went.
Ũy gaē, gē . . .	Bē-ũ gayē . . .	216. They went.
Jā	Jāu	217. Go.
Jāt	Jāt	218. Going.
Gaō, gā, gau . . .	Gayau	219. Gone.
Tumār kā nāw ? .	Tihārō kā nāũ hai ? . .	220. What is your name ?
Yā ghurᵃwā kai baras-kā hai ?	Ji ghōrā kitᵃnī bassan-kō hai ?	221. How old is this horse ?
Ihā-taĩ Kashmīr kitᵃnī dūr hai ?	Hĩyā-sē Kasᵃmīr kittī dūr hai ?	222. How far is it from here to Kashmir ?
Tumār bāp-kē ghar-maĩ kai larᵃkā haĩ ?	Tihārē pitā-kē ghar-mē kai larᵃkā haĩ ?	223. How many sons are there in your father's house ?
Āj maĩ bahut niāgō . .	Āj haũ bauhat chal-kē āō haũ.	224. I have walked a long way to-day.
Mōrē kakā-kē larᵃkā-khã bahinīwā-kī byāhī hai.	Hamārē kakā-kē larᵃkā-kau byāh bā-kī baihin-sē bhaō-hai.	225. The son of my uncle is married to his sister.
Ghar-maĩ supēt ghurᵃwā-kā palaĩchā dharō hai.	Bā ghar-mē bā suphēd ghōrā-kō pallēchā dharō-hai.	226. In the house is the saddle of the white horse.
Wā-kī pīṭh-par palaĩchā dhar dyā.	Bā pallēchā-kō bā-pai kasō .	227. Put the saddle upon his back.
Wā-kē larᵃkā-khã maĩ-nai bahut chapᵃkan mārō-hai.	Ham-nē jā larᵃkā-kē bauhat ḍũṛukiyã daī.	228. I have beaten his son with many stripes.
Wā pahār-kē ūpar gōrū charāwat-hai.	Bā ḍãṛē-pai pohiyā-pauhē charāī rahau-hai.	229. He is grazing cattle on the top of the hill.
Wā wā pyāṛē-kē taraĩ ghurᵃwā-pai baiṭhō hai.	Ba ghōrā-pai charhō ṭhāṛhō-hai pēṛ-kē nīchē.	230. He is sitting on a horse under that tree.
Wā-kau bhāī wā-kī bihan-saũ ũchō hai.	Bā-kau bhaiyā bā-kī baihin-sõ baṛō hai.	231. His brother is taller than his sister.
Wā-kau mōl aṛāī rupaiyā hai.	Bā-kē dām aṛhāī rupaiyā haĩ.	232. The price of that is two rupees and a half.
Mōr bāp wā halᵃkī maṛaiyā-maĩ rahat-hai.	Mērau kakā bā chhōṭī-sī bākhar-mē rahat-hai.	233. My father lives in that small house.
Wā-khã yā rupaiyā dai-dyā.	Jē rupaiyā un-kõ dēu .	234. Give this rupee to him.
Wā saũ yā rupaiyā lai-lyā .	Bē rupaiyā lai lēu . .	235. Take those rupees from him.
Wā-khã khūb mār aur jiwᵃrī-sai bãdh dyā.	.....	236. Beat him well and bind him with ropes.
Pānī kuwā-taĩ aĩch-lā .	Kuã-tē pānī bhar lāu .	237. Draw water from the well.
Mōr ãgai naĩg . .	Hamārē sāmᵃnē phirō .	238. Walk before me.
Kyā-kau larᵃkā tumār pāchhaĩ āwat-hai ?	Kaun-kau larᵃkā chalau āut-hai pāchhē ?	239. Whose boy comes behind you ?
Wā kyā-khaĩ laī-hai ? .	Kaun-tē tum-nē bā-kõ laō ?	240. From whom did you buy that ?



Reg. No. 3023 E., 10.—L. 1850.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

Name of the Language.

The name 'Pañjābī' explains itself. It means the language of the Punjab. As will be seen immediately the name is not a good one, for Pañjābī is not by any means the only language spoken in that Province.

Where spoken.

Pañjābī is the tongue of about 12¾ millions of people, and is spoken over the greater part of the eastern half of the Province of the Punjab, in the northern corner of the State of Bikaner in Rajputana, and in the southern half of the State of Jammu. In the extreme north-east of the Province, i.e. in most of the Simla Hill States and Kulu, the language is Pahāṛī. Further south, in the districts lying on or near the right bank of the river Jamna, viz. in the eastern half of Umballa, in Karnal, in most of Hissar (and the neighbouring portions of the State of Patiala), in Rohtak, Delhi and Gurgaon, the language is not Pañjābī, but is some form of Western Hindī. With these exceptions, we may say that the vernacular of the whole of the eastern Punjab is Pañjābī. To the north of this area lie the Himalayas, to its south the arid plains of Bikaner, and to its west the inhospitable Bāṛ of the Rechna Doab.

Linguistic Boundaries.

To its north and north-east Pañjābī is bounded by the Pahāṛī of the lower ranges of the Himalayas. It hardly extends into the hill country. On the east it has the various forms of western Hindī, Vernacular Hindōstānī in east Umballa, and Bāṅgarū spoken in the country immediately to the west of the Jamna. On the south it has the Bāgṛī and Bīkānērī dialects of Rājasthānī spoken in west Hissar and Bikaner. The boundary between Pañjābī and all these languages is very fairly defined (although of course there is a certain amount of merging from one language into another), for the difference of language to a large extent connotes a difference of nationalities. More especially on the border-line between Pañjābī and Western Hindī we see that Pañjābī is essentially the language of the Sikhs. We may here roughly put the boundary between the two languages, as coinciding with the course of the river Ghaggar. The people to the east of the Ghaggar valley, excepting stray colonies of Sikhs, all speak Western Hindī.

To the south, on the other hand, there is a gradual merging into Rājasthānī, through an intermediate dialect named Bhaṭṭiānī. Like Pañjābī, Rājasthānī is a language which originally belonged to the Outer Circle of Indo-Aryan speeches, a substratum of which still remains. At the same time, this basis has been overlaid and almost hidden by a wave of language belonging to the Inner Group.[1] The two languages, thus closely resembling each other, merge into each other without difficulty. Indeed, it is a curious fact that the Ḍōgrā, the most northern form of Pañjābī, shows peculiarities of pronunciation (such as the change of the initial k to g in declensional suffixes) which also exist in Bāgṛī.

[1] This will be fully explained when dealing with the characteristics of Pañjābī. Vide pp. 614 ff., post.

On the north there is a distinct dialect of Pañjābī, Ḍōgrā,—which is intermediate between standard Pañjābī and the Pahāṛī of the lower Himalayas.

Western Boundary.

It will have been observed that hitherto I have said nothing about the western boundary of Pañjābī. The reason is that it is impossible to fix such a boundary. To the west of Pañjābī lies the Lahndā or Western Pañjābī language, which we may take to be firmly established in the Jech Doab. On the other hand Pañjābī of the purest kind is spoken in the upper part of the Bari Doab. Between these two lies the Rechna Doab and the lower part of the Bari Doab. A glance at the map facing page 607 will make my meaning clear. Here the language is a mixture of Pañjābī and Lahndā,—more Pañjābī to the east,—more Lahndā to the west. We shall see that the reason for this is that an old form of Lahndā must once have extended right up to the Sarasvatī, and that it is still the foundation of Pañjābī. The Lahndā influence grows stronger (even in the Pañjābī tract) as we go westwards, as the influence of the wave of the language of the Inner Group, which has encroached from the east and has formed modern Pañjābī, weakens. It thus happens that, although in India we continually see two neighbouring languages gradually merging into each other, nowhere is the process so gradual as in the case of Pañjābī and Lahndā. It is quite impossible to point to any boundary line or approximate boundary line between the two forms of speech. As, however, some kind of boundary between the two languages is necessary for the purposes of this Survey, I have assumed the following conventional line to mark the division between them. Commence at the northern end of the Pabbī range in the Gujrat district, go across the district to the Gujranwala town of Rāmnagar on the Chenab. Then draw a line nearly due south to the southern corner of Gujranwala, where it meets the northern corner of the district of Montgomery. Then continue the line to the southern corner of Montgomery on the Sutlej. Follow the Sutlej for a few miles and cross the northern corner of the State of Bahawalpur. Everything to the east of this line I call Pañjābī, and everything to the west of it I call Lahndā; but it must be remembered that this line is a purely arbitrary convention, and that for some distance to the west of that line, the language which I call Lahndā differs but slightly from the language of the east of the Rechna Doab and of north-east Gujrat which I call Pañjābī. I have been guided mainly by the vocabulary. To the west of the line, the language, which is mainly that of the tract known as the Bāṛ, or Jungle, has a vocabulary which agrees much more closely with that of Lahndā. Except in Multan, we do not find Lahndā inflexions established till we cross the Chenab.

Pañjābī and the Land of the Five Rivers.

An interesting fact arises from the foregoing discussion. The Punjab, or Panj-āb, is properly the 'Land of the Five Rivers,' the Jhelum, the Chenab, the Ravi, the Beas, and the Sutlej. Now, the Pañjābī language extends far to the east of the Sutlej, the most eastern of these five, reaching up to the Ghaggar. It occupies the Doabs between the Beas and Sutlej, and between the Ravi and the Beas-Sutlej. It also occupies a part of the Rechna Doab between the Chenab and small corner of the Jech Doab between the Jhelum and the Chenab, and the Ravi, but in nearly the whole of the great tract watered by the Chenab and the Jhelum and by the lower part of the Sutlej Pañjābī is not spoken. Pañjābī is hence not the language of the entire 'Land of the Five Rivers.'

Dialects and Sub-dialects.

Pañjābī has two dialects,—the ordinary idiom of the language, and Ḍōgrā or Ḍōgrī. The latter, in various forms, is spoken over the submontane portion of the Jammu State and over most of the head-quarters division of the Kangra district with an overflow into the neighbouring parts of the districts of Sialkot and Gurdaspur and of the State of Chamba. It will be dealt with separately, later on.

Ordinary Pañjābī is spoken over the rest of the Pañjābī area in the plains of the Punjab, and has also encroached into the neighbouring Simla Hill States. This standard Pañjābī varies slightly from place to place, and its purest form is admitted to be that of the Mājh or middle part of the Bari Doab, centring round Amritsar. This Mājhī sub-dialect may be said to be the language of cis-Ravi Lahore, of Amritsar, and of Gurdaspur. Lower down the Doab, in the district of Montgomery, the language is not pure Mājhī, but is mixed with Lahndā. We may take Mājhī as the standard form of Pañjābī. But, owing to the accidental circumstance that the first serious European students of Pañjābī lived at Ludhiana and not at Amritsar, another standard Pañjābī, which we may call the European Standard Pañjābī, has also come into existence. Ludhiana, where J. Newton wrote his Grammar in 1851, where a 'Committee of the Lodiana Mission' published the first Pañjābī Dictionary in 1854, and where E. P. Newton published the latest and most complete grammar of the language in 1898, has, since the middle of the last century, been the fountain of instruction in Pañjābī for Englishmen. It is only natural that these eminent scholars should have taken as their standard that particular phase of Pañjābī with which they were most familiar, and we hence find that the idiom taught by them contains a few characteristics which are peculiar to eastern Pañjābī and are strange to the Mājh.[1] Of these the most striking is the employment of the peculiar cerebral ḷ. The sound of this letter is not heard in the Mājh, although its employment is taught in all the grammars and dictionaries.[2]

We thus see that there are two standards of Pañjābī, that of the Mājh, which is accepted by natives of India and (theoretically) by Europeans, and that of Ludhiana, which is the one practically accepted by Europeans, which is described in most grammars and dictionaries of the language, and into which the Scriptures have been translated.[3]

[1] So definitely do even scholars like Mr. E. P. Newton take the Ludhiana Pañjābī as their standard that they actually give forms peculiar to the Mājh as exceptions. Compare pp. 33, 57, and 73 of his grammar. If he had taken the Mājh dialect as his standard, the forms referred to on these pages would have been given as the regular ones, and their non-use elsewhere, not their use in the Mājh, would have been treated as exceptional.

Dr. Tisdall's little Simplified Grammar is the only one I have seen which is by an Englishman and which is confessedly founded on the Mājh dialect.

I may mention here that the Pañjābī versions of the Scriptures are criticized by native scholars as being in the idiom of Ludhiana.

[2] The use of this cerebral ḷ is restricted to a well defined tract of country. In the northern plains of India, it is heard between the Bīās-cum-Sutlej on the west, and the Ganges on the east. It is hence prominent in the Eastern Punjab, both where Pañjābī and where Hindōstānī and Bāṅgarū are spoken, and in the Upper Gangetic Doab, where the language is Hindōstānī. It is also common in the Western Pahāṛī of the Simla Hill States and the neighbourhood, and in the Central Pahāṛī of Garhwal and Kumaon, but does not appear in the Eastern Pahāṛī or Khas-kurā of Nepal. The central line from which it here radiates may be taken as the course of the sacred river, the Saraswatī. I have not met with it in Braj Bhākhā, but, through Bāṅgarū, it extends south into the Bāgṛī country and thence over Rajputana, Central India, Gujarat, and the Marāṭhā country. In the south of India it is heard in Dravidian languages. It does not occur in Sindhī, nor is it in Kāshmīrī or Khas, but is heard in Lahndā and the neighbouring Pañjābī tract west of the Mājh. It occurs in the other Himalayan Indo-Aryan dialects west of Western Pahāṛī, but gradually disappears as we approach Kāshmīrī through Punchhī.

[3] The Dulhan Darpaṇ, an adaptation of the Mir'atu'l 'arūs, by Bhāī Hazārā Siṅgh Giānī of Amritsar, which is in the purest dialect of the Mājh, does not contain a single cerebral ḷ from cover to cover.

The other sub-dialects of ordinary Pañjābī are the dialect of the Jullunder Doab, Pōwādhī, Rāṭhī, Mālwāī, Bhaṭṭiānī, and the Pañjābī of the Rechna Doab and North-east Gujrat. The dialect of the Jullunder Doab closely resembles that of Ludhiana. As we approach the hills, however, we see signs of the influence of Pahāṛī. Pōwādhī (the Pañjābī of the Pōwādh, or eastern Punjab), as its name implies, is the most eastern form of Pañjābī. It is spoken on the south bank of the Sutlej in the Ludhiana district (and is here identical with the Ludhiana dialect just dealt with at some length), but its main territory is the Pañjābī speaking part of the Punjab east of, say, the 76th degree of east longitude. To its east we have the Western Pahāṛī of the southern Simla Hill States, the vernacular Hindōstānī of Umballa and East Patiala, and the Bāṅgarū of Karnal. To its south it has the Rāṭhī Pañjābī to be described immediately, and to its west Mālwāī Pañjābī. As we may expect, Pōwādhī Pañjābī is more and more influenced by Western Hindī as we go eastwards. Immediately to the south of Pōwādhī and Mālwāī Pañjābī, in the valley of the Ghaggar, lies the Rāṭhī Pañjābī of the Rāṭh or 'Ruthless' Musalmān Pachhāḍās of that tract. It is even more strongly infected by the Bāṅgarū dialect of Western Hindī than Pōwādhī. It is also noteworthy for its preference for nasal sounds. To its south lie the Bāgṛī and Bāṅgarū of Hissar. West of the 76th degree of east longitude as far as the Sutlej lies the Mālwā or old settled dry country of the Sikh Jaṭṭs, to the south of which lies the 'Jangal' or unsettled country. The language of these areas is known as Mālwāī Pañjābī or Jaṅgalī. To its south it has the Rāṭhī Pañjābī of the Ghaggar valley, and the Bhaṭṭiānī Pañjābī of South Ferozepore and Bikaner. Mālwāī Pañjābī does not differ materially from the Ludhiana Standard, but as we go south a tendency is observable to substitute a dental n and l for a cerebral ṇ and ḷ respectively. South of the Mālwā in South Ferozepore and north-west Bikaner, lies Bhaṭṭiānā, the country of the Bhaṭṭīs. Here Pañjābī is merging into Rājasthānī and we find a mixed dialect which I name Bhaṭṭiānī. Bhaṭṭiānī is spoken on the left bank of the Sutlej a long way up into Ferozepore, and is there locally known as Rāṭhaurī. Crossing the Sutlej we enter the Bari Doab. The central portion of this is the Mājh and has been already dealt with. South-east of Lahore lies the district of Montgomery, like Lahore, lying on both sides of the Ravi. The cis-Ravi portion of Montgomery, although politically within the Bari Doab, belongs linguistically to the next Doab, the Rechna, between the Ravi and the Chenab. It is in this Rechna Doab that we see Pañjābī merging into Lahndā.

As explained above, it is impossible to show any distinct boundary between these two languages, and, for the purposes of this Survey, I have adopted a purely conventional line commencing at the northern end of the Pabbī range of hills near the north-west corner of Gujrat and ending on the Sutlej at the south-east corner of Montgomery, with a slight deflection down the Sutlej, across the north-eastern end of the State of Bahawalpur, where it meets the southern border of Bhaṭṭiānī. Everything to the east of this line I call, for the purposes of this Survey, Pañjābī, and everything to its west Lahndā. This Pañjābī of north-east Gujrat, of the Rechna Doab, and of east Montgomery becomes more and more infected with Lahndā characteristics as we go west.

Number of speakers.

The following tables show the number of speakers of Pañjābī as estimated for this Survey. Most of the figures are based on those of the Census of 1891. I commence with the number of speakers of Pañjābī in those tracts in which it is a vernacular.

TABLE SHOWING THE NUMBER OF SPEAKERS OF PAÑJĀBĪ IN AREAS IN WHICH IT IS A VERNACULAR.

Mājhī—
Lahore	1,033,824
Amritsar	973,054
Gurdaspur	800,750
		2,807,628
Jullunder Dōābī—
Jullunder	905,817
Kapurthala	296,976
Hoshiarpur	848,655
Mixed dialects	207,321
		2,258,769
Pōwādhī—
Hissar	148,352
Umballa	337,123
Kalsia State	18,933
Nalagarh State	39,545
Mailog State	3,193
Patiala State	837,000
Jind State	13,000
		1,397,146
Rāṭhī—
Hissar	36,490
Jind State	2,500
		38,990
Mālwāī—
Ferozepore	709,000
Ludhiana	640,000
Faridkot	110,000
Maler-kotla	75,295
Patiala	334,500
Nabha	207,771
Jind	44,021
Kalsia	9,467
		2,130,054
Bhaṭṭiānī—
Rāṭhī of Bikaner	22,000
'Bāgṛī' of Ferozepore	56,000
Rāṭhaurī of Ferozepore	38,000
		116,000
Pañjābī merging into Lahndā—
North-east Gujrat	457,200
Sialkot	1,010,000
East Gujranwala	505,000
Trans-Ravi Lahore	17,398
East Montgomery	292,426
North Bahawalpur	150,000
		2,432,024
Ḍōgrā—
Standard	568,727
Kaṇḍiālī	10,000
Kāṅgrā Dialect	636,500
Bhaṭṭēālī	14,000
		1,229,227
Total number of speakers of Pañjābī in the area in which it is a vernacular		12,409,838

Pañjābī is also spoken in other districts of the Punjab in which it is not classed as a vernacular. The most important figures are those of Karnal and Multan. As regards Karnal, this district immediately adjoins the Pōwādhī-speaking tract of Patiala, and the figures represent an overflow of Sikh settlers from that State. In Multan there is a large colony of Sikhs settled on the Sidhmai canal system. In the other districts, the figures reported call for no remarks. They are as follows :—

TABLE SHOWING THE NUMBER OF SPEAKERS OF PAÑJĀBĪ IN DISTRICTS AND STATES OF THE PUNJAB IN WHICH IT IS NOT A VERNACULAR.

Rohtak		238
Gurgaon		178
Delhi		1,784
Pataudi		132
Loharu		7
Dujana		2
Karnal		25,500
Simla		3,280
Simla Hill States :—
Bashahr	276
Keonthal	194
Baghal	129
Baghat	702
Jubbal	27
Kumharsain	95
Bhajji	36
Balsan	38
Dhami	30
Kuthar	188
Kunhiar	97
Mangal	10
Bija	65
Tarhoch	12
Nahan	8,197
		10,096
Mandi		732
Suket		146
Chamba		2,387
Multan		87,102
Dera Ismail Khan		7,238
Dera Ghazi Khan		6,999
Muzaffargarh		8,480
TOTAL		154,301

We therefore arrive at the following figures for the total number of speakers of Pañjābī in the Punjab, as reported for this Survey :—

In areas in which it is a vernacular	12,409,838
In areas in which it is not a vernacular	154,301
GRAND TOTAL for the Punjab	12,564,139

At the Census of 1891, 15,754,895 people were recorded as speaking Pañjābī (including Ḍōgrā) in the Punjab. The difference is accounted for as follows. In the first place, about 4,583,000 people were shown in the Census tables as speaking Pañjābī in Gujranwala (western half), Montgomery (western half), Bahawalpur (north-western portion), Jhang, Shahpur, Jhelam, Rawalpindi, Hazara, Peshawar, Kohat, and Bannu and other localities, who, in this Survey, will be shown as speaking Lahndā. On the other hand the above figures include 636,500 speakers of the Kangra dialect who, in the Census tables, are shown as speaking Pahāṛī, and also include the 434,000 speakers of Ḍōgrā in Jammu territory and 22,000 speakers of Bhaṭṭiānī in Bikaner, which do not appear in the Punjab Census tables at all, as Jammu and Bikaner do not fall politically within that province. By making these allowances on each side, we arrive at a Census total of 12,262,395. The difference between this and the above Survey figures, which amounts to 301,744, is due, partly to the fact that round numbers are employed as much as possible in the Survey, partly to the fact that many of the Survey figures are independent estimates made by local officials some seven or eight years after the Census had been taken, and partly to the inclusion, in the Survey figures, of small items which, in the Census tables, are grouped under other languages. In border tracts where one language merges into another, classification necessarily depends much on the personal equation, which must be allowed for in dealing with statistics of this kind.

We now come to the number of people who speak Pañjābī outside the limits of the Punjab. Here we have to resort to the figures of the Census of 1891, and are confronted by two difficulties. At that Census, the speakers of the various languages were not enumerated in Kashmir or in Rajputana and Central India. In the second place, at that Census (except in the Punjab) no distinction was made between Lahndā and Pañjābī, the two being grouped together under one head—Pañjābī. I therefore in the following table cannot give the number of speakers of Pañjābī in Kashmir or in Rajputana and Central India, and instead thereof give the total number of people of Punjab birth (for which figures are available) in these localities. The second difficulty is more serious. We can only estimate. In the Census of 1901 the figures for Lahndā and Pañjābī were kept separate, and their totals bore the proportion of 3 and 17, respectively, to each other. I assume that this proportion was also true for 1891 and deduct from the total of the following figures three-twentieths, to allow for speakers of Lahndā. The remainder should approximately represent the total number of speakers of Pañjābī outside the Punjab.

TABLES SHOWING THE TOTAL NUMBER OF PERSONS WHO SPOKE PAÑJĀBĪ OR LAHNDĀ OUTSIDE THE PUNJAB ACCORDING TO THE CENSUS OF 1891.

Kashmir	66,106 (estimated).
Sindh (and Khairpur)	22,150
United Provinces (and States)	13,080
Quetta	10,544
Burma	8,105
Bengal (and States)	2,857
Hyderabad	2,439
Bombay (and States)	3,334
Rajputana and Central India	99,790 (estimated).
Andamans	1,513
Ajmer-Merwara	1,154
Central Provinces	1,154
Madras	498
Berar	373
Baroda	255
Assam	160
Mysore	18
TOTAL	283,530

Pañjābī is also spoken in other districts of the Punjab in which it is not classed as a vernacular. The most important figures are those of Karnal and Multan. As regards Karnal, this district immediately adjoins the Pōwādhī-speaking tract of Patiala, and the figures represent an overflow of Sikh settlers from that State. In Multan there is a large colony of Sikhs settled on the Sidhmai canal system. In the other districts, the figures reported call for no remarks. They are as follows:—

TABLE SHOWING THE NUMBER OF SPEAKERS OF PAÑJĀBĪ IN DISTRICTS AND STATES OF THE PUNJAB IN WHICH IT IS NOT A VERNACULAR.

Rohtak		238
Gurgaon		178
Delhi		1,784
Pataudi		132
Loharu		7
Dujana		2
Karnal		25,500
Simla		3,280
Simla Hill States:—
Bashahr	276
Keonthal	194
Baghal	129
Baghat	702
Jubbal	27
Kumharsain	95
Bhajji	36
Balsan	38
Dhami	30
Kuthar	188
Kunhiar	97
Mangal	10
Bija	65
Tarhoch	12
Nahan	8,197
		10,096
Mandi		732
Suket		146
Chamba		2,387
Multan		87,102
Dera Ismail Khan		7,238
Dera Ghazi Khan		6,999
Muzaffargarh		8,480
TOTAL		154,301

We therefore arrive at the following figures for the total number of speakers of Pañjābī in the Punjab, as reported for this Survey:—

In areas in which it is a vernacular	12,409,838
In areas in which it is not a vernacular	154,301
GRAND TOTAL for the Punjab	12,564,139

At the Census of 1891, 15,754,895 people were recorded as speaking Pañjābī (including Ḍōgrā) in the Punjab. The difference is accounted for as follows. In the first place, about 4,583,000 people were shown in the Census tables as speaking Pañjābī in Gujranwala (western half), Montgomery (western half), Bahawalpur (north-western portion), Jhang, Shahpur, Jhelam, Rawalpindi, Hazara, Peshawar, Kohat, and Bannu and other localities, who, in this Survey, will be shown as speaking Lahndā. On the other hand the above figures include 636,500 speakers of the Kangra dialect who, in the Census tables, are shown as speaking Pahāṛī, and also include the 434,000 speakers of Ḍōgrā in Jammu territory and 22,000 speakers of Bhaṭṭiānī in Bikaner, which do not appear in the Punjab Census tables at all, as Jammu and Bikaner do not fall politically within that province. By making these allowances on each side, we arrive at a Census total of 12,262,395. The difference between this and the above Survey figures, which amounts to 301,744, is due, partly to the fact that round numbers are employed as much as possible in the Survey, partly to the fact that many of the Survey figures are independent estimates made by local officials some seven or eight years after the Census had been taken, and partly to the inclusion, in the Survey figures, of small items which, in the Census tables, are grouped under other languages. In border tracts where one language merges into another, classification necessarily depends much on the personal equation, which must be allowed for in dealing with statistics of this kind.

We now come to the number of people who speak Pañjābī outside the limits of the Punjab. Here we have to resort to the figures of the Census of 1891, and are confronted by two difficulties. At that Census, the speakers of the various languages were not enumerated in Kashmir or in Rajputana and Central India. In the second place, at that Census (except in the Punjab) no distinction was made between Lahndā and Pañjābī, the two being grouped together under one head—Pañjābī. I therefore in the following table cannot give the number of speakers of Pañjābī in Kashmir or in Rajputana and Central India, and instead thereof give the total number of people of Punjab birth (for which figures are available) in these localities. The second difficulty is more serious. We can only estimate. In the Census of 1901 the figures for Lahndā and Pañjābī were kept separate, and their totals bore the proportion of 3 and 17, respectively, to each other. I assume that this proportion was also true for 1891 and deduct from the total of the following figures three-twentieths, to allow for speakers of Lahndā. The remainder should approximately represent the total number of speakers of Pañjābī outside the Punjab.

TABLES SHOWING THE TOTAL NUMBER OF PERSONS WHO SPOKE PAÑJĀBĪ OR LAHNDĀ OUTSIDE THE PUNJAB ACCORDING TO THE CENSUS OF 1891.

Kashmir	66,106 (estimated).
Sindh (and Khairpur)	22,150
United Provinces (and States)	13,080
Quetta	10,544
Burma	8,105
Bengal (and States)	2,857
Hyderabad	2,439
Bombay (and States)	3,334
Rajputana and Central India	99,790 (estimated).
Andamans	1,513
Ajmer-Merwara	1,154
Central Provinces	1,154
Madras	498
Berar	373
Baroda	255
Assam	160
Mysore	18
TOTAL	283,530

Deducting three-twentieths of this, i.e. 35,030, for Lahndā, we arrive at an estimated total of 198,500 for the number of people who speak Pañjābī in India outside the Punjab.

We thus arrive at the total number of speakers of Pañjābī in all India :—

Speakers of Pañjābī as a local vernacular in the Punjab and elsewhere . .	12,564,139
Speakers elsewhere in India	198,500
GRAND TOTAL of all speakers of Pañjābī .	12,762,639

Most of the speakers of Pañjābī outside the Punjab are either Sikh troops or police officers and the like.

Characteristics of the language.

Pañjābī, together with Western Hindī, Rājasthānī, and Gujarātī, is one of the members of the Central Group of the Indo-Aryan Vernaculars. Of these the only pure member of the Group is Western Hindī. The others are mixed languages. Although in the main possessing the essential characteristics of the Central Group they each present signs of another language which has been superseded,—overlaid would be a more correct expression—by a central one. We shall see this clearly in the case of Rājasthānī and Gujarātī, and shall also notice in the case of these two languages, that the further we go from the centre from which the Inner Language encroached, the more prominent this submerged layer becomes. In every case this submerged layer was evidently a language of the Outer Circle of Indo-Aryan languages. We may take the centre of dispersion as the central Gangetic Doab between Mathurā and Kanauj. Kanauj, it may be remarked, was the great centre of Indo-Aryan power during the centuries preceding the Musalmān conquest of India.

Relationship to Lahndā and Western Hindī.

Pañjābī is the language of the Eastern Punjab, and, at the present day, immediately to its west, in the Western Punjab, we find Lahndā to be the vernacular. Lahndā is one of the languages of the Outer Circle, and is closely connected with Sindhī, Kāshmīrī and the languages of the Indus-Kōhistān. There can be no doubt, if linguistic evidence is of any value, that a language closely akin to this Lahndā was also once spoken over the entire area of which Pañjābī is now the vernacular. Immediately to the east of Pañjābī we have the Hindōstānī forms of Western Hindī which are spoken on both sides of the river Jamnā and in the Upper Gangetic Doab. It is clear from the present linguistic conditions that an old form of this Hindōstānī has gradually spread over the whole of the eastern Punjab, superseding, or overlying, the old Lahndā language, as far, at least, as the upper half of the river Chenab. Indeed, its influence has spread further, and it is not till we get to the great thal, or sandy tract between the Jhelum-Chenab and the Indus, that we lose all traces of it. As in Rajputana, the desert has formed a barrier against the advancing tide of the Central language, and, in each case, we find west of it a pure language of the Outer Circle—in the one case Sindhī, in the other Lahndā.

As this tide progressed westward from its starting point, it gradually lost its body and its force. In the extreme east of the Pañjābī tract, on the banks of the ancient Sarasvatī, few traces of the ancient Lahndā are observable. When we come to the Bari Doab, where standard Pañjābī is spoken, we find several characteristics of Lahndā still surviving which have disappeared in the Pōwādh or Eastern Punjab. In the Rechna Doab these characteristics become more prominent and here we come to the conventional boundary line between Pañjābī and Lahndā. In the Jech Doab they are still more in evidence and Lahndā may be said to be firmly established. In the Sindh-Sāgar Doab all except one or two traces of the influence of the Central language have disappeared, and we are in the presence of a true language of the Outer Circle. We thus see that Pañjābī is a composite language.

To change the metaphor, its substratum is a language of the Outer Circle akin to the modern Lahndā, while its superstructure is a dialect of Western Hindī. The superstructure is so important, and has so concealed the foundation, that Pañjābī is rightly classed, at the present day, as a language of the Central Group.

Pronunciation.

Coming to details, we find in the first place an initial w or v in Western Hindī always becomes b, while in the Pañjābī it is in certain cases retained. Thus, Western Hindī bīch, but Pañjābī vichch, in. This is also characteristic of Sindhī, Lahndā and Kāshmīrī.

There is another circumstance in Pañjābī pronunciation which is extremely characteristic, and gives the clear-cut tone to the language, that at once attracts the attention of anyone who hears it for the first time. In order to describe it, it will be necessary to discuss a question of derivation. All the various Prakrit dialects of India had, for reasons which it is unnecessary to explain here, a large number of words containing each a double consonant, preceded by a short vowel. For instance, we may take ghōḍassa, of a horse; juttō, joined; khaggō, a sword; makkhaṇam, ointment; mārissai, he will strike. By one of the phonetic rules of these languages there was a tendency to simplify these double letters by omitting the first member of the compound, and to lengthen the preceding short vowel in compensation. There was thus a tendency for these words to become respectively ghōḍāsa; jūtō; khāgō; mākhaṇaṁ; mārīsai.[1] In the modern vernaculars of the Central Group, we observe this tendency acting with no uniformity. In Western Hindī we commonly meet both forms of the same word—often one in the literary language, and the other in colloquial speech. Thus for 'butter' the Prakrit makkhaṇam becomes makkhan in Literary Hindōstānī, but we often hear mākhan in the mouths of the villagers. In Rājasthānī the tendency to simplify the compound increases as we go westward and southward till we arrive at Gujarātī in which language simplification, with compensatory lengthening of the preceding vowel, has become the general rule. We have mākhaṇ and never makkhaṇ. On the other hand, the Hindōstānī of the Upper Gangetic Doab prefers the pronunciation of the double letter, with the short preceding vowel, so that we have always makkhaṇ and not mākhaṇ. Pañjābī follows suit in this. It never simplifies such compounds. We always have makkhaṇ, not mākhaṇ. Similarly we have Pañjābī kamm, but Hindōstānī kām, work; Pañjābī vichch, but Hindōstānī bīch, in; Pañjābī uchchā, but Hindōstānī ūchā, high.[2] All this gives a predominant sound of sharply doubled letters throughout a Pañjābī sentence, and gives the well-known clear-cut character to the language as heard by one whose acquaintance with Indian languages was first made in the Ganges Valley.

---

[1] Amongst the various Prakrit dialects, the older ones and Śaurasēnī show fewer signs of this tendency than some of the others. Śaurasēnī may be looked upon as the parent of Western Hindī, and of the superstructure (as distinct from the substratum) of the other languages of the Central Group.

[2] Lahndā, in this, follows Pañjābī. It has makkhuṇ. Sindhī carries the process forward another way. It simplifies a surd compound consonant but does not lengthen the vowel. It has makʰaṇ. All this is of importance when considering the derivation of Pañjābī words. For instance we may be sure that the Pañjābī word sītā, sewn, is not contracted from sittā*. Such a contraction would be against the genius of Pañjābī, Lahndā, or Sindhī.

Nominal termination.

In the declension of nouns, we find that the termination of strong masculine substantives with a-bases, is ā, not au or ō as in pure Western Hindī. Thus we have ghōṛā, a horse, not ghōṛau or ghoṛō, as in Western Hindī.

This is typical of nearly all the languages of the Outer Circle. Compare the Marāṭhī ghōḍā and the Bengali ghōṛā.[1]

Termination of the Genitive.

A characteristic of Pañjābī which at once strikes the beginner, and which is, in fact, a most prominent feature of the language, is the employment of the termination dā for the suffix of the genitive, instead of the kau, kō (or kā) of Western Hindī. This termination is also employed in Southern Lahndā, and no doubt belongs to the original form of that language which once spread all over the Punjab. It is certainly indigenous in the Eastern Punjab.[2]

Termination of the case of the Agent.

Literary Hindōstānī employs the suffix nē to indicate the case of the agent. This suffix does not properly belong to Western Hindī (of which Hindōstānī is a dialect). In the other dialects of that language an organic case of the agent is employed without any suffix. The nē of Literary Hindōstānī is, however, also found in the Vernacular Hindōstānī of the Upper Gangetic Doab, and is clearly borrowed from Pañjābī in which language its employment (under the form of nai) is regular.

Personal Pronouns.

The plurals of the pronouns of the first and second persons (asẽ, we, oblique form asā̃, and tusẽ, ye, obl. form tusā̃), are relics of the old Lahndā basis of the language, and do not belong to the true Central Language, which has ham and tum respectively. Compare Sindhī asẽ (obl. asā̃), we: Lahndā assẽ (obl. assā̃), we; tussẽ (obl. tussā̃), you; Maiyā̃ (of the Indus Kōhistān) tus, you; Kāshmīrī ʌs^{i} (obl. asĕ), we. Moreover, these pronouns make their genitives asāḍā, tusāḍā. The cerebral ḍ in these words is typical of Lahndā.

Passive voice.

The Pañjābī verb occasionally makes a passive voice by adding ī to the root.[3] This is common in Lahndā, while a closely connected passive form is current in Sindhī. In Western Hindī this passive has only survived (if this is a survival) in one or two of the so-called polite imperatives.

---

[1] In this respect, Pañjābī has reacted on those dialects of Western Hindī which are geographically nearest to it. The dialect of the Upper Gangetic Doab, and the Literary Hindōstānī founded upon it, both have ā, not au or ō. So also Braj Bhākhā nouns substantive, but not adjectives.

[2] Both dā and kā are derived from the same old Sanskrit word kṛitaḥ. Both have come down to the vernaculars through the Prakrit kidaō or kidau. In Hindōstānī, in process of time, the d disappeared, and the word became kiaō, and hence kā, which it will be observed is a postposition,—a distinct word,—and not a termination. On the other hand, the languages of the Outer Circle treated kidaō, not as a separate word, but as a termination. Thus for 'of a horse,' the speakers of the old language from which Hindōstānī is derived said ghōḍahi kidau (hence ghōṛē kā) in which kidau is as distinct a word as is 'of' in the English phrase. But the speakers of the old Lahndā said ghōḍahikidau, in which they dealt with kidau as if it were a termination like the i in the Latin equi. Now, there is a well-known phonetic rule that in a case like this a k between two vowels in the same word disappears. Hence as ghōḍahikidau was spoken as one word it became ghōḍahiidau, and hence ghōṛēdā, without any hyphen between the ghōṛē and the dā. This tendency to unite old postpositions with the main word, and to treat the two as one, is typical of the languages of the Outer Circle, and is rare in the languages of the Central Group.

The termination kidau is noted by Prakrit Grammarians as surviving in Śaurasēnī Prakrit the language of the Central and Upper Gangetic Doab, but its occurrence in Lahndā shows that it must have survived to a comparatively late period over the greater part of North-Western India.

[3] I have met this passive but rarely in the limited course of my Pañjābī reading. Except Mr. Tisdall's, all the grammars include Lahndā under Pañjābī. Mr. E. P. Newton mentions this passive, but all his examples are taken from the Janam Sākhī, a Lahndā work.

Pronominal suffixes.

One of the most striking characteristics of the languages of the Outer Circle is the free use they make of pronominal suffixes added to verbs (a procedure totally strange to the languages of the Central Group). Thus, Lahndā has ākheus, said (ākheā) by him (us), i.e. he said. In the Mājh dialect of Pañjābī, these also occur. Thus, ākhius, he said. We rarely hear these further East.

Vocabulary.

Finally, like Lahndā and Sindhī, Pañjābī is a language with a vocabulary mainly composed of honest tadbhavas. Tatsama words are conspicuous only by their absence, and in this respect the tongue of the Land of the Five Rivers offers a striking contrast to the bastard mixture of Sanskrit and vernacular which the Pandits of Calcutta and Benares imagine to be literature. It is a homely language, redolent of the Punjab of to-day. Mr. Beames[1] puts this well,—

> 'There is a flavour of wheaten flour and a reek of cottage smoke about Pañjābī and Sindhī, which is infinitely more natural and captivating than anything which the hide-bound Pandit-ridden languages of the eastern parts of India can show us.'

But though thus homely in character, it must not be assumed that it is a rude form of speech incapable of literature. It is no more rude than was the broad lowland Scotch of the poet Burns. Pañjābī can express any idea with its own stock of vocables, and is well adapted for both prose and poetry. It is true that it has hardly any literature, but that is due to its being overshadowed by its near relation, Hindōstānī, and to the fact that for centuries the Punjab has been ruled from Delhi; but the ballads of the people, which are current everywhere, well show its capabilities. Even at the present day there is too great a tendency to look down upon it as a mere dialect of Hindōstānī (which it is not), and to deny its status as an independent language. Its claim mainly rests upon its phonetic system and on its store of words not found in Hindī, both of which characteristics are due to its old Lahndā foundation. Some of the most common Pañjābī words do not occur in Hindōstānī. Such are piu, a father; māũ, a mother; ākhnā, to say; ikk, one; sāh, breath; tih, thirst, and hundreds of others, all of which can be found in languages of the Outer Circle.

Old Accounts of the Punjab.

The mixed character of the languages of the Central and Western Punjab (Pañjābī and Lahndā) is well illustrated by the character given to the inhabitants of those tracts in the Mahābhārata, and by incidental references in the grammar of Pāṇini. Although not distant from the Madhyadēśa or Gangetic Doab, the centre from which Sanskritic civilisation spread, we learn that the laws and customs of the Punjab were at a very early period widely different from those of the Madhyadēśa. The people are at one time described as living in a state of kingless anarchy, and at another time as possessing no Brāhmaṇs (a dreadful thing to an orthodox Hindū of the Middle Country), living in petty villages, and governed by princes who supported themselves by internecine war. Not only were there no Brāhmaṇs, but there were no castes. The population had no respect for the Vēda, and offered no sacrifices to the gods. They were rude and uncultured, given to drinking spirituous liquor, and eating all kinds of flesh. Their women were large-bodied, yellow, extremely immoral in their behaviour, and seem to have lived in a state of polyandry, a man's heir being not his son, but the son of his sister's.[1] That this account was true in every particular need not be urged. It is given to us by enemies; but, whether true or not, it illustrates the gulf in habits, customs, and languages, which existed between the Madhyadēśa and the Punjab.

[1] Comparative Grammar, Vol. I, p. 51.

Literature.

Pañjābī has a very scanty literature. The oldest work which is usually said to be written in the language is the Ādi Granth, the sacred Scriptures of the Sikhs; but, although the manuscripts of the book are universally written in the Gurmukhī character, a very small portion of its contents is really in the Pañjābī language. It is a collection of hymns by various poets, most of whom wrote in some form of Western Hindī, while others even wrote in Marāṭhī. The best known Pañjābī portion is the Japjī, or introductory stanzas by Nānak, who was born in 1469 A.D. The celebrated Janam Sākhī (a life of Nānak) is in Lahndā, not in Pañjābī. Later works are the Sākhi-nāma (translated into English by Sardār Attar Siṅgh Bhadauriā), another Janam Sākhī by Maṇi Siṅgh, and a life of Har Gōbind, the sixth guru (1606-1638 A.D.). Some of these are probably in Lahndā, but I cannot say this for certain, as I have not seen any of them. The Wārā Bhāī Gurdāsdā is a collection of verses dating from the guruship of Arjun (1581-1606 A.D.), and has been printed (Amritsar, 1879). The verses are written in the style known as wār. A wār originally meant a dirge for the brave slain in battle, and hence any martial song of praise, and the poems are intended to describe the battle of good and evil in the human soul. As specimens of the earlier secular literature, Dr. Thornton[2] mentions the Pāras bhāg (a collection of ethical precepts), an epic on Akbar's siege of Chitaur, and a much admired epic on Nādir Shāh's invasion. The later literature is mainly composed of translations and imitations of works in Sanskrit, Hindī, or Persian. The most famous of these imitators is Hāshim, who flourished in the time of Raṇjit Siṅgh. The Khair Manukh is a poetical guide to the Greek system of medicine.

Besides the above, the bardic, or folk-literature, of the Punjab deserves more than a passing notice. It contains several cycles that may almost be called epics, the most important of which are those referring to the famous hero Rājā Rasālū, to Hīrā and Rānjhā, and to Mīrzā and Sāhibā. The version of the Hīrā and Rānjhā legend by Wāris Shāh is considered to be a model of the purest Pañjābī. The folk-poetry of the Punjab has received considerable attention from European scholars, and deservedly so. It has all the swing and music of the border ballads of England and Scotland. The best known work on the subject is Colonel Sir Richard Temple's monumental Legends of the Panjáb.

The Serampore missionaries issued a Pañjābī version of the New Testament in 1815. Since then several editions of other parts of the Bible have appeared in the language. There is also a considerable Christian literature.

AUTHORITIES—

Carey, the famous missionary of Serampore, was the first to describe the Pañjābī language, in his Grammar published in 1812. The only previous mention of it which I can find is a couple of brief notices in Adelung's Mithridates (1808—1817).

[1] Can the author of this description have had the customs of the Jaṭṭs in his mind when writing? The passage referred to above is Mahābhārata, VIII, 3029 ff. In l. 2033 the tribe of Jārttikas is mentioned, and these perhaps were the ancestors of the modern Jaṭṭs.

[2] See the article mentioned under the head of Authorities.

The following is a list of all the works dealing with Pañjābī which have come under my notice. Except in one or two instances, I have excluded reference to texts printed in India. These can be found in Mr. Blumhardt's catalogues mentioned below. I give, however, a pretty full account of editions of the Ādi Granth. I have excluded all mention of works in Western Pañjābī, or Lahndā, in which the Janam Sākhī and other works are written. This is an altogether different language, akin to Sindhī and Kāshmīrī.

I.—General (including Texts).

Ādi Granth,—Srī Guru Granth Sāhib Jī. Numerous editions. I have noted the following. Unless otherwise stated, they are in the Gurmukhī character. Lahore, 1864; ib., 1868; ib., 1881; Gujranwala, 1882; Lahore, 1885; ib., 1886; ib., 1887; ib., 1889; Amritsar, 1892; Lucknow (Dēva-nāgarī character), 1893.

Selections, etc.,—A collection of ślōkas from the Ādi Granth. Composed by Tēgh Bahādur, the ninth Guru. Lahore, 1867. Pōthī Anandu Sāhib Mahlā (Devotional hymns of the Sikhs), composed by Guru Amar Dās (consisting of 40 verses from Rāg Rāmkalī of the Ādi Granth). Lahore, 1873.

Pañj Granth Ādi,—(A collection of eight devotional books of the Sikhs, consisting of selections from the Ādi Granth.) Lahore, 1874; Gujranwala (Persian character), 1875; Lahore, 1878; ib., 1879; Gujranwala (Persian character), 1879; Lahore, 1881; ib., 1882; ib., 1885; ib., 1886; Amritsar (Persian character), 1895.

Pōthī Rahirās,—(A manual of Sikh evening prayers, consisting of selections from the Ādi Granth and the Granth of Guru Gōbind Singh.) Lahore, 1867, 1869, (with other extracts from the Ādi Granth) 1869, 1873, 1874, (with select passages from the Ādi Granth, Persian character) 1874, 1875, 1878, 1879; Amritsar, 1893.

Pōthī Japjī,—(A collection of Sikh hymns and prayers, composed by Nānak, which form the introductory chapter to the Ādi Granth.) Lahore, 1865, 1868, (Persian character) 1871, (Persian character) 1872, 1873, (with other verses by Nānak taken from the Ādi Granth) 1873, 1874, (Persian character) 1874; Amritsar, 1875; Karachi, (in Khoja-Sindhī characters) 1875; Lahore, 1876, (with other verses by Nānak) 1876, (with a Pañjābī commentary by Bihārī Lāl) 1876; (Persian character) Sialkot, 1876; Lahore, 1877, (with a commentary by Maṇi Singh) 1877, (with a commentary by Paṇḍit Salgrām Dās) 1877; (Persian character) Sialkot, 1877; (Persian character) Lahore, 1878, 1879, (with Maṇi Singh's commentary) 1879; (Persian character) Sialkot, 1879; Amritsar, 1882; (with commentary of Hariprakās, entitled Bōdh-arthāvalī) Rawalpindi, 1889; Lahore, (with Bihārī Lāl's commentary) 1891, with Maṇi Singh's commentary) 1900.

(The original text of the Japjī form is given as an appendix to Trumpp's Translation of the Ādi Granth.)

Translations of the Japjī. Text in Persian characters, with a Hindōstānī translation and notes. Followed by the Janaṃ-sākhī, or Life of Nānak, and the Gurbilās, or account of his successors. Lahore, 1870. The same, Lahore, 1878. With an interlinear translation in Hindōstānī, Gujranwala, 1879. With an Introduction and translation into Hindōstānī by Sardār 'Itr Singh of Patiala, Gujranwala, 1879. Jap-paramārtha, an edition of the Pañjābī text, with a Hindī translation and notes by Lakshmaṇ Prasād Brahmachārī, Lucknow, 1887. A Circular Letter to the Sikhs, dated Amritsar, December 24th, 1897, written by M. Macauliffe. To this is added a tentative translation of the Japjī into English. Letter printed at the New Anglo-Gurmukhi Press, Amritsar. Translation of the Japji. By M. Macauliffe. Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society, 1900, pp. 43 ff.

Pōthī Āsādī Wār. (A collection of hymns from the Rāg Āsā of the Ādi Granth. Repeated by Sikhs after the Japjī and the Hazārēdē Sabd as a morning divine service.) Lahore, (1873), (Persian character) 1874, (Persian character) 1875, 1876, 1877. The Asa di War. A Morning Prayer of the Sikhs. By M. Macauliffe. Indian Antiquary, Vol. xxx. (1901), pp. 537 ff. (A translation of the Āsādī Wār into English, with a short Introduction.)

Translation of the Ādi Granth—

TRUMPP, DR. ERNEST,—The Ādi Granth, or the Holy Scriptures of the Sikhs, translated from the original Gurmukhī, with Introductory Essays. London, 1877. According to Mr. Pincott (see below), Trumpp only translated 5,719 stanzas, out of a total of 15,575.

Books dealing with the Ādi Granth—

PINCOTT, FREDERIC,—The Arrangement of the Hymns of the Adi Granth. Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society, Vol. xviii. (1886), pp. 437 and ff.

VISHNU DĀS UDĀSĪ,—Ādi Granthdā Kōsha. Glossary to the Ādi Granth. Amritsar, 1892. Meanings of Words occurring in the Sikh Granth. (A Vocabulary in Punjabi of difficult Words occurring in the Ādi Granth.) By Báwá Bishan Dás. Amritsar, 1893.

MACAULIFFE, MAX ARTHUR,—The Sikh Religion, its Gurus, sacred Writings and Authors. Six Volumes, Oxford, 1909.

Other works, arranged under authors' names, in the order of the respective dates of the first work of each author.

ADELUNG, JOHANN CHRISTOPH,—Mithridates oder allgemeine Sprachenkunde mit dem Vater Unser als Sprachprobe in bey nahe fünfhundert Sprachen und Mundarten. Berlin, 1806—1817. Vol. i., p. 195, a short account of the local Dialect of Lahore called the Panzabische Sprache, about which nothing except the name, together with the fact that it is much mixed with Persian, was known. On p. 201 a version of the Lord's Prayer in the Gemeine Mundart zu Kasi by the missionary Schultz (sic), which is a mixture of Pañjābī and Bihārī. There is also a brief mention of the language in Vater's appendix to Vol. iv., p. 487.

ABBOTT, MAJOR J.,—On the Ballads and Legends of the Punjab. Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, Vol. xxiii. (1854), pp. 59 (general account of the subject) and 123 (A Rifacimento on the Legend of Russaloo).

BEAMES, JOHN,—Outlines of Indian Philology, with a Map shewing the Distribution of Indian Languages. Calcutta, 1867.

" " A Comparative Grammar of the modern Aryan Languages of India : to wit, Hindi, Punjabi, Sindhi, Gujarati, Marathi, Oriya, and Bengali. Three Vols. London, 1872—79.

SRADDHĀ RĀM,—Sikkhā̃dē Rājdī Vithiā. A History of the Sikh Rulers, and of the present Administration of the Panjab. Ludhiana, 1868. Another edition, Lahore, 1892.

Translated by Major H. Court, Lahore, 1888. See under Grammars.

TOLBORT, T. W. H.,—The District of Lúdiána. Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, Vol. xxxviii, (1869), Pt. I., pp. 83 and ff.

HOERNLE, DR. A. F. R., C.I.E.,—Essays in Aid of a Comparative Grammar of the Gaurian Languages. Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, Vol. xli. (1872), Pt. I., pp. 120 and ff. Vol. xlii. (1873), Pt. I., pp. 59 and ff. Vol. xliii. (1874), Pt. I., pp. 22 and ff.

" " The Local Distribution and Mutual Affinities of the Gaudian Languages. Calcutta Review, Vol. lxvii (1878), pp. 752 and ff.

" " A Grammar of the Eastern Hindī compared with the other Gaudian Languages. Accompanied by a Language-map and Table of Alphabets. London, 1880.

VARIOUS WRITERS,—The Roman-Urdú Journal. Lahore, 1878-83 (Vols. I—VI). Contains many well-edited texts in the Pañjābī language.

STEEL, MRS. F. A., AND TEMPLE, LIEUTENANT [LIEUTENANT-COLONEL SIR] RICHARD CARNAC,—Folklore in the Panjab. Collected by F. A. S., with Notes by R. C. T., Indian Antiquary, Vol. ix. (1880), pp. 205, 207, 209, 280, 302 ; Vol. x. (1881), pp. 40, 80, 147, 228, 331, 347 ; Vol. xi. (1882), pp. 32, 73, 163, 169, 226, 229 ; Vol. xii. (1883), pp. 103, 175, 176, 177.

" " " Folklore from Kashmīr. Collected by F. A. S., with Notes by R. C. T., Indian Antiquary, Vol. xi. (1882). Note on Rājā Rasālū by R. C. T. on pp. 346 ff.

" " " Wide Awake Stories. A Collection of Punjab and Kashmir Tales. Bombay, 1884 (many Linguistic and other Notes).

STEEL, MRS. F. A.,—Tales of the Punjab told by the People, with illustrations by John Lockwood Kipling, C.I.E., and Notes by R. C. Temple. London, 1894.

TEMPLE, LIEUTENANT [LIEUTENANT-COLONEL SIR] RICHARD CARNAC,—Notes on the Country between Khójak Pass and Lugárí Bárkhán. Journal of the Asiatic Society, Bengal, Vol. xlviii., Pt. II., 1879, pp. 103 ff.

" " The Sassí Punnún of Háshim Sháh. The Roman-Urdú Journal (q. v.), 1881, Vol. iv., July, pp. 19—31 : August, pp. 34—43 : September, pp. 12—20 (contains, carefully transliterated, the whole Pañjābī text of this important poem).

TEMPLE, LIEUTENANT [LIEUTENANT-COLONEL SIR] RICHARD CARNAC,—Muhammadan Belief in Hindu Superstition. Indian Antiquary, Vol. x. (1881), p. 371 (contains extracts from Pañjābī Ballads).

" " A Song about Sakhi Sarwar. Calcutta Review, Vol. lxxiii. (1881), pp. 253 ff.

" " Notes on some Coin Legends. Indian Antiquary, Vol. x., 1881, p. 90.

" " Note on Malik-ul-Maut. Indian Antiquary, Vol. x. (1881), pp. 289 ff.

" " Some Hindu Songs and Catches from the Villages in Northern India. Calcutta Review. Part I in Vol. lxxiv. (1882), pp. 316 ff. Part II in Vol. lxxv. (1882), pp. 41 ff.

" " Some Hindu Folksongs from the Punjáb. Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, Vol. li. (1882), Pt. I., pp. 151 ff. (The Introduction contains full Grammatical Notes on the Language.)

" " Honorific Class Names in the Punjāb. Indian Antiquary, Vol. xi. (1882), pp. 117 ff.

" " Lamia or Λάμια. Indian Antiquary, Vol. xi. (1882), pp. 232 ff.

" " A Panjab Legend. Indian Antiquary, Vol. xi. (1882), pp. 289 ff.

" " Śārikā,—Mainā,—KEPKIΩN. Indian Antiquary, Vol. xi., 1882, pp. 291 ff.

" " Twice told tales regarding the Akhund of Swāt. Indian Antiquary, Vol. xi., 1882, pp. 325 ff.

" " Songs of the People,—The Civil and Military Gazette, 4th July, 18th and 29th August, 13th September 1882; 19th January, 10th and 24th February, 21st March, 6th April, 26th July 1883. (In Pañjābī, with translation.)

" " Folklore of the Headless Horseman in Northern India. Calcutta Review, Vol. lxxvii. (1883), pp. 260 ff. (contains some Pañjābī verses).

" " Some Notes about Rāja Rasālū. Indian Antiquary, Vol. xii. (1883), pp. 303 ff. See also Steel, Mrs. F. A.

" " A Dissertation on the Proper Names of Panjābīs, with special Reference to the Proper Names of Villages in the Eastern Panjāb. Bombay, 1883.

" " An Examination of the Trade Dialect of the Naqqásh or painters on papier-maché in the Panjáb and Kashmír. Journal of the Asiatic Society, Bengal, Vol. liii. (1884), Pt. I., pp. 1 ff.

" " On Rasālū and Sālivāhaṇa. Indian Antiquary, Vol. xiii. (1884), pp. 178 ff.

" " Folksongs from Northern India. Calcutta Review, Vol. lxxvii. (1884), pp. 270 ff.

" " Folksongs from Northern India. Second Series. Calcutta Review, Vol. lxxviii. (1884), pp. 273 ff.

" " Raja Rasalu. Calcutta Review, Vol. lxxix. (1884), pp. 379 ff.

" " The Legends of the Panjáb. Bombay and London. Vol. i., 1884; Vol. ii., 1885; Vol. iii., 1900. See Rose, H. A., below.

" " The Dehli Dalals and their Slang. Indian Antiquary, Vol. xiv., 1885, pp. 155 ff.

" " The Coins of the Modern Native Chiefs of the Panjab. Indian Antiquary, Vol. xviii., 1889, pp. 321 ff.

" " Corruptions of English in the Punjab and Burma. Indian Antiquary, Vol. xx., 1891, p. 89.

" " Folklore in the Legends of the Panjāb. Indian Antiquary, Vol. xxix., 1900, pp. 73 ff., 89 ff., 163 ff.

" " AND PARRY, J. W.,—The Hymns of the Nāngīpanth. Indian Antiquary, Vol. xiii, (1884), pp. 1 ff.

See also Fallon, W., Rose, H. A., and Steel, Mrs. F. A.

SYAMACHARAN GANGULI,—The Language Question in the Panjab. Calcutta Review, Vol. lxxv. (No. 150) (1882).

IBBETSON, [SIR] DENZIL CHARLES JELF,—Outlines of Panjáb Ethnography, being Extracts from the Panjab Census Report of 1881, treating of Religion, Language, and Caste. Calcutta, 1883. (Chapter v.—The Languages of the People, pp. 155 ff.)

THORNTON, THOMAS H., C.S.I.,—The Vernacular Literature and Folklore of the Panjáb. Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society, Vol. xvii. (1885), pp. 373 and ff.

MACLAGAN, E. D.,—Census of India, 1891. Volume XIX. The Punjab and its Feudatories. Part I., Report. Calcutta, 1892. (Chapter ix.—The Languages of the People, pp. 260 and ff.)

BHĀI HAZĀRĀ SINGH, GIĀNĪ,—Dulhan Darpan. Mirror for Girls. (An adaptation of Nazīr Aḥmad's Hindōstānī Novel, the Mir'ātu'l-'arūs). Amritsar, 1893 (3rd edition).

BLUMHARDT, J. F.,—Catalogues of the Hindi, Panjabi, Sindhi, and Pushtu Printed Books in the Library of the British Museum. London, 1893.

Translation of the Ādi Granth—

TRUMPP, DR. ERNEST,—The Ādi Granth, or the Holy Scriptures of the Sikhs, translated from the original Gurmukhī, with Introductory Essays. London, 1877. According to Mr. Pincott (see below), Trumpp only translated 5,719 stanzas, out of a total of 15,575.

Books dealing with the Ādi Granth—

PINCOTT, FREDERIC,—The Arrangement of the Hymns of the Adi Granth. Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society, Vol. xviii. (1886), pp. 437 and ff.

VISHNU DĀS UDĀSĪ,—Ādi Granthdā Kōsha. Glossary to the Ādi Granth. Amritsar, 1892. Meanings of Words occurring in the Sikh Granth. (A Vocabulary in Punjabi of difficult Words occurring in the Ādi Granth.) By Báwá Bishan Dás. Amritsar, 1893.

MACAULIFFE, MAX ARTHUR,—The Sikh Religion, its Gurus, sacred Writings and Authors. Six Volumes, Oxford, 1909.

Other works, arranged under authors' names, in the order of the respective dates of the first work of each author.

ADELUNG, JOHANN CHRISTOPH,—Mithridates oder allgemeine Sprachenkunde mit dem Vater Unser als Sprachprobe in bey nahe fünfhundert Sprachen und Mundarten. Berlin, 1806—1817. Vol. i., p. 195, a short account of the local Dialect of Lahore called the Panzabische Sprache, about which nothing except the name, together with the fact that it is much mixed with Persian, was known. On p. 201 a version of the Lord's Prayer in the Gemeine Mundart zu Kasi by the missionary Schultz (sic), which is a mixture of Pañjābī and Bihārī. There is also a brief mention of the language in Vater's appendix to Vol. iv., p. 487.

ABBOTT, MAJOR J.,—On the Ballads and Legends of the Punjab. Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, Vol. xxiii. (1854), pp. 59 (general account of the subject) and 123 (A Rifacimento on the Legend of Russaloo).

BEAMES, JOHN,—Outlines of Indian Philology, with a Map shewing the Distribution of Indian Languages. Calcutta, 1867.

„ „ A Comparative Grammar of the modern Aryan Languages of India : to wit, Hindi, Punjabi, Sindhi, Gujarati, Marathi, Oriya, and Bengali. Three Vols. London, 1872—79.

SRADDHĀ RĀM,—Sikkhādē Rājdī Vithiā. A History of the Sikh Rulers, and of the present Administration of the Panjab. Ludhiana, 1868. Another edition, Lahore, 1892.

Translated by Major H. Court, Lahore, 1888. See under Grammars.

TOLBORT, T. W. H.,—The District of Lúdiána. Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, Vol. xxxviii. (1869), Pt. I., pp. 83 and ff.

HOERNLE, DR. A. F. R., C.I.E.,—Essays in Aid of a Comparative Grammar of the Gaurian Languages. Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, Vol. xli. (1872), Pt. I., pp. 120 and ff. Vol. xlii. (1873), Pt. I., pp. 59 and ff. Vol. xliii. (1874), Pt. I., pp. 22 and ff.

„ „ The Local Distribution and Mutual Affinities of the Gaudian Languages. Calcutta Review, Vol. lxvii (1878), pp. 752 and ff.

„ „ A Grammar of the Eastern Hindī compared with the other Gaudian Languages. Accompanied by a Language-map and Table of Alphabets. London, 1880.

VARIOUS WRITERS,—The Roman-Urdú Journal. Lahore, 1878-83 (Vols. I—VI). Contains many well-edited texts in the Pañjābī language.

STEEL, MRS. F. A., AND TEMPLE, LIEUTENANT [LIEUTENANT-COLONEL SIR] RICHARD CARNAC,—Folklore in the Panjab. Collected by F. A. S., with Notes by R. C. T., Indian Antiquary, Vol. ix. (1880), pp. 205, 207, 209, 280, 302 ; Vol. x. (1881), pp. 40, 80, 147, 228, 331, 347 ; Vol. xi. (1882), pp. 32, 73, 163, 169, 226, 229 ; Vol. xii. (1883), pp. 103, 175, 176, 177.

„ „ „ Folklore from Kashmīr. Collected by F. A. S., with Notes by R. C. T., Indian Antiquary, Vol. xi. (1882). Note on Rājā Rasālū by R. C. T. on pp. 346 ff.

„ „ „ Wide Awake Stories. A Collection of Punjab and Kashmir Tales. Bombay, 1884 (many Linguistic and other Notes).

STEEL, MRS. F. A.,—Tales of the Punjab told by the People, with illustrations by John Lockwood Kipling, C.I.E., and Notes by R. C. Temple. London, 1894.

TEMPLE, LIEUTENANT [LIEUTENANT-COLONEL SIR] RICHARD CARNAC,—Notes on the Country between Khójak Pass and Lugárí Bárkhán. Journal of the Asiatic Society, Bengal, Vol. xlviii., Pt. II., 1879, pp. 103 ff.

„ „ The Sassí Punnún of Háshim Sháh. The Roman-Urdú Journal (q. v.), 1881, Vol. iv., July, pp. 19—31 : August, pp. 34—43 : September, pp. 12—20 (contains, carefully transliterated, the whole Pañjābī text of this important poem).

TEMPLE, LIEUTENANT [LIEUTENANT-COLONEL SIR] RICHARD CARNAC,—Muhammadan Belief in Hindu Superstition. Indian Antiquary, Vol. x. (1881), p. 371 (contains extracts from Pañjābī Ballads).

" " A Song about Sakhi Sarwar. Calcutta Review, Vol. lxxiii. (1881), pp. 253 ff.

" " Notes on some Coin Legends. Indian Antiquary, Vol. x., 1881, p. 90.

" " Note on Malik-ul-Maut. Indian Antiquary, Vol. x. (1881), pp. 289 ff.

" " Some Hindu Songs and Catches from the Villages in Northern India. Calcutta Review. Part I in Vol. lxxiv. (1882), pp. 316 ff. Part II in Vol. lxxv. (1882), pp. 41 ff.

" " Some Hindu Folksongs from the Punjáb. Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, Vol. li. (1882), Pt. I., pp. 151 ff. (The Introduction contains full Grammatical Notes on the Language.)

" " Honorific Class Names in the Punjāb. Indian Antiquary, Vol. xi. (1882), pp. 117 ff.

" " Lamia or Λάμια. Indian Antiquary, Vol. xi. (1882), pp. 232 ff.

" " A Panjab Legend. Indian Antiquary, Vol. xi. (1882), pp. 289 ff.

" " Śārikā,—Mainā,—ΚΕΡΚΙΩΝ. Indian Antiquary, Vol. xi., 1882, pp. 291 ff.

" " Twice told tales regarding the Akhund of Swāt. Indian Antiquary, Vol. xi., 1882, pp. 325 ff.

" " Songs of the People,—The Civil and Military Gazette, 4th July, 18th and 29th August, 13th September 1882; 19th January, 10th and 24th February, 21st March, 6th April, 26th July 1883. (In Pañjābī, with translation.)

" " Folklore of the Headless Horseman in Northern India. Calcutta Review, Vol. lxxvii. (1883), pp. 260 ff. (contains some Pañjābī verses).

" " Some Notes about Rāja Rasālū. Indian Antiquary, Vol. xii. (1883), pp. 303 ff. See also Steel, Mrs. F. A.

" " A Dissertation on the Proper Names of Panjābīs, with special Reference to the Proper Names of Villages in the Eastern Panjāb. Bombay, 1883.

" " An Examination of the Trade Dialect of the Naqqásh or painters on papier-maché in the Panjáb and Kashmír. Journal of the Asiatic Society, Bengal, Vol. liii. (1884), Pt. I., pp. 1 ff.

" " On Rasālū and Sālivāhaṇa. Indian Antiquary, Vol. xiii. (1884), pp. 178 ff.

" " Folksongs from Northern India. Calcutta Review, Vol. lxxvii. (1884), pp. 270 ff.

" " Folksongs from Northern India. Second Series. Calcutta Review, Vol. lxxviii. (1884), pp. 273 ff.

" " Raja Rasalu. Calcutta Review, Vol. lxxix. (1884), pp. 379 ff.

" " The Legends of the Panjáb. Bombay and London. Vol. i., 1884; Vol. ii., 1885; Vol. iii., 1900. See Rose, H. A., below.

" " The Dehli Dalals and their Slang. Indian Antiquary, Vol. xiv., 1885, pp. 155 ff.

" " The Coins of the Modern Native Chiefs of the Panjab. Indian Antiquary, Vol. xviii., 1889, pp. 321 ff.

" " Corruptions of English in the Punjab and Burma. Indian Antiquary, Vol. xx., 1891, p. 89.

" " Folklore in the Legends of the Panjāb. Indian Antiquary, Vol. xxix., 1900, pp. 73 ff., 89 ff., 163 ff.

" " AND PARRY, J. W.,—The Hymns of the Nāngīpanth. Indian Antiquary, Vol. xiii, (1884), pp. 1 ff.

See also Fallon, W., Rose, H. A., and Steel, Mrs. F. A.

SYAMACHARAN GANGULI,—The Language Question in the Panjab. Calcutta Review, Vol. lxxv. (No. 150) (1882).

IBBETSON, [SIR] DENZIL CHARLES JELF,—Outlines of Panjáb Ethnography, being Extracts from the Panjab Census Report of 1881, treating of Religion, Language, and Caste. Calcutta, 1883. (Chapter v.—The Languages of the People, pp. 155 ff.)

THORNTON, THOMAS H., C.S.I.,—The Vernacular Literature and Folklore of the Panjáb. Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society, Vol. xvii. (1885), pp. 373 and ff.

MACLAGAN, E. D.,—Census of India, 1891. Volume XIX. The Punjab and its Feudatories. Part I., Report. Calcutta, 1892. (Chapter ix.—The Languages of the People, pp. 260 and ff.)

BHĀĪ HAZĀRĀ SINGH, GIĀNĪ,—Dulhan Darpan. Mirror for Girls. (An adaptation of Naẓīr Aḥmad's Hindōstānī Novel, the Mir'ātu'l-'arūs). Amritsar, 1893 (3rd edition).

BLUMHARDT, J. F.,—Catalogues of the Hindi, Panjabi, Sindhi, and Pushtu Printed Books in the Library of the British Museum. London, 1893.

BLUMHARDT, J. F.,—Catalogue of the Library of the India Office. Vol. II., Part III.—Hindi, Panjabi, Pushtu, and Sindhi Books. London, 1902.

ROSE, H. A.,—Census of India, 1901. Vol. XVII. Punjab and North-West Frontier Province. Part I. Report. Simla, 1902. Chapter vi., Language, pp. 278 ff.

" " Legends from the Panjab (a Continuation of Sir Richard Temple's The Legends of the Panjáb). (Text and Translation.) Indian Antiquary, No. I., Vol. xxxv. (1906), p. 300; No. II., Vol. xxxvii. (1908), p. 149; No. III., Vol. xxxviii. (1909), p. 81; No. IV., ib., p. 311; Vol. xxxix. (1910), p. 1.

" " A Triplet of Panjabi Songs. (Text and Translation.) Indian Antiquary, Vol. xxxviii. (1909), p. 33.

" " The Legend of Khan Khwas and Sher Shah the Chaugalla (Mughal) at Delhi. (Text and Translation.) Indian Antiquary, Vol. xxxviii. (1909), p. 113.

SWYNNERTON, REV. CHARLES,—Romantic Tales from the Panjab, collected and edited from various Sources. London, 1903.

YOUNGSON, REV. J.,—The Chuhras. Indian Antiquary, Vol. xxxv. (1906), pp. 82, 302, 337; Vol. xxxvi. (1907), pp. 19, 71, 106, 135. (Contains numerous Songs in the Pañjābī of the Chuhrās.)

II.—GRAMMARS, DICTIONARIES, AND AIDS TO THE STUDENT, INCLUDING COLLECTIONS OF PROVERBS.

CAREY, DR. W.,—A Grammar of the Punjaubee Language. Serampore, 1812.

LEECH, LIEUT. (MAJOR, C.B.) ROBERT,—Epitome of the Grammars of the Brahuiky, the Balochky and the Panjábi Languages . . . Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, Vol. vii. (1838), pp. 711 ff. Reprinted, Calcutta, 1838. Another copy in Transactions of the Bombay Geographical Society, Vol. i. (1838). Reprinted under title of A Grammar of the Panjabee Language, Bombay, 1838. Reprinted under title of Grammars of the Brahoreekee (sic), Beeloochee, and Punjabee Languages, as No. 12 of Reports and Papers, political, geographical, and commercial, submitted to Government by Sir A. Burnes, Lieutenant Leech, Doctor Lord, and Lieutenant Wood, employed on Missions in the Years 1835-36-37, in Scinde, Affghanistan, and adjacent Countries. Calcutta, 1839.

JANVIER, REV. L.,—Idiomatic Sentences in English and Punjabi. Lodiana, 1846. See also Newton, Rev. J.

STARKEY, CAPTAIN SAMUEL CROSS, AND BUSSAWA SING,—A Dictionary, English and Punjabee, Outlines of Grammar, also Dialogues, English and Punjabee, with Grammar and Explanatory Notes. By Captain Starkey, assisted by Bussawa Sing. Calcutta, 1849.

NEWTON, REV. J.,—A Grammar of the Panjabi Language, with Appendices. Lodiana, 1st edition, 1851; 2nd, 1866; 3rd, 1893. Appendix I. deals with numerals and the calendar. Appendix II., Extracts in Pañjābī, (1) Pañjābī Customs, (2) An extract from the Life of Nānak, (3) Selection from Pañjābī Proverbs, with explanations by a native.

" " AND JANVIER, REV. L.,—A Dictionary of the Panjábí Language, prepared by a Committee of the Lodiana Mission. Lodiana, 1854. (This Dictionary was founded on a collection by Newton, and was completed by Janvier and others. The Pañjābī words are printed in the Gurmukhī and Roman characters, in the order of the Gurmukhī alphabet.)

CUNNINGHAM, SIR ALEXANDER,—Ladák, physical, statistical, and historical, with Notices of the Surrounding Countries. London, 1854. Chapter xv. contains vocabularies . . . Alpine Dialects from the Indus to the Ghāgra, viz., . . . Panjābī, etc.

CAMPBELL, SIR GEORGE,—The Ethnology of India. By Mr. Justice Campbell. (Appendix C. Comparative Table of Northern and Arian Words . . . Panjabee, etc.) Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, Vol. xxxv. (1866), Part II., Special Number.

" " Specimens of the Languages of India, including those of the Aboriginal Tribes of Bengal, the Central Provinces, and the Eastern Frontier. Calcutta, 1874. (Vocabulary of Punjabee of Lahore on pp. 24 ff.)

BIHĀRĪ LĀL,—Panjabi Grammar. Lahore, 1867.

" " Pañjābī Vyākaraṇasāra. An Elementary Grammar of the Pañjābī Language (in Pañjābī). Lodiana, 1869. Another Edition, Lahore, 1895.

BADEN-POWELL, B. H.,—Handbook of the Economic Products, and of the Manufactures and Arts of the Punjab, with a combined Index and Glossary of Technical Vernacular Words. 2 Vols., Roorkee, 1868, and Lahore, 1872.

LYALL, [SIR] JAMES BROADWOOD,—Report of the Land Revenue Settlement of the Kangra District, Panjab . . . 1865-72. Lahore, 1874. (Appendix IV., Glossary. Appendix V., Proverbial Sayings.)

DREW, FREDERIC,—The Jummoo and Kashmir Territories. A Geographical Account. London, 1875. Account of Ḍōgrā, pp. 463 ff.; Ḍōgrā Alphabet described, p. 471. Appendix I. (pp. 503 ff.), Ḍōgrā Grammar.

MUHAMMAD ABDUL GHAFUR,—A complete Dictionary of the Terms used by the Criminal Tribes of the Punjab; together with a short History of each Tribe, and the Names and Places of Residence of individual Members. Lahore, 1879. See Leitner, G. W.

LEITNER, G. W.,—A Collection of Specimens of Commercial and Other Alphabets and Handwritings, as also of Multiplication Tables current in various parts of the Punjab, Sind and the North-West Provinces. Lahore, no date.

" " A detailed Analysis of Abdul Ghafur's Dictionary of the Terms used by Criminal Tribes in the Punjab. Lahore, 1880. See Muhammad Abdul Ghafur, above.

SARDHĀ RĀM, PANDIT,—Panjábí Bát Chít. Lodhiana, 1884.

WALKER, T. G.,—Final Report on the . . . Settlement . . . of the Ludhiána District in the Panjáb. Calcutta, 1884. (Appendix XIV., Glossary and Proverbs.)

WILSON, J.,—Final Report on the Revision of Settlement of the Sirsā District in the Panjāb. 1879-83. Calcutta, 1884. (Appendix II. describes The Panjābī and Bāgṛī Dialects as spoken in the Sirsa District; with Verses, Proverbs, and Sayings.)

FALLON, S. W., PH.D.; TEMPLE, CAPTAIN [LIEUTENANT-COLONEL SIR] RICHARD CARNAC; AND LALA FAQIR CHAND VAISH,—A Dictionary of Hindustani Proverbs, including many Marwari, Panjabi, Maggah, Bhojpuri, and Tirhuti Proverbs, Sayings, Emblems, Aphorisms, Maxims, and Similes. By the late S. W. F. Edited and revised by R. C. T., assisted by L. F. Ch. Benares and London, 1886.

COURT, MAJOR H.,—History of the Sikhs; or a translation of the Sikhān de Rāj dī Vikhiā. With a short Gurmukhi Grammar. Lahore, 1888. See Śraddhā Rām, under Heading I, General.

TISDALL, REV. WM. ST. CLAIR,—A Simplified Grammar and Reading Book of the Panjābī Language. London, 1889.

MACONACHIE, R.,—Selected Agricultural Proverbs of the Panjab, edited with notes by R. M. Delhi, 1890.

BHĀNU DATT, PANDIT,—Pañjābī Akhautā. Panjabi Proverbs, with Explanations. Lahore, 1891.

DANE, L. W.,—Final Report of the . . . Settlement of the Gurdaspur District in the Panjab . . . 1892. Lahore, 1892. (A Glossary precedes the Report.)

PURSER, W. E.,—Final Report of the . . . Settlement of the Jullundur District in the Punjab. Lahore, 1892. (Appendix XIII., Proverbial Sayings. App. XIV., Glossary.)

BHAI MAYA SINGH,—The Panjábí Dictionary prepared by Munshi Gulab Singh and Sons, under the Patronage of the Punjab Government. Compiled and edited by Bhai Maya Singh, Member, Khalsa College Council. And passed by Dr. H. M. Clark, of Amritsar. In behalf of the Panjab Text Book Committee. Lahore, 1895. The Panjābī words are printed in the Roman and in the Gurmukhī characters, and are arranged in the order of the English alphabet.)

DUNLOP-SMITH, JAMES ROBERT,—Final Report of the . . . Settlement of the Sialkot District in the Punjab . . . 1888-1895. Lahore, 1895. (Appendix I., Glossary.)

JAWĀHIR SIṄGH, MUNSHĪ,—A Vocabulary of Two Thousand Words from English into Panjabi. Lahore, 1895.

ANON.,—A Guide to Panjábí. Lahore, 1896.

MUL (? MŪL) SIṄGH, HAVILDĀR,—A Handbook to learn Panjabi. Amritsar, 1897.

SĀLIGRĀM LĀLĀ,—Anglo-Gurmukhi Dictionary. Lahore, 1897.

" " Anglo-Gurmukhi Bolchal. (Sentences in English and Pañjābī.) Lahore, 1900.

NEWTON, REV. E. P.,—Panjābī Grammar, with Exercises and Vocabulary. Ludhiana, 1898.

O'BRIEN, E.,—(Appendix I. of the last edition of the Kangra Gazetteer consists of Notes on the Dialect of the Kangra Valley with a Glossary of Words peculiar to the Kangra District, by the late Mr. O. O'Brien.)

GRAHAME BAILEY, REV. T.,—Panjābī Grammar. A brief Grammar of Panjābī as spoken in the Wazīrābād District. Lahore, 1904.

" " Supplements to the Panjābī Dictionary. No. 1. Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, Vol. V., N. S. (1909), p. 479.

" " A Panjabi Phonetic Reader. London, 1914.
See also Cummings, Rev. T. F., below.

GRIERSON, G. A.,—On the Modern Indo-Aryan Alphabets of North-Western India. Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society, 1904, pp. 67 ff.

ROSE, H. A.,—Some Contributions towards a Glossary of Religious and other Terms used in the Panjab. Indian Antiquary, Vol. xxxiii. (1904), p. 118.

" " —Notes on Ancient Administrative Terms and Titles used in the Panjab. Indian Antiquary, Vol. xxxvi. (1907), p. 348; Vol. xxxvii. (1908), p. 75.

" " —Contributions to Panjabi Lexicography. Series I., Indian Antiquary, Vol. xxxvii. (1908), p. 360; Vol. xxxviii. (1909), pp. 17, 74, 98; Series II., ib., pp. 221, 249, 265, 282, 322; Vol. xxxix. (1910), p. 29; Series III., ib., pp. 242, 247; Vol. xl. (1911), pp. 199, 230, 258, 274, 289, 305; Vol. xli. (1912), pp. 41, 92, 150, 176, 197, 212, 242, 267.

CUMMINGS, REV. T. F., AND GRAHAME BAILEY, REV. T.,—Panjabi Manual and Grammar: a Guide to the Colloquial Panjabi of the Northern Panjab. Calcutta, 1912. (This deals mainly with the Pañjabi spoken north and north-west of Lahore.)

Written Character.

The Pañjābī language is usually said to be written in the Gurmukhī alphabet; indeed, the name 'Gurmukhī' is often applied, most incorrectly, to the language itself. There is no more a 'Gurmukhī' language than there is a 'Dēva-nāgarī' one. As a matter of fact several languages have been written in Gurmukhī. The Ādi Granth, which is throughout written in that character, is mostly in some dialect or other of Western Hindī, and even contains some Marāṭhī hymns.

The true alphabet of the Punjab is known as the Laṇḍā or 'clipped.' It is connected with the Mahājanī character of Northern India, and resembles it in having a very imperfect system of representing the vowel sounds. Vowel signs are frequently omitted. It is said that in the time of Aṅgad, the second Sikh Guru (1538-1552 A.D.), this Laṇḍā was the only alphabet employed in the Punjab for writing the vernacular. Aṅgad found that Sikh hymns written in Laṇḍā were liable to be misread, and he accordingly improved it by borrowing signs from the Dēva-nāgarī alphabet (then only used for Sanskrit manuscripts), and by polishing up the forms of the letters, so as to make them fit for recording the scriptures of the Sikh religion. Having been invented by him this character became known as the Gur-mukhī, or the alphabet proceeding from the mouth of the Guru. Ever since, this alphabet has been employed for writing the Sikh Scriptures, and its use has widely spread, mainly among members of that sect.

On the other hand Laṇḍā has remained current all over the Punjab, and is especially used by shop-keepers.

Closely resembling Laṇḍā is Ṭākrī or Ṭãkrī, the character employed in the Himalayas north of the Punjab, a refined variety of which is Ḍōgrī, the official character of Jammu. Ṭākrī leads us further north into Kashmir. Here, just as Gurmukhī is a polished form of Laṇḍā, we find the Śāradā character employed in Kashmir by Hindūs for all purposes. It is a polished variety of Ṭākrī, and is as complete as Dēva-nāgarī. In order to show the close connection between these four alphabets, I give them together, in parallel columns, on the following page. Laṇḍā and Ṭākrī differ considerably from place to place, and I have taken the specimens from fairly central localities in the area in which they are respectively employed.[1]

[1] Ḍōgrī is fully described in pp. 637 ff. For other varieties of Laṇḍā and Ṭākrī, the reader is referred to Dr. Leitner's Collection of Specimens, mentioned under the head of 'Authorities.' Compare also the present writer's article on the Modern Indo-Aryan Alphabets of North-Western India, also mentioned under that head.

Gurmukhī.	Laṇḍā.	Ṭākrī.	Śāradā.		Gurmukhī.	Laṇḍā.	Ṭākrī.	Śāradā.
ਅ	𑅄	𑆃	𑆃	'āiṛā'	ਠ	𑅟	𑆜	𑆞	ḍa
ਇ	𑅅	𑆄	𑆄	'īṛī'	ਢ	𑅠	𑆝	𑆟	ḍha
ਉ	𑅆	𑆅	𑆅	'ūṛā'	ਣ	𑅡	𑆞	𑆠	ṇa
ਓ	𑅆	𑆅	𑆅	ō	ਤ	𑅢	𑆟	𑆡	ta
ਸ	𑅇	𑆇	𑆇	sa	ਥ	𑅣	𑆠	𑆢	tha
ਹ	𑅈	𑆈	𑆈	ha	ਦ	𑅤	𑆡	𑆣	da
ਕ	𑅉	𑆉	𑆉	ka	ਧ	𑅥	𑆢	𑆤	dha
ਖ	𑅊	𑆊	𑆊	kha	ਨ	𑅦	𑆣	𑆥	na
ਗ	𑅋	𑆋	𑆋	ga	ਪ	𑅧	𑆤	𑆦	pa
ਘ	𑅌	𑆌	𑆌	gha	ਫ	𑅨	𑆥	𑆧	pha
ਙ	𑅍	𑆍	𑆍	ṅa	ਬ	𑅩	𑆦	𑆨	ba
ਚ	𑅎	𑆎	𑆎	cha	ਭ	𑅪	𑆧	𑆩	bha
ਛ	𑅏	𑆏	𑆏	chha	ਮ	𑅫	𑆨	𑆪	ma
ਜ	𑅐	𑆐	𑆐	ja	ਯ	𑅬	...	𑆫	ya
ਝ	𑅑	𑆑	𑆑	jha	ਰ	𑅭	𑆩	𑆬	ra
ਞ	𑅒	...	𑆒	ñ	ਲ	𑅮	𑆪	𑆭	la
ਟ	𑅓	𑆓	𑆓	ṭa	ਵ	𑅯	𑆫	𑆮	va

While the Śāradā alphabet closely follows the Dēva-nāgarī in the arrangement of its letters, and in the system of representation of its vowels, Gurmukhī, with Laṇḍā and Ṭākrī, diverges somewhat from the latter in both particulars.

Gurmukhī has only one sibilant ਸ sa, corresponding to the Dēva-nāgarī स. It has nothing to correspond to the Dēva-nāgarī श śa or ष ṣha, these letters not being required for the Pañjābī language. When it is desired to represent the sound of sh, as it appears in words borrowed from Arabic or Persian, a dot is put under ਸ sa. Thus, ਸ਼ sha.

In the order of the alphabet, ਸ sa and ਹ ha do not come at the end, after the other consonants, as in Dēva-nāgarī, but precede the other consonants, coming immediately after the vowels.

The system of representing vowels in Gurmukhī is somewhat peculiar. It has three signs, viz. ਅ, ੲ, and ੳ which are known respectively as āiṛā, īṛī, and ūṛā. These are used when vowels are initial, as bases to support the non-initial forms of the vowels it is desired to represent. With these bases they become initial vowels. ਅ āiṛā is used as the base of the initial forms of ਅ a, ਆ ā, ਐ ai, and ਔ au, the non-initial forms of the last three being ਾ ੈ and ੌ respectively. As in Dēva-nāgarī, ਅ a has no non-initial form. ੲ īṛī is used as the base of the initial forms of ਇ i, ਈ ī, and ਏ ē, the non-initial forms of these vowels being ਿ, ੀ, and ੇ respectively. ੳ ūṛā is the base of the initial forms of ੁ u and ੂ ū, the non-initial forms of these vowels being ੁ and ੂ respectively. Finally by slightly modifying the upper curve of ੳ ūṛā, so as to leave it open, we get ੴ, the initial form of the vowel ō, of which the non-initial form is ੋ.

We thus arrive at the following vowels as written in the Gurmukhī alphabet.

Initial forms.

ਅ a, ਆ ā, ਇ i, ਈ ī, ਉ u, ਊ ū, ਏ ē, ਐ ai, ਓ ō, ਔ au.

Non-initial forms.

ਕ ka, ਕਾ kā, ਕਿ ki, ਕੀ kī, ਕੁ ku, ਕੂ kū, ਕੇ kē, ਕੈ kai, ਕੋ kō, ਕੌ kau.

The Gurmukhī consonants are as follows :—

ਸ sa,	ਹ ha,
ਕ ka,	ਖ kha,	ਗ ga,	ਘ gha,	ਙ ṅa.
ਚ cha,	ਛ chha,	ਜ ja,	ਝ jha,	ਞ ña.
ਟ ṭa,	ਠ ṭha,	ਡ ḍa,	ਢ ḍha,	ਣ ṇa.
ਤ ta,	ਥ tha,	ਦ da,	ਧ dha,	ਨ na.
ਪ pa,	ਫ pha,	ਬ ba,	ਭ bha,	ਮ ma.
ਯ ya,	ਰ ra,	ਲ la,	ਵ wa, va,	ੜ ṛa.

Each vowel and consonant has, in Pañjābī, a definite name. Thus, non-initial ਾ ā is called ā-kannā, non-initial ਿ i, i-siārī, and so on. Similarly, ਸ sa, is called sassā, ਹ ha is called hahā, and so on. It is unnecessary to give these names here, as they are of little practical use and can be found in any Pañjābī Grammar.

There are two nasal signs, viz. ੰ known as ṭippī, and ◌ਂ known as bindī.

Ṭippī can be written over any syllable containing (non-initial) ū, or any of the short vowels a, i, or (non-initial) u. Before ਸ sa, it is pronounced as n. Thus, ਅੰਸ is pronounced ans. Before ਹ h or another vowel, or at the end of a word, it has the sound of the n in the French word bon, which I represent by the sign ˜ over the vowel nasalised. Thus, ਸਿੰਘ sīh, ਜਿਉ jīu, ਨੈਂ nẽ. Before any other consonant it has the sound of the nasal of the class to which that consonant belongs. Thus, ਚੰਗਾ chaṅgā, ਪਞ੍ਛੀ pañchhī, ਪਿੰਡ piṇḍ, ਹਿੰਦੂ hindū, ਖੰਨਾ khannā, ਅੰਬ amb, ਸੰਮਤ sammat.

Bindī may be written over any syllable containing any of the long vowels ā, ī, ē, ai, ō or au, whether initial or non-initial, or over the initial forms of u and ū (the non-initial forms of these last two vowels take ṭippī). Bindī generally has the sound of the n in the French word bon, and is then represented in transliteration by ˜. Thus, ਬਾਂਸ bā̃s, ਅਸੀਂ asī̃, ਏਲੋਂ ēlō̃. Often, however, when not at the end of a word or preceding h or s, it is pronounced like ṭippī.

The Pañjābī language requires very few compound consonants. The following are the ones most usually met with:— ਸ੍ਟ sṭa, ਮ੍ਹ mha, ਨ੍ਹ nha, ਰ੍ਹ rha, ਲ੍ਹ lha, ੜ੍ਹ ṛha, ਗ੍ਯ gya, ਸ੍ਥ stha, ਤ੍ਯ tya, ਸ੍ਮ sma. When ਰ ra is the second member of a conjunct it takes the form of a subscript dash. Thus, ਸ੍ਰ sra, ਕ੍ਰ kra, ਖ੍ਰ khra, ਗ੍ਰ gra, ਤ੍ਰ tra (rather common), ਦ੍ਰ dra, ਪ੍ਰ pra, ਬ੍ਰ bra, ਭ੍ਰ bhra.

When a letter is doubled the sign ੱ, known as adhik, is written above the line immediately in front of it. Thus, ਸੱਪ sapp, ਗੱਦੀ gaddī, ਅੱਸੂ assū, ਬਿੱਛੂ bichchhū, ਪੱਥਰ patthar.

Other compound consonants are indicated by mere juxtaposition. Thus, ਬਕਬਕੀ bakbakī, not bakabakī, as we might expect; ਖੁਰਚਣ khurchaṇ, not khurachaṇ; ਮਾਟਣਾ māṭṇā, not māṭaṇā; ਮਾਰਦਾ mārda, not māradā or *mār*ᵃ*dā*.

In the Eastern Punjab, but not in the Mājh, there is a cerebral ḷ-sound which also occurs in Lahndā, Vernacular Hindōstānī, Central and Western Pahāṛī, Rājasthānī, Gujarātī, Marāṭhī, and Oṛiyā. It is indicated by affixing a short tick to the right hand lower corner of the ordinary character for l. Thus, ਲ਼ ḷa.

As in Western Hindī the inherent a of the final consonant of a word is not pronounced.

The letter ਵ sometimes has the sound of wa, and sometimes that of va. The va is not pronounced as in English, with the lower lip pressed against the upper teeth. It is a pure labial sound made by pressing the two lips together, and letting the breath issue between them. In cognate languages the letter generally has a v-sound before the vowels i and e (whether long or short) and a w-sound before other vowels. In Pañjābī this rule generally holds good when the letter is in the middle of a word, but at the commencement of a word it is not followed. Here the only rule seems to be custom, and I have accordingly given as a supplement to the skeleton grammar a list of words taken from Bhāī Māyā Singh's Dictionary which commence with the letter and in which that letter is pronounced as v. In all other Pañjābī words commencing with the letter it is pronounced as w.[1]

Hitherto we have dealt with the alphabets employed by Sikhs and Hindūs. It must be remembered that there is also a large Musalmān population in the Pañjābī-

[1] See pp. 633 ff.

speaking area, which uses Pañjābī as freely as its Hindū neighbours. These people, however, when they write the language usually employ the Perso-Arabic alphabet as adapted for Hindōstānī. It has no local peculiarities.

Specimens written in all the foregoing scripts (except Laṇḍā) will be found in the following pages. No specimens have been received in Laṇḍā, nor does that character easily lend itself to writing more than a few sentences. Its decipherment is so difficult even to those who write it, that it is seldom employed except for writing accounts and the like among illiterate shopkeepers.

Grammar.

Pañjābī Grammar in the main follows that of Hindōstānī, so that few remarks are necessary.

As regards pronunciation, the only letters which require special notice are h and some of the aspirated consonants. In Lahndā these are pronounced in a peculiar way, and the same fact is evident in the western districts of the Pañjābī area. The best account of this pronunciation is that given by Mr. Grahame Bailey in his grammar of the Wazirabad dialect, of which the following is an abstract.

In these districts, when h commences a word, or precedes an accented syllable, it has a strong guttural sound resembling that of a somewhat strongly pronounced ع 'ain, in Arabic. We might compare the Cockney pronunciation of ham as 'am (not 'am). Thus, hiyyā̃, the sides of a bed, is pronounced 'iyyā̃, and pihā̃ī, the wages of grinding, pi'ā̃ī.

In other positions, i.e. when it is not at the beginning of a word or preceding an accented syllable, it is hardly audible or may be altogether inaudible, but it strongly raises the pitch of the preceding vowel, often altering the whole tone of the word. Thus, lā́h, bring down, is very different in sound from lā, attach, although the h in the former is often quite inaudible. Similarly the first ā́ in kā́hḷā, speedy, is pronounced in a high tone, while in kāḷā, black, it has the ordinary tone, although the h in the former word is not itself sounded.

The same remarks apply to the h shown in transliteration of soft (not hard) aspirated consonants, viz. :—gh, jh, ḍh, dh, bh, ṇh, nh, mh, ṛh, rh, wh, etc., but not in the case of the hard aspirated consonants kh, chh, ṭh, th, ph, or of sh. Thus, bhrā, a brother, is pronounced b'rā, ghumā́, a measure of land, g'umā́, and Chanhā̃', the Chināb river, is pronounced Chan'ā̃'. On the other hand, in kúṛh, in which ṛh follows an accented vowel, the h is inaudible, but the u is pronounced in a higher tone than in kúṛ, the joint of a plough; and the a of bágghī (pronounced bágg'ī, not bágg'ī), a buggy, is higher in tone than the a of bággī (feminine), white.

In nouns, the most noteworthy peculiarities are that the oblique plural ends in ā̃ and that the suffix of the genitive is dā, which, like adjectives ending in ā, agrees, not only in gender and number, but also in case, with the noun with which it is in agreement.

In the verbs, two forms of the verb substantive may be noted. One is jē, he is. This is only heard in the western districts of the Pañjābī area, and its correct meaning was first indicated by Mr. Grahame Bailey in his Wazirabad Grammar already alluded to. By origin jē is the pronoun of the second person plural combined with the verb substantive, and it properly means 'there is to (or by) you.' This is evident in phrases like:—

kī miḷeā jē, literally, what was got to you, i.e. what did you get? Standard Pañjābī tuhānũ kī miliā.

kī ākheā jē, what was said by you, what did you say? Standard tusī̃ kī ākheā.

kī jē, what has happened to you.

Generally, the reference to the second person is less direct, and must be translated, if at all, by some such phrase as 'I say to you,' or 'I ask you.' Thus, kī jē, already given, also means 'I ask you what has happened (to anybody, not necessarily to you).' Similarly:—

ōtthē dō jē, I say to you there are two there.
maĩ āyā jē, I say to you I have come.
sāhb jē, I say to you it is the Sāhib.

It is evident that, in the last three examples, the 'I say to you' can be for all practical purposes omitted, and the jē represented, as it is in the grammar, by 'he is' or 'they are.' It can, however, only be used in sentences like the foregoing.

The common form of the past tense of the verb substantive is usually sī for both masculine and feminine singular, and for the masculine plural. This is generally explained as the feminine of sā, but much more probably it is a corruption of some old form akin to the Prakrit āsī, Sanskrit āsīt, he was. The infinitive of the finite verb generally ends in ṇa (not na), though na occurs in the case of some verbs. The future presents a few irregularities and there is a passive voice formed by adding ī to the active root (see p. 616), but on the whole the conjugation of the verb closely resembles that of vernacular Hindōstānī. It is therefore believed that the annexed skeleton grammar will enable the student to understand the language of the following specimens.

PAÑJĀBĪ SKELETON GRAMMAR.

I. NOUNS.—Gender.—This closely follows Hindōstānī. The most important exception is rāh, a road, which is masculine in Pañjābī.

Number and Case.—The nominative plural closely follows Hindōstānī. Oblique plurals terminate in ã̄. Thus,—

Singular.		Plural.
Direct.	Oblique.	Direct.	Oblique.
muṇḍā, a boy	muṇḍē	muṇḍē	muṇḍiã̄	The following are the usual forms of the Vocative :—ē muṇḍiā (sing.); ē muṇḍiō; ē bāṇīã̄ (or bāṇīẽ̄); ē bāṇīō: ē manukkhā; ē manukkhō: ē bhāīā; ē bhāīō: ē kāwẽ̄; ē kāwō̃ (or kāō̃): ē pēwā; ē pēwō̃: ē dhīē; ē dhīō: ē kandhē; ē kandhō: ē māwẽ̄ (or māũ); ē māwō̃ (or māō̃): ē vidhwā; ē vidhwāō. The nominative is sometimes used instead of the vocative.
bāṇīã̄, a shopkeeper	bāṇīẽ̄	bāṇīẽ̄	bāṇīã̄
manukkh, a man	manukkh	manukkh	manukkhã̄
bhāī, a brother	bhāī	bhāī	bhāīã̄
kāũ, a crow	kāũ	kāũ	kāwã̄
piu, a father	piu	piu	pēwã̄
dhī, a daughter	dhī	dhīã̄, dhĩ̄	dhīã̄, dhĩ̄
kandh, a wall (fem.)	kandh	kandhã̄	kandhã̄
māũ, a mother	māũ	māwã̄	māwã̄
vidhwā, a widow	vidhwā	vidhwã̄	vidhwã̄

There are also other cases occasionally met with; viz. an agent plural in ĩ̄ as in tusĩ̄ lōkĩ̄ pāiā, you people have obtained; a locative singular in ē, as in gharē, in the house; chhāvẽ̄ (from chhāũ), in the shade; a locative plural in ĩ̄, as in gur-mukhī akkharĩ̄, in Gurmukhī letters; an ablative singular in ȭ, as in gharȭ, from the house; and an ablative plural in ĩ̄, as in hatthĩ̄, by hands.

The case postpositions are,—

Agent—nai (often omitted).
Dat.-Acc.—nũ̄.
Instr.-Abl.—tē, tȭ, thȭ, thĩ̄, dȭ, by, with, from.
Gen.—dā.
Loc.—vichch, in; pur, on; pās, pāh, near; nāl, with.

Many of these may be used with the oblique genitive masc., as gharvichch or ghardē vichch, in the house.

NOTE.—Dā of the genitive is a termination rather than a postposition. It should hence be written without a hyphen. Thus, ghardā, not ghar-dā, of a house. So also nai of the agent, and nū of the dative-accusative; but ghar-pur, on the house, with a hyphen. Regarding the declension of the genitive, see Adjectives.

Adjectives.—Adjectives ending in ā and genitives agree with their qualified nouns in gender, number and form. Thus, nikkā muṇḍā, a good boy; nikkē muṇḍēnũ̄, to a good boy; ē nekkiā muṇḍiā, O good boy; nikkē muṇḍē, good boys; nikkiã̄ muṇḍiãnũ̄, to good boys; ē nikkē muṇḍiō, O good boys; nikkī kuṛī, a good girl; nikkī kuṛīnũ̄, to a good girl; ē nikkiē kuṛīē, O good girl; nikkīã̄ kuṛīã̄, good girls; nikkĩ̄ kuṛīãnũ̄, to good girls; ghōṛēdā mũ̄h, the horse's mouth; ghōṛēdē mũ̄h-vichh, in the horse's mouth; ghōṛēdī akkh, the horse's eye; ghōṛēdĩ̄ akkhã̄-vichch, in the horse's eyes. The Hindōstānī system of using the termination ē for all oblique masculine cases, and ī for all feminine cases is also employed.

Comparison of adjectives is as in other Indian languages. Thus, ih us-thȭ waḍā hai, this is greater than that: ih sabhnã̄-thȭ waḍā hai, this is greatest of all.

II. PRONOUNS.—

	I.	Thou.	He, she, it, that.	This. (1)	This. (2)	Who, which. (1)	Who, which. (2)
Sing.
Nom.	haũ (obs.), maĩ	tũ̄	uh, ōh, ōhu, auh	ih, ēh	ah, āh, āhi	jō	jihṛā, jēhṛā
Agent	maĩ	taĩ	un, ōn, uhnai, etc.	in, ēn, ihnai, etc.	.....	jin, jihnai, etc.
Obl.	mai, but mē-tē, from me.	tai (tē-tē)	uh, us, ōs	ih, is, ēs, ais	Base unchanged	jih, jis
Gen.	mērā	tērā	uhdā, usdā, etc.	ihdā, isdā, etc.	.....	jihdā, etc.
Plur.
Nom.	asĩ	tusĩ	ōh	ēh	ah, āh, āhi	jō	declined regularly, as an adjective.
Agent	asĩ	tusĩ	unhĩ̄, unhãnai, etc.	inhĩ̄, inhãnai, etc.	ahãnai, etc.	jinhĩ̄, jinhãnai

	That. (1)	That. (2)	Who? (1)	Who? (2)	What?	Anyone, someone.	Anything.
Sing. Nom.	sō	tihṛā, tēhṛā	kauṇ	kihṛā, kēhṛā	kī, kiā	kōī, kāī	kuchh, kichh, kuih, kujj, kuh.
Agent	tin, etc.		kin, etc.		kāhnai, etc.	kinē, kisēnai	kāsēnai
Obl.	tih, tis	Declined regularly, as an adjective.	kih, kis	Declined regularly, as an adjective.	kāh, kās	kisē	kāsē
Gen.	tihdā, etc.		kihdā, etc.		kāhdā, etc.	kisēdā	kāsēdā
Plur. Nom.	sō		kauṇ				.....
Agent	tinhī̃		kinhī̃, etc.		Not used.	Like the plural of kauṇ.	.....
Obl.	tinhã̃		kinhã̃				.....
Gen.	tinhãdā		kinhãdā				.....

III. VERBS.—A.—Auxiliary Verb and Verb Substantive.

Present Tense.—I am, etc.

	Sing.		Plur.
	Masc.	Fem.	Masc.	Fem.
1	hã̃, hãgā, haĩ	hã̃, hãgī, haĩ	hã̃, hãgē, haĩgē	hã̃, hãgīã̃, haĩgīã̃
2	haĩ, haĩgā, hẽ̃	haĩ, haĩgī, hẽ̃	hō, hõ̃, hōgē, haigēō	hō, hõ̃, hōgīã̃
3	hai, haigā, haisu, haī, ī, ĩ, ē, nē, jē.	hai, haigī, haisu, haī, ī, ĩ, ē, nē, jē.	han, han-gē, haĩgē, hain, hainī, hainsu, nē, jē.	han, han-gīã̃, haĩgīã̃, hain, hainī, hainsu, nē, jē.

Past Tense.—I was, etc.

	Sing.		Plur.
	Masc.	Fem.	Masc.	Fem.
1 } 2 } 3 }	sā, sāgā, sī, sīgā, thā	sī, sīgī, thī	sē, sē-gē, sī, sī-gē, thē	sīã̃, sī-gīã̃, thīã̃
also 1	sã̃, sã̃gā, hai-sã̃	sã̃, sãgī, hai-sã̃	sã̃, sã̃-gē, hai-sē	sã̃, sã̃-gīã̃, haisīã̃
2	hai-sī	hai-sī	hai-sē, saü	hai-sīã̃, sīō
3	hai-sī, sāī	hai-sī, sāī	san, san-gē, sain, sān, hai-san	san, san-gīã̃, sain, sān, hai-san

The negative of the forms hai-sã̃, etc., is hai-nahī-sã̃, etc. The negative of sī is nasō or even thā nasō. Nasō is used for both genders and both numbers.

Some of the above forms are only of local occurrence. The most usual forms are:—

	Present (Com. Gen.).		Past.
			Sing.		Plur.
	Sing.	Plur.	Masc.	Fem.	Masc.	Fem.
1	hã̃	hã̃	sā, sī	sī	sã̃, sī, sē	sīã̃
2	haĩ	hõ̃, hō	sā, sī	sī	saü, sī, sē	sīã̃
3	hai	han	sā, sī	sī	san, sī, sē	san, sīã̃

B.—Active Verb.—

Root,— ghall, send Infinitive,— ghallṇā, ghallaṇ, to send Pres. part.,— ghalldā, sending

NOTE.—If the root ends in ṇ, ṛ, ḷ, or ṛ, the infinitive ends in nā, not ṇā. Thus, jāṇnā, to know; mārnā, to strike.

Roots ending in a vowel or h form the pres. part. in ndā. Thus, āundā, coming; rahindā,

Roots ending in i, and a few others form the past part. in ā, not iā. Thus, rahiā, remained; labbhā, found. Roots in āu and āhu drop the u. Thus, āuṇā, to come; āiā, come; chāhuṇā, to wish; chāhiā, wished. Other roots in u change it to v. Thus, jīuṇā, to live; jīviā, lived.

Roots ending in i or u drop it in the conjunctive participle. Thus, rahiṇā, rah or rahi; āuṇā, ā.

Present subjunctive (old simple present), I may send.

	Sing.	Plur.
1	ghallã̄	ghalliyē
2	ghallẽ̄, ghallī̃ (obs.)	ghallō, ghallṍ, ghalliō (obs.)
3	ghallē	ghallaṇ

Roots ending in u change it to w or v; thus, āwã̄; or drop it, as in āã̄. The 3rd sing. may end in u, and the 3rd plur. in uṇ or āṇ. Thus, āvē, āē, or āū, he may come; āwaṇ, āṇ, or āuṇ, they may come. Roots ending in i drop it in this tense. Thus, rahã̄, I may remain. The 3rd plur. may end in in. Thus, rahaṇ or rahiṇ. Roots ending in other vowels optionally insert w or v. Dhōṇā, to wash; dhōã̄ or dhōwã̄, I may wash. Roots in ṇ change it to n in the 3rd plur. Thus, jāṇnā, to know; jānaṇ, they may know.

Imperative, send thou, ghall, ghallī̃, ghallẽ̄ (obs.); send ye, ghallō, ghallio. Forms like ghallīē, be pleased to strike, are borrowed from Hindōstānī, and are not true Pañjābī.

Future, I shall send. Formed by adding gā (sing. masc.), gī (sing. fem.), gē (masc. plur.), and gīã̄ (fem. plur.) to the present subjunctive. The 1st plur. is ghallã̄gē. Optional forms of the 3rd sing. are ghallūgā, ghallūgu, ghallū. The verb agrees with its subject in gender, number and person as in Hindōstānī.

Tenses are formed from the present participle and from the past participle as in Hindōstānī. Thus, jō maĩ ghalldā, if I had sent; maĩ ghalldā-hã̄, I am sending; maĩ ghalldā-sī, I was sending; maĩ āiā, I came; maĩ ghalliā, he was sent by me, I sent him; maĩ āiā-hã̀, I have come; maĩ ghalliā-hai, I have sent him; maĩ āiā-sī, I had come; maĩ ghalliā-sī, I had sent him; and so on.

Tenses formed from the past participles of transitive verbs are treated exactly as in Hindōstānī. The construction may be passive personal or passive impersonal. Thus (passive personal), uhnai ikk chiṭṭhī likhī, by him a letter was written, he wrote a letter; (passive impersonal) unhãnai kuṛīnũ̃ māriā, by-him with-reference-to-the girl it-was-beaten (or a-beating-was-done), he beat the girl.

C.—Irregular Verbs.—

Irregular Past Participles.

Root.	Past Participle.
siāṇ, recognise,	*siātā
sīu, sew,	sītā
sau, sleep,	*suttā
kahi, say,	*kihā
kar, do,	*kītā
khalō, stand,	khalōtā
khaṛ, stand,	khaṛā
khaṛō, stand,	khaṛōtā
khā, eat,	kāhdā, khādhā
jaṇ, bear, bring forth,	jāiā, *jaiṇā
jā, go,	giā, gaiā
jāṇ, know,	*jāttā
ṭhāṇ, resolve,	*ṭhayā
ḍhahi, ḍhai, fall,	ḍhaṭṭhā, *dhiṭṭhā
dēkh, see,	ḍiṭṭhā, *diṭṭhā
dē, give,	dittā
dhō, wash,	*dhōtā
nahāu, bathe,	*nahātā
pahin, put on (clothes),	*paidhā
pahut, pahũch, arrive,	pahuttā, pahuntā, puijā, pahũchiā.
pachhāṇ, recognise,	pachhatā,* *pachhaiṇā
parō, string (beads),	*parōtā
pāṛ, tear,	*pāṭā
pī, drink,	pītā
pīh, grind,	pīṭhā
puchāu, convey,	*puchātā
pai, pau, fall,	piā, paiā
phas, stick fast,	*phātthā
bannh, bind,	*baddhā
baras, rain,	*baṭṭhā
mar, die,	*mōiā
rahi, remain,	*rihā
rinnh, stew,	*riddhā
rō, weep,	*runnā
lahi, alight,	*latthā
liāu, bring,	liāndā,* *āndā
lai, take,	liā, laiā, līā, littā.

Those words marked with the sign * may also be regular. Thus, siāṇiā. In nearly all cases the gerund takes the regular form only. Thus the gerund of khalō is khalōiā. The following gerunds, however, are irregular:—

sīu	makes	sīā
jā	,,	jāyā, jāiā
dē	,,	diā
nahāu	,,	nahāiā or nahātiā.
pahut	,,	pahutā or pahuntā.
pīh	,,	pīṭhā
pai	,,	piā or paiā
lai	,,	liā or laiā

Dē, give, has its pres. part. dindā; its pres. subj. diã̄ or dēwã̄; its imperat. sing. dih, plur. diō or dēwō.

Pai, fall, has its pres. subj. as follows:—

	Sing.	Plur.
1	pawã̄	paiē
2	paẽ̄, pawẽ̄	paō, paṍ, pawō, pawṍ
3	paē, pawē	paiṇ

Liāndā and āndā, the past participles of liāu, bring, are treated as belonging to transitive verbs, and take the subject in the agent case, but the regular participle liāiā is treated as belonging to an intransitive verb, and takes its subject in the nominative.

Lai, take, has its present subj. lawã̄, conjugated like pawã̄, above.

The following feminines of past participles are irregular:—

Masc.	Fem.
kihā, said	kahī
giā, gone	gaī
rihā, remained	rahī
liā, taken	laī

The present participle of the verb hōṇā, to become, is hundā.

The verb āuṇā, to come, often makes its conjunctive participle āṇ-kē.

D.—Passive Voice.—The Passive voice may be formed as in Hindōstānī by conjugating the past participle with jāṇā, to go. Thus, muṇḍā mārā-giā, the boy was struck; kuṛī mārī gaī, the girl was struck. Or ī may be added to the root. Thus, ū mārīdā-hai, he is being beaten. This form is practically confined to tenses formed from the present participle, and is principally heard in the western districts.

E.—Causal Verbs.—These are formed much as in Hindōstānī. There are causals and double causals. Thus, sikkhṇā, to learn; sikhāuṇā, sikhlāuṇā or sikhāḷnā, to teach; sikhwāuṇā, to have taught; uṭṭhṇā, to rise; uṭhāuṇā, to raise; uṭhwāuṇā, to have lifted; jāgṇā, to awake; jagāuṇā, to waken; jagwāuṇā, to get wakened; baiṭhṇē, to sit; biṭhāuṇā, baiṭhāuṇā, baiṭhāḷnā, biṭhāḷnā, baṭhāḷnā, biṭhlāuṇā, burn (trans.): ṭuṭṭṇā or tuṭṭṇa, to break; tōṛnā, to break (trans.); tuṛwāuṇā, to have broken.

F.—Compound Verbs.—These are formed as in Hindōstānī. Thus, bhajj jāṇā, to run away; jā sakṇā, to be able to go; maĩ kamm [illegible] chāhumā, to

List of Pañjābī words in which an initial व is pronounced as v and not as w.

Vā, wind, air.
Vāch, a tax on village artizans.
Vāchak, a reader.
Vachāū, preservation.
Vachāuṇā, to protect.
Vachāwā, a protector.
Vachhāī, spreading a bed.
Vāchhaṛ, driving rain.
Vaḍāṇak, a kind of wheat.
Vaḍbōl, vaḍbōlā, a boaster.
Vaḍḍā, waḍḍā, great.
Vaḍḍh, a field which has been reaped.
Vaddh, increase.
Vāddhā, profit.
Vaḍḍhī, a bribe.
Vāḍḍhī, reaping, a carpenter.
Vaḍḍhṇā, to cut.
Vāddhū, superfluous.
Vaḍērā, an ancestor, great, large.
Vãḍhā, a sojourner.
Vaḍhāī, reaping, wages for reaping.
Vadhān, an increase.
Vadhāuṇā, to enlarge.
Vadhērā, much, more.
Vāḍhī, reaping, a bribe.
Vadhīk, more.
Vādhū, superfluous.
Vaḍhwāī, reaping, wages for reaping.
Vaḍhwāuṇā, to cause to be reaped.
Vaḍiāī, greatness.
Vaḍiāuṇā, to magnify.
Vaḍphūlgī, vaḍphūlī, extravagance.
Vāh, good! (interjection).
Vahaṛ, vahiṛ, a young calf.
Vāhī, ploughing.
Vahī, an account book.
Vahiṇ, the flowing of a stream; consideration, thought.
Vahiṇā, to flow.
Vahitar, a beast of burden or for riding.
Vahṇ, the surface of a roughly ploughed field.
Vāhṇā, vāhuṇā, to plough.
Vaid, a doctor.
Vaidaṇ, vaidaṇī, a female doctor.
Vaihaṇ, vaihiṇ, the flowing of a stream.

Vaihṇā, to sit, to flow.
Vair, enmity.
Vairan, vairī, an enemy.
Vairān, vairānī, waste, depopulated.
Vais, the name of a certain caste.
Vāj, sound, voice (corruption of āwāz).
Vajāṇā, vajāuṇā, to play upon a musical instrument.
Vajj-vajākē, by beat of drum.
Vajṇā, to emit a sound.
Vakālat, agency.
Vakam, sapan wood (used as a dye).
Vākambā, wakhūmbā, a certain tree, Careya arborea.
Vakamī, coloured with vakam.
Vakīl, an agent, a pleader.
Vakkh, separate, asunder.
Vakkõdī, near the time for bringing forth young (of a cow or mare).
Vakkhō-vakkhī, vakkhrā, divided, separated.
Val, a crook, bend.
Vāl, hair; a breeze.
Valā, a round rafter.
Valã̄, towards, by.
Valāit, vaīait, see vilāit.
Valgan, the wall round a courtyard.
Valī, a saint, a prophet.
Valṇā, to surround.
Valṭōh, valṭōhā, -hū, -hī, a large brass cooking vessel.
Vaṇ, a certain tree, Salvadora oleoides.
Vaṇj, traffic, commerce.
Vañjh, a bamboo, a tent-pole.
Vã̄ṛ, wāṇ, an arrow; a kind of coarse twine.
Vaṛaĩch, name of a sept of the Jaṭ caste.
Vargā, like, equal to; timber to support the earth filled into a grave.
Vargalāṇā, vargalāuṇā, to inveigle, persuade.
Vārī, a window, a small door; time, turn.
Vaṛī, a preparation of pulse.
Variām, bold, brave.
Variāmgī, heroism.
Varkā, the leaf of a book.
Varm, heartache, severe sorrow.
Varmā, a carpenter's bit.
Varmī, the mound raised by white ants; a small carpenter's bit.
Vart, a fast, fasting; a share.
Vartārā, usage, custom; a share.
Vartāuṇā, to divide, distribute.
Vartāwā, usage, custom; a divider.

Vasāū, growing (of a village).
Vasākh, see visākh.
Vasōā, a Hindū holiday occurring on the first of Vasākh.
Vast, a thing, goods and chattels.
Vāṭ, distance, space ; a road.
Vaṭṭ, a weight ; enmity ; a boundary line between fields, etc.
Vatt, again ; moisture in the ground.
Vaṭwāṇī, a clod for cleaning.
Vayāh, a wedding.
Vayāhṇā, vayāhuṇā, to marry.
Vayāhtā, married (of a woman).
Vayākarn, grammar.
Vayākarnī, a grammarian.
Vayāpak, pervading.
Vayāpī, pervading.
Vēchṇā, to sell.
Vēdā̃t, the Vēdānta system of philosophy.
Vēkhṇā, to see.
Vēl, a climbing plant.
Vēlā, time, moment.
Vēlnā, vēlṇā, a rolling-pin ; to roll, to seed cotton.
Vēlṇī, a machine for seeding cotton.
Vēṛhā, the courtyard of a house.
Vēsākh, see visākh.
Vēsākhī, see visākhī.
Viāhṇā, = vayāhṇā.
Viāhtā, = vayāhtā.
Vīch, an interval.
Vichār, consideration.
Vichch, in.
Vichōlā, a mediator.
Vidā, dismissed.
Viddiā, viddyā, knowledge.
Vigaṛṇā, to be spoiled.
Vigāṛṇā, to spoil.
Vigāṛū, a spoiler.
Vigṛāū, damage ; one who spoils.
Vigṛāuṇā, to cause to be spoiled.
Vikāū, sale, selling ; for sale.
Vikāuṇā, to cause to be sold.
Vikh, poison.
Vilāit, vilait, valāit, or valait, a country ; England.
Vilāitī, foreign ; English.
Vilkṇā, to sob, lament.
Viṅgā, crooked, uneven.

Vīr, a brother (used by a sister).
Virāṇā, a waste, solitude.
Virḍ, daily use, practice.
Virk, name of a sept of the Jat caste.
Virlā, scarce, rare, far apart.
Virōdh, enmity.
Virōdhī, quarrelsome.
Virt, a circle of clients.
Visāh, trust, faith.
Visākh, vasākh, vēsākh, name of a month.
Visākhī, vasōā, vēsākhī, the first day of Visākh, on which a festival occurs.
Vishṭā, ordure.
Vissarṇā, to be forgotten; to forget.
Viṭṭh, a bird's dung.
Viṭṭhṇā, to drop dung (of a bird).
Vuhār, conduct, behaviour; trade, traffic.

ḌŌGRĀ OR ḌŌGRĪ.

Where spoken.

The Ḍōgrā or Ḍōgrī dialect of Pañjābī takes its name from Ḍōgar or Ḍugar, the title of the submontane portion of the Jammu State. This portion of the Jammu State has to its north the hill country of Jammu separating it from Kashmir, in which a variety of dialects, such as Rāmbanī and Pŏgulī, intermediate between Ḍōgrā and Kāshmīrī are spoken. These dialects in many respects closely resemble Ḍōgrā, but I have classed them with Kāshmīrī as they present the regular use of pronominal suffixes attached to the verb which is characteristic of that language. In the hills in the north-east of the Jammu State lies Bhadarwāh, the language of which, Bhadarwāhī, is a form of Pahāṛī. To the east of Jammu lies the State of Chamba. The main language of Chamba, Chamĕāḷī, is also a form of Pahāṛī ; but a mixed form of speech called Bhaṭĕālī, which is based on Ḍōgrā, is spoken in the west of the State, near the Jammu Frontier. South of Jammu lie the Punjab districts of Sialkot and Gurdaspur, the main language of which is Pañjābī. Ḍōgrā is, however, spoken along the northern border of these districts. South-east of Jammu lies the district of Kangra ; here a dialect of Pañjābī is spoken which is closely allied to Ḍōgrā. Not far to the west of Jammu City runs the river Chenab, beyond which lies the Naushahra country. Ḍōgrā extends to a few miles beyond the Chenab. Further on we come to the hill dialects connected with the northern form of Lahndā.

Origin of the name.

The word Ḍōgar is popularly said to be a corruption of the Sanskrit Dvigarta, but this derivation is not accepted by European scholars at the present day. On the contrary, the ancient name of the country appears to have been Durgara, from which 'Ḍōgar' is derived, through the Prakrit 'Doggara.'[1]

Language Boundaries.

As will have been gathered from the foregoing remarks, Ḍōgrā is bounded on the south by standard Pañjābī, on the east and north-east by Pahāṛī, on the north by the semi-Kāshmīrī hill dialects, and on the west by Lahndā.

Sub-dialects.

There are three sub-dialects of Ḍōgrā mentioned in the reports. These are Kaṇḍiālī, the Kāṅgrā Dialect, and Bhaṭĕālī. Kaṇḍiālī is a mixture of standard Pañjābī and Ḍōgrā spoken in the hills of the north-east of Gurdaspur. The Kāṅgrā Dialect is the main language of the head-quarters taḥṣīls of Kangra District, and Bhaṭĕālī is spoken in Western Chamba. Like Kaṇḍiālī, the Kāṅgrā Dialect is a mixure of Ḍōgrā and standard Pañjābī, with also a few peculiarities of its own, while Bhaṭĕālī is a mixture of Ḍōgrā, Kāṅgrī, and Chamĕāḷī.

Number of speakers.

The following are the estimated number of speakers of Ḍōgrā in localities in which it is a vernacular :—

---

[1] See Dr. Stein's translation of the Rājataraṅgiṇī, Vol. II, p. 432. It will be observed that the initial ḍ of Ḍōgar has been cerebralised. This is an example of the influence of Lahndā, in some dialects of which an initial ḍ is often cerebralised. Thus in the Thaḷī of Shahpur, the root dē, give, becomes ḍē.

Ḍōgrā Proper—
Jammu and neighbourhood	434,000
Gurdaspur	60,000
Sialkot	74,727
		568,727
Kaṇḍiālī (Gurdaspur)		10,000
Kāṅgṛā Dialect		636,500
Bhaṭṭēālī		14,000
TOTAL .		1,229,227

In the above table, the figures for Jammu are mere estimates, based on the returns of the Census for 1901, as no language census was taken of that State in 1891. The Gurdaspur and Sialkot figures are better estimates, being based by the local officers on the returns of the Census of 1891. The Bhaṭṭēālī figures are those reported by the Chamba officials. In Gurdaspur Ḍōgrā is spoken nearly all over the lower hills, and in Sialkot it is spoken in 116 villages of Zafarwal Taḥṣīl to the north and west of Zafarwal, and all over the Bajwat 'Alāqa of the Sialkot Taḥṣīl.

No information is available as to the number of speakers of Ḍōgrā outside the region in which it is a vernacular.

Characteristics of the dialect.

Ḍōgrā closely resembles standard Pañjābī. The main differences consist in the change in oblique form of the noun substantive, and in the employment of a different postposition for the accusative-dative case. The vocabulary, too, differs somewhat, being influenced by Lahndā and (especially) Kāshmīrī. As regards the oblique form, all masculine nouns add a short e or ai in the singular to the nominative, while feminine nouns add ā, thus following the example of northern Lahndā. For the accusative-dative case, the usual suffix is kī or gī, instead of the Pañjābī nũ. In Kāngrā an alternative suffix is jō. Ḍōgrā also prefers the word thā to mean 'was', instead of the more usual sā or sī of standard Pañjābī.

Literature.

So far as I am aware the only Ḍōgrā book which has been printed is a version of the New Testament in 'Jumboo or Dogura' issued by the Serampore Missionaries in the year 1826. There are said to be some translations of Sanskrit books into Ḍōgrā, one of which, a version of the Līlāvatī (a mathematical work) is mentioned by Dr. Bühler.[1]

AUTHORITIES—

The only previous account of the Ḍōgrā dialect which I have seen is contained in the following :—

DREW, FREDERIC,—The Jummoo and Kashmīr Territories. A Geographical Account. London, 1875. Account of Dogrī, pp. 463 ff. Dogrī Alphabet described, p. 471. Appendix I (pp. 503 ff.), Dogrī Grammar.

Written Character.

Ḍōgrā has an alphabet of its own, which is allied to the Ṭākrī alphabet current in the Punjab Himalayas. Some thirty or forty years ago, the then Mahārājā of Jammu and Kashmir caused to be invented a modified form of the current Ṭākrī so as to bring it more into line with Dēvanāgarī and Gurmukhī. This improved Ḍōgrī is used for official documents, but it has not generally displaced the old Ṭākrī form of script, which is that employed in the following specimens. This alphabet is very imperfect. Theoretically it has all the letters found in Dēvanāgarī except a few which are not employed in the vernacular language, but the vowels are so loosely written, that it might almost be said that any vowel sign can be employed indifferently for any vowel sound. More especially, e and i, and o and u are frequently confounded. At other times we find vowels omitted altogether, so that the reading of a Ḍōgrā document is no easy task.

[1] Detailed Report of a Tour in search of Sanskrit MSS. made in Kâśmîr, Rajputana, and Central India. Bombay, 1877, p. 4.

There is another peculiarity in Ḍōgrā writing which should be observed. It is the very frequent employment of the initial forms of vowels instead of the non-initial forms in order to represent non-initial long vowels. It is as if in Dēvanāgarī we were to write द्आ when we meant to write दा. An examination of the specimens will show instances of this in every line. In order to indicate this, in transliterating the specimens, I insert an apostrophe before every vowel which is written in the initial form. It is as if I were to transliterate द्आ by d'ā and दा by dā.

In order to facilitate the reading of the text I have, whenever a word is wrongly spelt, first transliterated it strictly as it is written and have then immediately afterwards transliterated the correct spelling which I place between marks of parenthesis. I have, however, altogether ignored the very frequent use of a long vowel for a short one, or vice versa. Such cases I have passed over silently in the transliteration. Ḍōgrā has never been printed in type of its own character. I therefore give the specimens in the vernacular character in facsimile just as I have received them. Types are, however, available for the form of Ṭākrī employed in the adjoining State of Chamba, which is closely allied to that used for Ḍōgrā, and, as type-printed words are easier to read than facsimiles of handwriting, I give in each case the specimen also printed (in correct spelling) in the Ṭākrī type of Chamba.

The printed Chamba Ṭākrī alphabet is as follows:—

Vowels.

ਅ a ਆ ā ਇ i ਈ ī ਉ u ਊ ū

ਏ ē ਐ ai ਓ ō ਔ au ਂ ṁ.

Consonants.

ਕ ka	ਖ kha	ਗ ga	ਘ gha	ਙ ṅa
ਚ cha	ਛ chha	ਜ ja	ਝ jha
ਟ ṭa	ਠ ṭha	ਡ ḍa	ਢ ḍha	ਣ ṇa
ਤ ta	ਥ tha	ਦ da	ਧ dha	ਨ na
ਪ pa	ਫ pha	ਬ ba	ਭ bha	ਮ ma
ਯ ya	ਰ ra	ਲ la	ਵ va
ਸ sa	ਹ ha	ੜ ṛa	ਲ਼ ḷa	ਸ਼ śha

Conjuncts.

ਯਾ yā ਥਿ thi ਮੀ hī ਸੁ su ਪੂ pū ਹੁ or ਹੂ hū

ਤੇ tē ਹੈ hai ਯੋ yō ਯੌ yau ਰਂ raṁ or rã ਛ੍ਯ chhya

ਪ੍ਰ pra ਤ੍ਰ tra ਮ੍ਹ mha.

Numerals.

੧ 1, ੨ 2, ੩ 3, ੪ 4, ੫ 5, ੬ 6,

੭ 7, ੮ 8, ੯ 9, ੦ 0.

Double letters are never written. They are left to be inferred by the reader. Thus, dittā, given, is written ਦਿਤਾ ditā, but must be read dittā.

The following are the Ḍōgrā characters as used in the specimens :—

Vowels.

Initial Forms.

a, ā, i or ī, u or ū, or e, ē or ai, ō or au, ṁ or ~

Non-initial Forms.

ka, kā, ki or kī, or ku, kū, ke or kē, kai, kō, kau, kaṁ or kã.

Note.—Great carelessness is allowed in writing the vowels and the nasal sign. They are often omitted altogether. Long and short vowels are frequently interchanged. Initial vowels are often written in the place of non-initial long ones. Thus—for dā; for  tũ. The letter e or ē is frequently written for i, and ō for u.

Consonants.

ka, kha, ga, gha, ṅa;

cha, chha, ja, jha, ñ;

ṭa, ṭha, ḍa, ḍha, or ṇa;

ta, tha, da, dha, na;

pa, pha, ba, bha, ma;

ya, ra, la, va, wa;

sha, sa, ha, ṛa.

Note.—That the same sign is employed for ja and ya, and for ba and va (or wa), respectively. There is really only one sibilant,—the letter sa. When it is necessary to represent the sound of the Persian zh, the character for chha is employed.

In order to facilitate comparison, I next give the current written forms of the letters of the Gurmukhī, Kāṅgrā, and Ḍōgrā alphabets.

Gurmukhī.	Kāṅgrā.	Ḍōgrā.		Gurmukhī.	Kāṅgrā.	Ḍōgrā.
ਅ			'āiṛā'	ਡ			ḍa
ਏ			'īṛī'	ਢ			ḍha
ਓ			'ūṛā'	ਣ			ṇa
ਓ			ō	ਤ			ta
ਸ			sa	ਥ			tha
ਹ			ha	ਦ			da
ਕ			ka	ਧ			dha
ਖ			kha	ਨ			na
ਗ			ga	ਪ			pa
ਘ			gha	ਫ			pha
ਙ			ṅa	ਬ			ba
ਚ			cha	ਭ			bha
ਛ			chha	ਮ			ma
ਜ			ja	ਯ	...		ya
ਝ			jha	ਰ			ra
ਞ	...		ña	ਲ			la
ਟ			ṭa	ਵ			wa

ḌŌGRĀ GRAMMAR.

In its grammar Ḍōgrā closely resembles standard Pañjābī. The following are two main points of difference :—

In pronunciation, no difference seems to exist between e and ai. These two vowels appear to be quite interchangeable. Sometimes one is written and sometimes the other. At the end of a word (especially in the declension of nouns) both are pronounced short and both have the same sound, which more nearly resembles that of a short a than anything else. Indeed ā is often written for it. In the skeleton grammar which follows I represent this final sound by e, but ai or ā would be equally correct. Similarly ẽ is often written aĩ or ãã.

All nouns, even those ending in consonants, have an oblique form singular differing from the nominative. In the case of masculine nouns, this oblique form usually ends in the indeterminate short vowel, sometimes written e, sometimes ai, sometimes ā, which has just been described. The termination of the feminine oblique form singular is ā. These terminations also occur in the northern dialects of Lahndā and in Western Pahāṛī. The termination of the oblique plural is ẽ, aĩ or ãã. The postposition of the accusative-dative is generally kī or gī, and very rarely the Pañjābī nũ. Sometimes de (the locative of the genitive termination dā) is employed for the dative, as in jāedātī-wālede jāī, having gone to a rich man. The other postpositions coincide with those in use in Pañjābī.

The Pronouns do not call for any special remarks unless we draw attention to the form of the accusative-dative of the pronouns of the first, second, and third persons. 'Me' is mikī, migī, or mī; 'thee' is tukī, or tugī; and 'him' is usī. Similarly the accusative-dative of 'this' is isī. The conjugation of verbs presents a few irregularities There is an alternative form ending in dā, of the past participle. Thus, mōīdā, dead gōāchādā, lost; chāhīdī-hai, it is proper; giādā-thā, it was gone. The addition of the postposition of the genitive to a past participle without altering its meaning occurs in other hill languages; e.g. in Eastern and Western Pahāṛī. The future has several forms which are strange to standard Pañjābī. The syllable che or chai is added to the Imperative to give a permissive force. Thus, khāchai, let us eat; manāchai, let us celebrate. In the word khãden, they (were) eating, the final n is a pronominal suffix meaning 'they,' added to the verb in imitation of Kāshmīrī. There are occasional instances of neuter participles as in chūmiã, it was kissed.

It is hoped that the above remarks will be sufficient to enable the student to read the Ḍōgrā specimens, with the aid of the Skeleton Grammar which follows.

In order to facilitate comparison, I next give the current written forms of the letters of the Gurmukhī, Kāṅgrā, and Ḍōgrā alphabets.

Gurmukhī.	Kāṅgrā.	Ḍōgrā.		Gurmukhī.	Kāṅgrā.	Ḍōgrā.
ਅ	𑚅	𑚅	'āiṛā'	ਡ	𑚡	𑚡𑚭	ḍa
ਏ	𑚆	𑚆𑚯	'īṛī'	ਢ	𑚢	𑚢	ḍha
ਓ	𑚇	𑚇	'ūṛā'	ਣ	=	=ਣ	ṇa
ਓ	𑚈	𑚇	ō	ਤ	𑚣	𑚣	ta
ਸ	𑚉	𑚉	sa	ਥ	𑚤	𑚤𑚪	tha
ਹ	𑚊	𑚋	ha	ਦ	𑚥	𑚦	da
ਕ	𑚌	𑚍	ka	ਧ	𑚧	𑚧𑚭	dha
ਖ	𑚎	𑚎	kha	ਨ	𑚨	𑚨	na
ਗ	𑚏	𑚏	ga	ਪ	𑚩	𑚩	pa
ਘ	𑚐	𑚐	gha	ਫ	𑚪	𑚪	pha
ਙ	𑚑	𑚑𑚯	ṅa	ਬ	𑚫	𑚫	ba
ਚ	𑚒	𑚒	cha	ਭ	𑚬	𑚬	bha
ਛ	𑚓	𑚓	chha	ਮ	𑚭	𑚭	ma
ਜ	𑚔	𑚔	ja	ਯ	...	𑚮	ya
ਝ	𑚕	𑚕𑚯	jha	ਰ	𑚯	𑚯	ra
ਞ	...	𑚖	ña	ਲ	𑚰	𑚰	la
ਟ	𑚗	𑚗	ṭa	ਵ	𑚱	𑚱	va

ḌŌGRĀ GRAMMAR.

In its grammar Ḍōgrā closely resembles standard Pañjābī. The following are two main points of difference :—

In pronunciation, no difference seems to exist between e and ai. These two vowels appear to be quite interchangeable. Sometimes one is written and sometimes the other. At the end of a word (especially in the declension of nouns) both are pronounced short and both have the same sound, which more nearly resembles that of a short a than anything else. Indeed ā is often written for it. In the skeleton grammar which follows I represent this final sound by e, but ai or ā would be equally correct. Similarly ẽ is often written aĩ or ãẽ.

All nouns, even those ending in consonants, have an oblique form singular differing from the nominative. In the case of masculine nouns, this oblique form usually ends in the indeterminate short vowel, sometimes written e, sometimes ai, sometimes ā, which has just been described. The termination of the feminine oblique form singular is ā. These terminations also occur in the northern dialects of Lahndā and in Western Pahāṛī. The termination of the oblique plural is ẽ, aĩ or ãẽ. The postposition of the accusative-dative is generally kī or gī, and very rarely the Pañjābī nũ. Sometimes de (the locative of the genitive termination dā) is employed for the dative, as in jāedātī-wālede jāī, having gone to a rich man. The other postpositions coincide with those in use in Pañjābī.

The Pronouns do not call for any special remarks unless we draw attention to the form of the accusative-dative of the pronouns of the first, second, and third persons. 'Me' is mikī, migī, or mī; 'thee' is tukī, or tugī; and 'him' is usī. Similarly the accusative-dative of 'this' is isī. The conjugation of verbs presents a few irregularities There is an alternative form ending in dā, of the past participle. Thus, mōīdā, dead gōāchādā, lost; chāhīdī-hai, it is proper; giādā-thā, it was gone. The addition of the postposition of the genitive to a past participle without altering its meaning occurs in other hill languages; e.g. in Eastern and Western Pahāṛī. The future has several forms which are strange to standard Pañjābī. The syllable che or chai is added to the Imperative to give a permissive force. Thus, khāchai, let us eat; manāchai, let us celebrate. In the word khãden, they (were) eating, the final n is a pronominal suffix meaning 'they,' added to the verb in imitation of Kāshmīrī. There are occasional instances of neuter participles as in chūmiã, it was kissed.

It is hoped that the above remarks will be sufficient to enable the student to read the Ḍōgrā specimens, with the aid of the Skeleton Grammar which follows.

ḌOGRĀ SKELETON GRAMMAR.

I. NOUNS. Gender.—This follows standard Pañjābī.

Number and Case :—

Singular.		Plural.
Direct.	Oblique.	Direct.	Oblique.
Masc.—
lauḥṛā, a boy.	lauḥṛe	lauḥṛe.	lauḥṛẽ.
babbā, a father.	babbe.	babbã̃ or babbaĩ.	babbã̃ or babbaĩ.
ḍaṅgar, an ox.	ḍaṅgre.	ḍaṅgar	ḍaṅgrẽ.
Fem.—
bakrī, a she-goat.	bakrīā.	bakrīã̃.	bakrīẽ.

The terminations e of the oblique singular, and ẽ of the oblique plural are short. They are often written ai or ā, and aĩ or ã̃, respectively Thus, sahbedā, sahbaidā, or sahbādā, of the sāhib. However written, the pronunciation resembles that of a short a or ā, respectively.

Two cases are formed without postpositions,—the Vocative and (optionally) the Accusative-dative. The following are the forms of the Vocative :—Sing., lauḥṛeā or ā lauḥṛā ; ḍaṅgrā or ā ḍaṅgar ; bakriā or ā bakrī : Plur., ā lauḥṛẽ ; ā babbaĩ ; ā ḍaṅgrẽ ; ā bakrīã̃.

The optional forms of the Accusative-Dative are :—Sing., lauḥṛeī ; babbaiī ; ḍaṅgreī ; bakrīāī : Plur., lauḥṛẽī ; babbaĩī ; ḍaṅgrāī ; bakrīẽī.

The Postpositions are,—Acc.-dat., kī or gī, kachh, to ; Instr., kane, by ; Abl., thwã̃, thõ, kachha, from ; Gen., dā, as in standard Pañjābī. obl. masc. also dai ; Loc., vich, in ; pās, near ; par, on ; Agent, ne or nai, by.

Adjectives ending in ā are thus declined. Masc. Sing., direct, kālā, black ; oblique, kāle ; Plur., direct, kāle ; obl., kālẽ ; Fem. Sing., direct, kālī ; obl., kālīā ; Plur., direct, kālīã̃ ; obl., kālīẽ. In other respects adjectives are treated as in standard Pañjābī.

II. PRONOUNS.

	I	Thou.
Singular—
Nominative	āũ, maĩ, mẽ.	tũ.
Agent	maĩ, mẽ.	taĩ, tẽ, tudh.
Accusative-dative	mi-kī, mi-gī, mī.	tu-kī, tu-gī.
Genitive	mērā.	tērā.
Ablative	mērē-thwã̃.	tēre-thwã̃.
Locative	mērē-vich.	tēre-vich.
Plural—
Nominative	as.	tus.
Agent	asẽ.	tusẽ.
Accusative-dative	asẽ-kī, -gī, -ī, asẽ.	tusẽ-kī, -gī, -ī, tusẽ.
Genitive	sāṛā.	tusāṛā, thwāṛā.
Ablative	sāṛe-thwã̃.	tusẽ-thwã̃.

	He, she, it, that.	This.	That same.	This same.	Who.	He, that.	Who?	What?	Anyone.	Anything.
Sing.
Nom.	ō, oh.	ie, eh, ehe.	ūai.	īai.	jō.	seh.	kun, kaun.	keh.	kōī.	kichh, kijh.
Acc.-dat.	usī.	isī.	usse-kī.	isse-kī.	jisī.	tisī.	kusī.	kus-kī.	kuse-ki.	kuse-kī.
Obl.	us, uh.	is, ih.	usse.	isse.	jis.	tis.	kus, kuh.	kus.	kuse.	kuse.
Plur.
Nom.	ō, oh.	ē, eh.	ūai.	īai.	jō.	seh.	kun, kaun.	keh.	kōī.	kichh, kijh.
Obl.	wn, une, ũ.	in, ine, ĩ.	unneĩ.	inneĩ.	jine.	jine.	kune.	kune.	kune.	kiniã̄, kine.

Kōkā, declined regularly as an adjective, is 'which?' The reflexive pronoun is apũ; Gen., apnā; Acc.-dat., apũ-kī, -gī; Abl., apne-thwã̄; Loc., apne-vich; Agent, apũ. The plural is the same as the singular.

III. VERBS.—A.—Auxiliary Verbs and Verbs Substantive.

Present Tense, 'I am, etc.'—

	Singular.	Plural.
1	hã̄, ã̄.	haĩ, hẽ, aĩ, ẽ.
2	haĩ, hẽ, aĩ, ẽ.	hō, ō.
3	hai, he, ai, e.	haĩ, hẽ, aĩ, ẽ, hain.

The past tense is thā, or sā, which, as usual, is treated like an adjective. Thus, masc. plur., the; fem. sing. thī; fem. plur. thiã̄. 'I was' is sã̄.

B.—Active Verb.

Root,—mār, strike.
Infinitive,—mārnā, to strike.
Present Participle,—mārdā or mārnā, striking.
Past Participle,—(1) māriā, struck; fem. mārī; Plur. masc., māre; fem. māriã̄.
(2) māriādā or mārīdā, etc.
Conjunctive Participle,—mārī-ke, mārīe, or mārīai, having struck.
Noun of Agency,—mārne-wālā, a striker.

Present Subjunctive and old Present Indicative. 'I may strike,' 'I strike,' etc.			Future. 'I shall strike,' etc.
	Singular.	Plural.	Singular.	Plural.
1	mārũ̄.	mārẽ, mārche.	māraṅ.	māran, mārge (fem. -giã̄).
2	mārẽ.	mārō.	marga (fem. -gī).	mārgiō, mārge (fem. -giã̄).
3	māre.	mārẽ, māren.	marag	mārgā, mārgan, māraṅge, māraṅgan.

Instead of mārgā (-gī) we may have mārghā (-ghī), and, instead of mārge (-giā), mārghe (-ghiã̄).
Imperative, mār, strike thou; mārō, strike ye; mārche, mārchai, let me, thee, him, us, you, them, strike.

Participial Tenses.

āũ̄ mārdā, or mārnā, I strike, (if) I had struck.
āũ̄ mārdā-ã̄, mārnā-ã̄, I am striking.
āũ̄ mārdā-sã̄, mārnā-sã̄, I was striking.
mẽ māriā, I struck (him).
mẽ māriā-e, I have struck (him).
mẽ māriā-sā, I had struck (him).

Irregular Past Participles.

hōnā, to become, Past part. hōā, or huā. (Pres. part. hundā).
jānā, to go, Past part. giā.
karnā, to do, Past part. kītā or kariā.
dēnā, to give, Past part. dittā.
lēnā, to take, Past part. littā.

The Passive Voice is formed with jānā, as in Pañjābī.
Causals and Double Causals are formed as in Pañjābī.

STANDARD PAÑJĀBĪ.

In order to illustrate the standard Pañjābī described in the preceding grammatical sketch, I here give the Parable of the Prodigal Son taken from the version of the Gospel of St. Luke published by the British and Foreign Bible Society. The translation is an excellent one, but should not be taken as representing, in all its purity, the Pañjābī of the Mājh. The standard of the grammatical sketch is rather a refined version of the Pañjābī spoken in the Pōwādh[1] of the District of Ludhiana, which differs slightly from the Pañjābī of Amritsar.

[No. I.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

(British and Foreign Bible Society, 1890.)

ਇੱਕ ਮਨੁੱਖਦੇ ਦੋ ਪੁੱਤ ਸਨ। ਅਤੇ ਉਨ੍ਹਾਂ ਵਿੱਚੋਂ ਛੋਟੇਨੈ ਪਿਉ ਨੂੰ ਆਖਿਆ ਪਿਤਾ ਜੀ ਮਾਲਦਾ ਜਿਹੜਾ ਹਿੱਸਾ ਮੈਨੂੰ ਪਹੁੰਚਦਾ ਹੈ ਸੋ ਮੈਨੂੰ ਦੇ ਦਿਓ। ਅਤੇ ਉਸਨੈ ਉਨਾਂਨੂੰ ਪੂੰਜੀ ਵੰਡ ਦਿੱਤੀ। ਅਰ ਥੋੜੇ ਦਿਨਾਂ ਪਿੱਛੋਂ ਛੋਟਾ ਪੁੱਤ ਸਭੋ ਕੁਛ ਕੱਠਾ ਕਰਕੇ ਦੂਰ ਦੇਸਨੂੰ ਚੱਲਿਆ ਗਿਆ ਅਰ ਓੱਥੇ ਆਪਣਾ ਮਾਲ ਬਦ ਚਲਣੀ ਨਾਲ੍ ਉਡਾ ਦਿੱਤਾ। ਅਤੇ ਜਾਂ ਉਹ ਸਭ ਖਰਚ ਕਰ ਚੁੱਕਿਆ ਤਾਂ ਉਸ ਦੇਸ ਵਿੱਚ ਵਡਾ ਕਾਲ੍ ਪੈ ਗਿਆ ਅਤੇ ਉਹ ਮੁਤਾਜ ਹੋਣ ਲੱਗਾ। ਅਰ ਉਹ ਉਸ ਦੇਸਦੇ ਕਿਸੇ ਰਹਿਣਵਾਲ੍ਹੇ ਕੋਲ੍ ਜਾ ਰਿਹਾ ਅਤੇ ਉਸਨੈ ਉਹਨੂੰ ਆਪਣਿਆਂ ਖੇਤਾਂ ਵਿੱਚ ਸੂਰਾਂਦੇ ਚਾਰਣ ਲਈ ਘੱਲਿਆ। ਅਰ ਉਹ ਉਨ੍ਹਾਂ ਛਿੱਲੜਾਂ ਨਾਲ੍ ਜੇਹੜੇ ਸੂਰ ਖਾਂਦੇ ਸਨ ਆਪਣਾ ਢਿੱਡ ਭਰਣਾ ਚਾਹੁੰਦਾ ਸੀ ਪਰ ਕਿਨੈ ਉਸਨੂੰ ਕੁਛ ਨਾ ਦਿੱਤਾ। ਪਟ ਉਹਨੈ ਸੁਰਤ ਵਿੱਚ ਆਣਕੇ ਕਿਹਾ ਭਈ ਮੇਰੇ ਪਿਉਦੇ ਕਿੰਨੇਹੀ ਕਾਮਿਆਂਨੂੰ ਵਾਫ਼ਰ ਰੋਟੀਆਂ ਹਨ ਅਤੇ ਮੈਂ ਐੱਥੇ ਭੁੱਖਾ ਮਰਦਾ ਹਾਂ। ਮੈਂ ਉੱਠਕੇ ਆਪਣੇ ਪਿਉ ਕੋਲ੍ ਜਾਵਾਂਗਾ ਅਤੇ ਉਸਨੂੰ ਆਖਾਂਗਾ ਪਿਤਾ ਜੀ ਮੈਂ ਅਸਮਾਨਦਾ ਅਰ ਤੇਰੇ ਅੱਗੇ ਗੁਨਾਹ ਕੀਤਾ ਹੈ। ਹੁਣ ਮੈਂ ਇਸ ਜੋਗ ਨਹੀਂ ਜੋ ਫੇਰ ਤੇਰਾ ਪੁੱਤ ਸਦਾਵਾਂ। ਮੈਨੂੰ ਆਪਣਿਆਂ ਕਾਮਿਆਂ ਵਿੱਚੋਂ ਇਕ ਜਿਹਾ ਰੱਖ। ਸੋ ਉਹ ਉੱਠਕੇ ਆਪਣੇ ਪਿਉ ਕੋਲ੍ ਗਿਆ। ਪਰ ਉਹ ਅਜੇ ਦੂਰ ਸੀ ਕਿ ਉਹਦੇ ਪਿਉਨੈ ਉਸਨੂੰ ਡਿੱਠਾ ਅਤੇ ਉਹਨੂੰ ਤਰਸ ਆਇਆ ਅਰ ਦੌੜ ਕੇ ਗਲ੍ਹੇ ਲਾ ਲਿਆ ਅਤੇ ਉਹਨੂੰ ਚੁੰਮਿਆ। ਅਰ ਪੁੱਤ ਨੈ ਉਸਨੂੰ ਆਖਿਆ ਪਿਤਾ ਜੀ ਮੈਂ ਅਸਮਾਨਦਾ ਅਰ ਤੇਰੇ ਅੱਗੇ ਗੁਨਾਹ ਕੀਤਾ ਹੈ ਹੁਣ ਮੈਂ ਇਸ ਜੋਗ ਨਹੀਂ ਜੋ ਫੇਰ ਤੇਰਾ

[1] See Pōwādhī, post, pp. 679 ff.

ਪੁੱਤ ਸਦਾਵਾਂ ॥ ਪਰ ਪਿਤਾਨੈ ਆਪਣੇ ਚਾਕਰਾਂਨੂੰ ਕਿਹਾ ਕਿ ਸਭਥੋਂ ਚੰਗੇ ਬਸਤ੍ਰ ਛੇਤੀ ਕੱਢਕੇ ਇਹਨੂੰ ਪਹਿਨਾਓ ਅਰ ਇਹਦੇ ਹੱਥ ਵਿੱਚ ਅੰਗੂਠੀ ਅਰ ਪੈਰੀਂ ਜੁੱਤੀ ਪਾਓ। ਅਤੇ ਖਾਂਦੇ ਹੋਏ ਅਸੀਂ ਖੁਸੀ ਕਰਿਯੇ ਕਿੰਉ ਜੋ ਮੇਰਾ ਇਹ ਪੁੱਤ ਮੋਇਆ ਸੀ ਅਤੇ ਫੇਰ ਜੀ ਪਿਆ ਹੈ। ਹੁਆਚ ਗਿਆ ਸੀ ਅਤੇ ਫੇਰ ਲੱਭਿਆ ਹੈ। ਸੋ ਓਹ ਲੱਗੇ ਖੁਸੀ ਕਰਨ ॥

ਪਰ ਉਹਦਾ ਵਡਾ ਪੁੱਤ ਖੇਤ ਵਿੱਚ ਸੀ ਅਰ ਜਾਂ ਉਹ ਆਣਕੇ ਘਰਦੇ ਨੇੜੇ ਅੱਪੜਿਆ ਤਾਂ ਰਾਗ ਨਾਚਦੀ ਅਵਾਜ ਸੁਣੀ। ਤਦ ਨੌਕਰਾਂ ਵਿੱਚੋਂ ਇਕਨੂੰ ਆਪਣੇ ਕੋਲ੍ ਸੱਦਕੇ ਪੁੱਛਿਆ ਭਈ ਇਹ ਕੀ ਹੈ। ਅਤੇ ਉਸਨੈ ਉਹਨੂੰ ਆਖਿਆ ਤੇਰਾ ਭਰਾਉ ਆਇਆ ਹੈ ਅਰ ਤੇਰੇ ਪਿਉਨੈ ਵਡਾ ਪਰੋਸਾ ਪਰੋਸਿਆ ਹੈ ਇਸ ਲਈ ਜੋ ਉਹਨੂੰ ਭਲਾ ਚੰਗਾ ਪਾਇਆ। ਪਰ ਉਹ ਗੁੱਸੇ ਹੋਇਆ ਅਤੇ ਅੰਦਰ ਜਾਣਨੂੰ ਉਹਦਾ ਜੀ ਨਾ ਕੀਤਾ। ਸੋ ਉਹਦਾ ਪਿਉ ਬਾਹਰ ਆਣਕੇ ਉਸਨੂੰ ਮਨਾਉਣ ਲੱਗਾ। ਪਰ ਓਨ ਆਪਣੇ ਪਿਉਨੂੰ ਉੱਤਰ ਦਿੱਤਾ ਵੇਖ ਮੈਂ ਐਂਨੇ ਵਰਿਹਾਂ ਥੋਂ ਤੇਰੀ ਟਹਿਲ ਕਰਦਾ ਹਾਂ ਅਤੇ ਤੇਰਾ ਹੁਕਮ ਕਦੇ ਨਹੀਂ ਮੋੜਿਆ ਅਰ ਤੈਂ ਮੈਨੂੰ ਕਦੇ ਇੱਕ ਪਠੋਰਾ ਥੀ ਨਾ ਦਿੱਤਾ ਜੋ ਮੈਂ ਆਪਣਿਆਂ ਬੇਲੀਆਂ ਨਾਲ੍ ਖੁਸੀ ਕਰਾਂ। ਪਰ ਜਦ ਤੇਰਾ ਇਹ ਪੁੱਤ ਆਇਆ ਜਿਹਨੈ ਕੰਜਰੀਆਂਦੇ ਮੂੰਹ ਤੇਰੀ ਪੂੰਜੀ ਉਡਾ ਦਿੱਤੀ ਤੈਂ ਉਹਦੇ ਲਈ ਵਡਾ ਪਰੋਸਾ ਪਰੋਸਿਆ ਹੈ। ਪਰ ਓਨ ਉਸਨੂੰ ਆਖਿਆ ਬੱਚਾ ਤੂੰ ਸਦਾ ਮੇਰੇ ਨਾਲ੍ ਹੈਂ ਅਤੇ ਮੇਰਾ ਸਭੋ ਕੁਛ ਤੇਰਾ ਹੈ। ਪਰ ਖੁਸੀ ਕਰਨੀ ਅਤੇ ਅਨੰਦ ਹੋਣਾ ਜੋਗ ਸੀ ਕਿੰਉਕਿ ਤੇਰਾ ਇਹ ਭਰਾਉ ਮੋਇਆ ਸੀ ਅਤੇ ਫੇਰ ਜੀ ਪਿਆ ਹੈ ਅਰ ਗੁਆਚ ਗਿਆ ਸੀ ਅਤੇ ਹੁਣ ਲੱਭਿਆ ਹੈ ॥

STANDARD PAÑJĀBĪ.

In order to illustrate the standard Pañjābī described in the preceding grammatical sketch, I here give the Parable of the Prodigal Son taken from the version of the Gospel of St. Luke published by the British and Foreign Bible Society. The translation is an excellent one, but should not be taken as representing, in all its purity, the Pañjābī of the Mājh. The standard of the grammatical sketch is rather a refined version of the Pañjābī spoken in the Pōwādh[1] of the District of Ludhiana, which differs slightly from the Pañjābī of Amritsar.

[No. I.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

(British and Foreign Bible Society, 1890.)

ਇੱਕ ਮਨੁੱਖਦੇ ਦੋ ਪੁੱਤ ਸਨ। ਅਤੇ ਉਨ੍ਹਾਂ ਵਿੱਚੋਂ ਛੋਟੇਨੈ ਪਿਉ ਨੂੰ ਆਖਿਆ ਪਿਤਾ ਜੀ ਮਾਲਦਾ ਜਿਹੜਾ ਹਿੱਸਾ ਮੈਨੂੰ ਪਹੁੰਚਦਾ ਹੈ ਸੋ ਮੈਨੂੰ ਦੇ ਦਿਓ। ਅਤੇ ਉਸਨੈ ਉਨਾਂਨੂੰ ਪੂੰਜੀ ਵੰਡ ਦਿੱਤੀ। ਅਰ ਥੋੜੇ ਦਿਨਾਂ ਪਿੱਛੋਂ ਛੋਟਾ ਪੁੱਤ ਸਭੋ ਕੁਛ ਕੱਠਾ ਕਰਕੇ ਦੂਰ ਦੇਸਨੂੰ ਚੱਲਿਆ ਗਿਆ ਅਰ ਓੱਥੇ ਆਪਣਾ ਮਾਲ ਬਦ ਚਲਣੀ ਨਾਲ੍ ਉਡਾ ਦਿੱਤਾ। ਅਤੇ ਜਾਂ ਉਹ ਸਭ ਖਰਚ ਕਰ ਚੁੱਕਿਆ ਤਾਂ ਉਸ ਦੇਸ ਵਿੱਚ ਵਡਾ ਕਾਲ੍ ਪੈ ਗਿਆ ਅਤੇ ਉਹ ਮੁਤਾਜ ਹੋਣ ਲੱਗਾ। ਅਰ ਉਹ ਉਸ ਦੇਸਦੇ ਕਿਸੇ ਰਹਿਣਵਾਲ੍ਹੇ ਕੋਲ੍ ਜਾ ਰਿਹਾ ਅਤੇ ਉਸਨੈ ਉਹਨੂੰ ਆਪਣਿਆਂ ਖੇਤਾਂ ਵਿੱਚ ਸੂਰਾਂਦੇ ਚਾਰਣ ਲਈ ਘੱਲਿਆ। ਅਰ ਉਹ ਉਨ੍ਹਾਂ ਛਿੱਲੜਾਂ ਨਾਲ੍ ਜੇਹੜੇ ਸੂਰ ਖਾਂਦੇ ਸਨ ਆਪਣਾ ਢਿੱਡ ਭਰਣਾ ਚਾਹੁੰਦਾ ਸੀ ਪਰ ਕਿਨੇ ਉਸਨੂੰ ਕੁਛ ਨਾ ਦਿੱਤਾ। ਪਟ ਉਹਨੈ ਸੁਰਤ ਵਿੱਚ ਆਣਕੇ ਕਿਹਾ ਭਈ ਮੇਰੇ ਪਿਉਦੇ ਕਿੰਨੇਹੀ ਕਾਮਿਆਂਨੂੰ ਵਾਫ਼ਰ ਰੋਟੀਆਂ ਹਨ ਅਤੇ ਮੈਂ ਐੱਥੇ ਭੁੱਖਾ ਮਰਦਾ ਹਾਂ। ਮੈਂ ਉੱਠਕੇ ਆਪਣੇ ਪਿਉ ਕੋਲ੍ ਜਾਵਾਂਗਾ ਅਤੇ ਉਸਨੂੰ ਆਖਾਂਗਾ ਪਿਤਾ ਜੀ ਮੈਂ ਅਸਮਾਨਦਾ ਅਰ ਤੇਰੇ ਅੱਗੇ ਗੁਨਾਹ ਕੀਤਾ ਹੈ। ਹੁਣ ਮੈਂ ਇਸ ਜੋਗ ਨਹੀਂ ਜੋ ਫੇਰ ਤੇਰਾ ਪੁੱਤ ਸਦਾਵਾਂ। ਮੈਨੂੰ ਆਪਣਿਆਂ ਕਾਮਿਆਂ ਵਿੱਚੋਂ ਇਕ ਜਿਹਾ ਰੱਖ। ਸੋ ਉਹ ਉੱਠਕੇ ਆਪਣੇ ਪਿਉ ਕੋਲ੍ ਗਿਆ। ਪਰ ਉਹ ਅਜੇ ਦੂਰ ਸੀ ਕਿ ਉਹਦੇ ਪਿਉਨੈ ਉਸਨੂੰ ਡਿੱਠਾ ਅਤੇ ਉਹਨੂੰ ਤਰਸ ਆਇਆ ਅਰ ਦੌੜ ਕੇ ਗਲ੍ਹੇ ਲਾ ਲਿਆ ਅਤੇ ਉਹਨੂੰ ਚੁੰਮਿਆ। ਅਰ ਪੁੱਤ ਨੈ ਉਸਨੂੰ ਆਖਿਆ ਪਿਤਾ ਜੀ ਮੈਂ ਅਸਮਾਨਦਾ ਅਰ ਤੇਰੇ ਅੱਗੇ ਗੁਨਾਹ ਕੀਤਾ ਹੈ ਹੁਣ ਮੈਂ ਇਸ ਜੋਗ ਨਹੀਂ ਜੋ ਫੇਰ ਤੇਰਾ

[1] See Pōwādhī, post, pp. 679 ff.

ਪੁੱਤ ਸਦਾਵਾਂ ॥ ਪਰ ਪਿਤਾਨੈ ਆਪਣੇ ਚਾਕਰਾਂਨੂੰ ਕਿਹਾ ਕਿ ਸਭਥੋਂ ਚੰਗੇ ਬਸਤ੍ ਛੇਤੀ ਕੱਢਕੇ ਇਹਨੂੰ ਪਹਿਨਾਓ ਅਰ ਇਹਦੇ ਹੱਥ ਵਿੱਚ ਅੰਗੂਠੀ ਅਰ ਪੈਰੀਂ ਜੁੱਤੀ ਪਾਓ। ਅਤੇ ਖਾਂਦੇ ਹੋਏ ਅਸੀਂ ਖੁਸੀ ਕਰਿਯੇ ਕਿੰਉ ਜੋ ਮੇਰਾ ਇਹ ਪੁੱਤ ਮੋਇਆ ਸੀ ਅਤੇ ਫੇਰ ਜੀ ਪਿਆ ਹੈ। ਹੁਆਚ ਗਿਆ ਸੀ ਅਤੇ ਫੇਰ ਲੱਭਿਆ ਹੈ। ਸੋ ਓਹ ਲੱਗੇ ਖੁਸੀ ਕਰਨ ॥

ਪਰ ਉਹਦਾ ਵਡਾ ਪੁੱਤ ਖੇਤ ਵਿੱਚ ਸੀ ਅਰ ਜਾਂ ਉਹ ਆਣਕੇ ਘਰਦੇ ਨੇੜੇ ਅੱਪੜਿਆ ਤਾਂ ਰਾਗ ਨਾਚਦੀ ਅਵਾਜ ਸੁਣੀ। ਤਦ ਨੌਕਰਾਂ ਵਿੱਚੋਂ ਇਕਨੂੰ ਆਪਣੇ ਕੋਲ੍ ਸੱਦਕੇ ਪੁੱਛਿਆ ਭਈ ਇਹ ਕੀ ਹੈ। ਅਤੇ ਉਸਨੈ ਉਹਨੂੰ ਆਖਿਆ ਤੇਰਾ ਭਰਾਉ ਆਇਆ ਹੈ ਅਰ ਤੇਰੇ ਪਿਉਨੈ ਵਡਾ ਪਰੋਸਾ ਪਰੋਸਿਆ ਹੈ ਇਸ ਲਈ ਜੋ ਉਹਨੂੰ ਭਲਾ ਚੰਗਾ ਪਾਇਆ। ਪਰ ਉਹ ਗੁੱਸੇ ਹੋਇਆ ਅਤੇ ਅੰਦਰ ਜਾਣਨੂੰ ਉਹਦਾ ਜੀ ਨਾ ਕੀਤਾ। ਸੋ ਉਹਦਾ ਪਿਉ ਬਾਹਰ ਆਣਕੇ ਉਸਨੂੰ ਮਨਾਉਣ ਲੱਗਾ। ਪਰ ਓਨ ਆਪਣੇ ਪਿਉਨੂੰ ਉੱਤਰ ਦਿੱਤਾ ਵੇਖ ਮੈਂ ਐਂਨੇ ਵਰਿਹਾਂ ਥੋਂ ਤੇਰੀ ਟਹਿਲ ਕਰਦਾ ਹਾਂ ਅਤੇ ਤੇਰਾ ਹੁਕਮ ਕਦੇ ਨਹੀਂ ਮੋੜਿਆ ਅਰ ਤੈਂ ਮੈਨੂੰ ਕਦੇ ਇੱਕ ਪਠੋਰਾ ਬੀ ਨਾ ਦਿੱਤਾ ਜੋ ਮੈਂ ਆਪਣਿਆਂ ਬੇਲੀਆਂ ਨਾਲ੍ ਖੁਸੀ ਕਰਾਂ। ਪਰ ਜਦ ਤੇਰਾ ਇਹ ਪੁੱਤ ਆਇਆ ਜਿਹਨੈ ਕੰਜਰੀਆਂਦੇ ਮੂੰਹ ਤੇਰੀ ਪੂੰਜੀ ਉਡਾ ਦਿੱਤੀ ਤੈਂ ਉਹਦੇ ਲਈ ਵਡਾ ਪਰੋਸਾ ਪਰੋਸਿਆ ਹੈ। ਪਰ ਓਨ ਉਸਨੂੰ ਆਖਿਆ ਬੱਚਾ ਤੂੰ ਸਦਾ ਮੇਰੇ ਨਾਲ੍ ਹੈਂ ਅਤੇ ਮੇਰਾ ਸਭੋ ਕੁਛ ਤੇਰਾ ਹੈ। ਪਰ ਖੁਸੀ ਕਰਨੀ ਅਤੇ ਅਨੰਦ ਹੋਣਾ ਜੋਗ ਸੀ ਕਿੰਉਕਿ ਤੇਰਾ ਇਹ ਭਰਾਉ ਮੋਇਆ ਸੀ ਅਤੇ ਫੇਰ ਜੀ ਪਿਆ ਹੈ ਅਰ ਗੁਆਚ ਗਿਆ ਸੀ ਅਤੇ ਹੁਣ ਲੱਭਿਆ ਹੈ ॥

[No. I.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

(British and Foreign Bible Society, 1890.)

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ikk manukkhdē dō putt san. Atē unhā̃-vichchõ chhōṭēnai One man-of two sons were. And them-from-in the-younger-by piunũ ākhiā, 'pitā-jī, māldā jihṛā hissā mainũ the-father-to it-was-said, 'father-dear, the-property-of whatever share me-to pahũchdā-hai sō mainũ dē-diō.' Atē usnai unhā̃nũ pũjī arriving-is that me-to give-away.' And him-by them-to the-wealth waṇḍ dittī. Ar thōṛē dinā̃ pichchhõ, chhōṭā putt, having-divided was-given. And a-few days from-after, the-younger son, sabhō kuchh kaṭṭhā kar-kē, dūr dēsnũ challiā-giā, ar all anything together made-having, a-distant country-to went-away, and ōtthē āpṇā māl bad-chalnī-nāl uḍā-dittā. Atē jā̃ uh there his-own property bad-behaviour-with was-squandered. And when he sabh kharach kar-chukkiā, tā̃ us dēs-vichch waḍā kāl pai-giā, all spending had-finished, then that country-in a-great famine fell, atē uh mutāj hōṇ laggā. Ar uh us dēsdē kisē and he distressed to-be began. And he that country-of a-certain rahiṇ-wāḷēdē kōḷ jā rihā, atē usnai uhnũ āpṇiā̃ inhabitant-of near having-gone remained, and him-by as-for-him his-own khētā̃-vichch sūrā̃dē chāraṇ-laī ghalliā. Ar uh unhā̃ chhillṛā̃-nāl fields-in swine-of the-feeding-for it-was-sent. And he those husks-with jēhṛē sūr khāndē san āpṇā ḍhiḍḍ bharnā chāhundā-sī, par which the-pigs eating were his-own belly to-fill wishing-was, but kinē usnũ kuchh nā dittā. Par uhnai surat-vichch āṇ-kē by-anyone him-to anything not it-was-given. But him-by senses-in come-having kihā, 'bhaī! mērē piudē kinnē-hī kāmmiā̃nũ wāphar it-was-said, 'Lo! my father-of now-many-even servants-to superfluous rōṭiā̃ han, atē maĩ aitthē bhukkhā mardā-hā̃. Maĩ uṭṭh-kē loaves there-are, and I here hungry dying-am. I arisen-having āpṇē piu kōḷ jāwā̃gā, atē us-nũ ākhā̃gā, "pitā-jī, maĩ my-own father near will-go, and him-to I-will-say, "Father, by-me asmāndā ar tērē aggē gunāh kītā-hai; huṇ maĩ is jōg heaven-of and of-thee before sin done-is; now I (of-)this worthy nahĩ jō phēr tērā putt sadāwã̃, mainũ āpṇiã̃ kāmmiã̃ am-not that again thy son I-may-be-called, me thine-own servants vichchõ ikk jihā rakkh."' Sō uh uṭṭh-kē āpṇē piu kōḷ giā.

from-in one like keep."' So he arisen-having his-own father near went.
Par uh ajē dūr sī, ki uhdē piunai usnũ ḍiṭṭhā, atē
But he yet far was, when him-of father-by as-for-him it-was-seen, and uhnũ taras āiā, ar dauṛ-kē gaḷē lā-liā, atē uhnũ him-to pity came, and run-having on-his-neck it-was-embraced, and him-to chummiā. Ar puttnai usnũ ākhiā, 'pitā-jī, maĩ it-was-kissed. And the-son-by him-to it-was-said, 'father-dear, by-me asmāndā ar tērē aggē gunāh kītā-hai, huṇ maĩ is jōg heaven-of and of-thee before sin done-is, now I this worthy nahĩ jō phēr tērā putt sadāwã̃.' Par pitā-nai āpṇē am-not that again thy son I-may-be-called.' But the-father-by his-own chākrãnũ kihā ki, 'sabh-thõ chaṅgō bastr chhētī servants-to it-was-said that, 'all-than good clothes quickly kaḍḍh-kē, ihnũ pahināō, ar ihdē hatth-vichch ãgūṭhī, ar brought-out-having, him dress, and him-of the-hand-on a-ring, and pairĩ juttī pāō; atē khāndē-hōē asĩ khusī kariyē.
on-feet boot put-on; and eating us happiness let-us-make.
Kĩu jō mērā ih putt mōiā sī, atē phēr jī-piā-hai;
Because that my this son dead was, and again alive-fallen-is;
guāch giā-sī, atē phēr labbhiā-hai.' Sō uh laggē khusī lost gone-was, and again found-is.' So they began rejoicing karan.
to-do.

Par uhdā waḍā putt khēt-vichch sī, ar jã̃ uh āṇ-kē
But him-of the-elder son the-field-in was, and when he come-having ghardē nēṛē appaṛiā, tã̃ rāg-nāchdī awāj the-house-of in-the-neighbourhood arrived, then music-dancing-of the-sound suṇī. Tad naukrã̃-vichchõ ikknũ āpṇē kōḷ sadd-kē, was-heard. Then the-servants-from-in one of-himself near called-having, puchchhiā 'bhaī, ih kī hai?' Atē usnai uhnũ ākhiā it-was-asked 'ho, this what is?' And him-by him-to it-was-said
'tērā bharāu āiā-hai, ar tērē piunai waḍā parōsā parōsiā-hai,
'thy brother come-is, and thy father-by a-great feast feasted-is,
is-laī jō uhnũ bhalā chaṅgā pāiā.' Par uh gussē this-for that him-to well in-health he-has-been-obtained.' But he angry hōiā, atē andar jāṇnũ uhdā jī nā kītā. Sō uhdā became, and within going-for his mind not was-made. So his piu bāhar āṇ-kē usnũ manāuṇ laggā, par un father outside come-having him-to to-remonstrate began, but by-him āpṇē piunũ uttar dittā, 'vēkh, maĩ aĩnē warihã̃-thõ̃ tērī his-own father-to answer was-given, 'see, I so-many years-from thy ṭahil kardā-hã̃, atē tērā hukam kadē nahĩ mōṛiā, ar service doing-am, and thy command ever not was-disobeyed, and taĩ mainũ kadē ikk paṭhōrā bī nā dittā, jō maĩ by-thee me-to ever one kid even not was-given, that I āpṇiã̃ bēliã̃-nāḷ khusī karã̃. Par jad tērā ih putt my-own friends-with happiness I-may-make. But when thy this son āiā, jihnai kañjarīã̃dē mũh tērī pũjī uḍā-dittī, taĩ came, whom-by harlots-of by-means thy wealth was-squandered, by-thee uhdē laī waḍā parōsā parōsiā-hai.' Par ōn usnũ him-of for-the-sake a-great feast been-feasted-is.' But by-him him-to ākhiā, 'bachchā, tũ sadā mērē nāḷ haĩ, atē merā it-was-said, 'child, thou always of-me by-the-side are, and my sabhō kuchh tērā hai. Par khusī karnī, atē anand hōṇā all anything thine is. But happiness to-be-done, and joyful to-be jōg sī, kĩu ki tērā ih bharāu mōiā sī, atē phēr proper was, because that this thy brother dead was, and again jī-piā-hai; ar guāch giā-sī, atē huṇ labbhiā-hai.'

alive-fallen-is; and lost gone-was, and now found-is.'

MĀJHĪ.

Mājhī is the dialect of the Mājhā tract of the Punjab. It is often incorrectly called Mānjhī, just as Mājhā is often wrongly called Mānjhā. The Mājhā, or Midland, lies in the Dōāb between the rivers Ravi and Beas-cum-Sutlej. It therefore includes the districts of Amritsar and Gurdaspur[1] and most of the district of Lahore. The number of speakers of Mājhī was estimated for the purposes of this Survey to be as follows:—

Lahore	1,033,824
Amritsar	973,054
Gurdaspur	800,750
TOTAL	2,807,628

Mājhī Pañjābī is by universal consent the purest form of the language, but is not the standard adopted by most of the grammars. As explained above (pp. 609 ff.), these are mainly based on the dialect of Ludhiana, which lies some way to the south-east. Mājhī has certain peculiarities of its own which will presently be described. The most prominent one is the entire absence of the cerebral ḷ.

As specimens of Mājhī I give a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son which comes from Amritsar, an extract from a folksong from the same locality, and another folksong from Lahore.

The version of the Parable I give in facsimile of the copy received, as a specimen of Gurmukhī handwriting, and also in Gurmukhī type with the usual transliteration and translation. The second is given in Gurmukhī type with transliteration and translation. The third is given in the Gurmukhī and also in the Persian character, with transliteration and translation.

The following are the main points of difference from the Ludhiana standard that are exhibited by the specimens.

The cerebral ḷ is never sounded in Amritsar. The ordinary dental l is always substituted for it. Thus, nāl, not nāḷ, with. The letter ḍ is often doubled. Thus, tuhāḍḍā, for tuhāḍā, your; waḍḍā, for waḍā, great; durāḍḍā or durāḍḍā, far. On the other hand, letters which are doubled in the standard dialect of Ludhiana are often not doubled in Amritsar. Thus, uṭh-kē, for uṭṭh-kē, having risen; vich, not vichch, in, but vichchõ, from in; lagiā, joined, but laggā, began; labh-piā, not labbh-piā, got; apariā, for apparià, arrived.

Nasalisation is frequent. Thus, āpṇã dhan, his own wealth; ãundī-hai, she is coming; bharnã chãhundā-sī, he was wishing to fill; jãwãgā, I will go; chummiã, it was kissed; manãiē, let us celebrate. Some of these nasalised forms are relics of the old neuter gender.

In the declension of nouns, the initial v of the postposition vich, in, is often elided, and the remainder of the postposition is attached to the main word as a termination, as in gharich, for ghar-vich, in the house. The postposition of the agent case is nai or naĩ. Note relics of old neuters as in āpnã dhan, chummiã, etc., quoted above.

[1] A corner of Gurdaspur lies to the west of the Ravi, but it may be considered as part of the Mājh for our present purposes.

Note also false genders, caused by attraction, in phrases like ihdī hatthī̃, on this one's hand. Note, moreover, that hatthī̃ is used in the singular.

In the pronouns, the nasal of asī̃, we, and tusī̃, you, is omitted, so that we have asī and tusī. Other forms not shown in the grammar are maĩnaĩ̃, by me; sāḍḍā, our; taĩnaĩ̃, by thee; tuhāḍḍā, your. Tū̃, thou, often has its oblique singular tudh. The oblique plural of the pronoun of the third person is unã̃, not unhã̃.

In the verb substantive, we have haĩ̃ and han, both meaning both 'we are' and 'they are.' The past tense has the following forms :—

	Sing.	Plur.
1.	sã̃	sã̃
2.	saĩ̃	sau
3.	sī	sē

The present participle of finite verbs often ends in nā instead of dā. Thus, mārnā-hã̃, I am striking.

Irregular forms noted are dēu, give thou; dēh, give; jāh, go; jã̃wã̃gā, I will go. Ã̃unda or āndā is 'coming.'

In one important point these specimens do not illustrate the dialect of the Mājhā. This is the occasional use of personal terminations with the past tenses of verbs. This is properly a characteristic of the outer circle of languages, and does not belong to Pañjābī, as illustrated in the grammars. On the other hand, it regularly appears in Lahndā, and, as explained in the introduction to this section, there is a Lahndā basis at the bottom of Pañjābī, which is almost concealed by the language of the Inner Group that has established itself in the Central and Eastern Punjab. As we go westwards from the old Sarasvatī, the Lahndā basis becomes more and more prominent, and hence we occasionally find these terminations in Mājhī. In Mājhī they are only found in the third person of transitive verbs, and are, for the singular, us, ōs, or ōsu, and, for the plural, ōnē. Thus, instead of the regular us ākhiā, he said, we frequently hear ākhiōs, and instead of unhã̃ (or unã̃) ākhiā, they said, ākhiōnē. So dittōs, he gave; kahiōs, he said; kītōsu, he did; mannius, he heeded; dittōnē, they gave; kītōnē, they did.

[No. 2.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

MĀJHĪ DIALECT. (DISTRICT, AMRITSAR.)

SPECIMEN I.

੧ ਇਕ ਮਨੁੱਖ ਦੇ ਦੋ ਪੁਤੱ ਸੇ ।। ਅਤੇ ਛੋਟੇ ਨੇ ਉਨਾਂ ਵਿਚੋਂ ਆਪਣੇ ਪਿਉ ਨੂੰ ਆਖਿਆ, ਬਾਪੂਜੀ, ਮਾਲ ਦੀ ਵੰਡ ਜੋਹੜੀ ਮੈਨੂੰ ਆਂਉ ਦੀ ਹੈ ਦੇਉ ।। ਅਤੇ ਉਸਨੇ ਉਨਾਂ ਨੂੰ ਆਪਣੀ ਜਦਾਤ ਵੰਡ ਦਿੱਤੀ ।। ਅਰ ਥੋੜੇ ਦਿਨਾਂ ਪਿੱਛੋਂ ਛੋਟਾ ਪੁੱਤ ਸੱਭੇ ਕੁਜ ਕੱਠਾ ਕਰਕੇ ਦੁਰਾਡੇ ਦੇਸ ਨੂੰ ਚਾਲੇ ਆ ਗਿਆ, ਅਰ ਓੱਥੇ ਆਪਣਾਂ ਧਨ ਵੈਲਦਾਰੀ ਵਿਚ ਗੁਆ ਦਿੱਤਾ ।। ਅਤੇ ਜੱਦੋਂ ਸੱਭੇ ਕੁਜ ਖਰਚ ਕਰ ਚੁਕਿਆ, ਤਾਂ ਉਸ ਦੇਸ ਵਿਚ ਵੱਡਾ ਕਾਲ ਆਯਿਆ ।। ਅਰ ਓਹ ਮੁਤਾਜ ਹੋਣ ਲਗੱਾ ।। ਅਤੇ ਉਹ ਉਸ ਦੇਸ ਦੇ ਕਿਸੇ ਰਹਣ ਵਾਲੇ ਦੇ ਕੋਲ ਜਾਕੇ ਕੱਮਾਂ ਰਹੀ ਸਿਆ ।। ਅਰ ਓਸਨੇ ਉਹ ਨੂੰ ਆਪਣੀਆਂ ਪੈਲੀਆਂ ਵਿਚ ਸੂਰ ਚਾਰਣ ਲਈ ਘਲਿੱਆ ।। ਅਰ ਜੋਹੜੇ ਛਿੱਲੜ ਸੂਰ ਖਾਂਦੇ ਸੀ ਉਹ ਉਨਾਂ ਨਾਲ ਆਪਣਾਂ ਢਿੱਡ ਭਰਨਾਂ ਚਾਂਹੁੰਦਾ ਸੀ ।। ਪਰ ਕਿਨੇ ਉਸ ਨੂੰ ਨਾਂ ਦਿੱਤੇ ।। ਅਰ ਜਦ ਸੁਰਤ ਵਿਚ ਆਇਆ, ਤੇ ਆਖਿਆ, ਮੇਰੇ ਪਿਉ ਦੇ ਕਿੰਨੇ ਹੀ ਕੱਮਿਆਂ ਨੂੰ ਵਾਫਰ ਰੋਟੀਆਂ ਹਨ, ਅਰ ਮੈਂ ਭੁੱਖਾ ਮਰ ਦਾ ਹਾਂ ।। ਮੈਂ ਉਠਕੇ ਆਪਣੇ ਪਿਉ ਕੋਲ ਜਾਂਦਾ ਗਾ, ਅਰ ਉਸ ਨੂੰ ਆਖਾਂਗਾ, ਬਾਪੂਜੀ ਮੈਂ ਰੱਬ ਦਾ ਅਤੇ ਤੇਰੇ ਅੱਗੇ ਗੁਨਾਹ ਕੀਤਾ ਹੈ ।। ਅਰ ਹੁਣ ਮੈਂ ਇਸ ਜੋਗਾ ਨਹੀਂ ਜੋ ਹੋਰ ਤੇਰਾ ਪੁੱਤ ਸਦਾਵਾਂ ।। ਮੈਨੂੰ ਆਪਣਿਆਂ ਕੱਮਿਆਂ ਵਿਚੋਂ ਇੱਕ ਜਿਹਾ ਰੱਖ ।। ਸੋ ਓਹ ਉਠਕੇ ਆਪਣੇ ਪਿਉ ਕੋਲ ਆਇਆ ।। ਪਰ ਓਹ ਅਜੇ ਦੂਰ ਸੀ ਜੋ ਉਹਦੇ ਪਿਉ ਨੇ ਉਹ ਨੂੰ ਦੇਖਿਆ ਤੇ ਉਸਨੂੰ ਤਰਸ ਆਇਆ ਦੌੜਕੇ ਗਲ ਲਗਿਆ ਅਰ ਉਹ ਨੂੰ ਚੁੰਮਿਆਂ ।। ਅਤੇ ਪੁੱਤ ਨੇ ਉਹ ਨੂੰ ਆਖਿਆ, ਬਾਪੂਜੀ ਮੈਂ ਰੱਬ ਦਾ ਅਰ ਤੇਰੇ ਅੱਗੇ ਗੁਨਾਹ ਕੀਤਾ ਹੈ, ਹੁਣ ਮੈਂ ਇਸ ਜੋਗਾ ਨਹੀਂ ਜੋ ਹੋਰ ਤੇਰਾ ਪੁੱਤ ਸਦਾਵਾਂ ।। ਪਰ ਪਿਉ ਨੇ ਆਪਣੇ

Note also false genders, caused by attraction, in phrases like ihdī hatthi̊̃, on this one's hand. Note, moreover, that hatthi̊̃ is used in the singular.

In the pronouns, the nasal of asi̊̃, we, and tusi̊̃, you, is omitted, so that we have asī and tusī. Other forms not shown in the grammar are maĩnaĩ, by me; sāḍḍā, our; taĩnaĩ, by thee; tuhāḍḍā, your. Tũ̃, thou, often has its oblique singular tudh. The oblique plural of the pronoun of the third person is unã̃, not unhã̃.

In the verb substantive, we have haĩ and han, both meaning both 'we are' and 'they are.' The past tense has the following forms :—

	Sing.	Plur.
1.	sã̃	sã̃
2.	saĩ	sau
3.	sī	sē

The present participle of finite verbs often ends in nā instead of dā. Thus, mārnā-hã̃, I am striking.

Irregular forms noted are dēu, give thou; dēh, give; jāh, go; jã̃wã̃gā, I will go. Ãunda or āndā is 'coming.'

In one important point these specimens do not illustrate the dialect of the Mājhā. This is the occasional use of personal terminations with the past tenses of verbs. This is properly a characteristic of the outer circle of languages, and does not belong to Pañjābī, as illustrated in the grammars. On the other hand, it regularly appears in Lahndā, and, as explained in the introduction to this section, there is a Lahndā basis at the bottom of Pañjābī, which is almost concealed by the language of the Inner Group that has established itself in the Central and Eastern Punjab. As we go westwards from the old Sarasvatī, the Lahndā basis becomes more and more prominent, and hence we occasionally find these terminations in Mājhī. In Mājhī they are only found in the third person of transitive verbs, and are, for the singular, us, ōs, or ōsu, and, for the plural, ōnē. Thus, instead of the regular us ākhiā, he said, we frequently hear ākhiōs, and instead of unhã̃ (or unã̃) ākhiā, they said, ākhiōnē. So dittōs, he gave; kahiōs, he said; kītōsu, he did; mannius, he heeded; dittōnē, they gave; kītōnē, they did.

[No. 2.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

MĀJHĪ DIALECT. (DISTRICT, AMRITSAR.)

SPECIMEN I.

ਓ ਇੱਕ ਮਨੁੱਖ ਦੇ ਦੋ ਪੁਤੱ ਸੇ।। ਅਤੇ ਛੋਟੇ ਨੇ ਉਨਾਂ ਵਿਚੋਂ ਆਪਣੇ ਪਿਉ ਨੂੰ ਆਖਿਆ, ਬਾਪੂਜੀ, ਮਾਲ ਦੀ ਵੰਡ ਜਿਹੜੀ ਮੈਨੂੰ ਆਂਉਦੀ ਹੈ ਦੇਉ ।। ਅਤੇ ਉਸਨੇ ਉਨਾਂ ਨੂੰ ਆਪਣੀ ਜਦਾਤ ਵੰਡ ਦਿੱਤੀ।। ਅਰ ਥੋੜੇ ਦਿਨਾਂ ਪਿੱਛੋਂ ਛੋਟਾ ਪੁੱਤ ਸੱਭੇ ਕੁਜ ਕੱਠਾ ਕਰਕੇ ਦੁਰਾਡੇ ਦੇਸ ਨੂੰ ਚਾਲੇ ਆ ਗਿਆ, ਅਰ ਓੱਥੇ ਆਪਣਾਂ ਧਨ ਵੈਲਦਾਰੀ ਵਿਚ ਗੁਆ ਦਿੱਤਾ ।। ਅਤੇ ਜੱਦੋਂ ਸੱਭੇ ਕੁਜ ਖਰਚ ਕਰ ਚੁਕਿਆ, ਤਾਂ ਉਸ ਦੇਸ ਵਿਚ ਵੱਡਾ ਕਾਲ ਆਯਿਆ।। ਅਰ ਓਹ ਮੁਤਾਜ ਹੋਣ ਲੱਗਾ।। ਅਤੇ ਉਹ ਉਸ ਦੇਸ ਦੇ ਕਿਸੇ ਰਹਣ ਵਾਲੇ ਦੇ ਕੋਲ ਜਾਕੇ ਕੱਮਾਂ ਰਹੀ ਪਿਆ।। ਅਰ ਓਸਨੇ ਉਹ ਨੂੰ ਆਪਣੀਆਂ ਪੱਲੀਆਂ ਵਿਚ ਸੂਰ ਚਾਰਣ ਲਈ ਘੱਲਿੱਆ।। ਅਰ ਜਿਹੜੇ ਛਿੱਲੜ ਸੂਰ ਖਾਂਦੇ ਸੀ ਉਹ ਉਨਾਂ ਨਾਲ ਆਪਣਾਂ ਢਿੱਡ ਭਰਨਾਂ ਚਾਂਹੁੰਦਾ ਸੀ।। ਪਰ ਕਿਸੇ ਉਸ ਨੂੰ ਨਾਂ ਦਿੱਤੇ।। ਅਰ ਜਦ ਸੁਰਤ ਵਿਚ ਆਇਆ, ਤੇ ਆਖਿਆ, ਮੇਰੇ ਪਿਉ ਦੇ ਕਿੰਨੇ ਹੀ ਕਾਮਿਆਂ ਨੂੰ ਵਾਫਰ ਰੋਟੀਆਂ ਹਨ, ਅਰ ਮੈਂ ਭੁੱਖਾ ਮਰ ਦਾ ਹਾਂ।। ਮੈਂ ਉਠਕੇ ਆਪਣੇ ਪਿਉ ਕੋਲ ਜਾਂਵਦਾਂ ਗਾ, ਅਰ ਉਸ ਨੂੰ ਆਖਾਂ ਗਾ, ਬਾਪੂਜੀ ਮੈਂ ਰੱਬ ਦਾ ਅਤੇ ਤੇਰੇ ਅੱਗੇ ਗੁਨਾਹ ਕੀਤਾ ਹੈ।। ਅਰ ਹੁਣ ਮੈਂ ਇਸ ਜੋਗਾ ਨਹੀਂ ਜੋ ਫੇਰ ਤੇਰਾ ਪੁੱਤ ਸਦਾਵਾਂ।। ਮੈਨੂੰ ਆਪਣਿਆਂ ਕੱਮਿਆਂ ਵਿਚੋਂ ਇੱਕ ਜਿਹਾ ਰੱਖ।। ਸੋ ਓਹ ਉਠਕੇ ਆਪਣੇ ਪਿਉ ਕੋਲ ਆਇਆ।। ਪਰ ਓਹ ਅਜੇ ਦੂਰ ਸੀ ਜੋ ਉਹਦੇ ਪਿਉ ਨੇ ਉਹ ਨੂੰ ਦੇਖਿਆ ਤੇ ਉਸਨੂੰ ਤਰਸ ਆਇਆ ਦੌੜਕੇ ਗਲ ਲਗਿਆ ਅਰ ਉਹ ਨੂੰ ਚੁੰਮਿਆਂ।। ਅਤੇ ਪੁੱਤ ਨੇ ਉਹ ਨੂੰ ਆਖਿਆ, ਬਾਪੂਜੀ ਮੈਂ ਰੱਬ ਦਾ ਅਰ ਤੇਰੇ ਅੱਗੇ ਗੁਨਾਹ ਕੀਤਾ ਹੈ, ਹੁਣ ਮੈਂ ਇਸ ਜੋਗਾ ਨਹੀਂ ਜੋ ਫੇਰ ਤੇਰਾ ਪੁੱਤ ਸਦਾਵਾਂ।। ਪਰ ਪਿਉ ਨੇ ਆਪਣੇ

ਚਾਕਰਾਂ ਨੂੰ ਕਿਹਾ, ਸਭਤੋਂ ਭੈਗੇ ਲੀ ਕੇ ਵਚ ਕੇ ਇਹ ਨੂੰ ਪੁਆਓ, ਅਰ ਇਹਦੀ ਹੱਥੀਂ ਛਾਪ ਤੇ ਪੈਰੀਂ ਜੁੱਤੀ ਪਾਓ॥ ਅਤੇ ਖਾਈਏ ਤੇ ਖੁਸੀਆਂ ਮਨਾਂਈ ਏ॥ ਕਿਉਂ ਜੋ ਇਹ ਮੇਰਾ ਪੁੱਤ ਮੋਇਆ ਸੀ ਤੇ ਟੋਰ ਜੀਉ ਪਿਆ ਹੈ; ਗੁਮਾਚ ਗਿਆ ਸੀ, ਤੇ ਲਭ ਪਿਆ ਹੈ॥ ਸੋ ਓਹ ਲੱਗੇ ਖੁਸੀਆਂ ਕਰਨ॥

ਪਰ ਓਹਦਾ ਵੱਡਾ ਪੁੱਤ ਪੈਲੀ ਵਿਚ ਸੀ॥ ਜਦ ਓਹ ਆਕੇ ਘਰਦੇ ਨੇੜੇ ਅਪੜਿਆ, ਤਾਂ ਰਗ ਨਾਚ ਦੀ ਅਵਾਜ ਸੁਣੀ॥ ਤਦ ਨੌਕਰਾਂ ਵਿੱਚੋਂ ਇੱਕ ਨੂੰ ਸੱਦ ਕੇ ਪੁੱਛਿਆ, ਇਹ ਕੀ ਹੈ॥ ਅਤੇ ਓਸ ਨੇ ਓਹਨੂੰ ਆਖਿਆ, ਤੇਰਾ ਭਰਾ ਆਇਆ ਹੈ; ਅਰ ਤੇਰੇ ਪਿਉ ਨੇ ਮਮਾਨੀ ਕੀਤੀ ਹੈ॥ ਕਿਉਂ ਜੋ ਓਸਨੂੰ ਰਾਜੀ ਬਾਜੀ ਪਾਇਆ॥ ਅਰ ਓਹ ਰੁੱਝੇ ਹੋਇਆ, ਅਤੇ ਅੰਦਰ ਜਾਣ ਨੂੰ ਓਸਦਾ ਜੀ ਨਾ ਕੀਤਾ॥ ਤਾਂ ਓਹਦਾ ਪਿਉ ਬਾਹਰ ਆਕੇ ਉਹਨੂੰ ਮਨਾਉਣ ਲੱਗਾ॥ ਅਰ ਉਹਨੇ ਆਪਣੇ ਪਿਉ ਨੂੰ ਉੱਤਰ ਵਿਚ ਆਖਿਆ, ਦੇਖ ਮੈਂ ਐਨੇ ਵਰਿਆਂ ਥੋਂ ਤੇਰੀ ਟਹਲ ਕਰਦਾ ਹਾਂ, ਤੇ ਤੇਰਾ ਹੁਕਮ ਕਦੇ ਨਹੀਂ ਮੋੜਿਆ॥ ਪਰ ਤੈਂ ਮੈਨੂੰ ਕਦੇ ਇੱਕ ਪਠੋਰਾ ਭੀ ਨਾ ਦਿੱਤਾ, ਜੋ ਮੈਂ ਆਪਣਿਆਂ ਬੇਲੀਆਂ ਨਾਲ ਖੁਸੀ ਕਰਦਾ॥ ਪਰ ਜਦ ਤੇਰਾ ਏਹ ਪੁਤ ਆਇਆ, ਜਿਸਨੇ ਤੇਰਾ ਸਾਰਾ ਧਨ ਕੰਜਰੀਆਂ ਨਾਲ ਉਡਾਇਦੇਤਾ, ਤੈਂ ਓਹਦੇ ਲਈ ਮਮਾਨੀ ਕੀਤੀ॥ ਪਰ ਉਹਨੇ ਓਸਨੂੰ ਆਖਿਆ, ਪੁੱਤ ਤੂੰ ਸਦਾ ਮੇਰੇ ਨਾਲ ਹੈਂ, ਅਤੇ ਮੇਰਾ ਸੱਭੋ ਕੁੱਜ ਤੇਰਾ ਹੈ॥ ਪਰ ਖੁਸੀ ਕਰਨੀ ਅਰ ਅਨੰਦ ਹੋਣਾ ਜੋਗ ਸੀ॥ ਕਿਉਂਜੋ ਇਹ ਤੇਰਾ ਭਰਾ ਮੋਇਆ ਸੀ ਤੇ ਟੋਰ ਜੀਉ ਪਿਆ ਹੈ; ਅਰ ਗੁਮਾਚ ਗਿਆ ਸੀ ਤੇ ਲਭ ਪਿਆ ਹੈ॥

[No. 2.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

MĀJHĪ DIALECT. (DISTRICT, AMRITSAR.)

SPECIMEN I.

ਇੱਕ ਮਨੁੱਖਦੇ ਦੋ ਪੁੱਤ ਸੇ। ਅਤੇ ਛੋਟੇਨੈ ਉਨਾਂ ਵਿੱਚੋਂ ਆਪਣੇ ਪਿਉਨੂੰ ਆਖਿਆ, ਬਾਪੂਜੀ, ਮਾਲਦੀ ਵੰਡ ਜਿਹੜੀ ਮੈਨੂੰ ਆਉਂਦੀ ਹੈ ਦੇਉ। ਅਤੇ ਉਸਨੈ ਉਨਾਂਨੂੰ ਆਪਣੀ ਜਦਾਤ ਵੰਡ ਦਿੱਤੀ। ਅਰ ਥੋੜੇ ਦਿਨਾਂ ਪਿੱਛੋਂ ਛੋਟਾ ਪੁੱਤ ਸੱਬੋ ਕੁਜ ਕੱਠਾ ਕਰਕੇ ਦੁਰਾਡੇ ਦੇਸਨੂੰ ਚਲਿਆ ਗਿਆ, ਅਰ ਓੱਥੇ ਆਪਣਾ ਧਨ ਵੈਲਦਾਰੀ ਵਿਚ ਗੁਆ ਦਿੱਤਾ। ਅਤੇ ਜੱਦੋਂ ਸੱਬੋ ਕੁਜ ਖਰਚ ਕਰ ਚੁਕਿਆ, ਤਾਂ ਉਸ ਦੇਸ ਵਿੱਚ ਵੱਡਾ ਕਾਲ ਆ ਪਿਆ। ਅਰ ਓਹ ਮੁਤਾਜ ਹੋਣ ਲੱਗਾ। ਅਤੇ ਉਹ ਉਸ ਦੇਸਦੇ ਕਿਸੇ ਰਹਣਵਾਲੇਦੇ ਕੋਲ ਜਾਕੇ ਕਾਂਮਾਂ ਰਹਿ ਪਿਆ। ਅਰ ਓਸਨੈ ਉਹਨੂੰ ਆਪਣੀਆਂ ਪੈਲੀਆਂ ਵਿਚ ਸੂਰ ਚਾਰਣ ਲਈ ਘੱਲਿਆ। ਅਰ ਜਿਹੜੇ ਛਿੱਲੜ ਸੂਰ ਖਾਂਦੇ ਸੀ ਉਹ ਉਨਾਂ ਨਾਲ ਆਪਣਾਂ ਢਿੱਡ ਭਰਨਾਂ ਚਾਂਹੁੰਦਾ ਸੀ ਪਰ ਕਿਨੇ ਓਸਨੂੰ ਨਾਂ ਦਿੱਤੇ। ਅਰ ਜਦ ਸੁਰਤ ਵਿਚ ਆਇਆ, ਤੇ ਆਖਿਆ, ਮੇਰੇ ਪਿਉਦੇ ਕਿੰਨੇ ਹੀ ਕਾਂਮਿਆਂਨੂੰ ਵਾਫਰ ਰੋਟੀਆਂ ਹਨ, ਅਰ ਮੈਂ ਭੁੱਖਾ ਮਰਦਾ ਹਾਂ। ਮੈਂ ਉਠਕੇ ਆਪਣੇ ਪਿਉ ਕੋਲ ਜਾਂਵਾਂਗਾ, ਅਰ ਓਸਨੂੰ ਆਖਾਂਗਾ। ਬਾਪੂਜੀ ਮੈਂ ਰੱਬਦਾ ਅਤੇ ਤੇਰੇ ਅੱਗੇ ਗੁੱਨਾਹ ਕੀਤਾ ਹੈ। ਅਰ ਹੁਣ ਮੈਂ ਇਸ ਜੋਗਾ ਨਹੀਂ ਜੋ ਫੇਰ ਤੇਰਾ ਪੁੱਤ ਸਦਾਵਾਂ। ਮੈਨੂੰ ਆਪਣਿਆਂ ਕਾਂਮਿਆਂ ਵਿੱਚੋਂ ਇੱਕ ਜਿਹਾ ਰੱਖ। ਸੋ ਓਹ ਉਠਕੇ ਆਪਣੇ ਪਿਉ ਕੋਲ ਆਇਆ। ਪਰ ਓਹ ਅਜੇ ਦੂਰ ਸੀ ਜੋ ਉਹਦੇ ਪਿਉਨੈ ਓਹਨੂੰ ਵੇਖਿਆ ਤੇ ਓਸਨੂੰ ਤਰਸ ਆਇਆ ਦੌੜ ਕੇ ਗਲ ਲਗਿਆ ਅਰ ਉਹਨੂੰ ਚੁੰਮਿਆਂ। ਅਤੇ ਪੁੱਤਨੈ ਉਹਨੂੰ ਆਖਿਆ, ਬਾਪੂਜੀ ਮੈਂ ਰੱਬਦਾ ਅਰ ਤੇਰੇ ਅੱਗੇ ਗੁੱਨਾਹ ਕੀਤਾ ਹੈ, ਹੁਣ ਮੈਂ ਇਸ ਜੋਗਾ ਨਹੀਂ ਜੋ ਫੇਰ ਤੇਰਾ ਪੁੱਤ ਸਦਾਵਾਂ। ਪੱਰ ਪਿਉਨੈ ਆਪਣੇ ਚਾਕਰਾਂਨੂੰ ਕਿਹਾ, ਸਬਤੋਂ ਚੰਗੇ ਲੀੜੇ ਕਢ ਕੇ ਇਹਨੂੰ ਪੁਆਓ, ਅਰ ਇਹਦੀ ਹੱਥੀਂ ਛਾਪ ਤੇ ਪੈਰੀਂ ਜੁੱਤੀ ਪਾਓ। ਅਤੇ ਖਾਈਯੇ ਤੇ ਖੁਸੀਆਂ ਮਨਾਂਈਯੇ। ਕਿਉਂ ਜੋ ਇਹ ਮੇਰਾ ਪੁੱਤ ਮੋਇਆ ਸੀ ਤੇ ਫੇਰ ਜਿਊ ਪਿਆ ਹੈ, ਗੁਆਚ ਗਿਆ ਸੀ, ਤੇ ਲਭ ਪਿਆ ਹੈ। ਸੋ ਓਹ ਲੱਗੇ ਖੁਸੀਆਂ ਕਰਨ॥

ਪਰ ਓਹਦਾ ਵੱਡਾ ਪੁੱਤ ਪੈਲੀ ਵਿਚ ਸੀ। ਜਦ ਓਹ ਆਕੇ ਘਰਦੇ ਨੇੜੇ ਅਪੜਿਆ, ਤਾਂ ਰਾਗ ਨਾਚਦੀ ਅਵਾਜ ਸੁਣੀ। ਤਦ ਨੌਕਰਾਂ ਵਿੱਚੋਂ ਇੱਕਨੂੰ ਸੱਦ ਕੇ ਪੁੱਛਿਆ, ਇਹ ਕੀ ਗਲ ਹੈ। ਅਤੇ ਓਸਨੈ ਓਹਨੂੰ ਆਖਿਆ, ਤੇਰਾ ਭਰਾ ਆਇਆ ਹੈ, ਅਰ ਤੇਰੇ ਪਿਉਨੈ

ਮਮਾਨੀ ਕੀਤੀ ਹੈ । ਕਿਉਂ ਜੋ ਓਸਨੂੰ ਰਾਜੀ ਬਾਜੀ ਪਾਇਆ । ਅਰ ਓਹ ਗੁੱਸੇ ਹੋਇਆ, ਅਤੇ ਅੰਦਰ ਜਾਣਨੂੰ ਓਸਦਾ ਜੀ ਨਾ ਕੀਤਾ। ਤਾਂ ਉਹਦਾ ਪਿਉ ਬਾਹਰ ਆਣਕੇ ਉਹਨੂੰ ਮਨਾਉਣ ਲੱਗਾ। ਅਰ ਉਹਨੈ ਆਪਣੇ ਪਿਉਨੂੰ ਉੱਤਰ ਵਿਚ ਆਖਿਆ, ਵੇਖ ਮੈਂ ਐਨੇ ਵਰ੍ਹਿਆਂ ਥੋਂ ਤੇਰੀ ਟਹਲ ਕਰਦਾ ਹਾਂ, ਤੇ ਤੇਰਾ ਹੁਕਮ ਕਦੇ ਨਹੀਂ ਮੋੜਿਆ । ਪਰ ਤੈਂ ਮੈਨੂੰ ਕਦੇ ਇੱਕ ਪਠੋਰਾ ਬੀ ਨਾਂ ਦਿੱਤਾ, ਜੋ ਮੈਂ ਆਪਣਿਆਂ ਬੇਲੀਆਂ ਨਾਲ ਖੁਸੀ ਕਰਦਾ। ਪਰ ਜਦ ਤੇਰਾ ਏਹ ਪੁਤ ਆਇਆ, ਜਿਸਨੈ ਤੇਰਾ ਸਾਰਾ ਧਨ ਕੰਜਰੀਆਂ ਨਾਲ ਉਡਾ ਦਿੱਤਾ, ਤੈਂ ਉਹਦੇ ਲਈ ਮਮਾਨੀ ਕੀਤੀ। ਪਰ ਉਹਨੈ ਓਸਨੂੰ ਆਖਿਆ ਪੁੱਤ ਤੂੰ ਸਦਾ ਮੇਰੇ ਨਾਲ ਹੈਂ ਅਤੇ ਮੇਰਾ ਸੱਭੋ ਕੁੱਜ ਤੇਰਾ ਹੈ। ਪਰ ਖੁਸੀ ਕਰਨੀ ਅਰ ਅਨੰਦ ਹੋਣਾ ਜੋਗ ਸੀ। ਕਿਉਂ ਜੋ ਇਹ ਤੇਰਾ ਭਰਾ ਮੋਇਆ ਸੀ ਤੇ ਫੇਰ ਜੀਉ ਪਿਆ ਹੈ, ਅਰ ਗੁਆਚ ਗਿਆ ਸੀ ਤੇ ਲਭ ਪਿਆ ਹੈ॥

[No. 2.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

MĀJHĪ DIALECT. (DISTRICT, AMRITSAR.)

SPECIMEN I.

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ikk manukkhdē dō putt sē. Atē chhōṭēnai unã̄ vichchõ One man-of two sons were. And the-younger-by them from-among āpṇē piunũ ākhiā, 'bāpū-jī, māldī waṇḍ jihṛī mainũ his-own father-to it-was-said, 'father-dear, property-of share which me-to ãundī-hai dēu.' Atē usnai unã̄nũ āpṇī jadāt waṇḍ coming-is give.' And him-by them-to his-own possessions having-divided dittī. Ar thōṛē dinã̄ pichchhõ chhōṭā putt sabbō kuj was-given. And a-few days afterwards the-younger son all anything kaṭṭhā kar-kē durāḍē dēsnũ chaliā-giā, ar ōtthē āpṇã̄ together made-having a-distant country-to went-away, and there his-own dhan wail-dārī vich guā-dittā. Atē jaddõ sabbō kuj kharach wealth profligacy in was-lost. And when all anything expended kar-chukiā, tã̄ us dēs vich waḍḍā kāl ā-piā, ar was-made-completely, then that country in a-great famine fell, and ōh mutāj hōṇ laggā. Atē uh us dēsdē kisē rahaṇ-wālēdē he needy to-be began. And he that country-of a-certain dweller-of kōl jā-kē kāmmã̄ rahi-piā. Ar ōsnai uhnũ āpṇīã̄ pailiã̄ near gone-having labourer remained. And him-by him-for his-own fields vich sūr chāraṇ-laī ghalliā. Ar jihṛē chhillaṛ sūr in swine feeding-for it-was-sent. And what husks the-swine khāndē-sī uh unã̄ nāl āpṇã̄ ḍhiḍḍ bharnã̄ chã̄hundā-sī; par eating-were he those with his-own belly to-fill wishing-was; but kinē ōsnũ nã̄ dittē. Ar jad surat vich āiā, by-anyone him-to not they-were-given. And when memory in he-came, tē ākhiā, 'mērē piudē kinnē-hī kã̄mmiã̄nũ wāphar then it-was-said, 'my father-of how-many-even labourers-to superfluous rōṭiã̄ han, ar maĩ bhukkhā mardā-hã̄. Maĩ uṭh-kē āpṇē piu loaves are, and I hungry dying-am. I arisen-having my-own father kōl jã̄wã̄gā, ar ōsnũ ākhã̄gā, "bāpū-jī, maĩ Rabbdā atē near will-go, and him-to I-will-say, "father-dear, by-me God-of and tērē aggē gunnāh kītā-hai, ar huṇ maĩ is jōgā ṇahĩ of-thee in-front sin done-is, and now I this worthy (am-)not jō phēr tērā putt sadāwā̃. Mainũ āpṇiā̃ kā̃mmiā̃ that again thy son I-may-be-called. Me thine-own labourers vichchõ ikk jihā rakkh."' Sō ōh uṭh-kē āpṇē piu from-among one like keep."' So he arisen-having his-own father kōl āiā. Par ōh ajē dūr sī jō uhdē piunai ōhnũ near came. But he still distant was that him-of the-father-by him-for vēkhiā, tē ōsnũ taras āiā dauṛ-kē gal it-was-seen, and him-to compassion came run-having (on-) the-neck lagiā, ar uhnũ chummiā̃. Atē puttnai uhnũ ākhiā, he-was-attached, and him-for it-was-kissed. And the-son-by him-to it-was-said,

'bāpū-jī, maĩ Rabbdā ar tērē aggē gunnāh kītā-hai, huṇ maĩ
'father-dear, by-me God-of and of-thee in-front sin done-is, now I is jōgā nahĩ jō phēr tērā putt sadāwā̃.' Par this worthy (am-)not that again thy son I-may-be-called.' But piunai āpṇē chākrā̃nũ kihā, 'sab-tõ chaṅgē līṛē the-father-by his-own servants-to it-was-said, 'all-than good garments kaḍh-kē ihnũ puāō; ar ihdī hatthĩ taken-out-having this-one-to cause-to-put-on; and this-one-of on-the-hands chhāp, tē pairĩ juttī pāō; atē khāīyē tē khusiā̃ a-ring, and on-the-feet shoes put-on; and we-may-eat and rejoicings manā̃īyē; kiũ-jō ih mērā putt mōiā sī, tē phēr we-may-celebrate; because-that this my son dead was, and again jiū-piā-hai; guāch giā sī, tē labh-piā-hai.' Sō ōh laggē alive-fallen-is; lost gone was, and found-fallen-is.' So they began khusiā̃ karan.
rejoicings to-make.

Par ōhdā waḍḍā putt pailī vich sī. Jad But him-of the-great son the-field in was. When ōh ā-kē ghardē nēṛē apaṛiā, tā̃ rāg nāchdī awāj he come-having the-house-of near arrived, then music dance-of sound suṇī. Tad naukrā̃ vichchõ ikknũ sadd-kē puchchhiā, was-heard. Then the-servants from-among one-to called-having it-was-asked,
'ih kī gall hai?' Atē ōsnai ōhnũ ākhiā, 'tērā bharā
'this what matter is?' And him-by him-to it-was-said, 'thy brother āiā-hai, ar tērē piunai mamānī kītī-hai, kiũ-jō ōsnũ come-is, and thy father-by a-feast made-is, because-that him-for rājī-bājī pāiā.' Ar ōh gussē hōiā, atē andar jāṇnũ safe-and-sound it-was-found.' And he angry became, and within going-for ōsdā jī nā kītā. Tā̃ uhdā piu bāhar ān-kē him-of the-mind not was-made. Then him-of the-father outside come-having uhnũ manāuṇ laggā. Ar uhnai āpṇē piunũ uttar vich him-to to-remonstrate began. And him-by his-own father-to answer in ākhiā, 'vēkh, maĩ ainē warhiã̄-thõ tērī ṭahal kardā-hã̄, tē it-was-said, 'see, I these-many years-from thy service doing-am, and tērā hukam kadē nahĩ mōṛiā. Par taĩ mainũ kadē ikk thy order ever not was-turned-aside. But by-thee me-to ever a paṭhōrā bī nã̄ dittā, jō maĩ āpṇiã̄ bēliã̄ nāl khusī kid even not was-given, that I my-own friends with rejoicing kardā. Par jad ṭērā ēh put (for putt) āiā, jisnai tērā sārā might-have-made. But when thy this son came, whom-by thy all dhan kañjarīã̄ nāl uḍā-dittā, taĩ uhdē laĩ mamānī kītī.'

wealth harlots with was-squandered, by-thee him-of for a-feast was-made.'
Par uhnai ōsnũ ākhiā, 'putt, tũ sadā mērē nāl haĩ, atē
But him-by him-to it-was-said, 'son, thou always of-me with art, and mērā sabbō kujj tērā hai. Par khusī karnī, ar anand mine all anything thine is. But rejoicing to-be-done, and joy hoṇā jōg sī, kiũ-jō ih tērā bharā mōiā sī, tē to-be-become proper was, because-that this thy brother dead was, and phēr jīū-piā-hai; ar guāch piā-sī, tē labh-piā-hai.'
again alive-fallen-is; and lost fallen-was, and found-fallen-is.'

[No. 3.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

MĀJHĪ DIALECT. (DISTRICT, AMRITSAR.)

SPECIMEN II.

ਗੱਲਾਂ ਸੁਣਕੇ ਸਾਹਬਾਂਦੀਆਂ ਕਾਂ ਜਾਂਦੇ ਸਰਮਾ ।
ਭੁੱਖਿਆਂ ਚੁੰਜਾਂ ਮਾਰੀਆਂ ਪਰੀਂ ਨ ਉੱਡਾ ਜਾ ॥ ੧ ॥
ਮੋਇਆਂਦਾ ਮਾਸ ਨ ਛੱਡ ਦੇ ਪੌਂਹਚ ਕੇ ਲੈਂਦੇ ਖਾ । ਨਾਲ ਜਰਾਨਾ ਜੱਟਦੇ ਨਾ ਲਈ ਪੱਗ ਵਟਾ ॥ ੨ ॥
ਚੰਗੀ ਕਰ ਬਹਾਲੀਏ ਪੇੜੇ ਲਏ ਚੁਰਾ । ਸੋਹਨੀ ਸੂਰਤ ਬਾਵਰੀ ਜਲ ਕੇ ਹੋਨੀ ਸਵਾਹ ॥ ੩ ॥
ਉਹਦਾ ਬੁਰਾ ਨ ਤੱਕੀਏ ਜਿਹਦਾ ਲਈਏ ਲੂਣ ਖਾ ।
ਜੇ ਧੀ ਹੁੰਦੀ ਅਸੀਲਦੀ ਜੰਡ ਨਾਲ ਲੈਂਦੀ ਢਾਹ ॥ ੪ ॥
ਮੋਇਆ ਮਿਰਜਾ ਸੁਣ ਕੇ ਬੈਠੀ ਕੰਡ ਭੁਵਾ । ਗੋਰ ਪੁਛੈਂਦੀ ਤੁਧਨੂੰ ਮੈਥੇ ਜਾਣਾ ਆ ॥ ੫ ॥
ਝੂਠੇ ਘਰਨੂੰ ਛੱਡ ਦੇ ਸੱਚੇ ਵਲ ਜਾ । ਛੇਕੜਦਾ ਘੋਲ ਹੈ ਪਿੰਡੇ ਪਾਨੀ ਪਾ ॥ ੬ ॥
ਜਟ ਮਰ ਗਿਆ ਤੂੰ ਜੀਉਂਦੀ ਲੱਖ ਲਾਨਤ ਤੇਰੇ ਭਾ । ਕਾਂਵਾਂ ਬੋਲੀ ਮਾਰੀਆਂ ਸਾਹਬਾਂ ਮਰੀ ਕਟਾਰੀ ਖਾ ॥ ੭ ॥
ਲੋਥਾਂ ਪਈਆਂ ਰਹੀਆਂ ਹੇਠਾਂ ਜੰਡਦੇ ਬੁਤ ਵੜੇ ਭਿਸਤੀਂ ਜਾ। ਕੋਈ ਮੁਸਾਫ਼ਰ ਮਰ ਗਿਆ ਕਿਨੇ ਨ ਮਾਰੀ ਧਾ ॥ ੮ ॥
ਭਾਈ ਹੁੰਦੇ ਬੌਹੜਦੇ ਦੁਖ ਲੈਂਦੇ ਵੇਡਾ । ਬਾਝ ਭਰਾਵਾਂ ਜਟ ਮਾਰਿਆ ਕਿਨੇ ਨ ਕੀਤੀ ਹਮਰਾ ॥ ੯ ॥

ਬੌਹੜੀਓ ਮਿਰਜਿਆ !!

[No. 3.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

MĀJHĪ DIALECT. (DISTRICT, AMRITSAR.)

SPECIMEN II.

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Gallã̄ suṇ-kē Sāhbã̄dīyã̄ kã̄ jāndē sarmā.
The-words heard-having Sāhbān-of the-crows (were-)going ashamed.

'Bhukkhiã̄ chujjã̄ mārīã̄, parī̃ na uḍḍā-jā. (1)
'Hungry beaks were-struck, by-feathers not it-could-be-flown. (1)

'Mōiã̄dā mās na chhaḍḍ-dē, paũhach-kē lainde-khā.
'The-dead-of flesh not having-left, arrived-having we-ate-up.

'Nāl jarānā Jaṭdē, nā laī pagg waṭā. (2)
'With love the-Jat-of, not was-taken turban having-exchanged. (2)

'Chaṅgī kar bahālī-ē, pēḍē laē churā.
'Good having-made thou-caused-to-sit-art, dough taken having-stolen.

'Mōh[a]nī sūrat, bāwarī, jal-kē hōṇī sawāh. (3)
'Lovely form, O-mad-one, burnt-being is-to-become ashes. (3)

'Uhdā burā na takkī-ē, jihdā laī-ē lūṇ khā.
'Him-of evil not thought-is, whom-of been-taken-is salt having-eaten.

'Jē dhī hundī asīldī, jaṇḍ nāl laindī phāh. (4)
'If daughter thou-hadst-been noble(-caste)-of, jand with thou-wouldst-have-taken hanging. (4)

'Mōiā Mirjā suṇ-kē, baiṭhī kaṇḍ bhuwā.
'Dead Mirza having-heard, seated the-back was-turned.

'Gōr puchhaindī "tudhnũ mai-thē jāṇā-ā." (5)
'The-grave (is-)asking "thee-to me-near to-be-gone-is." (5)

'Jhūṭhē gharnũ chhaḍḍ-dē, sachchē wal jā.
'The-untrue home abandon, the-true-one towards go.

'Chhēkaṛdā ghōl hai, piṇḍē pānī pā. (6)
'The-last-of combat is, on-the-body water put. (6)

'Jaṭ mar-giā, tũ jīundī, lakkh lānat tērē bhā.'
'The-Jat is-dead, thou art-alive, 100,000 curses of-thee on.'

Kã̄wã̄ bōlī mārīã̄, Sāhbã̄ marī kaṭārī khā. (7)
The-crows' word struck, Sāhbān died dagger eating. (7)

Lōthã̄ paiã̄ rahiã̄ hēṭhã̄ jaṇḍḍē, but waṛē Bhistī jā.
The-corpses fallen remained below the-jand-of, spirits entered Heaven having-gone.

'Kōī musāphar mar-giā,' kinē na mārī dhā. (8)
'Some wayfarer died,' by-anyone not was-struck alas. (8)

Bhāī hundē bauhaṛdē, dukh laindē waṇḍā.
Brothers if-there-had-been they-would-have-come, grief they-would-have-taken a-share.

Bājh bharāwã̄ Jaṭ māriā, kinē na kītī ham-rā. (9)
Without brothers the-Jat was-killed, by-anyone not was-made help. (9)

Bauhaṛīō Mirjiā!
Return Mirza!

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

(Sāhbān, beloved of Mīrzā the Jaṭṭ, finds his corpse under a jand tree, being eaten by crows. She reproaches them.)

1. When they heard Sāhbān's words, the crows became ashamed. 'When our wings could not carry us further, and we were compelled by hunger, we pecked at his body.

2. 'It is not our custom to leave untouched the flesh of a corpse, and so when we came here we ate it. We had no special bond of love with him, nor had we exchanged turbans in token of brotherhood.

3. 'He thought thee to be good and faithful, and seated thee (by his hearth), but thou hast stolen the unbaked dough.[1] Mad one, thy beauteous body will some day be burnt to ashes.

4. 'Slight not thou him whose salt thou hast eaten. If thou hadst been a daughter of a noble caste, thou wouldst have hanged thyself from the jand tree at whose foot thy lover lieth.

5. 'When thou heardest of his death thou didst sit with thy face turned away from him, while the grave is calling to thee, "To me, to me, must thou come."

6. 'Forsake thou the false home of this world, and seek thou the true home of death. There is but one struggle, the last one, left for thee. Cast thou the funeral water on thy form.[2]

7. 'The Jaṭṭ is dead, and thou art still alive. For this may a hundred thousand curses light on thee.' When she heard the taunts of the crows, Sāhbān drew her dagger and killed herself.

8. Their bodies remained lying under the jand tree, but their souls went to heaven. No one cried alas! for them, for their bodies lay unrecognised as those of passing travellers in a foreign land.

9. Had he had brothers they would have come to share his sorrows. The Jaṭṭ died brotherless, and no one came to help him.

Alas, Return thou, Mīrzā!

[1] The crows mean that Mīrzā had no special claim of affection on them, but that he had upon her. That she was avoiding the payment of this claim by not killing herself by his corpse. He had thought her faithful, but, by her being still alive, she was showing herself unfaithful. She was like a faithless wife, whom her husband puts in charge of the oven, and who, instead of baking the bread, steals the unbaked dough and eats it. Why hesitate to die. She must die some day.

[2] An allusion to the washing of a Musalman's body before burial.

The following ballad deals with the marriage of Nau Nihāl Singh in 1837 A.D. The Kharak Singh mentioned in the poem was the successor of Ranjit Singh, and reigned for three months, being deposed by his son Nau Nihāl Singh in 1840. Kharak Singh did not die on the battle field but in his bed, and there were suspicions that he was poisoned.

Nau Nihāl married Jas-kaur, the daughter of Shām Singh of Atari, who afterwards died gallantly fighting the British at Sobraon in 1846. This is probably the 'black fate" referred to in verse 4.

Nau Nihāl himself was killed on the day of his father's cremation by an archway falling upon him.

[No. 4.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

MĀJHĪ DIALECT. (DISTRICT, LAHORE.)

SPECIMEN III.

(GURMUKHĪ CHARACTER.)

ਚੜ੍ਹਿਆ ਚੇਤ੍ਰ ਪਈ ਪੁਹਾਰ। ਯਾਰੋ ਵੱਡੀ ਹੋਈ ਸਰਕਾਰ। ਧਮਕੇ ਕਾਬੁਲ ਤੇ ਕੰਧਾਰ। ਡੇਰੇ ਘੱਤੇ ਅਟਕੋਂ ਪਾਰ ॥

ਵੱਡਾ ਖੜਕ ਸਿੰਘ ਸਰਦਾਰ। ਤੂੰ ਕਿਉਂ ਬੈਠਾ ਮੌਤ ਵਿਸਾਰ। ਉ ਵੀ ਚੜ੍ਹਿਆ ਨਾਲ ਕਰਾਰ। ਓੜਕ ਚੱਲਨਾ ॥

ਚੇਤੋਂ ਫੇਰ ਆਈ ਵਸਾਖੀ। ਤੇ ਸਰਕਾਰ ਵੱਡੀ ਮਸਤਾਕੀ। ਸੁੰਦਰ ਬਨ ਬਨ ਆਵਨ ਹਾਥੀ। ਨਜਰਾਂ ਲੈ ਲੈ ਮਿਲਨ ਸੁਗਾਤੀਂ। ਸੂਬੇ ਰਲ ਮਿਲ ਚੜ੍ਹਨ ਜਮਾਤੀਂ। ਮੁੱਢੋਂ ਸਰਕਾਰਦੇ ॥

ਬੈਠੇ ਫੇਰ ਅਟਾਰੀ ਵਾਲੇ। ਚੰਗੇ ਚੰਗੇ ਸੱਦ ਬਹਾਲੇ। ਉਨਾਂਦੇ ਲੇਖ ਜੋ ਹੋ ਗਏ ਕਾਲੇ। ਟਕੇ ਤੋਰਨ ਤੋਲਾਂ ਵਾਲੇ। ਢਿੱਲ ਨ ਲਾਂਵਦੇ ॥

ਰਾਣੀ ਜਸਕੌਰ ਘਰ ਜੰਮੀ। ਨੀਵੇਂ ਦੀਦੇ ਬੋਹੜ ਸਰਮੀਂ। ਉੱਚੇ ਲੇਖ ਤੇ ਚਿੱਤ ਕਰਮੀਂ। ਭਰ ਭਰ ਥਾਲ ਵਗਾਵਣ ਦੱਮੀਂ। ਕਰਨ ਖੈਰਾਇਤਾਂ ॥

ਵਸਾਖੋਂ ਫੇਰ ਹੋਈ ਚਤਰਾਈ। ਬੇਟੀ ਸ਼ਾਮ ਸਿੰਘ ਘਰ ਜਾਈ। ਲਾਗੀ ਢੂੰਡ ਕਰਨ ਕੁੜਮਾਈ। ਮੁਲਕ ਇਨਾਮ ਜੋ ਖਾਂਦੀ ਦਾਈ। ਮੁੱਢੋਂ ਸਰਕਾਰਦੇ ॥

ਹੁਣ ਜੇਠ ਮਹੀਨਾ ਚੜ੍ਹਿਆ। ਕੌਰ ਸਜਾਦਾ ਖਾਰੇ ਚੜ੍ਹਿਆ। ਰਲ ਮਿਲ ਭਾਬੀਆਂ ਸਾਲੂ ਫੜਿਆ। ਓਨੂੰ ਰੂਪ ਸਵਾਯਾ ਚੜ੍ਹਿਆ। ਰਾਣੀ ਜਸਕੌਰ ਦਿਲ ਹਰਿਆ। ਸਗਨ ਮਨਾਉਂਦੇ ॥

ਅੱਗੇ ਹੋਈ ਜਜ ਤਿਆਰ। ਚੜ੍ਹਿਆ ਮਾਝੇਦਾ ਸਰਦਾਰ। ਜਾਂਜੀ ਸੋਹਨੇ ਜਿਉਂ ਗੁਲਜਾਰ। ਘੋੜੇ ਕੁੱਦਣ ਕੁਲ ਬਾਜਾਰ। ਲਾੜੇ ਪਹਨੀ ਫੇਰ ਤਲਵਾਰ। ਘੋੜੇ ਚੜ੍ਹਿਆ ਸਨ ਹਥਿਆਰ। ਜੰਜ ਸੁਹਾਉਂਦੀ।

ਪਹਨ ਪੁਸਾਕਾਂ ਬੈਠਾ ਨ੍ਹਾਕੇ। ਦਿੱਤਾ ਤਿਲਕ ਪਰੋਹਤ ਆਕੇ। ਸੇਹਰਾ ਬਾਪ ਪਹਨਾਵੇ ਆਕੇ। ਗਾਵਣ ਸੱਯਾਂ ਮੰਗਲ ਜਾਕੇ। ਸਗਨ ਮਨਾਉਂਦੀਆਂ ॥

ਹੋਈ ਜੰਜ ਤਿਆਰ। ਸੂਬੇ ਚੜ੍ਹੇ ਬੇਸੁਮਾਰ। ਪਹਨ ਪੁਸਾਕਾਂ ਸਨ ਤਲਵਾਰ। ਵੰਡਣ ਮੁਹਰਾਂ ਬੇਸੁਮਾਰ। ਲਾਗੀ ਲੇਕਰ ਹੋਏ ਨਿਹਾਲ। ਸੱਯਦ ਸਾਧੂ ਸਨ ਪਰਵਾਰ। ਲੇਨ ਖੈਰਾਇਤਾਂ ਨਾਮ ਗੁਫਾਰ। ਦੇਨ ਅਸੀਸ ਭਰੇ ਭੰਡਾਰ। ਸਾਹਬ ਧਿਆਉਂਦੇ ॥

[No. 4.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

MĀJHĪ DIALECT. (DISTRICT, LAHORE.)

SPECIMEN III.

(PERSIAN CHARACTER.)

چڑھیا چیتر پئي پُہار - یارو وڈي هوئي سرکار - دھمکے کابل تے قندھار - ڈیرے گہتے اٹکون پار *

وڈا کھڑک سنگھہ سردار - تون کیون بیٹھا مَوت وسار - اُو وِي چڑھیا نال قرار - اوڑک چلنا *

چیتون پھر آئي وساکھي - تے سرکار وڈي مستاکي - سُندر بن بن آوِن هاتھي - نذران لے لے ملن سُوغاتین - صوبے رل مل چڑھن جماعتین - مُڈھو سرکارِ *

بیٹھے پھر آٹاري‌والے - چنگے چنگے سد بہالے - اُنان‌دِ لیکھہ جو هوگئے کالے - ٹکے تورن تولان‌والے - ڈھل نہ لاوندے *

راني جس کور گہر جمي - نیوین دیدے بہت شرمین - اُچے لیکھہ تے چت کرمین - بَھر بَھر تھال وگاون دمین - کرن خیراتان -

وساکھون پھر هوئي چترائي - بیٹي شام سنگھہ گھر جائي - لاگي ڈھونڈھہ کرن کُڑمائي - ملك انعام جو کھاندي دائي - مڈھو سرکار دے *

ਅੱਗੇ ਹੋਈ ਜਨ ਤਿਆਰ। ਚੜ੍ਹਿਆ ਮਾਝੇਦਾ ਸਰਦਾਰ। ਜਾਂਜੀ ਸੋਹਨੇ ਜਿਉਂ ਗੁਲਜਾਰ। ਘੋੜੇ ਕੁੱਦਣ ਕੁਲ ਬਾਜਾਰ। ਲਾੜੇ ਪਹਨੀ ਫੇਰ ਤਲਵਾਰ। ਘੋੜੇ ਚੜ੍ਹਿਆ ਸਨ ਹਥਿਆਰ। ਜੰਞ ਸੁਹਾਂਉਂਦੀ।

ਪਹਨ ਪੁਸਾਕਾਂ ਬੈਠਾ ਨ੍ਹਾਕੇ। ਦਿੱਤਾ ਤਿਲਕ ਪਰੋਹਤ ਆਕੇ। ਸੇਹਰਾ ਬਾਪ ਪਹਨਾਵੇ ਆਕੇ। ਗਾਵਣ ਸੱਯਾਂ ਮੰਗਲ ਜਾਕੇ। ਸਗਨ ਮਨਾਂਉਂਦੀਆਂ ॥

ਹੋਈ ਜੰਞ ਤਿਆਰ। ਸੂਬੇ ਚੜ੍ਹੇ ਬੇਸੁਮਾਰ। ਪਹਨ ਪੁਸਾਕਾਂ ਸਨ ਤਲਵਾਰ। ਵੰਡਣ ਮੁਹਰਾਂ ਬੇਸੁਮਾਰ। ਲਾਗੀ ਲੇਕਰ ਹੋਏ ਨਿਹਾਲ। ਸੱਯਦ ਸਾਧੂ ਸਨ ਪਰਵਾਰ। ਲੇਨ ਖੈਰਾਇਤਾਂ ਨਾਮ ਗੁਫਾਰ। ਦੇਨ ਅਸੀਸ ਭਰੇ ਭੰਡਾਰ। ਸਾਹਬ ਧਿਆਉਂਦੇ ॥

[No. 4.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

MĀJHĪ DIALECT. (DISTRICT, LAHORE.)

SPECIMEN III.

(PERSIAN CHARACTER.)

چڑھیا چیتر پئي پُہار - یارو وڈي هوئي سرکار - دھمکے کابل تے قندھار - ڈیرے گھتے اٹکون پار *

وڈا کھڑک سنگھہ سردار - تون کیون بیٹھا مَوت وسار - اُو وِي چڑھیا نال قرار - اوڑک چلنا *

چیتون پھر آئي وساکھي - تے سرکار وڈي مستاکي - سُندر بن بن آونِ هاتھي - نذران لے لے ملن سُوغاتین - صوبے رل مل چڑھن جماعتین - مُڈھو سرکارِ *

بیٹھے پھر آٹاري‌والے - چنگے چنگے سد بہالے - اُنان‌دِ لیکھہ جو هوگئے کالے - ٹکے تورن تولان‌والے - ڈِھل نہ لاوندے *

رانی جس کور گہر جمي - نیوین دیدے بہت شرمین - اُچے لیکھہ تے چت کرمین - بَھر بَھر تھال وگاون دمین - کرن خیراتان -

وساکھون پھر هوئي چترائي - بیٹي شام سنگھہ گھر جائي - لاگي ڈھونڈھہ کرن کُڑمائي - ملك انعام جو کھاندي دائي - مڈھو سرکار دے *

هن جیٹھہ مہینہ چڑھیا - کور سجادہ کھارے چڑھیا - رل مل بہابیان سالو پھڑیا - اون نون روپ سوایا چڑھیا - راني جسکور دل هریا - شگن مناوندے *

اگے هوئي جنج تیار - چڑھیا ماجھے سردار - جانجي سوهنے جیون گلزار - گھوڑے کُدن کل بازار - لاڑي پهني پهر تلوار - گھوڑے چڑھیا سن هتهیار - جنج سهاوندی *

پهن پوشاکان بیٹھا نهاے - دتا تلك پروهت آے - سہرہ باپ پهناوے آے - گاون سیان منگل جاے - شگن مناوندیان *

هوئي جنج تیار - صوے چڑھے بے شمار - پهن پوشاکان سن تلوار - ونڈن مهران بے شمار - لاگي لیکر هوئی نهال - سید ساهدو سن پروار - لین خیرائتان نام غفار - دین اسیس بهرے بهنڈار - صاحب دهیاوندے *

[No. 4.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

MĀJHĪ DIALECT. (DISTRICT, LAHORE.

SPECIMEN III.

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Chaṛhiā Chētr, paī puhār.
Rose Chait, fell showers.

Yārō, waḍḍī hōī Sarkār.
O-friends, great is Sarkār.

Dhamkē Kābul tē Kandhār.
Are-terrified Kābul and Qandahār.

Ḍērē ghattē Aṭkõ pār. 1
Tents were-pitched from-the-Indus beyond. 1

Waḍḍā Khaṛak Siṅgh sardār, Great Kharak Singh the-sardār,

Tũ kiũ baiṭhā maut visār.
Thou why seated death forgetting.

U vī chaṛhiā nāl karār.
He also rose with firmness-of-mind.

Ōṛak challnā. 2
In-the-end it-must-be-gone. 2

Chētõ phēr āī Wasākhī,
From-Chait again came the-first-day-of-Baisākh,

Tē Sarkār waḍḍī mastākī.
And the-Sarkār great being-pleased.

Sundar ban ban āwan hāthī.
Handsome becoming becoming come the-elephants.

Najrã̄ lai lai milan sugātī̃.
Presents taking taking they-receive gifts.

Sūbē ral-mil chaṛhan jamātī̃,
The-chiefs jointly-with start bodies-of-men,

Muḍḍhõ Sarkārdē. 3
With the-Sarkār-of. 3

Baiṭhē phēr Aṭārī-wālē.
Were-seated then the-men-of-Atārī.

Changē changē sadd bahālē.
Well well calling they-were-caused-to-sit.

Unãdē lēkh jō hō-gaē kālē.
Them-of the-fates which became black.

Ṭakē tōran tōlã-wālē.
Money they-give-out each-piece-weighing-a-tōlā.

Ḍhill na lãwandē. 4
Delay not (were-they-)bringing. 4

Rāṇī Jas-kaur ghar jammī.
Rānī Jaskaur (in-)the-house was-born.

Nīvẽ dīdē bauhat sarmī.
Low eyes very modest.

Uchchē lēkh tē chitt-karmī.
High fates and destiny.

Bhar bhar thāl wagāwaṇ dammī.
Full full trays they-throw pice.

Karan khairāitã. 5
They-do charity. 5

Wasākhõ phēr hōī chatrāī.
From-Baisākh again becomes wisdom.

Bēṭī Shām Siṅgh ghar jāī.
A-daughter Shām Singh's (in-)house was-born.

Lāgī ḍhūṇḍ karan kuṛmāī.
Go-betweens seeking make betrothal.

Mulk inām jō khāndī dāī,
A-country reward as eating the-nurse,

Muḍḍhõ Sarkārdē. 6
From-near the-Sarkār-of. 6

Huṇ Jēṭh mahīnā chaṛhiā.
Now Jēṭh month arose.

Kaur Sajādā khārē chaṛhiā.
Kaur Prince on-the-basket mounted.

Ral-mil bhābīã sālū phaṛiā.
Jointly the-brothers'-wives the-red-cloth seized.

Ōnũ rūp sawāyā chaṛhiā.
Him-to beauty 1¼-times arose.

Rāṇī Jas-kaur dil hariā.
Rānī Jaskaur('s) mind was-pleased.

Sagan manãundē. 7
Good-omens they-(are-)invoking. 7

Aggē hōī jañj tiār.
Then became the-wedding-procession ready.

Chaṛhiā Mājhēdā Sardār.
Mounted the-Mājhā-of the-Sardār.

Jãjī sōhnē jiũ guljār.
The-members-of-the-procession (are-)beautiful like a-garden.

Ghōṛē kuddaṇ kul bājār.
Horses leap (in-)the-whole bazaar.

Lāṛē pahnī phēr talwār.
By-the-bridegroom was-put-on then a-sword.

Ghōṛē chaṛhiā san hathiār.
On-a-horse he-mounted with arms.

Jañj suhãundī. 8
The-procession (was-)appearing-beautiful. 8

Pahan pusākã baiṭhā nhākē.
He-puts-on garments sat bathed-having.

Dittā tilak parōhat ākē.
Was-given a-forehead-mark by-the-priest come-having.

Sēhrā bāp pahnāvē ākē.
The-chaplet the-father puts-on(-him) come-having.

Gāwaṇ sayyã maṅgal jākē.
They-sing the-female-playmates songs-of-joy gone-having.

Sagan manãundīã. 9
Good-omens they-(are-)invoking. 9

Hōī jañj tiār.
Became the-procession ready.

Sūbē chaṛhē bē-sumār.
Governors rode innumerable.

Pahan pusākã san talwār.
They-put-on garments with sword.

Waṇḍaṇ muhrã bē-sumār.
They-distribute gold-mohars innumerable.

Lāgī lē-kar hōē nihāl.
The-go-betweens taken-having became prosperous.

Sayyad sādhū san parwār
Sayyads Sādhūs with families

Lēn khairāitã nām Gafār.
Take alms (in-)the-name(-of) God.

Dēn asīs 'bharē bhaṇḍār.'
They-give blessing 'may-be-full the-store-house.'

Sāhab dhiyāundē. 10
God they(-are)-worshipping. 10

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

1. The month of Chait has commenced, and showers have fallen. My friends, great is the might of the (Sikh) Government. Kābul and Qandahār tremble before it, and its tents are pitched beyond the Indus.[1]

2. Kharak Singh is a mighty chief. Why art thou sitting at home, forgetting the death (that thou shouldst earn on the battlefield)? He arose in the firmness of his soul, for in the end all must die.

3. After Chait has come the first of the month of Baisākh, and well is the Government pleased. One by one come the glorious elephants. Men receive presents and gifts; and, in the train of the Government, start the troops with their chiefs.

4. There are seated the men of Aṭārī[2]; made to sit are they in seats of honour. Black is the fate before them, money do they give forth, each piece weighing a rupee. No delay show they in their starting.

5. Rānī Jaskaur was born in (Shām Singh's) house. Bashful of eye was she, and very modest. High was her fate written as one of lofty deeds, and (at her birth) trays full of pice were cast away in charity.

6. (The searchers for a husband[3] went forth, saying) 'wisdom comes to one born in Baisākh. A daughter has been born in Shām Singh's house,' as they sought (for a fitting mate for) her betrothal. From the Government did her nurse receive a whole tract of country for her reward.

7. Now the month of Jēṭh has risen, and Prince Kaur Nau Nihāl has mounted the basket.[4] Jointly do his sisters-in-law seize the red cloth, and thereby enhance his beauty. Pleased is the heart of the Rānī Jaskaur, as they invoke good omens.

8. Then became ready the marriage procession, and the Sardār of the Mājhā mounted his horse. All the members of the procession shone like a garden, as they made their steeds curvet through the bazaar. Then the bridegroom donned his sword, and leaped full-armed upon his horse. Glorious indeed then was the procession.[5]

9. Then he bathed, and sat down after putting on his wedding garments. The priest came and applied the tilak-mark to his forehead. His father put on his head the wedding chaplet, and all the bride's playmates sang songs of joy, invoking happy omens.

10. Then became ready the procession (home to the bridegroom's house). Governors of the country round rode in it innumerable. They put on magnificent apparel and were girt with swords, as they scattered to the throng gold coins innumerable. The marriage-menials took them up and became wealthy, while the Musalmān and Hindū mendicants with their families gathered alms in the name of The Great Forgiver. In return they gave blessings, as they worshipped the Almighty, and cried, 'may your storehouse be ever full.'

---

[1] Aṭak, or Attock, is often used to signify the Indus, on which it is situated. Conversely, in the song of Rājā Rasālū he name of the river is employed to signify the city. Sindh tō mērī nagarī; Aṭak hai mērā ṭhāṁ, Indus is my city; and Aṭak is my home.

[2] The name of a village near Amritsar. Aṭārī-wāla is a family name. The Aṭārī-wālē are Shām Singh and his relations.

[3] A lāgī or lāggī is a functionary at a marriage who is entitled to fees. Most of them are menials. Here the gobetweens who arrange the marriage are specially alluded to.

[4] The marriage ceremony of the young couple is being described. At one period the bride and bridegroom sit on a basket and are bathed. Another part of the ceremony consists in the female relations of the bridegroom seizing his cloth, which they refuse to let go till each is given a present.

[5] The order of events is not followed. This procession is that in which the bridegroom comes to the bride's home. On this occasion he comes armed, on horseback, with a small boy, to act as a squire, behind him. This looks like a survival of the old fashion of marriage by capture.

PAÑJĀBĪ OF THE JULLUNDUR DOAB.

The Jullundur Doab, or the country lying between the rivers Beas and Sutlej, includes the two districts of Jullundur and Hoshiarpur and the state of Kapurthala. The Pañjābī of this tract is locally known as Dōābī, but it differs hardly at all from the standard Pañjābī of Ludhiana.

In the hills to the north and east of Hoshiarpur there is a dialect locally called Pahāṛī, which on examination turns out to be nearly the same as ordinary Dōābī, only having a slight admixture of the idioms spoken in the Simla Hill States and in Kangra. The same dialect is spoken in the adjoining Simla Hill States of Kahlur (or Bilaspur) and Mangal, and is there known as Kahlūrī or Bilāspurī. We therefore arrive at the following estimate of the number of speakers of Dōābī in its various forms:—

Ordinary Dōābī—
Jullundur	905,817
Kapurthala	296,976
Hoshiarpur	848,655
		2,051,448
Hosiarpur Pahāṛī	114,540
Kahlūrī of Kahlur	91,700
Kahlūrī of Mangal	1,081
		207,321
TOTAL . .		2,258,769

As a specimen of the ordinary Dōābī, I give a conversation between two villagers received from Hoshiarpur. The following remarks on the few peculiarities of the dialect are mainly based on this specimen, but also on other specimens received from other parts of the Doab.

The spelling is capricious. Thus we have both vich and bich, in; hundā and hōndā, being. The letter y is often inserted after i before another vowel, or else substituted for the i. Thus, hōiā, or hōyā, become; hōndiyã̄, being (fem. plur.). In many cases short i is substituted for long ī, as in hōiã̄ for hōīã̄ (fem. pl.). Cerebral letters are employed capriciously. Thus, baḷd, a bullock, but nāl, not nāḷ, with. So, hōnā, not hōṇā, to be; ānā, to come; bīj"nā, to sow. Double letters at the end of a word are simplified. Thus, vich, not vichch, in, but vichchȭ, from in; gal, not gall, a thing, a word, plur. gallã̄; hath, not hatth, a hand; ghaṭ for ghaṭṭ, decrease.

In kamīn-kān, we have kān used as a sign for the dative. Compare the Lahndā kan. Kuj is 'anything,' not kujh. As in Amritsar, 'these' is inã̄, not inhã̄.

The form haĩ for the first person singular of the present of the verb substantive is peculiar to this part of the Punjab.

Note the contracted form gaiyyã̄, gone (plur. fem.).

The initial consonant of vich, in, is often elided, as in Amritsar and Ludhiana.

[No. 5.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

DIALECT OF JULLUNDUR DOAB. (DISTRICT, HOSHIARPUR.)

ਭਾਨੇ ਤੇ ਵਰਯਾਮੇ ਵਿਚ ਏਹ ਗੱਲਾਂ ਹੁੰਦਿਯਾਂ ਸੀ ॥

ਭਾਨਾ—ਭਾਈ ਦੱਸੋ ਕਿੱਥੋਂ ਆਨਾ ਹੋਯਾ ॥

ਵਰਯਾਮਾ—ਮੁੰਡੇਦੇ ਸੌਹਰਿਆਂ ਵਲ ਗਏ ਸੀ। ਔਥੇ ਇੱਕ ਬਲ੍ਦਦੀ ਵਸ ਪੌਂਦੀ ਸੀ। ਬਲ੍ਦ ਤਾਂ ਚੰਗਾ ਹੈ ਪਰ ਮਾਰ ਖੁੰਡ ਹੈਗਾ। ਓਹਦੇ ਸੋਲਾਯਾਂ ਵਾਂਗ ਸਿੰਗ ਹਨ। ਰੰਗ ਗੋਰਾ। ਦੌਂਦਾ ਹੈ। ਪਰ ਮੁੱਲ ਬੱਡਾ ਮੰਗਦੇ ਹਨ ਚਾਲੀ ਰੁਪੈਏ। ਏਹ ਮੁੱਲ ਖਰਚਨਦੀ ਫੁਰਸਤ ਨਹੀਂ ਹੈ। ਭਾਈ ਕੀ ਕਰਿਯੇ। ਪੈਲੀ ਕੁਜ ਨਾ ਨਿਕਲੀ। ਤਿਨ ਕਨਾਲ ਜਮੀਨ ਬਿੱਚੋਂ ਚਾਰ ਪੂਲਿਆਂ ਹੋਇਆਂ। ਏਹਦੇ ਵਿੱਚੋਂ ਕੀ ਖਾਈਏ ਤੇ ਕੀ ਵਰਤਾਈਏ। ਜੇਹਦੇ ਨਾਲ ਕਮੀਨ ਕਾਨ ਬੀ ਬਰੋ ਨਹੀਂ ਸਾਨੇ। ਓਹ ਗਲ ਹੋਈ।

ਗਾਂਉਂਦੀਦਾ ਸੰਘ ਪਾਟਾ।
ਪੱਲੇ ਨ ਪਿਯਾ ਸੇਰ ਆਟਾ।
ਕਰਮ ਹੀਨ ਖੇਤੀ ਕਰੇ।
ਬਲ੍ਦ ਮਰੇ ਟੋਟਾ ਪੜੇ।

ਛੇ ਮਹੀਨੇ ਮਰ ਭਰਕੇ ਇਨਾਂ ਚਾਰ ਪੂਲਿਆਂਦਾ ਮੂੰਹ ਦੇਖਿਆ। ਪਾਣੀ ਸਿੰਜਦਿ ਯਾਂਦੇ ਹਥ ਅੰਬ ਗਏ ਤਾਂ ਸੰਘਾ ਬੈਹ ਗਿਯਾ। ਅੱਗੇ ਰਬਦੀ ਕੀ ਮਰਜੀ ਹੋਈ ਹੈ। ਇਕ ਗਰੀਬੀ ਦੂਜੀ ਬਰਖੁਰਦਾਰੀ। ਜੇ ਪੂਲਿਯਾਂ ਥੋੜਿਯਾਂ ਸੀ, ਤਾਂ ਝਾੜ ਬੀ ਘਟ ਝੜਿਆ ਦਾਨਾ ਪਤਲਾ ਹੈ। ਖਬਰਾ ਦਾਨਿਯਾਂਨੂੰ ਕੀ ਹੋਇਆ। ਰਬਦਿਆਂ ਗੱਲਾਂ ਲਖਿਯਾਂ ਨਹੀਂ ਜਾਂਦਿਆਂ। ਭਾਨਾ ਭਾਈ ਫੱਗਣ ਮਹੀਨੇ ਜੇਹੜਾ ਝੋਲਾ ਵੱਗਿਆ ਸੀ। ਓਹਦੇ ਨਾਲ ਕਣਕਾਂ ਪਤਲਿਆਂ ਪੈ ਗੈਯੋਂ। ਕਣਕਾਂ ਕੀ ਕਰਨ ਜਦ ਉੱਪਰਲਾ ਚੁਪਕਰ ਬੈਠਾ। ਜਦਦੀ ਹਾੜੀ ਬੀਜੀ ਤਦਦੀ ਓਹਨੇ ਕੁਜ ਖਬਰ ਜਿਮੀਦਾਰਾਂਦੀ ਨਾ ਲਿੱਤੀ ਕਿ ਜਿੰਦੇ ਹਨ ਕਿ ਮਰ ਗਏ। ਮੀਂਹ ਬਿਨਾ ਕੁਜ ਨਹੀਂ ਹੋ ਸਕਦਾ। ਇੱਕ ਕਮਾਊਦੀ ਕਮਾਈ ਬਿਨਾ ਬਰਕਤ ਨਹੀਂ ਹੁੰਦੀ। ਦੂਜੇ ਕਣਕਦੇ ਪਤਲਾ ਹੋਨੇਦੀ ਏਹ ਬੀ ਗਲ ਹੈ ਕਿ ਬਾਬੇ ਬੁਡਢੇਦੇ ਪੈਨ ਤੋਂ ਹਲਦੀ ਬਾਹੀ ਘਟ ਹੋਈ। ਭਾਈ ਕਣਕ ਤਾਂ ਚੰਗੀ ਹੁੰਦੀ ਜੇ ਕਰ ਬਾਹੀ ਖਰੀ ਹੁੰਦੀ। ਬਾਰਾਂ ਸੀਵਾਂ ਬਾਹ ਕੇ ਦੇਖ ਕਣਕਦਾ ਝਾੜ। ਜਿਯੋਂ ਜਿਯੋਂ ਬਾਹੈ ਕਣਕਨੂੰ ਤਿਯੋਂ ਤਿਯੋਂ ਦੇਵੇ ਸਵਾਦ ॥

ਕਣਕ ਕਮਾਦੀ ਸੰਘਨੀ ਭਾਂਗੋ ਭਾਂਗ ਕਪਾਹ ।
ਕੰਬਲਦਾ ਝੁੰਬ ਮਾਰਕੇ ਛੱਲਿਆਂ ਇੱਚੀ ਜਾਹ ॥

ਸੋ ਭਾਈ ਕਣਕਦਾ ਬਾਹਨਾ ਬੀਜਨਾ ਔਖਾ ਹੈ। ਜੇਕਰ ਬਾਹੀ ਬੀਜੀ ਦੇਗੀ ਜਾਵੇ ਤਾਂ ਝਾੜ ਬੀ ਅੱਛਾ ਹੋਂਦਾ ਹੈ ਤੇ ਕਣਕ ਬੀ ਮੋਟੀ ਹੋਂਦੀ ਹੈ॥

[No. 5.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

DIALECT OF JULLUNDUR DOAB. (DISTRICT, HOSHIARPUR.)

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Bhānē tē Waryāmē-vich ēh gallã̄ hundiyã̄-sī.
Bhānā and Waryāmā-between these words becoming-were.

Bhānā. Bhāī, dassō kitthõ ānā hōyā.
Bhānā. Brother, tell whence coming became.

Waryāmā. Muṇḍēdē sauhriã̄-wal gaē-sī. Authē ikk Waryāmā. Son-of father-in-law's-house-to gone-I-was. There one baḷddī das põdī-sī. Baḷd tã̄ chaṅgā hai, par bullock-of existence told-was. The-bullock indeed good is, but mār-khuṇḍ haigā. Ōhdē sōlāyã̄ wãg siṅg han, raṅg gōrā, addicted-to-goring is. It-of needles like horns are, colour light, dõdā hai. Par mull baḍḍā maṅgdē han. Chālī rupaiē.
two-toothed is. But price great asking they-are. Forty rupees.
Ēh mull kharchandī phursat nahĩ hai. Bhāī, kī kariyē?
This price spending-of power not is. Brother, what may-we-do?
Pailī kuj nā niklī. Tin kanāl jamīn bichchõ chār Crop anything not came-out. Three kanāls land from-in four pūliã̄ hōiã̄. Ēhdē vichchõ kī khāiē tē kī bundles became. This-of from-in what may-we-eat and what wartāiē, jēhdē nāl kamīn-kān bī barō nahĩ sānē?
may-we-distribute, which-of with the-labourers-to even food not suffices?
Ōh gal hōī,
That word is,

'gã̄undīdā saṅgh pāṭā,
'singing-woman-of the-throat burst,
'Pallē na piyā sēr āṭā.
'in-the-scarf not fell a-seer flour.
'Karam hīn khētī karē.
'Good-luck devoid-of cultivation one-does.
'Baḷd marē. Ṭōṭā paṛē.'
'Bullock dies. Scarcity falls.'

Chhē mahīnē mar-bhar-kē inã̄ chār pūliãdā mũh dēkhiā.
Six months died-having these four bundles-of face was-seen.

Pāṇī siñjdiyãdē hath amb-gaē, tã saṅghā baih-giyā.
Water irrigating-of hands chafed-went, and throat hoarse-went.

Aggē Rabdī kī marjī hōī? Ik garībī, dūjī
Moreover God-of what will happened? First poverty, second bar-khurdārī. Jē pūliyã thōṛiyã sī, tã jhāṛ calamity. What bundles few there-were, then the-produce

bī ghaṭ jhaṛiā. Dānā patlā hai. Khabrā dāniyãnũ even less was-produced. The-grain scanty is. News grain-to kī hōiā? Rabdiã gallã lakhiyã nahĩ jāndiã. Bhānā, bhāī, what happened? God-of things known not (are) going. Bhānā, brother,

Phaggaṇ mahīnē jēhṛā jhōlā waggiā-sī, ōhdē nāl kaṇkã patliã Phālguna in-month what blast blown-had, that-of with the-wheats scanty pai-gaiyyã. Kaṇkã kī karan, jad Uppar-lā chup-kar baiṭhā.

became. The-wheats what can-do, when The-One-above silently is-seated.

Jad-dī hāṛī bījī, tad-dī ōhnē kuj khabar
Since the-spring-crop was-sown, since-then Him-by any heed jimīdārãdī nā littī, ki jindē-han, ki mar-gaē. Mĩh the-cultivators-of not was-taken, that living-they-are, or they-died. Rain binā kuj nahĩ hō-sakdā. Ikk, kamāūdī kamāī binã barkat without anything not can-be-done. One, earner-of earnings without blessing nahĩ hundī. Dūjē, kaṇakdē patlā hōnēdī ēh bī gal not (is-)becoming. Secondly, wheat-of thin becoming-of this also thing hai, ki bābē buḍḍhēdē pain-tõ haldī bāhī ghaṭ is, that grandfather old-of sickness-from plough-of ploughing insufficient

hōī. Bhāī, kaṇak tã chaṅgī hundī, jĕ-kar bāhī became. Brother, wheat indeed good would-have-been, if ploughing

kharī hundī. Bārã sīwã bāh-kē, dēkh kaṇakdā jhāṛ.
thorough had-been. Twelve times ploughed-having, see wheat-of outturn.

Jiyõ-jiyõ bāhai kaṇaknũ, tiyõ-tiyõ dēwē sawād.
As-as one-ploughs wheat-to, so-so it-gives flavour.

'Kaṇak kamādī saṅghnī, ḍãgō-ḍãg kapāh.
'Wheat sugarcane thick, stick-by-stick cotton.

'Kambaldā jhumb mār-kē, chhalliã bichchī jāh.'
'Blanket-of cowl struck-having, maize among go.'

Sō, bhāī, kaṇakdā bāhnā bījnā aukhā hai. Jē-kar
So, brother, wheat-of ploughing sowing difficult is. If bāhī bījī chaṅgī jāwē, tã jhāṛ bī achchhā hōndā-hai, tē ploughing sowing good go, then the-outturn also good becoming-is, and kaṇak bī mōṭī hōndī-hai.

wheat also dense becoming-is.

[No. 5.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

DIALECT OF JULLUNDUR DOAB. (DISTRICT, HOSHIARPUR.)

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Bhānē tē Waryāmē-vich ēh gallã̄ hundiyã̄-sī.
Bhānā and Waryāmā-between these words becoming-were.

Bhānā. Bhāī, dassō kitthō ānā hōyā.
Bhānā. Brother, tell whence coming became.

Waryāmā. Muṇḍēdē sauhriã̄-wal gaē-sī. Authē ikk Waryāmā. Son-of father-in-law's-house-to gone-I-was. There one baḷddī das põdī-sī. Baḷd tã̄ chaṅgā hai, par
bullock-of existence told-was. The-bullock indeed good is, but mār-khuṇḍ haigā. Ōhdē sōlāyã̄ wã̄g siṅg han, raṅg gōrā, addicted-to-goring is. It-of needles like horns are, colour light, dõdā hai. Par mull baḍḍā maṅgdē han. Chālī rupaiē.
two-toothed is. But price great asking they-are. Forty rupees.
Ēh mull kharchandī phursat nahĩ hai. Bhāī, kī kariyē?
This price spending-of power not is. Brother, what may-we-do?
Pailī kuj nā niklī. Tin kanāl jamīn bichchõ chār Crop anything not came-out. Three kanāls land from-in four pūliã̄ hōiã̄. Ēhdē vichchõ kī khāiē tē kī bundles became. This-of from-in what may-we-eat and what wartāiē, jēhdē nāl kamīn-kān bī barō nahĩ sānē?
may-we-distribute, which-of with the-labourers-to even food not suffices?
Ōh gal hōī,
That word is,

'gã̄undīdā saṅgh pāṭā,
'singing-woman-of the-throat burst,
'Pallē na piyā sēr āṭā.
'in-the-scarf not fell a-seer flour.
'Karam hīn khētī karē.
'Good-luck devoid-of cultivation one-does.
'Baḷd marē. Ṭōṭā paṛē.'
'Bullock dies. Scarcity falls.'

Chhē mahīnē mar-bhar-kē inã̄ chār pūliã̄dā mũh dēkhiā.
Six months died-having these four bundles-of face was-seen.

Pāṇī siñjdiyā̃dē hath amb-gaē, tā̃ saṅghā baih-giyā.
Water irrigating-of hands chafed-went, and throat hoarse-went.

Aggē Rabdī kī marjī hōī? Ik garībī, dūjī
Moreover God-of what will happened? First poverty, second bar-khurdārī. Jē pūliyā̃ thōṛiyā̃ sī, tā̃ jhāṛ calamity. What bundles few there-were, then the-produce bī ghaṭ jhaṛiā. Dānā patlā hai. Khabrā dāniyā̃nū̃ even less was-produced. The-grain scanty is. News grain-to kī hōiā? Rabdiā̃ gallā̃ lakhiyā̃ nahī̃ jāndiā̃. Bhānā, bhāī, what happened? God-of things known not (are) going. Bhānā, brother, Phaggaṇ mahīnē jēhṛā jhōlā waggiā-sī, ōhdē nāl kaṇkā̃ patliā̃
Phālguna in-month what blast blown-had, that-of with the-wheats scanty pai-gaiyyā̃. Kaṇkā̃ kī karan, jad Uppar-lā chup-kar baiṭhā.
became. The-wheats what can-do, when The-One-above silently is-seated.

Jad-dī hāṛī bījī, tad-dī ōhnē kuj khabar
Since the-spring-crop was-sown, since-then Him-by any heed jimīdārā̃dī nā littī, ki jindē-han, ki mar-gaē. Mī̃h the-cultivators-of not was-taken, that living-they-are, or they-died. Rain binā kuj nahī̃ hō-sakdā. Ikk, kamāūdī kamāī binā̃ barkat without anything not can-be-done. One, earner-of earnings without blessing nahī̃ hundī. Dūjē, kaṇakdē patlā hōnēdī ēh bī gal not (is-)becoming. Secondly, wheat-of thin becoming-of this also thing hai, ki bābē buḍḍhēdē pain-tō̃ haldī bāhī ghaṭ is, that grandfather old-of sickness-from plough-of ploughing insufficient hōī. Bhāī, kaṇak tā̃ chaṅgī hundī, jē-kar bāhī became. Brother, wheat indeed good would-have-been, if ploughing kharī hundī. Bārā̃ sīwā̃ bāh-kē, dēkh kaṇakdā jhāṛ.
thorough had-been. Twelve times ploughed-having, see wheat-of outturn.
Jiyō̃-jiyō̃ bāhai kaṇaknū̃, tiyō̃-tiyō̃ dēwē sawād.
As-as one-ploughs wheat-to, so-so it-gives flavour.

'Kaṇak kamādī saṅghnī, ḍā̃gō-ḍā̃g kapāh.
'Wheat sugarcane thick, stick-by-stick cotton.

'Kambaldā jhumb mār-kē, chhalliā̃ bichchī jāh.'
'Blanket-of cowl struck-having, maize among go.'

Sō, bhāī, kaṇakdā bāhnā bījnā aukhā hai. Jē-kar
So, brother, wheat-of ploughing sowing difficult is. If bāhī bījī chaṅgī jāwē, tā̃ jhāṛ bī achchhā hōndā-hai, tē ploughing sowing good go, then the-outturn also good becoming-is, and kaṇak bī mōṭī hōndī-hai.
wheat also dense becoming-is.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

A CONVERSATION BETWEEN BHĀNĀ AND WARYĀMĀ.

Bhānā.—Brother, where have you come from ?

Waryāmā.—I am coming from the house of my son's father-in-law. I had heard of a bullock there which I thought would suit me. It is a good beast but is apt to gore people. Its horns are like needles, its colour light, and its teeth two in number. But they are asking too much for it. They want forty rupees, and I can't afford to spend that amount of money. Brother, in these hard times how could I ? The crop failed. From three kanāls[1] of land I only got four bundles altogether. What is there in that for us to eat and to pay our labourers ? Why, there is not even enough for the cost of cutting it. It's like the proverb—

'the singer sings till her throat bursts, and not a seer of flour falls into her outstretched scarf. When a cultivator loses his luck, his bullocks die, and he gets a scarcity on the top of it.'

I killed myself working for six months, and then all I see is the face of these four bundles. My hands are chafed and my throat is hoarse from the labour of irrigating. Yet what was God's will ? First poverty, then calamity. Even the few bundles I did reap had hardly any grain in them. I don't know what came of the grain, for it's beyond me to understand God's ways. Brother Bhānā, that cold blast in Phālgun made the wheat unproductive. What could the poor grains do, when the One above sits silently, and does nothing to protect them. Ever since we sowed the spring crop, He hasn't cared whether the cultivators were living or dead. In the first place there is no blessing on the earnings of those who have worked so hard, and in the second place the wheat has been thin because we had not enough hands to plough on account of my old grandfather's illness. The wheat would have been a fine crop, if it had had a thorough ploughing. Just see the outturn when you plough your wheat twelve times. The more you plough it, the better the flavour. You know the old proverb—

'Sow your wheat and sugarcane thick, and your cotton a stick's distance between each plant. But maize must be so far apart that a man with a blanket cowl on his head can walk through it without touching it.'

So, brother, the ploughing and sowing of wheat is a difficult job. If the ploughing and sowing is good, the outturn will be good, and the crop of wheat will be a dense one.

---

[1] a local land measure equivalent to 435·5 square yards.

KAHLŪRĪ OR BILĀSPURĪ.

The languages of most of the Simla Hill States are various forms of Western Pahāṛī. The most western states are Kahlur, Mangal, Nalagarh, and Mailog. In the west of the two latter states the language is Pōwādhī Pañjābī, and will be dealt with under that head. The dialect of their eastern parts is Haṇḍūrī Pahāṛī. The dialect of the states of Kahlur and Mangal is called Kahlūrī or Bilāspurī (Bilāspur being the chief town of Kahlur). Kahlur lies immediately to the east of the Hoshiarpur District. In the adjoining hilly part of that district a dialect is spoken which is locally called Pahāṛī. It is the same as Kahlūrī.[1]

Kahlūrī has hitherto been described as a form of Western Pahāṛī. An examination of the specimen will show that this is not the case. It is simply a rude Pañjābī, similar to that spoken in Hoshiarpur. The estimated number of its speakers is as follows:—

Kahlur State	91,700
Mangal State	1,081
Hoshiarpur District	114,540
TOTAL .	207,321

It is unnecessary to give full specimens of this dialect. A few sentences from a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son, given in transliteration, will show its character.

[1] Towards the North-East of Hoshiarpur, the dialect rather approaches that of Kangra. Thus it has the Kangra dative postposition jō.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

A CONVERSATION BETWEEN BHĀNĀ AND WARYĀMĀ.

Bhānā.—Brother, where have you come from ?

Waryāmā.—I am coming from the house of my son's father-in-law. I had heard of a bullock there which I thought would suit me. It is a good beast but is apt to gore people. Its horns are like needles, its colour light, and its teeth two in number. But they are asking too much for it. They want forty rupees, and I can't afford to spend that amount of money. Brother, in these hard times how could I ? The crop failed. From three kanāls[1] of land I only got four bundles altogether. What is there in that for us to eat and to pay our labourers ? Why, there is not even enough for the cost of cutting it. It's like the proverb—

'the singer sings till her throat bursts, and not a seer of flour falls into her outstretched scarf. When a cultivator loses his luck, his bullocks die, and he gets a scarcity on the top of it.'

I killed myself working for six months, and then all I see is the face of these four bundles. My hands are chafed and my throat is hoarse from the labour of irrigating. Yet what was God's will ? First poverty, then calamity. Even the few bundles I did reap had hardly any grain in them. I don't know what came of the grain, for it's beyond me to understand God's ways. Brother Bhānā, that cold blast in Phālgun made the wheat unproductive. What could the poor grains do, when the One above sits silently, and does nothing to protect them. Ever since we sowed the spring crop, He hasn't cared whether the cultivators were living or dead. In the first place there is no blessing on the earnings of those who have worked so hard, and in the second place the wheat has been thin because we had not enough hands to plough on account of my old grandfather's illness. The wheat would have been a fine crop, if it had had a thorough ploughing. Just see the outturn when you plough your wheat twelve times. The more you plough it, the better the flavour. You know the old proverb—

'Sow your wheat and sugarcane thick, and your cotton a stick's distance between each plant. But maize must be so far apart that a man with a blanket cowl on his head can walk through it without touching it.'

So, brother, the ploughing and sowing of wheat is a difficult job. If the ploughing and sowing is good, the outturn will be good, and the crop of wheat will be a dense one.

---

[1] A kanāl is a local land measure equivalent to 435·5 square yards.

KAHLŪRĪ OR BILĀSPURĪ.

The languages of most of the Simla Hill States are various forms of Western Pahāṛī. The most western states are Kahlur, Mangal, Nalagarh, and Mailog. In the west of the two latter states the language is Pōwādhī Pañjābī, and will be dealt with under that head. The dialect of their eastern parts is Haṇḍūrī Pahāṛī. The dialect of the states of Kahlur and Mangal is called Kahlūrī or Bilāspurī (Bilāspur being the chief town of Kahlur). Kahlur lies immediately to the east of the Hoshiarpur District. In the adjoining hilly part of that district a dialect is spoken which is locally called Pahāṛī. It is the same as Kahlūrī.[1]

Kahlūrī has hitherto been described as a form of Western Pahāṛī. An examination of the specimen will show that this is not the case. It is simply a rude Pañjābī, similar to that spoken in Hoshiarpur. The estimated number of its speakers is as follows:—

Kahlur State	91,700
Mangal State	1,081
Hoshiarpur District	114,540
TOTAL	207,321

It is unnecessary to give full specimens of this dialect. A few sentences from a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son, given in transliteration, will show its character.

[1] Towards the North-East of Hoshiarpur, the dialect rather approaches that of Kangra. Thus it has the Kangra dative postposition jō.

[No. 6.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

KAHLŪRĪ DIALECT. (MANGAL STATE, DISTRICT SIMLA.)

Ēkī mānũdē dō putt thē. Lauhkē puttē apṇē
One man-of two sons were. By-the-younger son his-own buḍḍhēnõ galāyā, 'jō jādād mērē baṇḍē āõdī, sō father-to it-was-said, 'what property on-my share comes, that mannõ dēī-dē.' Tinē sō jādād apṇē duī puttãnũ me-to give.' By-him that property his-own two sons-to baṇḍī dittī. Jadē lauhkē puttē apṇā baṇḍā having-divided was-given. When by-the-younger son his-own share lai-līā, tã dūr pardēsãnũ chalī-gayā. Ūthī jāī-kē was-taken, then a-far foreign-country-to he-went-away. There having-gone tinē apṇī jādād hē-arath gãwāī-dittī. Jad ō sārī jādādã by-him his-own property uselessly was-lost. When he the-whole property gãwāī baiṭhā, tã ūs mulakhdē-bich baṛā kāl payā, having-wasted sat, then that country-of-in a-great famine fell, ō baṛā kangāl hōī-gayā. Tã ō ūs mulakhdē raihnēwālēdē kanē he very poor became. Then he that country-of inhabitant-of near raihṇē lagā, tinē apṇī jimīnã-bich usnũ sūrãnũ chārnē bhējā.
to-live began, by-him his-own fields-in him-to swine-to to-graze it-was-sent.
Sō sūrãdī khurākdē bachḛ-hūē saṭkã-kanē apṇā pēṭ bhardā-thā,
He the-swine-of food-of remaining husks-with his-own belly filling-was,
tis-nũ hōr kōī kichh nā dḛ̃dā-thā.
him-to other anyone anything not giving-was.

PŌWĀDHĪ.

The word 'Pōwādh' means 'East,' and Pōwādhī Pañjābī is the Pañjābī spoken in that portion of the Eastern Punjab known as the Pōwādh.

From Rupar in the Umballa District up to its junction with the Beas, the river Sutlej runs nearly east and west. To its north lies the Jullundur Dōāb. To its south lie the Districts of Ludhiana and Ferozepore. The whole of the latter district, and the greater portion of the former are included in the tract known as the Mālwā, but that part of Ludhiana which lies near the river is known as the Pōwādh. The Pōwādh extends much further east. In Umballa, it reaches as far, speaking roughly, as the river Ghaggar, beyond which the language is Hindōstānī. To the south it occupies those parts of the states of Patiala, Nabha and Jind which lie east of, say, the 76th degree of east longitude, up to the country in which Hindōstānī and Bāṅgarū are spoken. This tract also includes a few outlying portions of the Hissar District. The Musalmān Pachhāḍās who live along the banks of the Ghaggar where it runs through this area speak another dialect of Pañjābī known as Rāṭhī, which will be dealt with separately.

South of this tract lies the District of Hissar, the main languages of which are Bāṅgarū and Bāgṛī. Only along the Ghaggar, and in a part of the Sirsa Taḥṣīl do we find Pañjābī. With the above exceptions the country to the west of the 76th degree of east longitude, as far as the combined Sutlej and Beas, is known either as the Mālwā, or as the Jaṅgal (i.e. backwoods), which has a dialect of its own entitled Mālwāī, that will be described in due course.

We may estimate the number of speakers of Pōwādhī Pañjābī as follows :—

Hissar	148,352
Umballa	337,123
Kalsia State	18,933
Nalagarh State (western half)	39,545
Mailog State (western half)	3,193
Patiala State	837,000
Jind State	13,000
TOTAL	1,397,146

The figures for Kalsia refer to speakers near Dera Bassi, within the boundaries of the Umballa District. Nalagarh and Mailog are two of the Simla Hill States which lie close to Umballa District. Pañjābī is spoken in their western portions. In their eastern areas the language is the Haṇḍūrī form of Western Pahāṛī.

As might be expected, Pōwādhī differs from the standard Pañjābī of Amritsar mainly in approaching the dialects of Western Hindī spoken in East Umballa and in Karnal. The further east we go the more and more infected with Hindōstānī or Bāṅgarū does it become. As usual there is no distinct line between them, the languages insensibly merging into each other. The most western Pōwādhī—that spoken in the Pōwādh tract of Ludhiana—is almost the same as the standard, and has indeed served as a foundation for most of the grammars of the language, rather than the Pañjābī of Amritsar. No special examples of this form of Pōwādhī are necessary.

For Pōwādhī I give two specimens from Thana Kularan in the Jind state, the first being a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son, and the second a folktale. I also give a folktale from West Umballa, written in the Dēva-nāgarī character, and another from Thana Karamgarh in the state of Patiala, written in the Persian character. On pp. 806 ff. will be found a List of Words and Sentences from Umballa. These specimens illustrate very fairly the variations which Pañjābī undergoes in the Pōwādh tract.

Most of these are due to the influence of the neighbouring Western Hindī. Such are the occasional use of words like āgē instead of aggē, before, and of kahnā instead of ākhṇā, to say. So also we have the substitution of m for w between two vowels, as in āmãgā for āwãgā, I will come.

We find (as in Western Hindī dialects and in Rājasthānī), the locative of the genitive employed to form a dative, as in īhdē pāō, put on (pāo) to him (īhdē).

In pronouns, we find the forms hamãnũ, to us; tumãnũ, to you, alongside of the true Pañjābī forms; and the genitive of the reflexive pronoun is apṇā, not āpṇā. Jad is used for both 'then' and 'when,' exactly as in the dialects of Western Hindī and as in Rājasthānī.

In verbs, thā is more common for 'he was' than sī, though both are used. The first person plural sometimes ends in the Western Hindī aĩ, instead of in ã. Thus, hōwaĩ, let us become; chhakaĩ, let us eat.

Other peculiarities not so directly traceable to the influence of Western Hindī are the following. The insertion of an aspirate in bhalad (Patiala), an ox. The use of the neuter (occasionally also found in standard Pañjābī) in words like chummiã, it was kissed. The pronunciation of vichch, in, as bichch. The frequent dropping of the first syllable of this word as in khūhchō̃ for khūh-bichchō̃, from in the well; unhãchō̃, from among them. In pronouns, the occasional employment of tōhāḍā for 'your,' and of ōh, for the oblique form singular of the third personal pronoun. Also the frequent transposition of an aspirate, as in unhũ, for uhnũ, to them; ōdhā, for ōhdā, of him; īdhā, for īhdā, of this; jēṛhā, for jēhṛā, who.

In the verb substantive the 2nd plural of the present tense is often ō, for hō, you are.

[No. 7.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

PŌWĀDHĪ DIALECT. (THĀNĀ KULARAN, JIND STATE.)

SPECIMEN I.

ਇੱਕ ਮਨੁੱਖਦੇ ਦੋ ਪੁੱਤ ਥੇ। ਉਨ੍ਹਾਂਚੋਂ ਲੌਂਢੇਨੇ ਪੇਓਨੂੰ ਆਖਿਆ ਕਿ ਓ ਪੇਓ ਮਾਲਦਾ ਹਿੱਸਾ ਜੋ ਮੈਂਨੂੰ ਪਹੁੰਚਦਾ ਹੈ ਮੈਂਨੂੰ ਦੇ। ਜਦ ਓਹਨੇ ਮਾਲ ਉਨ੍ਹਾਂਨੂੰ ਬੰਡ ਦਿੱਤਾ। ਥੋੜੇ ਦਿਨਾਂ ਬਿੱਚੋਂ ਲੌਂਢੇ ਪੁੱਤਨੇ ਸਾਰਾ ਕੱਠਾ ਕਰਕੇ ਇੱਕ ਦੂਰਦੇ ਦੇਸਦਾ ਪੈਂਡਾ ਕਰਿਆ ਔਰ ਉੱਥੇ ਅਪਣਾ ਮਾਲ ਬਿਕਰਮੀ ਬਿੱਚ ਖੋਇਆ। ਔਰ ਜਦ ਸਾਰਾ ਗੁਮਾ ਚੁੱਕਾ ਉਸ ਦੇਸ ਬਿੱਚ ਬੜਾ ਮੰਦਵਾੜਾ ਪਿਆ ਓਹ ਕੰਗਾਲ ਹੋਣੇ ਲੱਗਿਆ। ਜਦ ਉਸ ਦੇਸਦੇ ਦਿੱਕ ਰਾਜੇਦੇ ਜਾ ਲੱਗਿਆ। ਓਹਨੇ ਓਹਨੂੰ ਖੇਤਾਂ ਬਿੱਚ ਸੂਰ ਚਾਰਣ ਭੇਜਾ ਔਰ ਓਹਨੂੰ ਆਸ ਥੀ ਕਿ ਇਨ ਛਿਲਕ ਤੇ ਜੋ ਸੂਰ ਖਾਂਦੇ ਹਨ ਅਪਣਾ ਢਿੱਡ ਭਰੇ, ਕੋਈ ਉਸਨੂੰ ਨ ਦਿੰਦਾ ਥਾ। ਜੋ ਸੋਝੀ ਬਿੱਚ ਆ ਕੇ ਕਹਾ—ਮੇਰੇ ਪੇਓਦੇ ਬਹੁਤੇ ਮਿਹਨਤੀਆਂਨੂੰ ਬਾਲ੍ਹੀ ਹੋਟੀ ਹੈ, ਔਰ ਮੈਂ ਭੁੱਖਾ ਮਰਦਾ ਹਾਂ। ਮੈਂ ਉੱਠਕੇ ਅਪਣੇ ਪੇਓ ਕੋਲੇ ਜਾਊਂਗਾ ਔਰ ਉਨ੍ਹੂੰ ਕਹੂੰਗਾ ਓ ਪੇਓ ਮੈਨੇ ਰੱਬਦਾ ਤੇਰੇ ਕੋਲ ਬੁਰਾ ਕਰਿਆ ਹੈ। ਹੋਰ ਹਣ ਇਸ ਲੈਕ ਨਹੀਂ ਜੋ ਫਿਰ ਤੇਰਾ ਪੁੱਤ ਕਹਾਊਂ ਮੈਂਨੂੰ ਅਪਣੇ ਮਿਹਣਤੀਆਂ ਬਿੱਚੋਂ ਇੱਕਦੇ ਬਰਾਬਰ ਕਰ। ਫਿਰ ਉੱਠਕੇ ਅਪਣੇ ਪੇਓ ਕੋਲ ਚੱਲਿਆ। ਓਹ ਅੱਜੇ ਦੂਰ ਥਾ ਓਹਨੂੰ ਦੇਖਕੇ ਓਹਦੇ ਪੇਓਨੂੰ ਤਰਸ ਆਇਆ ਹੋਰ ਭੱਜਕੇ ਓਹਨੂੰ ਗਲ ਲਾ ਲਿਆ ਹੋਰ ਬਾਲ੍ਹਾ ਚੁੱਮਿਆਂ। ਪੁੱਤਨੇ ਓਹਨੂੰ ਕਹਾ ਓ ਪੇਓ ਮੈਂਨੇ ਰੱਬਦਾ ਤੇਰੇ ਕੋਲ ਬੁਰਾ ਕਰਿਆ, ਹੋਰ ਹੁਣ ਇਸ ਲੈਕ ਨਹੀਂ ਜੋ ਫਿਰ ਤੇਰਾ ਪੁੱਤ ਕਹਾਊਂ। ਪੇਓਨੇ ਅਪਣੇ ਨੌਕਰਾਂਨੂੰ ਕਹਾ, ਚੰਗੇ ਤੇ ਚੰਗੇ ਕਪੜੇ ਕੱਢ ਲਿਆਓ, ਇਹਦੇ ਪਾਓ। ਹੋਰ ਈਧੇ ਹੱਥ ਬਿੱਚ ਛਾਪ, ਹੋਰ ਪੈਰਾਂ ਬਿੱਚ ਜੁੱਤੇ ਪਾਓ, ਹੋਰ ਅਸੀਂ ਛਕੇ ਹੋਰ ਖੁਸੀ ਹੋਵੇਂ ਕਿਉਂਕਰ ਮੇਰਾ ਏਹ ਪੁੱਤ ਮਰ ਗਿਆ ਥਾ ਹੁਣ ਜੀਵਿਆ ਹੈ, ਖੋਇਆ ਗਿਆ ਥਾ ਹਣ ਮਿਲਿਆ ਹੈ। ਫਿਰ ਓਹ ਖੁਸੀ ਕਰਨ ਲੱਗੇ॥

ਓਹਦਾ ਬੜਾ ਪੁੱਤ ਖੇਤ ਬਿੱਚ ਥਾ। ਜਦ ਘਰਦੇ ਨੇੜੇ ਆਇਆ, ਗਾਂਉਂਦੇ ਹੋਰ ਨੱਚਦਿਆਂਦੀ ਅਬਾਜ ਸੁਣੀ। ਫਿਰ ਇੱਕ ਨੌਕਰਨੂੰ ਬੁਲਾ ਕੇ ਪੁਛਿਆ, ਇਹ ਕੀ ਹੈ। ਓਹਨੇ ਓਹਨੂੰ ਕਹਾ, ਤੇਰਾ ਭਾਈ ਆਇਆ ਹੈ, ਹੋਰ ਤੇਰੇ ਪੇਓਨੇ ਬੜੀ ਰੋਟੀ ਕਰੀ ਹੈ, ਕਿਸ ਬਾਸਤੇ ਜੋ ਓਹਨੂੰ ਭਲਾ ਚੰਗਾ ਥਿਆਇਆ। ਓਹਨੇ ਗੁੱਸੇ ਹੋਕੇ ਨ ਚਾਹਾ ਜੋ ਅੰਦਰ ਜਾਵੇ। ਫਿਰ ਓਹਦੇ ਪੇਓਨੇ ਬਾਹਰ ਆਕੇ ਓਹਨੂੰ ਮਨਾਇਆ। ਓਹਨੇ ਪੇਓ ਤੇ ਜਬਾਬ ਦਿੱਤਾ

ਦੇਗਾਂ ਇਤਨੇ ਬਰ੍ਹੇ ਤੇ ਮੈਂ ਤੇਰੀ ਟੈਹਲ ਕਰਦਾ ਹਾਂ, ਔਰ ਕਦੇ ਤੇਰੇ ਕਹਣੇਦੇ ਬਾਹਰ ਨਹੀਂ ਚੱਲਾ, ਪਰ ਤੈਂ ਕਦੇ ਬੱਕਰੀਦਾ ਮੇਮਨਾ ਮੈਨੂੰ ਨਹੀਂ ਦਿੱਤਾ, ਜੋ ਅਪਣੇ ਮਿਤਰਾਂਦੇ ਨਾਲ ਖੁਸੀ ਮਨਾਵਾਂ, ਹੋਰ ਜਦ ਤੇਰਾ ਏਹ ਪੁੱਤ ਆਇਆ, ਜਿਹਨੇ ਤੇਰਾ ਮਾਲ ਕੰਜਰੀਆਂ ਬਿੱਚ ਖੋਇਆ, ਤੈਂ ਓਦੇ ਬਾਸਤੇ ਬੜੀ ਰੋਟੀ ਕਰੀ, ਓਹਨੇ ਓਹਨੂੰ ਕਹਾ, ਓ ਪੁੱਤ ਤੂ ਨਿਤ ਮੇਰੇ ਕੋਲ ਹੈ, ਹੋਰ ਜੇੜ੍ਹਾ ਮੇਰਾ ਹੈ ਓਹ ਤੇਰਾ ਹੈ। ਫਿਰ ਖੁਸੀ ਹੋਣਾ ਔਰ ਖੁਸ ਹੋਣਾ ਚਾਹੀਏ ਥਾ, ਕਿਉਂਕਰ ਤੇਰਾ ਭਾਈ ਮਰ ਗਿਆ ਥਾ ਹੁਣ ਜੀਵਿਆ ਹੈ, ਹੋਰ ਖੋਇਆ ਗਿਆ ਥਾ ਹੁਣ ਥਿਆਇਆ ਹੈ ॥

[No: 7.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

PŌWĀDHĪ DIALECT. (THĀNĀ KULARAN, JIND STATE.)

SPECIMEN I.

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ikk manukkhdē dō putt thē. Unhãchõ lauḍhēnē pēōnũ
One man-of two sons were. Them-in-from the-younger-by the-father-to ākhiā ki, 'ō pēō, māldā hissā jō maĩ-nũ pahũchdāit-was-said that, 'O father, the-property-of share which me-to arrivinghai, maĩnũ dē.' Jad ōhnē māl unhãnũ baṇḍ is, me-to give.' Then him-by the-property them-to having-divided dittā. Thōṛē dinã-bichchõ lauḍhē puttnē sārā kaṭṭhā karwas-given. A-few days-from-within the-younger son-by whole together having-kē ikk dūrdē dēsdā paĩḍā kariā; aur utthē apṇā made one distance-of country-of journey was-made; and there his-own māl bikarmī-bichch khōiā. Aur jad sārā gumā-chukkā, property bad-action-in was-wasted. And when all wasted-was-completely, us dēs-bichh baṛā mādwāṛā piā; ōh kaṅgāl hōṇē laggiā. Jad that country-in (a) great famine fell; he poor to-be began. Then us dēsdē ikk rājēdē jā laggiā. Ōhnē ōhnũ that country-of one raja-in-of having-gone he-was-employed. Him-by him-to khētã-bichch sūr chāraṇ bhējā. Aur ōhnũ ās thī ki, in fields-in swine to-feed it-was-sent. And him-to hope was that, these chhilak-tē jō sūr khāndē-han, apṇā ḍhiḍḍ bharē; kōī husks-with which the-swine eating-are, his-own belly he-may-fill; anyone usnũ na dindā-thā. Jō sōjhī-bichch ā-kē kahā, 'mērē him-to not giving-was. Then senses-in come-having it-was-said, 'my pēōdē bahutē mihnatiãnũ bālhī rōṭī hai, aur maĩ bhukkhā mardā-father-of many labourers-to much bread is, and I hungry dying-hã; maĩ uṭṭh-kē apṇē pēō-kōlē jāũgā, aur unhũ kahũgā, am; I arisen-having my-own father-near will-go, and him-to I-will-say,

"ō pēō, mainē Rabbdā tērē kōl burā kariā-hai; hōr huṇ is
"O father, me-by God-of of-thee near fault done-is; and now this laik nahĩ jō phir tērā putt kahāũ, maĩnũ apṇē worthy (I-)am-not that again thy son I-may-be-called, me-to thine-own mihnatiã̃-bichchõ̃ ikkdē barābar kar."' Phir uṭṭh-kē apṇē pēō labourers-from-in one-of equal make."' Then arisen-having his-own father kōl challiā. Ōh ajjē dūr thā, ōhnũ̃ dēkh-kē ōhdē pēōnũ̃ to he-started. He yet distant was, him-to seen-having him-of father-to taras āiā, hōr bhajj-kē ōhnũ̃ gal lā-liā, hōr pity came, and run-having him-to (on-his-)neck it-was-applied, and bālhā chummiã̃. Puttnē ōhnũ̃ kahā, 'ō pēō, maĩnē much it-was-kissed. The-son-by him-to it-was-said, 'O father, me-by Rabbdā tērē kōl burā kariā; hōr huṇ is laik nahĩ God-of of-thee near fault done-is; and now this worthy (I-)am-not jō phir tērā putt kahāũ̃.' Pēōnē apṇē naukrãnũ̃ that again thy son I-may-be-called.' The-father-by his-own labourers-to kahā, 'chaṅgē-tē chaṅgē kapaṛē kaḍḍh liāō, ihdē pāō;

it-was-said, 'good-than good clothes having-taken-out bring, him-to put-on;
hōr īdhē hatth-bichch chhāp, hōr pairã̃-bichch juttē pāō; hōr asĩ and his hand-in (a-)ring, and feet-in shoes put-on; and we chhakaĩ, hōr khusī hōwaĩ; kiũkar mērā ēh putt mar-giā-thā, huṇ may-eat, and glad may-be; because my this son dead-gone-was, now jīviā-hai; khōiā-giā-thā, huṇ miliā-hai.' Phir ōh khusī karan laggē.
alive-is; lost-gone-was, now found-is.' Then they joy to-do began.
Ōhdā baṛā putt khēt-bichch thā. Jad ghardē nēṛē āiā,
His elder son the-field-in was. When the-house-of near he-came, gãodē hōr nachchdiãdī abāj suṇī. Phir ikk naukarnũ̃ singing and dancing-women-of noise was-heard. Then one servant-to bulā-kē puchhiā, 'ih kī hai?' Ōhnē ōhnũ̃ kahā, called-having it-was-asked, 'this what is?' Him-by him-to it-was-said,
'tērā bhāī āiā-hai; hōr tērē pēōnē baṛī rōṭī karī-hai, kis-bāstē
'thy brother come-is; and thy father-by a-great feast done-is, because jō ōhnũ̃ bhalā-chaṅgā thiāiā.' Ōhnē gussē hō-kē na that him-to safe-(&-)sound he-was-found.' Him-by angry become-having not chāhā jō andar jāwē. Phir ōhdē pēōnē bāhar it-was-wished that inside he-may-go. Then his father-by outside ā-kē ōhnũ̃ manāiā. Ōhnē pēō-tē jabāb come-having him-to it-was-remonstrated. Him-by the-father-to answer dittā, 'dēgã̃, itnē barhē-te maĩ tērī ṭaihal kardā-hã̃, aur was-given, 'see-then, so-many years-from I thy service doing-am, and kadē tērē kahṇēdē bāhar nahĩ challā; par taĩ kadē bakrīdā ever thy saying-of out not went; but by-thee ever goat-of mēmnā maĩnũ̃ nahĩ dittā, jō apṇē mitrãdē nāl khusī kid me-to not was-given, that my-own friends-of with happiness manāwã. Hōr jad tērā ēh putt āiā jihnē tērā māl

I-may-celebrate. And when thy this son came whom-by thy property kañjarīã̄-bichch khōiā, taĩ ōdhē bastē baṛī rōṭī karī.'
harlots-among was-wasted, by-thee him-of for a-great feast was-made.'
Ōhnē ōhnũ kahā, 'ō putt, tū nit mērē kōl hai, hōr Him-by him-to it-was-said, 'O son, thou always of-me near art, and jēṛhā mērā hai ōh tērā hai; phir khusī hōṇā aur khus what mine is that thine is; then (in-)happiness to-be and glad hōṇā chāhīē thā; kiũkar tērā bhāī mar-giā-thā, huṇ jīviā-hai to-be proper was; because thy brother dead-gone-was, now alive-is;
hōr khōiā-giā-thā, huṇ thiāiā-hai.'
and lost-gone-was, now found-is.'

[No. 8.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

PŌWĀDHĪ DIALECT. (THĀNĀ KULARAN, JIND STATE.)

SPECIMEN II.

ਇਕ ਆਦਮੀ ਧਾੜਵੀ ਥਾ। ਓਹ ਸਾਡੇ ਦੇਸ ਆਗਿਆ। ਓਧੇ ਮੁੜਦੇ ਹੁਏਦੇ ਮਨ ਬਿਚ ਆਈ ਚਾਰ ਪੰਜ ਰੁਪਏਦੀ ਰੂੰ ਲੇ ਚੱਲਾਂ। ਮੁੜ ਕੇ ਪਿੰਡ ਬਿਚ ਰੂੰ ਲੈਣ ਬੜ ਗਿਆ। ਇਕ ਬੁੱਢੀ ਬੈਠੀ ਕਤਦੀ ਥੀ। ਓਹਨੂੰ ਰੂੰ ਪੁਛੀ। ਓਹਨੇ ਆਖਿਆ ਹੈ ਭਾਈ ਏਹ ਬਾਣੀਏਨੂੰ ਬੋਲ ਮਾਰ ਲਿਆ। ਓਹ ਬਾਣੀਏਨੂੰ ਬੁਲਾ ਲਾਇਆ। ਓਹ ਬੁੱਢੀ ਬੋਲੀ ਏਨੂੰ ਰੂੰ ਜੋਖ ਦੇ॥ ਧਾੜਵੀ ਬੋਲਿਆ ਬੁੱਢੀ ਏਹਨੂੰ ਚਾਰ ਪੰਜ ਆਨੇ ਦੇ ਕੇ ਜੋ ਮੈਂ ਬੱਧ ਤੁਲਾ ਲੂੰ। ਤੂ ਹੀ ਕਿਉਂ ਨਹੀਂ ਜੋਖ ਦਿੰਦੀ। ਫਿਰ ਝੀਖੇਂਗੀ। ਬੁੱਢੀ ਕਹਿੰਦੀ ਲੇ ਜਾ ਭਾਈ ਮੈਂ ਅਗੰਤ ਬਿਚ ਲੂੰਗੀ। ਓਹ ਕਹਿੰਦਾ ਅਗੰਤ ਕਿਹਨੇ ਦੇਖਾ ਹੈ। ਬੁੱਢੀ ਕਹਿੰਦੀ ਮੈਂ ਦੇਖ ਆਈ ਹਾਂ। ਓਹ ਕਹਿੰਦਾ ਤੂੰ ਕਿੱਕਰ ਦੇਖ ਆਈ। ਬੁੱਢੀ ਕਹਿੰਦੀ ਧੀ ਜਮਾਈ ਮੇਰੇ ਕੋਲ੍ ਬਸਦੇ ਥੇ। ਮੇਰੀ ਮੈਂਹ ਸੂਣੀ ਥੀ। ਓਨ੍ਹਾਂਦੀ ਸੂਈ ਹੁਈ ਥੀ। ਮੈਨੇ ਧੀਨੂੰ ਆਖਿਆ ਸੇਰ ਘੇਓ ਉਧਾਰਾ ਦੇ ਦੇ। ਜਿੱਦਣ ਮੇਰੇ ਦੁਧ ਹੋਗਿਆ ਤੈਨੂੰ ਦੇ ਦੂੰਗੀ। ਧੀਨੇ ਘੇਓ ਦੇ ਦਿੱਤਾ। ਫਿਰ ਓਹ ਮਰ ਗਈ। ਮੈਂ ਕੁਮਾਰੀਆਂ ਗਈ। ਓੱਥੇ ਗਈ ਹੁਈ ਧੀਨੇ ਫੜ ਲਈ। ਕਹਾ ਕਿ ਮੇਰਾ ਸੇਰ ਘੇਓ ਉਧਾਰਾ ਦਿੱਤਾ ਹੋਇਆ ਦੇ ਦੇ। ਮੈਨੇ ਕਹਾ ਮੇਰੇ ਕੋਲ੍ ਕੀ ਹੈ। ਜਮਾਈਨੂੰ ਦੇ ਦੂੰਗੀ। ਮੇਰੇ ਕੋਲ੍ ਬਸਦਾ ਹੈ। ਧੀ ਬੋਲੀ ਓਧਾ ਕੁਛ ਵਾਸਤਾ ਨਹੀਂ। ਜੇੜ੍ਹਾ ਮੈਂ ਦਿੱਤਾ ਹੈ ਓਹ ਮੇਰਾ ਦੇ ਦੇ। ਫਿਰ ਸੇਰ ਭਰ ਮਾਸ ਪੱਟ ਬਿਚੋਂ ਮੇਰਾ ਲੈ ਕੇ ਬੇੜ੍ਹਾ ਛੱਡਿਆ। ਏਹ ਦੇਖਲੈ ਟੋਹਣਾਂ ਪੱਟ ਬਿਚ ਸਕੀ ਧੀਦਾ ਪਾਇਆ ਹੁਆ ਹੈ। ਤੂ ਰੂੰ ਬੱਧ ਘੱਟ ਲੈ ਜਾ ਅਗੰਤ ਲੈ ਲੂੰਗੀ। ਧਾੜਵੀਨੂੰ ਏਹ ਗਲ ਸੁਣ ਕੇ ਗਿਆਨ ਆ ਗਿਆ। ਰੂੰ ਲਿੱਤੀ ਨਹੀਂ। ਅਪਣੇ ਘਰਨੂੰ ਚੱਲਾ ਗਿਆ। ਘਰ ਜਾ ਕੇ ਜੇੜ੍ਹਾ ਮਾਲ ਲੂਟਿਆ ਕਸੂਟਿਆ ਥਾ ਬਾਮਣਾਂ ਫਕੀਰਾਂਨੂੰ ਪੁੰਨ ਕਰ ਦਿੱਤਾ ਧਾੜਵੀਦਾ ਕੰਮ ਛੱਡ ਦਿੱਤਾ॥

[No. 8.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

PŌWĀDHĪ DIALECT. (THĀNĀ KULARAN, JIND STATE.)

SPECIMEN II.

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ik ādmī dhāṛvī thā. Ōh sāḍē dēs ā-giā. Ōdhē
One man robber was. He (to-)our country came. Him-of muṛdē-huēdē man-bich āī 'chār pañj rupaēdī rũ lē returning-of mind-in came 'four five rupees-of cotton having-taken challã.' Muṛ-kē piṇḍ-bich rũ laiṇ baṛ-giā. Ik
I-may-go.' Returned-having the-village-in cotton to-take he-entered. One buḍḍhī baiṭhī katdī-thī, ōhnũ rũ pūchhī. Ōhnē old-woman seated spinning-was, her-to (for-)cotton it-was-asked. Her-by ākhiā, 'hai bhāī, ēh bāṇīēnũ bōl-mār liā.' Ōh bāṇīēnũ it-was-said, 'O brother, this banyā-to calling bring.' He the-banyā-to bulā lāiā. Ōh buḍḍhī bōlī, 'ēnũ rũ jōkh having-called brought. That old-woman spoke, 'him-to cotton having-weighed dē.' Dhāṛvī bōliā, 'buḍḍhī, ēhnũ chār pañj ānē dē-kē give.' The-robber spoke, 'old-woman, him-to four five annas given-having jō maĩ baddh tulā lũ. Tū-hī kiũ nahĩ
if I more having-caused-to-weigh take. Thou-thyself why not jōkh dindī, phir jhīkhẽgī.' Buḍḍhī having-weighed (art-)giving, afterwards thou-wilt-repent.' The-old-woman kahindī, 'lē-jā, bhāī, maĩ agant-bich lũgī.' Ōh was-saying, 'take-away, brother, I the-future-life-in shall-take.' He kahindā, 'agant kihnē dēkhā hai?' Buḍḍhī kahindī, (was-)saying, 'the-future-life whom-by seen is?' The-old-woman (was-)saying,
'maĩ dēkh āī-hã.' Ōh kahindā, 'tũ kikkar dēkh
'I having-seen come-am.' He (was-)saying, 'thou how having-seen āī?' Buḍḍhī kahindī, 'dhī jamāī mērē kōḷ came?' The-old-woman (was-)saying, 'daughter son-in-law me near basdē-thē; mērī maĩh sūṇī thī; unhãdī sūī-huī living-were; my she-buffalo in-calf was; them-of one-which-had-calved thī; mainē dhīnũ ākhiā, "sēr ghēō udhārā dē-dē;
was; me the-daughter-to it-was-said, "seer ghee loan give;

[No. 8.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

PŌWĀDHĪ DIALECT. (THĀNĀ KULARAN, JIND STATE.)

SPECIMEN II.

ਇਕ ਆਦਮੀ ਧਾੜਵੀ ਥਾ। ਓਹ ਸਾਡੇ ਦੇਸ ਆਗਿਆ। ਓਧੇ ਮੁੜਦੇ ਹੁਏਦੇ ਮਨ ਬਿਚ ਆਈ ਚਾਰ ਪੰਜ ਰੁਪਏਦੀ ਰੂੰ ਲੇ ਚੱਲਾਂ। ਮੁੜ ਕੇ ਪਿੰਡ ਬਿਚ ਰੂੰ ਲੈਣ ਬੜ ਗਿਆ। ਇਕ ਬੁੱਢੀ ਬੈਠੀ ਕਤਦੀ ਥੀ। ਓਹਨੂੰ ਰੂੰ ਪੁਛੀ। ਓਹਨੇ ਆਖਿਆ ਹੈ ਭਾਈ ਏਹ ਬਾਣੀਏਨੂੰ ਬੋਲ ਮਾਰ ਲਿਆ। ਓਹ ਬਾਣੀਏਨੂੰ ਬੁਲਾ ਲਾਇਆ। ਓਹ ਬੁੱਢੀ ਬੋਲੀ ਏਨੂੰ ਰੂੰ ਜੋਖ ਦੇ॥ ਧਾੜਵੀ ਬੋਲਿਆ ਬੁੱਢੀ ਏਹਨੂੰ ਚਾਰ ਪੰਜ ਆਨੇ ਦੇ ਕੇ ਜੋ ਮੈਂ ਬੱਧ ਤੁਲਾ ਲੂੰ। ਤੂ ਹੀ ਕਿਉਂ ਨਹੀਂ ਜੋਖ ਦਿੰਦੀ। ਫਿਰ ਝੀਖੇਂਗੀ। ਬੁੱਢੀ ਕਹਿੰਦੀ ਲੇ ਜਾ ਭਾਈ ਮੈਂ ਅਰੰਤ ਬਿਚ ਲੂੰਗੀ। ਓਹ ਕਹਿੰਦਾ ਅਰੰਤ ਕਿਹਨੇ ਦੇਖਾ ਹੈ। ਬੁੱਢੀ ਕਹਿੰਦੀ ਮੈਂ ਦੇਖ ਆਈ ਹਾਂ। ਓਹ ਕਹਿੰਦਾ ਤੂੰ ਕਿੱਕਰ ਦੇਖ ਆਈ। ਬੁੱਢੀ ਕਹਿੰਦੀ ਧੀ ਜਮਾਈ ਮੇਰੇ ਕੋਲ੍ ਬਸਦੇ ਥੇ। ਮੇਰੀ ਮੈਂਹ ਸੂਣੀ ਥੀ। ਓਨ੍ਹਾਂਦੀ ਸੂਈ ਹੁਈ ਥੀ। ਮੈਨੇ ਧੀਨੂੰ ਆਖਿਆ ਸੇਰ ਘੇਓ ਉਧਾਰਾ ਦੇ ਦੇ। ਜਿੱਦਣ ਮੇਰੇ ਦੁਧ ਹੋਗਿਆ ਤੈਨੂੰ ਦੇ ਦੂੰਗੀ। ਧੀਨੇ ਘੇਓ ਦੇ ਦਿੱਤਾ। ਫਿਰ ਓਹ ਮਰ ਗਈ। ਮੈਂ ਕੁਮਾਰੀਆਂ ਗਈ। ਓੱਥੇ ਗਈ ਹੁਈ ਧੀਨੇ ਫੜ ਲਈ। ਕਹਾ ਕਿ ਮੇਰਾ ਸੇਰ ਘੇਓ ਉਧਾਰਾ ਦਿੱਤਾ ਹੋਇਆ ਦੇ ਦੇ। ਮੈਨੇ ਕਹਾ ਮੇਰੇ ਕੋਲ੍ ਕੀ ਹੈ। ਜਮਾਈਨੂੰ ਦੇ ਦੂੰਗੀ। ਮੇਰੇ ਕੋਲ੍ ਬਸਦਾ ਹੈ। ਧੀ ਬੋਲੀ ਓਧਾ ਕੁਛ ਵਾਸਤਾ ਨਹੀਂ। ਜੇੜ੍ਹਾ ਮੈਂ ਦਿੱਤਾ ਹੈ ਓਹ ਮੇਰਾ ਦੇ ਦੇ। ਫਿਰ ਸੇਰ ਭਰ ਮਾਸ ਪੱਟ ਬਿਚੋਂ ਮੇਰਾ ਲੈ ਕੇ ਖੈੜ੍ਹਾ ਛੱਡਿਆ। ਏਹ ਦੇਖਲੈ ਟੋਹਣਾਂ ਪੱਟ ਬਿਚ ਸਕੀ ਧੀਦਾ ਪਾਇਆ ਹੁਆ ਹੈ। ਤੂ ਰੂੰ ਬੱਧ ਘੱਟ ਲੈ ਜਾ ਅਰੰਤ ਲੈ ਲੂੰਗੀ। ਧਾੜਵੀਨੂੰ ਏਹ ਗਲ ਸੁਣ ਕੇ ਗਿਆਨ ਆ ਗਿਆ। ਰੂੰ ਲਿੱਤੀ ਨਹੀਂ। ਅਪਣੇ ਘਰਨੂੰ ਚੱਲਾ ਗਿਆ। ਘਰ ਜਾ ਕੇ ਜੇੜ੍ਹਾ ਮਾਲ ਲੂਟਿਆ ਕਸੂਟਿਆ ਥਾ ਬਾਮਣਾਂ ਫਕੀਰਾਂਨੂੰ ਪੁੰਨ ਕਰ ਦਿੱਤਾ ਧਾੜਵੀਦਾ ਕੰਮ ਛੱਡ ਦਿੱਤਾ॥

[No. 8.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

PŌWĀDHĪ DIALECT. (THĀNĀ KULARAN, JIND STATE.)

SPECIMEN II.

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ik ādmī dhāṛvī thā. Ōh sāḍē dēs ā-giā. Ōdhē
One man robber was. He (to-)our country came. Him-of muṛdē-huēdē man-bich āī 'chār pañj rupaēdī rũ̃ lē returning-of mind-in came 'four five rupees-of cotton having-taken challã̃.' Muṛ-kē piṇḍ-bich rũ̃ laiṇ baṛ-giā. Ik
I-may-go.' Returned-having the-village-in cotton to-take he-entered. One buḍḍhī baiṭhī katdī-thī, ōhnũ̃ rũ̃ pūchhī. Ōhnē old-woman seated spinning-was, her-to (for-)cotton it-was-asked. Her-by ākhiā, 'hai bhāī, ēh bāṇīēnũ̃ bōl-mār liā.' Ōh bāṇīēnũ̃
it-was-said, 'O brother, this banyā-to calling bring.' He the-banyā-to bulā lāiā. Ōh buḍḍhī bōlī, 'ēnũ̃ rũ̃ jōkh having-called brought. That old-woman spoke, 'him-to cotton having-weighed dē.' Dhāṛvī bōliā, 'buḍḍhī, ēhnũ̃ chār pañj ānē dē-kē give.' The-robber spoke, 'old-woman, him-to four five annas given-having jō maĩ baddh tulā lũ̃. Tū-hī kiũ nahĩ
if I more having-caused-to-weigh take. Thou-thyself why not jōkh dindī, phir jhīkhẽ̃gī.' Buḍḍhī having-weighed (art-)giving, afterwards thou-wilt-repent.' The-old-woman kahindī, 'lē-jā, bhāī, maĩ agant-bich lũ̃gī.' Ōh was-saying, 'take-away, brother, I the-future-life-in shall-take.' He kahindā, 'agant kihnē dēkhā hai?' Buḍḍhī kahindī, (was-)saying, 'the-future-life whom-by seen is?' The-old-woman (was-)saying,
'maĩ dēkh āī-hã̃.' Ōh kahindā, 'tũ̃ kikkar dēkh
'I having-seen come-am.' He (was-)saying, 'thou how having-seen
āī?' Buḍḍhī kahindī, 'dhī jamāī mērē kōḷ came?' The-old-woman (was-)saying, 'daughter son-in-law me near basdē-thē; mērī maĩh sūṇī thī; unhã̃dī sūī-huī living-were; my she-buffalo in-calf was; them-of one-which-had-calved thī; mainē dhīnũ̃ ākhiā, "sēr ghēō udhārā dē-dē;
was; me the-daughter-to it-was-said, "seer ghee loan give;

jiddaṇ mērē dudh hō-giā, tainũ dē-dũgī."
when in-my(-house) milk (shall-)have-become, thee-to I-shall-give.'

Dhīnē ghēō dē-dittā. Phir ōh mar-gaī. Maĩ kumārīã̃
The-daughter-by ghee was-given. Then she died. I Hades

gaī; ōtthē gaī-huī dhīnē phaṛ-laī; kahā ki, "mērā went; there the-gone daughter-by I-was-seized; it-was-said that, "my sēr ghēō udhārā dittā-hōiā, dē-dē." Mainē kahā, "mērē kōḷ seer ghee loan given, give." Me-by it-was-said, "me near kī hai? Jamāinũ dē-dũgī; mērē kōḷ basdā-hai." Dhī what is? The-son-in-law-to I-shall-give; me near living-he-is." The-daughter bōlī, "ōdhā kuchh wāstā nahĩ. Jēṛhā maĩ dittā-hai, ōh mērā spoke, "him-of any concern is-not. What by-me given-is, that mine dē-dē." Phir sēr bhar māṣ paṭṭ bichõ mērā lai-kē khaiṛhā give." Then seer full flesh thigh from-in my taken-having seizure chhaḍḍiā. Ēh dēkh-lai, ṭōhṇã̃ paṭṭ-bich sakī dhīdā pāiā-huā hai.

was-left. This observe, cavity thigh-in real daughter-of made is.

Tū rũ baddh-ghaṭṭ lai-jā, agant
Thou cotton increasing-diminishing (i.e. bargaining) taking-go, (in)-the-future-life lai-lũgī.' Dhāṛvinũ ēh gal suṇ-kē giān ā-giā; rũ

I-shall-take.' The-robber-to this word heard-having knowledge came; cotton littī nahĩ; apṇē gharnũ challā-giā. Ghar jā-kē jēṛhā was-taken not; his-own house-to he-went-away. Home gone-having what māl lūṭiā kasūṭiā thā, bāmṇã̃ phakīrãnũ punn kar property looted plundered was, Brahmans beggars-to charity doing dittā; dhāṛvīdā kamm chhaḍḍ-dittā.

was-given; robber-of profession was-abandoned.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

There was a robber who came to this country. On his way home it came into his head that he would buy some four or five rupees' worth of cotton. So he turned back and entering a village saw an old woman sitting spinning. He asked her if she would sell him any cotton. She replied, 'brother, call that shopkeeper.' So he brought the shopkeeper, and the old woman told the latter to weigh the cotton. Then said the robber, 'what if I have bribed this shopkeeper with four or five annas to give more than the proper weight? Why don't you weigh it yourself? Otherwise you may be sorry for your bargain.' The old woman said, 'I'll get it from you in the next world.' 'Who,' said the robber, 'has seen the next world?' 'I,' said she, 'have both been there and have seen it.' 'How was that?' said he. She replied, 'my daughter and my son-in-law used to live near me. My cow-buffalo was in calf and consequently gave no milk. They had a cow which had calved, and was therefore in milk, and so I asked her to lend me a seer of ghee, which I would repay as soon as my cow gave milk. She lent it me. Shortly after this she died, and I paid a visit to Hades. There my daughter caught hold of me, and demanded back the seer of ghee which I had borrowed. "Bless you," said I, "I have nothing with me here. Your husband lives near my house, and I'll pay him when I get home." She replied, "he has nothing to do with it. It was I who gave it you. Pay me back my own." So I had to give her a seer of flesh out of my thigh before she would let me go. Look, here is the actual cavity from which she took it. You go on with your traffic and take your cotton. I'll be paid in the next world.' When the robber heard these words he was converted, and did not take the cotton. He went straight home, distributed all his ill-gotten wealth in charity to Brāhmaṇs and beggars, and gave up the profession of a robber.

The following specimen of Pōwādhī comes from Umballa. It is given, as originally written, in the Dēva-nāgarī character.

[No. 9.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

PŌWĀDHĪ DIALECT. (DISTRICT UMBALLA.)

इक्क जुलाहेदी अड्डी रातनूँ अक्ख खुल गई। अपणी जुलाहीनूँ केहा के मैनूँ डोडे मऊ के दे। तीमीने केहा के मै-ते हुण नहीँ उठ हुन्दा। जुलाहेने फेर केहा जे हुण तूँ मैनूँ डोडे मऊ के देवें ताँ मैँ तैनूँ हजार हजार रुपये-दिआँ चार बाताँ सुणावाँ। जुलाहीने डोडे मऊ के दित्ते ओर हुक्का भरके दित्ता। जुलाहा बातेँ सुणावन लग्गिआ। उस वेळे शहरदे बादशाहदा पुत्त गली बिच्च जांदा था। जुलाहेदी गल्ल सुण कर सोचिआ के इसदिआँ गल्लाँ सुण के जाणा है के एह केहिआँ गल्लाँ सुणांदा है। जुलाहेने चार गल्लाँ सुणाइआँ। १ जेहड़ा आदमी अपणी मुटियार तीमीनूँ पेओके छड्डे ओह अहमक है। २ जो अपणे ते बड़ेदे नाऊ यारी लावे ओह अहमक है। ३ जो बिण पुछे पंच बणे ओह अहमक है। ४ जो घर मँ हुंदे सुंदे लड़ बन्ह के ना तुरे ओह अहमक है। जुलाहा बाताँ सुणा के सो गिआ॥

[No. 9.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

PŌWĀDHĪ DIALECT. (DISTRICT UMBALLA.)

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ikk julāhēdī addhī rātnũ akkh khul-gaī. Apṇī julāhīnũ A weaver-of half night-at the-eyes opened. His-own weaver's-wife-to kēhā kē, 'mainũ ḍōḍē maḷ-kē dē.' Tīmīnē it-was-said that, 'me-to poppy-heads rubbed-having give.' The-wife-by kēhā kē, 'mai-tē huṇ nahĩ uṭh hundā.' Julāhēnē it-was-said that, 'me-by now not rising (is-)becoming.' The-weaver-by phēr kēhā, 'jē huṇ tũ mainũ ḍōḍē maḷ-kē dēvẽ, again it-was-said, 'if now thou me-to poppy-heads rubbed-having give,

tã maĩ tainũ hajār hajār rupayēdiã chār bātã suṇāwã.'
then I thee-to thousand thousand rupees-of four words cause-to-hear.'

Julāhīnē ḍōḍē maḷ-kē dittē, ōr hukkā
The-weaver's-wife-by poppy-heads rubbed-having were-given, and hookah bhar-kē dittā. Julāhā bātẽ suṇāwan laggiā. Us filled-having was-given. The-weaver the-words to-cause-to-hear began. That vēḷē shahrdē bādshāhdā putt galī-bichch jāndā-thā. Julāhēdī at-time the-city-of king-of son lane-in going-was. The-weaver-of gall suṇ-kar sōchiā kē, 'isdiã gallã suṇ-kē word heard-having it-was-thought that, 'this-one-of words heard-having jāṇā hai, kē ēh kēhiã gallã suṇāndā-hai.' Julāhēnē to-be-gone is, that this-one what words causing-to-hear-is.' The-weaver-by chār gallã suṇāiã. '1. Jēhṛā ādmī apṇī muṭiyār four words were-caused-to-be-heard. '1. What man his-own full-grown tīmīnũ pēōkē chhaḍḍē, ōh ahmak hai. 2. Jō wife-to in-her-father's-house abandons, he most-foolish is. 2. Who apṇē-tē baṛēdē nāḷ yārī lāvē, ōh ahmak hai.

himself-of-than greater-of with friendship brings, he most-foolish is.

3. Jō biṇ puchhē pañch baṇē, ōh ahmak hai.
3. Who without being-asked arbitrator becomes, he most-foolish is.

4. Jō ghar-mẽ hundē-sundē laṛ bannh-kē nā turē,
4. Who house-in while-being the-edge-of-cloth bound-having not sets-out, ōh ahmak hai.' Julāhā bātã suṇā-kē sō-giā.

he most-foolish is.' The-weaver the-words caused-to-hear-having went-to-sleep.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

A certain weaver awoke at midnight, and asked his wife to prepare a poppy-drink[1] for him. She replied that it was out of the question for to think of getting up at that time of night. He said, 'if you'll make me some poppy-drink, I'll tell you four things, each worth a thousand rupees.' So she got up and prepared the poppy-drink and gave it to him, and also filled his hookah for him. Then the weaver began to tell her the four things. It chanced that just then the son of the king[2] of that city was passing by in the lane near the weaver's house. He heard what the latter was saying, and thought to himself that he had better stop to hear what this valuable information was. This is what he heard. The weaver began, 'Firstly, the man who lets his grown up wife stay in her father's house is a fool. Secondly, the man who makes friends with a greater man than himself is a fool. Thirdly, the man who becomes an arbitrator without being asked is a fool. Fourthly, the man who sets out on a journey without first tying some money in the edge of his cloth is a fool.' Having said this the weaver went to sleep.

---

[1] It is made by rubbing poppy-heads in water.

[2] The Julāhā or weaver is the stock fool of Indian legend. The point here is that the prince takes the trouble to listen to what such a man says, and is rewarded by the exceedingly trite remarks which the latter conveys to his wife.

[No. 10.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

PŌWĀDHĪ DIALECT. (THĀNĀ KARAMGARH, STATE PATIALA.)

دیکھو کھبّے ھتھہ نال مُنّا دب رکھیا ھے سجے ھتھہ وچہ پُرانی ھے - سامنے درخت دے ھیٹھہ حقہ ار پانی دا گھڑا پیا ھے - اوتھے ھی اک منڈا بیٹھا ھے - کرساں بچارہ تھوڑی جی رات تے اوٹھیا ھے - ھل اور بھلداں نوں لیکے تڑے تڑے کھیت پر آن پہونچیا ھے - جد سورج سر پر آوندا ھے - تاں گھروالی روٹی لیوندی ھے - ایہہ ھل کھول دندا ھے - بھلداں نوں چارہ پوندا ھے - اپ ھتھہ منہہ دھوے ٹھنڈا ھوندا ھے - روٹی کھاندا ھے - حقّہ پیندا ھے - بھلداں نوں پانی پلوندا ھے - پیکے تھوڑا جیہا چر ارام لِندا ھے - گھروالی ساگ سوگ لیکے چلی جاندی ھے - کم بُتہا ھوندا ھے - تاں بچارہ اِسی دھندے وچہ دن پورا کر دندا ھے - نہین تاں ھور کم کار کردا ھے - جد سورج چھپن لگدا ھے تاں ھل اور بھلداں نوں لیکے گھر آوندا ھے - سر پر چارہ دی گٹھڑی لیوندا ھے - بھلداں دے آگّے چارہ پوندا ھے - گھروالی دھار کڈھدی ھے - روٹی پکوندی ھے - ایہہ کھوسی کھوسی بال بچان وچہ بیٹھہ ے کھاندا ھے - پھیر ایہے جیہے سواد نال پیر پسار ے سوندا ھے اک بادشاھاں نوں پُھلّاں دی چھیجاں پر بھی نصیب نہین *

[No. 10.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

PŌWĀDHĪ DIALECT. (THĀNĀ KARAMGARH, STATE PATIALA.)

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Dēkhō, khabbē hatth nāl munnā dab rakkhiā-hai, sajjē
See, left hand with plough-handle pressing kept-is, right hatth vich purānī hai. Sāmnē darakhtdē hēṭh ḥuqqa ar pānīdā hand in ox-whip is. In-front a-tree-of beneath hookah and water-of ghaṛā piā-hai. Utthē-hī ikk muṇḍā baiṭhā hai. Kirsān jar put-down-is. Here-also a child seated is. The-cultivator bichārā thōṛī-jī rāt-tē uṭṭhiā-hai. Hal aur bhaldā̃-nū̃ the-poor-man a-little-very night-from arisen-is. Plough and oxen lē-kē, taṛkē-taṛkē khēt-par ān pahũchiā-hai. Jad sūraj taken-having, very-early the-field-on having-come arrived-he-is. When the-sun sir-par āundā-hai, tā̃ ghar-wālī rōṭṭī liaundī-hai. Ēh hal the-head-on coming-is, then the-house-mistress bread bringing-is. He the-plough khōl-dindā-hai. Bhaldā̃-nū̃ chāra paundā-hai. Āp hatth mũh loosening-is. The-oxen-to fodder causing-to-fall-he-is. Himself hand mouth dhō-kē ṭhaṇḍā hōndā-hai. Rōṭṭī khāndā-hai. Ḥuqqa pīndā-hai.
washed-having cool becoming-he-is. Bread eating-he-is. Hookah drinking-he-is.
Bhaldā̃-nū̃ pānī plōndā-hai. Pai-kē thoṛā-jēhā chir arām
The-oxen-to water causing-to-drink-he-is. Fallen-having a-little-very time rest lindā-hai. Ghar-wālī sāg-sūg lē-kē chalī jāndī-hai.
taking-he-is. The-house-mistress vegetables-etc. taken-having gone going-is.
Kamm buhtā hōndā-hai. Tā̃ bichāra isī dhandē-vichch din
Work much becoming-is. Either the-poor-fellow this occupation-in the-day pūrā kar-dindā-hai. Nahī̃-tā̃ hōr kamm-kār kardā-hai. Jad sūraj full making-is. Otherwise other business doing-he-is. When the-sun chhipan lagdā-hai. tā̃ hal aur bhaldā̃-nū̃ lē-kē ghar āundā-hai.
to-be-hidden beginning-is, then plough and oxen taken-having house coming-he-is.
Sir-par chāra-dī gaṭhrī liaundā-hai. Bhaldā̃-dē āgē chāra
Head-on fodder-of bundle bringing-he-is. Oxen-of in-front fodder paundā-hai. Ghar-wālī dhār kaḍḍhdī-hai. Rōṭṭī pakōndī-hai.
causing-to-fall-he-is. The-house-mistress milk drawing-is. Bread cooking-she-is.
Ēh khusī-khusī bāl-bachchā̃-vichch baiṭh-kē khāndā-hai. Phir ēhē jēhē
He happy-happy children-among sat-having eating-is. Again he such

suwād	nāl	pair	pasār-kē	sōndā-hai,	ik	bādshāhā̃-nũ	phullā̃-di comfort	with	feet	extended-having	sleeping-is,	as	kings-to	flowers-of
chhījā̃-par	bhī	naṣīb	nahī̃.
beds-on	even	fortune	is-not.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

See how he goes along carrying his plough-handle under his left arm, with his ox-whip in his right hand. He has set down, at the foot of a tree, his hookah and a water-jar, and his little boy is seated beside them. The poor cultivator has risen from his bed while there is still a little of the night left, and with his plough and oxen reaches his field at dawn. At midday, when the sun is over his head, his wife brings him his food. He unyokes his plough and throws some fodder before his oxen. As for himself, he washes his hands and his mouth to make himself cool, and takes his meal. Then he waters his oxen, and after that takes a very little rest. His wife gathers wild herbs for spinach and takes them home, but he has still much work to do. He keeps on at the same business of ploughing till evening, or else he betakes himself to some other occupation. When the sun begins to set he takes his plough and his oxen home, carrying on his head a bundle of fodder which he has cut. Then he throws some of the fodder before the oxen, while his wife milks the cows. Then she cooks the evening meal, and he sits down to eat it happily surrounded by his children. Then he stretches out his legs and goes to sleep with more pleasure than ever was the lot of kings upon their beds of flowers.

[No. 10.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

PŌWĀDHĪ DIALECT. (THĀNĀ KARAMGARH, STATE PATIALA.)

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Dēkhō, khabbē hatth nāl munnā dab rakkhiā-hai, sajjē
See, left hand with plough-handle pressing kept-is, right
hatth vich purānī hai. Sāmnē darakhtdē hēṭh ḥuqqa ar pānīdā hand in ox-whip is. In-front a-tree-of beneath hookah and water-of gharā piā-hai. Utthē-hī ikk muṇḍā baiṭhā hai. Kirsān jar put-down-is. Here-also a child seated is. The-cultivator bichārā thōṛī-jī rāt-tē uṭṭhiā-hai. Hal aur bhaldā̃-nū̃
the-poor-man a-little-very night-from arisen-is. Plough and oxen lē-kē, taṛkē-taṛkē khēt-par ān pahũchiā-hai. Jad sūraj taken-having, very-early the-field-on having-come arrived-he-is. When the-sun
sir-par āundā-hai, tā̃ ghar-wālī rōṭṭī liaundī-hai. Ēh hal
the-head-on coming-is, then the-house-mistress bread bringing-is. He the-plough khōl-dindā-hai. Bhaldā̃-nū̃ chāra paundā-hai. Āp hatth mũh loosening-is. The-oxen-to fodder causing-to-fall-he-is. Himself hand mouth dhō-kē ṭhaṇḍā hōndā-hai. Rōṭṭī khāndā-hai. Ḥuqqa pīndā-hai.
washed-having cool becoming-he-is. Bread eating-he-is. Hookah drinking-he-is.
Bhaldā̃-nū̃ pānī plōndā-hai. Pai-kē thoṛā-jēhā chir arām
The-oxen-to water causing-to-drink-he-is. Fallen-having a-little-very time rest lindā-hai. Ghar-wālī sāg-sūg lē-kē chalī jāndī-hai.
taking-he-is. The-house-mistress vegetables-etc. taken-having gone going-is.
Kamm buhtā hōndā-hai. Tā̃ bichāra isī dhandē-vichch din
Work much becoming-is. Either the-poor-fellow this occupation-in the-day pūrā kar-dindā-hai. Nahī̃-tā̃ hōr kamm-kār kardā-hai. Jad sūraj full making-is. Otherwise other business doing-he-is. When the-sun chhipan lagdā-hai. tā̃ hal aur bhaldā̃-nū̃ lē-kē ghar āundā-hai.
to-be-hidden beginning-is, then plough and oxen taken-having house coming-he-is.
Sir-par chāra-dī gaṭhrī liaundā-hai. Bhaldā̃-dē āgē chāra
Head-on fodder-of bundle bringing-he-is. Oxen-of in-front fodder paundā-hai. Ghar-wālī dhār kaḍḍhdī-hai. Rōṭṭī pakōndī-hai.
causing-to-fall-he-is. The-house-mistress milk drawing-is. Bread cooking-she-is.
Ēh khusī-khusī bāl-bachchā̃-vichch baiṭh-kē khāndā-hai. Phir ēhē jēhē
He happy-happy children-among sat-having eating-is. Again he such

suwād	nāl	pair	pasār-kē	sōndā-hai,	ik	bādshāhā̃-nū̃	phullā̃-dī
comfort	with	feet	extended-having	sleeping-is,	as	kings-to	flowers-of
chhījā̃-par	bhī	naṣīb	nahī̃.
beds-on	even	fortune	is-not.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

See how he goes along carrying his plough-handle under his left arm, with his ox-whip in his right hand. He has set down, at the foot of a tree, his hookah and a water-jar, and his little boy is seated beside them. The poor cultivator has risen from his bed while there is still a little of the night left, and with his plough and oxen reaches his field at dawn. At midday, when the sun is over his head, his wife brings him his food. He unyokes his plough and throws some fodder before his oxen. As for himself, he washes his hands and his mouth to make himself cool, and takes his meal. Then he waters his oxen, and after that takes a very little rest. His wife gathers wild herbs for spinach and takes them home, but he has still much work to do. He keeps on at the same business of ploughing till evening, or else he betakes himself to some other occupation. When the sun begins to set he takes his plough and his oxen home, carrying on his head a bundle of fodder which he has cut. Then he throws some of the fodder before the oxen, while his wife milks the cows. Then she cooks the evening meal, and he sits down to eat it happily surrounded by his children. Then he stretches out his legs and goes to sleep with more pleasure than ever was the lot of kings upon their beds of flowers.

RĀṬHĪ.

The Musalmān tribes, which are said to have come from the west, and who are now settled in the Ghaggar valley in the district of Hissar, are known as Pachhāḍā, or westerners, and also as Rāṭh, or the ruthless ones. As their second name indicates, they are a turbulent lot. Their language is known as Pachhāḍī or Rāṭhī. A similar language is spoken in the Ghaggar valley in the Kularan thānā of the Jind state. Here it is called Jānd or Nailī. Nailī is probably the same as nālī, which is the local name of the Ghaggar valley. I do not know the origin of the name Jāṇḍ, unless it refers to the jaṇḍ bush which is a very prominent object in this wild tract.

Under whatever name it is called, Pachhāḍī, Rāṭhī, Jāṇḍ, or Nailī, it is the same form of speech, i.e., Pōwādhī Pañjābī, strongly mixed with the Bāṅgarū dialect of Western Hindī spoken immediately to its east. The pronunciation is fond of nasal sounds. Here and there we meet a form borrowed from the Mālwāī Pañjābī spoken immediately to the west.

The number of speakers reported is—

Hissar (Rāṭhī)	36,490
Jind (Jānd)	2,500
	38,990

I give three specimens of this dialect, viz., a portion of the Parable of the Prodigal Son and a folktale from Hissar, and another folktale from Jind. These show sufficiently the mixed character of the dialect. As might be expected, the Jind specimen has more Western Hindī in it than the others.

It is unnecessary to discuss this mixed form of speech at any length. It is sufficient to note that the genitive is sometimes formed by adding kā, and sometimes by adding dā. The oblique form (or locative) of the genitive mērē, is used to mean 'to me'; so jāṭ-kē, to a Jāṭ. The sign of the dative is nũ̃ or nē. Sometimes we have the Bāṅgarū sã̃, I am; sai, he is. The termination gī is used in the present as well as in the future. Thus, āēgī, she comes; the Mālwāī future jã̃sũ̃, I will go, occurs. The past participle of ghallṇā, to send, is ghattā, not ghalliā.

Note the nasal pronunciation of chãhãdā, wishing; āũdã̃, coming; jã̃sũ̃, I will go, and the substitution of a dental dh for a cerebral ḍh or ṛh in badhē, for baṛhē (specimen II).

[No. II.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

RĀṬHĪ DIALECT. (DISTRICT, HISSAR.)

SPECIMEN I.

इक आदमी ते दोय पुत्र सन। उन्हाँचूँ लोड़ा पुत्रने आपदे पेवनूँ आख्या केड़ा माल मैंनूँ आउँदाँ है मैंनूँ दे। पेवने माल लोड़े पुत्रनूँ बंड दित्ता। थोड़े दियाँ मगरूँ सारा माल इकट्ठा करते परदेस जाँदा रहा। उथें बद-खोई व भेड़े कामाँ विच सारा माल गँवाँ दित्ता। सारा माल गँवाँ बेठा के कुछ न रहा। उस देस विच बुरा काल पया। वुह बुख मरण लगा। फेर उस देसदे सिरदार कोलाँ गोला जा लग्या। उस सिरदारने आपदे खेत-ड़ाँदे विच सूराँदा छेडू कर दित्ता। केड़े वुह छिल सूर खाँदे वुह छिल भी उसनूँ नाँ थियाये। वुह चाँहाँदा सी के यह छिल मैंनूँ थियाँ जाँय तो उसदे नाल ढिड भर लेवाँ। वुह छिल भी उसनूँ कोई नँहीं देंदाँ सी॥

[No. II.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

RĀṬHĪ DIALECT. (DISTRICT, HISSAR.)

SPECIMEN I.

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ik ādmī-tē dōy putr san. Unhãchũ lōṛā putrnē
One man-to two sons were. Them-from-in the-younger son-by āpdē pēwnũ ākhyā, 'kēṛā māl mẽnũ ãũdã-hai mẽnũ his-own father-to it-was-said, 'whatever property me-to arriving-is me-to dē.' Pēwnē māl loṛē putrnũ baṇḍ give.' The-father-by the-property the-younger son-to having-divided dittā. Thōṛē diyã magrũ sārā māl ikaṭṭhā kartē was-given. A-few days after the-whole property together in-making par-dēs jãdā-rahā. Uthẽ bad-khōī wa bhēṛē

a-foreign-country going-remained. There wicked-habits and bad

kāmã-vich sārā māl gãwã-dittā. Sārā māl doings-in all the-property was-squandered-away. All the-property

gãwã-bēṭhā-kē kuchh na rahā. Us dēs-vich burā wasted-completely-been-having anything not remained. That country-in a-bad

kāl payā. Wuh bukh maraṇ lagā. Phēr us dēsdē famine fell. He hungry to-die began. Then that country-of sirdār-kōlõ gōlā jā lagyā. Us sirdārnē a-great-man-near servant have-gone he-became-attached. That great-man-by āpdē khētṛãdē-vich sūrãdā chhēṛū kar-dittā. Kēṛē wuh chhil himself-of fields-of-in pigs-of swineherd was-made. Which those husks

sūr khãdē wuh chhil bhī usnũ nã thiyāyē. Wuh chãhãdā-sī the-pigs ate those husks even him-to not were-got. He wishing-was

kē 'yah chhil mẽnũ thiyã-jãy, tō usdē-nāl ḍhiḍ that 'these husks me-to (if-)they-be-found, then those-of-with belly

bhar-lēwã.' Wuh chhil bhī usnũ kōī nãhĩ dẽdã-sī.
I-might-fill.' Those husks even him-to any-one not giving-was.

[No. 12.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

RĀṬHĪ DIALECT. (DISTRICT, HISSAR.)

SPECIMEN II.

एक जाट के एक जाटनी थी। जाट जद खेत में बग जाँदा तो पाछे ते मोहन-भोग चूमाँ कर के खाँदी। और साँझनै जाट जद आँदा जाटनी जाटनै कहँदी मैं तो मरूँगी मेरे तो रोग हो गया। सिर दूखे। पेट दूखे। पैर फूटें। किसे वैदनै या स्यानेनै दिखा ओपरी पूछा करा। जद जाट मन में सोची इस का मास और गुल्ला तो रोज बधे और यिह कहे मेरे रोग लाग गया। युह केह बान से। एक दिन जाट पर्स में सो गया। खेत न गया। थोड़ी बार पाछे घराँ गया। तो जाटनी मोहन-भोग करदी पाई। जद जाटनै सोची इस का इलाज बंधे तो ठीक लागे। जद जाट एक फकीर पा गया और कहा मेरी जाटनी मस्ती होई आएगी, मोहन-भोग या चूमा तो खावे और जद साँझनै खेत ते मैं आऊँ मेरे जौनै कलह बनावे। जद फकीरनै कही तौं चार सूत की कूकड़ी लीआ, मैं तन्नै मंत्र के दे दूँगा। तो जाट चार कूकड़ी फकीरनै दे आया। तो फकीर वैं कूकड़ी पढ़ के जाटनै दे दी। जाटने सुफे के चारों कोनिआँ में चारों कूकड़ी धर दी। जाट कूकड़ी धर के बाहिर चला गया और कह गया मैं किसे वैदनै बुलान जाँसूं। रात पड़े आऊँगा। जाट तो चला गया तो जाटनी पाछे ते सुफे में बड़ी। जद एक कूकड़ी बोली कि आई हे। जद दूसरी बोली कि आन दे। जद तीसरी बोली कि डरी नहीं। जद चौथी बोली डरे तो खाये क्यों। इसे तरियाँ जाटनी चार या पाँच बार बड़ी तो कूकड़ियाँ इसे तराँ बोलीं। जद जाटनी भैभंक हो के खाट में ढै पड़ी। इतने में जाट आ गया और कहा कि वैद तो तड़के आवेगा। आज कोई नहीं आँदा। जद जाटनी बोली तैं नपूता यह बला काढ। मैं तो आछी सूं। जद जाट चारों कूकड़ियाँ काढ कर फकीरनै दे आया॥

[No. II.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

RĀṬHĪ DIALECT. (DISTRICT, HISSAR.)

SPECIMEN I.

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Īk ādmī-tē dōy putr san. Unhãchũ lōṛā putrnē
One man-to two sons were. Them-from-in the-younger son-by

āpdē pēwnũ ākhyā, 'kēṛā māl mẽnũ ãũdã-hai mẽnũ
his-own father-to it-was-said, 'whatever property me-to arriving-is me-to

dē.' Pēwnē māl loṛē putrnũ baṇḍ give.' The-father-by the-property the-younger son-to having-divided

dittā. Thōṛē diyã magrũ sārā māl ikaṭṭhā kartē was-given. A-few days after the-whole property together in-making par-dēs jãdā-rahā. Uthẽ bad-khōī wa bhēṛē

a-foreign-country going-remained. There wicked-habits and bad

kāmã-vich sārā māl gãwã-dittā. Sārā māl
doings-in all the-property was-squandered-away. All the-property

gãwã-bēṭhā-kē kuchh na rahā. Us dēs-vich burā wasted-completely-been-having anything not remained. That country-in a-bad

kāl payā. Wuh bukh maraṇ lagā. Phēr us dēsdē famine fell. He hungry to-die began. Then that country-of sirdār-kōlõ gōlā jā lagyā. Us sirdārnē

a-great-man-near servant have-gone he-became-attached. That great-man-by āpdē khētṛãdē-vich sūrãdā chhēṛū kar-dittā. Kēṛē wuh chhil himself-of fields-of-in pigs-of swineherd was-made. Which those husks

sūr khãdē wuh chhil bhī usnũ nã thiyāyē. Wuh chãhãdā-sī
the-pigs ate those husks even him-to not were-got. He wishing-was

kē 'yah chhil mẽnũ thiyã-jãy, tō usdē-nāl ḍhiḍ
that 'these husks me-to (if-)they-be-found, then those-of-with belly

bhar-lēwã.' Wuh chhil bhī usnũ kōī nãhĩ dẽdã-sī.
I-might-fill.' Those husks even him-to any-one not giving-was.

[No. 12.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

RĀṬHĪ DIALECT. (DISTRICT, HISSAR.)

SPECIMEN II.

एक जाट के एक जाटनी थी। जाट जद खेत में बग जाँदा तो पाछे ते मोहन-भोग चूमाँ कर के खाँदी। और साँझनै जाट जद आँदा जाटनी जाटनै कहँदी मैं तो मरूँगी मेरे तो रोग ही गया। सिर दूखे। पेट दूखे। पैर फूटैं। किसे वैदनै या स्यानेनै दिखा ओपरी पूछा करा। जद जाट मन में सोची इस का मास और गुल्ला तो रोज बधे और यिह कहे मेरे रोग लाग गया। युह केह बान सै। एक दिन जाट पर्स में सो गया। खेत न गया। थोड़ी बार पाछे घराँ गया। तो जाटनी मोहन-भोग करदी पाई। जद जाटनै सोची इस का इलाज बंधे तो ठीक लागे। जद जाट एक फकीर पा गया और कहा मेरी जाटनी मस्ती होई आएगी, मोहन-भोग या चूमाँ तो खावे और जद साँझनै खेत ते मैं आऊँ मेरे जौनै कलह बनावे। जद फकीरनै कही तौं चार सूत की कूकड़ी लीआ, मैं तन्नै मंत्र के दे दूँगा। तो जाट चार कूकड़ी फकीरनै दे आया। तो फकीर वैं कूकड़ी पढ़ के जाटनै दे दी। जाटने सुफे के चारौं कोनिआँ में चारौं कूकड़ी धर दी। जाट कूकड़ी धर के बाहिर चला गया और कह गया मैं किसे वैदनै बुलान जाँसूँ। रात पड़े आऊँगा। जाट तो चला गया तो जाटनी पाछे ते सुफे में बड़ी। जद एक कूकड़ी बोली कि आई है। जद दूसरी बोली कि आन दे। जद तीसरी बोली कि डरी नहीं। जद चौथी बोली डरे तो खाये क्यों। इसे तरियाँ जाटनी चार या पाँच बार बड़ी तो कूकड़ियाँ इसे तराँ बोलीं। जद जाटनी भैभंक हो के खाट में ढै पड़ी। इतने में जाट आ गया और कहा कि वैद तो तड़के आवेगा। आज कोई नहीं आँदा। जद जाटनी बोली तैं नपूता यह बला काढ। मैं तो आछी सूँ। जद जाट चारौं कूकड़ियाँ काढ कर फकीरनै दे आया॥

[No. 12.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

RĀṬHĪ DIALECT. (DISTRICT, HISSAR.)

SPECIMEN II.

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

ਇਕ jāṭ-kē ēk-jāṭanī thī. Jāṭ jad khēt-mẽ bag-jãdā tō
One Jāṭ-of one-Jāṭanī was. The-Jāṭ when the-field-in used-to-go then

pāchhē-tē mōhan-bhōg chūrmā kar-kē khãdī, aur sãjhnai after-from mōhan-bhōg chūrmā made-having she-used-to-eat, and the-evening-in

jāṭ jad ãdā jāṭanī jāṭnai kahãdī, 'maĩ tō
the-Jāṭ when he-used-to-come the-Jāṭanī the-Jāṭ-to used-to-say, 'I verily marũgī, mērē tō rōg hō-gayā; sir dūkhē; pēṭ dūkhē;

shall-die, to-me verily sickness has-become; head aches; stomach aches;

pair phūṭẽ; kisē waidnai yā syānēnai dikhā, ōparī-pūchhā
the-feet burst; some physician-to or wise-man-to show, spells-incantations

karā.' Jad jāṭ man-mẽ sōchī, 'is-kā mās aur get-made.' When (by-)the-Jāṭ mind-in it-was-thought, 'her-of flesh and gullā tō rōj badhē, aur yih kahē, "mērē rōg lāg-gayā."

bones verily daily increase, and she says, "to-me illness attached-went."

Yuh kēh bān sai?' Ēk din jāṭ pars-mẽ sō-gayā,
This what manner is?' One day the-Jāṭ common-resting-place-in slept, khēt na gayā. Thōṛī bār pāchhē gharã gayā; tō

the-field(-to) not went. Short time after in-the-house went; and jāṭanī mōhan-bhōg kardī pāī. Jad jāṭnai sōchī, the-Jāṭanī mōhan-bhōg preparing was-found. Then the-Jāṭ-by it-was-thought,

'is-kā ilāj bandhe tō ṭhīk lāgē.' Jad jāṭ ēk
'her-of remedy (if-)it-is-done then right it-may-become.' Then the-Jāṭ one phakīr pā gayā, aur kahā, 'mērī jāṭanī mastī-hoī āēgī;

fakīr near went, and said, 'my Jāṭanī wanton-become becomes;

mōhan-bhōg yā chūrmā tō khāvē, aur jad sãjhnai khēt-tē mōhan-bhōg or chūrmā verily she-eats, and when the-evening-in the-field-from maĩ āũ, mērē jīnai kalah banāvē.' Jad phakīrnai kahī,

I come, my mind-to trouble she-makes.' Then fakīr-by it-was-said,

'Taũ chār sūt-kī kūkaṛī lī-ā, maĩ tan-nai mantr-kē dē-dũgā.'
'Thou four thread-of bundles bring, I thee-to charmed-having will-give.'

Tō jāṭ chār kūkaṛī phakīrnai dē-āyā; tō phakīr
Then the-Jāṭ four bundles-of-thread the-fakīr-to gave; then the-fakīr waī kūkaṛī paṛh-kē jāṭnai dē-dī. Jāṭnē those bundles-of-thread enchanted-having the-Jāṭ-to they-were-given. The-Jāṭ-by sūphē-kē chārõ kōniõ-mẽ chārõ kūkaṛī dhar-dī. Jāṭ room-of four corners-in four bundles-of-thread were-placed. The-Jāṭ kūkaṛī dhar-kē bāhir chalā-gayā, aur kah-gayā, 'maĩ kisē the-bundles-of-thread placed-having out went, and said, 'I some waid-nē bulān jãsũ, rāt-paṛē āũgā.' Jāṭ tō physician-to to-call will-go, at-nightfall I-will-come.' The-Jāṭ indeed chalā-gayā, tō jāṭanī pāchhē-tē suphē-mẽ baṛī. Jad ēk went-away, then the-Jāṭanī afterwards room-into entered. Then one kūkaṛī bōlī ki, 'āī-hē?' Jad dūsrī bōlī ki, bundle-of-thread spoke that, 'she-come-is?' Then the-second spoke that,
'ān dē.' Jad tīsrī bōlī ki, 'ḍarī nahĩ?' Jad
'to-come allow.' Then the-third spoke that, 'feared-she not?' Then chauthī bōlī, 'ḍaṛē, tō khāyē kyõ?' Isē tariyã fourth spoke, 'if-she-fears, then she-eats why?' In-these-very manners jāṭanī chār yā pãch bār baṛī, tō kūkaṛiyã
the-Jāṭanī four or five times entered, and the-bundles-of-thread isē tarã bōlī. Jad jāṭanī bhai-bhaṅk hō-kē in-this-very manner spoke. Then the-Jāṭanī terrified become-having khāṭ-mẽ ḍhai-paṛī. Itnē-mẽ jāṭ ā-gayā, aur kahā ki, the-bedstead-in fell-down. Mean-while the-Jāṭ came, and said that,
'waid tō taṛkē āvēgā; āj kōī nahĩ ãdā.'
'physician indeed at-dawn will-come; to-day any-one not (is-)coming.'
Jad jāṭanī bōlī, 'taĩ, napūtā, yah balā kāḍh; maĩ tō
Then the-Jāṭanī said, 'thou, childless-one, this evil turn-out; I indeed āchhī sũ.' Jad jāṭ chārõ kūkaṛiyã kāḍh-kar well am.' Then the-Jāṭ the-four bundles-of-thread taken-out-having phakīrnai dē āyā.
the-fakīr-to having-given came.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

There were once upon a time a Jāṭ and his wife. As soon as he had gone to the field and was safe out of the house, his wife used to make mōhan-bhōgs and chūrmās[1] and eat them all herself. Then, when he came home in the evening, she used to cry out, 'I 'm dying. I'm sick. My head aches. My stomach aches. My feet are bursting. Send for a doctor or for some wise man who will charm me well again.' The Jāṭ thought to himself that this was a queer business. 'What's the matter with her? She's getting fatter every

[1] These are two kinds of sweetmeats.

[No. 12.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

RĀṬHĪ DIALECT. (DISTRICT, HISSAR.)

SPECIMEN II.

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

ēk jāṭ-kē ēk-jāṭanī thī. Jāṭ jad khēt-mẽ bag-jãdā tō
One Jāṭ-of one-Jāṭanī was. The-Jāṭ when the-field-in used-to-go then

pāchhē-tē mōhan-bhōg chūrmā kar-kē khãdī, aur sãjhnai
after-from mōhan-bhōg chūrmā made-having she-used-to-eat, and the-evening-in

jāṭ jad ãdā jāṭanī jāṭnai kahãdī, 'maĩ tō
the-Jāṭ when he-used-to-come the-Jāṭanī the-Jāṭ-to used-to-say, 'I verily

marũgī, mērē tō rōg hō-gayā; sir dūkhē; pēṭ dūkhē;
shall-die, to-me verily sickness has-become; head aches; stomach aches;

pair phūṭẽ; kisē waidnai yā syānēnai dikhā, ōparī-pūchhā
the-feet burst; some physician-to or wise-man-to show, spells-incantations

karā.' Jad jāṭ man-mẽ sōchī, 'is-kā mās aur get-made.' When (by-)the-Jāṭ mind-in it-was-thought, 'her-of flesh and gullā tō rōj badhē, aur yih kahē, "mērē rōg lāg-gayā."

bones verily daily increase, and she says, "to-me illness attached-went."

Yuh kēh bān sai?' Ēk din jāṭ pars-mẽ sō-gayā,
This what manner is?' One day the-Jāṭ common-resting-place-in slept,

khēt na gayā. Thōṛī bār pāchhē gharã gayā; tō
the-field(-to) not went. Short time after in-the-house went; and jāṭanī mōhan-bhōg kardī pāī. Jad jāṭnai sōchī,

the-Jāṭanī mōhan-bhōg preparing was-found. Then the-Jāṭ-by it-was-thought,

'is-kā ilāj bandhe tō ṭhīk lāgē.' Jad jāṭ ēk
'her-of remedy (if-)it-is-done then right it-may-become.' Then the-Jāṭ one

phakīr pā gayā, aur kahā, 'mērī jāṭanī mastī-hoī āēgī;
fakīr near went, and said, 'my Jāṭanī wanton-become becomes;

mōhan-bhōg yā chūrmā tō khāvē, aur jad sãjhnai khēt-tē
mōhan-bhōg or chūrmā verily she-eats, and when the-evening-in the-field-from

maĩ āũ, mērē jīnai kalah banāvē.' Jad phakīrnai kahī,
I come, my mind-to trouble she-makes.' Then fakīr-by it-was-said,

'Taũ chār sūt-kī kūkaṛī lī-ā, maĩ tan-nai mantr-kē dē-dũgā.'
'Thou four thread-of bundles bring, I thee-to charmed-having will-give.'

Tō jāṭ chār kūkaṛī phakīrnai dē-āyā; tō phakīr
Then the-Jāṭ four bundles-of-thread the-fakīr-to gave; then the-fakīr
waī kūkaṛī paṛh-kē jāṭnai dē-dī. Jāṭnē those bundles-of-thread enchanted-having the-Jāṭ-to they-were-given. The-Jāṭ-by sūphē-kē chārō̃ kōniō̃-mẽ chārō̃ kūkaṛī dhar-dī. Jāṭ room-of four corners-in four bundles-of-thread were-placed. The-Jāṭ kūkaṛī dhar-kē bāhir chalā-gayā, aur kah-gayā, 'maĩ kisė
the-bundles-of-thread placed-having out went, and said, 'I some waid-nē bulān jā̃sū̃, rāt-paṛē āū̃gā.' Jāṭ tō physician-to to-call will-go, at-nightfall I-will-come.' The-Jāṭ indeed chalā-gayā, tō jāṭanī pāchhē-tē suphē-mẽ baṛī. Jad ēk went-away, then the-Jāṭanī afterwards room-into entered. Then one kūkaṛī bōlī ki, 'āī-hē?' Jad dūsrī bōlī ki, bundle-of-thread spoke that, 'she-come-is?' Then the-second spoke that,
'ān dē.' Jad tīsrī bōlī ki, 'ḍarī nahĩ?' Jad
'to-come allow.' Then the-third spoke that, 'feared-she not?' Then chauthī bōlī, 'ḍaṛē, tō khāyē kyō̃?' Isē tariyā̃ fourth spoke, 'if-she-fears, then she-eats why?' In-these-very manners jāṭanī chār yā pā̃ch bār baṛī, tō kūkaṛiyā̃
the-Jāṭanī four or five times entered, and the-bundles-of-thread isē tarā̃ bōlī̃. Jad jāṭanī bhai-bhaṅk hō-kē in-this-very manner spoke. Then the-Jāṭanī terrified become-having khāṭ-mẽ ḍhai-paṛī. Itnē-mẽ jāṭ ā-gayā, aur kahā ki, the-bedstead-in fell-down. Mean-while the-Jāṭ came, and said that,
'waid tō taṛkē āvēgā; āj kōī nahĩ ā̃dā.'
'physician indeed at-dawn will-come; to-day any-one not (is-)coming.'
Jad jāṭanī bōlī, 'taĩ, napūtā, yah balā kādḥ; maĩ tō
Then the-Jāṭanī said, 'thou, childless-one, this evil turn-out; I indeed āchhī sū̃.' Jad jāṭ chārō̃ kūkaṛiyā̃ kāḍh-kar well am.' Then the-Jāṭ the-four bundles-of-thread taken-out-having phakīrnai dē āyā.
the-fakīr-to having-given came.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

There were once upon a time a Jāṭ and his wife. As soon as he had gone to the field and was safe out of the house, his wife used to make mōhan-bhōgs and chūrmās[1] and eat them all herself. Then, when he came home in the evening, she used to cry out, 'I 'm dying. I'm sick. My head aches. My stomach aches. My feet are bursting. Send for a doctor or for some wise man who will charm me well again.' The Jāṭ thought to himself that this was a queer business. 'What's the matter with her? She's getting fatter every day, and she says she's sick!' So one day he did not go to his field, but lay down and had a snooze in the village rest-house. After a little while he went home, and found his wife making mōhan-bhōgs. Then he thought to himself, 'I must cure her of this, and she'll soon be all right.' So he went to a holy-man and laid the case before him. 'My wife,' said he, 'is turning wanton. She eats mōhan-bhōgs and chūrmās, and then, when I come home from my field in the evening, she troubles my life.' The holy-man told him to bring him four reels of thread, and he would put a spell upon them. So the Jāṭ brought the four reels of thread to the holy-man, who charmed them, and gave them back to him. Then the Jāṭ took the reels home and put one in each of the four corners of the room. Then he told his wife that he was going out to look for a doctor, and would be back by nightfall.

[1] These are two kinds of sweetmeats.

As soon as he was out of the way, the wife went into the room to make some more mōhan-bhōgs. Then the reels of thread began to speak. The first said, 'has she come? The second said, 'let her come.' The third said, 'isn't she afraid?' The fourth said, 'if she is afraid, why does she eat?' The woman came into the room four or five times, and this happened on each occasion. At last she became terrified out of her wits, and fell down on her bed in a faint. Meanwhile the Jāṭ came home, and said, 'the doctor's coming in the morning. I couldn't get any one to come to-day.' She replied, 'for Heaven's sake, O Childless One,[1] turn this devilry out of the house. I am quite well now.' So the Jāṭ took out the four reels, and, after giving them back to the holy-man, returned home.

[1] A term of abuse.

[No. 13.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

JĀṆḌ DIALECT. (JIND STATE.)

ਇਕ ਰਾਜੇ ਕਾ ਛੋਰਾ ਬਿਯਾਹ ਨ ਕਰਾਵੇ। ਰਾਜਾ ਐਹਲਕਾਰਾਂਨੂੰ ਕਹਣ ਲਗਿਆ, ਇਨੂੰ ਸਮਝਾਓ ਬਿਯਾਹ ਕਰਾਵੇ, ਐਹਲਕਾਰਾਂਨੇਂ ਤੀਵੀਆਂਦੀਆਂ ਤਸਵੀਰਾਂ ਜਿਸ ਜਾਗਾ ਵਾਹਿ ਲੰਘਿਆ ਕਰਦਾ ਲਾ ਦੀਆਂ । ਇਕ ਬਚਿੱਤਰ ਕੌਰ ਧੀ ਜੱਟ ਕੀ ਤਸਵੀਰ ਪਸਿੰਦ ਕਰਕੇ ਵਾਹਿਨੇਂ ਹਾਂ ਕਰ ਲੀ ਉੱਨੂੰ ਬਿਯਾਹਣ ਚੜ੍ਹ ਗਏ। ਇੱਕ ਭਠਿਯਾਰੀ ਛੋਰੇਦੀ ਯਾਰ ਥੀ ਵਾਹਿ ਭੀ ਗੈਲ ਚਲੀ ਗਈ ਉੱਨੇਂ ਕਹਿਆ ਪਹਿਲਾਂ ਬਚਿੱਤਰ ਕੌਰਨੂੰ ਮੈਂ ਦੇਖ ਆਵਾਂ। ਦੇਖਕੇ ਕਹ ਦੀਆ ਵਾਹਿ ਬਦਸਕਲ ਹੈ ਤੂੰ ਅੱਖਾਂ ਬੰਨ੍ਹ ਕੇ ਫੇਰੇ ਲਈਂ। ਉੱਨੇਂ ਅੱਖਾਂ ਦੁਖਦੀਆਂ-ਦਾ ਬਹਾਨਾ ਕਰਕੇ ਪੱਟੀ ਬੰਨ੍ਹ ਕੇ ਫੇਰੇ ਲੈ ਲੀਏ। ਬਿਯਾਹ ਕੇ ਜਦ ਅਪਣੇ ਘਰ ਆਏ ਰਾਤ-ਨੂੰ ਵਾਹਿ ਉਸਕੇ ਪਾਸ ਗਈ। ਛੋਰੇਨੇ ਅੱਖਾਂ ਬੰਨ੍ਹ ਕੇ ਕਹ ਦੀਆ ਪਾਂਦੀਆਂ ਪੈ ਰੋਹ। ਤਿਨ ਦਿਨ ਵਾਹਿ ਇਸੀ ਤਰਾਂ ਪਾਂਦੀਆਂ ਪੈਂਦੀ ਰਹੀ। ਉੱਨੇ ਦਲੀਲ ਕਰੀ ਅੱਖਾਂ ਖੁਲਾਵਾਂ । ਵਾਹਿ ਰੋਜ ਸ੍ਰਾਏ ਮੈਂ ਭਠਿਯਾਰੀ ਕੇ ਪਾਸ ਰਹਾ ਕਰਦਾ। ਬਚਿੱਤਰ ਕੌਰ ਦਹੀਂ ਬੇਚਣ ਵਾਲੀ ਗੁੱਜਰੀ ਬਣਕੇ ਉਸ ਸਰਾਏਂ ਮਾਂਹਿ ਗਈ। ਵਾਹਿ ਸਕਲ ਦੇਖਕੇ ਬਹੁਤ ਤੜਫਿਆ ਪੁਛਣ ਲਗਿਆ ਜੋ ਕੋਈ ਰੱਖੇ ਤੂੰ ਰਹਿ ਜਾਏਂ। ਉਨੇਂ ਕਹਾ ਹਾਂ। ਛੋਰੇਨੇ ਕਹਾ ਤੇਰਾ ਡੇਰਾ ਕਿੱਥਾਂ। ਉੱਨੇ ਕਹਾ ਪਾਂਦੀਂ ਕੀ ਸਰਾਂਇ ਮਾਂਹਿ। ਵਾਹਿ ਪੁਛਦਾ ਫਿਰਾ ਪਤਾ ਨਹੀਂ ਲਗਿਆ। ਰੋ ਪਿੱਟ ਕੇ ਘਰ ਮਾਂ ਆਣ ਬੜਾ। ਰਾਤਨੂੰ ਬਚਿੱਤਰ ਕੌਰ ਜਦ ਗਈ ਫਿਰ ਅੱਖਾਂ ਬੰਨ੍ਹ ਲਈਆਂ । ਵਾਹਿ ਪਾਂਦੀਆਂ ਪੈ ਰਹੀ। ਤੜਕੇ ਉੱਠਕੇ ਕਹਣ ਲਗੀ ਐਹਮਕ ਥਾ ਸਮਝਾ ਨਹੀਂ। ਘੋੜੇ ਪਰ ਚੜ੍ਹਕੇ ਆਦਮੀ ਕੀ ਸ਼ਕਲ ਮਾਂਹਿ ਵਾਹਿ ਸਰਾਂਇ ਮਾਂਹਿ ਫਿਰ ਗਈ। ਓਨੂੰ ਪੁਛਿਆ। ਉਰੇ ਰਾਜੇ ਕਾ ਛੋਰਾ ਹੈ। ਅਰਦਲੀਆਂਨੇ ਕਹ ਦੀਆ ਹੈਗਾ । ਉੱਨੇਂ ਕਹਾ ਕਹ ਦੇਓ ਬਚਿੱਤਰ ਸਾਹਿ ਬੁਲਾਵੇ ਹੈ । ਵਾਹਿ ਉਸਕੇ ਪਾਸ ਆ ਗਿਆ। ਦੋਏ ਘੋੜਿਆਂ ਪਰ ਚੜ੍ਹਕੇ ਸਕਾਰਨੂੰ ਚਲੇ ਗਏ। ਦਾਬਨ ਮਾਂਹਿ ਜਾਕੇ ਸਕਾਰ ਮਾਰਿਆ। ਬਚਿੱਤਰ ਸਾਹਿਨੇ ਸਕਾਰ ਪਕੜਿਆ ਵਾਹਿ ਹਲਾਲ ਕਰਨ ਲਗਿਆ । ਬਚਿੱਤਰ ਸਾਹਿਕੀ ਉਂਗਲੀ ਬੱਢ ਗਈ ਛੋਰੇਨੇ ਅਪਣੇ ਸਾਫੇ ਬਿੱਚੋਂ ਕਪੜਾ ਫਾੜਕੇ ਉਂਗਲੀ ਬਨ੍ਹ ਦਈ ਔਰ ਕਹਣ ਲਗਿਆ ਮੇਰਾ ਕਲੇਜਾ ਕਟ ਗਿਆ । ਦੋਏ ਸਹਰਨੂੰ ਚਲੇ ਆਏ। ਪਹਿਲਾ ਛੋਰੇਦਾ ਘੋੜਾ ਭਜਾ ਕਰ ਦੇਖ ਕੇ ਉੱਨੂੰ ਖੜਾ ਕਰਕੇ ਬਚਿੱਤਰ ਸਾਹਿਨੇ ਘੋੜਾ ਦਬੱਲਿਆ ਔਰ ਘਰ ਮਾਂਹਿ ਆਨ ਬੜਿਆ। ਵਾਹਿ ਉਡੀਕ ਕੇ ਸਰਾਂਇ ਮਾਂਹਿ ਚਲਾ ਗਿਆ । ਸੁੰਞਨੇ ਜਦ ਘਰ ਆਏ ਬਚਿੱਤਰ ਕੌਰ ਕਹਣ ਲਗੀ ਕਿੱਥੇ ਪਵਾਂ।

ਉੱਨੇਂ ਕਹਾ ਪਾਂਦੀਆਂ। ਬਚਿੱਤਰ ਕੌਰਨੇ ਕਹਿਆ ਏ ਦੁਸਮਨ ਜਦ ਮੇਰੀ ਉਂਗਲੀ ਬੱਢੀ ਥੀ ਤੇਰਾ ਕਾਲਜਾ ਬੱਢਾ ਥਾ, ਅਬ ਤੂੰ ਕਹਤਾ ਹੈਂ ਮੈਨੂੰ ਪਾਂਦੀਆਂ ਪੈ ਰਹੋ। ਉਸੀ ਵਕਤ ਉੱਨੇ ਪੱਟੀ ਅੱਖਾਂ ਕੀ ਖੋਲ ਲਈ ਸਕਲ ਕੋ ਦੇਖਤਾਈ ਰੋਇਆ ਔਰ ਕਹਾ ਕਿ ਇਤਨੇ ਦਿਨ ਮੈਨੂੰ ਛਠਿਆਰੀਨੇ ਧੋਖੇ ਮਾਂਹਿ ਰੱਖਿਆ॥

[No. 13.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

JĀṆḌ DIALECT. (JIND STATE.)

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ik rājē-kā chhōra biyāh na karāwē. Rājā
One Rājā-of son marriage not causes-to-make. The-Rājā aihl-kārãnũ kahaṇ lagiā, 'inũ samjhāō, biyāh the-officials-to to-say began, 'him-to make-understand, marriage karāwē.' Aihl-kārãnẽ tīwīãdīã tasvīrã jis-jāgā wāhi he-may-cause-to-make.' The-officials-by women-of pictures what-place he laṅghiā-kardā lā-dīã. Ik Bachittar Kaur, dhī used-to-pass-through were-brought(-and)-put. One Bachittar Kaur, daughter Jaṭṭ-kī tasvīr pasind kar-kē wāhinẽ 'hã' kar-lī. Unnũ a-Jāṭ-of picture approved made-having him-by 'yes' was-made. Him-to biyāhaṇ charh-gaē. Ikk bhaṭhiyārī chhōrēdī yār thī, wāhi bhī to-marry they-started. One inn-girl the-boy-of beloved was, she too gail chalī-gaī. Unnẽ kahiā, 'pahilã Bachittar kaurnũ maĩ with(-him) went. Her-by it-was-said, 'first Bachittar Kaur-to I dēkh āwã.' Dēkh-kē kah-dīā, 'wāhi bad sakal hai, tũ having-seen may-come.' Seen-having it-was-said, 'she bad shaped is, thou akkhã bannh-kē phērē laĩ.' Unnẽ akkhã dukhdīãdā eyes tied-having circumambulation take.' Him-by eyes sore-of bahānā kar-kē paṭṭī bannh-kē phērē lē-līē.

pretence made-having (a-)bandage tied-having circumambulation was-taken.

Biyāh-kē jad apṇē ghar āē, rātnũ wāhi uskē Married-having when their-own house (they-)came, night-at she him-of pās gaī. Chhōrēnē akkhã bannh-kē kah-dīā, 'pãdīã near went. The-boy-by eyes tied-having it-was-said, 'at-the-foot-end-of-the-bed pai rauh.' Tin din wāhi isī tarã pãdiã paĩdī lying remain.' Three days she (in-)this manner at-the-foot-end lying rahī. Unnē dalīl karī, 'akkhã khulāwã.'

remained. Her-by consideration was-made, 'eyes I-should-cause-to-be-opened.'

Wāhi rōj sarāē-maĩ bhaṭhiyārī-kē pās rahā-kardā. Bachittar Kaur
He every-day the-inn-in the-inn-girl-of near used-to-live. Bachittar Kaur dahĩ bēchaṇ-wālī Gujjrī baṇ-kē us sarāẽ-mãhi gaī.

curds seller Gujrī (cowherdess) become-having that inn-in went.

Wāhi sakal dēkh-kē bahut taṛphiā. Puchhaṇ lagiā, 'jō kōī
He face seen-having much was-agitated. To-ask he-began, 'if anyone ṙakkhē, tũ rahi-jāẽ?' Unnē kahā, 'hã̃.' Chhōrēnē keep(-thee), thou wouldst-live?' Her-by it-was-said, 'yes.' The-boy-by kahā, 'tērā ḍērā kitthã̃?' Unnē kahā, 'pãdī̃-kī it-was-said, 'thy staying-place where(-is)?' By-her it-was-said, 'foot-end-of sarãi-mãhi.' Wāhi puchhdā phirā, patā nahī̃ lagiā.
inn-in.' He asking wandered, trace not was-found.

Rō-piṭṭ-kē ghar-mã̃ āṇ-baṛā. Rātnũ Bachittar
Wept-beaten-himself-having the-house-in coming-entered. Night-to Bachittar Kaur jad gaī, phir akkhã̃ bannh-laīã̃. Wāhi pãdiã̃ pai Kaur when went, again eyes were-tied. She the-foot-end lying rahī. Taṛkē uṭṭh-kē kahaṇ lagī, 'aihmak thā, remained. At-dawn got-up-having to-say she-began, 'fool he-was, samjhā nahī̃.' Ghōṛē-par chaṛh-kē ādmī-kī sakal-mãhi wāhi he-understood not.' A-horse-on mounted-having a-man-of form-in she sarãi-mãhi phir gaī. Ōnhẽ puchhiā 'urē Rājē-kā chhōrā
the-inn-in again went. By-her it-was-asked 'here the-Rājā-of son hai?' Ardalīãnē kah-dīā, 'haigā.' Unnẽ kahā, 'kah-dēō is?' Orderlies-by it-was-said, 'he-is.' Her-by it-was-said, 'tell(-him) Bachittar-Sāhi bulāvē hai.' Wāhi us-kē pās ā-giā. Dōē ghōṛiã̃-par Bachittar-Sāhi calling is.' He her-of near came. Both horses-on chaṛh-kē sakārnũ chalē-gaē. Dāban-mãhi jā-kē sakār mounted-having hunting-for went-forth. Forest-in gone-having hunted-animal māriā. Bachittar-Sāhinē sakār pakaṛiā. Wāhi halāl was-killed. Bachittar-Sāhi-by a-hunted-animal was-caught. He slaughtering karan lagiā. Bachittar-Sāhi-kī ũglī baḍḍh-gaī. Chhōrēnē apṇē sāphē to-do began. Bachittar-Sāhi-of finger cut-was. The-boy-by his-own turban bichchõ kapṛā phāṛ-kē ũglī bannh-daī, aur kahaṇ lagiā, in-from cloth having-torn the-finger binding-was-given, and to-say he-began,
'mērā kalējā kaṭ-giā.' Dōē saharnũ chalē-āē. Pahilā chhōrēdā
'my heart was-cut.' Both the-city-to came. At-first the-boy-of ghōṛā bhajā-kar dēkh-kē unnũ khaṛā kar-kē horse caused-to-run-having seen-having him-to standing-still made-having Bachittar Sāhinē ghōṛā daballiā, aur ghar-mãhi ān-baṛiā.
Bachittar Sāhi-by the-horse was-made-to-run, and the-house-in entered.
Wāhi uḍīk-kē sarãi-mãhi chalā-giā. Sañjhnō jad ghar
He waited-having the-inn-in having-gone-went. Evening-at when the-house āē, Bachittar Kaur kahaṇ lagī, 'kitthē pawã̃?' Unnẽ he-came, Bachittar Kaur to-say began, 'where should-I-lie?' Him-by kahā, 'pãdiã.' Bachittar Kaurnē kahiā, 'ai dusman, it-was-said, 'at-the-foot-end.' Bachittar Kaur-by it-was-said, 'O enemy, jad mērī ũglī baḍḍhī-thī tērā kāljā baḍḍhā-thā, ab tũ kahtā-haĩ

when my finger cut-was thy heart cut-was, now thou saying-art mainũ pãdiã pai rahō.' Usī wakat unnē paṭṭī me-to at-foot-end lying remain.' At-that-very time him-by bandage akkhã̃-kī khōl-laī. Sakal-kō dēkhtāī rōiā aur kahā ki, eyes-of was-opened. The-form-to on-seeing-even he-wept and said that,
'itnē-din mainũ bhaṭhiārīnē dhōkē-mã̃hi rakkhiā.'
'so-many-days me-to the-inn-girl-by deception-in it-was-kept.'

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

Once upon a time there was a king whose son would not marry. So he told his ministers to make the prince marry. They hung pictures of various young women on the wall of a place by which the prince used to pass, and he agreed to marry the original of one of the pictures, namely, a Jāṭ girl named Bachittar Kaur. So they all set out for the marriage. Now he was entangled with a low wench of the town inn, and she accompanied him on his journey to his wedding. She advised him to let her first go and see Bachittar Kaur, and then she would come back and describe her to him. He sent her, and when she returned she said, 'she's horribly ugly. I'd advise you to bandage your eyes when you are walking round the wedding altar with her.' So the prince pretended that his eyes were sore, and kept them tight bandaged during the wedding ceremony. After the marriage rites had been duly performed they returned home, and at nightfall his bride was brought to him. The boy had his eyes tight bandaged, and told her to lie down at the foot of the bed and stay there. This thing went on for three days, and then she said to herself that she must get his eyes unbandaged someway or other. As for the prince he used to go to the inn each day to visit his trollop. So Bachittar Kaur disguised herself as a Gūjar tyre-seller and went to the inn. As soon as the prince saw her face he fell desperately in love with her, and asked her if she was willing to live with anyone as his kept woman. 'Yes,' said she. So the prince asked her where she lived. 'At the Foot-of-the-Bed Hotel,' said she and went away. So the prince wandered about the town asking for the Foot-of-the-Bed Hotel, but no one could tell him where it was, and he returned home weeping and beating his breast. At night he tied up his eyes as usual, and Bachittar Kaur came and lay at the foot of the bed. At dawn she said to herself, 'Well he is a fool, not to understand.' Then she dressed herself like a man and mounted a horse and rode off to the inn. She asked if the king's son was there. The orderlies told her he was. 'Then tell him,' said she, 'that Bachittar Shāh wants to see him.' So the prince came out, and they both rode off on their horses to hunt. In the forest Bachittar Shāh captured a deer, and got down to kill it in the orthodox manner. As she did so she cut her finger, and the prince tore a piece of cloth off his turban and tied up the wound. As he did so he said, 'it is not your finger, but my heart, that is really cut.' Then they returned to the city. When the prince began to go on ahead, she made him stop. Then she galloped her own horse and got home

Wāhi sakal dēkh-kē bahut taṛphiā. Puchhaṇ lagiā, 'jō kōī
He face seen-having much was-agitated. To-ask he-began, 'if anyone rakkhē, tũ rahi-jāẽ?' Unnē kahā, 'hã̃.' Chhōrēnē keep(-thee), thou wouldst-live?' Her-by it-was-said, 'yes.' The-boy-by kahā, 'tērā ḍērā kitthã̃?' Unnē kahā, 'pãdī̃-kī
it-was-said, 'thy staying-place where(-is)?' By-her it-was-said, 'foot-end-of sarãi-mãhi.' Wāhi puchhdā phirā, patā nahī̃ lagiā.
inn-in.' He asking wandered, trace not was-found.
Rō-piṭṭ-kē ghar-mã̃ āṇ-baṛā. Rātnũ Bachittar
Wept-beaten-himself-having the-house-in coming-entered. Night-to Bachittar
Kaur jad gaī, phir akkhã̃ bannh-laīã̃. Wāhi pãdiã̃ pai Kaur when went, again eyes were-tied. She the-foot-end lying rahī. Taṛkē uṭṭh-kē kahaṇ lagī, 'aihmak thā, remained. At-dawn got-up-having to-say she-began, 'fool he-was, samjhā nahī̃.' Ghōṛē-par chaṛh-kē ādmī-kī sakal-mãhi wāhi
he-understood not.' A-horse-on mounted-having a-man-of form-in she sarãi-mãhi phir gaī. Ōnhẽ puchhiā 'urē Rājē-kā chhōrā
the-inn-in again went. By-her it-was-asked 'here the-Rājā-of son hai?' Ardalīãnē kah-dīā, 'haigā.' Unnẽ kahā, 'kah-dēō is?' Orderlies-by it-was-said, 'he-is.' Her-by it-was-said, 'tell(-him)
Bachittar-Sāhi bulāvē hai.' Wāhi us-kē pās ā-giā. Dōē ghōṛiã̃-par Bachittar-Sāhi calling is.' He her-of near came. Both horses-on chaṛh-kē sakārnũ chalē-gaē. Dāban-mãhi jā-kē sakār mounted-having hunting-for went-forth. Forest-in gone-having hunted-animal māriā. Bachittar-Sāhinē sakār pakaṛiā. Wāhi halāl was-killed. Bachittar-Sāhi-by a-hunted-animal was-caught. He slaughtering karan lagiā. Bachittar-Sāhi-kī ũglī baḍḍh-gaī. Chhōrēnē apṇē sāphē to-do began. Bachittar-Sāhi-of finger cut-was. The-boy-by his-own turban bichchõ kapṛā phāṛ-kē ũglī bannh-daī, aur kahaṇ lagiā,
in-from cloth having-torn the-finger binding-was-given, and to-say he-began,
'mērā kalējā kaṭ-giā.' Dōē saharnũ chalē-āē. Pahilā chhōrēdā
'my heart was-cut.' Both the-city-to came. At-first the-boy-of ghōṛā bhajā-kar dēkh-kē unnũ khaṛā kar-kē
horse caused-to-run-having seen-having him-to standing-still made-having Bachittar Sāhinē ghōṛā daballiā, aur ghar-mãhi ān-baṛiā.
Bachittar Sāhi-by the-horse was-made-to-run, and the-house-in entered.
Wāhi uḍīk-kē sarãi-mãhi chalā-giā. Sañjhnō jad ghar
He waited-having the-inn-in having-gone-went. Evening-at when the-house
āē, Bachittar Kaur kahaṇ lagī, 'kitthē pawã̃?' Unnẽ
he-came, Bachittar Kaur to-say began, 'where should-I-lie?' Him-by kahā, 'pā̃diā̃.' Bachittar Kaurnē kahiā, 'ai dusman, it-was-said, 'at-the-foot-end.' Bachittar Kaur-by it-was-said, 'O enemy, jad mērī ũglī baḍḍhī-thī tērā kāljā baḍḍhā-thā, ab tũ kahtā-haĩ

when my finger cut-was thy heart cut-was, now thou saying-art mainũ pā̃diā̃ pai rahō.' Usī wakat unnē paṭṭī me-to at-foot-end lying remain.' At-that-very time him-by bandage akkhā̃-kī khōl-laī. Sakal-kō dēkhtāī rōiā aur kahā ki, eyes-of was-opened. The-form-to on-seeing-even he-wept and said that,
'itnē-din mainũ bhaṭhiārīnē dhōkē-mā̃hi rakkhiā.'
'so-many-days me-to the-inn-girl-by deception-in it-was-kept.'

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

Once upon a time there was a king whose son would not marry. So he told his ministers to make the prince marry. They hung pictures of various young women on the wall of a place by which the prince used to pass, and he agreed to marry the original of one of the pictures, namely, a Jāṭ girl named Bachittar Kaur. So they all set out for the marriage. Now he was entangled with a low wench of the town inn, and she accompanied him on his journey to his wedding. She advised him to let her first go and see Bachittar Kaur, and then she would come back and describe her to him. He sent her, and when she returned she said, 'she's horribly ugly. I'd advise you to bandage your eyes when you are walking round the wedding altar with her.' So the prince pretended that his eyes were sore, and kept them tight bandaged during the wedding ceremony. After the marriage rites had been duly performed they returned home, and at nightfall his bride was brought to him. The boy had his eyes tight bandaged, and told her to lie down at the foot of the bed and stay there. This thing went on for three days, and then she said to herself that she must get his eyes unbandaged someway or other. As for the prince he used to go to the inn each day to visit his trollop. So Bachittar Kaur disguised herself as a Gūjar tyre-seller and went to the inn. As soon as the prince saw her face he fell desperately in love with her, and asked her if she was willing to live with anyone as his kept woman. 'Yes,' said she. So the prince asked her where she lived. 'At the Foot-of-the-Bed Hotel,' said she and went away. So the prince wandered about the town asking for the Foot-of-the-Bed Hotel, but no one could tell him where it was, and he returned home weeping and beating his breast. At night he tied up his eyes as usual, and Bachittar Kaur came and lay at the foot of the bed. At dawn she said to herself, 'Well he is a fool, not to understand.' Then she dressed herself like a man and mounted a horse and rode off to the inn. She asked if the king's son was there. The orderlies told her he was. 'Then tell him,' said she, 'that Bachittar Shāh wants to see him.' So the prince came out, and they both rode off on their horses to hunt. In the forest Bachittar Shāh captured a deer, and got down to kill it in the orthodox manner. As she did so she cut her finger, and the prince tore a piece of cloth off his turban and tied up the wound. As he did so he said, 'it is not your finger, but my heart, that is really cut.' Then they returned to the city. When the prince began to go on ahead, she made him stop. Then she galloped her own horse and got home safely without being observed. He waited for his comrade to return, but as she did not, he went to the town inn to console himself there. When he came home in the evening Bachittar Kaur asked him where she was to lie. 'At the foot of the bed,' said he. Then she cried out, 'O mine enemy, when my finger was cut, your heart was cut; and now you tell me to lie at the foot of the bed.' Then the prince tore the bandage from off his eyes, and when he saw her beauty he wept and cried, 'Ah, for so many days hath that inn-wench deceived me.'

MĀLWĀĪ.

The Mālwā is the name of the old settled dry country of the Sikh Jaṭṭs to the east of the river Sutlej. It includes the whole of the British district of Ferozepore, and the greater part of Ludhiana. It also includes the states of Faridkot and Maler-Kotla, and parts of the states of Patiala, Nabha, and Jind. Moreover, we must further include the Chirak Taḥṣīl of the state of Kalsia, which lies in the Ferozepore district. In Ludhiana, to the north of the Mālwā, the rich country on the south side of the Sutlej, in which sugar-cane grows, is known as the Pōwādh. The Pōwādh, as we have already seen, extends further to the south-east, and occupies part of Umballa, and the east of the Phulkian states. We may say that the western boundary of the Mālwā is the Sutlej. Its northern is the Pōwādh country of Ludhiana, and (in Ferozepore) again the Sutlej. Its eastern boundary may be roughly taken as the 76th degree of East Longitude, east of which Pōwādhī Pañjābī is spoken.

South of the Mālwā, in the south of the district of Ferozepore, and in the Sirsa Taḥṣīl of Hissar, lies the Rōhī or Jaṅgal. This is the great dry tract between the valleys of the Ghaggar and of the Sutlej, which was to the Sikhs until lately what the prairie, or backwoods, or bush, was to the early colonists in America and Australia.[1] Cultivation is extending into the Jaṅgal from the Mālwā, and as tracts become settled they become considered as part of the Mālwā, so that the area of the Jaṅgal is continually decreasing. South of the Jaṅgal lies the Bāgṛī-speaking country of Bikaner. A mixture of Bāgṛī and Pañjābī, which I call Bhaṭṭiānī, is spoken in the extreme south of Ferozepore, and moreover, in that district, extends north along the left bank of the Sutlej under the name of Rāṭhaurī.

The language of the Mālwā and Jaṅgal tracts is practically the same. It is called Mālwāī, or the language of the Mālwā, Jaṅgalī, or the language of the Jaṅgal, and Jaṭkī, because most of its speakers are Jaṭṭs. The use of the latter name should be avoided, so as to prevent confusion with the altogether different Jaṭkī which is a form of Lahndā.

The number of speakers of Mālwāī, under its varying names, is estimated to be as follows:—

Locality.	Number of speakers.
Ferozepore	709,000
Ludhiana	640,000
Faridkot	110,000
Maler-Kotla	75,295
Patiala	334,500
Nabha	207,771
Jind	44,021
Kalsia	9,467
TOTAL	2,130,054

These figures are somewhat too large, as those for Ludhiana include the inhabitants of the Pōwādh tract, which have not been separately estimated. The excess is not, however, of importance.

[1] See Sirsa Settlement Report (1879-83), p. 30.

Mālwāī does not differ materially from the standard Pañjābī of the grammars. In fact, if we are to judge from the specimens, the standard form of the language is used everywhere (except in that cerebral ṇ and ḷ disappear as we go south), and the irregular forms are not substituted but are employed at option.

The principal peculiarity of Mālwāī is that, as we go south, a dental n and l are substituted for a cerebral ṇ and ḷ respectively. Thus in Ferozepore we have jānā, not jāṇā, to go; hun, not huṇ, now; nāl, not nāḷ, with; and kōl, not kōḷ, near. The letters b and v are freely interchangeable. Thus, bēkh, for vēkh, see; bich or vich, in. The last word also illustrates another characteristic of Mālwāī, that the final consonant of a word is not doubled. Thus, vich, not vichch, in (but vichchõ, from in, in which the ch is not final); ik, not ikk, one. Sometimes even medial consonants are not doubled as in ghaliā (not ghalliā), jutī (not juttī), nachandī (not nachchandī), all from Ferozepore. It is noteworthy that this non-doubling, with a short preceding vowel, is typical of the Piśācha languages. When i falls between two vowels, it is, as elsewhere, often written y. Thus, āyā, for āiā, came. This is, however, little more than a point of spelling. W between two vowels is often changed to m. Thus, hōmãgā, for hōwãgā, I shall be. This also occurs in Pōwādhī.

In pronouns, āpã is used to mean 'we.' This is borrowed from Rājasthānī, but the meaning of the word is changed. In Rājasthānī and Gujarātī, āpã means only 'we, including the person addressed.' Thus, to give an oft-quoted example, if you say to your cook, 'we shall dine at eight o'clock,' you must not use āpã, or you will invite your cook to dine with you.

In Mālwāī there does not seem to be any such restriction of meaning. Thus Mr. Newton gives, as an example of its use, Mālwē dēs-tē āpã āē-hã, we have come from the Mālwā region.

For the second person plural, note the form thōnũ, to you, in the Nābhā specimen.

In Ferozepore, āwdā is regularly employed to mean 'own,' instead of the standard āpṇā. Apnā, with the first a short and a dental n, is also commonly met with over the whole tract.

In the other pronouns t is often substituted for s. Thus (Mr. Newton's examples) ut (for us) vēlē, at that time; it (for is) kar-kē, for this reason; kitē (for kisē) wal, in some direction; kit (for kis) kamm, of what use.

Kuchh or kush is 'anything.' Indeed chh seems to be often pronounced as ś or sh in other words.

In verbs the second person singular often loses its nasal and takes the Western Hindī form. Thus, hai, for haĩ, thou art.

Khaṛōnā, to stand up, is contracted from khaṛā-hōnā. So also in Lahndā.

Other borrowings from Western Hindī are—

(1) The occasional employment of the agent case for the subject of an intransitive verb in the past tense. Thus (Ferozepore), chhōṭē putrnē giā, literally, by the younger son it was gone, i.e. the younger son went.

(2) The occasional employment of kā for the genitive. Thus, satã dinã-kī (for dinãdī) muhilat, a delay of seven days; gal-kā antrā, the explanation of the thing.

As specimens of Mālwāī I give—

(1) A version of a portion of the Prodigal Son from Ludhiana.

(2) A conversation between two villagers from Ludhiana.
(3) Another version of the Parable from Taḥṣīl Muktsar in Ferozepore.
(4) A folktale from Taḥṣīl Fazilka, Ferozepore.
(5) A folktale from District Phul in the Nabha state.
(6) A short passage from Thana Gobindgadh in Patiala.

The first five are in the Gurmukhī character, and the sixth in the Persian character.

As the Ludhiana specimens possess some local peculiarities, I give them first, with a brief account of the points which specially apply to this locality.

In Ludhiana, the village people are fond of adding u to words ending in a consonant. Thus, chiru, a space of time; mālu, property; dhanu, wealth; kahīku, how much? paru, but; kuchh or kuchhu, anything; biāj or biāju, interest; dudhu, milk. This also occurs in the Braj Bhākhā dialect of Western Hindī.

In spelling, y is sometimes substituted for i between two vowels; thus, hōyā, for hōiā, became.

In the declension of nouns, vichch, in, becomes chi, added directly to the noun as a termination. Thus, mulakchi, in a country; luchchpanēchi, in debauchery; khētā̃chi, in fields. Similarly, vichchō̃, from in, becomes chō̃. Thus, unhā̃chō̃, from among them.

The first two personal pronouns often take the forms hamā and tumā in the oblique plural. Thus, hamānū̃, to us; tumānū̃, to you. These are still more common in the neighbouring Pōwādhī, where Pañjābī merges into Hindōstānī. There is a curious inversion of the aspirate in thuāḍā, for tuhāḍā, your, and ōdhā, for ōhdā, his. Compare thōnū̃, to you, in the Nabha specimen. The genitive of the reflexive pronoun is apṇā, not āpṇā. This also is an Eastern form.

The verb dēṇā, to give, makes the first person plural of its future dēmā̃gē, we shall give. This is another Eastern peculiarity.

As specimens of the village dialect of Ludhiana I give a portion of a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son, and a conversation between two villagers.

[No. 14.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

MĀLWĀĪ DIALECT. (DISTRICT, LUDHIANA.)

SPECIMEN I.

ਕਿਸੇ ਆਦਮੀਦੇ ਦੋ ਪੁੱਤ ਸੀ। ਉਨ੍ਹਾਂਚੋਂ ਛੋਟੇ ਪੁੱਤਨੇ ਬਾਪਨੂੰ ਆਖਿਆ ਪੇਓ ਮਾਲਦਾ ਜੇਹੜਾ ਹਿੱਸਾ ਮੈਨੂੰ ਆਉਂਦਾ ਹੈ ਵੰਡ ਦੇ। ਉਹਨੇ ਅਪਣੇ ਜੀਉਦਿਯਾਂ ਓਧਾ ਹਿੱਸਾ ਵੰਡ ਦਿੱਤਾ। ਥੋੜਾਈ ਚਿਰੁ ਹੋਯਾ ਸੀ ਛੋਟਾ ਸਭ ਕੁਛ ਕੱਠਾ ਕਰਕੇ ਇੱਕ ਦੂਜੇ ਦੇਸਨੂੰ ਚਲਿਯਾ ਗਿਆ। ਓਥੇ ਜਾਕੇ ਸਾਰਾ ਮਾਲੁ ਧਨੁ ਲੁਚਪਣੇਚਿ ਉਡਾ ਦਿੱਤਾ। ਜਦ ਸਾਰਾ ਮੁੱਕ ਚੁੱਕਿਆ ਉਸ ਮੁਲਕਚਿ ਕਾਲ੍ ਪੈ ਗਿਆ। ਤਾਂ ਉਸ ਦੇਸਦੇ ਇੱਕ ਸਹਿਰੀ ਨਾਲ੍ ਜਾ ਰਲਿਆ। ਓਹਨੇ ਉਸਨੂੰ ਅਪਣਿਆਂ ਖੇਤਾਂਚਿ ਸੂਰ ਚਾਰਣ ਘੱਲ ਦਿੱਤਾ। ਓਧਾ ਜੀ ਕੀਤਾ ਜੇਡ੍ਹੇ ਛਿਲਕੇ ਸੂਰ ਖਾਉਂਦੇ ਹਨ ਮੈਂ ਭੀ ਓਹ ਖਾਕੇ ਢਿੱਡ ਭਰ ਲਾਂ ਪਰ ਓਹਨੂੰ ਖਾਂਨਨੂੰ ਕਿਸੇਨੇ ਛਿਲਕੇ ਭੀ ਨਾਂ ਦਿੱਤੇ॥

[No. 14.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

MĀLWĀĪ DIALECT. (DISTRICT, LUDHIANA.)

SPECIMEN I.

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Kisē ādmīdē dō putt sī. Unhãchõ chhōṭē puttnē
A-certain man-of two sons were. Them-from-in the-younger son-by bāpnũ ākhiā, 'pēō, māldā jēhṛā hissā mainũ the-father-to it-was-said, 'father, property-of whatever share me-to āundā-hai, waṇḍ dē.' Uhnē apṇē jīudiyã ōdhā arriving-is, having-divided give.' Him-by in-his-own life-time his hissā waṇḍ dittā. Thōṛā-ī chiru hōyā-sī chhōṭā share having-divided was-given. A-short time been-was the-younger sabh kuchh kaṭṭhā kar-kē ikk dūjē dēsnũ chaliyā-giā.
all anything together made-having one other country-to went-away.
Ōthē jā-kē sārā mālu-dhanu luchchpaṇēchi uḍā-dittā.
There gone-having all property-wealth debauchery-in was-caused-to-fly-away.
Jad sārā mukk-chukkiā, us mulkchi kāḷ pai-giā. Tã
When all was-finished, that country-in famine fell. Then us dēsdē ikk sahirī nāḷ jā raliā. Ōhnē that country-of one citizen with having-gone (he-)joined. Him-by usnũ apṇiã khētãchi sūr chāraṇ ghall-dittā. Ōdhā- jī him-for his-own fields-in pigs to-feed it-was-sent. His mind kītā, 'jēṛhē-chhilkē sūr khāundē-han, maĩ bhī ōh was-made, 'whatever-husks the-pigs eating-are, I too those khā-kē ḍhiḍḍ bhar-lã'; par ōhnũ khānnũ kisēnē chhilkē eaten-having belly may-fill'; but him-to eating-for anyone-by the-husks bhī nã-dittē.
even were-not-given.

[No. 15.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

MĀLWĀĪ DIALECT. (DISTRICT, LUDHIANA.)

SPECIMEN II.

ਬੂਟਾ ਸਿੰਘ–ਕਿਓਂ ਭਾਈ ਫਸਲ ਕਹੀਕੁ ਹੋਈ ਹੈ ॥

ਨਥਾ ਸਿੰਘ–ਭਾਈ ਕਾਹਦੀ ਫਸਲ ਹੈ ਮੰਦਵਾੜੇਨੇ ਮਾਰ ਲਏ । ਹਾੜੀਦੀ ਬਿਜਾਈ ਤਾਂ ਚੰਗੀ ਹੋ ਗਈ ਸੀ। ਪਰੁ ਪਿੱਛੋਂ ਬਰਖਾ ਨਾ ਹੋਈ। ਕਣਕ ਹੁਲਿ ਗਈ। ਛੋਲਿਆਂਨੂੰ ਬੁੱਲਾ ਮਾਰ ਗਿਆ। ਸਰੋਂਨੂੰ ਸੁੰਡੀ ਖਾ ਗਈ ॥

ਬੂਟਾ ਸਿੰਘ–ਥੁਆਡੇ ਕੱਸੀ ਨਹੀਂ ਲਗਦੀ ॥

ਨਥਾ ਸਿੰਘ–ਮੇਰੇ ਘੁਮਾਕਨੂੰ ਕੱਸੀ ਲਗਦੀ ਸੀ । ਬੇਲ੍ਹੇ ਸਿਰ ਗੁਦਾਵਰਨੇ ਪਾਣੀ ਨਾ ਦਿੱਤਾ। ਓਹ ਬੀ ਪਾਣੀ ਬਿਨਾਂ ਹੌਲ੍ਹੀ ਹੋਈ ॥

ਬੂਟਾ ਸਿੰਘ–ਹੁਣ ਕੀ ਹਾਲ ਹੋਊ ॥

ਨਥਾ ਸਿੰਘ–ਕੁਛ ਸਰਕਾਰਦਾ ਕਰਾਇਆ ਦੇਮਾਂਗੇ ਕੁਛ ਟੱਬਰ ਪਾਲ੍ਹਾਂਗੇ ॥

ਬੂਟਾ ਸਿੰਘ–ਕੁਛ ਕਿਸੀ ਮਹਾਜਨਦਾ ਦੇਣਾ ਤਾਂ ਨਹੀਂ ॥

ਨਥਾ ਸਿੰਘ–ਮੁੰ ਦੇ ਬਿਆਹਨੂੰ ਦਸ ਕੋਡਾਂ ਲਈਆਂ ਸੀ। ਉੱਤੋਂ ਬਿਆਜੁ ਪੈ ਗਿਆ ਕੁਛ ਫਸਲ ਨਾ ਲੱਗੀ। ਸਾਹਦੀ ਪੰਡ ਭਾਰੀ ਹੋ ਗਈ। ਹੁਣ ਕੁਛ ਦੇਣਨੂੰ ਨਹੀਂ। ਬਿਆਜ ਨਾਲ੍ ਲੁਆ ਦੇਮਾਂਗੇ ॥

ਬੂਟਾ ਸਿੰਘ–ਖੁੱਲਾ ਦੇਣਾ ਹੈ ਕਿ ਭੁਏਂ ਗੈਹਣੇ ਹੈ ॥

ਨਥਾ ਸਿੰਘ–ਚਾਰਕ ਘੁਮਾਂ ਗੈਹਣੇ ਹੈ। ਖੁੱਲਾ ਬਿਆਜੁ ਬੀ ਹੈ, ਪਰੁ ਹੁਣ ਮੰਦਵਾੜੇ ਕਰਕੇ ਕੋਈ ਖੁੱਲਾ ਨਹੀਂ ਦਿੰਦਾ ॥

ਬੂਟਾ ਸਿੰਘ–ਮੈਂ ਮੈਹ ਖਰੀਦਣੀ ਹੈ। ਥੁਆਡੇ ਪਿੰਡ ਕਿਸੇ ਕੋਲ੍ਹੇ ਹੈ ॥

ਨਥਾ ਸਿੰਘ–ਸੁਣ ਵਾਲੀ ਮੈਹ ਇੱਕ ਜੱਟ ਕੋਲ੍ ਹੈ, ਪਰੁ ਰੁਪੈਈਆ ਬੌਹਤਾ ਮੰਗਦਾ ਹੈ ॥

ਬੂਟਾ ਸਿੰਘ–ਦੁਧੁ ਘਿਉ ਕਿੰਨਾਕੁ ਹੈ। ਸੂਏ ਕੌਥੇ ਹੈ ॥

ਨਥਾ ਸਿੰਘ–ਤੀਜੇ ਸੂਏ ਸੁਣਾ ਹੈ। ਦੋ ਸੇਰ ਮਖਣੀ ਹੈ ਬੀਹ ਬਾਈ ਸੇਰ ਦੁਧੁ ਹੈ। ਸੱਤਰ ਰੁਪੈਈਏ ਓਹਨੂੰ ਦੇ ਰਹੇ, ਪਰ ਓਹੁ ਅੱਸੀ ਮੰਗਦਾ ਹੈ॥

ਬੂਟਾ ਸਿੰਘ–ਐਂਨਾ ਮੁੱਲੁ ਨਹੀਂ ਲਾਉਂਦੇ। ਕੋਈ ਚਾਲੀ ਪੰਜਾਹ ਵਾਲੀਦੀ ਲੋੜ ਹੈ॥

ਨਥਾ ਸਿੰਘ–ਕਿਤੇ ਹੋਰ ਦੇਖ ਲਓ॥

[No. 15.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

MĀLWĀĪ DIALECT. (DISTRICT, LUDHIANA.)

SPECIMEN II.

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Būṭā Siṅgh.—Kiṍ, bhāī, fasal kahīku hōī-hai?
Būtā Siṅgh.—How, brother, the-crop how-much been-is?

Nathā Siṅgh.—Bhāī, kāhdī fasal hai? mandwāṛēnē Nathā Siṅgh.—Brother, what-of the-crop is? the-drought-by mār-laē. Hāṛīdī bijāī, tā̃, (we-)have-been-killed. Spring-crop-of sowing, however, chaṅgī hō-gaī-sī, paru pichchhṍ barkhā nā hōī;
good had-been, but afterwards rain not became;
kaṇak huli-gaī, chhōliā̃nū̃ bullā mār-giā.
wheat was-damaged, gram-to cold-wind injured.
Sarṍnū̃ suṇḍī khā-gaī.
Rape-seed-to caterpillars had-eaten.

Būṭā Siṅgh.— Thuāḍē kassī nahī̃ lagdī.
Būtā Siṅgh.—In-your(-village) canal not being-extended.

Nathā Siṅgh.—Mērē ghumā̃-k-nū̃ kassī lagdī-sī; Nathā Siṅgh.— My ghumāō-about-one-to the-canal being-extended-was;
bēḷē-sir Gudāwarnē pāṇī nā dittā;
in-time the-Field-Kanungo-by water not was-given;
ōh bī pāṇī binā̃ hauḷī hōī.
that(-crop) too water without poor became.

Būṭā Siṅgh.—Huṇ kī hāl hōū.
Būtā Siṅgh.—Now what circumstances will-occur.

Nathā Siṅgh.—Kuchhu Sarkārdā karāiā dēmā̃gē, kuchhu Nathā Siṅgh.— Some Government-of demand we-shall-give, some ṭabbar pāḷā̃gē.
family we-shall-support.

Būṭā Siṅgh.—Kuchhu kisī mahājandā dēṇā tā̃ nahī̃?'
Būtā Siṅgh.—Anything any banker-of debt however is-not?'

Nathā Siṅgh.—Muṇḍēdē biāhnū̃ das-kauḍā̃ laiā̃-sī, uttṍ Nathā Siṅgh.—The-son-of marriage-for ten-cowries taken-were, thereon biāju pai-giā; kuchhu phasal nā laggī.

interest was-added; at-all the-crop not flourished.

Sāhdī paṇḍ bhārī hō-gaī. Huṇ kuchh Banker-of burden heavy became. Now anything dēṇṇũ nahĩ. Biāj nāḷ paying-for is-not. Interest with(-to) luā-dēmãgē.

we-shall-give-in-addition.

Būṭā Siṅgh.—Khullā dēṇā hai, ki bhuẽ gaihṇē hai?
Būṭā Siṅgh.— Open debt is, or land hypothecated is?

Nathā Siṅgh.— Chār-k ghumã gaihṇē hai; khullā biāju Nathā Siṅgh.—Some-four ghumāō hypothecated is; open interest-bearing bī hai, paru huṇ mandwāṛē kar-kē kōī too is, but now drought owing-to anyone khullā nahĩ dindā.

open not giving.

Būṭā Siṅgh.— Maĩ maih kharīdṇī hai, thuāḍē piṇḍ Būtā Siṅgh.—By-me she-buffalo to-be-purchased is, in-your village kisō kōḷē hai?

anyone near is?

Nathā Siṅgh.— Sūṇ-wāḷī maih ikk Jaṭṭ kōḷ hai, paru rupaiīā Nathā Siṅgh.— In-calf she-buffalo one Jaṭṭ near is, but rupees bauhtā maṅgdā hai.

many demanding is.

Būṭā Siṅgh.—Dudhu ghiu kinnā-ku hai? Sūē kauthē Būtā Siṅgh.— Milk ghee how-much is? Calvings how-many hai?

is?

Nathā Siṅgh.— Tījē sūē sūṇā-hai. Dō sēr makhṇī hai, Nathā Siṅgh.—In-third calving calved-she-is. Two seer butter is, bīh bāī sēr dudhu hai. Sattar rupaiīē twenty twenty-two seer milk is. Seventy rupees ōhnũ dē-rahē, paru ōhu assī maṅgdā-hai.

him-to giving-was, but he eighty demanding-is.

Būṭā Siṅgh.— Ainnā mullu nahĩ lāũdē. Kōī-chāḷī Būtā Siṅgh.— So-much price not I-will-spend. Some-forty pañjāh-wālīdī lōṛ hai.

fifty-worth-of need is.

Nathā Siṅgh.— Kitē hōr dēkh-laō.
Nathā Siṅgh.—Some-where else look-out.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

Conversation between Būtā Siṅgh and Nathā Siṅgh.

Būtā Siṅgh.—O brother, how much was the outturn of last harvest?

Nathā Siṅgh.—O brother, owing to the drought it was not much. The outturn of the spring crop promised better, but it was damaged owing to want of rain. The gram was completely destroyed by a cold wind, and the rape seed was eaten by caterpillars.

Būtā Siṅgh.—Is your village irrigated by a canal?

Nathā Siṅgh.—Only one ghumāō[1] of my land was irrigated by a canal, but the Field Kanungo refused to give water, when the water was badly wanted; and therefore the outturn of that land was poor.

Būtā Siṅgh.—Now, what will happen?

Nathā Siṅgh.—I will have to pay the revenue, and also to support my family.

Būtā Siṅgh.—Have you taken loan from any banker?

Nathā Siṅgh.—I took 10 rupees on the marriage of my son, and have to pay now the interest on it. The harvest is poor. The loan I took from a banker is a heavy burden on me, and now I have nothing to pay the debt. Later on, I will pay the principal with interest.

Būtā Siṅgh.—Did you take the loan as a debt, or did you hypothecate the land as a security for it?

Nathā Siṅgh.—Four ghumāō of land were hypothecated; the extra sum I took on loan, I will now have to pay the interest on it, but as the outturn is small, I cannot pay the principal at present.

Būtā Siṅgh.—I want to buy a buffalo. Has any man of your village got one for sale?

Nathā Siṅgh.—A Jaṭṭ has a buffalo in calf, but the price he demands is too much.

Būtā Siṅgh.—How much milk and ghee does the buffalo give? and how many times has it calved?

Nathā Siṅgh.—It has calved thrice already. It gives 22 seers and 2 seers of milk and butter respectively. Seventy rupees were offered to that Jaṭṭ for the buffalo, but he demands 80 rupees.

Būtā Siṅgh.—Such a large sum I cannot spare for buying a buffalo; I want to buy a buffalo worth 40 or 50 rupees.

Nathā Siṅgh.—Search for a buffalo somewhere else.

---

[1] A ghumāō is a local land measure. Three double paces squared equal one mandlā. Fifty-six mandlās equal one ghumāō.

The Mālwāī spoken outside Ludhiana has fewer peculiarities, as will be seen from the following specimens :—

[No. 16.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

MĀLWĀĪ DIALECT. (DISTRICT FEROZEPORE, TAḤṢĪL MUKTSAR.)

ਇਕ ਆਦਮੀਦੇ ਦੋ ਪੁਤ੍ ਸੀਗੇ। ਉਨ੍ਹਾਂ ਵਿਚੋਂ ਛੋਟੇ ਪੁਤ੍ਰਨੇ ਪਿਓਨੂੰ ਆਖਿਆ ਜੋ ਬਾਪੂ ਜੇਹੜਾ ਹਿੱਸਾ ਮਾਲਦਾ ਮੈਂਨੂੰ ਆਂਵਦਾ ਹੈ, ਓਹ ਮੈਂਨੂੰ ਦੇ ਦੇ। ਤਾਂ ਓਹਨੇ ਮਾਲ ਉਨ੍ਹਾਂਨੂੰ ਵੰਡ ਦਿੱਤਾ। ਥੋੜੇ ਦਿਨਾਂ ਪਿਛੋਂ ਛੋਟੇ ਪੁਤ੍ਰਨੇ ਸਬ ਕੁਛ ਕੱਠਾ ਕਰਕੇ ਇਕ ਦੂਰ ਵਲਾਯਤਨੂੰ ਉੱਠ ਗਿਆ। ਤੇ ਓਥੇ ਆਵਦਾ ਮਾਲ ਭੈੜੇ ਲਛਨਾਂ ਵਿਚ ਗਵਾਯਾ। ਜਦਾਂ ਸਬ ਕੁਛ ਲਗ ਗਿਆ ਤਾਂ ਓਥੋਂਦੇ ਇਕ ਸਰਦਾਰ ਕੋਲ ਗਿਆ। ਓਸਨੇ ਓਹਨੂੰ ਆਵਦੀ ਪੈਲੀ ਵਿਚ ਸੂਰ ਚਰਾਵਨ ਘਲਿਆ। ਤੇ ਓਹ ਤਰਸਦਾ ਸੀ ਜੋ ਉਨ੍ਹਾਂ ਛਿੱਲਾਂ-ਨਾਲ ਜੋ ਸੂਰ ਖਾਂਦੇ ਸਨ ਆਵਦਾ ਢਿਡ ਭਰੇ। ਓਹਨੂੰ ਕੋਈ ਖਾਨਨੂੰ ਨਹੀਂ ਦੇਂਦਾ ਸੀ। ਤਦ ਓਹਨੂੰ ਸੁਰਤ ਆਈ ਤੇ ਆਖਨ ਲੱਗਾ। ਜੋ ਮੇਰੇ ਪਿਓਦੇ ਸੀਰੀਆਂਨੂੰ ਵੀ ਰੋਟੀਦੀ ਪਰਵਾਹ ਨਹੀਂ, ਤੇ ਮੈਂ ਭੁੱਖਾ ਮਰਦਾ ਹਾਂ। ਮੈਂ ਉੱਠਕੇ ਆਵਦੇ ਪਿਓ ਕੋਲ ਜਾਵਾਂਗਾ ਤੇ ਓਹਨੂੰ ਆਖਾਂਗਾ ਜੋ ਪਿਓ ਮੈਂ ਤੇਰਾ ਤੇ ਰਬਦਾ ਗੁਨਾਹੀ ਹਾਂ। ਮੈਂਨੂੰ ਹੁਨ ਸਜਦਾ ਨਹਾਂ ਜੋ ਤੇਰਾ ਪੁਤ ਸਦਾਵਾਂ। ਮੈਂਨੂੰ ਆਵਦੇ ਸੀਰੀਆਂ ਵਿਚ ਰਖ ਲੈ। ਫੇਰ ਓਹ ਦੁਰਕੇ ਆਵਦੇ ਪਿਓ ਕੋਲ ਜਾ ਨਿਕਲਯਾ। ਤੇ ਓਹ ਅਜੇ ਦੂਰ ਹੀ ਸੀ ਜੋ ਓਹਦੇ ਪਿਓਨੂੰ ਓਸ ਤੇ ਤਰਸ ਆਯਾ, ਤੇ ਭਜਕੇ ਓਹਨੂੰ ਗਲ ਲਾ ਲਿਆ ਤੇ ਓਹਨੂੰ ਚੁੰਮਯਾ। ਪੁਤ੍ਰਨੇ ਪਿਓਨੂੰ ਆਖਿਆ ਜੋ ਬਾਪੂ ਮੈਂ ਰਬਦਾ ਤੇ ਤੇਰਾ ਗੁਨਾਹੀ ਹਾਂ। ਮੈਂਨੂੰ ਹੁਨ ਲੈਕੀ ਨਹੀਂ ਜੋ ਹੁਨ ਤੇਰਾ ਪੁਤ ਸਦਾਵਾਂ। ਓਹਦੇ ਪਿਓਨੇ ਆਵਦਿਆਂ ਸੀਰੀਆਂਨੂੰ ਆਖਿਆ ਭਈ ਚੰਗੇ ਤੋਂ ਚੰਗੇ ਲੀੜੇ ਕਢ ਲਿਆਓ ਤੇ ਏਹਨੂੰ ਪਨ੍ਹਾਓ ਤੇ ਹੱਥ ਵਿਚ ਮੁੰਦਰੀ ਤੇ ਪੈਰਾਂ ਵਿਚ ਜੁਤੀ ਪਵਾਓ। ਅਸੀਂ ਖਾਈਏ ਤੇ ਮੌਜਾਂ ਕਰੀਏ ਜੋ ਏਹ ਮੇਰਾ ਪੁਤ੍ ਮਰ ਗਿਆ ਸੀ ਤੈ ਹੁਨ ਜੀਆ ਹੈ ਗਵਾਚ ਗਿਆ ਸੀ ਤੇ ਹੁਨ ਲਭਯਾ ਹੈ। ਫੇਰ ਓਹ ਖੁਸੀ ਮਨਾਵਨ ਲੱਗੇ॥

ਤੇ ਓਹਦਾ ਵੱਡਾ ਪੁਤ੍ ਖੇਤ ਸੀ। ਜੋ ਘਰਦੇ ਨੇੜੇ ਆਯਾ ਤਾਂ ਗਾਵਨ ਤੇ ਨਚਨ-ਦੀ ਅਵਾਜ ਸੁਨੀ। ਤੇ ਇਕ ਸੀਰੀਨੂੰ ਬੁਲਾਕੇ ਪੁਛਿਆ ਜੋ ਏਹ ਕੀ ਹੈ। ਓਸਨੇ ਓਹਨੂੰ ਆਖਿਆ ਜੋ ਤੇਰਾ ਭਰਾ ਆਯਾ ਹੈ, ਤੈ ਤੇਰੇ ਪਿਓਨੇ ਦੌਟੀ ਕੀਤੀ ਹੈ ਜੋ ਭਲਾ ਚੰਗਾ ਘਰ ਆਯਾ ਹੈ। ਓਹਦੇ ਜੀ ਵਿਚ ਗੁੱਸਾ ਆਯਾ ਜੋ ਘਰ ਨ ਵੜਾਂ। ਫੇਰ ਓਹਦੇ ਪਿਓਨੇ ਆਕੇ

ਮਨਾਯਾ। ਓਸਨੇ ਆਵਦੇ ਪਿਓਨੂੰ ਆਖਿਆ ਜੋ ਦੇਖ ਐਨੇਂ ਵਰਹੇ ਮੈਂ ਤੇਰੀ ਟਹਲ· ਕੀਤੀ ਤੇ ਕਦੇ ਤੇਰਾ ਮੋੜ ਨਾ ਕੀਤਾ ਪਰ ਤੂੰ ਕਦੀ ਇਕ ਬਕਰੀਦਾ ਪਠੋਰਾ ਵੀ ਮੈਂਨੂੰ ਨਾ ਦਿੱਤਾ ਜੋ ਕਦੀ ਆਵਦੇ ਬੇਲੀਆਂ ਵਿੱਚ ਬਹਕੇ ਖੁਸੀ ਮਨਾਵਾਂ। ਜਦ ਤੇਰਾ ਏਹ ਪੁਤ੍ਰ ਆਯਾ ਜਿਨਹੇ ਤੇਰਾ ਮਾਲ ਕੰਜਰਾਂ ਵਿਚ ਉਜ਼ਾਯਾ ਸੀ ਤਾਂ ਤੂੰ ਵੱਡੀ ਰੋਟੀ ਕੀਤੀ। ਤਦ ਓਸਦੇ ਪਿਓਨੇ ਓਹਨੂੰ ਆਖਿਆ ਜੋ ਪੁਤ੍ਰ ਤੂੰ ਤਾਂ ਸਦਾ ਮੇਰੇ ਕੋਲ ਹੈਂ। ਜੋ ਕੁਸ਼ ਮੇਰਾ ਹੈ ਸੋ ਤੇਰਾ ਹੈ। ਫੇਰ ਖੁਸੀ ਮਨਾਵਨਾ ਤੇ ਖੁਸੀ ਹੋਵਨਾਂ ਚੰਗੀ ਗਲ ਸੀ ਜੋ ਏਹ ਤੇਰਾ ਭਾਈ ਮਰ ਗਿਆ ਸੀ ਤੇ ਮੁੜਕੇ ਜੰਮਿਆ ਹੈ ਤੇ ਗੁਵਾਚ ਗਿਆ ਸੀ ਤੇ ਹੁਨ ਹੱਥ ਆਯਾ ਹੈ॥

[No. 16.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

MĀLWĀĪ DIALECT. (DISTRICT FEROZEPORE, TAḤṢĪL MUKTSAR.)

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ik ādmīdē dō putr sīgē. Unhã̄ vichō chhōṭē putrnē One man-of two sons were. Them from-among the-younger son-by piōnũ ākhiā jō, 'bāpū, jēhṛā hisā māldā maĩnŭ the-father-to it-was-said that, 'father, what share property-of me-to ãwdā-hai, ōh maĩnũ dē-dē.' Tã̄ ōhnē māl unhã̄nũ waṇḍ-dittā.
coming-is, that me-to give.' Then him-by property them-to was-divided.
Thōṛē dinã̄ pichhõ chhōṭē putrnē sab kuchh kaṭṭhā
A-few days afterwards the-younger son-by all anything together-having kar-kē, ik dūr walāyatnũ uṭṭh giā, tē ōthē made-having, one distant country-to having-arisen it-was-gone, and there āwdā māl bhaiṛē lachhnã̄ vich gawāyā. Jadã̄ sab kuchh his-own property ill conduct in was-squandered. When all anything lag-giā, tã̄ ōthõdē ik sardār kōl giā. Ōsnē was-spent, then that-country-of one wealthy-man near he-went. Him-by ōhnũ āwdī pailī vich sūr charāwan ghaliā. Tē ōh tarsdā sī him-as-for his-own field in swine to-tend it-was-sent. And he desiring was jō unhã̄ chillã̄-nāl jō sūr khāndē-san, āwdā ḍhiḍ bharē.
that those husks-with which the-swine eating-were, his-own belly he-may-fill.
Ōhnũ kōī khānnũ nahĩ dēndā-sī. Tad ōhnũ surt āī, tē Him-to no-one eating-for not giving-was. Then him-to senses came, and ākhan laggā jō, 'mērē piōdē sīriãnũ vī rōṭīdī parwāh to-say he-began that, 'my father-of servants-to also bread-of concern nāhĩ, tē maĩ bhukkhā mardā-hã̄. Maĩ uṭṭh-kē āwdē piō (is-)not, and I hungry dying-am. I arisen-having my-own father kōl jāwã̄gā, tē ōhnũ ākhã̄gā jō, "piō, maĩ tērā tē Rabdā near will-go, and him-to I-will-say that, "father, I of-thee and God-of gunāhī hã̄. Maĩnũ hun sajdā nahĩ jō tērā put sadāwã̄.
sinner am. Me-to now being-proper (it-is-)not that thy son I-may-be-called.
Maĩnũ āwdē sīriã̄ vich rakh-lai."' Phēr ōh ṭur-kē Me-to thine-own labourers among keep."' Then he started-having āwdē piō kōl jā-nikalyā. Tē ōh ajē dūr-hī sī, jō ōhdē his-own father near went. And he still far-even was, that him-of piōnũ ōs-tē tars āyā, tē bhaj-kē ōhnũ gal lā-lîā, the-father-to him-on pity came, and run-having him-to neck it-was-embraced, tē ōhnũ chumyā. Putrnē piōnũ ākhiā jō, 'bāpū, and him-to it-was-kissed. The-son-by the-father-to it-was-said that, 'father, maĩ Rabdā tē tērā gunāhī hãẽ; maĩnũ hun laikī nahĩ jō

I God-of and of-thee sinner am; me-to now worthiness (is-)not that hun tērā put sadāwãẽ.' Ōhdē piōnē āwdiãẽ sīriãẽnũ ākhiā, now thy son I-may-be-called.' His father-by his-own servants-to it-was-said,
'bhaī, chaṅgē-tõ chaṅgē līṛē kaḍh-liāō, tē ēhnũ panhāō; tē
'ho, good-than good dress bring-forth, and this-one-to put-on; and hatth vich mũdarī, tē pairãẽ vich jutī pawāō; asĩ khāīē tē hand in ring, and feet in shoes put-on; we may-eat and maujãẽ karīē; jō ēh mērā putr mar-giā-sī, tē hun jīā happiness may-do; because this my son dead-gone-was, and now alive hai; gavāch giā-sī, tē hun labhyā-hai.' Phēr ōh khusī is; lost gone-was, and now found-is.' Then they happiness manāwan laggē.
to-celebrate began.

Tē ōhdā waḍḍā putr khēt sī. Jō ghardē nēṛē āyā,
And his elder son (in-)field was. When house-of near he-came, tãẽ gāwan tē nachandī awāj sunī. Tē ik sīrīnũ then singing and dancing-of noise was-heard. Then one servant-to bulā-kē puchhiā jō, 'ēh kī hai?' Ōsnē ōhnũ ākhiā called-having it-was-asked that, 'this what is?' Him-by him-to it-was-said jō, 'tērā bharā āyā hai. Tē tērē piōnē rōṭī kītī-hai, jō that, 'thy brother come is. And thy father-by feast given-is, that bhalā-chaṅgā ghar āyā-hai.' Ōhdē jī vich gussā āyā jō, well-sound (to-)house he-come-is.' His mind in anger came that,
'ghar na waṛãẽ.' Phēr ōhdē piōnē ā-kē manāyā.
'house not I-may-enter.' Then his father-by come-having it-was-entreated.
Ōsnē āwdē piōnũ ākhiā jō, 'dēkh, ainẽ warhē maĩ
Him-by his-own father-to it-was-said that, 'see, so-many in-years by-me tērī ṭahal kītī, tē kadē tērā mōṛ nā kītā; par thy service was-done, and ever thy transgression not was-done; but tũ kadī ik bakrīdā paṭhōrā vī maĩnũ nā dittā, jō kadī by-thee ever one goat-of kid even me-to not was-given, that ever āwdē bēliãẽ vich bah-kē khusī manāwãẽ. Jad tērā ēh my-own friends among sat-having happiness I-may-celebrate. Now thy this putr āyā jinhē tērā māl kañjarãẽ vich uṛāyā-sī, tãẽ son came by-whom thy property harlots among squandered-was, then tũ vaḍḍī rōṭī kītī.' Tad ōsdē piōnē ōhnũ āḳhiā by-thee a-great feast was-given.' Then his father-by him-to it-was-said jō, 'putr, tũ tã̄ sadā mērē kōl haî. Jō kush mērā that, 'son, thou indeed always me near art. What anything mine hai, sō tērā hai. Phēr khusī manāwᵃnā tē khusī hōwᵃnā is, that thine is. Again happiness to-celebrate and happy to-be chaṅgī gal sī; jō ēh tērā bhāī mar-giā-sī, tē muṛ-kē good thing was; because this thy brother dead-gone-was, and again jammiā-hai; tē guwāch giā-sī, tē hun hatth āyā-hai.'

born-is; and lost gone-was, but now found come-is.'

[No. 17.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

MĀLWĀĪ DIALECT. (DISTRICT FEROZEPORE, TAḤṢĪL FAZILKA.)

ਕੋਈ ਰਾਜਾ ਸਕਾਰਨੂੰ ਟੁਰਿਆ ਜਾਂਦਾ ਸੀ। ਰਾਹ ਬਿਚ ਇਕ ਜਟ ਟਿੱਬੇ ਉੱਤੇ ਹਲ ਬਾਹੋਂਦਾ ਸੀ। ਤੇ ਉਹਦੀ ਉਮਰ ਸਤਰ ਅਸੀ ਬਰੇਦੀ ਸੀ। ਰਾਜਾ ਉਸਨੂੰ ਬੇਖਕੇ ਬੋਲਿਆ ਜਟ ਤੂੰ ਬੜਾ ਉੱਕਾ। ਜਟ ਬੋਲਿਆ ਕੇ ਰਾਜਾ ਮੈਂ ਨਹੀਂ ਉੱਕਾ। ਇਕ ਚਲਾਇਆ ਤੀਰ ਇਕ ਚਲਾਇਆ ਤੁੱਕਾ। ਰਾਜਾ ਸੁਨਕੇ ਆਪਨੇ ਰਾਹ ਲੱਗਾ ਤੇ ਜਦੋਂ ਆਪਨੇ ਘਰ ਪੁੰਹਚ ਪਿਆ ਤੇ ਦਰਵਾਰ ਲਾਂਇਆ ਆਪਨੇ ਵਜੀਰ ਕੋਲੋਂ ਇਸ ਬਾਤਦਾ ਅੰਤਰਾ ਪੁਛਿਆ। ਵਜੀਰ ਸੁਨਕੇ ਸੋਚਾਂ ਬਿਚ ਪੈ ਗਿਆ। ਜਦੋਂ ਕੋਈ ਜਵਾਬ ਉਹਦੀ ਸਮਝ ਬਿਚ ਨਾ ਆਇਆ ਤਾਂ ਸਤਾਂ ਦਿਨਾਂ ਕੀ ਮੁਹਿਲਤ ਮੰਗ ਲਈ, ਤੇ ਜਿਸ ਪਾਸੇ ਰਾਜਾ ਓਸ ਦਿਨ ਗਿਆ ਸੀ ਪੁਛ ਪੁਛਾ ਕੇ ਓਸੇ ਪਾਸੇ ਵਜੀਰ ਬੀ ਟੁਰ ਪਿਆ। ਚਲਦੇ ਚਲਦੇ ਰਾਹਿ ਬਿਚ ਓਹ ਜਟ ਓਸੇ ਤਰਾ ਹਲਵਾਹੀ ਕਰਦਾ ਮਿਲਿਆ। ਵਜੀਰ ਨੇ ਸੋਚ ਕੀਤੀ ਬਈ ਹੋਵੇ ਨਾ ਤਾਂ ਏਹੋ ਜਟ ਹੈ ਜੀਹਦੀ ਗਲ ਰਾਜੇਨੇ ਮੇਰੋ ਕੋਲੋ ਪੁਛੀ ਹੈ। ਤੇ ਵਜੀਰ ਓਥੇ ਖੜੋ ਗਿਆ। ਜਟ ਕੋਲੋ ਵਜੀਰਨੇ ਰਾਜੇਦੇ ਆਨਦਾ ਹਾਲ ਪੁਛਿਆ। ਜਟਨੇ ਆਖਿਆ ਰਾਜਾ ਜਰੂਰ ਆਇਆ ਥੀ। ਗਲ ਬੀ ਮੇਰੇ ਨਾਲ ਏਹੋ ਕੀਤੀ ਸੀ। ਵਜੀਰਨੇ ਜਟ ਕੋਲੋ ਏਸ ਗਲਕਾ ਅੰਤਰਾ ਪੁਛਿਆ। ਜਟ ਕਹਿਨ ਲੱਗਾ ਅੰਤਰਾ ਤਾਂ ਦੱਸੂੰਗਾ ਜੇ ਤੂੰ ਮੇਰੀ ਪਾਨੀ ਪੀਨਵਾਲੀ ਝਾਰੀ ਤੇ ਹੁੱਕਾ ਰੁਪੀਆਂ ਕਾ ਭਰ ਦੈ। ਵਜੀਰਨੇ ਹੁੱਕਾ ਤੇ ਝਾਰੀ ਰੁਪੀਆਂ ਨਾਲ ਭਰ ਦਿੰਤੀ। ਜਟਨੇ ਅੰਤਰਾ ਮਨ ਭਾਉਂਦਾ ਵਜੀਰਨੂੰ ਆਖ ਸੁਨਾਇਆ। ਵਜੀਰਨੇ ਜਾਕੇ ਰਾਜੇਨੂੰ ਸੁਨਾਇਆ ਤੇ ਅੰਤਰਾ ਠੀਕ ਠੀਕ ਰਾਜੇਦੇ ਮਨ ਲੱਗਾ। ਪਰ ਰਾਜੇਨੇ ਸੋਚ ਕੀਤੀ ਕੇ ਜਟ ਬਿਨਾ ਏਸਦਾ ਅੰਤਰਾ ਕਿਸੇਨੂੰ ਮਲੂਮ ਨਹੀਂ ਸੀ। ਵਜੀਰਨੇ ਓਸੇ ਕੋਲੋਂ ਪੁਛ ਕੇ ਦੱਸਿਆ ਹੈ। ਏਹ ਸੋਚ ਕੇ ਰਾਜਾ ਜਟ ਕੋਲੋ ਜਾਕੇ ਕਹਿਨ ਲੱਗਾ ਜਟ ਤੂੰ ਬੜਾ ਉੱਕਾ। ਜਟ ਬੋਲਿਆ ਰਾਜਾ ਮੈਂ ਨਹੀਂ ਉੱਕਾ। ਇਕ ਭਰਾਈ ਝਾਰੀ ਤੇ ਇਕ ਭਰਾਇਆ ਹੁੱਕਾ। ਰਾਜਾ ਸੁਨਕੇ ਰਾਜੀ ਹੁਆ। ਇਸ ਅਕਲਦਾ ਇਨਾਮ ਦੇ ਕੇ ਘਰਨੂੰ ਮੁੜ ਗਿਆ॥

[No. 17.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

MĀLWĀĪ DIALECT. (DISTRICT FEROZEPORE, TAḤṢĪL FAZILKA.)

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Kōī rājā sakārnũ ṭuriā jãdā-sī. Rāh-bich ik jaṭ
A Rājā hunting-for started going-was. The-way-in a Jaṭṭ ṭibbē-uttē hal bāhõdā-sī, tē uhdī umar satar asī a-sandy-hillock-on plough ploughing-was, and him-of age seventy eighty barēdī sī. Rājā usnũ bēkh-kē bōliā, 'Jaṭ, tũ baṛā years-of was. The-Rājā him seeñ-having said, 'Jaṭṭ, thou very ukkā.' Jaṭ bōliā kē, 'rājā, maĩ nahĩ ukkā. Ik acted-foolishly.' The-Jaṭṭ said that, 'Rājā, I not acted-foolishly. One chalāiā tīr, ik chalāiā tukkā.' Rājā sun-kē propelled a(-sharp)-arrow, one propelled a-blunt-arrow.' The-Rājā heard-having āpnē rāh laggā, tē jadõ āpnē ghar pũhch-piā, tē on-his-own road continued, and when in-his-own house he-arrived, and darwār lāiā, āpnē wajīr kōlõ is bātdā antrā puchhiā.

a-darbār held, his-own minister from this thing-of purport was-inquired.

Wajīr sun-kē sōchã-bich pai-giā. Jadõ kōī jawāb uhdī
The-minister heard-having thinking-in fell. When any answer that-of samajh-bich nā āiā, tã satã dinã-kī muhilat maṅg-laī, understanding-in not came, then seven days-of respite was-asked-for-(and-)obtained, tē jis pāsē rājā ōs din giā-sī, puchh-puchhā-kē and in-what in-direction the-Rājā on-that day gone-was, asked-inquired-having ōsē pāsē wajīr bī ṭur-piā. Chaldē-chaldē towards-that-very direction the-minister also started. In-going-in-going rāhi-bich ōh jaṭ ōsē tarā hal-wāhī kardā miliā.

the-way-in that Jaṭṭ in-that-very manner plough-ploughing doing was-met.

Wajīrnē sōch kītī, 'baī, hōvē nā tã ēhō
The-minister-by thought was-made, 'ho, he-may-be (may-he-)not then this-very jaṭ hai jīhdī gal rajēnē mērō kōlō puchhī-hai.' Tē wajīr Jaṭṭ is whom-of word the-Rājā-by me from inquired-is.' And the-minister ōthē khaṛō giā. Jaṭ kōlō wajīrnē rājēde there standing-having-become went. The-Jaṭṭ from the-minister-by the-Rājā-of āndā hāl puchhiā. Jaṭ-nē ākhiā, 'rājā coming-of the-circumstance was-inquired. The-Jaṭṭ-by it-was-said, 'the-Rājā jarūr āiā-thī; gal bī mērē nāl ēhō kītī-sī.' Wajīrnē certainly come-was; word also me-of with by-him made-was.' The-minister-by jaṭ kōlō ēs gal-kā antrā puchhiā. Jaṭ kahin laggā, the-Jaṭṭ from this word-of purport was-inquired. The-Jaṭṭ to-say began,

'antrā tā̃ dassū̃gā jē tū̃ mērī pānī pīn-wālī jhārī tē
'the-purport then I-will-show if thou my water drinking-for jug and hukkā rupiā̃-kā bhar-dai.' Wajīrnē hukkā tē jhārī rupiā̃ huqqa rupees-of fill.' The-minister-by the-huqqa and jug rupees nāl bhar-dittī. Jaṭnē antrā man-bhāõdā wajīrnū̃ with were-filled. The-Jaṭṭ-by the-purport mind-nature-of the-minister-to ākh sunāiā. Wajīrnē jā-kē rājēnū̃ having-told was-caused-to-be-heard. The-minister-by gone-having the-Rājā-to sunāiā, tē antrā ṭhīk-ṭhīk rājēdē man it-was-caused-to-be-heard, and the-purport accurately the-Rājā-of mind laggā. Par rājēnē sōch kītī kē, 'jaṭ binā became-attached. But the-Rājā-by thought was-made that, 'the-Jaṭṭ without ēsdā antrā kisēnū̃ malūm nahī̃ sī. Wajīrnē ōsē this-of purport anybody-to known not was. The-minister-by that-very-man kōlō puchh-kē dassiā-hai.' Ēh sōch-kē rājā jaṭ from inquired-having shown-it-is.' This thought-having the-Rājā the-Jaṭṭ kōlō jā-kē kahin laggā, 'jaṭ, tū̃ baṛā ukkā.' Jaṭ near gone-having to-say began, 'Jaṭṭ, thou very acted-foolishly.' The-Jaṭṭ bōliā, 'rājā, maī̃ nahī̃ ukkā Ik bharāī jhārī tē ik said, 'Rājā, I not acted-foolishly. One was-filled the-jug and one bharāiā hukkā.' Rājā sun-kē rājī hūā; is was-filled the-huqqa.' The-Rājā heard-having pleased became; this akaldā inām dē-kē ghar-nū̃ muṛ-giā.
wisdom-of reward given-having the-house-to returned.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

Once upon a time a certain king went a-hunting. On the way he saw a Jaṭṭ ploughing his field on the top of a sandy hillock, and he seventy or eighty years old. The king called out to him, 'Jaṭṭ, you are a fool.'[1] The Jaṭṭ replied, 'Sire, I am not a fool. Some people can shoot with sharp arrows, and others have only blunt ones to shoot with.' The king proceeded on his way. When he reached home he called a darbār, told his vizier what the Jaṭṭ had said, and asked him what the meaning of it was. The vizier set to work a-thinking, but couldn't hit on the right meaning, so he begged for seven days' grace and got it. Then he traced the steps of the king, asking as he went, where

[1] These ṭibbās, or sandy hillocks, are not worth much for cultivation. There are several proverbs dealing with the ease with which they are ploughed, owing to the light nature of the soil, and the miserable return which comes in the shape of crops. See, for instance, Mr. Maconachie's Selected Agricultural Proverbs of the Panjab, Nos. 69 and 71.

His Majesty had gone, and finally saw the same Jaṭṭ ploughing away on the top of his hillock. The vizier thought to himself that this was probably the fellow who had told the king the puzzling saw, so he stopped there and asked him if the king had been that way lately. 'Indeed he has,' said the Jaṭṭ, 'and I had a talk with him.' Then the vizier asked the Jaṭṭ the meaning of what he had said, and the other replied that he would tell him if the vizier would fill his water pot and his hookah with rupees. The vizier did so, and the Jaṭṭ told him the meaning of the dark saying. Then the vizier returned to the palace and explained it to the king, who was much pleased with the explanation. But the king said to himself that the only person who could have known the meaning of the saying was the Jaṭṭ himself, and that the vizier must have got it from him. So he went off to the Jaṭṭ again and again said, 'Jaṭṭ, you are a fool.' The Jaṭṭ replied, 'Sire, I am not a fool. One thing, my drinking pot, and another thing, my hookah, have both been filled with rupees.'[1] Then the king was much pleased, and after giving him a reward for his intelligence returned to his palace.

---

[1] The Jaṭṭ's original puzzle and his second rejoinder together form a rhymed couplet. Thus :—

ik chalāiā tīr, ik chalāiā tukkā. ik bharāī jhārī, te ik bharāiā hukkā.

[No. 18.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

MĀLWĀĪ DIALECT. (NABHA STATE, DISTRICT PHUL.)

ਇਕ ਰਾਜੇਦੇ ਸਤ ਧੀਆਂ ਸਨ। ਇਕ ਦਿਨ ਰਾਜੇਨੇ ਓਨ੍ਹਾਂਨੂੰ ਆਖਿਆ ਧੀਓ ਤੁਸੀਂ ਕੀਦਾ ਭਾਗ ਖਾਂਦੀਆਂ ਹੋ। ਛੀਆਂਨੇ ਆਖਿਆ ਅਸੀ ਬਾਪੂ ਤੇਰਾ ਭਾਗ ਖਾਂਦੀਆਂ ਹਾਂ ਤੇ ਸਤਮੀਨੇ ਆਖਿਆ ਮੈਂ ਤਾਂ ਅਪਨਾ ਭਾਗ ਖਾਂਦੀ ਹਾਂ। ਤਾਂ ਰਾਜੇਨੇ ਆਖਿਆ ਮੈਂ ਥੋਨੂੰ ਕਿਹਾ ਜਿਯਾ ਪਿਆਰਾ ਲਗਦਾ ਹਾਂ। ਛੀਆਂਨੇ ਆਖਿਆ ਤੂੰ ਸਾਨੂੰ ਖੰਡ ਬਰਗਾ ਪਿਆਰਾ ਲਗਦਾ ਹੈਂ। ਤੇ ਸਤਮੀਨੇ ਆਖਿਆ ਤੂੰ ਮੈਨੂੰ ਨੂਨ ਬਰਗਾ ਪਿਆਰਾ ਲਗਦਾ ਹੈ। ਤਾਂ ਰਾਜੇਨੇ ਹਰਖ ਕੇ ਆਖਿਆ ਏਹਨੂੰ ਕਿਸੇ ਲੰਗੜੇ ਲੂਲੇ ਨਾਲ ਬਿਹਾ ਦੇਓ ਦੇਖੋ ਫਿਰ ਕਿਨੂੰ ਅਪਨਾ ਭਾਗ ਖਾਊਗੀ। ਤਾਂ ਓਹ ਇਕ ਲੰਗੜੇ ਨਾਲ ਬਿਹਾ ਦਿੱਤੀ। ਓਹ ਵਿਚਾਰੀ ਲੰਗੜੇਨੂੰ ਖਾਰੀ ਵਿਚ ਪਾ ਕੇ ਮੰਗਦੀ ਖਾਂਦੀ ਪਈ ਫਿਰਦੀ। ਇਕ ਦਿਨ ਖਾਰੀਨੂੰ ਇਕ ਛੱਪੜ ਤੇ ਕੰਢੇ ਤੇ ਧਰ ਕੇ ਆਪ ਮੰਗਨ ਚਲੀ ਗਈ। ਤਾਂ ਲੰਗੜੇਨੇ ਕੀ ਦੇਖਿਆ ਕਿ ਕਾਲੇ ਕਾਂ ਛੱਪੜ ਵਿਚ ਬੜ ਕੇ ਬੱਗੇ ਹੋ ਹੋ ਨਿਕਲਦੇ ਆਉਂਦੇ ਹਨ। ਤਾਂ ਓਨਾਂਦੀ ਰੀਸਮਰੀਸੀ ਲਗੜਾ ਬੀ ਰੁੜ੍ਹਦਾ ਪੈਂਦਾ ਛੱਪੜ ਵਿਚ ਜਾ ਡਿੱਗਾ ਤੇ ਓਹ ਨੌ ਬਰ ਨੌ ਹੋ ਗਿਆ। ਤਾਂ ਜਦ ਓਹਦੀ ਬਹੂ ਮੰਗ ਤੰਗ ਕੇ ਆਈ ਤਾਂ ਓਹ ਆਉਂਦੀਨੂੰ ਰਾਜੀ ਬਾਜੀ ਹੋ ਕੇ ਖੜ ਗਿਆ॥

[No. 18.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

MĀLWĀĪ DIALECT. (NABHA STATE, DISTRICT PHUL.)

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ik rājēdē sat dhīā̃ san. Ik din rājēnē One Rājā-of seven daughters were. One day the-Rājā-by unhā̃nū̃ ākhiā, 'dhīō, tusī̃ kīdā bhāg khā̃dīā̃-hō?'
them-to it-was-said, 'daughters, You whom-of fortune eating-are?'
Chhīā̃nē̃ ākhiā, 'asī, bāpū, tērā bhāg khā̃dīā̃-hā̃.' Tē
The-six-by it-was-said, 'we, father, thy fortune eating-are.' And satmīnē ākhiā, 'maī tā̃ apnā bhāg khā̃dī-hā̃.' Tā̃ the-seventh-by it-was-said, 'I verily my-own fortune eating-am.' Then rājēnē ākhiā, 'maī thōnū̃ kihā-jiyā piārā lagdā-hā̃?' Chhīā̃nē the-Rājā-by it-was-said, 'I you-to what-like dear seeming-am?' The-six-by ākhiā, 'tū̃, sānū̃ khaṇḍ-bargā piārā lagdā-hai'.
it-was-said, 'thou, us-to sugar-like dear seeming-art (i.e., seemest to be).'
Tē satmīnē ākhiā, 'tū̃ mainū̃ nūn bargā
But the-seventh-by it-was-said, 'thou me-to salt like piārā lagdā-hai.' Tā̃ rājēnē harakh-kē ākhiā, dear seeming-art.' Then the-Rājā-by become-angry-having it-was-said,
'ēhnū̃ kisē-laṅgṛē-lūlē-nāl bihā-dēō. Dēkhō phir kikū̃ apnā
'this-one-to some-lame-maimed-with marry. See then how her-own bhāg khāūgī.' Tā̃ ōh ik laṅgṛē-nāl bihā-dittī.
fortune she-will-eat.' Then she one lame-man-with was-married.
Oh vichārī laṅgṛēnū̃ khārī-vich pā-kē maṅgdī khā̃dī
That poor-girl the-lame-man-to a-basket-in put-having begging eating paī phirdī. Ik din khārīnū̃ ik-chhappaṛ-tē kaṇḍē-tē fallen used-to-wander. One day the-basket-to one-pond-on the-bank-on dhar-kē āp maṅgan chalī-gaī; tā̃ laṅgṛēnē kī placed-having herself to-beg went-away; then the-lame-man-by what dēkhiā, ki kālē kā̃ chhappaṛ-vich baṛ-kē baggē was-seen, that black crows the-pond-into entered-having white hō-hō nikaldē-āō̃dē-han. Tā̃ onā̃dī rīsam-rīsī laṅgṛā becoming-becoming coming-out-are. Then them-of in-imitation the-lame-man bī ruṛhdā paīdā chhappaṛ-vich jā ḍiggā; tē ōh too rolling tumbling the-pond-into having-gone fell; and he

nau-bar-nau	hō-giā.	Tã̄	jad	ōhdī	bahū	maṅg-taṅg-kē	āī, fresh-and-well	became.	And	when	his	wife	begged-having	came,

tã̄	ōh	āũdinũ̄	rājī-bājī	hō-kē	khaṛ-giā.
then	her	coming-for	perfect-healthy	become-having	he-stood.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

(The following folktale is current all over India. Another version of it will be found on p. 309, Vol. V, Pt. II of this Survey. It will be noticed how the opening agrees with that of the story of King Lear.)

Once upon a time there was a king who had seven daughters. One day he asked them by whose good fortune they were enjoying life. Six of them said that they did so by his good fortune, but the seventh said that it was by her own good fortune.

Then the king asked them like what did they love him. The six said they loved him like sugar, but the seventh said she loved him like salt.

Then the king burst into a fury and ordered her to be married to some maimed cripple. 'Let us see,' said he, 'how she enjoys life by her own good fortune'. So they married her to a cripple, and as is the manner of people of that class, she put him in a basket, and carried him about asking for alms.

One day she put the cripple down on the bank of a pond, and went off to beg by herself. While she was away, the cripple observed that black crows came and bathed in the tank and that when they came out their feathers were white. So he rolled and tumbled to the edge of the water and bathed as they had done. He immediately became clean and whole, and when his wife returned she found him standing there hale and hearty.

[No. 19.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

MĀLWĀĪ DIALECT. (STATE PATIALA, THANA GOBINDGADH.)

دیکھو کھبّے ھتّھہ نال ھتّھي دب چھڈي ھے سجّے ھتّھہ وچہ پُراني ھے - سوھین روکھہ دے ھیٹھہ حقہ اور جل دا توڑا دھرا ھے - اوتھے اک منڈا بیٹھا ھے - ھالي بچارہ پُہہ پھٹي نال اُٹھا ھے - ھل اور بلداں نوں لیکے مونہہ اندھیرے کھیت وچہ پہونچا ھے - سکھر دوپہرے تیویں روٹي لیاوندي ھے - ایہہ جوتّا ڈھال دیندا ھے - بلداں نوں ککھہ پاوندا ھے - آپ ھتّھہ مونہہ دھو ٹھنڈا ھو ے روٹي کھاندا ھے حُقّہ پیندا ھے - بلداں نوں پاني پلاوندا ھے تھوڑا چر پے رھندا ھے - تیویں ساگ لے جاندي ھے - بھاھلا کم ھوندا ھے - تاں بچارہ اسي دھندے وچہ آتّھن کر دیندا ھے - نہیں تاں ھور کم دھندا کردا ھے - دن چھپے ھل اور بلداں نوں لیکے گھر آوندا ھے - چرھي دا بھار لیاوندا ھے - بلداں موھرے پاوندا ھے - تیویں دھار کڈدي ھے - روٹي پکاوندي ھے - ایہہ چاو نال مُنڈے کُڑیاں وچہ بیٹھہ ے کھاندا ھے - پھر اِس موج نال لتّاں نسال ے سوندا ھے کہ بادشاھاں نوں پھلّاں دے بچھاونے اوتے بھي نہین تھیاوندي *

[No. 19.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

MĀLWĀĪ DIALECT. (STATE PATIALA, THANA GOBINDGADH.)

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Dēkhō, khabbē hatth-nāl hatthī dab-chhaḍḍī-hai, sajjē hatth-vichh See, left hand-with plough-handle pressed-is, right hand-in purānī hai. Sōhẽ rōkhdē hēṭh huqqa aur jaldā taurā ox-whip is. In-front a-tree-of beneath hookah and water-of pot dharā-hai. Utthē ik muṇḍā baiṭhā-hai. Hālī bichāra placed-is. There a child seated-is. The-cultivator the-poor-man puh phaṭī nāl uṭhā-hai. Hal aur baldãnũ lē-kē, mũh dawn bursting with risen-is. Plough and oxen taken-having face ãdhērē khēt-vichh phaũchā-hai. Sikhar dō-pahrē tīvī rōṭī in-dark the-field-in arrived-is. Highest-point at-midday the-wife bread liyāũdī-hai. Ēh jōttā ḍhāl-dĩdā-hai. Baldãnũ kakh bringing-is. He plough loosening-is. The-oxen-to cut-grass pāũdā-hai. Āp hatth mũh dhō ṭhaṇḍā causing-to-fall-he-is. Himself hand mouth having-washed cool

hō-kē rōṭī khãdā-hai, huqqa pĩdā-hai, baldãnũ pānī become-having bread eating-he-is, hookah drinking-he-is, the-oxen-to water palāũdā-hai. Thōṛā chir pai rahndā-hai. Tīvī causing-to-drink-he-is. A-small time having-fallen remaining-he-is. The-wife sāg lē-jãdī-hai. Bhāhlā kamm hũdā-hai. Tã bichāra vegetables taking-away-is. Much work becoming-is. Then the-poor-fellow isī dhandē-vichh āṭṭhan kar-dĩdā-hai. Nahĩ-tã hōr kamm dhandā this occupation-in sun-set making-he-is. Otherwise other work business kardā-hai. Din chhipē hal aur baldãnũ lē-kē doing-he-is. The-day on-being-hidden plough and oxen taken-having ghar āũdā-hai. Charhīdā bhār liyāũdā-hai. Baldã mūhʰrē house coming-he-is. Fodder-of load bringing-he-is. The-oxen before pāũdā-hai. Tīvī dhār kaḍḍī-hai. Rōṭī pakāũdī-hai.

causing-to-fall-he-is. The-wife milk drawing-is. Bread cooking-she-is.

Ēh chāō-nāl muṇḍē kuṛyã-vichh baiṭh-kē khãdā-hai. Phir
He delight-with sons daughters-among sat-having eating-is. Again is mauj-nāl lattã̃ nisāl-kē sõ̃dā-hai, ki bādshāhã̃nũ̃ this comfort-with legs stretched-having sleeping-he-is, that kings-to phullã̃dē bichhāunē-uttē bhī nahĩ̃ thiāũ̃dī.[1] flowers-of bed-on even not experiencing(-are).

---

[1] For a Free Translation of the Foregoing, see p. 695.

BHAṬṬIĀNĪ.

The Bhāṭīs (or, as they are called in the Punjab, Bhaṭṭīs) are a Musalmān tribe of Rajput origin which is found widely distributed over the Punjab and North-Western Rajputana. They are specially strong in North Bikaner, and in that portion of the Ferozepore District which is immediately adjoining. This part of the country is known as Bhaṭṭiānā, and one of its chief towns is the famous stronghold of Bhaṭnēr. Owing to the leading part taken by the Bhaṭṭīs in this part of the country in the beginning of the 19th century, the word Bhaṭṭī became applied to all the Musalmān residents of this tract, and their name became almost synonymous with Rāṭh or Pachhāḍā,—the title given to the Pachhāḍā Musalmāns (a different tribe) of the Ghaggar Valley.[1]

We have seen that one of the names given to the dialect of Pañjābī spoken by the Pachhāḍā Musalmāns was Rāṭhī, and, as just explained, the same name is given to the dialect of the Bhaṭṭīs of Bikaner, while the dialect spoken by the Bhaṭṭīs of Ferozepore is locally known as Rāṭhaurī. The two Rāṭhīs are not the same dialect, for the Rāṭhī of the Pachhāḍā Musalmāns is, as we have seen, a mixture of Pōwādhī Pañjābī with Western Hindī, while the Rāṭhī or Rāṭhaurī of the Bhaṭṭīs is Mālwāī Pañjābī mixed with the Bāgṛī of North Bikaner.

It will have been observed that this Rāṭhī is a tribal language. In the south of the Fazilka Taḥṣīl of Ferozepore all the inhabitants (whether Bhaṭṭīs or not) speak a language locally known as 'Bāgṛī.' An examination, however, of the specimens of this form of speech which have been received from Ferozepore shows that it is not Bāgṛī at all. It is exactly the same as the Bhaṭṭī Rāṭhī, a mixture of Pañjābī and Bāgṛī, with the latter predominating.

The Bhaṭṭīs of Ferozepore appear under various names (usually those of sub-clans), such as Waṭṭū, Jōyā, Rassīwaṭṭs, or Rāṭhaurs. The last name accounts for the title Rāṭhaurī given to their dialect in that district. It is spoken for a considerable distance up the right bank of the Sutlej, in the Fazilka and Mamdot Taḥṣīls, and is the same as the Rāṭhī of Bikaner, and the 'Bāgṛī' of Fazilka,—simply a corrupt Pañjābī much mixed with Bāgṛī. The proportions of the two forms of speech differ according to locality, but over the whole of these three areas, the general characteristic of the language is the same, and, as some general name is required to include all the varieties of this mixed dialect, I call it Bhaṭṭiānī, from its head-quarters,—Bhaṭṭiānā. Under its various names, Bhaṭṭiānī is reported to be spoken by the following numbers of people:—

Rāṭhī of Bikaner	22,000
'Bāgṛī' of Ferozepore (Fazilka)	56,000
Rāṭhaurī of Ferozepore	38,000
TOTAL BHAṬṬIĀNĪ	116,000

In the year 1824, the Serampore Missionaries translated the New Testament into this dialect, which they called the 'Bhutuner (i.e. Bhaṭnēr) Language.'

As specimens of Bhaṭṭiānī I give a complete version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son in the Rāṭhī of Bikaner, and also extracts from it in the so-called Bāgṛī, and in the Rāṭhaurī of Ferozepore. Finally, for the sake of comparison, I give a similar extract from the Serampore Bhaṭnērī version of 1824.

[1] See Sirsa Settlement Report (1879-83), page 89.

RĀṬHĪ OF BIKANER.

The version of the Parable here given well illustrates the foregoing remarks. The language is a mixture of Pañjābī and Bāgṛī with here and there an idiom borrowed from the Lahndā spoken to the west. Thus, take the very first line. Hēk, one, is Lahndā; dē, (plural masculine), of, is Pañjābī; hā (plural masculine) is Bāgṛī. So, elsewhere, jāsā̃, I will go, is a Bāgṛī future with a Pañjābī termination; bhāj-gē, having run, is Bāgṛī; khā̃dē-hā, they were eating, is half Pañjābī, half Bāgṛī; tusāḍā, your, is Pañjābī; thārō, your, is Bāgṛī. It is unnecessary to go into further detail.

[No. 20.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

BHAṬṬIĀNĪ (RĀṬHĪ) DIALECT. BIKANER STATE.

हेक आदमीदे दोय पूत हा। उसदे छोटे पूत पिऊनूँ अखा हे पिऊ माल विच जेड़ा मेरा हिसा होवे मैनूँ देहे। उसनूँ तदाँ माल वाँट दीता। ढेर दहाड़े नहीँ हुए छोटा पूत सब कुज कठा करने दूर देस जाँदा रहा ओर उथे लुचपणे विचे आपणा माल गमा दीता। ओर वो सबो कुज भजा चुका तब उस देस विचे डाढा काल पया ओर वो गरीब हो गया। ओर वो उस देसदे रैणेवालेदा नोकर हो गया। ओर उसने तिसनूँ अपने खेच विच सूरनूँ चरावणनूँ घाला। ओर उसने उन छीलड़ा नाल अपणा डिढ भरणा चाता था जिनाँनूँ सूर खाँदे-हा। ओर कोई उसनूँ कुज नाहीँ देता-हा। जदाँ उसनूँ चेता आया ओर उसँ अखा के मेरे पिऊदे कितने मेहेनतीयोँनूँ फादल टिकियाँ बणदी थी ओर असाँ भूख नाल मरदा हाँ। मैँ उठीने पीऊ नाल जासाँ ओर उसनूँ अखसाँ हे बाबा मैने बेहेस्तनूँ काण्ड कीती ओर तुसाडे आगे गुना कीता। असाँ फिर तुसाडा पूत कहावणे के लायक नहीँ हूँ। आपदे मेहेनतीयाँ विच हेकदी जागे मैनूँ करलो। तदाँ वो उठते आपदे पीऊदे पासे गिया। मगर वो दूर हा तदाँ पिऊ उसनूँ देखते तरस कीता। ओर भाज-गे उसनूँ गले नाल लगाते उसनूँ चूमा। पुत्र उसदे बापनूँ अखा हे पिऊ मैने बेहेस्तने काण्ड कीती ओर आपदे सामने गुना कीता ओर फिर थारे पुत्र तेरा कुहावण लायक नहीँ हूँ।

मुड़ उसदे पिऊने आपदे नोकराँनूँ अखा पुत्रनूँ थीगड़े अछे पधावो ओर उसदे हथ विच मुदडी ओर पेराँ जूती घतावो ओर आपाँ खाते मजे करेँ। क्यूँके पुत्र मेरा मुया हा मरते मुड़ आया है। खड़ी गया हा मुड़ लाभ्या है। तदाँ वो मजे करण लगे ॥

उसदा बडा पुत्र खेत्रच हा। जदाँ वो अमदा हुया घरदे कोल आया तदाँ बाजते नचणदा खड़का सुणा। आपदे नोकराँ विचूँ हेक नोकरनूँ आपदे कोल सदते आखा के ❋ ❋ ❋। उस अखा तेरा भीरा आया है आपदे पिऊने चंगा खाँणा कीता है इस वास्ते जो उसनूँ भला चंगा लाद्या है। उसने कावड़ कीती। उस घर विच आवण ना चाया। इस वास्ते उसदा पिऊ बाहार आते उसनूँ मनावण लगा। उस पिऊनूँ जवाब दीता की वेखो मैँ इते वराँ-तूँ तुहाडी खिदमत करदा-हा। आपदे हुकमनूँ कदे अदुल न कीता। आप मैनूँ कदे हेक लेला भी न दीता के मैँ आपदे बेलीआँ नाल खुसी करदा-हा। मगर आपदा ए पुत्र जो कंजरीआँदे नाल रलते आपदा सब कुज भंजा-देता जू आया उसदे वास्ते आप चंगा खाँणा कीता। पिऊ उसनूँ अखा पुत्र तूँ नित मेरे नाल रहेदा-है। जो कुज मेरा वो सबो कुज तेरा है। मगर डाढी खुसी करणी ठीक हाई। क्यूँके तेरा भीरा मुया हुवा मुड़ जी आया-है खिड़ी गया-हा मुड़ लाभ गया-है ॥

[No. 20.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

BHAṬṬIĀNĪ (RĀṬHĪ) DIALECT. BIKANER STATE.

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Hēk ādmīdē dōy pūt hā. Usdē chhōṭē pūt piūnũ̃
One man-of two sons were. Them-of by-the-younger son father-to akhā, 'hē piū, māl-vich jēṛā mērā hisā hōwē mai-nũ̃ it-was-said, 'O father, property-in as-much my share may-be me-to dēhē.' Us-nũ̃ tadã̃ māl bãṭ dītā. Ḍhēr dahāṛē nahĩ give.' Him-to then property having-divided was-given. Many days not huē chhōṭā pūt sab kuj kaṭhā karnē dūr dēs became the-younger son all whatever together made-having a-far country jãdā-rahā; ōr uthē luchpaṇē-vichē āpṇā māl gamā-dītā.

went-away; and there riotousness-in his-own property was-squandered-away.

Ōr wō sabō-kuj bhajā-chukā tab us dēs-vichē ḍāḍhā
And he all-whatever had-wasted-completely then that country-in a-great kāl payā, ōr wō garīb hō-gayā; ōr wō us dēsdē raiṇēwālēdā famine fell, and he poor became; and he that country-of an-inhabitant-of nōkar hō-gayā. Ōr usnē tisnũ̃ apnē khētr-vich sūrnũ̃ charāwaṇnũ̃ servant became. And him-by him-as-for his-own field-into swine-to grazing-for ghālā. Ōr usnē un chhīlṛā-nāl apṇā ḍiḍh bharṇā it-was-sent. And him-by(sic) those husks-with his-own belly to-fill chātā-thā, jinãnũ̃ sūr khãdē-hā; ōr kōī usnũ̃ kuj nāhĩ wishing-was, which-to swine eating-were; and anyone him-to anything not dētā-hā. Jadã̃ usnũ̃ chētā āyā ōr usaĩ akhā kē, 'mērē giving-was. Then him-to sense came and by-him it-was-said that, 'my piūdē kitnē mēhēnatīyõnũ̃ phādal ṭikiyã̃ baṇdī-thī, ōr father-of how-many labourers-to superfluous bread being-prepared-was, and asã̃ bhūkh-nāl mardã̃-hã̃. Maĩ uṭhīnē pīū nāl jāsã̃ ōr usnũ̃ I hunger-with dying-am. I arisen-having father near will-go and him-to akhsã̃, "hē bābā, mainē bēhēstnũ̃ kāṇḍ kītī, ōr tusāḍē āgē

I-will-say, "O father, me-by heaven sin was-done, and you-of before gunā kītā; asã̃ phir tusāḍā pūt kahāwaṇē-kē lāyak nahĩ hũ̃; offence was-done; I again your son being-called-of worthy not am;

āpdē mēhēnatīyã̃-vich hēkdī jāgē mainũ̃ kar-lō."' Tadã̃ wō your-own labourers-in one-of in-place me-to make."' Then he uṭhtē āp-dē pīūdē pāsē giyā. Magar wō dūr hā, tadā̃ on-arising his-own father-of near went. But he far was, then piū usnū̃ dēkhtē taras kītā, ōr bhāj-gē usnū̃ by-the-father him-to on-seeing compassion was-done, and run-having him-to galē-nāl lagātē usnū̃ chūmā. Putr usdē bāpnū̃ the-neck-on on-applying him-to it-was-kissed. By-the-son his father-to akhā, 'hē piū, mainē bēhēstnē kāṇḍ kītī, ōr āpdē it-was-said, 'O father, me-by heaven-to sin was-done, and Your-Honour-of sāmnē gunā kītā; ōr phir thārē putr tērā kuhāwaṇ lāyak before offence was-done; and again to-you son thy to-be-called worthy nāhī̃ hū̃.' Muṛ usdē piū-nē āpdē nōkrā̃nū̃ akhā, 'putrnū̃ not I-am.' But his father-by his-own servants-to it-was-said, 'the-son-to thīgṛē achhē padhāwō; ōr usdē hath-vich mudaḍī, ōr pērō̃ jūtī a-robe good cause-to-wear; and his hand-in a-ring, and on-feet shoes ghatāwō; ōr āpā̃ khātē majē karē̃; kyū̃-kē putr mērā put; and we-all eating merriment may-make; because-that the-son my muyā hā, martē muṛ āyā-hai; khaṛī-gayā-hā, muṛ lābhyā hai.' Tadā̃ dead was, on-dying again come-is; lost-gone-was, but found is.' Then wō majē karaṇ lagē.

they merriment to-do began.

Usdā baḍā putr khētrach hā. Jadā̃ wō amdā-huyā ghardē kōl His elder son field-in was. When he while-coming house-of near āyā, tadā̃ bājtē nachaṇdā khaṛkā suṇā. Āpdē nōkrā̃-vichū̃ came, then in-musicking dancing-of noise was-heard. His-own servants-from-among hēk nōkarnū̃ āpdē kōl sadtē ākhā kē, * * *[1] Us *one servant-to himself-of near in-calling it-was-said that, * * * By-him* akhā, 'tērā bhīrā āyā-hai; āpdē piūnē chaṅgā khā̃ṇā it-was-said, 'thy brother come-is; Your-Honour-of father-by good feeding kītā-hai; is-wāstē jō usnū̃ bhalā-chaṅgā lādyā-hai.' Usnē kāwaṛ done-is; for-this-reason that him-to good-well obtained-is.' Him-by anger kītī; us ghar-vich āwaṇ nā chāyā. Is-wāstē usdā was-made; by-him house-in coming not it-was-wished. For-this-reason his piū bāhār ātē usnū̃ manāwaṇ lagā. Us piūnū̃ jawāb father out in-coming him-to to-persuade began. By-him the-father-to reply dītā kī, 'vēkhō, maī itē varā̃-tū̃ tuhāḍī khidmat kardā-hā, was-given that, 'see, I so-many years-from your service doing-was, āpdē hukamnū̃ kadē adul na kītā. Āp
Your-Honour-of order-to ever disobedience not was-done. By-Your-Honour mainū̃ kadē hēk lēlā bhī na dītā kē maī āpdē bēliā̃ nāl me-to ever one kid even not was-given that I my-own friends with [1] Words missing in original.

khuśī kardā-hā. Magar āpdā ē putr, jō kanjrīādē pleasure might-have-made. But Your-Honour-of this son, who harlots-of nāl raltē āpdā sab kuj bhañjā-dētā, jū with in-living Your-Honour-of all anything squandering(-was), as-soon-as āyā usdē wāstē āp chaṅgā khā̃ṇā kītā.' Piū he-came him-of for by-Your-Honour good feast was-made.' By-the-father usnū̃ akhā, 'putr, tū̃ nit mērē nāl rahēdā-hai; jō-kuj mērā him-to it-was-said, 'son, thou always me-of near living-art; whatever mine wō sabō kuj tērā hai; magar ḍaḍhī khusī karṇī ṭhīk hāī; that all anything thine is; but much rejoicing to-do proper is;
kyū̃-kē tērā bhīrā muyā-huwā, muṛ jī-āyā-hai; khiṛī-gayā-hā because-that thy brother dead-was, again alive-has-become; lost-was, muṛ lābh-gayā-hai.'
again found-is.'

SO-CALLED BĀGṚĪ OF FEROZEPORE.

Fifty-six thousand people are reported to speak Bāgṛī in the Fazilka Taḥṣīl of the Punjāb District of Ferozepore, along the Bikaner border. An examination of the specimens sent shows that this dialect has none of the typical Bāgṛī characteristics, such as the genitive in gō and the like. It is bad Pañjābī, like the Rāṭhī of Bikaner mixed with some Bāgṛī forms. No importance attaches to this mixed dialect, and it will suffice to give as an example of it a brief extract from a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son in transliteration only. The original was written in the Persian and also in the Gurmukhī character.

[No. 21.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

BHAṬṬIĀNĪ (SO-CALLED BĀGṚĪ) DIALECT. (DISTRICT FEROZEPORE, TAḤṢĪL FAZILKA.)

Ēk mānas-rā dē bēṭā hā. Wã̃-miã̃ chhōṛō bēṭō bāp-ũ̃ē
A man-of two sons were. Them-in-from (the-) younger son father-to kahiō, 'ō bāp māl-rā hisā jikā āwē mi-nē dē.'
said, 'O father property-of share which comes (-to-me) me-to give.'
Jaṇā pāchhē bi-nē māl-rā pã̃tī bã̃ṭ-dīnī. Thōrē Then afterwards them-to property-of shares was-divided. A-few (days) pāchhē chhōṭakīō bēṭō saglō dhan-māl bhēlō kar-kē after the-younger son the-whole property collected having-made dūr dēs-nē uṭh-giō. Baṭhē āpnō māl harāmakārī-mai a-far country-to having-arisen-went. There his-own property debauchery-in khō-dīō. Jaṇā saglō māl khō-dīnō, bī̃ dēs-rē ēk was-wasted. When whole property was-wasted, that country-to a bhāgwān-kē jā-lāgiō. Bā-nē apnē khēt-mai sūr wealthy-man-in-of having-gone-he-was-joined. Him-by his-own fields-in swine charāw bhējiō. Bai-rē jī ḍabkiō ki ai chhūtkā-hũ̃ khā-liõ̃, to-graze he-was-sent. His desire arose that these husks-even I-may-eat, jikā sūr khai-hai; ki bī-nē aisō bhī kō-milē-nī.
which swine eating-are; for him-to such even at-all-were-given-not.

RAṬHAURĪ OF FEROZEPORE.

The Rāṭhaurī of Ferozepore is even more of a mixture than the so-called Bāgṛī. The foreign element is rather Bīkānērī than true Bāgṛī as is shown by the use of chhai, to mean 'is'. A short extract from a version of the Parable in transliteration only will be quite sufficient.

[No. 22.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

BHAṬṬIĀNĪ (RAṬHAURĪ) DIALECT. (DISTRICT FEROZEPORE, TAḤṢĪL FAZILKA.)

Ikkē guwā-rē dī bēṭā sī. Ōn-mā-lē chhōṭā bēṭā bāpēnē
A man-to two sons were. Them-in-from younger son the-father-to kihō; 'mālē mālhē jutnā hissō manē āwā-chhai, ū manē dēō.'
said, 'property in-from how-much share me-to coming-is, that me-to give.'
Ī māl waṇḍ dīnō-chhai. Thōṛā dinē-maī sārō māl
By-him property having-divided given-is. A-few days-in whole property kaṭṭhō kartē dūr dēsnē lē-giō. Apnō māl bhaiṛī together in-making far country-to he-took-away. His-own property ill lachchē-maī uttē gāl-dīnō. Jadē gāl-dīnō, uttē dēsē behaviour-in there was-wasted. When it-was-wasted, there in-the-country sāhūkārē dhōrē nōkar hō-giō-chhī. Unnē kahiō, 'jā-kē sūrannē a-rich-man near servant he-become-was. Him-by it-was-said, 'gone-having swine wāhī-mahī charā-liā.' Ōh-rō jī kīdō ūnhũ chhilaṛũnē khātē field-in graze.' Him-of heart was-made those-very husks in-eating apnā ḍhiḍ bhar-lai, jinhūnũ sūr khātē. Ūnē as bhī nahī his-own belly he-may-fill, which swine used-to-eat. Him-to such even not miltē.
were-being-got.

BHĀṬNĒRĪ.

Finally I give (also in transliteration) a similar extract from the version of the Parable, as it appears in the Serampore translation of 1824. It will be seen that its general character is the same as that of the preceding specimens.

[No. 23.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

BHAṬṬIĀNĪ (BHĀṬNĒRĪ) DIALECT.

(Serampore Missionaries, 1824.)

Kãī mānakhdē dōy gabharu handā. Phēr bã̃-mã̃y-tā chhōṭōḍē
A-certain man-to two sons were. Then them-in-from by-the-younger bhāyjīnū ākhyā, 'hē bhāyjī, māyādī jō pã̃tī paḍdī, the-father-to it-was-said, 'O father, the-property-of what share falling(-is), bā asẽ̃ dō.' Phēr ũ bã̃dē kōl māyādī pã̃tyã̃ kitī.
that to-us give.' Then by-him them-of near the-property-of shares were-made.
Phēr ghaṇā ḍan na huyã̃-tā chhōṭōḍō gabharu āprō sārō bhēlō Then many days not becoming-from the-younger son his-own all together karar dūr dēśnū parō-gayō. Phēr uthē zaṅg-ras-mẽ̃ jīr having-made a-far country-to went-away. Then there debauchery-in having-lived apṇī māyā uḍāy-dī. Tad ũdī sārī khuṭ-gayã̃-tā his-own property was-squandered. Then him-of all(-property) wasted-being-gone-on ũ dēś-mẽ̃ ghaṇō karḍō kāl paḍiyō. Phēr u ghaṭāw-mẽ̃ paḍan that country-in a-very heavy famine fell. Then he want-in to-fall lagyō. Phēr u jāyar ũ dēśdē kãī bastī-bālẽ̃dē nāl began. Then he having-gone that country-of a-certain villager-of with mil-gayō. Phēr ũ śũwar charāwaṇ liyē apṇē khēt-mẽ̃ ũnū was-joined. Then by-him swine feeding for his-own field-in him-to paṭhyō. Phēr śūwar jō khã̃wdā-handā ũ chhawḍã̃-tā ũ it-was-sent. Then the-swine what eating-were those husks-by by-him apṇō pēṭ bharan chāyō. Phēr kãī ũnū na diyā.
his-own belly to-fill it-was-wished. Then by-anyone him-to not they-were-given.

PAÑJĀBĪ MERGING INTO LAHNDĀ.

The district of Lahore lies on both sides of the river Ravi. On the east side (in the Bari Doab between the Ravi and the Sutlej) the dialect of Pañjābī spoken is Mājhī. On the west of the Ravi (in the Rechna Doab between the Ravi and the Chenab), the Lahore dialect of Pañjābī shows signs of the increasing influence of Lahndā.

It has already been remarked that the old form of speech from which Lahndā is derived must once have extended far to the east beyond its present territories. In the Eastern Panjab this language has been overlaid by a language belonging to the Central Group, and the resultant language is that now known as Pañjābī. As we go westwards from the Gangetic Doab, relics of the original Lahndā basis become more and more evident. We have already met some noteworthy instances in the Mājhī dialect which is admittedly the best and purest form of Pañjābī. When we cross the Ravi into the Rechna Doab, the Lahndā basis becomes much more in evidence, and the conventional boundary line between Lahndā and Pañjābī after crossing the district of Gujrat runs nearly north and south through this Doab, starting at about Ramnagar in Gujranwala on the Chenab, and running due south to the northern corner of the Montgomery district. Thence it continues its course due south (crossing the Ravi on its way) to the southern corner of the latter district on the banks of the Sutlej. A part of that portion of the Montgomery district which lies to the east of this conventional line is thus in the Bari Doab, but linguistically it belongs to the north-east of the Rechna Doab.

The line described above is a purely conventional one adopted for this Survey. Everywhere in India we meet with instances of languages merging into each other, but nowhere in India do we find the merging so gradual as that which takes place between Lahndā and Pañjābī. The wave of the language of the Central Group, which at first overwhelmed the most eastern Lahndā, gradually lost its force as we go westwards, allowing the Lahndā basis to become more and more evident. The wave extended to the west of the line just described, but by this time it was so shallow, and had lost so much power, that the language is no longer Pañjābī coloured by Lahndā but rather Lahndā coloured by Pañjābī. We may roughly put this line as indicating the boundary between these two conditions of affairs, but in the country near this line, on each side, the local patois is so indefinite that it may with equal correctness be classed with either language, and many authorities may claim that the language spoken immediately to the west of it in Gujranwala and Montgomery is Pañjābī and not Lahndā. Such a claim I do not oppose. The circumstances of the case make opposition out of the question. On the other hand, the line I have drawn is a convenient one, and roughly shows the western boundary of Pañjābī.

To the east of this line we have, first, the north-eastern half of the district of Gujrat; then, in the Rechna Doab, the district of Sialkot, half the district of Gujranwala, the trans-Ravi portion of Lahore, and a small portion of Montgomery. Crossing the Ravi into the Bari Doab we have, to the east of the line, the eastern half of the Montgomery district, roughly corresponding to the Taḥṣīls of Dipalpur and Pak Pattan. Over the whole of this tract, the language is the same,— Pañjābī with a strong infusion of Lahndā. I give three specimens,—one from West Lahore, another from Sialkot, in the north of the tract, and another from Pak Pattan of Montgomery, in the extreme south.

When the boundary line touches the Sutlej at the southern corner of Montgomery, it follows that river for a few miles and then crosses Bahawalpur, so as to include the north-eastern corner of that state. Here the language is the same as that of Pak Pattan and no specimen of it is necessary. This concludes the review of Pañjābī merging into Lahndā.

We may estimate the number of speakers of this mixed dialect as in the table given below. The figures for Gujranwala include about 155,000 speakers of Pañjābī from other parts of the province who have settled in the Chenab Canal Colony, most of them probably speak Mājhī. As given the figures have been revised by the local officials since the Rough Lists of Languages spoken in the Panjab were published. So also the Bahawalpur figures are revised ones—

North-East Gujrat	457,200
Sialkot	1,010,000
East Gujranwala	505,000
Trans-Ravi, Lahore	17,398
East Montgomery	292,426
North Bahawalpur	150,000
TOTAL	2,432,024

The Lahore figures in the above seem to be too small, but I have no means of checking them, and the loss is probably balanced by the number of Chenab Canal colonists who speak Mājhī.

AUTHORITIES,—

GRAHAME BAILEY, REV. T.,—Panjābī Grammar. A brief Grammar of Panjābī as spoken in the Wazīrābād (i.e. North Gujranwala) District. Lahore, 1904.

CUMMINGS, REV. T. F., AND GRAHAME BAILEY, REV. T.,—Panjabi Manual and Grammar : a Guide to the Colloquial Panjabi of the Northern Panjab. Calcutta, 1912. (Under the name 'Northern Punjab' are included the Districts of Sialkot, Gujranwala, Lahore, Gujrat, and Firozpur, with parts of the adjoining Districts.)

PAÑJĀBĪ OF WEST LAHORE.

Directly we cross the Ravi into the western portion of Lahore district we find that the Lahndā basis of Pañjābī makes itself much more strongly felt. There are also a few local peculiarities. As a specimen of the dialect of this part of the Lahore district I give a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son, which offers several instructive forms.

In pronunciation we may notice the total absence of the cerebral ḷ, as is also the case in the Pañjābī of the Mājhā. The cerebral ṇ is very capriciously used. Thus, we have gāwaṇ and nachchaṇ in the same sentence. The vowel scale in some words is irregular. The root rah, remain, is sometimes spelt rah, sometimes rih, and sometimes raih. Compare the rĕh of the Lahndā of Shāhpur.

In the declension of nouns we may note that the postposition of the agent case is nē, not nai, which is very often omitted (as in Lahndā). Nē is also occasionally used instead of nũ̃, as the sign of the dative. Thus, naukar-nē ākhiā, he said to the servant.

In the pronouns, we have tũ̃ used for the agent case singular, as well as for the nominative. Thus, tũ̃ niāz dittī, thou gavest a feast. Asã̃ and tusã̃ are often used for the nominative, to mean 'we' and 'you,' respectively. The usual word for 'he' is the Lahndā ō, with an oblique singular us or un. In ĩdhē for ihdē, of this one, we have a transposition of the aspirate. 'Own' is apnā, not āpṇā. The relative pronoun is jēṛā (cf. Lahndā jehṛā). 'What?' is kīh.

The verb substantive regularly takes the Lahndā forms; thus, we have hin, they are; āhā or hā, he was. Sometimes we find jē used to mean 'he is' or 'they are.'[1] In the finite verb we have both the Lahndā form of the future, as in uṭhisã̃-(gā), I will arise, and the Pañjābī one, as in rahã̃gā, I will remain.

Now and then we find instances of pronominal suffixes attached to verbs, exactly as in Lahndā. Thus, dittōī, given by thee. The Lahndā present participle is also common. Thus, karẽ̃dā for kardā, doing.

We also find instances of the Lahndā negative verb substantive, as in nahã̃, he was not.

There are also a number of Lahndā expressions. Such are the use of the root chā, raise, prefixed to a verb in order to intensify its meaning. Thus, chā-kītā, was done; chā-jān, consider. So also we may quote (among others occurring in the specimen) as typical Lahndā expressions hikk, one; thigṛā, a garment; kāvīr, angry; hatthõ̃, on the contrary.

Mr. Newton, on page 33 of his Panjábí Grammar, states that, in the Lahore district, the word nē is often used redundantly. Thus, ih bī ākh dittā-sā nē, this too he said. I have not met any examples of this in the specimens. It is a question whether in such cases, nē is not, like jē, a pronominal suffix. Lahndā has nē for the second and third persons plural, and it is quite possible that, in Lahore, it may also be used for the singular. In Kāshmīrī, which is closely related to Lahndā, an is used for the singular of the pronoun of the third person.

[1] See the remarks on p. 628.

Sialkot, in the north of the tract, and another from Pak Pattan of Montgomery, in the extreme south.

When the boundary line touches the Sutlej at the southern corner of Montgomery, it follows that river for a few miles and then crosses Bahawalpur, so as to include the north-eastern corner of that state. Here the language is the same as that of Pak Pattan and no specimen of it is necessary. This concludes the review of Pañjābī merging into Lahndā.

We may estimate the number of speakers of this mixed dialect as in the table given below. The figures for Gujranwala include about 155,000 speakers of Pañjābī from other parts of the province who have settled in the Chenab Canal Colony, most of them probably speak Mājhī. As given the figures have been revised by the local officials since the Rough Lists of Languages spoken in the Panjab were published. So also the Bahawalpur figures are revised ones—

North-East Gujrat	457,200
Sialkot	1,010,000
East Gujranwala	505,000
Trans-Ravi, Lahore	17,398
East Montgomery	292,426
North Bahawalpur	150,000
TOTAL	2,432,024

The Lahore figures in the above seem to be too small, but I have no means of checking them, and the loss is probably balanced by the number of Chenab Canal colonists who speak Mājhī.

AUTHORITIES,—

GRAHAME BAILEY, REV. T.,—Panjābī Grammar. A brief Grammar of Panjābī as spoken in the Wazīrābād (i.e. North Gujranwala) District. Lahore, 1904.

CUMMINGS, REV. T. F., AND GRAHAME BAILEY, REV. T.,—Panjabi Manual and Grammar : a Guide to the Colloquial Panjabi of the Northern Panjab. Calcutta, 1912. (Under the name 'Northern Punjab' are included the Districts of Sialkot, Gujranwala, Lahore, Gujrat, and Firozpur, with parts of the adjoining Districts.)

PAÑJĀBĪ OF WEST LAHORE.

Directly we cross the Ravi into the western portion of Lahore district we find that the Lahndā basis of Pañjābī makes itself much more strongly felt. There are also a few local peculiarities. As a specimen of the dialect of this part of the Lahore district I give a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son, which offers several instructive forms.

In pronunciation we may notice the total absence of the cerebral ḷ, as is also the case in the Pañjābī of the Mājhā. The cerebral ṇ is very capriciously used. Thus, we have gāwaṇ and nachchaṇ in the same sentence. The vowel scale in some words is irregular. The root rah, remain, is sometimes spelt rah, sometimes rih, and sometimes raih. Compare the rĕh of the Lahndā of Shāhpur.

In the declension of nouns we may note that the postposition of the agent case is nē, not nai, which is very often omitted (as in Lahndā). Nē is also occasionally used instead of nũ, as the sign of the dative. Thus, naukar-nē ākhiā, he said to the servant.

In the pronouns, we have tũ used for the agent case singular, as well as for the nominative. Thus, tũ niāz dittī, thou gavest a feast. Asã and tusã are often used for the nominative, to mean 'we' and 'you,' respectively. The usual word for 'he' is the Lahndā ō, with an oblique singular us or un. In ĩdhē for ihdē, of this one, we have a transposition of the aspirate. 'Own' is apnā, not āpṇā. The relative pronoun is jēṛā (cf. Lahndā jehṛā). 'What?' is kīh.

The verb substantive regularly takes the Lahndā forms; thus, we have hin, they are; āhā or hā, he was. Sometimes we find jē used to mean 'he is' or 'they are.'[1] In the finite verb we have both the Lahndā form of the future, as in uṭhisã-(gā), I will arise, and the Pañjābī one, as in rahãgā, I will remain.

Now and then we find instances of pronominal suffixes attached to verbs, exactly as in Lahndā. Thus, dittōī, given by thee. The Lahndā present participle is also common. Thus, karẽdā for kardā, doing.

We also find instances of the Lahndā negative verb substantive, as in nahã, he was not.

There are also a number of Lahndā expressions. Such are the use of the root chā, raise, prefixed to a verb in order to intensify its meaning. Thus, chā-kītā, was done; chā-jān, consider. So also we may quote (among others occurring in the specimen) as typical Lahndā expressions hikk, one; thigṛā, a garment; kāvīr, angry; hatthõ, on the contrary.

Mr. Newton, on page 33 of his Panjábí Grammar, states that, in the Lahore district, the word nē is often used redundantly. Thus, ih bī ākh dittā-sā nē, this too he said. I have not met any examples of this in the specimens. It is a question whether in such cases, nē is not, like jē, a pronominal suffix. Lahndā has nē for the second and third persons plural, and it is quite possible that, in Lahore, it may also be used for the singular. In Kāshmīrī, which is closely related to Lahndā, an is used for the singular of the pronoun of the third person.

[1] See the remarks on p. 628.

[No. 24.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

DIALECT OF NORTH-EAST OF RECHNA DOAB. (DISTRICT LAHORE, TAḤṢĪL SHARAKPUR.)

ਹਿੱਕ ਆਦਮੀਦੇ ਦੋ ਪੁਤ੍ਰ ਆਹੇ ਉਨ੍ਹਾਂ ਵਿੱਚੋਂ ਪਿਉਨੂੰ ਨਿੱਕੇ ਆਖਿਆ ਪਿਉ ਜੋ ਮੇਰਾ ਹਿੱਸਾ ਰਿਜ਼ਕ ਵਿੱਚ ਹੈ ਓ ਵੰਡ ਦੇ। ਉਸਨੇ ਅਪਨਾ ਮਾਲ ਦੁਹਾਂਨੂੰ ਵੰਡ ਦਿੱਤਾ। ਬਾਹਲੇ ਦਿਨ ਅਜਾਂ ਨਹੀਂ ਹੋਏ ਨਿੱਕੇਨੇ ਸਾਰਾ ਮਾਲ ਇਕੱਠਾ ਚਾ ਕੀਤਾ ਕਿਸੀ ਦੂਰ ਮੁਲਕ ਲੇ ਕੇ ਵਾਂਢਾ ਰਹਾ ਤੇ ਉਥਾਂ ਡੇੜੇ ਕੰਮਾਂ ਵਿੱਚ ਮਾਲ ਵਿੰਵਾਇਆ। ਜਿਸ ਵੇਲੇ ਹੱਭੋ ਮਾਲ ਉਸਨੇ ਲਾ ਲਿਆ ਵੱਤ ਉਸ ਮੁਲਕਦੇ ਵਿੱਚ ਬੋਂਹ ਕਾਲ ਪੈ ਗਿਆ। ਵੱਤ ਉਸਨੂੰ ਲੋੜ ਪਵਨ ਲੱਗੀ। ਵੱਤ ਓ ਗਿਆ ਉਸ ਮੁਲਕਦੇ ਹਿੱਕ ਸ਼ਾਹਰਦੇ ਆਦਮੀਦੇ ਨਾਲ ਨੌਕਰ ਰਾਹ ਪਿਆ। ਉਸਨੇ ਉਸਨੂੰ ਸੂਰਾਂਨੂੰ ਚਾਰਾਵਾਨ ਵਾਸਤੇ ਪੈਲੀਆਂ ਵਿੱਚ ਘੱਲਿਆ। ਜੇੜੇ ਛਿੱਲੜ ਸੂਰ ਖਾਂਦੇ ਆਹੇ ਓ ਵੀ ਢਿੱਢ ਰਾਜ਼ੀ ਹੋਕਰ ਭਰ ਲੈਂਦਾ। ਜਦ ਉਨਨੂੰ ਸੁਰਤ ਆਈ ਉਸ ਆਖਿਆ ਮੇਰੇ ਪਿਉਦੇ ਨੌਕਰ ਕਈ ਹਿਨ ਓ ਰੱਜ ਕੇ ਖਾ ਭੀ ਲੈਂਦੇ ਹਿਨ ਤੇ ਵਧਿਆ ਭੀ ਰਹੁੰਦਾ ਹੈ। ਮੈਂ ਭੁੱਖ ਨਾਲ ਪਿਆ ਮਰਨਾਂ ਹਾਂ। ਮੈਂ ਉਠਿਸਾਂਗਾ ਤੇ ਵੱਧ ਪਿਉ ਕੋਲ ਵਾਂਦਾ ਰਹਾਂਗਾ ਤੇ ਉਨਨੂੰ ਆਖਾਂਗਾ ਪਿਉ ਮੈਂ ਖੁਦਾਦਾ ਗੁਨਾਹ ਭੀ ਕੀਤਾ ਤੇ ਤੇਰਾ ਭੀ ਕੀਤਾ ਮੈਂ ਇਸ ਗਲ ਜੋਗਾ ਨਹੀਂ ਰੈਹ ਗਿਆ ਜੋ ਤੇਰਾ ਪੁਤ੍ਰ ਮੈਂ ਸਦੀਵਾਂ। ਮੈਂਨੂੰ ਵੀ ਅਪਨਾ ਹਿੱਕ ਨੌਕਰ ਚਾ ਜਾਨ। ਵੱਤ ਓ ਉਠਿਆ ਤੇ ਅਪਨੇ ਪਿਉ ਵਲੇ ਗਿਆ। ਅਜਾਂ ਓ ਢੇਰ ਦੂਰ ਆਹਾ ਉਨਦੇ ਪਿਉ ਉਸਨੂੰ ਵੇਖ ਲਿਆ ਉਨਨੂੰ ਤਰਸ ਆਇਆ ਤੇ ਭੱਜ ਵਗ ਗਿਆ ਤੇ ਉਨਨੂੰ ਗਲ ਵਿਚ ਲਾ ਲਿਆ ਤੇ ਚੁੰਮ ਲਿਆ। ਪੁਤ੍ਰ ਉਨਨੂੰ ਆਖਿਆ ਪਿਉ ਮੈਂ ਖੁਦਾਦਾ ਗੁਨਾਹ ਭੀ ਕੀਤਾ ਹੈ ਤੇਰਾ ਭੀ ਕੀਤਾ ਹੈ ਤੇ ਹੁਨ ਤੇਰਾ ਪੁਤ੍ਰ ਸਦੀਵਾਂ ਜੋਗਾ ਨਹੀਂ। ਵੱਤ ਪਿਉਨੇ ਅਪਣੇ ਨੌਕਰਾਂਨੂੰ ਆਖਿਆ ਚੰਗੇ ਥਿਗੜੇ ਕੱਢ ਲੇ ਆਓ ਤੇ ਉਨਨੂੰ ਪਾ ਦੇਓ ਈਂਧੇ ਹੱਥ ਵਿੱਚ ਮੁੰਦਰੀ ਘੱਤੋ ਤੇ ਪੈਰਾਂ ਵਿੱਚ ਜੁੱਤੀ ਪਵਾਓ। ਆਓ ਖਾ ਲਈਏ ਤੇ ਰਾਜ਼ੀ ਹੋਈਏ ਏ ਮੇਰਾ ਪੁਤ੍ਰ ਮਰ ਗਿਆ ਹਾ ਜੀਂਦਾ ਹੋ ਗਿਆ ਹੈ ਤੇ ਖੜੀ ਗਿਆ ਆਹਾ ਤੇ ਲੱਭ ਪਿਆ। ਤੇ ਓ ਖੁਸ਼ ਹੋਵਨ ਲੱਗੇ॥

ਤੇ ਉਂਦਾ ਵੱਡਾ ਪੁਤ੍ਰ ਪੈਹਲੀਆਂ ਵਿੱਚ ਗਿਆ ਆਹਾ। ਜਿਸ ਵੇਲੇ ਓ ਆਇਆ ਤੇ ਘਰਦੇ ਨੇੜੇ ਆਇਆ ਉਸਨੇ ਗਾਵਨ ਤੇ ਨੱਚਣ ਸੁਣਿਆ। ਉਸ ਹਿੱਕ ਨੌਕਰਨੇ ਆਖਿਆ ਤੇ ਪੁਛਿਆ ਤੇ ਕੀਹ ਹੈ। ਉਸਨੇ ਉਨਨੂੰ ਆਖਿਆ ਤੇਰਾ ਭਿਰਾ ਆਇਆ ਹੈ ਤੇਰੇ ਪਿਉਨੇ ਨਿਆਜ਼ ਇਸ ਵਾਸਤੇ ਦਿੱਤੀ ਹੈ ਤੇਰਾ ਭਿਰਾ ਖੈਰ ਮੇਹਰ ਨਾਲ ਆਇਆ ਹੈ। ਓ ਕਾਵੀਰ

ਹੋਇਆ ਤੇ ਅੰਦਰ ਨਹਾਂ ਜਾਂਦਾ। ਇਸ ਵਾਸਤੇ ਉਂਦਾ ਪਿਉ ਬਾਹਰ ਨਿਕਲ ਆਇਆ ਅਤੇ ਉਂਦੀ ਮਿੰਨਤ ਕੀਤੀ। ਉਸ ਪਿਉਨੂੰ ਆਖਿਆ ਦੇਖ ਮੈਂ ਬੌਹ ਵਰ੍ਹੇ ਤੇਰੀ ਖਿਦਮਤ ਕਰੇਂਦਾ ਰਿਹਾ ਹਾਂ ਤੇਰਾ ਆਖਿਆ ਕਦਾਂ ਮੈਂ ਨਹੀਂ ਸਿੱਟਿਆ ਤੇ ਹਿੱਕ ਲੇਲਾ ਵੀ ਨਾਂ ਦਿੱਤੋਈ ਅਪਨਿਆਂ ਬੇਲੀਆਂ ਨਾਲ ਮੈਂ ਖੁਸ਼ੀ ਕਰੇਂਦਾ। ਜਿਵੇਂ ਤੇਰਾ ਏ ਪੁਤ੍ਰ ਆਇਆ ਹੈ ਜਿਸ ਸਾਰਾ ਮਾਲ ਤੇਰਾ ਕੰਜਰੀਆਂ ਤੇ ਗਵਾਇਆ ਹੈ ਉਂਦੇ ਵਾਸਤੇ ਹੱਥੋਂ ਤੂੰ ਨਿਆਜ਼ ਦਿੱਤੀ। ਉਸਨੇ ਉਨਨੂੰ ਆਖਿਆ ਤੂੰ ਹਰ ਵੇਲੇ ਮੇਰੇ ਕੋਲ ਹੇਂ। ਜੇੜਾ ਮੇਰਾ ਮਾਲ ਹੈ ਸਾਰਾ ਤੇਰਾ ਹੀ ਹੈ। ਅਸਾਂਨੂੰ ਹਿੱਕ ਗਲ ਲਾਇਕ ਆਹੀ ਜੇ ਖ਼ੁਸ਼ੀ ਕਰੇਂਦੇ ਤੇ ਖੁਸ਼ ਹੋਂਦੇ ਇਸ ਵਾਸਤੇ ਕਿ ਭਿਰਾ ਤੇਰਾ ਮਰ ਗਿਆ ਆਹਾ ਔਰ ਵੱਤ ਜੀਂਵਦਾ ਹੋ ਗਿਆ ਹੈ ਓ ਖੜੀ ਗਿਆ ਆਹਾ ਤੇ ਲੱਭ ਪਿਆ ਹੈ॥

[No. 24.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

DIALECT OF NORTH-EAST OF RECHNA DOAB. (DISTRICT LAHORE, TAḤṢĪL SHARAKPUR.)

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Hikk ādmī-dē dō putr āhē. Unhã̄ vichchõ piunũ̄ One man-of two sons were. Them from-among the-father-to nikkē ākhiā, 'piu, jō mērā hissā rizk-vichch hai, ō by-the-younger it-was-said, 'father, that my share wealth-in is, that waṇḍ-dē.' Usnē apnā māl duhã̄nũ̄ having-divided-give.' Him-by his-own property both-to waṇḍ-dittā. Bāhlē din ajã̄ nahĩ̄ hōē nikkēnē having-divided-was-given. Many days yet not became the-younger-by sārā māl ikaṭṭhā chā-kītā, kisī dūr mulk the-whole property together was-made, a-certain distant country

lē-kē vã̄ḍhā rahā, tē uthã̄ bhaiṛē kammã̄-vichch taken-having (as-)a-sojourner remained, and there bad doings-in māl viññāiā. Jis vēlē habbhō māl usnē lā-liā, property was-wasted. (At-)what at-time the-whole property him-by was-spent, watt us mulkdē vichch baũh kāl pai-giā. Watt usnũ̄ lōṛ, then that country-of in great famine fell. Then him-to need, pawan laggī. Watt ō giā, us mulkdē hikk shāhardē ādmīdē to-fall began. Then he went, that country-of one city-of man-of nāl naukar rāh-piā. Usnē usnũ̄ sūrã̄nũ̄ chārāwān wāstē with servant he-remained. Him-by him-to swine-to the-feeding for pailiã̄-vichch ghalliā. Jēṛē chhillaṛ sūr khã̄dē-āhē, ō vī the-fields-in it-was-sent. What husks the-swine eating-were, he also ḍhiḍḍh rāzī hō-kar bhar-laĩdā. Jad ūnnũ̄ surt āī, us belly happy become-having used-to-fill. When him-to senses came, by-him ākhiā, 'mēre piudē naukar kaī hin, ō rajj-kē khā it-was-said, 'my father-of servants many are, they satiated-being eating bhī laĩdē-hin, tē wadhiā bhī rahũ̄dā-hai. Maĩ bhukkh nāl also taking-are, and surplus also remaining-is. I hunger with piā marnã̄-hã̄. Maĩ uṭhisã̄gā tē waddh piu kōl wã̄dā-rahã̄gā; fallen dying-am. I rise-will and then the-father near I-will-go-forth;

tē unnũ̄ ākhã̄gā, "piu, maĩ Khudādā gunāh bhī kītā tē and him-to I-will-say, "father, by-me God-of sin also was-done and tērā bhī kītā; maĩ is gal jōgā nahĩ raih-giā jō tērā of-thee also was-done; I this thing worthy not remained that thy putr maĩ sadīwã̄; maĩnũ̄ vī apnā hikk naukar chā-jāṅ.''' son I may-be-called; me-to also thine-own one servant consider.'''

Watt ō uṭhiā tē apnē piu walē giā. Ajã̄ ō ḍhēr Then he rose and his-own father towards went. Yet he a-great dūr āhā, undē piu usnũ̄ vēkh-liā, unnũ̄ tars āiā, tē distance was, his by-father him-to it-was-seen, him-to pity came, and bhajj wag-giā tē unnũ̄ gal-vich lā-liā, tē chhum having-run he-went and him-to neck-with it-was-applied, and kiss liā. Putr unnũ̄ ākhiā, 'piu, maĩ Khudādā gunāh was-taken. By-the-son him-to it-was-said, 'father, by-me God-of sin bhī kītā-hai, tērā bhī kītā-hai, tē hun tērā putr sadīwã̄ jōgā also done-is, of-thee too done-is, and now thy son to-be-called worthy nahĩ.' Watt piunē apṇē naukrã̄nũ̄ ākhiā, 'chaṅgē
I-am-not.' Then the-father-by his-own servants-to it-was-said, 'good thigṛē kaḍḍh lē-āō, tē unnũ̄ pā-dēō; ĩdhē hatth-vichch clothes having-taken-out bring, and him-to put-on; his hand-in mundrī ghattō, tē pairã̄-vichch juttī pawāō; āō, khā-laiē, tē ring put, and feet-in shoes put-on; come, we-may-eat, and rāzī hōiē; ē mērā putr mar-giā-hā, jĩdā hō-giā-hai, tē happy let-us-become; this my son dead-gone-was, alive become-is, and khaṛī giā āhā, tē labbh-piā.' Tē ō khush hōwan laggē.
lost gone was, and found-is.' Then they happy to-become began.

Tē undā waḍḍā putr pēhlĩã̄-vichch giyā-āhā. Jis vēlē
And him-of the-elder son the-fields-in gone-was. At-which at-time ō āiā, tē ghardē nēṛē āiā, usnē gāwan tē nachchaṇ he came, and the-house-of near came, him-by singing and dancing suṇiā. Us hikk naukarnē ākhiā tē puchhiā, 'ē was-heard. By-him one servant-to it-was-said and it-was-asked, 'this kīh hai?' Usnē unnũ̄ ākhiā, 'tērā bhirā āiā-hai, tērē what is?' Him-by him-to it-was-said, 'thy brother come-is, thy piunē niāz is-wāstē dittī-hai, tērā bhirā khair-mēhr nāl āiā-hai.'
father-by feast this-reason-for given-is, thy brother safety with come-is.'
Ō kāvīr hōiā, tē andar nahã̄ jã̄dā. Is-wāstē undā He angry became, and within not (was-)going. This-reason-for his piu bāhar nikal-āiā, atē undī minnat kītī. Us father outside out-came, and him-of remonstrance was-made. By-him piunũ̄ ākhiā, 'dēkh, maĩ baũh warhē tērī khidmat karẽdā the-father-to it-was-said, 'see, I many years thy service doing rihā-hã̃; tērā ākhiā kadã̃ maĭ nahĩ̃ sitṭiā, tē remained-was; thy what-was-said ever by-me not was-thrown-down, and hikk lēlā vī nã̃ dittōī, apniā bēlīã̃-nāl maĭ khushī one kid even not was-given-by-thee, my-own friends-with I happiness karẽ̃dā. Jivẽ̃ tērā ē putr āiā-hai, jis sārā māl might-have-made. When thy this son come-is, by-whom the-whole property tērā kañjrīã̃-tē gawāiā-hai, undē wāstē hatthõ tũ niāz thy harlots-with wasted-is, him-of for-the-sake on-the-contrary by-thee a-feast dittī.' Usnē unnũ ākhiā, 'tũ har vēlē mērē kōl was-given.' Him-by him-to it-was-said, 'thou at-every time me near hẽ̃; jēṛā mērā māl hai, sārā tērā-hī hai; asã̃nũ hikk art; whatever my property is, the-whole thine-also is; us-to one gal lāik āhī, jē khushi karẽ̃dē tē khush thing proper was, that happiness we-should-have-done and happy hõdē; is wāstē ki bhirā tērā mar gia āhā, aur watt should-have-been; this for that brother thy dead gone was, and again jĩwdā ho-giā-hai; ō khaṛī giá-āhā, tē labbh-piā-hai.' alive become-is; he lost gone-was, and found-been-is.'

PAÑJĀBĪ OF SIALKOT, EAST GUJRANWALA, AND NORTH-EAST GUJRAT.

The conventional boundary line between Lahndā and Pañjābī starts at the north end of the Pabbi range in Gujrat, and, entering Gujranwala at Ramnagar, divides that district into two nearly equal parts. The tract to the east of this line embraces the whole of Sialkot, the eastern half of Gujranwala, and the north-east of Gujrat. On the east it has the Mājhī Pañjābī of Gurdaspur, on its south, the mixed dialect of West Lahore just described.

The dialect of this tract has been fully described by Mr. Grahame Bailey and Mr. Cummings, in the works referred to on p. 744. It closely resembles that of West Lahore, and as a specimen I give a short folktale from Sialkot, written in the Persian character, with transliteration and translation.

We may note the following peculiarities in the specimen, nearly all of which are due to the influence of Lahndā. There is a strong tendency to drop the letter h after an accented syllable,[1] and even elsewhere. Thus, rá'ē, for ráhē, they remained; ē or hē, is, and so on. We see the origin of the standard Pañjābī present participle in nā instead of dā in the word dẽ̃dā or dēnnā, giving. All over Indo-Aryan India, a d preceded by a nasal may optionally be pronounced as n.

In the declension of nouns, the postposition of the genitive is treated as in Lahndā, so that we have diã̃ or dēã̃ instead of dē agreeing with a masculine noun in the plural.

The pronouns present some irregularities. 'Our' is sāḍḍā, asã̃ḍḍā or asāḍḍā (Mr. Bailey gives sāḍḍā). 'Your' is tusāḍḍā or tohāḍḍā (Mr. Bailey gives tuhāḍḍā). The oblique form singular of the pronoun of the third person is ōs (as the oblique form singular of ih, this, is ēs), and its oblique plural is ōnã̃ or ōhnã̃. Jēṛā or jehṛā is 'who,' with jis, or the Mālwāī form jit, for its oblique singular.

The following forms of the verb substantive occur,—ã̃, or hã̃, I am, we are; ẽ̃, thou art; ē, or hē, he, she, it is; sāṇ, or haisāṇ, they were.

For further particulars, the student is referred to the very full details given in the Grammars already referred to.

[1] See the remarks on p. 628.

[No. 25.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

DIALECT OF NORTH-EAST OF RECHNA DOAB. (DISTRICT, SIALKOT.)

ساڈا وڈّا مَہر مِٹھہ ہویا اے - اوسنے آکھیا کہ میرا نان جہان وِچ مشہور رئے - بادشاہ اکبر نے اوسدے پاسون لڑکیدا ساک منگیا - اوس اگّون آکھیا توں بادشاہ اے - مَیں زمیندار آں - ساڈّا تُساڈّا بر نہیں مِچدا - اوس آکھیا تَینُون ایس گل وِچ کي اے - میرا دِل ایا اے - جِس وقت اوسنے ساک دینا چا کِیتا تان اوسنے آکھیا میرے گھر آڈھوَک - اونان تد میل منڈل آکٹّھا کِیتا - اوس آکھیا بادشاہ میري لڑکیدا ساک مُنگدا اے - توھاڈّي کِي صلاح ہے - کِسے آکھیا دینّے ہان تے کِسے آکھیا نہیں دیدیندے - باقّیان نے کہیا کہ دیندے ہان - اونان ساک دیدِتّا - بادشاہ آ ڈھوکّا - مہر مِٹھہ نے سارے بھرا بُلاے روٹي کھوان واسطے اور جنجِ دي خِدمت واسطے - کُج جت بادشاہ ول گئے - جِت وقت وُہ دو راتِین مَہر مِٹھہ دے گھر رئے اوتھے کِسے آکھیا کہ کُج دیئے کہ آساندّا نان رئے - بادشاہ ول جیڑے لوک آے سان اونان نال وي مِراسِي خِدمت واسطے گئے سان - ہور جیڑے لوک مِہر مِٹھہ ول میل آے سان اونان نال وي مراسي آے سان -

ھُن جیڑے ویلے کوٹھے تے بھۂ ے خَیرات کرن لگے رُپیے سِکّہ اَکبر بادشاہ دے سان - مہر مِٹھ اونان لوکان دیان مِراسیان نُون جِھڑے اوس ول میل آے سان اِک اِک رُپیا دتّا - ہور جِھڑے جٹ بادشاہ دے نال جنجِي آے سان اوناندیان مِراسیاننون آٹھہ آٹھہ آنے دِتّے کہ اونان اساڈِي گھٹّدِي کِیتِي اے - مُڑ وِواھہ ے بادشاہ نُون ڈولا دتّا *

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

DIALECT OF NORTH-EAST OF RECHNA DOAB. (DISTRICT SIALKOT.)

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Sāḍḍā waḍḍā Mahr Miṭha hōiā-ē. Ōsnē ākhiā ki, 'mērā Our ancestor Mahr Miṭha was. Him-by it-was-said that, 'my nãĕ jahān-vich mashhūr raē.' Bādshāh Akbarnē ōsdē name the-world-in famous may-remain.' The-Emperor Akbar-by him-of pāsõ laṛkīdā sāk maṅgiā. Ōs aggõ ākhiā, from-near the-daughter-of betrothal was-asked. By-him in-reply it-was-said,
'tũ Bādshāh ẽ; maĩ zamīndār ãĕ. Sāḍḍā tusāḍḍā bar
'thou Emperor art; I landowner am. Our your equality-of-status nahĩ michdā.' Ōs ākhiā, 'tainũ ēs gal-vich kī ē? Mērā not arises.' By-him it-was-said, 'thee-to this matter-in what is? My dil āiā-ē.' Jis waqt ōsnē sāk dēnā chā-kītā, tãĕ heart come-is.' At-what time him-by betrothal to-give it-was-agreed, then ōsnē ākhiā, 'mērē ghar ā-ḍhukk.' Ōnãĕ tad him-by it-was-said, 'to-my house come-with-procession.' By-them then mēl-maṇḍal akaṭṭhā kītā. Ōs ākhiā, 'bādshāh relations-friends together it-was-made. By-him it-was-said, 'the-Emperor mērī laṛkīdā sāk mangdā-ē. Tohāḍḍī kī ṣalāḥ hē?' Kisē my daughter-of betrothal asking-is. Your what advice is?' By-some ākhiā, 'dēnnē-hãĕ,' tē kisē ākhiā 'nahĩ dē-dẽdē.'
it-was-said, 'giving-we-are,' and by-some it-was-said 'not giving (-we-are).'
Bāhutiãnē kahiā ki, 'dẽdē-hãĕ.' Ōnãĕ sāk dē-dittā.
Most-by it-was-said that, 'giving-we-are.' By-them betrothal was-given.
Bādshāh ā-ḍhukkā. Mahr Miṭhēnē sārē bhirā bulāē,
The-Emperor came-in-procession. Mahr Miṭha-by all brothers were-summoned, rōṭī khawān wāsṭē aur janjdī khidmat wāsṭē.
bread causing-to-eat for and the-bridegroom's-party-of service for.
Kuj Jaṭ Bādshāh-wal gaē. Jit waqt woh dō rātĩ Mahr
Some Jaṭṭs The-Emperor-with went. At-what time they two nights Mahr Miṭhēdē ghar raē, ōthē kisē ākhiā ki, 'kuj Miṭha-of (in-) house remained, there by-someone it-was-said that, 'something dēiē, ki asãḍḍā nãĕ raē.' Bādshāh wal jẽṛē lōk let-be-given, that us-of the-name may-remain.' The-Emperor with what people āē-sāṇ, ōnā̃ nāl vī Mirāsī khidmat wāsṭē gaē-sāṇ; hōr jēṛē come-were, them with also Mirāsīs service for gone-were; and what lōk Mahr Miṭhē wal mēl āē-sāṇ, ōnā̃ nāl vī people Mahr Miṭha with (as-)brotherhood come-were, them with also Mirāsī āē-sāṇ. Huṇ jēṛē vēlē kōṭhē-tē bahi-kē khairāt karan Mirāsīs come-were. Now at-what at-time the-roof-on sat-having alms to-do laggē, rupaiē sikka Akbar Bādshāhdē sāṇ; Mahr Miṭhē they-began, the-rupees coinage Akbar the-Emperor-of were; by-Mahr Miṭha ōnā̃ lōkā̃dēā̃ Mirāsīā̃nū̃ jehṛē ōs wal mēl āē-sāṇ, ik-ik those people-of Mirāsīs-to whom him with (as-)brotherhood come-were, one-one rupaiā dittā; hōr jehṛē Jaṭ Bādshāhdē nāl rupee was-given; and what Jaṭṭs the-Emperor-of with janjī āē-sāṇ, ōnā̃dēā̃ Mirāsīā̃nū̃ aṭṭh-aṭṭh (as-)members-of-the-bridegroom's-party come-were, them-of Mirāsīs-to eight-eight ānē dittē ki, 'ōnā̃ asāḍḍī ghaṭṭdī kītī-ē.' Muṛ annas were-given because, 'by-them our disgrace made-is.' Then viwāh-kē Bādshāhnū̃ ḍōlā dittā.

marriage-having-made the-Emperor-to the-litter was-given.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

Our ancestor was Mahr Miṭhā. He was desirous of leaving his name famous in the world. The Emperor Akbar asked him for his daughter in marriage. He replied that, as he was only a modest landholder while Akbar was Emperor, the match would be an unequal one. But the Emperor insisted, and pressed Mahr Miṭha not to consider this point, so that the latter agreed to the betrothal of his daughter, and asked the Emperor to come to his house with the marriage procession. The Mahr's people then called together his relatives and friends. He told them that the Emperor requested his daughter in marriage, and asked their opinion. Some were in favour of the proposal and others were not, but the majority agreed to it, and so the betrothal took place. The Emperor came with his marriage procession and Mahr Miṭha called in all the brethren of his caste to feed and serve the bridegroom's party.

Some Jaṭṭs accompanied the Emperor, and after the bridegroom's party had stayed in Mahr Miṭha's house for two nights, one of the brethren of the latter suggested that alms should be distributed in order to make his name famous.

The people who had come with the Emperor were accompanied by Mirāsīs[1] for service, and so were the brethren who had come at Mahr Miṭha's call. They began to distribute alms from the roof of the house. The rupees were of the Emperor Akbar's coinage. Mahr Miṭha gave one rupee to each of the Mirāsīs who had accompanied his brethren, but gave only eight annas each to the Mirāsīs who had come with the Jaṭṭs of the Emperor's party, for he thought that those Jaṭṭs had disgraced him by their presence.

[1] Mirāsīs are a kind of beggar-bard, who attend weddings for what they can pick up.

Then, the marriage having been solemnised, the bridegroom's litter for ceremonial departure was given to the Emperor.

PAÑJĀBĪ OF EAST MONTGOMERY.

As one more example of Pañjābī merging into Lahndā, I give a short extract from a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son which comes from the Pak Pattan Taḥṣīl of the Montgomery district. I give it only in the Roman character, with an interlinear translation. No special remarks are required. The language is the same as that of West Lahore and of Sialkot.

[No. 26.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

DIALECT OF EAST-CENTRE OF BARI DOAB. (DISTRICT MONTGOMERY, TAḤṢĪL PAK PATTAN.)

Hikk ādmĩdē dō puttar āhē. Unhãdē vichchũ laudhē
One man-of two sons were. Them-of from-in by-the-younger puttar pēōnũ ākhiā, 'pēō, māl tē rijakdā hissā son the-father-to it-was-said, father, cattle and property-of share jehṛā mainũ ãũdā-hai mainũ dēh.' Tadã pēō māl whatever me-to arriving-is me-to give.' Then by-the-father the-cattle tē rijak unhãnũ waṇḍ dittā. Thōṛē dihã-tũ and the-property them-to having-divided was-given. A-few days-from pichchhē laudhē puttar sārā kujh hikaṭṭhā kar-kē hikk after the-younger son all everything together made-having (in-)one durēḍē dēs chalā-giā. Utthē āpdā māl rijak bhaiṛē distant country went-away. There his-own cattle property evil kammã-vich luṭā-dittā. Jis vēlē pallē kujh deeds-in was-cast-away. At-what time in-the-corner-of-his-garment anything nã rihā, tã us dēs-vich waḍḍā kāl pai-giā. Uh ṭikkī-tũ not remained, then that country-in a-great famine fell. He bread-from vī ājat hō-giā; tã us dēs-vich hikk waḍḍē ādmĩdē kōl giā.
even helpless became; then that country-in one great man-of near he-went.
Us waḍḍē ādmĩ usnũ āpdī wāhīã-vich sūrã charãwaṇdā chhēṛū
By-that great man him-as-for his-own fields-in swine feeding-of herdsman baṇā-dittā. Us-dā dil ēh ākhdā-hā, 'jehṛīã shaĩ sūr it-was-made. Him-of mind this saying-was, 'which things the-swine khãdē-hain, unhãdē nāl āpdā ḍhiḍh bharã,' jō usnũ kōī nahĩ eating-are, them-of with my-own belly I-may-fill,' as him-to any-one not dẽdā-āh.
giving-was.

ḌŌGRĀ OR ḌŌGRĪ.

I give two specimens of the Ḍōgrā dialect of Pañjābī. Both come from the state of Jammu. For an account of the dialect see pp. 637 ff., ante.

The Ḍōgrā of Gurdaspur and Sialkot in no way differs from that here exemplified, except that in both districts there is, as might be expected, a tendency to employ here and there standard Pañjābī forms.

The first Jammu specimen is a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son. The second is a short folksong. I give each specimen first in Chamba Ṭākrī type, and then in the ordinary Ḍōgrā hand-writing, with a line for line transliteration and translation.

[No. I.]

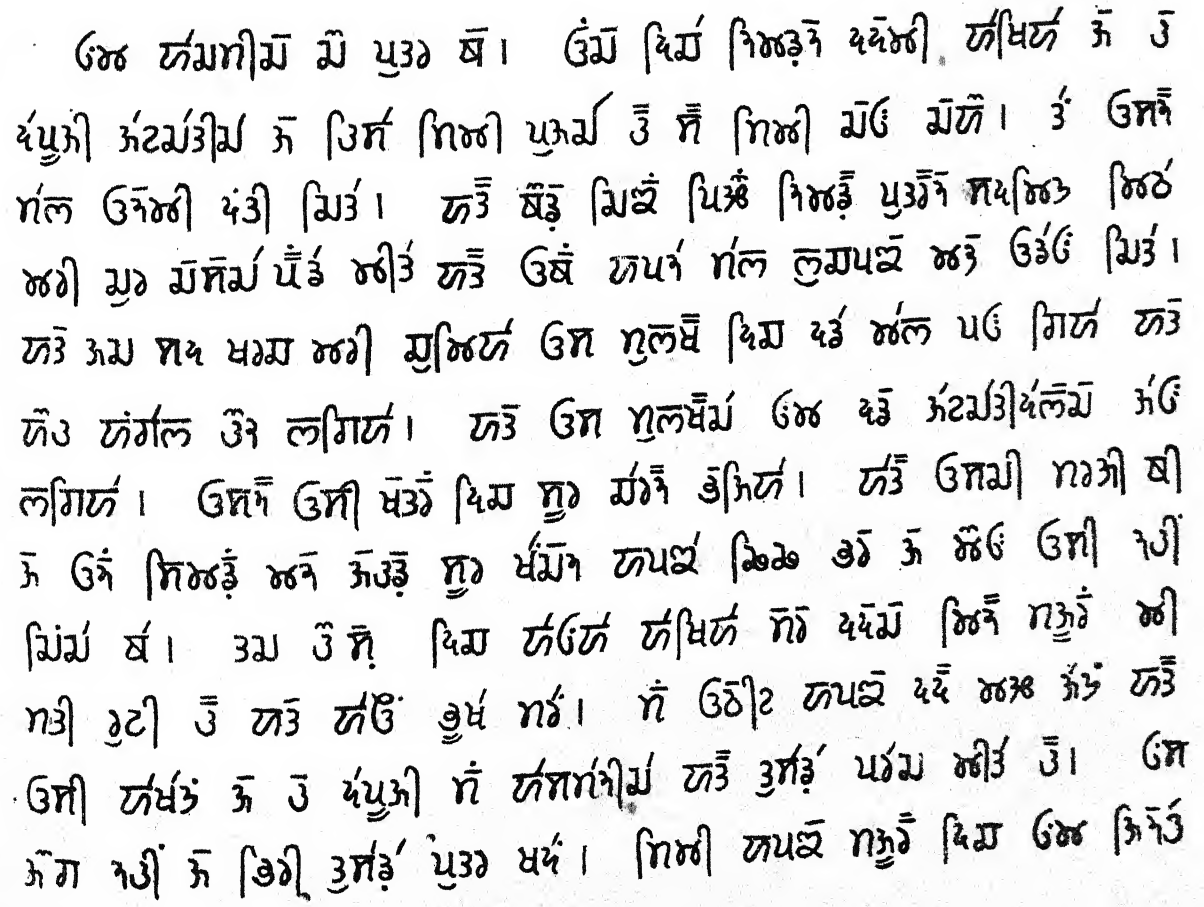
INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

ḌŌGRĀ DIALECT. (STATE JAMMU.)

SPECIMEN I.

CHAMBA ṬĀKRĪ CHARACTER.



ਦਖੀ। ਤੰ ਓਠੀਟ ਯਪਣੇ ਪਧੇ ਪੰਜ ਮਲਿਯੰ। ਤੇ ਯਸੇ ਮੁਯ ਥੰ ਸੇ ਓਸੀ ਸਿਖਿਯੰ। ਓਸਮੇ ਪਧੇਸੀ ਸਸ ਯੰਓਯੰ ਯਤੇ ਸੇਂਠੀਟ ਓਸੀ ਸਲੰ ਸਸੇ ਲਓਲੀਤੇ ਯਤੇ ਸਤੇ ਸੁਸਿਯੰ। ਪਤਤੇਸੇ ਓਸੀ ਯੰਖਿਸ਼ ਤੇ ਤੇ ਪੰਪੁਸੀ ਸੰ ਯੰਸਸਸੀ ਯਤ ਤੁਸੰਡੇ ਪਸੰਸ ਸੀਤੇ ਯਤੇ ਪੁਸ ਓਸ ਸੇਸ ਸੇਂ ਸੇ ਤਿਸੀ ਤੁਸੰਡੇ ਪੁਤਸ ਖਪੰ। ਪਧੇਸੇ ਯਪਣੇ ਸੇਸਤੇ ਸੀ ਯੰਖਿਯ ਸੇ ਖਸੇਥੈਂ ਖਸੀ ਪੈਸ਼ੰਸ ਸਤੀ ਲਿਯੰਯੰ ਯਤੇ ਓਸੀ ਲੈਂਯੰਯੈਂ। ਤੇਸ ਓਸਸੇ ਤਬ ਤੂਠੀ ਯਤੇ ਪੈਤੇ ਸੈਤੇਂ ਲੈਂਯੰਯੈਂ। ਯਤੇ ਯਸ ਖੰਸੈਂ ਤੇ ਖੁਸ਼ੀ ਸਤੰਸੈਂ ਸਿ ਸੇ ਸੈਤੇ ਪਤ ਪੁਤਸ ਸੈਓਸੰਥੰ ਪੁਸ ਸੀ ਪੈਂਯੰ। ਸੈਂਯੰਸੰਸੰਥੰ ਪੁਸ ਸਿਲਿਯੰ। ਤੰ ਯੈਤ ਖੁਸ਼ੀ ਸਸਣ ਲਸੀ॥

ਯਤੇ ਓਸਸੇ ਪਤ ਪੁਤਸ ਖੋਤੇਂ ਕਿਸ ਥੰ। ਤੈਂ ਘਸੇ ਸਸ ਯੰਓਯੰ ਸੰਪੇ ਤੰ ਸਸਪੈਂਸੀ ਪਲੈਲ ਸੁਸੀ। ਤੰ ਓਸ ਪੈਂਯੰਸੀ ਸਸਿਯੰ ਤੇ ਪੁਖ਼ਿਯੰ ਸੈ ਟਤ ਸੰਤ। ਓਸਸੈਂ ਓਸੀ ਯੰਖਿਯੰ ਸੈ ਤੇਂ ਤਂ ਯੰਓਯੰ ਤੇ ਤੇਂ ਪਧੇਸੇ ਪਫ਼ੀ ਪੰਸ ਸੀਤੀ ਓਸ ਸਸੀ ਸੈ ਯੈਤ ਸੈਂਸੀ ਪੰਸੀ ਯੰਓ ਸਿਯੰ। ਓਸਸੈਂ ਨੈਤ ਸਲਿਯੰ। ਸੇਂ ਸੀਤਿਯੰ ਸੈ ਸੰਸਸ ਸੰਟ। ਤੰ ਓਸਸੀ ਪਧੇਸੇ ਪੰਤਂ ਯੰਓਯੰ ਤੇ ਓਸੀ ਸਸੰਓਯੰ। ਓਸਸੈਂ ਪਧੇ ਸੀ ਓਤਸ ਸਿਤੰ ਸਿਸ ਓਤਸੈਂ ਪਤੰਸ ਯੰਓ ਤੇਸੀ ਟਪਲ ਸਸਸਾਂਤੰ ਯਤੇ ਸਸੀਂ ਤੇਂ ਪੁਸਸੇ ਪੰਤਸ ਸੇਂ ਤੈਓਯ। ਤੰ ਤੁਧ ਸਤੈਂ ਓਸ ਪਸਸੀਸੰ ਪਸ ਸਿਸੀ ਸੇਂ ਸਿਤੰ ਸੈ ਯੰਪਣੇ ਧੰਨੈ ਸਸੈਂ ਖੁਸ਼ੀ ਸਸੰ। ਯਤੇ ਸਸ ਤੇਂ ਟਤ ਪੁਤਸ ਯੰਓਯੰ ਸਿਸਸੈਂ ਤੇਂ ਸੰਲ ਸਸਤੰਸੰ ਓਤੰਓ ਸਿਤੰ ਓਸਸੰ ਪੰਸਤੇ ਪਤੀ ਪੰਸ ਸੀਤੀ। ਓਸਸੈਂ ਓਸੀ ਯੰਖਿਯੰ ਤੈਂ ਪੁਤਸ ਤੂੰ ਸਸੰ ਸੈਂ ਸਿਸ ਤੈਂ ਤੇਂ ਸੈ ਸਿਸ ਸੈਂ ਤੈਂ ਸੈਓ ਤੇਂ ਤੈਂ। ਤਿਸੀ ਖੁਸ਼ੀ ਸਸੰਸੀ ਤੇਂ ਖੁਸ਼ੀ ਸਤਤੀ ਸਤੀਸੀ ਤੈਂ। ਸੀ ਸੈ ਤੇਂ ਟਤੈਂ ਤਂ ਸੈਂ ਸੈਓਸੰ ਥੰ ਸੈਓ ਸੀ ਪੈਯੰ ਤੈਂ। ਯਤੇ ਸੈਂਯੰਸੀ ਸਿਯੰਸੰ ਥੰ ਸੈਓ ਤੁਤ ਸਿਲੀ ਸਿਯੰ ਤੈਂ॥

[No. I.]

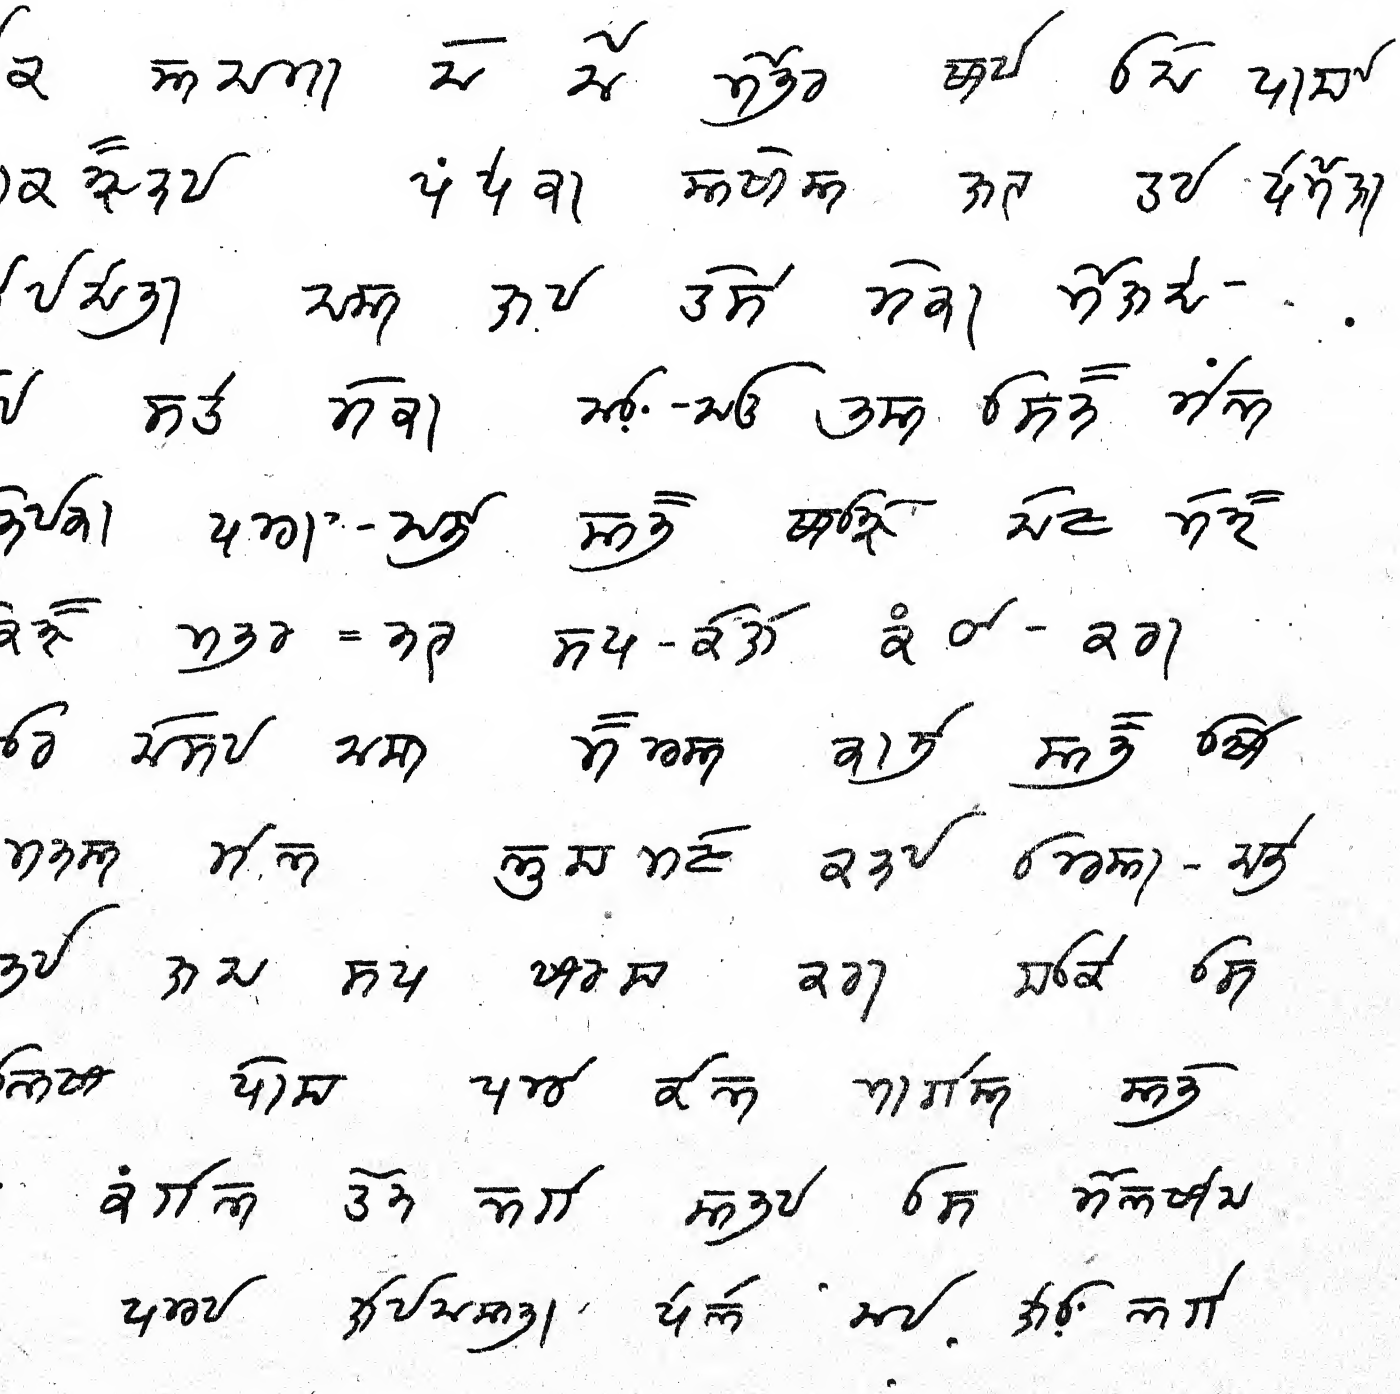
INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

ḌŌGRĀ DIALECT. (JAMMU ṢTATE.)

SPECIMEN I.

ḌŌGRA CHARACTER.



'Osnai (usnai) 'osī (usī) khētr'ẽ-vich sūr chārnai bhēj'ā (bhējiā).
Him-by him fields-in swine to-feed it-was-sent.

'Atai 'osd'ī (usdī) marjī thī j'e 'un'e (unē) sekṛē (sikṛē)-kan'e (kanne)
And him-of desire was that those husks-by

j'ẹre (jehṛe) s'ūr khād'en (khãden) apṇā ḍhahḍ (ḍhiḍh) bhar'e, which the-swine eating-are his-own belly he-may-fill,

j'e k'uī (kōī) 'osī (usī) nahī (nahĩ) did'ā (dindā)-thā. Tad hochh'a (hōshe)-
which any-one to-him not giving-was. Then sense-

-vich 'ā'e'ā (āiā) 'ākhā'ā (ākhiā), 'm'ēr'e bãbd'e (babbedai) kinai (kinnai)
-in he-came it-was-said, 'my father-of how-many

majōrā (majūrẽ)-kī matī r'uṭī (ruṭṭī) ha (hai), 'ate 'āũ bh'ūkhā
labourers-to much bread is, and I hungry

mar'ã. Mehã (mẽ) 'uṭhī'e (uṭhīē) 'apṇe bāb'e (babbai)-kachh jā'a (jāṅ),
die. I having-arisen my-own father-near will-go,

'atai 'usī 'ākhãṅ (ākhaṅ) j'e, "h'ē bāb'ū-jī (bāpū-jī), mehã (mẽ)
and to-him I-will-say that, "O father, by-me

'āsmāṇād'ā (āsmānīdā) 'atai t'usāṛā pr'ād kīt (kītā)-hō (hai);
heaven-of and of-you sin done-is;

'is j'ug (jōg) nahī (nahĩ) j'e bharī (bhirī) t'usāṛā pōtar (puttar) kh'u'a (khwā);
(of-)this worthy (I-am-) not that again your son I-may-be-called;

mākī (mikī) 'apṇe majōr (majūrẽ)-vichā 'ik janeh (jinēhā) banā'u (banāo)."' T'a (tā)
me your-own labourers-in one like make."' Then

'oṭhī'a'e (uṭhīē) 'apṇe bāb (babbe)-p'āṣ chal'e'ā (chaliā); t'a (te) having-arisen his-own father-near he-went; and

[No. I.]

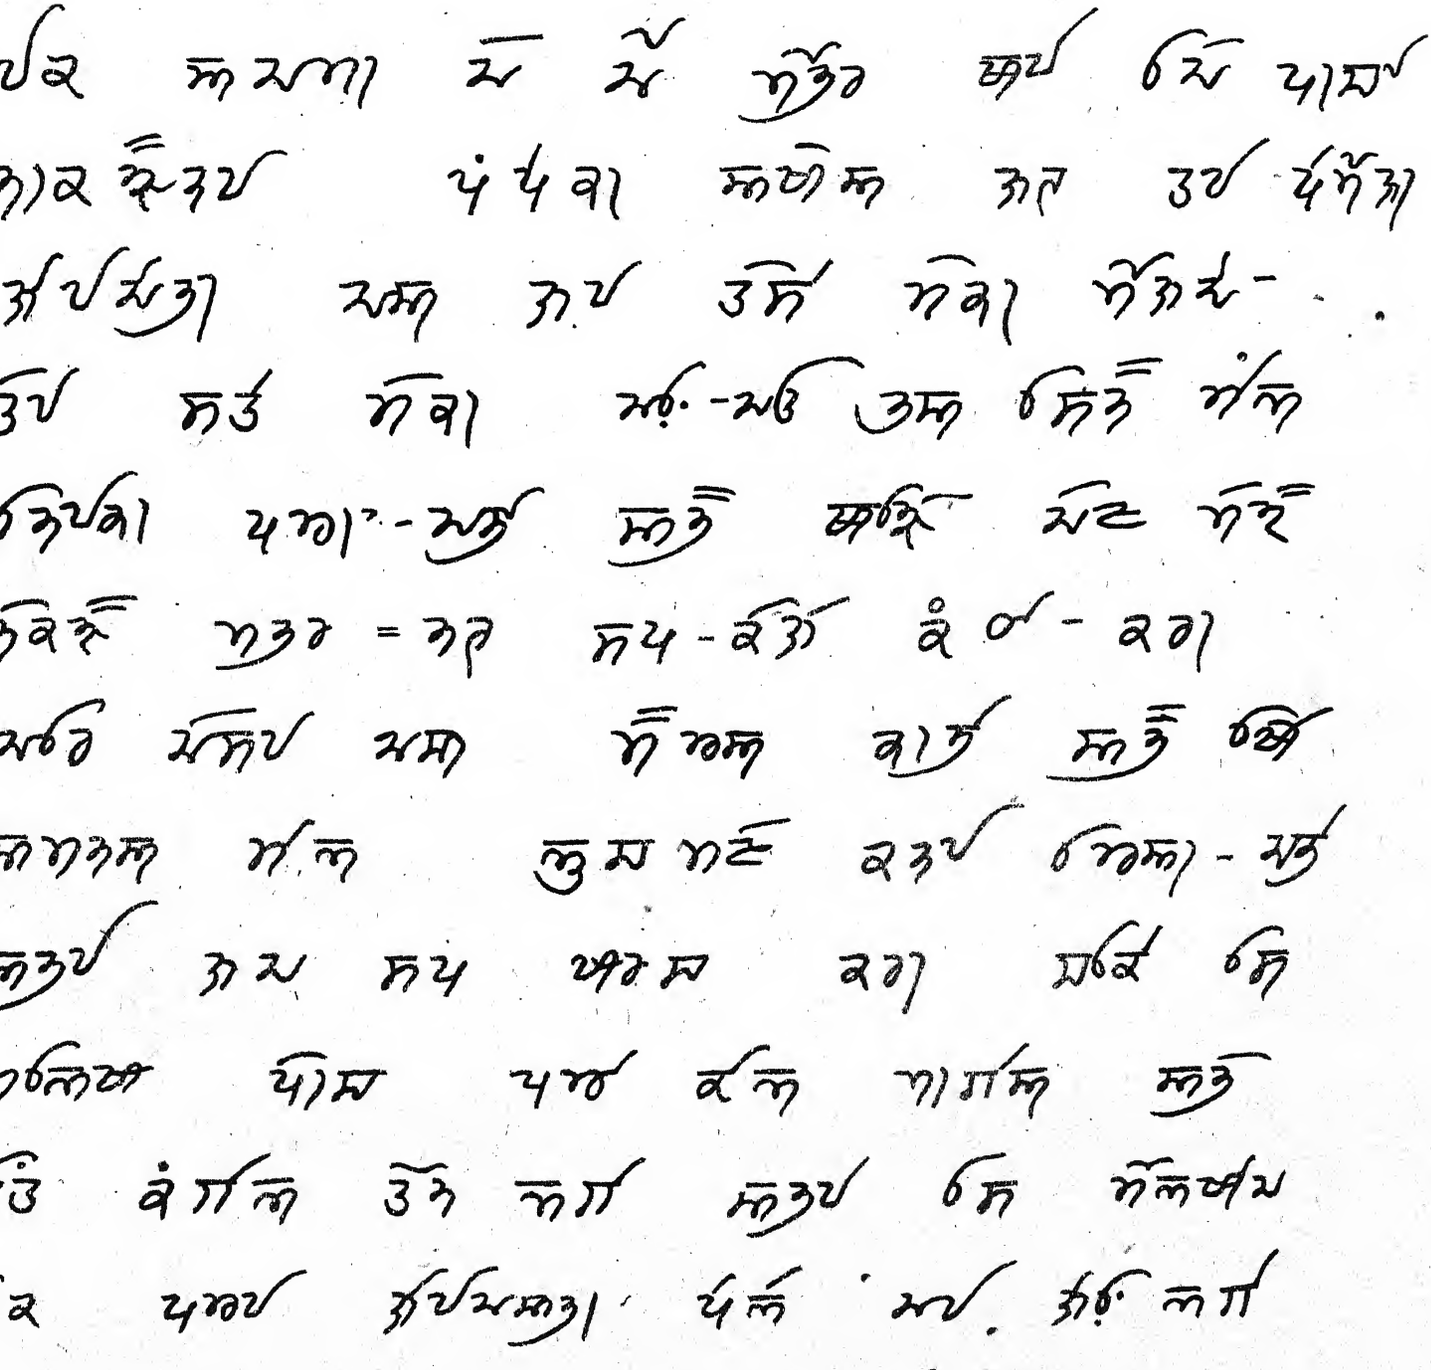
INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

ḌŌGRĀ DIALECT. (JAMMU STATE.)

SPECIMEN I.

ḌŌGRA CHARACTER.



[No. I.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

(STATE JAMMU.)

JŌGRĀ DIALECT.

SPECIMEN I.

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

'Ek (ik) 'ādmīde dō pōtar (puttar) th'e. 'Ude ('ũde) vīchā (vichchā)
One man-of two sons were. Them-of from-in nikṛain'e bābā-kī (babbe-kī) 'ākhe'ā (ākhiā) j'ē, 'h'ē bāpō (bāpū)-jī, the-younger-by the-father-to it-was-said that, 'O father, jā'edātīd'ā j'e hesā (hissā) mekī (mikī) pōjdā (pujdā)- the-property-of what share me-to falling-

-he'e (hai), sahe (sai) mekī (mikī) da'ī-da'ō (dēī-dēō).' T'ā (tã̄) 'usnai māl
-is, that me-to give-away.' Then him-by the-wealth

'un'e-kī vaḍī-datā (vaṇḍī-dittā). 'Atai th'uṛe (thōṛe) deṇ (diṇē) pechhai (pichchhȭ) them-to having-divided-was-given. And a-few days afterwards nikṛai (nikṛai) patarn'e (puttaraine), sab-kejā (kijh) kaṇṭhā (kiṭṭhā) karī, the-younger son-by, all-anything together having-made,

d'ūr dēs'e-d'ā paiḍ'ā (paĩḍā) kītā, 'atai 'uthã̄ (uthē)
a-far country-of journey was-made, and there

'apn'ā māl luch-paṇe-kan'e (kanne) 'uḍ'āī-datā (dittā).
his-own wealth debauchery-by was-squandered-away.

'At'e jad sab kharch karī-ch'ukā (chukkiā), 'us And when all expenditure having-made-was-completed, that m'ulkh (mulkhai)-vich baḍā kāl pī-gāā (paī-giā), 'ate country-in a-great famine fell, and

'oh kaṅgāl hōn lagā (laggiā); 'at'e 'us mōlkhād (mulkhaidā) he poor to-be began; and that country-of

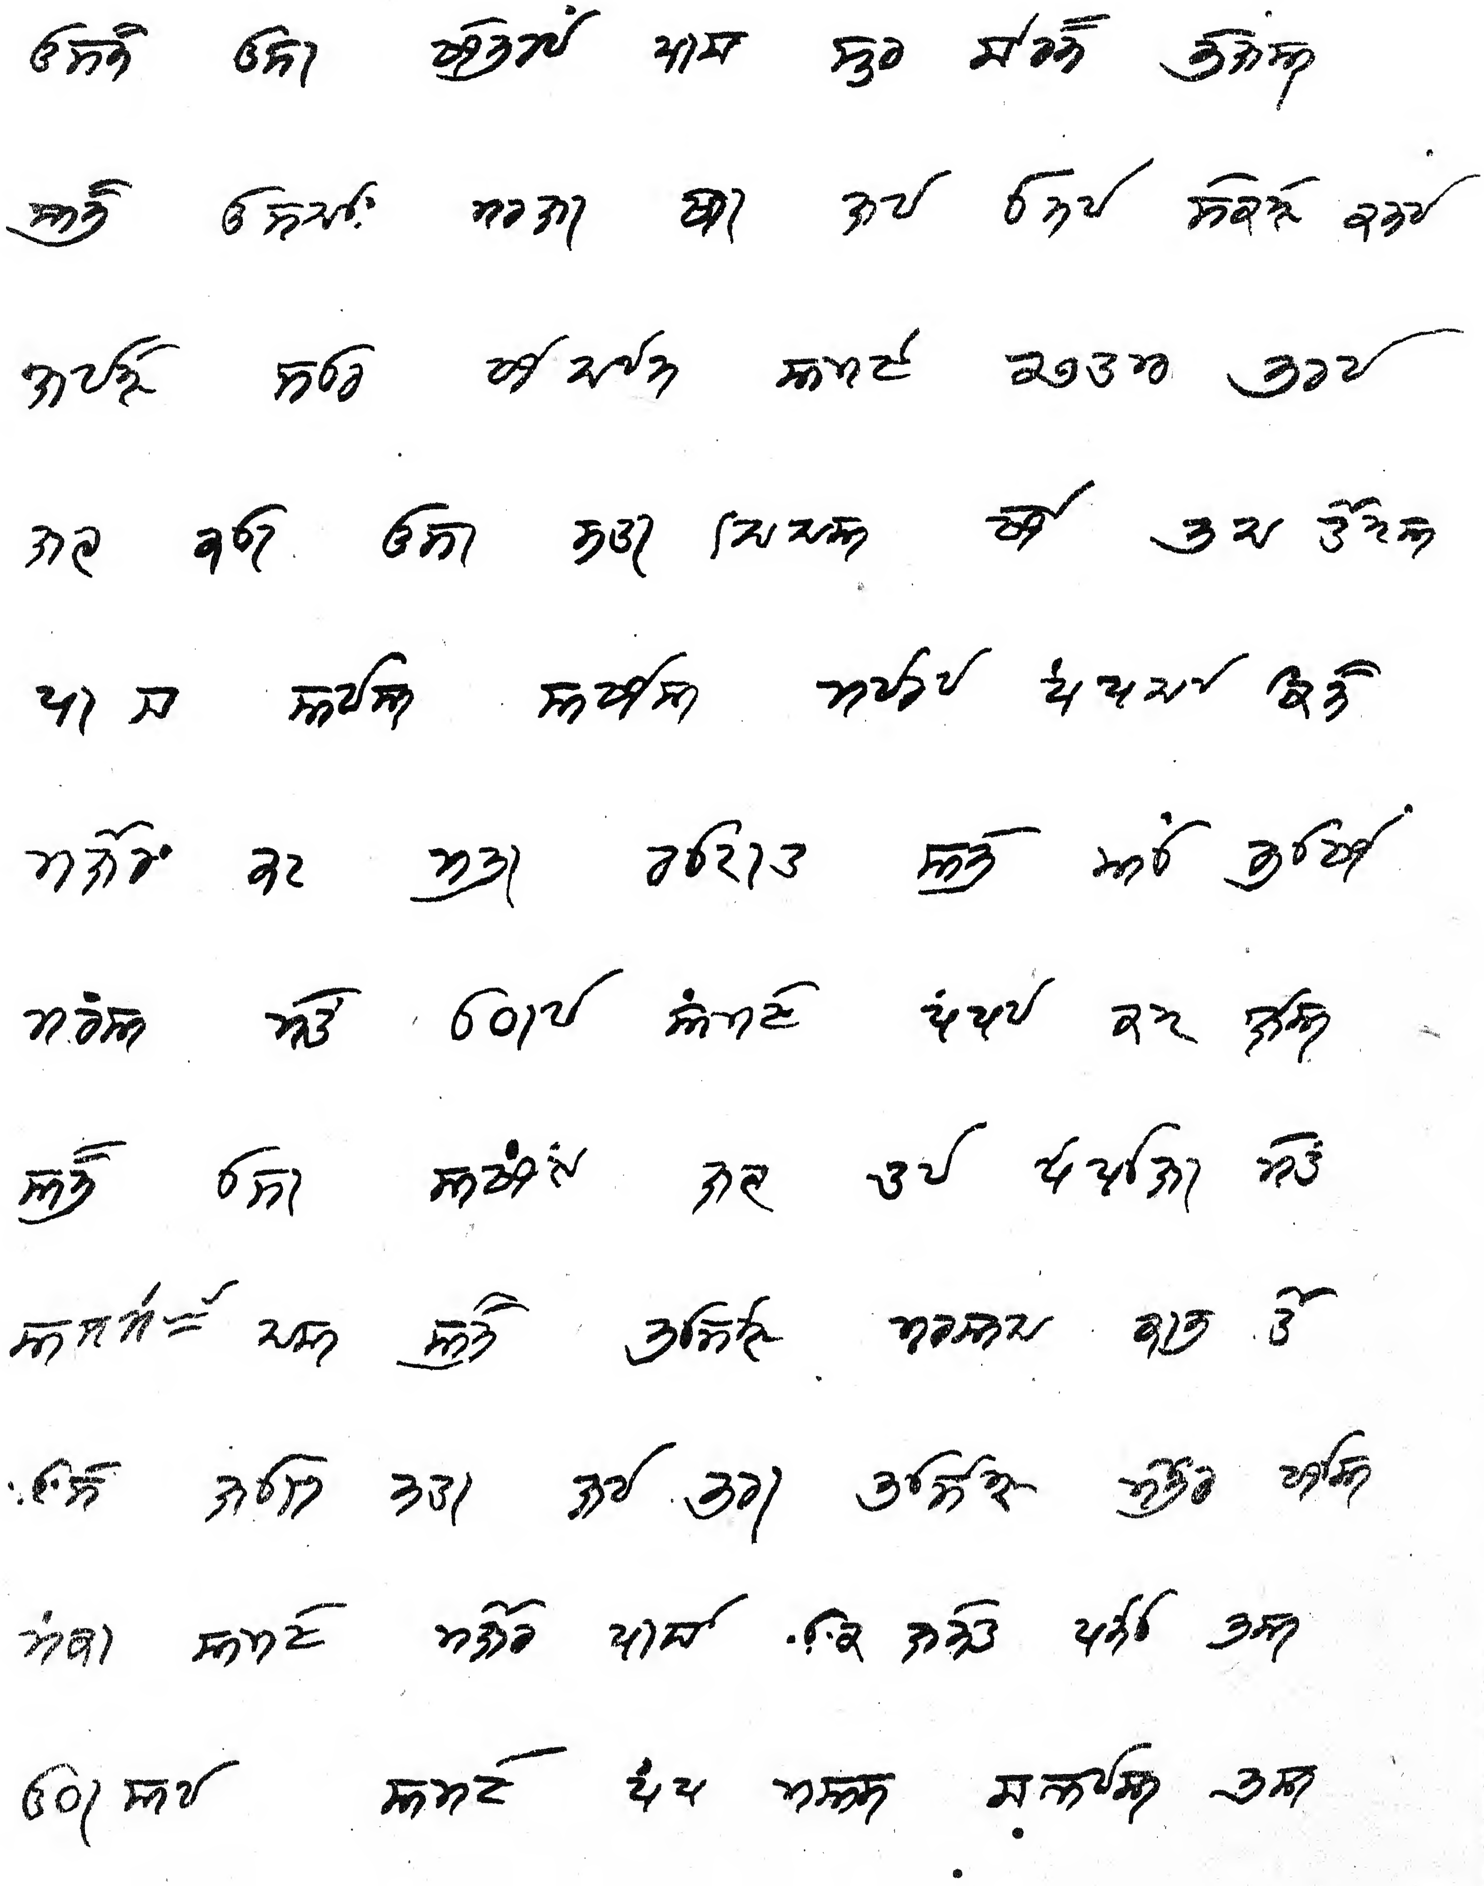
'ik baḍ'e jā'ed'ātī-wāled'e jāī lagā (laggiā).
a great property-person-to having-gone he-was-joined.



'Osnai (usnai) 'osī (usī) khētr'ẽ-vich sūr chārnai bhēj'ā (bhējiā).
Him-by him fields-in swine to-feed it-was-sent.

'Atai 'osd'ī (usdī) marjī thī j'e 'un'e (unē) sekṛē (sikṛē)-kan'e (kanne)
And him-of desire was that those husks-by

j'eṛe (jehṛe) s'ūr khād'en (khãden) apṇā ḍhahḍ (ḍhiḍh) bhar'e,
which the-swine eating-are his-own belly he-may-fill,

j'e k'uī (kōī) 'osī (usī) nahī (nahĩ) did'ā (dindā)-thā. Tad hochh'a (hōshe)-
which any-one to-him not giving-was. Then sense-

-vich 'ā'e'ā (āiā) 'ākhā'ā (ākhiā), 'm'ẽr'e bãbd'e (babbedai) kinai (kinnai)
-in he-came it-was-said, 'my father-of how-many

majōrā (majūrẽ)-kī matī r'uṭī (ruṭṭī) ha (hai), 'ate 'āũ bh'ūkhā
labourers-to much bread is, and I hungry

mar'ā. Mehā (mẽ) 'uṭhī'e (uṭhīē) 'apṇe bāb'e (babbai)-kachh jā'a (jāṅ),
die. I having-arisen my-own father-near will-go,

'atai 'usī 'ākhãṅ (ākhaṅ) j'e, "h'ē bāb'ū-jī (bāpū-jī), mehā (mẽ)
and to-him I-will-say that, "O father, by-me

'āsmāṇād'ā (āsmānīdā) 'atai t'usāṛā pr'ād kīt (kītā)-hō (hai);
heaven-of and of-you sin done-is;

'is j'ug (jōg) nahī (nahĩ) j'e bharī (bhirī) t'usāṛā pōtar (puttar) kh'u'a (khwā);
(of-)this worthy (I-am-) not that again your son I-may-be-called;

mākī (mikī) 'apṇe majōr (majūrẽ)-vichā 'ik janeh (jinēhā) banā'u (banāo)."' T'a (tā)
me your-own labourers-in one like make."' Then

'oṭhī'a'e (uṭhīē) 'apṇe bāb (babbe)-p'āṣ chal'e'ā (chaliā); t'a (te)
having-arisen his-own father-near he-went; and

ਓਨਕੈ ਓਨਾ ਅਤਿਸਅੰ ਮਾਸ ਨਤ ਸਭਕੈ ਤਿਨਿਨ ਸਾਤੈ ਓਨਸਾਂ ਨਾਤਾ ਥੀ ਤਅ ਓਨਅ ਸਕਿਨੇ ਵਅਅ
ਨਾਪਨੈ ਨਨ ਅਅਸਨ ਸਾਮਟ ਅਤਤਨ ਤਅਅ
ਨੇਲ ਕਨ ਓਨਾ ਨਤੀ ਸਿਸਸਨ ਅਅਂ ਤਅ ਤੈਨਿਨ
ਪਾ ਨ ਸਾਅਸਨ ਸਅਅਸਨ ਸਅਅਨ ਪੰਖਸਅ ਕਿਤੈ
ਸਨੈਂ ਕਨ ਸਤਾ ਕਅਰਾਤ ਸਾਤੈ ਸਅਂ ਤੁਅਅਂ
ਸਤੇਸਨ ਸਤੈ ਓਪਅ ਸੰਸਾਟ ਪੰਖਅ ਕਨ ਨੁਸਨ
ਸਾਤੈ ਓਨਾ ਸਅਅੰਸ ਨੇਲ ਤਅ ਪੰਖਨੀਨਾ ਸਤੈ
ਸਸਸਾਂ ਅਸ ਸਾਤੈ ਤਅਨਿਨੈ ਸਸਸਸ ਕਾਤ ਤੈ
ਓਨਿ ਨਅਨਾ ਨਤਾ ਨੇਅ ਤਅਾ ਤਅਨਿਨ ਸਤੈਂਤ ਅਅਸਨ
ਸੰਕਾ ਸਸਾਟ ਸਤੈਂਤ ਸਾਸ ਨਿਨੈ ਪਅਨਾ ਤਸਾ ਓਪਾ ਸਅ ਸਸਾਟ ਪੰਖ ਸਸਸਨ ਸਨਅਸਨ ਤਸ

'Ōsnai (usnai) 'osī (usī) khētr'ẽ-vich sūr chārnai bhēj'ā (bhējiā).
Him-by him fields-in swine to-feed it-was-sent.

'Atai 'osd'ī (usdī) marjī thī j'e 'un'e (unē) sekṛē (sikṛē)-kan'e (kanne)
And him-of desire was that those husks-by

j'eṛe (jehṛe) s'ūr khād'en (khãden) apṇā ḍhahḍ (ḍhiḍh) bhar'e,
which the-swine eating-are his-own belly he-may-fill,

j'e k'uī (kōī) 'osī (usī) nahī (nahĩ) did'ā (dindā)-thā. Tad hochh'a (hōshe)-
which any-one to-him not giving-was. Then sense-

-vich 'ā'e'ā (āiā) 'ākhā'ā (ākhiā), 'm'ēr'e bābd'e (babbedai) kinai (kinnai)
-in he-came it-was-said, 'my father-of how-many

majōrā (majūrẽ)-kī matī r'uṭī (ruṭṭī) ha (hai), 'ate 'āũ bh'ūkhā
labourers-to much bread is, and I hungry

mar'ā. Mehã (mẽ) 'uṭhī'e (uṭhīē) 'apṇe bāb'e (babbai)-kachh jā'a (jāṅ),
die. I having-arisen my-own father-near will-go,

'atai 'usī 'ākhāṅ (ākhaṅ) j'e, "h'ē bāb'ū-jī (bāpū-jī), mehã (mẽ)
and to-him I-will-say that, "O father, by-me

'āsmāṇād'ā (āsmānīdā) 'atai t'usāṛā pr'ād kīt (kītā)-hō (hai);
heaven-of and of-you sin done-is;

'is j'ug (jōg) nahī (nahĩ) j'e bharī (bhirī) t'usāṛā pōtar (puttar) kh'u'a (khwā);
(of-)this worthy (I-am-) not that again your son I-may-be-called;

mākī (mikī) 'apṇe majōr (majūrẽ)-vichā 'ik janeh (jinēhā) banā'u (banāo)."' T'a (tā)
me your-own labourers-in one like make."' Then

'oṭhī'a'e (uṭhīē) 'apṇe bāb (babbe)-p'āṣ chal'e'ā (chaliā); t'a (te)
having-arisen his-own father-near he-went; and

'Ōsnai (usnai) 'osī (usī) khētr'ẽ-vich sūr chārnai bhēj'ā (bhējiā).
Him-by him fields-in swine to-feed it-was-sent.

'Atai 'osd'ī (usdī) marjī thī j'e 'un'e (unē) sekṛē (sikṛē)-kan'e (kanne)
And him-of desire was that those husks-by

j'eṛe (jehṛe) s'ūr khād'en (khãden) apṇā ḍhahḍ (ḍhiḍh) bhar'e,
which the-swine eating-are his-own belly he-may-fill,

j'e k'uī (kōī) 'osī (usī) nahī (nahĩ) did'ā (dindā)-thā. Tad hochh'a (hōshe)-
which any-one to-him not giving-was. Then sense-

-vich 'ā'e'ā (āiā) 'ākhā'ā (ākhiā), 'm'ẽr'e bãbd'e (babbedai) kinai (kinnai)
-in he-came it-was-said, 'my father-of how-many majōrã (majūrẽ)-kī matī r'uṭī (ruṭṭī) ha (hai), 'ate 'āũ bh'ūkhā

labourers-to much bread is, and I hungry

mar'ã̆. Mehã (mẽ) 'uṭhī'e (uṭhīē) 'apṇe bãb'e (babbai)-kachh jā'a (jāṅ),
die. I having-arisen my-own father-near will-go,

'atai 'usī 'ākhãṅ (ākhaṅ) j'e, "h'ē bāb'ū-jī (bāpū-jī), mehã (mẽ)
and to-him I-will-say that, "O father, by-me

'āsmāṇād'ā (āsmānīdā) 'atai t'usāṛā pr'ād kīt (kītā)-hō (hai);
heaven-of and of-you sin done-is;

'is j'ug (jōg) nahī (nahĩ) j'e bharī (bhirī) t'usāṛā pōtar (puttar) kh'u'a (khwā);
(of-)this worthy (I-am-) not that again your son I-may-be-called;

mãkī (mikī) 'apṇe majōr (majūrẽ)-vichā 'ik janeh (jinēhā) banā'u (banāo)." ' T'a (tā)
me your-own labourers-in one like make." ' Then

'oṭhī'a'e (uṭhīē) 'apṇe bãb (babbe)-p'ās chal'e'ā (chaliā); t'a (te)
having-arisen his-own father-near he-went; and

'aj'e d'ūr thā ° j'e 'usī dekh'ā (dikhiā); 'usde yet far he-was that to-him it-was-seen; him-of babā (babbe)-k'ī tars 'ā'e'ā (āiā), 'atai dr'uṛ'ī (dauṛīe) 'usī gale-the-father-to compassion came, and having-run to-him the-neck-

-kan'e (kanne) l'aī-late (laī-lītā), 'atai mat'ā ch'umi'ā̃. Pōtar'e (puttarai)-
-by it-was-taken, and much it-was-kissed. The-son-

-n'e 'usī ākhāā (ākhiā) j'e, 'h'ē bāp'ū-jī, meh (mē)
-by to-him it-was-said that, 'O father, by-me

'āsmāṇā (āsmāṇī) 'ate tōsaṛā (tusāṛā) pr'ād kītā, 'atai hōn (hun) 'is Heaven and of-you sin was-done, and now (of-)this j'ug (jōg) nahī (nahī̃) j'e bharī (bhirī) tōsaṛā (tusāṛā) pōtar (puttar) kh'uā (khwā̃).'

worthy (I-am-) not that again your son I-may-be-called.'

Bāban'e (babbene) 'apṇe na'ukrai (naukrē)-k'ī ākheā (ākhiā) j'e, 'khar'e-
The-father-by his-own servants-to it-was-said that, 'good-

-th'ū̃ (thō̃) khar'ī pōchhak (pōshāk) kaḍī (kaḍḍī) la'ī'ā'u (liāō), 'atai 'usī l'u'ā'u (lōāō);
-than good garment having-taken-out bring, and to-him put-on;

h'ur (hōr) 'usde hath ṅāṭhī (ṅūṭhī), 'atai pēr'e (pairē) jōṛ'ā l'u'ā'u (lōāō), and him-of (on-)hand a-ring, and on-the-feet a-pair(-of-shoes) put-on,

'atai 'as kh'āche (khāchai) t'e khōchhī (khushī) manahchai (manāchai); k'ī (ki) j'e and we may-eat and rejoicing may-celebrate; because that mārā (mērā) 'eh pōtar (puttar) m'u'e-da-thā (mōidā-thā), hōn(hun) j'ī paiā (peā); g'u'achā (goāchā)- my this son dead-was, now alive fell; lost-

-d'ā thā, hōn (hun) meleā (miliā).' T'ā (tā̃) 'oh kh'uchhī (khushī) karṇe (karaṇ) lagai (lagge).
-was, now (is-) found.' Then they happiness to-do began.

ਓਨਕੈ ਓਹਾ ਕੀਤਮੑਾਂ ਮਾਸ ਨਿਤ ਸਾਕੈ ਤੇਨੇਸ

ਸਾਤੈ ਓਨਮਾਂ ਨਾਲਾ ਕੀ ਤਰ ਓਨਾ ਸਕਿਨੈ ਕਰਮ

ਮਾਹਨੈ ਨਨ ਕੀਮਾਲ ਸਾਮਟ ਕਰਤਾ ਤਰਮ

ਨਾਲ ਕਾਂ ਓਨਾ ਨਤੀ ਸਿਮਸ ਕੀ ਤਰ ਤੇਨੇਸ

ਮਾ ਸ ਸਮਸ ਸਕੀਸ ਸਾਨਾ ਮੈਮਸ ਕਿਤੈ

ਮਾਨੈਂ ਨਰ ਸਤੀ ਰਰਿਤ ਸਤੈ ਸਾਂ ਤੁਰਮੀਂ

ਮਾਲਸ ਸਤੈ ਰਾਮ ਸਮਾਟ ਮੈਮਸ ਨਰ ਨੁਸਸ

ਸਤੈ ਨਨਾ ਸਕੀਂਨ ਨਾਲ ਤਮ ਮੈਮਨੀ ਸਤੈ

ਸਮਸਾਂ ਮਸ ਸਤੈ ਤਨਿਨੈ ਮਾਲਸਮ ਕਾਲ ਤੈ

ਓਨੈ ਨਾਲਨ ਤੇਨਾ ਨਾਲ ਤਰਾ ਤਨਿਨੈ ਸੁਤੈ ਕਾਸ

ਮੈਂਗਾ ਸਮਾਟ ਸਤੈਂ ਮਾਸ ਓਨੈ ਨਤੈ ਮੈਨ ਤਸਾ

ਰਾਮ ਸਮਾਟ ਮੈਮ ਸਸਸ ਸਮਸਸ ਤਰ

'Osnai (usnai) 'osī (usī) khētr'ẽ-vich sūr chārnai bhēj'ā (bhējiā).
Him-by him fields-in swine to-feed it-was-sent.

'Atai 'osd'ī (usdī) marjī thī j'e 'un'e (unē) sekṛē (sikṛē)-kan'e (kanne)
And him-of desire was that those husks-by

j'eṛe (jehṛe) s'ūr khād'en (khãden) apṇā ḍhahḍ (ḍhiḍh) bhar'e,
which the-swine eating-are his-own belly he-may-fill,

j'e k'uī (kōī) 'osī (usī) nahī (nahĩ) did'ā (dindā)-thā. Tad hochh'a (hōshe)-
which any-one to-him not giving-was. Then sense-

-vich 'ā'e'ā (āiā) 'ākhā'ā (ākhiā), 'm'ẽr'e bābd'e (babbedai) kinai (kinnai)
-in he-came it-was-said, 'my father-of how-many majōrã̃ (majūrẽ)-kī matī r'uṭī (ruṭṭī) ha (hai), 'ate 'ãũ bh'ūkhā

labourers-to much bread is, and I hungry

mar'ã̃. Mehã̃ (mẽ) 'uṭhī'e (uṭhīē) 'apṇe bāb'e (babbai)-kachh jā'a (jāṅ),
die. I having-arisen my-own father-near will-go,

'atai 'usī 'ākhã̃ṅ (ākhaṅ) j'e, "h'ē bāb'ū-jī (bāpū-jī), mehã̃ (mẽ)
and to-him I-will-say that, "O father, by-me

'āsmāṇād'ā (āsmānīdā) 'atai t'usāṛā pr'ād kīt (kītā)-hō (hai);
heaven-of and of-you sin done-is;

'is j'ug (jōg) nahī (nahĩ) j'e bharī (bhirī) t'usāṛā pōtar (puttar) kh'u'a (khwā);
(of-)this worthy (I-am-) not that again your son I-may-be-called;

mākī (mikī) 'apṇe majōr (majūrē)-vichā 'ik janeh (jinēhā) banā'u (banāo)."' T'a (tā)
me your-own labourers-in one like make."' Then

'oṭhī'a'e (uṭhīē) 'apṇe bāb (babbe)-p'ā̃s chal'e'ā (chaliā); t'a (te)
having-arisen his-own father-near he-went; and

ਓਨਾਂ ਓਹਾ ਲੋਤਮਾਂ ਮਾਸ ਨਾਲ ਸਭਾਂ ਤੋਨਾਂ
ਲਾਤੀ ਓਨਾਂਮਾਂ ਨਾਨਾ ਲੋਗ ਨਾਲ ਰੰਨ ਲਿਵੇਂ ਕਰਾਂ
ਨਾਲਾਂ ਨਾਲ ਲੋਮਾਲਾ ਲਾਨਾਂ ਕਰਾਲ ਤਾਲਾ
ਨਾਲ ਕਾਂ ਓਨਾ ਨਾਲ ਲਿਮਾਲ ਲੋਂ ਤਾਲ ਤੋਂਨਾਲ ਮਾਲ ਲਾਲਾ ਲਾਲਾ ਨਾਲਾਲ ਲੰਮਾਲ ਲੋਤੀ
ਨਾਨੋਂ ਕਾਲ ਨਾਲ ਕਰਾਤ ਲਾਤੀ ਲਾਲਾ ਤਾਲਾ
ਨਾਲਾ ਲਾਤੀ ਰਾਲਾਂ ਲਾਨਾਂ ਲੰਮਾਲ ਕਾਲ ਨਾਲ ਲਾਤੀ ਰਾਨਾ ਲਾਲਾਂ ਨਾਲ ਤਾਲ ਲੰਮਾਲ ਨਾਤੀ
ਲਾਨਾਲਾਂ ਮਾਲ ਲਾਤੀ ਤਾਲਾਲ ਨਾਲਾਲ ਕਾਲ ਤੋਂ
ਲਾਂਨਾ ਨਾਲਾ ਨਾਲ ਤਾਲ ਤਾਲਾ ਤਾਲਾਲ ਲਾਤੀ ਕਾਲਾ
ਲਾਂਨਾ ਲਾਨਾਂ ਨਾਲੋਂ ਮਾਲ ਲਾਂਨਾ ਲਾਲੋ ਤਾਲਾ ਨਾਲਾ ਲਾਲ ਲਾਨਾਂ ਲੰਮ ਨਾਲਾ ਲਾਲਾਲ ਤਾਲਾ

'Osnai (usnai) 'osī (usī) khētr'ẽ-vich sūr chārnai bhēj'ā (bhējiā).
Him-by him fields-in swine to-feed it-was-sent.

'Atai 'osd'ī (usdī) marjī thī j'e 'un'e (unẽ) sekṛē (sikṛē)-kan'e (kanne)
And him-of desire was that those husks-by

j'eṛe (jehṛe) s'ūr khād'en (khãden) apṇā ḍhahḍ (ḍhiḍh) bhar'e,
which the-swine eating-are his-own belly he-may-fill,

j'e k'uī (kōī) 'osī (usī) nahī (nahĩ) did'ā (dindā)-thā. Tad hochh'a (hōshe)-
which any-one to-him not giving-was. Then sense-

-vich 'ā'e'ā (āiā) 'ākhā'ā (ākhiā), 'm'ēr'e bãbd'e (babbedai) kinai (kinnai)
-in he-came it-was-said, 'my father-of how-many

majōrā (majūrẽ)-kī matī r'uṭī (ruṭṭī) ha (hai), 'ate 'āũ bh'ūkhā
labourers-to much bread is, and I hungry

mar'ã. Mehã (mẽ) 'uṭhī'e (uṭhīē) 'apṇe bãb'e (babbai)-kachh jā'a (jāṅ),
die. I having-arisen my-own father-near will-go,

'atai 'usī 'ākhãṅ (ākhaṅ) j'e, "h'ē bāb'ū-jī (bāpū-jī), mehã (mẽ)
and to-him I-will-say that, "O father, by-me

'āsmāṇād'ā (āsmānīdā) 'atai t'usāṛā pr'ād kīt (kītā)-hō (hai);
heaven-of and of-you sin done-is;

'is j'ug (jōg) nahī (nahĩ) j'e bharī (bhirī) t'usāṛā pōtar (puttar) kh'u'a (khwã);
(of-)this worthy (I-am-) not that again your son I-may-be-called;

mãkī (mikī) 'apṇe majōr (majūrẽ)-vichā 'ik janeh (jinēhā) banā'u (banāo).'' T'a (tã)
me your-own labourers-in one like make.'' Then

'oṭhī'a'e (uṭhīē) 'apṇe bãb (babbe)-p'ãs chal'e'ā (chaliā); t'a (te)
having-arisen his-own father-near he-went; and

ਸਭਨੀਂ ਸਥਿ ਕਹੀ ਸੋਚ ਕਿਹਾ ਵਿਚਾਰਾਂ ਕਿਸੇ ਪਰੰ ਥਹੁ ਤਮਨ ਸਾਪਨ ਸਤੇ ਸਾਰਨੂੰ ਕਿਹਾ ਨਾਲੰ
ਧਨੇਰ ਸਲਾਹਤੇ ਸਤੇ ਹਤ ਸ ਸਮਾਸੰ ਸਤੇਸਾ- ਨਾ ਕਿਹਾ ਸਮਾਪਨ ਨਾ ਤਾ ਧਮਾਂ ਨੂੰ ਸਤ
ਸਮਸਾਣ ਸਤੇ ਤੇਸਿਨੇ ਮਸਤ ਥਾਤ ਸਤੇ ਤੇਨੂੰ ਪ੍ਰ
ਕਿਤ ਤਹਾ ਨਾ ਤਾਂ ਤੇਸਿਨੂੰ ਸਤੇਸ ਥਾਂਸਿ.
ਏਥੰ ਨਾ ਸਸਾਣ ਤਥਾਂ ਥਹੁੰ ਸਪਨਿ ਨਾ ਥਾਸ ਸਥੰ ਥਾਰਾਂ ਸਤੇਸ ਦਸਾ ਸਲੇਸਾਰ ਸਤੇ ਕਿਹਾ ਸਥਾਂ
ਤਥਾ ਕਿਸੇ ਤਸ ਸੰਹਾ ਸਤੇ ਸਸਥ ਸਤੇਸਾ ਸਸਾਰ
ਸਤੇ ਸਸ ਥਸਸ ਤਥ ਥੰਹੇ ਸਸ ਥਾਂ ਨਾ
ਸਾਂ ਥਤ ਤੇਸਾ ਸਥ ਸ ਥਾਂ ਤੇਤੇ ਸਾਂ ਸਿਥ ਸਾਸਥਾ- ਸਥ ਥਾਂ ਤੇਤੇ ਸਥਿਥ ਤਸ. ਤਤ ਥਾਂਹੇ ਦਾਣ ਸਤੇ

'aj'e d'ūr thā j'e 'usī dekh'ā (dikhiā); 'usde
yet far he-was that to-him it-was-seen; him-of babā (babbe)-k'ī tars 'ā'e'ā (āiā), 'atai dr'uṛ'ī (dauṛīe) 'usī gale-

the-father-to compassion came, and having-run to-him the-neck-

-kan'e (kanne) l'aī-late (laī-lītā), 'atai mat'ā ch'umi'ã̄. Pōtar'e (puttarai)-
-by it-was-taken, and much it-was-kissed. The-son-

-n'e 'usī ākhāā (ākhiā) j'e, 'h'ĕ bāp'ū-jī, meh (mẽ)
-by to-him it-was-said that, 'O father, by-me

'āsmāṇā (āsmāṇī) 'ate tōsaṛā (tusāṛā) pr'ād kītā, 'atai hōn (hun) 'is Heaven and of-you sin was-done, and now (of-)this j'ug (jŏg) nahī (nahĩ̄) j'e bharī (bhirī) tōsaṛā (tusāṛā) pōtar (puttar) kh'uā (khwã̄).'

worthy (I-am-) not that again your son I-may-be-called.'

Bãban'e (babbene) 'apṇe na'ukrai (naukrẽ)-k'ī ākheā (ākhiā) j'e, 'khar'e-
The-father-by his-own servants-to it-was-said that, 'good-

-th'ũ̄ (thȭ) khar'ī pōchhak (pōshāk) kaḍī (kaḍḍī) la'ī'ā'u (liāō), 'atai 'usī l'u'ā'u (lōāō);
-than good garment having-taken-out bring, and to-him put-on;

h'ur (hōr) 'usde hath ṅāṭhī (ṅūṭhī), 'atai pēr'e (pairẽ) jōṛ'ā l'u'ā'u (lōāō), and him-of (on-)hand a-ring, and on-the-feet a-pair(-of-shoes) put-on,

'atai 'as kh'āche (khāchai) t'e khōchhī (khushī) manahchai (manāchai); k'ī (ki) j'e and we may-eat and rejoicing may-celebrate; because that mārā (mērā) 'eh pōtar (puttar) m'u'e-da-thā (mōīdā-thā), hōn(hun) j'ī paiā (peā); g'u'achā (goāchā)-

my this son dead-was, now alive fell; lost-

-d'ā thā, hōn (hun) meleā (miliā).' T'ā (tã̄) 'oh kh'uchhī (khushī) karṇe (karaṇ) lagai (lagge).
-was, now (is-) found.' Then they happiness to-do began.

ਸਤੁ ਓਸਮ ਮਾਮ ਸੁਤਾ ਐਤਾ ਮਸ ਕਾ ਤਾਕ ਸਾਂ ਕਦ ਸਾਕਸ ਤਾਤਾ ਤੁ ਤਸਤੁਮੰ ਮਸਤੇਸ ਤਤੁ ਤਸ
ਲਕ ਤਾਂਦਿਾ ਕਾਂ ਤਸਮਾਸ ਤੁ ਤਾਦੈਸ ਤਾਮ ਮਤਿਮ ਕਤਮ ਓਤੁ ਓਸਾ ਸਾਕਾਸ ਤਾਮ ਤੇਮਸ ਤਮਤ ਸਾਸ
ਤੁ ਤੇਤ ਪਮ-ਤਮ ਮਦਾ ਸਤਤਾ ਕੁਤਾਂ ਓਂਸ ਕਾ ਤਮ ਓਤ ਤਤਾ ਮਤਾ ਸਾਂ ਤਾਸਸ ਓਸ.ਤੁ ਕਤਾਂ
ਕਾਸਸ ਤਤਾ ਸਤਿਸ ਤਾਮ ਸਾਂਮਾ ਤਾਮ ਤਸ ਮਸ ਸੁ ਪਮ ਤਮ ਮਤੇ ਸਾਂ ਓਸਾ ਤਾਤਸਾਂ ਓਸਤੁ ਪਂਪ
ਕਾ ਤੇਤਾ ਸੇਤਸਸ ਸੁਸ ਮਤਿਤੁ ਮਤ ਸਾ ਸਾਂਮ ਤੁਾ ਤਲ ਕਾਂਪਤੇ ਸਤੁ ਕਸੈ ਤੇਮਾਮ ਓਕਸਤੇ ਮਤਾ ਤੇਸਿਸਸ ਤਸ ਤੇਮਾ ਕਸੈ ਮਿਕ ਮਤਾ ਮਸਸ ਮਾਕਾ

'Atai 'usd'ā baḍā potar (puttar) khaitar (khētrai)-vach (vich) thā. J'ā (jā̃) ghara (ghare)
And him-of the-elder son the-field-in was. When the-house-

-kachh 'ā'e'ā (āiā), gān'e tai nachnaid'ī balēl sōnī (sunī). T'a (tā̃)
-near he-came, singing and dancing-of noise was-heard. Then

'ek (ik) na'ukrā (naukre)-k'ī sad'e'ā (sadiā), tai pōchh'ā (puchhiā) j'e, ''eh'e (eh) a servant-to it-was-called, and it-was-asked that, 'this kah'e (keh) ?' 'Usnai 'usī 'ākhe'ā (ākhiā) j'e, 'tēr'ā bharah (bharā) 'ā'e'ā (āiā), what ?' Him-by to-him it-was-said that, 'thy brother came, tai tēre bābn'e (babbene) baṛī dhāham (dhām) kīt'ī, 'is karī and thy father-by a-great feast (is-)made, this for j'e 'oh rājī-bājī 'ā'ī-g'e'ā (giā).' 'Osnai (usnai) rah'u (rōh) that he safe-and-sound arrived.' Him-by anger karai'ā (kariā); nahī (nahī̃) chaih'ā (chāhiā) j'e 'andar jā'e. T'ā (tā̃) 'usdai was-made; not he-wished that within he-may-go. Then him-of bābn'e (babbe-ne) bāharai 'ā'ī 'osī (usī) man'ā'e (manāiā). 'Osnai (usnai) bābe (babbe)- the-father-by outside having-come to-him it-was-remonstrated. Him-to the-father-

-kī 'otar (uttar) det'ā (dittā); 'dekh (dikh), 'etnai (itnai) bare (barē̃)dā 'āū̃ tērī
-to answer was-given; 'see, so-many years-of I thy ṭahl karṇā̃-he (karnā-hā̃), 'atai kadai (kadaī) tēr'e hōkme (hukme) bāhar nahī (nahī̃) hō'e service doing-am, and ever thy order outside not (I-) ṭ'ā (tā̃) tōd (tudh) kadai (kadaī) 'ek (ik) bakrīd'ā bach'ā (bachchā) mākī (mikī) nevertheless by-thee ever one goat-of young-one me-to nahī (nahĩ) ' dait'ā (dittā), j'e 'apṇai j'ārai (yārai) kanai (kannai) kh'uchhī (khūshī) not was-given, that my-own friends with happiness I-m

'atai jad'e (jad) tēr'e (tērā) 'eh pōtar (puttar) 'ā'e'ā (āiā), jesnai'e (jisnai) and when thy this son came, whom-by tēr'ā māl kañjrā (kañjrē)d'e 'uḍ'ā (uḍāī)-t'ud (dittā) (sic), 'usd (usde) wasat (wāsṭē) thy wealth harlots-to was-squandered, him-of for baḍī dhaham (dhām) kītī.' 'Usnai 'osī (usī) 'ākhā (ākhiā), 'hai pōtar (puttar), a-great feast was-made.' Him-by to-him it-was-said, ' O son, t'ū (tũ) sadā m'ērai kachh ha (haĩ), tai j'e-kej (kijh) mēr (mērā) ha (hai), thou ever of-me near art, and what-anything mine is, sah (seh) tēr (tērā) hai. Bharī (bhirī) kh'uchhī (khushī) manānī tai kh'uchhī (khush that thine is. Again happiness to-be-celebrated and happiness chahī-dī-hai; k'ī j'e tēr'ā 'ehai bharah (bharā) m'u'e (mōī)- proper-is; because that thy this brother dead- d (dā)-thā, sah (seh) j'īī (jī) pa'e'ā (peā)-hai; 'atai g'u'āchī (gōāchī)- was, he alive fallen-is; and lost-

-ga'e'ā (giā)-d'ā-thā, sah (seh) hōṇ (huṇ) malī (milī)-g'ā (giā)-hai.'
-gone-was, he again found-gone-is.'

[No. 2.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

ḌŌGRĀ DIALECT. (STATE JAMMU.)

SPECIMEN II.

CHAMBA ṬĀKRĪ CHARACTER.

।੧। ਔਂ ਸ੍ਰੀਯ ਘਘਰਯੌਮ੍। ਸ਼ਿਤ ਸ਼ੋਂ ਸਮੀਟਸ਼ੀ ਯਓਮ੍। ਸ਼ਸ਼ ਖਿਧ ਸ਼ਿਲਿਟ ਸਮੀਟਸ਼ੀ ਅੱਓਸ਼॥

।੩। ਔਂ ਘੰਸ਼ ਠਸ ਮੌਂ ਸਮੀਟਮ੍। ਯੰਤ ਭੀ ਲੁਟ ਲੈਂਮੁ। ਤੱਂ ਸਿੰਮੀ ਤੁੰ ਨੈਂਧ ਖਿਤੱਂ॥

।੨। ਤੱਂ ਓਸ਼ਸ਼ ਯਾਂਖ ਲੱਂਟੀਸ਼ੀ ਸਮੀਟਮ ਤੋਓਯ੍। ਸ਼ਸ਼ ਖਿਧ ਸ਼ਿਲਿਟ ਸਮੀਟਸ਼ੀ ਅੱਓਸ਼॥

।੪। ਔਂ ਸ਼ਸ਼ਸ਼ ਸਤਯਤ ਸ਼ਮੁਟਮੁ ਯੰਤ ਖਿਧ ਸ਼ਯੰਮੁ। ਤੱਂ ਸਿੰਮੀ ਤੁੰ ਨੈਂਧ ਖਿਤੱਂ॥

[No. 2.]

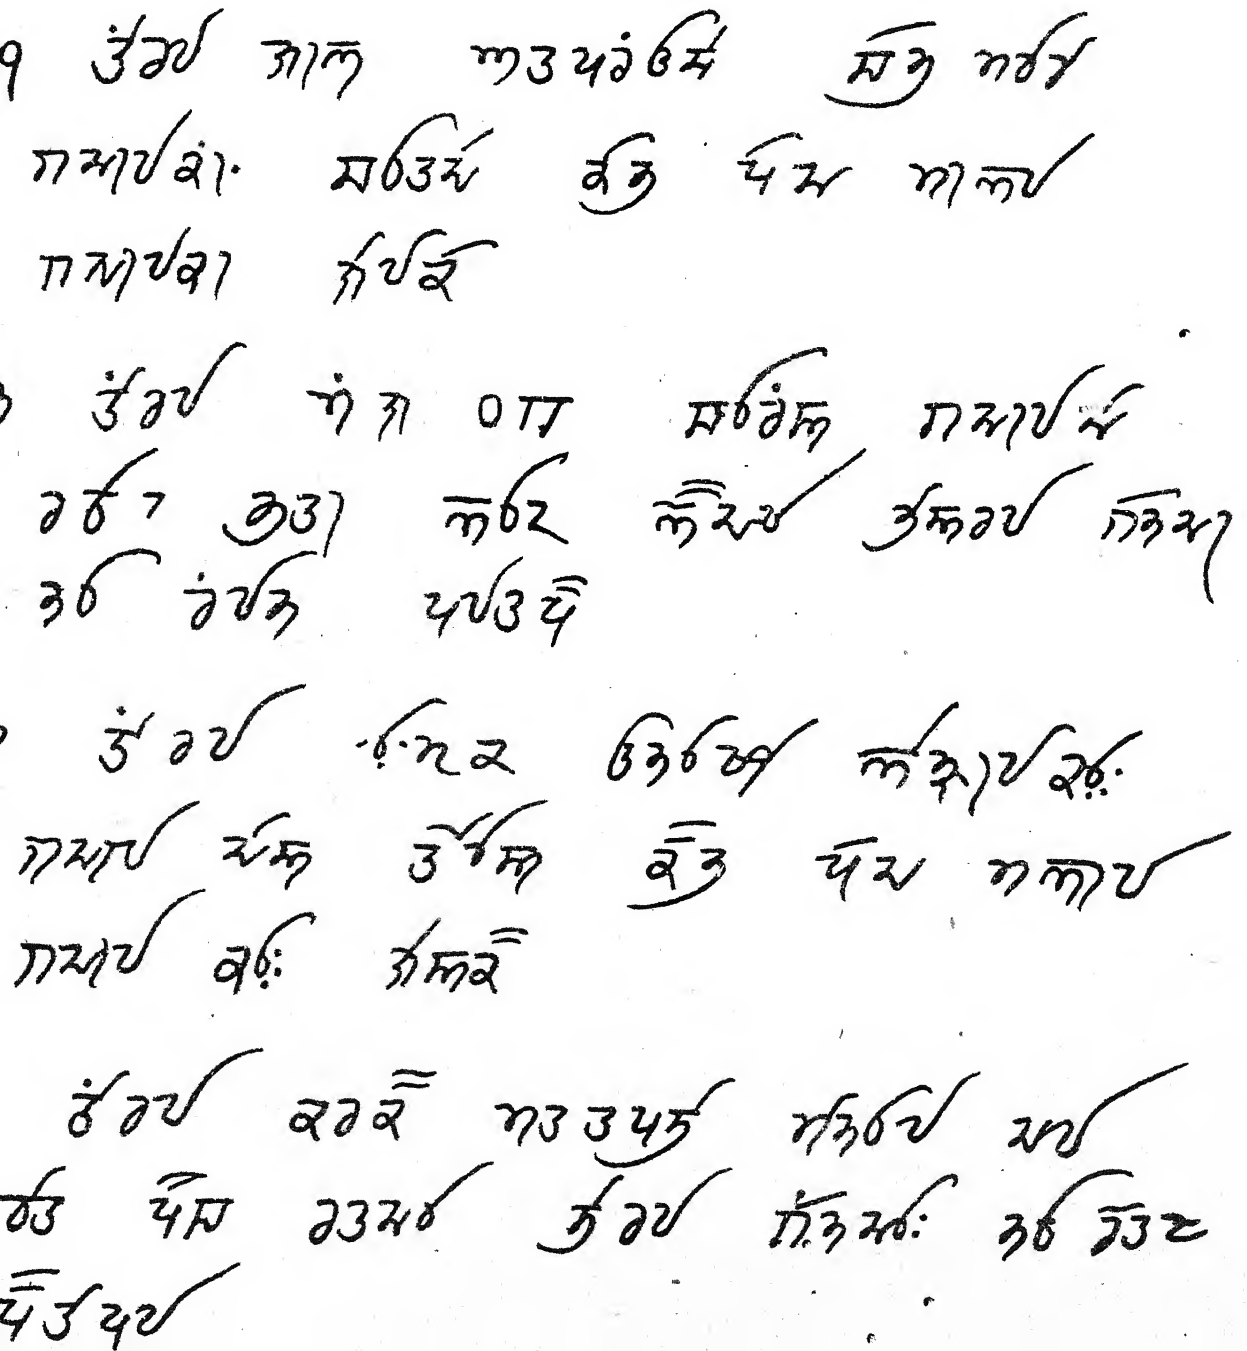
INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

ḌŌGRĀ DIALECT. (JAMMU STATE.)

SPECIMEN II.

ḌŌGRĀ CHARACTER.



[No. 2.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

ḌŌGRĀ DIALECT. (JAMMU STATE.)

SPECIMEN II.

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

1. Hã̃-r'e, jīā ghahbra'õdā (ghabrāõdā), chet (chit) m'ērā Ah, soul (is-)uneasy, heart my

Gadī'e-kī (Gaddīe-kī) cha'uhdā (chāũdā); ket (kit) bed (bidh) mila'e (milie)
the-Gaddī-for (is-) wishing; (in-)what manner may-one-meet

Gadī'e-kī (Gaddīe-kī) jā'e-ke (jāī-ke) ?
the-Gaddī-to gone-having ?

2. Hã̃-r'e, pañj ṭhag ch'ur'ã̃ (chōrã̃) Gadī'edā (Gaddīedā); Ah, five robber thieves the-Gaddī-of;

rahā (rāh) bhahī (bhī) l'uṭ-laid'e (laĩde); tā'ar'e (tārē) gendī (gindī)- (on-)the-road even waylay; stars counting- n'u (nũ̃) rã̃'en (raiṇ) b'ehawai (bihāwai).

to the-night passes.

3. Hã̃-r'e, ichhk (ishk) on'ukhā (anōkhā) lāṛī'e-k'ī Ah, love wondrous the-wife-to

Gadī'edā (Gaddīedā) hō'eā (hōiā); kait (kit) bed (bidh) malī'e (milie)
the-Gaddī-of became; (in-)what manner may-one-meet

Gadī'e-k'ī (Gaddīe-kī) jā'a-kai (jāī-ke).
the-Gaddī-to gone-having.

4. Hã̃-r'e, kar-kai(-ke) mhahabatā (mahabbat) mān'u'e (mānue) de Ah, made-having love man-of rāh vaich (vich) rahd'e (rahnde); tāre gend'ī(gindī)n'ō (nũ̃) rēhaṇ (raiṇ)

the-road in they-remain; stars counting-to the-night baihāw'e (bihāwe).

passes.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

1. Ah, my soul is uneasy; my heart longs for the Gaddī.[1] How shall I go and meet him?

2. Ah, five robbers and thieves[2] waylay the Gaddī on his path. I pass the night counting the stars.

3. Ah, a passionate love for the Gaddī has taken possession of me, his wife. How shall I go and meet him?

4. Ah, once a woman has loved, she ever remains in longing for (her) man. I pass the night counting the stars.

---

[1] 'Gaddī' is the name of a tribe of hill shepherds. The speaker is a Gaddī's wife.
[2] These are the five passions,—lust, anger, avarice, love and pride.

KAṆḌIĀLĪ.

The river Ravi skirts the south-east corner of the Jammu State. On the other side lies a hilly tract forming the north-east corner of the Punjab district of Gurdaspur. The main language of this district is standard Pañjābī, but in this tract, and its neighbourhood, the following hill languages have been reported :—

	Reported to be spoken by—
Gujarī	60,000
Ḍōgrā	60,000
Kaṇḍiālī	10,000
TOTAL	130,000

Of these, Gujarī will be dealt with under the Pahāṛī languages. Ḍōgrā has just been described. Kaṇḍiālī is the dialect of the country round Shāhpur-Kaṇḍī, close to the Ravi. It is not a distinct dialect, but is merely ordinary Ḍōgrā mixed with standard Pañjābī. It is unnecessary to give any lengthy specimen of it. A few sentences from a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son will suffice to show its character. It is uncertain whether e should be written long, as in Pañjābī, or left unmarked as in Ḍōgrā. I have followed the latter system.

[No. 3.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

KAṆḌIĀLĪ DIALECT. (GURDASPUR DISTRICT.)

Kuse manukkhede daũ puttar the. Unhã̃-bichchõ̃
A-certain man-of two sons were. Them-from-among laukaṛene babbe-kī ākhiā, 'bāpū-jī, me-kī mērā gharedā
the-younger-by the-father-to it-was-said, 'O-father, me-to my house-of hissa dai-dēō.' Unī̃ unhã̃-kī rasōṭī baṇḍī dittī. Thōriã̃ share give.' By-him them-to property having-divided was-given. A-few dinã̃ pichhchhõ̃ laukaṛe puttarene sārī rasōṭī kiṭṭhī kittī, days after the-younger son-by all the-property together was-made, kuse dūr mulke-kī chalī-geā. Utthẽ ūnī̃ luch-pane-bich a-certain distant country-to he-went-away. There by-him debauchery-in sab-kichh (pronounced kish) gawāī-aṛiā. Jadũ ūde kachh kichh(kish) every-thing was-squandered-away. When him-of with anything bī nahī̃ rehā, tã̃ utthaī matā kāl paī-giā. Us-kī bhukkh also not remained, then there a-great famine fell. Him-to hunger paī-gaī us pāsede kuse sahrīe-kachh geā. Unī̃ us-kī fell that neighbourhood-of a-certain citizen-near he-went. By-him him-as-for sūrãdī gawāliā lāi-dittā.
swine-of (for-) herding it-was-appointed.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

1. Ah, my soul is uneasy; my heart longs for the Gaddī.[1] How shall I go and meet him?

2. Ah, five robbers and thieves[2] waylay the Gaddī on his path. I pass the night counting the stars.

3. Ah, a passionate love for the Gaddī has taken possession of me, his wife. How shall I go and meet him?

4. Ah, once a woman has loved, she ever remains in longing for (her) man. I pass the night counting the stars.

---

[1] 'Gaddī' is the name of a tribe of hill shepherds. The speaker is a Gaddī's wife.

[2] These are the five passions,—lust, anger, avarice, love and pride.

KAṆḌIĀLĪ.

The river Ravi skirts the south-east corner of the Jammu State. On the other side lies a hilly tract forming the north-east corner of the Punjab district of Gurdaspur. The main language of this district is standard Pañjābī, but in this tract, and its neighbourhood, the following hill languages have been reported:—

	Reported to be spoken by—
Gujarī	60,000
Ḍōgrā	60,000
Kaṇḍiālī	10,000
TOTAL	130,000

Of these, Gujarī will be dealt with under the Pahāṛī languages. Ḍōgrā has just been described. Kaṇḍiālī is the dialect of the country round Shāhpur-Kaṇḍī, close to the Ravi. It is not a distinct dialect, but is merely ordinary Ḍōgrā mixed with standard Pañjābī. It is unnecessary to give any lengthy specimen of it. A few sentences from a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son will suffice to show its character. It is uncertain whether e should be written long, as in Pañjābī, or left unmarked as in Ḍōgrā. I have followed the latter system.

[No. 3.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

KAṆḌIĀLĪ DIALECT. (GURDASPUR DISTRICT.)

Kuse manukkhede daũ puttar the. Unhã̃-bichchõ
A-certain man-of two sons were. Them-from-among

laukaṛene babbe-kī ākhiā, 'bāpū-jī, me-kī mērā gharedā
the-younger-by the-father-to it-was-said, 'O-father, me-to my house-of hissa dai-dēō.' Unī̃ unhã̃-kī rasōṭī baṇḍī dittī. Thōriã̃ share give.' By-him them-to property having-divided was-given. A-few dinã̃ pichhchhõ laukaṛe puttarene sārī rasōṭī kiṭṭhī kittī, days after the-younger son-by all the-property together was-made,

kuse dūr mulke-kī chalī-geā. Utthẽ ūnī̃ luch-pane-bich
a-certain distant country-to he-went-away. There by-him debauchery-in sab-kichh (pronounced kiṣh) gawāī-aṛiā. Jadũ ūde kachh kichh(kiṣh)

every-thing was-squandered-away. When him-of with anything

bī nahī̃ rehā, tã̃ utthaī̃ matā kāl paī-giā. Us-kī bhukkh
also not remained, then there a-great famine fell. Him-to hunger

paī-gaī us pāsede kuse sahrīe-kachh geā. Unī̃ us-kī fell that neighbourhood-of a-certain citizen-near he-went. By-him him-as-for sūrãdī gawāliā lāi-dittā.

swine-of (for-) herding it-was-appointed.

THE KĀṄGRĀ DIALECT.

The District of Kangra proper (excluding Kulu, Lahaul, and Spiti) lies to the north of Hoshiarpur, and to the south of the Chamba State. To its east lies the State of Mandi, and to its west the north-eastern corner of Gurdaspur. The language of Hoshiarpur is Standard Pañjābī, those of Chamba and Mandi are forms of Western Pahāṛī, and the main languages of that portion of Gurdaspur which lies to the west of Kangra are various forms of Ḍōgrā. In Kangra itself, on a part of the northern border, near Chamba, the Gādīs who inhabit that tract speak a form of Pahāṛī. Over the rest of the district we meet with a form of Pañjābī, which is mixed with the neighbouring Ḍōgrā and Pahāṛī, and even shows traces of the influence of Kāshmīrī. The number of speakers of the Kāṅgrā dialect is estimated to be 636,500.

The Kāṅgrā dialect does not employ the ordinary Gurmukhī character, but is written in that form of Ṭākrī which is current in Chambā. It was originally intended to print the specimens in Chamba-Ṭākrī type, as has been done in the case of Ḍōgrā; but difficulties were experienced in obtaining a sufficient supply of the type, and lithographed facsimiles of the manuscript as prepared for the press have therefore been substituted. This manuscript was not written by a native of Kangra. And as the alphabetical system has been explained when dealing with Ḍōgrā, and as, moreover, the dialect closely resembles Ḍōgrā in several important points, I have placed the account of this form of speech after that of Ḍōgrā.

In pronunciation, a short e is common, as in seh, he; ṭehl, service; babbedā, of a father. Sometimes a long ū is substituted for the final ā of nouns, as in Kāshmīrī; thus, māhṇū (almost pure Kāshmīrī), a man; chhēlū, a kid. This is also common in the neighbouring Pahāṛī dialects.

In the declension of nouns, all masculine nouns have an oblique singular form in e, whether they end in a consonant or in a vowel. Thus, babbe, oblique form of babb, a father. This method of forming the masculine oblique case singular, and the formation of the accusative-dative with kī are both typical of Ḍōgrā. The oblique plural of masculine nouns in ā ends in eã̄. Thus, ghōṛeã̄dā, of horses, but gharã̄dā, of houses.

Feminines ending in vowels and some ending in consonants form the oblique case singular by adding ā, while others ending in consonants form it by adding ī. The following table shows the various changes which a noun undergoes in declension :—

Singular.		Plural.
Nominative.	Oblique.	Nominative.	Oblique.
Masculine—
Ghoṛā, a horse	ghōṛe	ghōṛe	ghōṛeã̄.
Ghar, a house	ghare	ghar	gharã̄.
Bichchhu, a scorpion	bichchue	bichchū	bichchūã̄.
[illegible] a daughter	biṭṭīā	biṭṭīã̄	biṭṭīã̄.
[illegible] a woman	juṇāsā	juṇāsã̄	juṇāsã̄.
[illegible]	baiḥṇī	baiḥṇĩ̄	baiḥṇĩ̄.

The case of the agent is formed as follows:—

Singular.	Plural.
ghōṛẽ	ghōṛeã̃.
gharẽ	gharã̃.
bichchūẽ	bichchūã̃.
biṭṭīẽ	biṭṭīã̃.
juṇāsẽ	juṇāsã̃.
baihṇĩ	baihṇĩ.

It will be observed that the agent plural is always the same as the oblique form plural.

The suffix of the accusative-dative is ki or jō.[1] That of the locative is bich. In other respects the declension of nouns follows Pañjābī.

Adjectives follow the rules of Pañjābī, except that an adjective agreeing with a noun in the agent case is itself put in that case. Thus, lauhṛẽ puttrẽ, by the younger son.

The first two personal pronouns are thus declined:—

	I.	We.	Thou.	You.
Nominative	maĩ	assã̃	tū	tussã̃.
Agent	maĩ	assã̃	taĩ, tudh	tussã̃.
Acc.-Dative	miṇjō	assãjō	tijō	tussãjō.
Locative	miṇjō-bich	assã̃-bich	tijō-bich	tussã̃-bich.
Genitive	mērā	mhārā, assãḍā	tērā	tumhārā, tamhārā, tussãḍā.

The forms mhārā and tamhārā are taken from Pahāṛī.

The following are the principal parts of the other pronouns:—

	That, he, etc.	This.	Who.	That, he, etc.	Who?	What?
Singular—
Nominative	oh	eh	jō, jeh	seh, saĩh	kuṇ	kiā, kyā.
Agent	uniĩ	iniĩ	jiniĩ	tiniĩ	kuniĩ, kiniĩ	...
Oblique	us	is	jis	tis	kus, kuh	kes (dat. kajō).
Plural—
Nominative	oh	eh	jō, jeh	seh, saĩh	kuṇ	...
Oblique	unã̃.	inã̃	jinã̃	tinã̃	kinã̃	...

[1] The suffix jō is really the locative of a genitive postposition jā. In Kāṅgrā jā has become obsolete, but it still survives in a slightly different form in Sindhī. It is derived from the Sanskrit kāryakaḥ, through the Prakrit kajjau, the ka being dropped according to a well known phonetic rule. The fact that jō is a locative is well shown by its employment with certain postpositions. Such postpositions are originally nouns in the locative. Thus, sāmhne, before, is really the locative of sāmhnā, front, and means literally 'in the front.' It hence governs the genitive, and, as in Indo-Aryan languages, such genitives are adjectives, they agree, in the Kāṅgrā dialect, with sāmhne in gender and case. Hence, tijō samhne, before thee, is literally 'in thy front,' and tijō is the locative masculine of an obsolete genitive tijā*, thy. Similarly, bich, in, is a contraction of an old locative vichche, in the middle, and tijō bich, in thee, is literally, 'in thy middle,' or 'in the middle of thee.' In an exactly similar way, the Hindī kō is by origin the locative of kā.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

1. Ah, my soul is uneasy; my heart longs for the Gaddī.[1] How shall I go and meet him?

2. Ah, five robbers and thieves[2] waylay the Gaddī on his path. I pass the night counting the stars.

3. Ah, a passionate love for the Gaddī has taken possession of me, his wife. How shall I go and meet him?

4. Ah, once a woman has loved, she ever remains in longing for (her) man. I pass the night counting the stars.

---

[1] 'Gaddī' is the name of a tribe of hill shepherds. The speaker is a Gaddī's wife.
[2] These are the five passions,—lust, anger, avarice, love and pride.

KAṆḌIĀLĪ.

The river Ravi skirts the south-east corner of the Jammu State. On the other side lies a hilly tract forming the north-east corner of the Punjab district of Gurdaspur. The main language of this district is standard Pañjābī, but in this tract, and its neighbourhood, the following hill languages have been reported:—

	Reported to be spoken by—
Gujarī	60,000
Ḍōgrā	60,000
Kaṇḍiālī	10,000
TOTAL	130,000

Of these, Gujarī will be dealt with under the Pahāṛī languages. Ḍōgrā has just been described. Kaṇḍiālī is the dialect of the country round Shāhpur-Kaṇḍī, close to the Ravi. It is not a distinct dialect, but is merely ordinary Ḍōgrā mixed with standard Pañjābī. It is unnecessary to give any lengthy specimen of it. A few sentences from a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son will suffice to show its character. It is uncertain whether e should be written long, as in Pañjābī, or left unmarked as in Ḍōgrā. I have followed the latter system.

[No. 3.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

KAṆḌIĀLĪ DIALECT. (GURDASPUR DISTRICT.)

Kuse manukkhede daũ puttar the. Unhã̄-bichchõ
A-certain man-of two sons were. Them-from-among laukaṛene babbe-kī ākhiā, 'bāpū-jī, me-kī mērā gharedā
the-younger-by the-father-to it-was-said, 'O-father, me-to my house-of hissa dai-dēō.' Unī̃ unhã̄-kī rasōṭī baṇḍī dittī. Thōriã̄ share give.' By-him them-to property having-divided was-given. A-few dinã̄ pichhchhõ laukaṛe puttarene sārī rasōṭī kiṭṭhī kittī, days after the-younger son-by all the-property together was-made,
kuse dūr mulke-kī chalī-geā. Utthẽ ūnī̃ luch-pane-bich
a-certain distant country-to he-went-away. There by-him debauchery-in sab-kichh (pronounced kish) gawāī-aṛiā. Jadũ ūde kachh kichh(kish) every-thing was-squandered-away. When him-of with anything bī nahī̃ rehā, tã̄ utthaī matā kāl paī-giā. Us-kī bhukkh also not remained, then there a-great famine fell. Him-to hunger
paī-gaī us pāsede kuse sahrīe-kachh geā. Unī̃ us-kī fell that neighbourhood-of a-certain citizen-near he-went. By-him him-as-for sūrãdī gawāliā, lāi-dittā.
swine-of (for-) herding, it-was-appointed.

THE KĀṄGRĀ DIALECT.

The District of Kangra proper (excluding Kulu, Lahaul, and Spiti) lies to the north of Hoshiarpur, and to the south of the Chamba State. To its east lies the State of Mandi, and to its west the north-eastern corner of Gurdaspur. The language of Hoshiarpur is Standard Pañjābī, those of Chamba and Mandi are forms of Western Pahāṛī, and the main languages of that portion of Gurdaspur which lies to the west of Kangra are various forms of Ḍōgrā. In Kangra itself, on a part of the northern border, near Chamba, the Gādīs who inhabit that tract speak a form of Pahāṛī. Over the rest of the district we meet with a form of Pañjābī, which is mixed with the neighbouring Ḍōgrā and Pahāṛī, and even shows traces of the influence of Kāshmīrī. The number of speakers of the Kāṅgrā dialect is estimated to be 636,500.

The Kāṅgrā dialect does not employ the ordinary Gurmukhī character, but is written in that form of Ṭākrī which is current in Chambā. It was originally intended to print the specimens in Chamba-Ṭākrī type, as has been done in the case of Ḍōgrā; but difficulties were experienced in obtaining a sufficient supply of the type, and lithographed facsimiles of the manuscript as prepared for the press have therefore been substituted. This manuscript was not written by a native of Kangra. And as the alphabetical system has been explained when dealing with Ḍōgrā, and as, moreover, the dialect closely resembles Ḍōgrā in several important points, I have placed the account of this form of speech after that of Ḍōgrā.

In pronunciation, a short e is common, as in seh, he; ṭehl, service; babbedā, of a father. Sometimes a long ū is substituted for the final ā of nouns, as in Kāshmīrī; thus, māhṇū (almost pure Kāshmīṛī), a man; chhēlū, a kid. This is also common in the neighbouring Pahāṛī dialects.

In the declension of nouns, all masculine nouns have an oblique singular form in e, whether they end in a consonant or in a vowel. Thus, babbe, oblique form of babb, a father. This method of forming the masculine oblique case singular, and the formation of the accusative-dative with kī are both typical of Ḍōgrā. The oblique plural of masculine nouns in ā ends in eã̄. Thus, ghōṛeã̄dā, of horses, but gharã̄dā, of houses.

Feminines ending in vowels and some ending in consonants form the oblique case singular by adding ā, while others ending in consonants form it by adding ī. The following table shows the various changes which a noun undergoes in declension:—

	Singular.		Plural.
	Nominative.	Oblique.	Nominative.	Oblique.
Masculine—
	Ghōṛā, a horse	ghōṛe	ghōṛe	ghōṛeã̄.
	Ghar, a house	ghare	ghar	gharã̄.
	Bichchū, a scorpion	bichchue	bichchū	bichchūã̄.
Feminine—
	Biṭṭī, a daughter	biṭṭīā	biṭṭīã̄	biṭṭīã̄.
	Juṇās, a woman	juṇāsā	juṇāsã̄	juṇāsã̄.
	Baiṅhṇ, a sister	baiṅhṇī	baiṅhṇĩ̄	baiṅhṇĩ̄.

The case of the agent is formed as follows:—

Singular.	Plural.
ghōṛẽ	ghōṛeã.
gharẽ	gharã.
bichchūẽ	bichchūã.
biṭṭīẽ	biṭṭīã.
juṇāsẽ	juṇāsã.
baihṇĩ	baihṇĩ.

It will be observed that the agent plural is always the same as the oblique form plural.

The suffix of the accusative-dative is ki or jō.[1] That of the locative is bich. In other respects the declension of nouns follows Pañjābī.

Adjectives follow the rules of Pañjābī, except that an adjective agreeing with a noun in the agent case is itself put in that case. Thus, lauhṛẽ puttrẽ, by the younger son.

The first two personal pronouns are thus declined:—

	I.	We.	Thou.	You.
Nominative	maĩ	assã	tū	tussã.
Agent	maĩ	assã	taĩ, tudh	tussã.
Acc.-Dative	miṇjō	assājō	tijō	tussājō.
Locative	miṇjō-bich	assã-bich	tijō-bich	tussã-bich.
Genitive	mērā	mhārā, assāḍā	tērā	tumhārā, tamhārā, tussāḍā.

The forms mhārā and tamhārā are taken from Pahāṛī.

The following are the principal parts of the other pronouns:—

	That, he, etc.	This.	Who.	That, he, etc.	Who?	What?
Singular—
Nominative	oh	eh	jō, jeh	seh, saih	kuṇ	kiā, kyā.
Agent	uniĩ	iniĩ	jiniĩ	tiniĩ	kuniĩ, kiniĩ	...
Oblique	us	is	jis	tis	kus, kuh	kes (dat. kajō).
Plural—
Nominative	oh	eh	jō, jeh	seh, saih	kuṇ	...
Oblique	unã.	inã	jiṇã	tinã	kinã	...

[1] The suffix jō is really the locative of a genitive postposition jā. In Kāṅgrā jā has become obsolete, but it still survives in a slightly different form in Sindhī. It is derived from the Sanskrit kāryakaḥ, through the Prakrit kajjau, the ka being dropped according to a well known phonetic rule. The fact that jō is a locative is well shown by its employment with certain postpositions. Such postpositions are originally nouns in the locative. Thus, sāmhne, before, is really the locative of sāmhnā, front, and means literally 'in the front.' It hence governs the genitive, and, as in Indo-Aryan languages, such genitives are adjectives, they agree, in the Kāṅgrā dialect, with sāmhne in gender and case. Hence, tijō samhne, before thee, is literally 'in thy front,' and tijō is the locative masculine of an obsolete genitive tijā*, thy. Similarly, bich, in, is a contraction of an old locative vichche, in the middle, and tijō bich, in thee, is literally, 'in thy middle,' or 'in the middle of thee.' In an exactly similar way, the Hindī kō is by origin the locative of kā.

The nasalization of the agents singular is often omitted. The agents plural are the same as the oblique forms. The oblique forms plural often insert an h. Thus, unhã̃, inhã̃, etc. 'Anyone' is koi, obl. kusī. 'Anything' is kichh. 'Self' is appū, oblique form the same, genitive apṇā.

Adēhā, of this kind; so, tadēhā, jadēhā, kadēhā.

The verb substantive is conjugated as follows:—

Present, I am, etc.

	Singular.	Plural.
1.	hã̃, hai	hã̃, hũ̃, haĩ.
2.	hē, hai	hã̃, hā, haĩ.
3.	hē, hai	hã̃, hai, hin, han.

The past tense is sing. masc., thā or thū; fem., thī: plur. masc., the; fem., thiã̃.

In the Active Verb, the Infinitive and Participles follow Pañjābī. Thus the present participle is mārdā or mārnā, striking. The Present Subjunctive follows the analogy of the verb substantive. Thus, mārē or mārai, thou mayst strike; mārã̃, I or we may strike. The first person plural may be mārīē, as in Pañjābī. The only other tense which presents irregularities is the future, which is conjugated as follows in the masculine. The feminine forms can easily be supplied on the analogy of Pañjābī—

Future, I shall strike, etc.

	Singular.	Plural.
1.	mārgā, mārghā, mārãgā, mārãghā	mārge, mārghe.
2.	mārgā, mārghā	mārge, mārghe.
3.	mārgā, mārghā	mārge, mārghe.

We now and then meet stray Pahāṛī forms of the future, such as hōn, he will be; bhōlā, he will be.

The past participle sometimes drops the i, as in Hindōstānī. Thus, laggā, for laggiā, begun; milā, for miliā, got.

There is a Respectful Imperative ending in ā. Thus, rakkhā, be good enough to keep me.

The Frequentative compound frequently appears with the force of an ordinary present definite. Thus, mārā kardā-hã̃, I am striking.

The Inceptive compound verb is formed with the direct, and not the oblique form of the infinitive. Thus, karṇā laggā, he began to do.

Note that contrary to the Pañjābī and Hindōstānī construction, the verb bōlṇā, to speak, is treated as a transitive verb in the past tenses. Thus, lauhkẽ puttrẽ bōliā, the younger son said.

AUTHORITIES—

LYALL, SIR JAMES BROADWOOD,—Report of the Land Revenue Settlement of the Kangra District, Panjab . . . 1865-72. Lahore, 1874. (App. 4, Glossary; App. 5, Proverbial sayings.)

Appendix I of the last edition of the Kangra Gazetteer consists of Notes on the Dialect of the Kangra Valley with a Glossary of Words peculiar to the Kangra District, by the late Mr. E. O'Brien (the author of the well-known Mūltānī Glossary). A new edition, revised and enlarged, has been prepared by the Rev. T. Grahame Bailey, and is printed in that gentleman's Languages of the Northern Himalayas (London, 1908).

As specimens of the Kāṅgrā dialect, I give, first, a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son; second, a short folktale; and, third, a few local proverbs.

[No. 4.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

KĀṄGRĀ DIALECT (DISTRICT KANGRA.)

SPECIMEN I.

ਮੁਗੀ ਸੰਤਹੁਟਮੋ ਸੋ ਪੁਤਰ ਥੇ । ਤਿਸੰ ਪਿਸੰ
ਲੈਤਮੰ ਪੁਤਰੰ ਯਯੇ ਮਨੇ ਪੈਲਿਯੰ ਤੋ ਤੇ ਯੰ ਪੂਜੀ ਤੋ ਮਿਲ ਸਾਰੇ ਸੋ
ਲਟੋ ਫਟੋ ਪਿਸੰ ਸਨ ਤਿਸੰ ਤੈਟ ਸੇਤ ਸਿੰਤੋ ਸੋਸੀ।
ਤੰ ਯਯੰ ਤਿਸੰ ਸੀ ਯਯਲ ਲਟੰ ਫਟੰ ਯੰਤੀ ਸਿਤ। ਸਤ ਸਿਸ ਸਤੀਂ ਯੀਤ ਤੋ ਤੈਟੰ ਪੁਤਰ ਸਤ ਸਿਲ
ਸਿਠ ਮਨੀਸ ਸੂਰ ਸੋਸੇ ਸੀ ਸਲੰ ਸਿਸੰ । ਫਿਤੀ ਤਿਖੂ ਲੁਸਯਲੰ ਪਿਸ ਸਿਸ ਸਟਸੋ ਸਟਸੋ ਯਯਲ ਲਟੰ
ਫਟੰ ਓਤਓ ਸਿਤੰ । ਤੰ ਸੇਤ ਸਤ ਸਿਲ ਤੁਸਤੀ ਸੁਸੰ
ਤੰ ਤਿਸ ਸੁਲਖੇ ਪਿਸ ਯਤੰ ਸਲੰ ਯੋਸੰ ਤੋਤ ਸੇਤ

ਮੱਮਲ ਤੇਓ ਗਿਯਾ। ਤੇਰੇ ਨੌਤ ਤਿਨ ਮੁਲਖੇ ਸ
ਸਤੁਰਯਾ ਪਿਸ਼ ਓਮਨੀ ਯਸਮਿਟੇ ਪਲ ਤੇਤੁਰ ਲਸ
ਤਿਸੀ ਤਿਨਤੋਂ ਯਪਣੁ ਲੱਤੁੜੇ ਪਿਸ ਸੁਤੱ ਸੱਤੁਰ
ਭੇਤਿਯਾ। ਨੌਤ ਮਖ ਸੁਤੁੜ ਸਿਮੜ ਮਨੇ ਤਿਸੱਸੀ
ਸੁਰੇ ਖੱਸ ਖੇ ਯਪਰ ਯੋਟ ਤੇਰੁ ਸੱਤੁਸਰਖ।
ਤੇਰੇ ਮੱਓ ਯਸਸੀ ਤਿਨਸੀ ਸਿਤ ਸੇਤੀ ਸਿੱਸਰਖ।
ਤੱ ਤਿਨਸੀ ਯਸ ਯਓ ਤੇਰੇ ਪੈਲਿਯਾ ਤੋ ਨੌਤ ਪਖੇ ਪਲ ਸਿਤੁਤੁ ਤੀ ਨਤੁਤੱ ਸੀ ਖਤੁ ਤ ਤੀ ਤੈਟੀ
ਖੁਲੀ ਤੇਤਸੀ ਤ ਤੇਰੇ ਨੈਂ ਤੁਖ ਨਤੱ ਸਰੇਸੱ।
ਨੈਂ ਓਠੀ ਸਰੀ ਯਪਤੁ ਪਖੇ ਪੱਲ
ਤੱਖ੍ਯਾ ਤੇਰੇ ਤਿਨਸੀ ਗਲੱਖ੍ਯਾ ਤੋ ਤ ਪੱਧੂਤੀ
ਨੈਂ ਸੁਰੇਗ ਤ ਓਲਟੱ ਤੇਰੇ ਤਿਤੋਂ ਸੰਸਤੁ ਖਯ
ਸੀਤੱ ਤ । ਤੁਤ ਨੈਂ ਤੁਸਤੱ ਖੁਤੇ ਸੁਲਯਤੁ ਤੋਗ ਸੇਤੀ ਤੱ। ਸਿਤੋਂ ਯਪਤੁ ਸਤੁਤੱ ਪਿਸ਼ ਓਸਸੀ

[No. 4.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

KĀṄGRĀ DIALECT (DISTRICT KANGRA.)

SPECIMEN I.

ਮੁਗੀ ਸੱਤਮੁਟਮੇ ਮੈਂ ਪੁਤ੍ਰ ਥੇ । ਤਿਨੱ ਧਿਯੱ
ਲੈਤਮੱ ਪੁਤ੍ਰੱ ਯਯੇ ਮਨੇ ਧੇਲਿਯੱ ਤੇ ਤੇ ਧੱਪੂਜੀ ਤੇ ਮਿਲ ਮਾਤ੍ਰੇਮੇ
ਲਟੇ ਫਟੇ ਧਿਸ ਸਤ ਤਿਸ ਤੈਟ ਸਤ ਸਿਤੇ ਮਯੈ।
ਤੱ ਯਯੱ ਤਿਨੱ ਮੀ ਯਯਲ ਲਟੱ ਫਟੱ ਧੱਤੀ ਸਿਤ। ਸਤ ਸਿਸ ਸਤੀਂ ਪੀਤ ਤੇ ਸੈਟੱ ਪੁਤ੍ਰ ਸਤ ਮਿਲ
ਮਿਠ ਮਗੀਮ ਮੁਤ ਮੈਸੈ ਮੀ ਸਲ ਗਿਯੱ । ਫਿਗੀ
ਤਿਥੁ ਲੁਸਯਲੱ ਧਿਸ ਸਿਸ ਮਟਮੇ ਮਟਮੇ ਯਯਲ ਲਟੱ
ਫਟੱ ਓਤਓ ਸਿਤ । ਤੱ ਸੈਤ ਸਤ ਮਿਲ ਤੁਸਤੀ ਸੁਮੱ
ਤੱ ਤਿਸ ਸੁਲਥ ਧਿਸ ਯਤ੍ਰ ਮੱਲ੍ ਯੱਯ ਤੈਤ ਸੈਤ

ਮੈਂ ਮਲ ਤੇ ਗਿਯ। ਤੇ ਸੇ ਤਿਸ ਸੁਲਖ ਸ ਸਤੁਯ ਪਿਸ ਮਸੀ ਯਸਗਿਟ ਪਲ ਤੇਤੁ ਲਸ
ਤਿਸੀ ਤਿਸਤੈ ਯਪਤੁ ਲੱਤੁ ਪਿਸ ਸੁਯੰ ਸੱਤੁ ਤੇਤਿਯ। ਸੇ ਮਖ ਸੁਤੁ ਸਿਮਤੁ ਮਨੈ ਤਿਯੰਸੀ
ਸੂ ਖੰਸ ਖ ਯਪਤ ਯਟ ਤੇਤੁ ਸੱਤੇਸਯ।
ਤੇ ਸੈਂ ਯਸਸੀ ਤਿਸਸੀ ਸਿਸ ਸੀ ਸਿੱਸਯ।
ਤੱ ਤਿਸਸੀ ਯਸ ਯਂ ਪੈਲਿਯ ਤੈ ਸੇ
ਪਪੈ ਪਲ ਸਿਤੇਤੁ ਤੀ ਸਤੁਯੰ ਸੀ ਖਤੁ ਤ ਭੀ ਤੈਟੀ ਘੁਲੀ ਤੇਤਸੀ ਤ ਤੇ ਸੈਂ ਤੁਖ ਸਤ ਸਤੇਸੰ। ਸੈਂ ਓਠੀ ਸਤੀ ਯਪਤੁ ਪਪੈ ਪਲ
ਤੱਖ ਤੇ ਤਿਸਸੀ ਸਲੱਖ ਤੈ ਤ ਪਯੂਤੀ
ਸੈਂ ਸੁਤੀਸ ਤ ਓਲਟ ਤੇ ਤਿਤੈ ਸੱਸਤੁ ਖਯ
ਸੀਤੰ ਤ । ਤੁਤ ਸੈਂ ਤੁਸਤ ਯੁਤੇ ਸੁਲਯਤੁ ਤੈਸ
ਸੇਂ ਤੱ। ਸਿਤੈ ਯਪਤੁ ਸਤੁਯੰ ਪਿਸ ਮਸੀ

ਪਰਪਰ ਸਸ ਜੀ ਮਸੀ ਸਖ । ਤੈਂ ਸੋਤ ਓਠੀ
ਮਸੀ ਯਪਲ੍ਹ ਪਪੇ ਪੰਲ ਸਿਯੰ ਤੈਂ ਸੋਤ ਮੁਸ ਤੀ ਖ ਯ ਤਿਸਮੈਂ ਪਪੰ ਤਿਸਮੀ ਸਿਖੀ ਮਸੀ ਸਯ
ਮੀਤੀ ਤੈਂ ਖਿਟ ਸੋਓ ਮਸੀ ਤਿਸਮੈਂ ਸਲ਼
ਲਸੀ ਮਸੀ ਓਂਯੈਂ ਲਟ । ਪੁਤੈਂ ਤਿਸਮਸ
ਪੈਲਿਯੰ ਤੇ ਪਪੁਜੀ ਸੈਂ ਸੁਸ ਸੋ ਤੇ ਓਲਟ ਮਸੈਂ
ਤੁਮਯੈਂ ਸੰਸਯਲ੍ਹ ਪਯ ਮੀਤ ਤੈਂ ਤੈਂ ਢਿਸੀ ਤੁਮਯੈਂ
ਪੁਤੈ ਸੁਲੁਯੰਲ੍ਹ ਜੈਸ ਸਤੀਂ ਤੈਂ । ਤੈਂ ਤੀ ਪਪੈਂ
ਯਪਲ੍ਹ ਸੈਂਮਯੈਂ ਸੀ ਪੈਲਿਯੰ ਜੇ ਸਤਯੈਂ ਤੇ ਖਯੈਂ ਮਯਤ੍ਹ ਮਸੀ ਮਸੀ ਓਸਸੀ ਲੈਂਯੰ। ਮਸੈਂ ਓਸਸੈਂ ਤਖੈਂ
ਸ੍ਹੁਠੀ ਤੈਂ ਧੈਂਯੈਂ ਧਿਸ ਜੁਟ ਧੈਂਯੰ । ਤੈਂ ਖੰਓਟ ਮਸੈਂ ਯੰਸੰਸ ਮਸੀਟ । ਮੰਤ ਜੈ ਟਤ ਸੋਯੈਂ ਪੁਤੈ ਸਸੀਸਿਯੰ ਖ ਢਿਸੀ ਜੀਂਸ ਤੈਂਓਯੰ ਤ । ਗੁਯੰਸੀ ਸਿਯੰ ਖ ਢਿਸੀ ਸਿਲੰ ਤ । ਤੈਂ ਸੋਤ ਸੈਂਜ ਮਸੰਲ੍ਹ ਲ ਸੀ ॥

ਤਿਸਮ ਧੜੁ ਪੁਤਰ ਲੱਤੜੁ ਧਿਸ ਥ।

ਤੇਰ ਤੱ ਸੋਤ ਯੱਯੱਸ ਤੇਓ ਘਰ ਸੇੜੁ ਪੁਤੱ ਤੱ

ਤਿਸੀ ਧੱਤੇ ਮਤੇ ਸੱਸੀਸੀ ਯੈਯੱਤ ਸੁਤੀ। ਤੇਰ ਤਿਸੀ

ਯਧਤ ਸੈਮਤੱ ਧਿਸ ਓਮ ਸੀ ਯੱਸਸੀਟਸੀ ਸਸੀ ਮਤੀ

ਯਧੁ ਧੱਲ ਪੁਸ਼ਿਯੱ ਤੇ ਟਤ ਸਿਯੱ ਤ। ਤਿਸੀ ਤਿਸ

ਮਤੇ ਧੈਲਿਯੱ ਤੇ ਤੁਸ਼ਤੱ ਤਓ ਯੱਓਯੱ ਤ ਤੇਰ

ਤੁਸ਼ਤੱ ਧਧੱ ਧੜੀ ਓਸਸੀ ਰਸੱ ਸੀਤੀ ਤ। ਓਸ

ਸਲੱ ਸਤੀ ਤ ਤਿਸ ਸੀ ਤਲ ਸੱਸ ਸਿਲ ਤ।

ਯਧਰ ਤਿਸੀ ਸਲਤੀ ਸੀਤੀ ਤੇਰ ਯੱਸਰ ਤੱਤ ਰਤੀ

ਸੱਤਿਯੱ। ਓਸ ਸਲ ਸਤੀ ਤਿਸਮ ਧਧ ਧੱਤਰ

ਯੱਓ ਸਤੀ ਸਸਤ ਲਸ। ਤਿਸੀ ਧਧ ਸੀ

ਓਤਰ ਸਿਤ ਤੇ ਸੈਂ ਓਤਸਿਯੱ ਧਰਸੱ ਤ

ਤੁਸ਼ਤੀ ਟਤਲ ਸਰਸ ਤੁੱ ਤੇਰ ਸਸੀ ਤੁਸ਼ਤੇ

ਤੁਸ਼ਸ ਤ ਧੱਤਰ ਰਤੀ ਤੇਓਯੱ। ਤੇਰ ਤੁਸੱ

ਮਮੀ ਸਿਤੈ ਓਮ ਅਲੁ ਭੀ ਨਤੀਂ
ਸਿਤ ਨੋ ਸੈਂ ਯਯਲ ਸਿਤਲੇ ਮਮ ਨੇ ਸੈਨ
ਮਰਮ। ਯਯਾ ਤੁਮਤਲ ਟਤ ਪੁਤਾ ਨੋ ਮਨਤਿਯੰਮੰ ਸਥੰ ਤੁਮਤੰਲ ਲਟ ਢਟ ਖਓ ਸਿਯੰ ਤ
ਨਿੰਤੰ ਸਤ ਯੰਓਯੰ ਤਿਤੰ ਤੁਸੰ ਤਿਸ ਮਮੀ
ਪੜੀ ਅਲ ਾਸੈਂ ਪਲੰਓ ਤ। ਪਧੰ ਤਿਸ ਮਮੀ
ਧੰਲਿਯੰ ਨੋ ਤ ਪੁਤਾ ਤੁ ਸਮੰ ਸਤੇ ਮਮ ਤ।
ਨੋ ਮਿਅ ਸਤਲ ਤ ਸਤ ਤਤ ਤਲੇ ਤ।
ਯਯਾ ਸੈਨ ਮਾਲੀ ਮਨੇ ਖੁਸੀ ਤੁਪੰ ਠੀਮ
ਥੰ। ਮਿੰਤਿਯੰ ਮਗੀ ਨੋ ਟਤ ਤਲੇ ਤੰਓ ਸਗੀ
ਸਿਯੰ ਥੰ ਢਗੀ ਸੀਂਮੰ ਤੰਓਯੰ ਤ। ਗੁਯੰਸੀ ਸਿਯੰ ਥੰ ਢਗੀ ਸਿਲੰ ਤ॥

[No. 4.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

KĀṄGRĀ DIALECT. (DISTRICT, KANGRA.)

SPECIMEN I.

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Kusī māhṇuede dō puttar the. Tiñ̃ā bichā lauhkẽ
A-certain man-of two sons were. Them from-among by-the-younger puttrẽ babbe kanẽ bōliā jẽ, 'he bāpū-jī, jē-kichh gharede son the-father to it-was-said that, 'O father-sir, whatever house-of laṭṭe-phaṭṭe bichā mērā hisā hōē, seh minjō dēō.' Tã̃ goods from-among my share may-be, that to-me give.' Then babbẽ tiñ̃ā-kī apṇā laṭṭā-phaṭṭā baṇḍī dittā. Mate by-the-father them-to his-own property having-divided was-given. Many dīn nahĩ bīte jē chhōṭā puttar sabh-kichh kiṭṭhā karī-kē days not passed that the-younger son everything together made-having dūr dēse-kī chalā-giā; phirī titthū luchpaṇe bich din kaṭde a-far country-to went-away; then there debauchery in days in-spending kaṭde apṇā laṭṭā-phaṭṭā uḍāī-dittā. Jã̃ seh sabh-kichh in-spending his-own property was-squandered. When he everything bhugtī-chukkā tã̃ tis mulkhe bich baṛā kāḷ peā, hōr seh kaṅkāḷ spent-had then that country in a-great famine fell, and he in-want hōī-giā. Hōr seh tis mulkhede māhṇuã̃ bichā ik-sī ādmiẽ bāl became. And he that country-of men from-among one man near rehṇā laggā, jinī tisjō apṇe lāhṛe bich sūrã̃ chārṇā bhējiā.
to-dwell began, by-whom him-as-for his-own field in swine to-feed it-was-sent.
Seh kakkh-kūṛā-sikṛã̃ kanẽ jiñ̃ā-kī sūr khã̃de-the apṇā pēṭ
He chaff-rubbish-husks by which the-swine eating-were his-own belly bharṇā chãhdā-thā. Hōr kōī ādmī tis-kī kichh nahĩ dindā-thā.
to-fill wishing-was. And any man him-to anything not giving-was.
Tã̃ tis-kī yād āī, hōr bōliā jē, 'mēre babbe bāl Then him-to memory came, and it-was-said that, 'my father near kitṇe-hī majūrã̃-kī khāne-tē bhī rōṭī ghullī rẽhdī-hē, how-many servants-to eating-than even bread left-over-and-above remaining-is, hōr maĩ bhukkhā marā karnā-hã̃. Maĩ uṭṭhī-karī apṇe babbe and I hungry dying doing-am. I arisen-having my-own father bāl jā̃ghā hōr tis-kī gallā̃ghā jē, "hē bāpū-jī, maĩ surge-tē near will-go and him-to I-will-say that, "O father-sir, by-me heaven-from ulṭā hōr tijō sāmhṇe pāp kītā-hē. Huṇ maĩ tumhārā puttar against and thee-to before sin done-is. Now I your son guluāṇe jōg nahĩ hā̃. Minjō apṇe majūrā̃ bichā ik-sī to-be-called fit not am. Me your-own servants from-among one barābar samjhī-karī rakkhā."' Tā̃ seh uṭṭhī-karī apṇe babbe like considered-having keep."' Then he arisen-having his-own father bāl giā, hōr seh dūr-hī thā jē tisdẽ babbẽ tis-kī dikkhī-karī near went, and he distant-even was that by-his father him-to seen-having dayā kītī, hōr khiṭṭ dēī-karī tisdẽ galẽ laggī-karī compassion was-made, and running given-having on-his neck been-attached-having phāõ lae. Puttrẽ tis kane bōliā, 'hē bāpū-jī, maĩ kisses were-taken. By-the-son him to it-was-said, 'O father-sir, by-me surge-tē ulṭā kanẽ tumhāre sāmhṇe pāp kītā-hai, hōr phirī heaven-from against and you-of in-front sin done-is, and any-more tumhārā puttar guluāṇe jōg nahĩ hā̃.' Tā̃-bhī babbẽ your son to-be-called worthy not I-am.' Then-even by-the-father apṇe naukrā̃-kī bōliā jē, 'sabhnā̃-tē kharc kapṛe kaḍḍhī-karī his-own servants-to it-was-said that, 'all-than good clothes brought-out-having is-kī lōā; kanẽ isdẽ hatthẽ gūṭhī, hōr pairā̃ bich juṭṭe this-one-to put-on; and this-one-of on-hand a-ring, and feet in shoes pōā; hōr khāīē kanẽ ānand karīē. Kẽh jē eh mērā put-on; and let-us-eat and rejoicing let-us-make. Because that this my puttar marī-giā-thā, phirī jĩdā hōiā-hē; guāchī-giā-thā, son having-died-gone-was, again living become-is; having-been-lost-gone-was, phirī milā-hē.' Tā̃ seh mauj karṇā lagge.

again got-is.' Then they rejoicing to-do began.

Tisdā baṛā puttar lāhṛe bich thā. Hōr jā̃ seh āõdā Him-of the-elder son the-field in was. And when he coming hōī ghare nēṛe pujjā, tā̃ tinī bāje kanẽ nāchedī having-become the-house near arrived, then by-him music and dancing-of ōāj suṇī. Hōr tinī apṇe naukrā̃ bichā ik-sī ādmīe-kī noise was-heard. And by-him his-own servants from-among one man-to saddī-karī appū bāl puchchhiā jē, 'eh kiā hē?' Tinī called-having himself near it-was-asked that, 'this what is?' By-him tis kane bōliā jē, 'tumhārā bhāū āiā hē, hōr tumhārẽ babbẽ him to it-was-said that, 'your brother come is, and by-your father baṛī umdī rasō kītī-hē, is gallā-karī jē tis-kī bhalā-chaṅgā
a-very excellent feast made-is, this reason-making that him-to safe-and-well

milā-hē.' Appar tinī jaḷṇī kītī, hōr andar jāṇā nahĩ chāhiā.
got-he-is.' But by-him wrath was-made, and within to-go not he-wished.
Is gallā-karī tisdā babb bāhar āī-karī manāṇā laggā.
This reason-making him-of the-father outside come-having to-remonstrate began.
Tinī babbe-kī uttar dittā jē, 'maĩ itṇiã barsã̃-tē tumhārī
By-him the-father-to answer was-given that, 'I so-many years-from your ṭehl kardā-hã̃, hōr kaddī tumhāre hukme-tē bāhar nahĩ hōiā.
service doing-am, and ever your order-from outside not became.
Hōr tussã̃ kaddī minjō ik chhēlū bhī nahĩ dittā jē maĩ apṇe
And by-you ever to-me a kid even not was-given that I my-own mittrã̃ kane mauj kardā. Appar tumhārā eh puttar jē friends with rejoicing might-have-done. But your this son by-whom kañjariãdē sāthē tumhārā laṭṭā-phaṭṭā khāī-giā-hē, jĩhã̃ seh āiā tĩhã̃ harlots-of in-company your property devoured-is, when he came then tussã̃ tis-kī baṛī chhaiḷ rasō baṇāī-hē.' Babbē tis-kī by-you him-for a-very fine feast prepared-is.' By-the-father him-to bōliā jē, 'hē puttar, tū sadā mēre kane hē. Jē-kichh it-was-said that, 'O son, thou always of-me near art. Whatever mērā hē, seh sabh tērā hē. Appar mauj karṇī kanē khusī mine is, that all thine is. But rejoicing to-be-done and happiness hōṇī ṭhīk thā, kĩhiã̃-karī jē eh tērā bhāū marī-giā-thā, to-become proper was, because that this thy brother having-died-gone-was,
phirī jĩdā hōiā-hē; guāchī-giā-thā, phirī milā-hē.'
again living become-is; having-been-lost-gone-was, again got-is.'

bāl jãghā hōr tis-kī gallãghā jē, "hē bāpū-jī, maĩ surge-tē near will-go and him-to I-will-say that, "O father-sir, by-me heaven-from ulṭā hōr tijō sāmhṇe pāp kītā-hē. Huṇ maĩ tumhārā puttar against and thee-to before sin done-is. Now I your son guluāṇe jōg nahĩ hã̃. Minjō apṇe majūrã̃ bichā ik-sī to-be-called fit not am. Me your-own servants from-among one barābar samjhī-karī rakkhā."' Tã̃ seh uṭṭhī-karī apṇe babbe like considered-having keep."' Then he arisen-having his-own father
bāl giā, hōr seh dūr-hī thā jē tisdẽ babbẽ tis-kī dikkhī-karī near went, and he distant-even was that by-his father him-to seen-having dayā kītī, hōr khiṭṭ dēī-karī tisdẽ galẽ laggī-karī compassion was-made, and running given-having on-his neck been-attached-having phāõ lae. Puttrẽ tis kane bōliā, 'hē bāpū-jī, maĩ kisses were-taken. By-the-son him to it-was-said, 'O father-sir, by-me surge-tē ulṭā kanẽ tumhāre sāmhṇe pāp kītā-hai, hōr phirī heaven-from against and you-of in-front sin done-is, and any-more tumhārā puttar guluāṇe jōg nahĩ hã̃.' Tã̃-bhī babbẽ your son to-be-called worthy not I-am.' Then-even by-the-father apṇe naukrã̃-kī bōliā jē, 'sabhnã̃-tē khare kapṛe kaḍḍhī-karī his-own servants-to it-was-said that, 'all-than good clothes brought-out-having is-kī lōā; kanẽ isdẽ hatthẽ gūṭhī, hōr pairã̃ bich juṭṭe
this-one-to put-on; and this-one-of on-hand a-ring, and feet in shoes
pōā; hōr khāīē kanẽ ānand karīē. Kẽh jē eh mērā put-on; and let-us-eat and rejoicing let-us-make. Because that this my puttar marī-giā-thā, phirī jĩdā hōiā-hē; guāchī-giā-thā, son having-died-gone-was, again living become-is; having-been-lost-gone-was, phirī milā-hē.' Tã̃ seh mauj karṇā lagge.
again got-is.' Then they rejoicing to-do began.

Tisdā baṛā puttar lāhṛe bich thā. Hōr jã̃ seh āõdā Him-of the-elder son the-field in was. And when he coming hōī ghare nēṛe pujjā, tã̃ tinī bāje kanẽ nāchedī having-become the-house near arrived, then by-him music and dancing-of ōāj suṇī. Hōr tinī apṇe naukrã̃ bichā ik-sī ādmīe-kī noise was-heard. And by-him his-own servants from-among one man-to saddī-karī appū bāl puchchhiā jẽ, 'eh kiā hē?' Tinī called-having himself near it-was-asked that, 'this what is?' By-him
tis kane bōliā jē, 'tumhārā bhāū āiā hē, hōr tumhārẽ babbẽ
him to it-was-said that, 'your brother come is, and by-your father
baṛī umdī rasō kītī-hē, is gallā-karī jē tis-kī bhalā-chaṅgā
a-very excellent feast made-is, this reason-making that him-to safe-and-well

milā-hē.' Appar tinī jaḷṇī kītī, hōr andar jāṇā nahĩ chāhiā.
got-he-is.' But by-him wrath was-made, and within to-go not he-wished.
Is gallā-karī tisdā babb bāhar āī-karī manāṇā laggā.
This reason-making him-of the-father outside come-having to-remonstrate began.
Tinī babbe-kī uttar dittā jē, 'maĩ itṇiã barsã̃-tē tumhārī
By-him the-father-to answer was-given that, 'I so-many years-from your ṭehl kardā-hã̃, hōr kaddī tumhāre hukme-tē bāhar nahĩ hōiā.
service doing-am, and ever your order-from outside not became.
Hōr tussã̃ kaddī minjō ik chhēlū bhī nahĩ dittā jē maĩ apṇe
And by-you ever to-me a kid even not was-given that I my-own mittrã̃ kanc mauj kardā. Appar tumhārā eh puttar jē friends with rejoicing might-have-done. But your this son by-whom kañjariãdē sāthē tumhārā laṭṭā-phaṭṭā khāī-giā-hē, jĩhã̃ seh āiā tĩhã̃ harlots-of in-company your property devoured-is, when he came then tussã̃ tis-kī baṛī chhaiḷ rasō baṇāī-hē.' Babbē tis-kī by-you him-for a-very fine feast prepared-is.' By-the-father him-to bōliā jē, 'hē puttar, tū sadā mēre kane hē. Jē-kichh
it-was-said that, 'O son, thou always of-me near art. Whatever mērā hē, seh sabh tērā hē. Appar mauj karṇī kanē khusī mine is, that all thine is. But rejoicing to-be-done and happiness hōṇī ṭhīk thā, kĩhiã̃-karī jē eh tērā bhāū marī-giā-thā, to-become proper was, because that this thy brother having-died-gone-was,
phirī jĩdā hōiā-hē; guāchī-giā-thā, phirī milā-hē.'
again living become-is; having-been-lost-gone-was, again got-is.'

[No. 5.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. — CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

KĀṄGṚĀ DIALECT. — (DISTRICT, KANGRA.)

SPECIMEN II.

ਓਅ ਸੀ ਪਰੀਟੰ ਪੰਜਓ ਰੁਪਯੇ ਓਅ ਸੀ
ਅਰੜੇ ਪਲ ਥੈਲੀ ਰਖੇ ਥੇ ।ਅਨੇ ਤਿਨਤੇ ਅਮੀ ਅਮੀ
ਪੁਸ਼ੀ ਥੋੜ੍ਹੇ ਥੋੜੇ ਨੈਸ ਲੈਮੀ ਥੀ। ਤੰ ਓਅ ਸਿਖ
ਪੁਸ਼ੀਟੰ ਅਰੜੇ ਤ ਯਪਣੀ ਥੈਲੀ ਸੰਗੀ ਤੰ ਅਰੜੇ
ਲੇਖ ਅਗੀ ਪੰਜ ਰੁਪਯੇ ਪੰਅਗੀ ਸਾਲ ਅਤੇ । ਫਿਰੀ ਭੀ ਪੁਸ਼ੀ ਤਿਨ ਤ ਪੰਜੋ ਪੰਜੋ ਨੈਸ ਅਮੀ ਅਮੀ ਲੈਮੀ ਰਤੀ । ਤੰ ਫਿਰੀ ਲੇਖ
ਤੋਓਯੰ ਤੰ ਪੰਜ ਰੁਪਯੇ ਪੰਅਗੀ ਭੀ
ਪੁਸ਼ੀਯੰਸਾ ਮੁਅਗੀ ਗਟ । ਓਨ ਗਲੰਸ ਗਲ੍ਹ ਲੈਅੰ ਟਤ ਅਗੀਤ ਤੇ
ਪੰਜ ਪੰਜੰਤੰ ਲਓ ਗਟ ਪੰਜ ਅਗੀ ਲਓ ਪੰਜੋ ।
ਸਨ ਅਰੜੇ ਯਨ ਪੋਓ ਤੰ ਪੁਸ਼ੀ ਯੰਜੋ ਤੇਜੋ॥

[No. 5.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

KĀṄGRĀ DIALECT. (DISTRICT, KANGRA.)

SPECIMEN II.

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ik-sī buḍḍhīẽ pājāh rupayye ik-sī karāṛe bāl thaiṇī
By-one old-woman fifty rupees a money-lender near deposit
rakkhe-the. Kanẽ tis-tē kaddī-kaddī buḍḍhī thōṛā thōṛā placed-were. And him-from now-and-then the-old-woman a-little a-little saudā lẽdī-thī. Jã̃ ik din buḍḍhīẽ karāṛe-tē provisions taking-was. When one day by-the-old-woman the-money-lender-from apṇī thaiṇī maṅgī, tã̃ karāṛẽ lēkhā karī her-own deposit was-asked, then by-the-money-lender calculation having-made pañj rupayye bākī dēṇā kaḍḍhe. Phirī bhī buḍḍhī five rupees balance to-be-given were-drawn-out. Again also the-old-woman tis-tē pāō-pāō saudā kaddī-kaddī lẽdī-rahī. Jã̃ phirī him-from quarter-quarter provisions now-and-then taking-was. When again
lēkhā hōiā, tã̃ pañj rupayye bākī bhī buḍḍhīāde calculation became, then the-five rupees balance also the-old-woman-of mukī-gae. Is gallādā gallāṇ lōkã̃ eh kītā jē,— exhausted-went. This matter-of saying by-people this was-made that,—

'pañj pājāhã̃ lai-gaē,
'the-five the-fifty were-taken-away,
'pañjā-kī lai pāo.
'the-five took the-quarter.
'damm karāṛã̃ bas pēī,
'deceit of-the-money-lender power she-fell,
'tã̃ buḍḍhī āo jāo.'
'then old-woman come go.'

[No. 5.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

KĀÑGRĀ DIALECT. (DISTRICT, KANGRA.)

SPECIMEN II.

ਓਮ ਸੀ ਪਸ਼ੀਟੰ ਪੰਜੰਤ ਰੁਪਯੇ ਓਮ ਸੀ
ਮਰੜ੍ਹੇ ਧਲ ਥੈਂਦੀ ਰਖ ਥੇ ।ਮਨੇ ਤਿਨਤੇ ਮਮੀ ਮਮੀ
ਪੁਸ਼ੀ ਥੈਂਡ੍ਹੇ ਥੈਂਤ ਨੈਂਮ ਲੈਂਮੀ ਥੀ। ਤੰ ਓਮ ਸਿਸ
ਪੁਸ਼ੀਟੰ ਮਰੜ੍ਹੇ ਤ ਯਪਦੀ ਥੈਂਦੀ ਸੰਗੀ ਤੰ ਮਰੜ੍ਹੇ ਲੇਖ ਮਸੀ ਪੰਜ ਰੁਪਯੇ ਧੰਮੀ ਸਾਨ੍ਹ ਮਨ੍ਹੇ ।
ਢਿਸੀ ਭੀ ਪੁਸ਼ੀ ਤਿਸ ਤ ਧੰਜੈ ਧੰਜੈ ਨੈਂਮ
ਮਮੀ ਮਮੀ ਲੈਂਮੀ ਸਤੀ । ਤੰ ਢਿਸੀ ਲੇਖ
ਤੈਂਓਜ ਤੰ ਪੰਜ ਰੁਪਯੇ ਧੰਮੀ ਭੀ
ਪੁਸ਼ੀਯਸਾ ਸੁਸ਼ੀ ਸਟ । ਓਸ ਸਲੰਸ ਸਲੰਦ
ਲੈਂਸ਼ੰ ਟਤ ਸ਼ੀਤ ਨ
ਪੰਜ ਪੰਜੰਤੰ ਲਓ ਸਟ ਪੰਜ ਸ਼ੀ ਲਓ ਧੰਜੈ ।
ਸਸ ਸਰੜ੍ਹੇ ਯਸ ਪੋਓ ਤੰ ਪੁਸ਼ੀ ਧੰਜੈ ਨੰਜੈ॥

[No. 5.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

KĀṄGRĀ DIALECT. (DISTRICT, KANGRA.)

SPECIMEN II.

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ik-sī buḍḍhīẽ pājāh rupayye ik-sī karāṛe bāl thaiṇī
By-one old-woman fifty rupees a money-lender near deposit
rakkhe-the. Kanẽ tis-tē kaddī-kaddī buḍḍhī thōṛā thōṛā placed-were. And him-from now-and-then the-old-woman a-little a-little saudā lẽdī-thī. Jã̃ ik din buḍḍhīẽ karāṛe-tē provisions taking-was. When one day by-the-old-woman the-money-lender-from apṇī thaiṇī maṅgī, tã̃ karāṛẽ lēkhā karī
her-own deposit was-asked, then by-the-money-lender calculation having-made pañj rupayye bākī dēṇā kaḍḍhe. Phirī bhī buḍḍhī five rupees balance to-be-given were-drawn-out. Again also the-old-woman
tis-tē pāō-pāō saudā kaddī-kaddī lẽdī-rahī. Jã̃ phirī him-from quarter-quarter provisions now-and-then taking-was. When again
lēkhā hōiā, tã̃ pañj rupayye bākī bhī buḍḍhīāde calculation became, then the-five rupees balance also the-old-woman-of mukī-gae. Is gallādā gallāṇ lōkã̃ eh kītā jē,— exhausted-went. This matter-of saying by-people this was-made that,—

'pañj pājāhã̃ lai-gaē,
'the-five the-fifty were-taken-away,

'pañjā-kī lai pāo.
'the-five took the-quarter.

'damm karāṛã̃ bas peī,
'deceit of-the-money-lender power she-fell,

'tã̃ buḍḍhī āo jāo.'
'then old-woman come go.'

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

An old woman once deposited fifty rupees with a money-lender, and only very seldom took a few provisions from him against the deposit. One day, when she asked him for her deposit back again, he made up the accounts and told her that there were only five rupees to her credit. She went on taking now and again a quarter of a seer of provisions, and when she again asked him to settle up, he made up the account and told her that now there was nothing left to her credit. When the people heard of this the following saying became current,—

The five took away the fifty, and the quarter of a seer took the five. She fell into the clutches of the money-lender by his deceit. Old woman, come and go.[1]

---

[1] The last sentence is not clear to me. The writer of the specimen explains it as signifying that the people told the old lady to stop transactions with the money-lender for good.

[No. 6.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

KĀṄGRĀ DIALECT. (DISTRICT, KANGRA.)

SPECIMEN III.

ਬਤੀ ਬਸਨਾ ਨੀਤੀ।

ਜਿਸ ਬੋਜਿਯ ਬਸਨ ਨ ਮੰਟ।

ਨੀਤ ਬੋਤੀ ਬਸਨਾ ਮੀ ਬੱਟ॥੧॥

ਪਰ ਤਬੰ ਪਫਤ ਸੁਨੇਤੰ ਬੋਤੀ।

ਮਮੀ ਨ ਤੇਨ ਪਤਿਤਯੰਮੰ ਤੰਤੀ॥੩॥

ਘਰ ਤੰਮੰ ਦੈਲੰ ਪਤਤੰ।

ਘਰ ਤੰਮੰ ਦੈਂਤੰ ਸਤੰ।

ਘਰ ਤੰਮੰ ਦੈਂਤਿਟੰ ਧੀਟੰ।

ਘਰ ਤੰਮੰ ਧੰਤੀਟ ਧੀਟੰ॥੨॥

ਸਤਸ ਮੰਫ਼ਤ। ਧੰਸ ਸਤੀਂ ਮੰਫ਼॥੪॥

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

An old woman once deposited fifty rupees with a money-lender, and only very seldom took a few provisions from him against the deposit. One day, when she asked him for her deposit back again, he made up the accounts and told her that there were only five rupees to her credit. She went on taking now and again a quarter of a seer of provisions, and when she again asked him to settle up, he made up the account and told her that now there was nothing left to her credit. When the people heard of this the following saying became current,—

The five took away the fifty, and the quarter of a seer took the five. She fell into the clutches of the money-lender by his deceit. Old woman, come and go.[1]

---

[1] The last sentence is not clear to me. The writer of the specimen explains it as signifying that the people told the old lady to stop transactions with the money-lender for good.

[No. 6.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

KĀṄGRĀ DIALECT. (DISTRICT, KANGRA.)

SPECIMEN III.

ਬਤੀ ਬਸਨਾ ਨਤੀ।

ਗਿਸ ਬੋਤਿਯ ਬਸਨ ਨ ਮੰਟ।

ਨਤ ਬੋਤੀ ਬਸਨਾ ਮੀ ਬੱਟ॥੧॥

ਪਨ ਤਬੰ ਪਫਤ ਸੁਨੇਤੰ ਬੋਤੀ।

ਮਮੀ ਨ ਤੇਨ ਪਤਿਤਯੰਮੋ ਤੰਤੀ॥੩॥

ਘਨ ਤੰਮੋ ਤੈਲੰ ਪਤਤੰ।

ਘਨ ਤੰਮੋ ਦੈਤਤੰ ਨਤਤੰ।

ਘਨ ਤੰਮੋ ਦੈਤਿਟੰ ਧੀਟੰ।

ਘਨ ਤੰਮੋ ਧੱਤਗੀਟ ਧੀਟੰ॥੨॥

ਗਰਨ ਮੋਰ੍ਹ। ਧੱਨ ਨਤੀਂ ਮੋਰ੍ਹ॥੪॥

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

An old woman once deposited fifty rupees with a money-lender, and only very seldom took a few provisions from him against the deposit. One day, when she asked him for her deposit back again, he made up the accounts and told her that there were only five rupees to her credit. She went on taking now and again a quarter of a seer of provisions, and when she again asked him to settle up, he made up the account and told her that now there was nothing left to her credit. When the people heard of this the following saying became current,—

The five took away the fifty, and the quarter of a seer took the five. She fell into the clutches of the money-lender by his deceit. Old woman, come and go.[1]

---

[1] The last sentence is not clear to me. The writer of the specimen explains it as signifying that the people told the old lady to stop transactions with the money-lender for good.

[No. 6.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

KĀṄGRĀ DIALECT. (DISTRICT, KANGRA.)

SPECIMEN III.

ਬੱਤੀ ਬਸਨਾ ਨੀਤੀ।

ਜਿਸ ਬੱਤਿਯ ਬਸਨ ਨ ਔਟ।

ਨੀਤ ਬੱਤੀ ਬਸਨਾ ਮਾਂ ਬੱਟ॥੧॥

ਪਰ ਤਬੱ ਪਫ਼ਤ ਸੁਨੇਤੇ ਬੱਤੀ।

ਮਮੀ ਨ ਤੇਨ ਪਤਿਤਯੱਮੁ ਤੇਤੀ॥੩॥

ਘਰ ਔਮੁ ਫੈਲੇ ਪਤਫੇ।

ਘਰ ਔਮੁ ਫੈਤੇ ਨਤਫੇ।

ਘਰ ਔਮੁ ਫੈਤਿਟੇ ਧੀਟੇ।

ਘਰ ਔਮੁ ਧੱਤੀਟੇ ਧੀਟੇ॥੨॥

ਗਰਨ ਮੋਫ਼ੱ। ਧੱਨ ਨਤੀਂ ਮੋਫ਼॥੪॥

[No. 6.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

KĀṄGRĀ DIALECT. (DISTRICT, KANGRA.)

SPECIMEN III.

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

1. Khētī khasme sēṭi.
1. Cultivation owner with.

Jisā khētiā khasm nā jāē,
What field the-owner not may-go,

Seh khētī khasme-kī khāē.
That field the-owner eats.

2. Par hatthẽ baṇj, sunēhẽ khētī,
2. By-another's hand trading, by-a-message cultivation,

Kaddī nā hōn batihyãde tẽtī.
Ever not will-be thirty-two-of thirty-three.

3. Ghar jãde ḍhōlẽ bajṇẽ,
3. House goes by-drum being-played,

Ghar jãde bauhtẽ sajṇẽ,
House goes by-many guests,

Ghar jãde bauhtiẽ dhīẽ,
House goes by-many daughters,

Ghar jãde bāhrīẽ bīẽ.
House goes by-borrowed-from-another seed.

4. Grās dēṇā. Bās nahĩ dēṇā.
4. Mouthful is-to-be-given. Lodging not is-to-be-given.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING PROVERBS.

1. Agriculture depends on the owner.

If the owner does not go personally to his field and cultivate it, the field will eat him up.[1]

2. Trading at second hand, and cultivation by message will never turn thirty-two into thirty-three.[2]

---

[1] Compare Mr. Maconachie's Selected Agricultural Proverbs of the Panjab. Nos. 694, 697.

[2] Compare Mr. Maconachie, No. 698. I have copied his translation.

3. A man goes home (i.e., does not prosper) by beating drums (i.e., amusing himself).

A man goes home by entertaining many guests.

A man goes home by begetting many daughters.

A man goes home by sowing his field with borrowed seed.[1]

4. You may give food to a stranger, but don't let him settle on your land.[2]

---

[1] Mr. Maconachie's Nos. 801, 802 are the nearest to this, but are not the same.

[2] I have not been able to trace this in Mr. Maconachie's book.

BHAṬĔĀLĪ.

The main dialect of the State of Chamba is known as Chameāḷī, and is a form of Western Pahāṛī. In the west of the state towards Jammu we find a dialect called Bhaṭĕālī spoken by an estimated number of 14,000 people. It is a kind of Ḍōgrā, but like Kāṅgrā is a mixed form of speech.

The Rev. T. Grahame Bailey gives an account of this dialect in his Languages of the Northern Himalayas (London, 1908), and the following sketch of its main peculiarities is based upon this, with a few additions collected from the annexed specimen, a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son. This is given in facsimile, in the local Ṭākrī character, the transliteration being arranged line for line with the original, with the very careless spelling usual in writing in this character made uniform, so as to agree with that of the grammatical sketch.

In the transcription the short e is represented by ĕ and not by e as in the preceding specimens, as it performs an entirely different function, corresponding to the short i of Pañjābī. Thus the Bhaṭĕālī mārĕā corresponds to the Pañjabī māriā. Mr. Bailey marks as long several e's which in the preceding pages are marked as short. This has been followed in the case of Bhaṭĕālī.

Declension.—With the above exception of the change of e to ĕ, which is, in this case, little more than a question of spelling, the formation of the oblique form of masculine nouns is much the same as in Kāṅgrā. The case of the agent is also very similar. Thus:—

Singular.			Plural.
Nominative.	Oblique.	Agent.	Nominative.	Oblique.	Agent.
Masculine.
ghōṛā, horse	ghōṛē	ghōṛĕ, ghōṛaĩ	ghōṛā	ghōṛĕã	ghāṛĕã
ghar, house	gharē	gharĕ, gharaĩ	ghar	gharã	gharã
hāthī, elephant	hāthī, hāthīē	hāthīĕ, hāthīaĩ	hāthi	hāthiã	hāthiã
Feminine.
kuṛī, girl	kuṛīā	kuṛīā	kuṛĩ	kuṛiã	kuṛiã
bhaiṇ, sister	bhaiṇā or bhaiṇā	bhaiṇā or bhaiṇā	bhaiṇ̃, bhaiṇã	bhaiṇ̃, bhaiṇã	bhaiṇ̃, bhaiṇã
gau, cow	gāī	gāī	gauã	gauã	gauã

It will be noted that the agent plural is always the same as the oblique plural. Bhaiṇ is sometimes pronounced bhēṇ.

The case postpositions are:—

Dat.-Acc., kĕā, ki, or kanē.
Abl. kachhā or kichhā, vichchā or bichchā.
Gen. dā.
Loc. vichch, or bichch, in.

In the specimen, we come across a few forms which depart from those given above. Thus, we sometimes find forms corresponding to ghōṛā̃, instead of ghōṛĕā̃. While the oblique form singular of nouns corresponding to ghar usually ends in ē, it sometimes ends in ā, so that from mulkh, a country, we have both mulkhē and mulkhā. Feminine nouns in ī sometimes drop the final ā of the oblique singular, as in surtī-vichch instead of surtīā-vichch, in memory.

The Pronouns present a few departures from the Ḍōgrā and Kāṅgṛā Standards.

The Personal Pronouns are as follows: –

I.	We.	Thou.	You.
Nom. maĩ	asā̃, asĩ	tū	tusā̃, tusī
Agent. maĩ	asā̃	taĩ, tuddh	tusā̃
Dat.-Acc. mikă̆ā, mikī, mēki	asā̃-keā, -kī	tukeā, tukī	tusā̃-keā, -kī
Abl. maĩ-kachhā, mērē kachhā	asā̃-kachhā	taĩ-, tērē-kachhā	tusā̃-kachhā
Gen. mērā	sāṛā	tērā	tusāṛā, tuhāṛā, tuāṛā
Loc. mērē bichch	asā̃-bichch	tuddh-bichch	tusā̃-bichch

In the ablative, as usual, we may have kichhā instead of kachhā.

For the third person and demonstrative pronouns, we have—

	He, that.		This.
	Sing.	Plur.	Sing.	Plur.
Nom.	sē, hē, ō	sē, hē, ō	ēh	ēh
Agent.	unnī	unhā̃	innī	inhā̃
Obl.	us	unhā̃	is	inhā̃

In the genitive, we have uddā as well as us-dā.

Who, jē, Ag. sing. jinī, Obl. sing. jis.

Who? kuṇ, Ag. sing. kunī, Obl. sing. kus, Gen. sing. kudā.

What? kyā, kē, Gen. kaidā.

Other pronouns are kōī, some one, any one; kichchh, something, anything.

Conjugation.—The verb substantive closely follows Kāṅgṛā. Thus:—

Present, I am, etc.

	Sing.	Plur.
1	hā̃	hā̃
2	haĩ	hā̃
3	hai	han, hin

The Past is thā, fem. thī, Pl. thē, fem. thīā̃. Once, in the specimen, we have the Pahāṛī thō, instead of thā.

The Active verb follows Kāṅgṛā. Thus:—

Present Subjunctive (mārnā, to strike).

mārā̃, -ẽ̃, -ē, -ã̃ or -īē, ã̃, -an.

Future masc. sing. māhrghā, plur. māhrghē. This tense does not change for person. The feminine is formed in the usual way.

Pres. Part. mārdā.

Past Part. mārĕā. In the specimen, we have milā as well as milĕā.

Mr. Grahame Bailey gives the present tense as formed in the usual way,—by suffixing the verb substantive to the present participle; thus, mārda-hā̃, I strike. But, in the specimen, there is another present tense, in nā, resembling the infinitive in form. Thus karnā, I do (service). It will be remembered that the Ḍōgṛā present participle may end in nā.

When r immediately precedes n, the two often become ṇ. Thus, marnā, I die, becomes maṇā, and karnā, to do, becomes kaṇā.

The following are examples of irregular verbs:—

Infinitive.	Pres. Part.	Past Part.	Future.	1 Pres. Subj.
pauṇā, to fall	pondā	pēā	põ̃ghī or pauũghā	pauã̃.
hauṇā, to become	hundā	hōēā	huṅghā	hauã̃.
auṇā, to come	aundā	ayā	aũghā	auã̃.
jāṇā, to go	jandā	gēā, gā	jaṅghā	jã̃.
raïhṇā, to remain	raïhndā	rēhā	raïhṅghā	rēhã̃.
baïhṇā, to sit	baïhndā	baiṭheā	baïhṅghā	bauhã̃.
khāṇā, to eat	khāndā	khādhā	.....
pīṇā, to drink	pīndā	pītā	.....
dēṇā, to give	dindā	dittā	diṅghā
laiṇā, to take	.....	lēā	.....
galāṇā, to speak	.....	galayā or galāyā	.....
karnā or karṇā, to do	.....	kittā	.....

Note the short a in ayā, jandā, jaṅghā, and galayā.

SENTENCES.

1. What is your name?
   Tērā nã̃ kē hai?
2. How old is this horse?
   Is ghōṛēdī kitnī umbar hai?
3. How far is it from here to Kashmīr?
   Itthẽ̃-kachhā (or itthū) Kashmīr kitne dūr hai?

4. How many sons are there in your father's house?
Tuāṛe babbēdē ghar kitṇē jāgat han?
5. I have walked a long way to-day.
Maĩ ajj baṛē dūrā-kachhā (or kichhā) haṇḍī ayā.
6. The son of my uncle is married to his sister.
Mērē chāchēdā jāgat usdī bhaiṇū-kanē biāhā hai.
7. In the house is the saddle of the white horse.
Gharē hachchhē ghōṛēdī kāṭhī hai.
8. Put the saddle upon his back.
Usdīā piṭṭhī-par kāṭhī bannhī dēā.
9. I have beaten his son much.
Maĩ usdā jāgat matā mārĕā.
10. He is grazing cattle on the top of the hill.
Sē dhārēdē rēhā uppur gauã̃-bakrīã̃ chuṭṭāndā-hai.
11. He is sitting on a horse under that tree.
Sē us rukkhē-hēṭh ghōṛē uppur baiṭhĕā hai.
12. His brother is taller than his sister.
Uddā bhāī apṇīā bhēṇū- (or bhēṇā-)kachhā baḍḍā hai.
13. The price of that is two and a half rupees.
Usdā mul ḍhāī rupayyē hai.
14. My father lives in that small house.
Mērā babb (or bāpū) us halkē gharē raihndā-hai.
15. Give these rupees to him.
Uskĕā ēh rupayyē dēī-dēā.
16. Take those rupees from him.
Sē rupayyē us-kachhā lēī-lēā.
17. Beat him well and bind him with a rope.
Uskĕā jugtī karī mārō, jōṛīā-kannẽ̃ bannhō.
18. Draw water from the well.
Khuhē-kachhā pāṇī kaḍḍhō.
19. Walk before me.
Maĩ aggē chalō.
20. Whose son comes behind you?
Kudā puttar tuāṛē pichchhē aundā hai?
21. From whom have you bought that?
Sē tuddh kus-kachhā mullẽ̃ lēā-hai?
22. From a shopkeeper of the village.
Giṛāẽ̃dē haṭṭābāḷē-kachhā.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

An old woman once deposited fifty rupees with a money-lender, and only very seldom took a few provisions from him against the deposit. One day, when she asked him for her deposit back again, he made up the accounts and told her that there were only five rupees to her credit. She went on taking now and again a quarter of a seer of provisions, and when she again asked him to settle up, he made up the account and told her that now there was nothing left to her credit. When the people heard of this the following saying became current,—

The five took away the fifty, and the quarter of a seer took the five. She fell into the clutches of the money-lender by his deceit. Old woman, come and go.[1]

---

[1] The last sentence is not clear to me. The writer of the specimen explains it as signifying that the people told the old lady to stop transactions with the money-lender for good.

[No. 6.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

KĀṄGRĀ DIALECT. (DISTRICT, KANGRA.)

SPECIMEN III.

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

1. Khētī khasme sētī.
1. Cultivation owner with.

Jisā khētiā khasm nā jāē,
What field the-owner not may-go,
Seh khētī khasme-kī khāē.
That field the-owner eats.

2. Par hatthẽ baṇj, sunēhẽ khētī,
2. By-another's hand trading, by-a-message cultivation,
Kaddī nā hōn batihyãde tẽtī.
Ever not will-be thirty-two-of thirty-three.

3. Ghar jãde ḍhōlẽ bajṇẽ,
3. House goes by-drum being-played,
Ghar jãde bauhtẽ sajṇẽ,
House goes by-many guests,
Ghar jãde bauhtiẽ dhīẽ,
House goes by-many daughters,
Ghar jãde bāhrīẽ bīẽ.
House goes by-borrowed-from-another seed.

4. Grās dēṇā. Bās nahĩ dēṇā.
4. Mouthful is-to-be-given. Lodging not is-to-be-given.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING PROVERBS.

1. Agriculture depends on the owner.

If the owner does not go personally to his field and cultivate it, the field will eat him up.[1]

2. Trading at second hand, and cultivation by message will never turn thirty-two into thirty-three.[2]

---

[1] Compare Mr. Maconachie's Selected Agricultural Proverbs of the Panjab. Nos. 694, 697.
[2] Compare Mr. Maconachie, No. 698. I have copied his translation.

3. A man goes home (i.e., does not prosper) by beating drums (i.e., amusing himself).

A man goes home by entertaining many guests.

A man goes home by begetting many daughters.

A man goes home by sowing his field with borrowed seed.[1]

4. You may give food to a stranger, but don't let him settle on your land.[2]

---

[1] Mr. Maconachie's Nos. 801, 802 are the nearest to this, but are not the same.

[2] I have not been able to trace this in Mr. Maconachie's book.

[No. 6.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY. CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

KĀṄGRĀ DIALECT. (DISTRICT, KANGRA.)

SPECIMEN III.

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

1. Khētī khasme sēṭi.
1. Cultivation owner with.

Jisā khētiā khasm nā jāē,
What field the-owner not may-go,
Seh khētī khasme-kī khāē.
That field the-owner eats.

2. Par hatthẽ baṇj, sunēhẽ khētī,
2. By-another's hand trading, by-a-message cultivation,
Kaddī nā hōn batihyãde tẽtī.
Ever not will-be thirty-two-of thirty-three.

3. Ghar jãde ḍhōlẽ bajṇẽ,
3. House goes by-drum being-played,
Ghar jãde bauhtẽ sajṇẽ,
House goes by-many guests,
Ghar jãde bauhtiẽ dhīē,
House goes by-many daughters,
Ghar jãde bāhrīẽ bīẽ.
House goes by-borrowed-from-another seed.

4. Grās dēṇā. Bās nahĩ dēṇā.
4. Mouthful is-to-be-given. Lodging not is-to-be-given.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING PROVERBS.

1. Agriculture depends on the owner.

If the owner does not go personally to his field and cultivate it, the field will eat him up.[1]

2. Trading at second hand, and cultivation by message will never turn thirty-two into thirty-three.[2]

---

[1] Compare Mr. Maconachie's Selected Agricultural Proverbs of the Panjab. Nos. 694, 697.
[2] Compare Mr. Maconachie, No. 698. I have copied his translation.

3. A man goes home (i.e., does not prosper) by beating drums (i.e., amusing himself).

A man goes home by entertaining many guests.

A man goes home by begetting many daughters.

A man goes home by sowing his field with borrowed seed.[1]

4. You may give food to a stranger, but don't let him settle on your land.[2]

---

[1] Mr. Maconachie's Nos. 801, 802 are the nearest to this, but are not the same.

[2] I have not been able to trace this in Mr. Maconachie's book.

BHAṬĔĀLĪ.

The main dialect of the State of Chamba is known as Chamĕālī, and is a form of Western Pahāṛī. In the west of the state towards Jammu we find a dialect called Bhaṭĕālī spoken by an estimated number of 14,000 people. It is a kind of Ḍōgrā, but like Kāṅgrā is a mixed form of speech.

The Rev. T. Grahame Bailey gives an account of this dialect in his Languages of the Northern Himalayas (London, 1908), and the following sketch of its main peculiarities is based upon this, with a few additions collected from the annexed specimen, a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son. This is given in facsimile, in the local Ṭākrī character, the transliteration being arranged line for line with the original, with the very careless spelling usual in writing in this character made uniform, so as to agree with that of the grammatical sketch.

In the transcription the short e is represented by ĕ and not by e as in the preceding specimens, as it performs an entirely different function, corresponding to the short i of Pañjābī. Thus the Bhaṭĕālī mārĕā corresponds to the Pañjabī māriā. Mr. Bailey marks as long several e's which in the preceding pages are marked as short. This has been followed in the case of Bhaṭĕālī.

Declension.—With the above exception of the change of e to ĕ, which is, in this case, little more than a question of spelling, the formation of the oblique form of masculine nouns is much the same as in Kāṅgrā. The case of the agent is also very similar. Thus:—

Singular.			Plural.
Nominative.	Oblique.	Agent.	Nominative.	Oblique.	Agent.
Masculine.
ghōṛā, horse	ghōṛē	ghōṛĕ̃, ghōṛaĩ̃	ghāṛē	ghōṛēã̃	ghōṛēã̃
ghar, house	gharē	gharĕ̃, gharaĩ̃	ghar	gharã̃	gharã̃
hāthī, elephant	hāthī, hāthīē	hāthīĕ̃, hāthīaĩ̃	hāthī	hāthīã̃	hāthīã̃
Feminine.
kuṛī, girl	kuṛīā	kuṛīā	kuṛīã̃	kuṛīã̃	kuṛīã̃
bhaiṇ, sister	bhaiṇū or bhaiṇā	bhaiṇū or bhaiṇā	bhaiṇũ̃, bhaiṇã̃	bhaiṇũ̃, bhaiṇã̃	bhaiṇũ̃, bhaiṇã̃
gau, cow	gāī	gāī	gauã̃	gauã̃	gauã̃

It will be noted that the agent plural is always the same as the oblique plural. Bhaiṇ is sometimes pronounced bhēṇ.

The case postpositions are:—

Dat.-Acc., kĕā, ki, or kanē.
Abl. kachhā or kichhā, vichchā or bichchā.
Gen. dā.
Loc. vichch, or bichch, in.

In the specimen, we come across a few forms which depart from those given above. Thus, we sometimes find forms corresponding to ghōṛã̄, instead of ghōṛĕã̄. While the oblique form singular of nouns corresponding to ghar usually ends in ē, it sometimes ends in ā, so that from mulkh, a country, we have both mulkhē and mulkhā. Feminine nouns in ī sometimes drop the final ā of the oblique singular, as in surtī-vichch instead of surtīā-vichch, in memory.

The Pronouns present a few departures from the Ḍōgrā and Kāṅgṛā Standards.

The Personal Pronouns are as follows: —

1.	We.	Thou.	You.
Nom. maĩ	asã̄, asĩ	tū	tusã̄, tusī
Agent. maĩ	asã̄	taĩ, tuddh	tusã̄
Dat.-Acc. mikĕā, mikī, mēki	asã̄-keā, -kī	tukeā, tukī	tusã̄-keā, -kī
Abl. maĩ-kachhā, mērē kachhā	asã̄-kachhā	taĩ-, tērē-kachhā	tusã̄-kachhā
Gen. mērā	sāṛā	tērā	tusāṛā, tuhāṛā, tuāṛā
Loc. mērē bichch	asã̄-bichch	tuddh-bichch	tusã̄-bichch

In the ablative, as usual, we may have kichhā instead of kachhā.

For the third person and demonstrative pronouns, we have—

	He, that.		This.
	Sing.	Plur.	Sing.	Plur.
Nom.	sē, hē, ō	sē, hē, ō	ēh	ēh
Agent.	unnī	unhã̄	innī	inhã̄
Obl.	us	unhã̄	is	inhã̄

In the genitive, we have uddā as well as us-dā.

Who, jē, Ag. sing. jinī, Obl. sing. jis.

Who? kuṇ, Ag. sing. kunī, Obl. sing. kus, Gen. sing. kudā.

What? kyā, kē, Gen. kaidā.

Other pronouns are kōī, some one, any one; kichchh, something, anything.

Conjugation.—The verb substantive closely follows Kāṅgṛā. Thus:—

Present, I am, etc.

	Sing.	Plur.
1	hã̄	hã̄
2	haĩ	kã̄
3	hai	han, hin

The Past is thā, fem. thī, Pl. thē, fem. thīā̃. Once, in the specimen, we have the Pahāṛī thō, instead of thā.

The Active verb follows Kāṅgrā. Thus:—

Present Subjunctive (mārnā, to strike).

mārā̃, -ẽ, -ē, -ã̄ or -īē, ã̄, -an.

Future masc. sing. māhrghā, plur. māhrghē. This tense does not change for person. The feminine is formed in the usual way.

Pres. Part. mārdā.

Past Part. mārĕā. In the specimen, we have milā as well as milēā.

Mr. Grahame Bailey gives the present tense as formed in the usual way,—by suffixing the verb substantive to the present participle; thus, mārdā-hā̃, I strike. But, in the specimen, there is another present tense, in nā, resembling the infinitive in form. Thus karnā, I do (service). It will be remembered that the Ḍōgrā present participle may end in nā.

When r immediately precedes n, the two often become ṇ. Thus, marnā, I die, becomes maṇā, and karnā, to do, becomes kaṇā.

The following are examples of irregular verbs:—

Infinitive.	Pres. Part.	Past Part.	Future.	1 Pres. Subj.
pauṇā, to fall	pondā	pēā	põghā or paũghā	pauã̄.
hauṇā, to become	hundā	hōēā	huṅghā	hauã̄.
auṇā, to come	aundā	ayā	aũghā	auã̄.
jāṇā, to go	jandā	gēā, gā	jaṅghā	jã̄.
raihṇā, to remain	raihndā	rēhā	raihṅighā	rēhã̄.
baihṇā, to sit	baihndā	baiṭheā	baihṅighā	bauhã̄.
khāṇā, to eat	khāndā	khādhā	.....
pīṇā, to drink	pīndā	pītā	.....
dēṇā, to give	dindā	dittā	diṅghā
laiṇā, to take	.....	lēā	.....
galāṇā, to speak	.....	galayā or galāyā	.....
karnā or karṇā, to do	.....	kittā	.....

Note the short a in ayā, jandā, jaṅghā, and galayā.

SENTENCES.

1. What is your name?
   Tērā nã̄ kē hai?
2. How old is this horse?
   Is ghōṛēdī kitṇī umbar hai?
3. How far is it from here to Kashmīr?
   Itthẽ-kachhā (or itthū) Kashmīr kiṇe dūr hai?

4. How many sons are there in your father's house?
Tuāṛe babbēdē ghar kitṇē jāgat han?
5. I have walked a long way to-day.
Maĩ ajj baṛẽ dūrā-kachhā (or kichhā) haṇḍī ayā.
6. The son of my uncle is married to his sister.
Mērē chāchēdā jāgat usdī bhaiṇū-kanē biāhā hai.
7. In the house is the saddle of the white horse.
Gharē hachchhē ghōṛēdī kāṭhī hai.
8. Put the saddle upon his back.
Usdīā piṭṭhū-par kāṭhī bannhī dēā.
9. I have beaten his son much.
Maĩ usdā jāgat matā mārĕā.
10. He is grazing cattle on the top of the hill.
Sē dhārēdē rēhā uppur gauẽ-bakrīẽ chuṛāndā-hai.
11. He is sitting on a horse under that tree.
Sē us rukkhē-hēṭh ghōṛē uppur baiṭhĕā hai.
12. His brother is taller than his sister.
Uddā bhāī apṇīā bhēṇū- (or bhēṇā-)kachhā baḍḍā hai.
13. The price of that is two and a half rupees.
Usdā mul ḍhāī rupayyē hai.
14. My father lives in that small house.
Mērā babb (or bāpū) us halkē gharē raihndā-hai.
15. Give these rupees to him.
Uskĕā ēh rupayyē dēī-dēā.
16. Take those rupees from him.
Sē rupayyē us-kachhā lēī-lēā.
17. Beat him well and bind him with a rope.
Uskĕā jugtī karī mārō, jōṛīā-kannẽ bannhō.
18. Draw water from the well.
Khuhē-kachhā pāṇī kaḍḍhō.
19. Walk before me.
Maĩ aggē chalō.
20. Whose son comes behind you?
Kudā puttar tuāṛē pichchhē aundā hai?
21. From whom have you bought that?
Sē tuddh kus-kachhā mullẽ lēā-hai?
22. From a shopkeeper of the village.
Giṛāẽdē haṭīābāḷē-kachhā.

[No. 7.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY.

CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

BHAṬĔĀLĪ DIALECT.

(STATE CHAMBA.)

[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]

[No. 7.]

INDO-ARYAN FAMILY.

CENTRAL GROUP.

PAÑJĀBĪ.

BHAṬṬĒĀLĪ DIALECT. (STATE CHAMBA.)

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

Ikī-admīē-dē dō jātak thē. Unhā̃-vichchā nikkē babbē-
One-man-of two sons were. Them-from-in by-the-younger the-father-kanē galayā, 'hē bāpū, gharbārīdā hēsā jē mēkī mildāto it-was-said, 'O father, the-property-of share which to-me being-got-hai mēki dē.' Unnī gharbārī baṇḍī-dittī. Thōrĕā̃-rōjā̃- is to-me give.' By-him the-property was-divided-out. A-few-days-uprant nikkē-jātakē sabh-kichchh kiṭṭhā karī dūr-mulkhā-afterwards by-the-younger-son everything together having-made a-far-country-

5. kī gēā. Utē jāī-karī, jē apṇī gharbārī thī, sē to it-was-gone. There gone-having, what his-own property was, it luchpaṇē-vichch guāī. Jā̃ sabh mukī-gēā, us-mulkhēdebauchery-in was-lost. When all was-completed, that-country-vichch baṛā kāl pēā, atē ō kaṅkāl hōī-gēā. Tā̃ in a-great famine fell, and he poor became. Then us-mulkhē ik-sahukārē-kachh jāī rēhā. Unnī of-that-country a-merchant-near having-gone he-remained. By-him

apṇē-khētrā̃-vichch sūr chugāṇē-kī bhējā, atē usdī his-own-fields-in swine feeding-for he-was-sent, and him-of

10. marjī thī jē, 'jē chīj sūr khāndē-thē, sē maĩ bī khā̃.'
desire was that, 'what things the-swine eating-were, that I also may-eat.'

Apaṇ us-kī kōī dindā na thō. Tā̃ apṇīā
But him-to anyone giving not was. Then his-own surtī-vichch āī-karī, galāyā jē, 'mērē-babbēdē kitṇĕā̃ memory-in come-having, it-was-said that, 'my-father-of how-many

ਸਭਨਾਂ ਦਾ ਮੋਹਣਾ ਹਰਿ ਏਕੋ ਸੋਈ ਜੀ ਤੁਧੁ ਬਿਨੁ ਦੂਜਾ ਅਵਰੁ ਨ ਕੋਈ ਜੀ ॥੧॥

ਸਭ ਤੇਰੀ ਤੂ ਸਭਨਾ ਕਰਤਾ ਤੂ ਸਭ ਮਾਹਿ ਸਮਾਣਾ ਜੀ ਤੂ ਸਭ ਦੇਖਹਿ ਤੂ ਸਭ ਸੁਣਹਿ ਤੂ ਸਭ ਕਾ ਜਾਣਾ ਜੀ ॥

ਜੋ ਤੁਧੁ ਭਾਵੈ ਸੋਈ ਹੋਵੈ ਤੂ ਕਰਹਿ ਸੁ ਪਰਵਾਣਾ ਜੀ ॥ ਤੂ ਆਪੇ ਆਪਿ ਵਰਤਹਿ ਸਭ ਥਾਈ ਤੂ ਆਪੇ ਆਪਿ ਵਿਡਾਣਾ ਜੀ ॥

ਤੂ ਆਪੇ ਆਪਿ ਸਭਨਾ ਵਿਚਿ ਆਪੇ ਤੂ ਆਪੇ ਸਭ ਤੇ ਬਾਹਰਾ ਜੀ ॥ ਤੂ ਆਪੇ ਜਾਣਹਿ ਸਭ ਕੀ ਗਲ ਜਿਨਿ ਕੀਤੀ ਸੋ ਤੁਧੁ ਜਾਣੈ ਜੀ ॥

ਜਿਨਿ ਸੇਵਿਆ ਤਿਨਿ ਪਾਇਆ ਦਰਗਹ ਮਿਲਿਆ ਮਾਣੁ ਜੀ ॥ ਨਾਨਕ ਸਭਨਾ ਜੀਆ ਕਾ ਇਕੁ ਦਾਤਾ ਸੋ ਮੈ ਵਿਸਰਿ ਨ ਜਾਇ ਜੀ ॥

ਜਿਸ ਨੋ ਕਰਮਿ ਪਰਾਪਤਿ ਹੋਵੈ ਤਿਸ ਕੈ ਹਿਰਦੈ ਵਸਿਆ ਜੀ ॥ ਤਿਸ ਕੀ ਤਾਈ ਨਾਹੀ ਜਮ ਕੈ ਵਸਿ ਸਦਾ ਰਹੈ ਸੁਖਵਾਸਿਆ ਜੀ ॥

ਤਿਸ ਕੀ ਆਸ ਪੂਰੀ ਸਭ ਕਰਤਾ ਸੋ ਸਾਧੂ ਸਰਣਾਈ ਜੀ ॥ ਤਿਸ ਕੀ ਸੇਵਾ ਸੋਈ ਕਰੈ ਜਿਸ ਨੋ ਲਏ ਤੁਧੁ ਲਾਈ ਜੀ ॥

ਤਿਸ ਕੀ ਉਪਮਾ ਤੋਲਿ ਨ ਸਕਈ ਕਥਨਾ ਕਥੀ ਨ ਜਾਈ ਜੀ ॥ ਤਿਸ ਕੀ ਕੀਮਤਿ ਕਿਨੈ ਨ ਪਾਈ ਜੋ ਤੁਧੁ ਆਪਿ ਜਣਾਈ ਜੀ ॥

ਤਿਸ ਕੀ ਸੋਭਾ ਸਦਾ ਸੁਹੈਲੀ ਜਿਸ ਤੂ ਕਰਹਿ ਸਹਾਈ ਜੀ ॥ ਨਾਨਕ ਸਭਨਾ ਜੀਆ ਕਾ ਇਕੁ ਦਾਤਾ ਸੋ ਮੈ ਵਿਸਰਿ ਨ ਜਾਇ ਜੀ ॥

ਜਿਸ ਨੋ ਕਰਮਿ ਪਰਾਪਤਿ ਹੋਵੈ ਤਿਸ ਕੈ ਹਿਰਦੈ ਵਸਿਆ ਜੀ ॥ ਤਿਸ ਕੀ ਤਾਈ ਨਾਹੀ ਜਮ ਕੈ ਵਸਿ ਸਦਾ ਰਹੈ ਸੁਖਵਾਸਿਆ ਜੀ ॥

ਤਿਸ ਕੀ ਆਸ ਪੂਰੀ ਸਭ ਕਰਤਾ ਸੋ ਸਾਧੂ ਸਰਣਾਈ ਜੀ ॥ ਤਿਸ ਕੀ ਸੇਵਾ ਸੋਈ ਕਰੈ ਜਿਸ ਨੋ ਲਏ ਤੁਧੁ ਲਾਈ ਜੀ ॥

ਤਿਸ ਕੀ ਉਪਮਾ ਤੋਲਿ ਨ ਸਕਈ ਕਥਨਾ ਕਥੀ ਨ ਜਾਈ ਜੀ ॥ ਤਿਸ ਕੀ ਕੀਮਤਿ ਕਿਨੈ ਨ ਪਾਈ ਜੋ ਤੁਧੁ ਆਪਿ ਜਣਾਈ ਜੀ ॥

ਤਿਸ ਕੀ ਸੋਭਾ ਸਦਾ ਸੁਹੈਲੀ ਜਿਸ ਤੂ ਕਰਹਿ ਸਹਾਈ ਜੀ ॥ ਨਾਨਕ ਸਭਨਾ ਜੀਆ ਕਾ ਇਕੁ ਦਾਤਾ ਸੋ ਮੈ ਵਿਸਰਿ ਨ ਜਾਇ ਜੀ ॥

majūrā̃-kī rōṭīyā̃ hin, apaṇ maĩ bhūkhē̃ maṇā. Maĩ itē-servants-to loaves are, but I by-hunger die. I here-kachhā uṭhī-karī apṇē-babbē-kachh jāṅghā atē us-kī from arisen-having my-own-father-to will-go and him-to galāṅghā, "hē bāpū, maĩ surgēdā atē tērā gunāh kittā, huṇ will-say, "O father, by-me heaven-of and of-thee sin was-done, now maĩ is jōgā nahī jē tērā puttar baṇā̃. Apṇē-majūrā̃-vichchā

I (of-)this worthy not that thy son I-may-become. Thy-own-servants-from-in

5. ik-majūrā-sāhī mē-kī bī baṇā."' Tā̃ uṭhī-karī apṇē-babbē-one-servant-like me also make."' Then arisen-having his-own-father-kachh chalĕā. Ajē ō dūr thā jē usdē babbē-kī dīkhī-to he-went. Still he far was that him-of father-to seenkarī dard āī; dōṛī-karī us-kī galē-kanē lāyā, kanē-having pain came; run-having him-of neck-to he-was-applied, kisssunē dittē. Puttrē us-kī galāyā, 'hē bāpū, maĩ surgēdā ings were-given. By-the-son him-to it-was-said, 'O father, by-me heaven-of atē tērā pāp kittā, phirī is jōgā nahī jē tērā and of-thee sin was-done, again (of-)this worthy not that thy

10. puttar baṇā̃.' Babbē apṇĕā̃-nōkrā̃-kī galāyā jē, 'achchhē achchhē son I-may-become.' By-the-father his-own-servants-to it-was-said that, 'good good kapṛē kaḍḍhī lēī-auō, atē us-kī lāwauō; atē usdē clothes having-brought-out bring, and him-to apply; and him-of hatthē guṭṭhī, atē pairā̃ jutī; atē dhām lāō, jē asī on-hand a-ring, and on-feet shoes; and feasting apply, that we

ਉਹ: ਅਸੀ ਕੁਸੀ ਮਾਰੇ ਅਤੇ ਤੁ ਰੋ ਸੋਂ ਮੈ ਅੱਛੇ ਦੇ ਨੇ ਤੇ ਸਾਰ ਤੋਂ ਨਿਕਲ ਗਏ ਨੇ ਤੇ ਹਾਲੇ ਮਾਰੇ ਤੇ
ਨੇ ਕੁਸੀ ਅਤੇ ਨਾਂ

ਨਤੋਨਿਸਾਂ ਨੇ ਮੈ ਅੱਛੇ ਦੀ
ਨੇ ਤੇ ਨਾਂ ਦਾ ਸਮ ਨਾਂ ਨਾਂ ਨਾਂ ਤਰੇ ਨੇ ਉੱਤੇ ਨਾਂ
ਤੇ ਉਸ ਤੇਸਾ ਸਮ ਦਾ ਸਮ ਸਮ ਨਾਂ ਨੇ ਤੇ ਉੱਤੇ
ਉਸਮ ਮਾਰੇ ਤੇ ਤੇ ਤੇ ਤੇ ਤੇ ਤੇ ਤੇ ਤੇ ਤੇ ਤੇ
ਨਾਂ ਉਸ ਨੇ ਤੇ ਸਮ ਸਮ ਸਮ ਸਮ ਸਮ ਸਮ ਸਮ ਸਮ
ਸਮੇ ਸਮ ਤੇ ਸਮੇ ਨੇ ਤੇ ਨਾਂ ਤੇ ਸਮ ਸਮ ਸਮ ਸਮ
ਤੇ ਸਮ ਸਮ ਸਮ ਸਮ ਸਮ ਸਮ ਸਮ ਸਮ ਸਮ ਸਮ ਸਮ
ਸਮ ਸਮ ਸਮ ਸਮ ਸਮ ਸਮ ਸਮ ਸਮ ਸਮ ਸਮ ਸਮ ਸਮ
ਸਮ ਸਮ ਸਮ ਸਮ ਸਮ ਸਮ ਸਮ ਸਮ ਸਮ ਸਮ ਸਮ ਸਮ

khāī-karī khusī karīē; kīhā̃ jē ēh mērā puttar mōyādā eaten-having rejoicing may-make; because that this my son dead thā, huṇ jindā hōĕā; guāchī-gēā-thā, huṇ phirī milĕā.' Tā̃ was, now living became; lost-gone-was, now again was-found.' Then ō khusī kaṇā lagē.

they rejoicing to-do began.

Atē usdā baḍḍā puttar khētrē-vichch
And him-of the-great son the-field-in

thā. Jā̃ gharē-kachh ayā, gāṇē atē nachchṇēdī uwāj suṇī.
was. When the-house-near he-came, singing and dancing-of noise was-heard.

5. Tā̃ ikī-nōkrē-kī sadī-karī puchhĕā jē, 'ēh kē hai?' Unnī Then one-servant-to called-having it-was-asked that, 'this what is?' By-him us-kī galāyā jē, 'tērā bhāī ayā, atē tērē-babbē dhām him-to it-was-said that, 'thy brother came, and by-thy-father a-feast lāī, is-wāstē jē us-kī rājī-bājī milā.' Unnī was-applied, this-for that him-to safe-sound he-was-got.' By-him nikharī-karī na chāhĕā jē, 'andar jā̃.' Tā̃ usdē babbē bahār become-angry-having not it-was-wished that, 'within I-may-go.' Then him-of by-the-father outside āī-karī us-kī patyāyā. Unnī babbē-kī jubāb dittā jē, come-having him-to it-was-consoled. By-him the-father-to answer was-given that,

10. 'dīkh, maī itṇĕā̃-barsā̃-kachhā tērī ṭĕhal karnā, atē
'see, I so-many-years-from thy service do, and kadē tērē-galāyā-binā maī kōī gal nahī kittī; ever thy-word-without by-me any thing not was-done;

apaṇ tusā̃ ik bakrīdā chhēlū sarī-bī na dittā but by-you one goat-of kid even not was-given

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

5 [illegible]

[illegible]

jē maĩ apṇē-mitrā̃-kanē khusī karā̃. Jā̃ tērā ēh puttar ayā, that I my-own-friends-with happiness may-make. When thy this son came, jinī tērā māl luchpaṇē-vichch guāyā, tusā̃ dhām lāī.'

by-whom thy property debauchery-in was-lost, by-you a-feast was-applied.'

Unnī us-kī galāyā, 'hē puttar, tū sadā mērē-kachh rēhdā-haĩ,
By-him him-to it-was-said, 'O son, thou always of-me-near remainest, atē jē-kichchh mērā hai, sē tērā hai. Apaṇ khusī kaṇā, and whatever mine is, that thine is. But rejoicing to-do,

5. atē khusī hōṇā kharī gal hai; kihā̃ jē tērā ēh bhāī and rejoicing to-become proper thing is; because that thy this brother mōyādā thā, sē jindā hōĕā; guāchī-gēā-thā, huṇ milā.'

dead was, he living became; lost-gone-was, now was-got.'

LIST OF STANDARD WORDS

English.	Mājh (Amritsar).	Pōwādhī of Ambala.	Mālwāī (Ferozepore).
1. One	Ikk	Ikk	Ik
2. Two	Dō	Dō	Dō
3. Three	Tinn, trai	Tinn	Tinn
4. Four	Chār	Chār	Chār
5. Five	Pañj	Pañj	Pañj
6. Six	Chhai	Chhī	Chhī
7. Seven	Satt	Satt	Satt
8. Eight	Aṭṭh	Aṭṭh	Aṭṭh
9. Nine	Nau	Naũ	Naũ
10. Ten	Das	Das	Das
11. Twenty	Vīh	Bīh	Vīh, bīh
12. Fifty	Pañjāh	Pañjāh	Pañjāh
13. Hundred	Sau	Sau	Sau
14. I	Maĩ	Maĩ	Maĩ
15. Of me	Mērā	Mōrā	Mōrā
16. Mine	Mērā	Mōrā	Mōrā
17. We	Asī	Asī	Asĩ
18. Of us	Sāḍḍā	Sāḍā	Asāḍā, sāḍā
19. Our	Sāḍḍā	Sāḍā	Asāḍā, sāḍā
20. Thou	Tũ	Tũ	Tũ
21. Of thee	Tērā	Tērā	Tērā
22. Thine	Tērā	Tērā	Tērā
23. You	Tusī	Tusī	Tusĩ
24. Of you	Tuhāḍḍā	Tōhāḍā	Thuāḍā
25. Your	Tuhāḍḍā	Tōhāḍā	Thuāḍā

Ḍōgrī.	Kāṅgrā.	English.
Ik	Ikk	1. One.
Dō	Dō	2. Two.
Trai	Trai	3. Three.
Chār	Chōur	4. Four.
Pañj	Pañj	5. Five.
Chhē	Chhī, chhē	6. Six
Sat	Satt	7. Seven.
Aṭh	Aṭṭh	8. Eight.
Nau	Nau	9. Nine.
Das	Das	10. Ten.
Bīh	Bīh	11. Twenty.
Pañjāh	Pañjāh	12. Fifty.
Sau	Sau	13. Hundred.
Āũ	Maĩ	14. I.
Mērā	Mērā	15. Of me.
Mērā	Mērā	16. Mine.
As	Assã	17. We.
Sāṛā	Mhārā	18. Of us.
Sāṛā	Mhārā	19. Our.
Tũ	Tũ	20. Thou.
Tērā	Tērā	21. Of thee.
Tērā	Tērā	22. Thine.
Tus	Tussã	23. You.
Tusāṛā	Tamhārā, tumhārā, tussāḍā	24. Of you.
Tusāṛā	Tamhārā, tumhārā, tussāḍā	25. Your.

English.	Mājh (Amritsar).	Pōwādhī of Ambala.	Mālwāī (Ferozepore).
26. He	Uh	Ōh	Ōh
27. Of him	Uhdā	Ōhdā	Ōhdā
28. His	Uhdā	Ōhdā	Ōhdā
29. They	Uh	Ōh	Ōh
30. Of them	Unhãdā, unhdā	Unhãdā	Ōhnã-dā
31. Their	Unhãdā, unhdā	Unhãdā	Ōhnã-dā
32. Hand	Hatth	Hatth	Hatth
33. Foot	Pair	Pair	Pair
34. Nose	Nakk	Nakk	Nakk
35. Eye	Akkh	Akkh	Akkh
36. Mouth	Mũh	Mũh	Mũh
37. Tooth	Dand	Dand	Dand
38. Ear	Kann	Kann	Kann
39. Hair	Wāl, kēs	Wāl, kēs	Bāl, wāl
40. Head	Sir	Sir	Sir
41. Tongue	Jībh	Jībh	Jībh
42. Belly	Ḍhiḍḍh, ḍhiḍḍ, pēṭ	Ḍhiḍ	Ḍhiḍ
43. Back	Piṭṭh	Piṭṭh	Piṭṭh, kaṇḍ, ḍhūī
44. Iron	Lōhā	Lōhā	Lōhā
45. Gold	Siōnnā, sōnnā	Sōnā	Sōnã, sōēnã
46. Silver	Chãdī	Chāndī	Chãdī
47. Father	Piu, piō, bāppū, bāpū	Piu	Pēō, bāpū
48. Mother	Mã, māī, bēbbē	Mã	Mã
49. Brother	Bharā, vīr, bhāī	Bhāī, bhāīā, bharā	Bharā
50. Sister	Bhaiṇ	Bhaiṇ	Bhain
51. Man	Manukkh, mānas, ādmī	Manukkh, māṇus, ādmī	Manukkh, ādmī

Ḍōgrī.	Kāṅgrā.	English.
Ō, oh	Oh, seh, saih . . .	26. He.
Uḥdā	Usdā, uddā, tisdā, tiddā .	27. Of him.
Uhdā	Usdā, uddā, tisdā, tiddā .	28. His.
Ō, oh	Oh, seh, saih . . .	29. They.
Ũdā	Unãdā, unhãdā, tinãdā, tinhãdā.	30. Of them.
Ũdā	Unãdā, unhãdā, tinãdā, tinhãdā.	31. Their.
Hath	Hatth	32. Hand.
Pair	Pair	33. Foot.
Nak	Nakk	34. Nose.
Akh	Hakkhī, hākhī, bākhar .	35. Eye.
Mũh	Mũh	36. Mouth.
Dand	Dãd . . .	37. Tooth.
Kann	Kann	38. Ear.
Bāl	Bāl, saraul (hair of the head).	39. Hair.
Sir	Sir, muṇḍ . . .	40. Head.
Jībh	Jībh	41. Tongue.
Ḍhiḍ	Pēṭ, ḍhiḍ . . .	42. Belly.
Piṭṭhī	Piṭṭh	43. Back.
Lōhā	Lōhā	44. Iron.
Sōnā	Sunnā	45. Gold.
Chãdī	Chãdī, ruppā . . .	46. Silver.
Bab, babbā . . .	Babb	47. Father.
Mā	Ammã, mā . . .	48. Mother.
Bharā	Bhāū	49. Brother.
Bhain	Bâiḥn, bhain, bōbō . .	50. Sister.
Ādmī	Māhṇū, maṇukkh, māṇas, ādmī.	51. Man.

English.	Mājh (Amritsar).	Pōwādhī of Ambala.	Mālwāī (Ferozepore).
53. Wife	Wōhṭī, rann	Bauhṭī	Rann, wauṭī
54. Child	Bachchā	Putt (masc.), dhī (fem.)	Chhōhr, muṇḍā
55. Son	Putt, puttar	Putt, puttar, muṇḍā	Putt, bēṭā
56. Daughter	Dhī, kākkī, kuṛī	Dhī, kuṛī	Dhī
57. Slave	Gōllā	Gulām	Gulām, gōlā
58. Cultivator	Jimīdār	Jimīndār	Kirsān
59. Shepherd	Ājālī	Gaḍariā	Ayālī
60. God	Rabb, Wāh-gurū	Rabb, Wōh-gurū, Rām, Allā, Khudā.	Rabb
61. Devil	Bhūt, parēt	Bhūt	Śatan
62. Sun	Sūraj	Sūraj	Suraj
63. Moon	Chand	Chand	Chand
64. Star	Tārā	Tārā	Tārā
65. Fire	Agg, basantar	Agg	Agg
66. Water	Pāṇī, jal	Pāṇī, jal	Pānī
67. House	Ghar, kullā	Ghar	Ghar
68. Horse	Ghōṛā, ṭaṭṭū	Ghōṛā	Ghōṛā
69. Cow	Gā, gaū	Gaū	Gā
70. Dog	Kuttā	Kuttā	Kuttā
71. Cat	Billī	Billī	Billī
72. Cock	Kukkaṛ	Kukkaṛ	Kukkaṛ
73. Duck	Battak	Battag	Battakh
74. Ass	Khottā, gadhā	Khōtā	Gadhā, khōtā
75. Camel	Uṭṭh	Ūṭh	Ūṭh, Ōṭh
76. Bird	Pakhērū	Pachchhī	Pañchhī
77. Go	Jāh	Jā	Jā
78. Eat	Khāh	Khā	Khā
79. Sit	Bauh, baith

Ḍōgrī.	Kāṅgrā.	English.
Lāṛī	Lāṛī, junās, trīmat, janānnā	53. Wife.
Jātak	Jātak, nikā-chukā . .	54. Child.
Puttar	Jātak, puttar . . .	55. Son.
Dhī	Dhī, kuṛī	56. Daughter.
Gulām	Gulām, kāmmā . .	57. Slave.
Sāmī	Pāhū	58. Cultivator.
Charwāl	Guālū	59. Shepherd.
Parmēsar	Parmēśar, Ṭhākar . .	60. God.
Pisāch	Shatān	61. Devil.
Sūraj	Sūraj	62. Sun.
Chann	Chandarmā̃ . . .	63. Moon.
Tārā	Tārā	64. Star.
Āg	Agg	65. Fire.
Pānī	Pāṇī	66. Water.
Ghar	Ghar	67. House.
Ghoṛā	Ghōṛā	68. Horse.
Gāo	Gā	69. Cow.
Kuttā	Kuttā	70. Dog.
Billī	Billī	71. Cat.
Kukkaṛ	Kukkaṛ	72. Cock.
Battak	Batk	73. Duck.
Khōtā	Khōtā, gadhā . . .	74. Ass.
Ūṭ	Ūṭ	75. Camel.
Pakhērū	Pañchhī	76. Bird.
Jā	Jā	77. Go.
Khā	Khā	78. Eat.

English.	Mājh (Amritsar).	Pōwādhī of Ambala.	Mālwāī (Ferozepore).
80. Come	Ā	Ā	Ā
81. Beat	Mār	Mār, kuṭṭ	Mār
82. Stand	Khalō, uṭh	Uṭṭh	Khaṛā-hō, khaṛō
83. Die	Mar	Mar	Mar
84. Give	Dēh	Dē	Dē
85. Run	Nass, bhajj, dauṛ	Bhagg, nas, dōṛ	Bhajj
86. Up	Utte, uppar	Uttē	Uttō
87. Near	Nēṛē, kōl	Kōl, nēṛē	Nēṛē
88. Down	Hēthā̃	Hēṭhā̃	Hēṭh
89. Far	Dūr, durāḍḍā	Dūr	Dūr
90. Before	Aggē, sāmnē, agēṛē	Aggē	Aggē
91. Behind	Pichchhē	Pichchhē	Pichchhē
92. Who	Kauṇ, kēhṛā	Kehṛā	Kōhṛā, kaun
93. What	Kī	Kī	Kī
94. Why	Kiũ	Kāhnũ	Kiyũ, kiõ
95. And	Hōr, atē, tē, ar	Hōr	Hōr, aur, tē
96. But	Muṛ, par	Par	Par, nālē
97. If	Jē, jad, jadõ	Jē	Jē, jēkar
98. Yes	Hā̃, āhō, halā	Hā̃, āh	Hā̃, āhō
99. No	Nahĩ, nā	Nā̃h	Naĩ, nā
100. Alas	Hāē-hāē, ōh-hō	Ōhō, masōs	Hāhā, amsōs
101. A father	Piō	Piu	Pēō
102. Of a father	Piōdā	Piudā	Pēōdā
103. To a father	Piōnũ	Piunũ	Pēōnũ
104. From a father	Piō-thõ	Piu-thõ, piu-kōlõ	Pēō-tõ
105. Two fathers	Dō piō	Dō piu	Dō pēō
106. Fathers	Pi-

Ḍōgrī.	Kāṅgrā.	English.
Ā	Ā	80. Come.
Mār	Mār	81. Beat.
Kharō	Kharṛōi-jā . . .	82. Stand.
Mar	Mar	83. Die.
Dēh	Dē	84. Give.
Dauṛ	Dauṛ, naṭṭh, khiṭṭ-dē .	85. Run.
Uppar	Uppar	86. Up.
Nēṛai	Nēṛē	87. Near.
Khalh	Bunh, chikk, hēṭh . .	88. Down.
Dūr	Dūr	89. Far.
Aggẽ	Aggē, samhṇē . .	90. Before.
Pichchhẽ	Pachãh, pichchhē . .	91. Behind.
Kaun, kun . . .	Kuṇ	92. Who.
Kih, keh . . .	Kyā, kiā . . .	93. What.
Kī	Kajō	94. Why.
Hōr	Kanē	95. And.
Par	Par	96. But.
Jēkar	Jē	97. If.
Hã̄	Hã̄	98. Yes.
Nã̄	Ṇã̄, nahĩ . . .	99. No.
Masōs	Hāē	100. Alas.
Bab, babbā . . .	Babb	101. A father.
Babbaidā . . .	Bābbedā	102. Of a father.
Babbaigī . . .	Babbejō, baḅbe-kī .	103. To a father.
Babbai-kachhā . .	Baḅbe-tē	104. From a father.
Dō bab	Dō babb	105. Two fathers.

English.	Mājh (Amritsar).	Pōwādhī of Ambala.	Mālwāī (Ferozepore).
107. Of fathers	Piõdā	Piwãdā	Pēwãdā
108. To fathers	Piõnũ	Piwãnũ	Pēwãnũ
109. From fathers	Piõ-thõ	Piwã-thõ, piwã-kōlõ	Pewã-tõ
110. A daughter	Kākkī	Dhī	Dhī
111. Of a daughter	Kākkīdā	Dhīdā	Dhīdā
112. To a daughter	Kākkīnũ	Dhīnũ	Dhīnũ
113. From a daughter	Kākkī-thõ	Dhī-thõ, -kōlõ	Dhī-tõ
114. Two daughters	Dō kākkiãã	Dō dhiãã	Dō dhiãã
115. Daughters.	Kākkiãã	Dhiãã	Dhiãã
116. Of daughters	Kākkiãdā	Dhiãdā	Dhiãdā
117. To daughters	Kākkiãnũ	Dhiãnũ	Dhiãnũ
118. From daughters	Kākkiã-thõ	Dhiã-thõ, -kōlõ	Dhiã-tõ
119. A good man	Ikk bhalā mānas	Ikk bhalā manukkh	Ik chaṅgā manukkh
120. Of a good man	Ikk bhalē mānasdā	Ikk bhalē manukkhdā	Ik chaṅgē manukkhdā
121. To a good man	Ikk bhalē mānasnũ	Ikk bhalē manukkhnũ	Ik chaṅgē manukkhnũ
122. From a good man	Ikk bhalē mānas-thõ	Ikk bhalē manukkh-thõ, -kōlõ.	Ik chaṅgē manukkh-tõ
123. Two good men	Dō bhalē mānas	Dō bhalē manukkh	Dō chaṅgē manukkh
124. Good men	Bhalē mānas	Bhalē manukkh	Chaṅgē manukkh
125. Of good men	Bhalē mānsãdā	Bhalē manukkhãdā	Chaṅgē manukkhãdā
126. To good men	Bhalē mānsãnũ	Bhalē manukkhãnũ	Chaṅgē manukkhãnũ
127. From good men	Bhalē mānsã-thõ	Bhalē manukkhã-thõ, -kōlõ	Chaṅgē manukkhã-tõ
128. A good woman	Ikk bhalī tĩvĩ	Ikk bhalī tīvĩ	Ik chaṅgī tīmĩ
129. A bad boy	Ikk kupattā muṇḍā	Ikk burā muṇḍā	Bhaiṛā muṇḍā
130. Good women	Bhaliãã tĩvĩãã	Bhalī tĩviãã	Chaṅgiãã tīmiãã
131. A bad girl	Ikk bhaiṛī kuṛī	Ikk burī kuṛī	Bhaiṛī kuṛī
132. Good	Bhalā, chaṅgā	Chaṅgā, achchhā, bhalā	Chaṅgā
133. Better

Ḍōgrī.	Kāṅgrā.	English.
Babbaj̃dā . . .	Babbā̃dā	107. Of fathers.
Babbaĩgī . . .	Babbā̃jō, babbā̃-kī . .	108. To fathers.
Babbaĩ-kachhā . .	Babbā̃-tē . . .	109. From fathers.
Dhī	Dhī	110. A daughter.
Dhīdā	Dhīādā	111. Of a daughter.
Dhīgī	Dhīājō, dhīā-kī . .	112. To a daughter.
Dhī-kachhā . . .	Dhīā-tē	113. From a daughter.
Dō dhīā̃	Dō dhīā̃	114. Two daughters.
Dhīā̃	Dhīā̃	115. Daughters.
Dhīẽdā	Dhīā̃dā	116. Of daughters.
Dhīẽgī	Dhīā̃jō, dhīā-kī . .	117. To daughters.
Dhīẽ-kachhā . . .	Dhīā̃-tē	118. From daughters.
Ik kharā ādmī . .	Ikk kharā māṇas . .	119. A good man.
Ik kharē ādmīdā . .	Ikk khare māṇasedā .	120. Of a good man.
Ik kharē ādmī-kachh .	Ikk khare māṇasejo (-kī) .	121. To a good man.
Ik kharē ādmī-kachhā .	Ikk khare māṇase-tē .	122. From a good man.
Dō kharē ādmī . . .	Dō khare māṇas . .	123. Two good men.
Kharē ādmī . . .	Khare (or kharā̃) māṇasā̃ .	124. Good men.
Kharē ādmīā̃dā . .	Khare (or kharā̃) māṇasā̃dā	125. Of good men.
Kharē ādmīā̃-kachh . .	Khare (or kharā̃) māṇasā̃jō, (-kī).	126. To good men.
Kharē ādmīā̃-kachhā . .	Khare (or kharā̃) māṇasā̃-tē.	127. From good men.
Ik kharī janānī . .	Ikk junās bhalī māṇas .	128. A good woman.
Ik kachchā lauṛā . .	Ikk burā muṇḍū . .	129. A bad boy.
Kharī janānīā̃ . . .	Khariā̃ trīmatī̃ (or māṇasī̃)	130. Good women.
Ik kachchī kuṛī . .	Ikk burī kuṛī . . .	131. A bad girl.
Kharā	Kharā, bhalā, achchā .	132. Good.

English.	Mājh (Amritsar).	Pōwādhī of Ambala.	Mālwāī (Ferozepore).
134. Best	Sabbnā̃-thō̃ chaṅgā (better than all).	Ḍāhḍā chaṅgā	Bāhlā-ī chaṅgā
135. High	Uchchā	Uchchā	Uchchā
136. Higher	Hōrnā̃-thō̃ uchchā	Bōhat uchchā	Bāhlā uchchā
137. Highest	Sabbnā̃-thō̃ uchchā	Sabh-thō̃ uchchā	Bāhlā-ī uchchā
138. A horse	Ghōṛā	Ghōṛā	Ghōṛā
139. A mare	Ghōṛī	Ghōṛī	Ghōṛī
140. Horses	Ghōṛē	Ghōṛē	Ghōṛē
141. Mares	Ghōṛīā̃	Ghōṛīā̃	Ghōṛīā̃
142. A bull	Sāhn	Sāhḍā	Dhattā, sāhan
143. A cow	Gā̃	Gaū	Gā̃
144. Bulls	Sāhn	Sā̃hḍē	Dhattē
145. Cows	Gāīā̃	Gaūā̃	Gāīā̃
146. A dog	Kuttā	Kuttā	Kuttā
147. A bitch	Kuttī	Kutti	Kuttī
148. Dogs	Kuttē	Kuttē	Kuttē
149. Bitches	Kuttīā̃	Kuttīā̃	Kuttīā̃
150. A he goat	Bakrā	Barhā	Bakkrā
151. A female goat	Bakrī	Barhī	Bakkrī
152. Goats	Bakrē	Barhē	Bakkarīā̃
153. A male deer	Haran	Haraṇ	Harn
154. A female deer	Harni	Harṇī	Harnī
155. Deer	Haran	Haraṇ	Harn
156. I am	Maĩ hā̃	Maĩ hā̃	Maĩ hā̃
157. Thou art	Tū haĩ	Tū haĩ	Tū haĩ, hai
158. He is	Uh hai, ī	Ōh hai	Ōh hai
159. We are	Asī hā̃, haĩ	Asī hā̃	Asī hā̃

Ḍōgrī.	Kāṅgrā.	English.
Matē-gai kharē . . .	Bauht-hī kharā . . .	134. Best.
Uchchā	Uchchā	135. High.
Matā uchchā . . .	Bauht uchchā . . .	136. Higher.
Matē-gai uchchē . .	Bauht-hī uchcha . .	137. Highest.
Ghōrā	Ghōṛā	138. A horse.
Ghōṛī	Ghōṛī	139. A mare.
Ghōṛē	Ghōṛe	140. Horses.
Ghōṛīā̃	Ghōṛīā̃	141. Mares.
Sāhn	Sāhn	142. A bull.
Gāō	Gā	143. A cow.
Sāhn	Sāhn	144. Bulls.
Gavẽ	Gāĩ	145. Cows.
Kuttā	Kuttā	146. A dog.
Kuttī	Kuttī	147. A bitch.
Kuttē	Kutte	148. Dogs.
Kuttīā̃	Kuttīā̃	149. Bitches.
Bakrā	Bakrā, bakrū . . .	150. A he goat.
Bakrī	Bakrī	151. A female goat.
Bakrīā̃	Bakrū	152. Goats.
Harn	Harn	153. A male deer.
Harnī	Harnī	154. A female deer.
Harn	Harn	155. Deer.
Ãũ hã̃, ã̃ . . .	Maĩ hã̃	156. I am.
Tū hẽ̃, ẽ̃ . . .	Tū hē, hai . . .	157. Thou art.
Oh hai, ai, ē . . .	Seh hẽ̃, hai . . .	158. He is.
As haĩ, aĩ, ẽ̃ . . .	Assã̃ hã̃, haĩ, hũ . .	159. We are.

Ḍōgrī.	Kāṅgrā.	English.
Oh haĩ, aĩ, ẽ . . .	Seh hã̃, haĩ, hin, han .	161. They are.
Āũ sā, thā, sã̃ . . .	Maĩ thā, thū . . .	162. I was.
Tũ sā, thā . . .	Tū thā, thū . . .	163. Thou wast.
Oh sā, thā . . .	Seh thā, thū . . .	164. He was.
As sē, thē . . .	Assã̃ the	165. We were.
Tus sē, thē . . .	Tussã̃ the . . .	166. You were.
Oh sē, thē . . .	Seh the	167. They were.
Hō	Hō	168. Be.
Hōnā	Hōṇā	169. To be.
Hundā	Hōndā	170. Being.
Hōī-kē, hōiē . . .	Hōī-kē	171. Having been.
Āũ hōã̃	Maĩ hōã̃	172. I may be.
Āũ hoṅ	Maĩ hũ̃gā, hõ̃ghā, bhōlā .	173. I shall be.
Āũ hundā . . .	.....	174. I should be.
Mār	Mār	175. Beat.
Mārnā	Mārṇā	176. To beat.
Mardā, mārnā . . .	Mārdā	177. Beating.
Mārīē	Mārī-kē	178. Having beaten.
Āũ mārnā, mārdā . .	Maĩ mārdā-hã̃ . . .	179. I beat.
Tũ mārnā, mārdā . .	Tū mārdā-hē . . .	180. Thou beatest.
Oh mārnā, mārdā . .	Seh mārdā-hē . . .	181. He beats.
As mārnā, mārdā . .	Assã̃ mārde-hã̃ . . .	182. We beat.
Tus mārnā, mārdā . .	Tussã̃ mārde-hã̃ . .	183. You beat.
Oh mārnā, mārdā . .	Seh marde-hã̃ . . .	184. They beat.
Mẽ māriā . . .	Maĩ māriā . . .	185. I beat (Past Tense).
Tudh māriā . .	Taĩ (or tudh) māriā . .	186. Thou beatest (Past Tense).

English.	Mājh (Amritsar).	Pōwādhī of Ambala.	Mālwāī (Ferozepore).
I beat (Past Tense) .	Asāṇaĩ māriā . . .	Asã̃ māriā . . .	Asĩ māriā . .
ou beat (Past Tense)	Tusāṇaĩ māriā . .	Tusã̃ māriā . . .	Tusĩ māriā . .
hey beat (Past Tense)	Unhāṇaĩ māriā . . .	Ōnhã̃ māriā . . .	Ōhnã̃-nē māriā . .
am beating . .	Maĩ mārdā-hã̃ . .	Maĩ mārdā-hã̃ . . .	Maĩ mārdā-hã̃ .
was beating . .	Maĩ mārdā-sī . . .	Maĩ mārdā-sī . . .	Maĩ mārdā-sã̃ . .
had beaten . .	Maĩnaĩ māriā-sī . .	Maĩ māriā-sī . . .	Maĩ māriā-sī . .
may beat . .	Maĩ mārã̃ . . .	Maĩ mārã̃ . . .	Maĩ mārã̃ . .
shall beat . .	Maĩ mārãgā . . .	Maĩ mārãgā . . .	Maĩ mārãgā . .
ou wilt beat . .	Tũ mārēgā . . .	Tũ mārēgā . . .	Tũ mārēgā . .
will beat . .	Uh mārēgā . . .	Ōh mārūgā . . .	Ōh mārēgā . .
shall beat . .	Asī mārãgē . . .	Asī mārãgē . . .	Asĩ mārãgē . .
a will beat . .	Tusī mārōgē . . .	Tusī mārōgē . . .	Tusĩ mārōgē . .
ey will beat . .	Uh mārēgē . . .	Ōh māraṇgē . . .	Ōh mārangē . .
ould beat . .	.....	.....	.....
n beaten . .	Maĩnũ mār paindī-hai .	Maĩnũ mār paī . . .	Mainũ māriā-hai . .
as beaten . .	Maĩnũ mār paindī-sī .	Maĩnũ mār paī-sī . .	Mainũ māriā-sī . .
all be beaten .	Maĩnũ mār paũ . .	Maĩnũ mār paiēgī . .	Mainũ mārēgā . .
. . .	Maĩ jāndā-hã̃, jānnā-hã̃ .	Maĩ jāndā-hã̃ (or jānã-hã̃, and so throughout).	Maĩ jãdā (or jānā)-hã̃ .
a goest . .	Tũ jāndā-haĩ, jānnā-haĩ .	Tũ jāndā-haĩ . . .	Tũ jãdā-haĩ . . .
oes . . .	Uh jāndā-hai, jānnā-hai .	Ōh jāndā-hai . . .	Ōh jãdā-hai . . .
go . . .	Asī jānnē-haĩ, etc. . .	Asī jāndē-hã̃ . . .	Asĩ jãdē-hã̃ . . .
go . . .	Tusī jānnē-hō, etc. . .	Tusī jāndē-ō . . .	Tusĩ jãdē-hō . . .
go . . .	Uh jānnē-haĩ, etc. . .	Ōh jāndē-haĩṇ . . .	Ōh jãdē-han . .
nt . . .	Maĩ gīa	Maĩ gēā	Maĩ giyā . . .
wentest . .	Tũ giā	Tũ gēā	Tũ giyā . . . .
vent . . .	Uh giā	Ōh gēā	Ōh giyā . . . .

Dōgrī.	Kāṅgrā.	English.
Asẽ māria . . .	Assã māriā . . .	188. We beat (Past Tense).
Tusẽ māriā . . .	Tussã māriā . . .	189. You beat (Past Tense).
Unẽ māriā . . .	Tinã (or tinhã) māriā .	190. They beat (Past Tense).
Āñ mārdā-ã . . .	Maĩ mārdā-hã . . .	191. I am beating.
Āñ mārdā-sã . . .	Maĩ mārdā-thā . .	192. I was beating.
Mẽ māriā-sā . . .	Maĩ māriā-thā . .	193. I had beaten.
Āñ mārã . . .	Maĩ mārã . . .	194. I may beat.
Āñ māraṅ . . .	Maĩ mārgā, mārghā, mārãgā	195. I shall beat.
Tũ mārgā . . .	Tũ mārgā, mārghā . .	196. Thou wilt beat.
Oh mārag . . .	Seh mārgā, mārghā . .	197. He will beat.
As māraṅ . . .	Assã mārge, mārghe .	198. We shall beat.
Tus mārgiō . . .	Tussã mārge, mārghe .	199. You will beat.
Oh mārgan . . .	Seh mārge, mārghe . .	200. They will beat.
Āñ mardā . . .	...	201. I should beat.
Migī mār paī-ē . .	Minjō mārdā-hai . .	202. I am beaten.
Migī mār paī-sī . .	Minjō mariā . . .	203. I was beaten.
Migī mār pawag . .	Minjō mārghā . . .	204. I shall be beaten.
Āñ jānā (or jãdā) ã . .	Maĩ jãdā-hã . . .	205. I go.
Tũ jānā (jãdā)-ẽ . .	Tũ jãdā-hē . . .	206. Thou goest.
Oh jānā (jãdā)-ō . .	Seh jãdā-hē . . .	207. He goes.
As jānō (jãdō)-ã . .	Assã jãde-hã . . .	208. We go.
Tus jānō (jãdō)-ō . .	Tussã jãde-hã . . .	209. You go.
Oh jānō (jãdō)-ẽ . .	Seh jãde-hã . . .	210. They go.
Āñ gia, gayā . . .	Maĩ giā	211. I went.
Tũ giā, gayā . . .	Tũ giā	212. Thou wentest.
Oh giā . . .	Seh giā . . .	213. He went.

English.	Mājh (Amritsar)	Pōwādhī of Ambala.	Mālwāī (Ferozepore).
215. You went . .	Tusī gaē . . .	Tusī gaē	Tusī̃ gaē . . .
216. They went . .	Uh gaē	Ōh gaē	Ōh gaē . . . .
217. Go	Jāh	Jā	Jā . . . . .
218. Going . . .	Jāndā, jānnā . . .	Jāndā	Jā̃dā . . . .
219. Gone . . .	Giā	Gēā	Giyā . . . .
220. What is your name ? .	Tuhāḍḍā nā̃ kī hai ? . .	Tuhāḍā kī nā hai ? . .	Thuāḍā kī nā̃ hai ? .
221. How old is this horse ?	Ēh ghōṛā kinnē warihā̃dā hai ?	Ēs ghōṛēdī kī umar hai ? .	Ēs ghōṛēdī kinnī umar hai ?
222. How far is it from here to Kashmir ?	Aitthō̃ Kasmīr kinnā hai ?	Aithō̃ Kasmīr kinnā hai ? .	Kaśmīr ēthō̃ kinnī̃ wāṭ hai ?
223. How many sons are there in your father's house ?	Tuhāḍḍē piōdē ghar kinnē puttar han ?	Tuhāḍē piudē ghar kinnē puttar han ?	Thuāḍē peōdē kinnē̃ putt han ?
224. I have walked a long way to-day.	Āj maĩ barā paiṇḍā kītā-hai.	Ajj maĩ baṛā paĩḍā kītā .	Ajj maĩ bāhlā ṭuriā-phiriā-hā̃.
225. The son of my uncle is married to his sister.	Mērē tāēdā putt uhdī bhaiṇ nāl biāhā-hai.	Mērē chāchēdē puttardā biāh ōsdī bhaiṇ nāl hōiā-hai.	Mērā bharā chāchēdā putt ōhdī bhaindē nāl viāhiā-hōyā-hai.
226. In the house is the saddle of the white horse.	Chiṭṭē ghōṛēdī kāṭhī gharich hai.	Chiṭṭē ghōṛēdī kāṭhī ghar vichch hai.	Ghar-vich baggē ghōṛēdī kāṭhī hai.
227. Put the saddle upon his back.	Uhdī piṭṭh-tai kāṭhī pā .	Ōhdī piṭṭh-tē kāṭhī pā-dēō .	Kāṭhī ōhdī piṭh-tō pā-dō .
228. I have beaten his son with many stripes.	Maĩnaĩ uhdē puttnū baṛē kōṭlē mārē.	Maĩ ōhdē puttnū baṛē chābak mārē.	Maĩ ōhdē puttnū̃ kōṛṛiā-nāl kuṭṭiā.
229. He is grazing cattle on the top of the hill.	Uh pahāṛīdī chōṭṭī-tai ḍaṅgar charā-rihā-ī.	Ōh pahāṛīdē ṭibbē-tē ḍaṅgar charāōndā-hai.	Ōh pahāṛīdī chōṭī-uttō māl charāũdā-hai.
230. He is sitting on a horse under that tree.	Uh us rukkhdē hēṭh ghōṛē-tē baiṭhā-hōiā hai.	Ōh rukhdē hēṭhā̃ ghōṛē-tē chaṛiā khalōtā-hai.	Ōh us rukhdē hēṭh ghōṛē-tō chaṛiā baiṭhā-hai.
231. His brother is taller than his sister.	Uhdā bharā uhdī bhaiṇ kōlō̃ lammā hai.	Ōhdā bharā ōhdī bhaiṇ nālō̃ uchchā hai.	Ōhdā bharā ōhdī bhain-nālō̃ uchchā hai.
232. The price of that is two rupees and a half.	Uhdā mull ḍhāī rapaiē hai.	Ōhdā mull ḍhāī rappiē haĩ .	Ōhdā mul ḍhāī rupaiyē hai .
233. My father lives in that small house.	Mērā piō us chhōṭē gharich rahindā-hai.	Mērā piu ōs chhōṭē ghar-vichch raihndā-hai.	Mērā pēō ōs chhōṭē ghar-vich raihndā-hai.
234. Give this rupee to him.	Ēh rapaiā uhnū dēh .	Ēh rappiā ōsnū̃ dē-dēō .	Ēh rupaiyā ōhnū̃ dēh .
235. Take those rupees from him.	Ōhdē kōlō̃ ōh rapaiē lai-lai.	Ōh rappiē ōs-kōlō̃ lai-laō .	Ōh rupaiyē ōs-tō̃ lai-lai .
236. Beat him well and bind him with ropes.	Ōhnū̃ khūb phaṇḍō tē rasiā̃ nāl muṣkā̃ bannhō.	Ōhnū̃ chaṅgī tarā̃ mārō, tē rassiā̃ nāl bannh laō.	Ōhnū̃ chaṅgī tarā̃ mār-kuṭṭ-kē rassiā̃-nāl bann-diyō.
237. Draw water from the well.	Khūō̃ pānī khichch . .	Khūhchō̃ pāṇī khichchō .	Khūh vichchō̃ pānī̃ kaḍḍhō
238. Walk before me .	Mērē aggē aggē chal .	Mērē aggē challō . .	Mērē sāmnē ṭur-phir .
239. Whose boy comes behind you ?	Tuhāḍḍē pichchhē kihdā muṇḍā āndā-ī ?	Tuhāḍē pichchhē kihdā muṇḍā āōndā-hai ?	Kihdā muṇḍā tērē pichchhē āũdā-hai ?
240. From whom did you buy that ?	Tusī ōh kihdē kōlō̃ mull littā-sī ?	Tusā̃ ōh kihdē-kōlō̃ mull lēā-hai ?	Tusā̃ ēh chīj kihdē kōlō̃ mull lai-hai ?

Dōgrī.	Kāṅgṛā.	English.
Tus gaē	Tussā gae . .	215. You went.
Oh gae	Seh gae	216. They went.
Jā	Jā	217. Go.
Jānā, jāḍā . . .	Jāī-kē	218. Going.
Giā, gayā . . .	Giā	219. Gone.
Tusāṛā kih nā ai ? . .	Tussāḍā kiā nā hai ? .	220. What is your name ?
Us ghōṛedi umar kih ai ? .	Eh ghōṛā kitniā barihādā hai ?	221. How old is this horse ?
Ithō Kasmīr kinnī dūr ai ?	Itthū-tō Kaśmīr kitnī dūr hai ?	222. How far is it from here to Kashmir ?
Tēre babbaide ghar kinnē puttar hain ?	Tussāḍe babbede ghar kitne jātak han ?	223. How many sons are there in your father's house ?
Aj maĭ baṛa phiriā . .	Maĭ ajj baṛī dūr jāī āiā .	224. I have walked a long way to-day.
Mērō chachedā puttar usdi dhiī kannē bihāyā-giā ai.	Mēre chāchedā puttar tiddiā baihnī kane biāhiā-hai.	225. The son of my uncle is married to his sister.
Chiṭṭe ghōṛedi kāṭhī ghar ai.	Ghare bich chiṭṭe ghōṛedī kāṭhī-hai.	226. In the house is the saddle of the white horse.
Kaṭhī usdi piṭṭhī-par rakkh.	Kāṭhī tiddiā piṭṭhī uppar pāi-dē.	227. Put the saddle upon his back.
Aj maĭ usde puttraigī matē kōṛē mārē.	Maĭ tidde puttrejō korṛiā-kane māriā.	228. I have beaten his son with many stripes.
Oh pahāṛdi chōṭi-par ḍaṅgar chārdā-ē.	Seh dhārādiā chuṇḍiā uppar ḍaṅgar chārā kardā-hai.	229. He is grazing cattle on the top of the hill.
Oh us rukkhai-hēṭh ghōṛe-par baiṭha-dā-ai.	Seh us rukkhe hēṭh ghōṛe uppar chaṛhiā-hai.	230. He is sitting on a horse under that tree.
Usdā bhara usdi bhainī kachhā lammā ai.	Tisdā bhāū tiddiā bahnī-tē lammā hai.	231. His brother is taller than his sister.
Usda mul ḍhāī rupayē ai .	Tiddā mull ḍhāī rupayye hai	232. The price of that is two rupees and a half.
Mērā bab us nikke ghara-vich rahndā-ai.	Mērā babb tis chhōṭe ghare bich raĭhdā-hai.	233. My father lives in that small house.
Eh rupaya usi deh . .	Eh rupayyā tis-kī dai-dē .	234. Give this rupee to him.
Oh rupayē usdē kachhā laī-lai.	Seh rupayye tis-tē laī-lē .	235. Take those rupees from him.
Usī khara karīō mār, tō rassiā kannē bann.	Tis-kī matā mārī-karī, rassiā kane bannhī-dē.	236. Beat him well and bind him with ropes.
Khūhe-vichchā pānī kāḍ .	Khūe-tō pāṇī dhīṛī laī-ā .	237. Draw water from the well.
Mēre aggē chal . .	Mēre agge haṇḍ . .	238. Walk before me.
Kuhdā lanhṛā tēre pichchhē āviā-dā-ai ?	Kuṇḍā jātak tussāde pichchhe āṓdā-hai ?	239. Whose boy comes behind you ?
Oh tudh kuhdai kachhā kharīdiā-ai ?	Kus-tō tussā saih mulle liā ?	240. From whom did you buy that ?

CALCUTTA
SUPERINTENDENT GOVERNMENT PRINTING, INDIA
8, HASTINGS STREET